

clear and understandable is of primary concern to the Agency. In addition, EPA is particularly interested in how helpful the pamphlet is compared to the old pamphlet and how appropriately it addresses renovation-specific issues.

In designing the layout of the pamphlet, EPA has been aware of the need to develop a dynamic and engaging document while ensuring that the pamphlet can be easily and inexpensively reprinted. This approach has led the Agency to incorporate a layout and illustrations that anchor many of the pamphlet's key points while providing visual interest. EPA requests comment on whether the draft images may be altered in any way to increase their effectiveness.

In addition to soliciting public input through this notice, EPA conducted focus tests to obtain feedback on the draft pamphlet's current reading level, content, and graphic presentation. EPA conducted these tests during the spring of 2004 in Washington, DC and Arlington, VA. The tests consisted of written survey questions and moderated group discussions and were conducted with a group of homeowners and separately with a group of contractors. The focus tests proved valuable in providing overall impressions of the draft pamphlet's strengths and weaknesses. As a direct result of the feedback, EPA made revisions to clarify the intended audience and goal of the pamphlet and strengthen the message that renovation and remodeling work can be done safely if done properly. Revisions included highlighting the significance of lead dust; clarifying the message about the likelihood of the presence of lead, the responsibilities of contractors, and testing options; and better describing what constitutes lead safe work practices.

After reviewing the comments submitted in response to this notice, EPA will publish a final version of the pamphlet. The final version may be used to comply with the requirements of section 406(b) of the Toxic Substances Control Act (TSCA).
