Great Lakes states that its St. Clair metering facilities have reached the end of their serviceable life. Great Lakes indicates that in lieu of replacement, Great Lakes requests authorization to utilize third party measurement data available from TransCanada PipeLines Ltd., downstream of the St. Clair Delivery Point. Great Lakes proposes to abandon the metering function at its St. Clair Delivery Point by removing the orifice plates and the differential pressure and temperature transmitters from the existing meter runs. Great Lakes maintains that the proposed abandonment would not affect service to any shipper at the St. Clair Point.

Great Lakes contends that all customers receiving deliveries at the St. Clair Delivery Point have provided their written consent to the abandonment except one. Great Lakes avers that the customer not providing written consent has not indicated that it objects to the abandonment. Great Lakes, therefore, seeks a waiver to permit the abandonment notwithstanding the withholding of written consent by the one customer.
