

Appendix F: Station usage plots

This appendix contains monthly plots showing station usage per day for each station in each sub-network operated by the Alaska Volcano Observatory (AVO). Appendix F is 83 pages long. The presence of a dot indicates the station was used to locate at least one earthquake by the AVO for the day it represents. These plots provide a measure of both an individual station's operational health and earthquake frequency of occurrence near a given volcano. It is noted that an absence of seismicity at a given sub-network might imply either a station outage or a lack of seismicity at that station. Unless otherwise stated, any monthly station usage plot missing for a particular subnetwork, is missing because no picks were made on that particular sub-network during the month. For example, there is no monthly station usage plot for April 2002 for the Akutan sub-network since no picks were made on the Akutan sub-network in April 2002. Plots are organized alphabetically by subnetwork. The Dutton and Pavlof stations are combined due to the proximity of the Dutton and Pavlof subnetworks.
