

Leslie F. Seidman, was named a member of the Financial Accounting Standards Board, effective July 1, 2003. Prior to joining the Board, she managed a financial reporting consulting firm that served global corporations, accounting firms, and other concerns. Among the previous posts she held were Vice President at J.P. Morgan & Company, where she was responsible for establishing the firm's accounting policies, and Assistant Director of Implementation and Practice Issues at the FASB. She started her career as an auditor at Arthur Young & Company (now Ernst and Young LLP) in New York.

Ms. Seidman was the author of the first three editions of Financial Instruments, a comprehensive practice manual for accountants and other professionals (currently in its 5th edition and maintained by CCH Publishers). She has contributed to several other publications.

Ms. Seidman, a Certified Public Accountant, earned a B.A. degree in English from Colgate University and a M.S. degree in accounting from New York University.