

established a public docket (Docket No. FRA-2006-25169) to provide all interested parties with a central location to both send and review relevant information concerning the safety of railroad tank car transportation of hazardous materials (July 3, 2006; 71 FR 37974).

PHMSA and FRA have scheduled a second public meeting as part of DOT's comprehensive review. The meeting will be held on the date specified in the DATES section of this document and at the location specified in the ADDRESSES section of this document. Although DOT's review includes both tank car design and operational factors that affect railroad tank car safety, this public meeting is intended to focus on the issue of potential improvements to hazardous materials tank cars themselves.

PHMSA and FRA encourage all interested persons to participate in this meeting. The agencies intend that this meeting will provide an opportunity to build upon several issues raised in the initial public meeting. Additionally, through this meeting, the agencies intend to solicit any relevant comments, information, or data interested parties may be able to provide regarding potential enhancements or modifications to hazardous materials tank cars in order to improve the overall safety and security of hazardous materials shipments via railroad tank car. Although the agencies are interested in any comments, information, or data relevant to improving tank car design, manufacture, or requalification, the agencies specifically request data related to the following questions:

1. What new designs, materials, or structures should DOT be investigating for improved accident/derailment survivability of hazardous materials tank cars?
2. Regarding tank car top fittings—are there any design changes that would enhance the survivability of the top fittings (e.g., modifications to height or placement of valves or modifications to the protective structure that surrounds the valves)?
3. Regarding tank car puncture resistance (including the puncture resistance of the head and shell of tank cars)—are there any design, material, or manufacturing changes that could lead to improved tank car puncture resistance?
4. In addition to accident survivability, are there any other aspects of the tank cars (e.g., improved security of operating fittings, or an ability to locate cars beyond current car movement reporting systems), that could improve the overall safety and security of hazardous materials shipments via railroad tank car?

5. In addition to accident survivability, should tank cars be designed to withstand other types of extraordinary events (e.g., ballistic attack or unauthorized access to tank car valving)?

6. The hazardous materials regulations now include performance standards for coupler vertical restraint systems, pressure relief devices, tank-head puncture-resistance systems, thermal protection systems, and service equipment protection. In addition to, or instead of any other improvement made to future tank cars, are these standards adequate for future tank cars? If not, in what areas and aspects are improvements needed?

7. How should PHMSA and FRA consider risk factors in determining whether to require tank car safety and security enhancements? For example, should PHMSA and FRA consider the risk of the car/commodity pair so that improvements would first apply to the car/commodity pairs considered to have the greatest risk or for which the car/commodity pair will benefit most from the improvement? What other risk factors should be considered?

8. Would installation of bearing sensors or other on-board tracking/monitoring systems capable of monitoring, for example, tank car pressure, temperature, and safety conditions, improve the safety and security of hazardous materials shipments by railroad tank car? If so, what is the feasibility of implementing such a system on hazardous materials tank cars?

9. Would installation of electronically controlled pneumatic brake systems on tank cars improve the safety of hazardous materials shipments by railroad tank car by, for example, helping to prevent derailments and shortening stopping distances? If so, what is the feasibility of implementing such brake systems on hazardous materials tank cars?

Although PHMSA and FRA are specifically requesting comments in response to the above questions, we invite persons to comment and/or provide specific data on any other potential improvements to railroad tank cars that could lead to improving the overall safety and security of the transportation of hazardous materials by tank car. The agencies ask that commenters provide data in the most detail possible, including costs of design, installation, and maintenance. We also specifically solicit expert discussion of the issues surrounding construction of new tank cars and implementation of a retrofit requirement for any potential new requirements on the design, manufacture, or maintenance of existing tank cars.

The agencies also invite interested parties who are unable to attend the public meeting, or who otherwise desire to submit written comments or data responsive to the questions raised above, to submit any relevant information, data, or comments to the DOT Docket Management System Docket Number FRA-2006-25169. Comments may be submitted by any method noted in the ADDRESSES section above.

Issued in Washington, DC on November 13, 2006, under authority delegated in 49 CFR part 106.

Union Pacific Railroad Company— Temporary Trackage Rights Exemption—The Kansas City Southern Railway Company

The Kansas City Southern Railway Company (KCS), pursuant to a written trackage rights agreement entered into between KCS and Union Pacific Railroad Company (UP), has agreed to grant UP temporary overhead trackage rights, to expire on December 1, 2006, over KCS's trackage between milepost 482.0 on KCS's Mexico Subdivision at Kansas City, MO, and milepost 252.1 on KCS's East St. Louis Terminal Subdivision at Godfrey, IL, a distance of approximately 285 miles. The original grant of temporary overhead trackage rights exempted in Union Pacific Railroad Company—Temporary Trackage Rights Exemption—The Kansas City Southern Railway Company, STB Finance Docket No. 34866 (STB served on May 2, 2006), cover the same line. Those trackage rights were due to expire on July 31, 2006, but were extended to October 31, 2006, in a decision served on July 20, 2006, in the (Sub-No. 1) proceeding in this docket. The purpose of this transaction is to modify the temporary overhead trackage rights previously exempted by extending the expiration date from October 31, 2006, to December 1, 2006.

The transaction was scheduled to be consummated on November 6, 2006, the effective date of the exemption. The purpose of the temporary overhead trackage rights is to facilitate maintenance work on UP lines.
