

Report to the 24th Legislature
As requested by Senate Concurrent Resolution 106,
Session Laws of Hawaii 2006
Requiring the Department of Labor and Industrial Relations to Submit a Report on the Hawaii Employers that have Developed and Implemented Policies for Reducing Workplace Bullying
In Accordance With the Legislature's Intent

This report responds to Senate Concurrent Resolution ("SCR") 106, Session Laws of Hawaii 2006, urging Hawaii employers to develop and implement standards of conduct and policies for managers and employees to reduce workplace bullying and promote healthful and safe work environments.

Additionally, SCR 106 requested that all Hawaii employers who have developed and implement standards of conduct and policies for the reduction of workplace bullying report such to the Department of Labor and Industrial Relations ("DLIR"). Further, the DLIR was requested to submit to the Legislature a report on those Hawaii employers that had developed and implemented such standards of conduct or policies.

Background

On September 25, 2006, the DLIR sent correspondence to every employer operating in Hawaii. The correspondence reiterated the legislature's intent to encourage all employers to developed and implement standards of conduct and policies for the reduction of workplace bullying, and to promote a safe and healthful work environment.

Additionally, the letter also asked the employer to respond my mail, fax, or on our webpage as to whether they had developed and implemented a "workplace bullying" policy. The correspondence issued to the employers, as well as the DLIR webpage, allowed employers to check off one of two options. Those options read:

1. We have implemented an Anti-Bullying Policy; and
2. We do not have an Anti-Bullying Policy, but plan to implement one.

Additionally, the DLIR contacted employers that had indicated that they did not have a specific "anti-bulluing" policy with a fax and phone follow-up. The DLIR indicated to these employers that although some employers do not have a stand alone "anti-bullying" policy, the "anti-bullying" issues and concerns may be addressed by other types of programs or policies. These include an anti-harassment/anti-discrimination policy, an anti-violence policy, a professional code of conduct, or a workplace safety plan.

As such, the DLIR asked the employers if they had one of the following programs or policies:

1. Anti-harassment/Anti-discrimination Policy;
2. Anti-violence Policy;
3. Professional Code of Conduct;

Senate Concurrent Resolution 106
Session Laws of Hawaii 2006
Report of the Department of Labor and Industrial Relations

4. Workplace Safety Plan (that indicates that employees should not engage in any threatening or violent behavior, or any workplace behavior that is threatening to other employees, whether physical or psychological); and
5. None.

Conclusion

The DLIR received an estimated 8,353 responses to the survey. An estimated 3,227 employers indicated that they had either developed and implemented an "anti-bullying" policy or had a policy that that addresses work place bullying issues. Additionally, an estimated 5,126 employers indicated that they had no current "anti-bullying" policy, but that they did plan to develop one.

As requested by SCR 106, the following is a list of those employers who have responded that they had developed and implement standards of conduct and policies for the reduction of workplace bullying.
