

CONFIRMATION HEARING ON THE NOMINATION
OF SAMUEL A. ALITO, JR. TO BE AN ASSOCIATE JUSTICE OF THE SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

HEARING BEFORE THE
COMMITTEE ON THE JUDICIARY
UNITED STATES SENATE
ONE HUNDRED NINTH CONGRESS

SECOND SESSION

JANUARY 9-13, 2006

Serial No. J-109-56

Printed for the use of the Committee on the Judiciary

U.S. GOVERNMENT PRINTING OFFICE

25-429 PDF

WASHINGTON : 2006

For sale by the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office
Internet: bookstore.gpo.gov Phone: toll free (866) 512-1800; DC area (202) 512-1800
Fax: (202) 512-2250 Mail: Stop SSOP, Washington, DC 20402-0001

COMMITTEE ON THE JUDICIARY

ARLEN SPECTER, Pennsylvania, Chairman

ORRIN G. HATCH, Utah	PATRICK J. LEAHY, Vermont
CHARLES E. GRASSLEY, Iowa	EDWARD M. KENNEDY, Massachusetts
JON KYL, Arizona	JOSEPH R. BIDEN, JR., Delaware
MIKE DEWINE, Ohio	HERBERT KOHL, Wisconsin
JEFF SESSIONS, Alabama	DIANNE FEINSTEIN, California
LINDSEY O. GRAHAM, South Carolina	RUSSELL D. FEINGOLD, Wisconsin
JOHN CORNYN, Texas	CHARLES E. SCHUMER, New York
SAM BROWNBACK, Kansas	RICHARD J. DURBIN, Illinois
TOM COBURN, Oklahoma

MICHAEL O'NEILL, Chief Counsel and Staff Director

BRUCE A. COHEN, Democratic Chief Counsel and Staff Director

CONTENTS

JANUARY 9-11, 2006

STATEMENTS OF COMMITTEE MEMBERS

	Page
Biden, Hon. Joseph R., Jr., a U.S. Senator from the State of Delaware	15
Brownback, Hon. Sam, a U.S. Senator from the State of Kansas	44
Coburn, Hon. Tom, a U.S. Senator from the State of Oklahoma	47
Cornyn, Hon. John, a U.S. Senator from the State of Texas	39
DeWine, Hon. Mike, a U.S. Senator from the State of Ohio	24
Durbin, Hon. Richard J., a U.S. Senator from the State of Illinois	41
Feingold, Hon. Russell D., a U.S. Senator from the State of Wisconsin	31
Feinstein, Hon. Dianne, a U.S. Senator from the State of California	26
Graham, Hon. Lindsey O., a U.S. Senator from the State of South Carolina	33
Grassley, Hon. Charles E., a U.S. Senator from the State of Iowa	13
Hatch, Hon. Orrin G., a U.S. Senator from the State of Utah	8
Kennedy, Hon. Edward M., a U.S. Senator from the State of Massachusetts ...	10
Kohl, Hon. Herbert, a U.S. Senator from the State of Wisconsin	21
Kyl, Hon. Jon, a U.S. Senator from the State of Arizona	18
Leahy, Hon. Patrick J., a U.S. Senator from the State of Vermont	5
prepared statement	1229
Schumer, Hon. Charles E., a U.S. Senator from the State of New York	36
prepared statement	1443
Sessions, Hon. Jeff, a U.S. Senator from the State of Alabama	28
Specter, Hon. Arlen, a U.S. Senator from the State of Pennsylvania	2

PRESENTERS

Lautenberg, Hon. Frank R., a U.S. Senator from the State of New Jersey presenting Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Nominee to be an Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States	50
Whitman, Christine Todd, former Governor of New Jersey, and former Ad- ministrator, U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, presenting Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Nominee to be an Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States	51

STATEMENT OF THE NOMINEE

Alito, Samuel A., Jr., of New Jersey, Nominee to be an Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States	54
Questionnaire	58

JANUARY 12, 2006

WITNESSES

Aldisert, Ruggero J., Senior Judge, U.S. Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania	659
Axelrod, Edna Ball, Attorney at Law, Law Offices of Edna Ball Axelrod, South Orange, New Jersey	681
Barry, Maryanne Trump, Judge, U.S. Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania	658
Becker, Edward R., Senior Judge, U.S. Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania	654

IV

	Page
Garth, Leonard I., Senior Judge, U.S. Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit, Chicago, Illinois	661
Gerhardt, Michael J., Samuel Ashe Distinguished Professor of Constitutional Law, University of North Carolina School of Law, Chapel Hill, North Carolina	683
Gibbons, John J., Judge (retired), U.S. Court of Appeals, and Director, Gibbons, Del Deo, Dolan, Griffinger & Vecchione, Newark, New Jersey	664
Issacharoff, Samuel, Reiss Professor of Constitutional Law, New York University, New York, New York	687
Kirsanow, Peter N., U.S. Commission on Civil Rights, and Partner, Benesch Friedlander Coplan & Aronoff, LLP, Cleveland, Ohio	685
Lewis, Timothy K., Judge (retired), U.S. Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit, and Counsel, Schnader Harrison Segal & Lewis, LLP, Washington, D.C.	667
Liu, Goodwin, Assistant Professor of Law, Boalt Hall School of Law, University of California, Berkeley, Berkeley, California	690
Phillips, Carter G., Managing Partner, Sidley Austin, LLP, Washington, D.C.	689
Scirica, Anthony J., Chief Judge, U.S. Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania	656
Tober, Stephen L., Esq., Chairman, American Bar Association Standing Committee on the Federal Judiciary, Portsmouth New Hampshire; accompanied by Marna Tucker, Esq., D.C. Circuit Representative, American Bar Association Standing Committee on the Federal Judiciary, Washington, D.C.; and John Payton, Esq., Federal Circuit Representative, American Bar Association Standing Committee on the Federal Judiciary, Washington, D.C.	641

JANUARY 13, 2006

WITNESSES

Chemerinsky, Erwin, Alston & Bird Professor of Law and Political Science, Duke University Law School, Durham, North Carolina	708
Demleitner, Nora V., Vice Dean for Academic Affairs and Professor of Law, Hofstra University School of Law, Hempstead, New York	706
Flynn, John G.S., retired Professor of Law, Northeastern University School of Law, Boston, Massachusetts	738
Fried, Charles, former Solicitor General of the United States, and Beneficial Professor of Law, Harvard Law School, Cambridge, Massachusetts	713
Frost, Amanda, Assistant Professor of Law, Washington College of Law, American University, Washington, D.C.	736
Gonzalez, Hon. Charles A., a Representative in Congress from the State of Texas	750
Gray, Fred D., Senior Partner, Gray, Langford, Sapp, McGowan, Gray & Nathanson, Tuskegee, Alabama	728
Kronman, Anthony, Sterling Professor of Law and former Dean, Yale Law School, New Haven, Connecticut	710
Michelman, Kate, former President, National Abortion and Reproductive Rights Action League Pro-Choice America, Washington, D.C.	731
Nolan, Beth, Partner, Crowell & Moring, LLP, Washington, D.C.	711
Pringle, Katherine L., Partner, Friedman Kaplan Seiler & Adelman LLP, New York, New York	748
Shaw, Theodore M., Director-Counsel and President, NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund, Inc.	758
Sullivan, Ronald S., Jr., Associate Clinical Professor of Law, and Senior Fellow, Jamestown Project, Yale Law School, New Haven, Connecticut	733
Tribe, Laurence H., Carl M. Loeb University Professor and Professor of Constitutional Law, Harvard Law School, Cambridge, Massachusetts	714
Turner, Reginald M., Jr., President, National Bar Association, Washington, D.C.	756
Wasserman Schultz, Hon. Debbie, a Representative in Congress from the State of Florida	752
White, Jack, Associate, Kirkland and Ellis, LLP, San Francisco, California	754

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Responses of Samuel A. Alito, Jr. to questions submitted by Senators Biden, Durbin, Kennedy, Leahy, Levin, Schumer, and Feingold	773
Responses of Erwin Chemerinsky to questions submitted by Senators Coburn and Kennedy	813
Response of Laurence Tribe to a question submitted by Senator Coburn	816

SUBMISSIONS FOR THE RECORD

Aldisert, Ruggero J., Senior Judge, U.S. Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, prepared statement	819
Alliance for Justice, Nan Aron, President, Washington, D.C., letter and attachment	823
American Association for Affirmative Action, Shirley J. Wilcher, Interim Executive Director, Washington, letter	839
American Association of University Women, Lisa M. Maatz, Director, Public Policy and Government Relations, Washington, D.C., letter	841
American Bar Association, Stephen L. Tober, Chair, Washington, D.C.: letter, January 4, 2006	843
letter, January 9, 2006	845
American Civil Liberties Union, Washington, D.C.: Shin Inouy, Legislative Office, January 9, 2006, press release	865
Anthony D. Romero, Executive Director, prepared statement	867
American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations, John J. Sweeney, President, Washington, D.C., letter	875
American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, Gerald W. McEntee, International President, Washington, D.C., letter	877
Americans United for Separation of Church and State, Rev. Barry W. Lynn, Executive Director, Washington, D.C., letter	879
ADA Watch/National Coalition for Disability Rights, Jim Ward, Founder and President, Washington, D.C., letter	881
Asian American Justice Center, Karen K. Narasaki, President and Executive Director, Washington, D.C., letter	883
Attorneys General of various States, joint letter	885
Axelrod, Edna Ball, Attorney at Law, South Orange, New Jersey, prepared statement	888
Bar Association of San Francisco, Joan Haratani, President, San Francisco, California, letter	892
Bazon Center for Mental Health Law, Robert Bernstein, Executive Director, Washington, D.C., letter	897
Becker, Edward R., Senior Judge, U.S. Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, prepared statement	899
B'nai B'rith International, Joel S. Kaplan, President and Daniel S. Mariaschin, Executive Vice President, Washington, D.C., letter	904
Boston Globe, Boston, Massachusetts, January 10, 2006, article	905
Brady Center to Prevent Gun Violence, Washington, D.C.: Mike Barnes, President, letter	908
Dennis A. Henigan, Director, Legal Action Project, prepared statement	910
California Women Lawyers, Pearl Gondrella Mann, President, Sacramento, California, letter	930
Catholics for a Free Choice, Frances Kissling, President, Washington, D.C., letter	934
Center for Reproductive Rights, New York, New York, prepared statement	937
Chemerinsky, Erwin, Alston & Bird Professor of Law and Political Science, Duke University Law School, Durham, North Carolina, prepared statement	946
Chertoff, Michael, Secretary, Department of Homeland Security, Washington, D.C., press release	957
Chicago Tribune, Steven Lubet and David McGowan, November 18, 2005, article	958
Colorado Hispanic Bar Association, Victoria Lovato, President, Denver, Colorado, letter	960
Congressional Hispanic Caucus, Hon. Grace Flores Napolitano, Chair, and Hon. Charles A. Gonzales, Chair, Congressional Hispanic Caucus Civil Rights Task Force, Washington, D.C.: January 6, 2006, letter	963
January 20, 2006, letter	967

	Page
Congress of the United States, women Members of Congress, Washington, D.C., letter	969
Daily Princetonian, Princeton, New Jersey, article	972
Deans or former deans of law schools, joint letter	976
Demleitner, Nora V., Vice Dean for Academic Affairs and Professor of Law, Hofstra University School of Law, Hempstead, New York, prepared statement	979
Dujack, Stephen R., Alexandria, Virginia, prepared statement	982
Earthjustice, Vawter Parker, Executive Director, Washington, D.C., letter	992
Factual responses to falsehoods in the Knight-Ridder article attacking Judge Alito, list	994
Fellow judges criticize application of precedent, list	998
Feminist Majority, Eleanor Smeal, President, Arlington, Virginia, letter	1000
Ferrara, Ralph C., former General Counsel of the Securities and Exchange Commission, and Partner, LeBoeuf, Lamb, Greene & MacRae LLP, Washington, D.C., letter	1002
Fleming, Cathy, Edwards Angell Palmer & Dodge, LLP, New York, New York, letter	1006
Flynn, John G.S., retired Professor of Law, Northeastern University School of Law, Boston, Massachusetts, prepared statement	1008
Former law clerks of Judge Samuel A. Alito, Jr., joint letter	1024
Fraternal Order of Police, Grand Lodge, Chuck Canterbury, National President, Washington, D.C., letter	1029
Fried, Charles, former Solicitor General of the United States, and Beneficial Professor of Law, Harvard Law School, Cambridge, Massachusetts, prepared statement	1031
Friends of the Earth, Brent Blackwelder, President, Washington, D.C., letter ..	1037
Frost, Amanda, Assistant Professor of Law, Washington College of Law, American University, Washington, D.C., prepared statement	1039
Garth, Leonard I., Senior Judge, U.S. Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit, Chicago, Illinois, prepared statement	1050
Gerhardt, Michael J., Samuel Ashe Distinguished Professor of Constitutional Law, University of North Carolina School of Law, Chapel Hill, North Carolina, prepared statement	1060
Gibbons, John J., Judge (retired), U.S. Court of Appeals, and Director, Gibbons, Del Deo, Dolan, Griffinger & Vecchione, Newark, New Jersey, prepared statement	1079
Gillers, Stephen, Emily Kempin Professor of Law, New York University School of Law, New York, New York, letter	1091
Gonzales, Hon. Charles A., a Representative in Congress from the State of Texas, prepared statement	1096
Gray, Fred D., Senior Partner, Gray, Langford, Sapp, McGowan, Gray & Nathanson, Tuskegee, Alabama, prepared statement	1105
Hazard, Geoffrey C., Jr., Trustee Professor of Law, University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, letter	1114
Higginbotham, Michael, Wilson Elkins Professor of Law, University of Baltimore School of Law, Baltimore, Maryland, letter	1118
Human Rights Campaign, Joe Solmonese, President, Washington, D.C. prepared statement and letter	1120
Independent Living Center of Kern County, Norris Ledbetter, System Change Coordinator, and Bonita Coyle, Executive Director, Bakersfield, California, letter	1126
Independent Living Resource Center San Francisco, Herb Levine, Executive Director, San Francisco, California, letter	1131
Instances of judges testifying during Supreme Court confirmation hearings, list	1133
Ipas, Charlotte Hord Smith, Policy Director, Chapel Hill, North Carolina, letter	1134
Issacharoff, Samuel, Reiss Professor of Constitutional Law, New York University, New York, New York, prepared statement	1136
Jackson Lee, Hon. Sheila, a Representative in Congress from the State of Texas, letter	1140
Japanese American Citizens League, John Tateishi, National Executive Director, San Francisco, California, letter	1149
Jewish Community Action, Vic Rosenthal, Executive Director, St. Paul, Minnesota, prepared statement	1151
Jewish Council on Urban Affairs, Chicago, Illinois, prepared statement	1153

VII

	Page
Journal of Child Psychology and Psychiatry, Malden, Massachusetts, article ...	1155
Kirsanow, Peter N., U.S. Commission on Civil Rights, and Partner, Benesch Friedlander Coplan & Aronoff, LLP, Cleveland, Ohio, prepared statement ...	1164
Kronman, Anthony, Sterling Professor of Law and former Dean, Yale Law School, New Haven, Connecticut, prepared statement	1176
Lambda Legal, Kevin M. Cathcart, Executive Director, New York, New York, letter	1180
Law professors who oppose the confirmation of Judge Alito, joint letter	1182
Law professors who support the confirmation of Judge Alito, joint letter	1208
Lawyers' Committee for Civil Rights Under Law, Marjorie Press Lindblom, Co-Chair and Robert E. Harrington, Co-Chair, Washington, D.C., prepared statement and letter	1210
Leadership Conference on Civil Rights, Dorothy I. Height, Chairperson, and Wade Henderson, Executive Director, Washington, D.C., letter	1216
League of United Latin American Citizens, Washington, D.C., press release ...	1227
Legal Momentum, Lisalyn R. Jacobs, Vice President for Government Rela- tions, Washington, D.C., letter	1232
Legal professionals in support of the nomination of Judge Samuel A. Alito, Jr., joint letter	1234
Liu, Goodwin, Assistant Professor of Law, Boalt Hall School of Law, Univer- sity of California, Berkeley, Berkeley, California, prepared statement	1245
Mabel Wadsworth Women's Health Center, Ruth Lockhart, Executive Direc- tor, Sharon Barker, President, Board of Directors, and Stephanie Cotsirilios, past President, Board of Directors, Bangor, Maine, letter	1262
Mexican American Legal Defense and Educational Fund, Ann Marie Tallman, President, General Counsel, Los Angeles, California, prepared statement	1268
Michelman, Kate, former President, National Abortion and Reproductive Rights Action League Pro-Choice America, Washington, D.C., prepared statement	1271
Morgan, Thomas D., Oppenheim Professor of Antitrust and Trade Regulation Law, George Washington School of Law, Washington, D.C., letter	1276
National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, Hilary O. Shelton, Director, Washington Bureau, Washington, D.C., letter	1279
NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund, Inc., Theodore M. Shaw, Direc- tor-Counsel and President, Washington, D.C., prepared statement and at- tachment	1281
NARAL Pro-Choice America, Nancy Keenan, President, Washington, D.C., prepared statement and letter	1289
National Abortion Federation, Vicki A. Saporta, President and Chief Exec- utive Officer, Washington, D.C., prepared statement and letter	1298
National Association of Social Workers, Elizabeth J. Clark, Executive Direc- tor, Washington, D.C., letter	1304
National Association of Women Lawyers, Stephanie A. Scharf, Chair, Com- mittee for the Evaluation of Supreme Court Nominees, Chicago, Illinois, letter and attachment	1305
National Cancer Institute, U.S. National Institutes of Health, Washington, D.C., report and fact sheets	1308
National Council of Jewish Women, Phyllis Snyder, President, New York, New York, prepared statement and letter	1323
National Council of Women's Organizations, Susan Scanlan, Chair, and Terry O'Neil, Executive Director, Washington, D.C., letter	1328
National Council on Independent Living, John Lancaster, Executive Director, and Kelly Buckland, President, Arlington, Virginia, letter	1329
National District Attorneys Association, Paul A. Logli, President, and Thomas J. Charron, Executive Director, Alexandria, Virginia, letter and resolution ..	1334
National Employment Lawyers Association, Marissa M. Tirona, Program Di- rector, San Francisco, California, letter	1336
National Family Planning and Reproductive Health Association, Judith M. DeSarno, President, Chief Executive Officer, Washington, D.C., letter	1337
National Gay and Lesbian Task Force, Matt Foreman, Executive Director, Washington, D.C., letter	1338
National Journal Group Inc., Washington, D.C.:
December 12, 2005, article	1340
January 9, 2006, article	1344
National Latina Institute for Reproductive Health, Silvia Henriquez, Execu- tive Director, New York, New York, letter	1347

VIII

	Page
National Organization for Women, Kim Gandy, President, Washington, D.C., prepared statement and letter	1349
National Partnership for Women & Families, Debra L. Ness, President, Washington, D.C., letter and prepared statement	1352
National Urban League, Marc H. Morial, President and Chief Executive Officer, New York, New York, letter	1382
National Women's Law Center, Nancy Duff Campbell, Co-President and Marcia D. Greenberger, Co-President, Washington, D.C., letter	1383
Nolan, Beth, Partner, Crowell & Moring, LLP, Washington, D.C., prepared statement	1386
Pennsylvania State Senators in support of Judge Samuel Alito, Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, joint letter	1395
People For the American Way, Ralph G. Neas, President, Washington, D.C., letter	1398
Phillips, Carter G., Managing Partner, Sidley Austin, LLP, Washington, D.C., prepared statement	1400
Physicians for Reproductive Choice and Health, Wendy Chavkin, MD, MPH, Board Chair, New York, New York, prepared statement	1405
Planned Parenthood of America and Planned Parenthood Action Fund, Karen Pearl, Interim President, Washington, D.C., letter and prepared statement ..	1408
Precedents Justice Thomas has called for unraveling, list	1417
Princeton Packet, Princeton, New Jersey, February 12, 1985, article	1420
Pringle, Katherine L., Partner, Friedman Kaplan Seiler & Adelman, LLP, New York, New York, prepared statement	1422
Reach Out America, Dorothy Puryear, Executive Committee, and Sybil Bank, Executive Committee, Great Neck, New York, letter	1425
Religious Action Center of Reform Judaism, Rabbi David Saperstein, Director and Counsel, and Jane Wishner, Chair, Commission on Social Action of Reform Judaism, Washington, D.C., letter	1426
Religious Coalition for Reproductive Choice, Reverend Carlton W. Veazey, President and CEO, Washington, D.C., letter	1429
Republican Majority for Choice, Washington, D.C., January 11, 2006, press release	1431
Rotunda, Ronald D., George Mason University Foundation Professor of Law, George Mason University School of Law, Arlington, Virginia, letter	1433
Sergeants Benevolent Association, Police Department, City of New York, Ed Mullins, President, New York, New York, letter	1448
Service Employees International Union, Andrew L. Stern, International President, and Anna Burger, International Secretary-Treasurer, Washington, D.C., letter	1450
Shaw, Theodore M., Director-Counsel and President, NAACP Legal Defense & Educational Fund, Inc., Washington, D.C., prepared statement	1456
Sierra Club, Patrick Gallagher, Director, Environmental Law Program, Washington, D.C., letter	1460
Sullivan, Ronald S., Jr., Associate Clinical Professor of Law, and Senior Fellow, Jamestown Project, Yale University, New Haven, Connecticut, prepared statement	1464
Sydney Morning Herald, Sydney, Australia, January 3, 2006, article	1491
Tober, Stephen L., Esq., American Bar Association, Washington, D.C., prepared statement	1493
Tribe, Laurence H., Carl M. Loeb University Professor and Professor of Constitutional Law, Harvard Law School, Cambridge, Massachusetts, prepared statement	1498
Turner, Reginald M., Jr., President, National Bar Association, Washington, D.C., prepared statement	1519
Union of Orthodox Jewish Congregations of America, Institute for Public Affairs, Mark Bane, Chair, and Nathan J. Diament, Director, Washington, D.C., letter	1536
Unitarian Universalist Association of Congregations, Robert C. Keithan, Director, Washington, D.C., letter	1540
United Automobile, Aerospace and Agricultural Implement Workers of America, Alan Reuther, Legislative Director, letter	1543
Violence Policy Center, M. Kristen Rand, Legislative Director, Washington, D.C., letter	1545
Walk, R. David, Jr., Dechert LLP, Swarthmore, Pennsylvania, letter	1548
Wall Street Journal, New York, New York, January 5, 2006, article	1550

IX

	Page
Washington Post, Washington, D.C.:
January 2, 2006, article	1556
January 8, 2006, article	1558
January 9, 2006, article	1564
Washington Times, Washington, D.C., January 13, 2006, article	1570
Wasserman Schultz, Hon. Debbie, a Representative in Congress from the State of Florida, prepared statement	1572
White, Jack, Associate, Kirkland & Ellis LLP, Washington, D.C., prepared statement	1581
Women of Reform Judaism, Shelley Lindauer, Executive Director, and Rosanne M. Selfon, President, Lancaster, Pennsylvania, letter	1585
Women's Medical Fund, Inc., Anne Nicol Gaylor, Administrator, Madison, Wisconsin, letter	1586
YWCA USA, Peggy Sanchez Mills, Chief Executive Officer, Washington, D.C., letter	1587

NOMINATION OF SAMUEL A. ALITO, JR., OF
NEW JERSEY, TO BE AN ASSOCIATE JUSTICE
OF THE SUPREME COURT OF THE
UNITED STATES

MONDAY, JANUARY 9, 2006

U.S. SENATE,
COMMITTEE ON THE JUDICIARY,
Washington, DC.

The Committee met, pursuant to notice, at 12 p.m., in room 216, Hart Senate Office Building, Hon. Arlen Specter, Chairman of the Committee, presiding.

Present: Senators Specter, Hatch, Grassley, Kyl, DeWine, Sessions, Graham, Cornyn, Brownback, Coburn, Leahy, Kennedy, Biden, Kohl, Feinstein, Feingold, Schumer, and Durbin.

Chairman SPECTER. Good afternoon, ladies and gentlemen. The Senate Judiciary Committee will now proceed to the confirmation hearing of Judge Samuel Alito, Jr. for the Supreme Court of the United States. A few matters of administration or housekeeping, and then we will proceed to the opening statements.

Today we will hear first from Judge Alito—the introduction of his family. Judge, the floor is yours to introduce your family.

Judge ALTIO. Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. Let me introduce my wife, Martha, who is here today; and my sister, Rosemary, who is a lawyer in New Jersey and a tough trial lawyer. I am glad that she took time from her schedule to come to the hearing today. My daughter, Laura, who is a senior at James Caldwell High School in West Caldwell, New Jersey; and if a father can be permitted to brag for a second, a really great swimmer who led her high school team to win the county championship last week. My son, Phillip, who is a second-year student at the University of Virginia. And when I had my confirmation hearing for the Court of Appeals, Phillip was 3 years old. And when I was called up to the chair, he took it upon himself to run up and sit next to me in case any hard questions came up.

[Laughter.]

Judge ALTIO. I don't know whether he is going to try the same thing tomorrow, but probably I could use the help.

I am glad that my in-laws are able to be here today: my father-in-law, Gene Bomgardner, who is a retired Air Force NCO; and my mother-in-law, Barbara Bomgardner, who is a retired Air Force librarian. And my cousins Andrew and Aldomar Kiriev from Gwynedd Valley, Pennsylvania, are also here.

My mother, who turned 91 a couple of weeks ago, unfortunately is not able to be here today, but I am sure she is watching at home. Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman.

Chairman SPECTER. Well, thank you, Judge Alito. You have a beautiful family, and we are delighted to have them with us on the confirmation proceedings.

We will have 10-minute rounds of opening statements, each Senator 10 minutes. We will then turn to the presenters, those who will be presenting Judge Alito formally to the Committee. And then we will administer the oath to Judge Alito, and we will hear his testimony.

We will begin tomorrow morning at 9:30 for the opening round of questions. Each Senator will have 30 minutes on the opening round, and we have a second round scheduled of 20 minutes for each Senator. And then we will see how we will proceed.

Our practice is to adhere to the time limits, and we do that for a number of reasons. One of them is that Senators come and go, and if we maintain the schedule, which is known to everybody, they know when to return for their next round of questions. We will take 15-minute breaks at a convenient time, and, again, we will hold the breaks to 15 minutes.

I have worked closely with Senator Leahy on scheduling matters and all other matters, and this is the model that we used for the confirmation of Chief Justice Roberts. It is our intention to conclude the hearings this week, and as Senator Leahy and I worked out, the arrangement is to have a markup on Tuesday, January the 17th, subject to something extraordinary happening.

Now let me yield to the distinguished Ranking Member, Senator Leahy.

Senator LEAHY. Well, Mr. Chairman, I don't want to hold up your opening statement, or the others. I do appreciate people being here. As the hearing for Chief Justice John Roberts showed, there will be real questions asked. I would hope Senators on both sides of the aisle would do that. I think it is important. We are talking about a position representing 295 million Americans.

On the schedule, I will work with the senior Senator from Pennsylvania, the Chairman. I understand one of our leaders once said that getting Senators to all move in order is like having bullfrogs in a wheelbarrow. But we will continue to work towards that, and I think the most important thing is we have a good, solid hearing this week.

Mr. Chairman, you have been totally fair in your procedures for this, as always.

OPENING STATEMENT OF HON. ARLEN SPECTER, A U.S.
SENATOR FROM THE STATE OF PENNSYLVANIA

Chairman SPECTER. Thank you very much, Senator Leahy. And now we begin the opening statements.

No Senator's vote, except for the declaration of war or the authorization for the use of force, is more important than the confirmation of a nominee to the Supreme Court for a lifetime appointment. Judge Alito comes to this proceeding with extensive experience as a Government lawyer, as a prosecutor, and as a judge. He has written some 361 opinions. He has voted in more than 4,800 cases. And it is possible to select a few of his cases to place him at any and every position on the judicial spectrum. By selecting the right cases, he could look like a flaming liberal or he could look like an arch-conservative.

This hearing will give Judge Alito the full opportunity to address the concerns of 280 million Americans on probing questions which will be put to him by 18 Senators representing their diverse constituencies. I have reserved my own vote on this nomination until the hearing is concluded. I am committed as Chairman to a full, fair, and dignified hearing. Hearings for a Supreme Court nominee should not have a political tilt for either Republicans or Democrats. They should be in substance and in perception for all Americans.

There is no firmly established rule as to how much a nominee must say to be confirmed. While I personally consider it inappropriate to ask the nominee how he would vote on a specific matter likely to come before the Court, Senators may ask whatever they choose, and the nominee is similarly free to respond as he chooses. It has been my experience that the hearings are really, in effect, a subtle minuet, with the nominee answering as many questions as he thinks necessary in order to be confirmed.

Last year, when President Bush had two vacancies to fill, there was concern expressed that there might be an ideological change in the Court. The preliminary indications from Chief Justice Roberts's performance on the Court and his Judiciary Committee testimony on modesty, stability, and not jolting the system all suggest that he will not move the Court in a different direction. If that holds true, Judge Alito, if confirmed, may not be the swing vote regardless of what position Judge Alito takes on the political spectrum.

Perhaps the dominant issue in these hearings is the widespread concern about Judge Alito's position on a woman's right to choose. This has arisen in part because of a 1985 statement made by Judge Alito that the Constitution does not provide for the right to an abortion. It has arisen in part because of his advocacy in the Solicitor General's office seeking to limit or overrule Roe and from the dissenting portion of his opinion in Casey v. Planned Parenthood in the Third Circuit.

This hearing will give Judge Alito the public forum to address the issue as he has with Senators in private meetings, that his personal views and prior advocacy will not determine his judicial decisions, but instead he will weigh factors such as stare decisis, that is, what are the precedents; that he will weigh women's and men's reliance on Roe and he will consider too whether Roe is "embedded in the culture of our Nation."

The history of the Court is full of surprises on the issue. The major case upholding Roe was Casey v. Planned Parenthood, where the landmark opinion was written jointly by three Justices, Justice O'Connor, Justice Kennedy and Justice Souter. Before coming to the Court, Justice Souter, Justice Kennedy and Justice O'Connor, had all expressed views against a woman's right to choose. David Souter, as Attorney General of New Hampshire, even opposed changing New Hampshire's law prohibiting abortion even after the Supreme Court of the United States had declared it unconstitutional. At the time of Justice Souter's confirmation hearing, there was a stop Souter rally of the National Organization for Women a few blocks from where we currently are holding this hearing, displaying in red a banner “Stop Souter or Women Will Die,” “Stop Souter Rally, a Mass Lobbying Day,” somewhat similar to this morning’s press where banners are paraded in front of the Supreme Court “Save Roe” and a brochure circulated again by NOW, “Save Women’s Lives, Vote No on Alito.”

The history of this issue has been one full of surprises. This hearing comes at a time of great national concern about the balance between civil rights and the President’s national security authority. The President’s constitutional powers as commander in chief to conduct electronic surveillance appear to conflict with what Congress has said in the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act. This conflict involves very major considerations raised by Justice Jackson’s historic concurrence in the Youngstown Steel seizure cases, where Justice Jackson wrote, “When the President acts pursuant to an express or implied authorization of Congress, his authority is at its maximum, for it includes all that he possesses in his own right, and all that Congress can delegate. When the President acts in absence of a congressional grant of authority, he can rely only upon his own independent powers. When the President takes measures incompatible with the express or implied will of Congress, his power is at its lowest ebb.” And as Justice Jackson noted, “What is at stake is the equilibrium established in our constitutional system.”

Another major area of concern is congressional power, and in recent decisions the Supreme Court of the United States has declared Acts of Congress unconstitutional, really denigrating the role of Congress. In declaring unconstitutional legislation designed to protect women against violence, the Supreme Court did so notwithstanding a voluminous record in support of that legislation, but because of Congress’s “method of reasoning,” rather insulting to suggest that there is some superior method of reasoning in the Court.

When the Supreme Court handled two cases recently on the Americans with Disabilities Act, they upheld the Act as it applied to discrimination as to access, and declared it unconstitutional as it applied to discrimination in employment. They did so by applying a test of what is called “congruent and proportionate,” which candidly stated, no one can figure out. In dissent, Justice Scalia called it a flabby test, where the Court set itself up as the taskmaster to see if Congress had done its homework, and Justice Scalia said that it was an invitation to judicial arbitrariness by policy driven decisionmaking, and this hearing, I know, will involve consideration as to Judge Alito’s views on congressional power.

There is reason to believe that our Senate confirmation hearings may be having an effect on Supreme Court nominees on their later judicial duties. Years after their hearings, Supreme Court Justices talk to me about our dialogs at these hearings. This process has now evolved to a point where nominees meet most of the Senators. In this process, nominees get an earful. While no promises are extracted, statements are made by nominees which may well influence their judicial decisions. Chief Justice Roberts, for example, will have a tough time giving a jolt to the system after preaching modesty and stability. There is, I think, a heavy sense of drama as these hearings begin. This is the quintessential example of separation of powers under our constitutional process, as the President nominates, the Senate confirms or rejects, and the successful nominee ascends to the bench. While it may be a bit presumptuous, I believe the Framers, if they were here, would be proud and pleased to see how well their Constitution is being applied.

My red light just went on, and I now yield to my distinguished colleague, Senator Leahy.

STATEMENT OF HON. PATRICK J. LEAHY, A U.S. SENATOR FROM THE STATE OF VERMONT

Senator LEAHY. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Good afternoon, Judge and Mrs. Alito, and the others.

Following up on what the Chairman was saying, the challenge for Judge Alito in the course of these hearings is to demonstrate that he is going to protect the rights and liberties of all Americans, and in doing that, serve as an effective check on Government overreaching. I have said that the President did not help his cause by withdrawing his earlier nomination of Harriet Miers in the face of criticism from a narrow faction of his own party who were concerned about how she might vote.

Supreme Court nominations should not be conducted through a series of winks and nods designed to reassure a small faction of our population, while leaving the American people in the dark. And no President, I think we would all agree, should be allowed to pack the courts, and especially the Supreme Court, with nominees selected to enshrine Presidential claims of Government power. The checks and balances that should be provided by the courts, Congress and the Constitution are too important to be sacrificed to a narrow partisan agenda.

This hearing is the opportunity for the American people to learn what Samuel Alito thinks about their fundamental constitutional rights and whether he—you, Judge—will protect their liberty, their privacy and their autonomy from Government intrusion.

The Supreme Court belongs to all Americans, not just to the person occupying the White House, and not just to a narrow faction of either political party, because the Supreme Court is our ultimate check and balance. Independence of the Court and its members is crucial to our democracy and our way of life, and the Senate should never be allowed to be a rubber stamp. Neither should the Supreme Court. So I will ask the Judge to demonstrate his independence from the interests of the President nominating him. This is a nomination to a lifetime seat on the Nation's highest Court. It is a seat that has often represented the decisive vote on constitutional issues, so we have to make an informed decision. That means knowing more about Samuel Alito's work in the Government and knowing more about his views.

I will, as the Judge knows, ask about the disturbing application he wrote to become a political appointee in the Meese Justice Department. In that application he professed concern with the fundamental principle of "one person, one vote," a principle of the equality that is the bedrock of our laws. This hearing is the only opportunity that the American people and their representatives have to consider the suitability of the nominee to serve as a final arbiter on the meaning of the Constitution and its laws. Has he demonstrated commitment to the fundamental rights of all Americans? Would he allow the Government to intrude on Americans' personal privacy and freedoms?

In a time when this administration seems intent on accumulating unchecked power, Judge Alito's views on Executive power are especially important. It is important to know whether he would serve with judicial independence or as a surrogate for the President nominating him. So this public conversation, this hearing over the next few days is extremely important. It is the people's Constitution and the people's right that we are all charged with protecting and preserving. In this hearing we embark on the constitutional process, one that was designed to protect these rights and has served this country so very well for more than two centuries.

I am reminded of a photograph, Mr. Chairman, that hangs in the National Constitution Center in Philadelphia. It shows the first women ever to serve on the Supreme Court of the United States taking the oath of office in 1981. How Justice Sandra Day O'Connor serves is as a model Supreme Court Justice, widely recognized as a jurist with practical values and a sense of the consequences of the legal decisions being made by the Supreme Court. I regret that some on the extreme right have been so critical of Justice O'Connor, and that they adamantly oppose the naming of a successor who shares her judicial philosophy and qualities. Their criticism actually reflects poorly upon them. It does nothing to tarnish the record of the first woman to serve as Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States. She is a Justice whose graciousness and sense of duty fuels her continued service, even agreeing to serve more than 6 months after her retirement date, and I know both you and I commend her for that.

The Court that serves America should reflect America. This nomination was an opportunity, of course, for the President to make a nomination based on diversity. He did not, even though there is no dearth of highly qualified Hispanics and African-Americans, other individuals who could well have served as unifying nominees while adding to diversity. But that, of course, is the President's choice, Judge, not yours. But I look forward to a time when the membership of the Supreme Court is more reflective of the country it serves.

As the Senate begins its consideration of President Bush's nominee, his third to this seat, to Justice O'Connor's seat, we do so mindful of her critical role in the Supreme Court. Her legacy is one of fairness, and when I decide how to vote it is because I want to see that legacy preserved. Justice O'Connor has been a guardian of the protections the Constitution provides the American people. She has come to provide balance and a check on Government intrusion into our personal privacy and freedoms. In the Hamdi decision she rejected the Bush administration's claim that they could indefinitely detain a United States citizen. She upheld the fundamental principle of judicial review over the exercise of Government power, and she wrote—and this is one we should all remember—she wrote that even war is not a blank check for the President when it comes to the rights of the Nation's citizens. She held that even this President is not above the law, and of course, no President, Democratic or Republican, no President is above the law, as neither are you, nor I, nor anyone in this room.

Her judgment has also been critical in protecting our environmental rights. She joined in 5–4 majorities affirming reproductive freedom, and religious freedom, and the Voting Rights Act. I mention each of these cases because they show how important a single Supreme Court Justice is, and it is crucial that we determine what kind of Justice Samuel Alito would be if confirmed. Of course, Judge, my question will be, will you be an independent jurist?

It is as the elected representatives of the American people, all of the people, nearly 300 million people, that we in the Senate are charged with the responsibility to examine whether to entrust their precious rights and liberties to this nominee. The Constitution is their document. It guarantees their rights from the heavy hand of Government intrusion, and individual liberties, to freedom of speech, to religion, to equal treatment, to due process and to privacy. Actually, this hearing, this is their process. The Federal Judiciary is unlike the other branches of Government. Once confirmed, a Federal Judge serves for life, and there is no court above the Supreme Court. The American people deserve a Supreme Court Justice who can demonstrate that he or she will not be beholden to the President, but only to the law.

Last October, the President succumbed to partisan pressure from the extreme right of his party by withdrawing Harriet Miers. By withdrawing her nomination and substituting this one, the President has allowed his choice to be vetoed by an extreme faction within his party before even a hearing or a vote. Frankly, that was an eye-opening experience to me. It gives the impression there are those who do not want an independent Federal Judiciary. They demand judges who will guarantee the results that they want, and that is why the questions will be asked so specifically of you, Judge.

The nomination is being considered against the backdrop of another recent revelation, that the President has, outside the law, been conducting secret and warrantless spying on Americans for more than 4 years. This is a time when the protections of America's liberties are directly at risk, as are the checks and balances that serve to constrain abuses of power for more than 200 years. The Supreme Court is relied upon by all of us to protect our fundamental rights.

I have not decided how I will vote in this nomination, and like the Chairman, I will base my determination on the whole record at the conclusion of these hearings, just as I did in connection with the nomination of John Roberts to be Chief Justice. At the conclusion of those hearings I determined to vote for him.

The stakes for the American people could not be higher. At this critical moment, Senate Democrats serving on this Committee will perform our constitutional advice and consent responsibility with heightened vigilance. I would urge all Senators, Republicans and Democrats and Independents, to join with us in serious consideration. The appointment of the next Supreme Court Justice must be made in the people's interest and in the Nation's interest, not in the interest of any partisan faction.

Mr. Chairman, Thank you very much.

Chairman SPECTER. Thank you very much, Senator Leahy.
Senator Hatch.

OPENING STATEMENT OF HON. ORRIN G. HATCH, A U.S.
SENATOR FROM THE STATE OF UTAH

Senator HATCH. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

I welcome you, Judge Alito, your family members, friends and others who are accompanying you.

This hearing is part of an ongoing evaluation of Judge Samuel Alito's nomination to replace Justice Sandra Day O'Connor as Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States. It is remarkable that after a nearly record-long period without a Supreme Court vacancy, we are here considering a second nominee in less than 6 months.

Mr. Chairman, let me first commend you for firmly and fairly handling these hearings. The timetable we are following reflects your efforts to accommodate all sides, and the 70 days since President Bush announced the nomination significantly exceeds the average for other Supreme Court nominees.

The debate over this and other judicial nominations is a debate over the judiciary itself. It is a debate over how much power unelected judges should have in our system of government, how much control judges should have over a written Constitution that belongs to the people. Ending up in the right place in this debate requires starting in the right place. The right place to start is the proper description of what judges are supposed to do, and the rest of the process should reflect this judicial job description.

The process for evaluating Judge Alito's nomination began when President Bush announced it more than 2 months ago. It continued with Judge Alito's meetings with more than two-thirds of the Senators and a vigorous debate in the media among analysts, scholars, and activists. As the Senate completes the evaluation process, we must keep some very important principles in mind and follow a few basic rules.

The first principle is that in this judicial selection process, the Senate and the President have different roles. Under the Constitution, the President, not the Senate, nominates and appoints judges. The Senate has a different role. We must give our advice about whether President Bush should actually appoint Judge Alito by giving or withholding our consent. Abiding by the Constitution's design and our own historical tradition requires that after Judge Alito's nomination reaches the Senate floor, we vigorously debate it and then vote up or down.

The second principle is that in our system of Government the judicial and legislative branches have different roles. As Chief Justice Roberts described it when he was before this Committee last fall, "Judges are not politicians. Judges must decide cases, not champion causes. Judges must settle legal disputes, not pursue agendas. Judges must interpret and apply the law, not make the law." This principle that judges are not politicians lies at the very heart of the judicial job description.

In addition to these two principles, a few basic rules should guide how we complete this confirmation process. First, we must remember that judicial nominees are constrained in what they may discuss and how they may discuss it. Like Chief Justice Roberts and others before him, Judge Alito is already a Federal judge. He not only will be bound by the canons of judicial ethics as a Supreme Court Justice, he is already bound by these canons as an appeals court judge. Because judges may not issue advisory opinions, judicial nominees may not do so either, especially on issues likely to come before the Court. That rule has always been honored.

Needless to say, those who will demand such advisory opinions in this hearing will do so precisely on those issues that are likely to come before the Court. They have a right to ask those questions. But as the Washington Post editorialized just this morning, however, “he will not—and should not—tell Americans how he will vote on hotly contested issues.”

When Judge Ruth Bader Ginsburg was before us in 1993, she said that her standard was to give no hints, no forecasts, no previews, and declined to answer dozens of questions.

The second rule we should follow is to consider each part of Judge Alito’s record on its own terms for what each part actually is. He wrote memos when he worked for the Justice Department. He has written judicial opinions while on the appeals court. He wrote answers to the questionnaire from this Committee in 1990 and again last year. He has written articles and given speeches. He has joined certain groups, and each of these is different. Each of these must be considered in its own context, on its own terms, rather than squeezed, twisted, and distorted into something designed instead to support a preconceived position or serve a preplanned agenda.

The third rule we should follow is considering Judge Alito’s entire record. Some interest groups focus on—some would say they obsess about—one recusal question, or they cherrypick from the thousands of cases in which Judge Alito participated and the hundreds of opinions he authored or joined. Or they look at the results that ignore the facts and the law in those cases.

Judge Alito comes to us with a record that is long, broad, and deep. He deserves, and our constitutional duty requires, that we consider his entire record.

Finally, and perhaps most important, we must apply a judicial rather than a political standard to the information before us, and we do have a lot of information. The record includes more than 360 opinions of all kinds—majority, concurring, and dissenting—written during his judicial tenure. We have more than 36,000 pages of additional material, including unpublished opinions, legal briefs, articles, speeches, and Department of Justice documents relating to his service in the Office of Legal Counsel and in the Solicitor General’s office. We must apply a judicial, not a political, standard to this record. Asking a judicial nominee whose side you will be on in future cases is a political standard. Evaluating Judge Alito’s record by asking those whose side he has been on in past cases is, again, a political standard.

Scorecards are common in the political process, but they are inappropriate in the judicial process. The most important tools in the judicial confirmation process are not litmus paper and a calculator. Applying a proper judicial standard to Judge Alito’s record means putting aside the scorecards and looking at how he does what judges are supposed to do, namely, settle legal disputes by applying already established law.

A judicial standard means that a judicial decision can be entirely correct even when the result does not line up with our preferred political positions or cater to certain political interests. When he was here last fall, Chief Justice Roberts compared judges to umpires who apply rules they did not write and cannot change to the competition before them. We do not evaluate an umpire's performance based on which team won the game, but on how that umpire applied the rules inning after inning. We do not hire umpires by showing them the roster for the upcoming season and demanding to know which teams they will favor before those teams even take the field. Similarly, we should evaluate judges and judicial nominees based on the general process for applying the law to any legal disputes, not on the specific result in a particular case or dispute.

The fact that Judge Alito is such a baseball fan gives me even more confidence that he knows the proper role of a judge. I know that there is a pitched battle going on outside the Senate, with dueling press conferences, television ads, e-mail, petition drives, and stacks of reports and press releases. The Senate can rise above that battle if we remember the proper role for the Senate and the proper role for judges. We can rise above that battle if we respect that judicial nominees are limited in what they may discuss. Take each part of Judge Alito's record on its own terms. Consider Judge Alito's entire record and apply a judicial rather than a political standard.

Judge Alito, I know you. I have known you for a long time. You are a good man. You are an exceptional judge as well. I welcome you and your family to this Committee, and I hope that the days ahead will reflect more light than heat. We congratulate you that you are willing to go through this grueling process to represent your country on one of the three separated powers. It means so much to all of us, and I am grateful to personally know you as well as I do.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Chairman SPECTER. Thank you very much, Senator Hatch. Senator Kennedy?

STATEMENT OF HON. EDWARD M. KENNEDY, A U.S. SENATOR FROM THE STATE OF MASSACHUSETTS

Senator KENNEDY. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Judge Alito, I join in welcoming you and your family to this Committee. I appreciated the opportunity to visit with you in my office a few weeks ago, and I was particularly impressed by your personal family story of how you were encouraged to do well and contribute to your community. And I also applaud your dedication to public service throughout your lifetime.

Supreme Court nominations are an occasion to pause and reflect on the values that make our Nation strong, just, and fair. And we must determine whether a nominee has a demonstrated commitment to those basic values. Will a nominee embrace and uphold the essential meaning of the four words inscribed above the entrance of the Supreme Court Building, "Equal justice under law."

Justice Louis Powell spoke for all of us when he said, "Equal justice under law is perhaps the most inspiring idea of our society. It is one of the ends for which our entire legal system exists."

As we have seen from Justice O'Connor's example, even one Justice can profoundly alter the meaning of those words for our citizens. Even one Justice can deeply affect the rights and liberties of the American people. Even one Justice can advance or reverse the progress of our journey.

So the question before us in these hearings is this: does Judge Alito's record hold true to the letter and the spirit of equal justice? Is he committed to the core values of our Constitution that are at the heart of our Nation's progress, and can he truly be evenhanded and fair in his decisions?

In a way Judge Alito has faced this issue before as a nominee to the Court of Appeals. I had the privilege of chairing his confirmation hearing in 1990, and at that time he had practiced law for 14 years, but only represented one client, the U.S. Government. I asked whether he believed he could be impartial in deciding cases involving the Government, and in that hearing Judge Alito said on the record that the most important quality for a judge is open-mindedness to the arguments, and he promised the Committee that he would make a very conscious effort to be absolutely impartial. We took him at his word and overwhelmingly confirmed him to the Third Circuit Court of Appeals.

We now have the record of Judge Alito's 15 years on the bench, and the benefit of some of his earlier writings that were not available 15 years ago, and I regret to say that the record troubles me deeply.

In an era where the White House is abusing power, is excusing and authorizing torture and is spying on American citizens, I find Judge Alito's support for an all-powerful executive branch to be genuinely troubling. Under the President's spying program there are no checks and balances. There is no outside review of the legality of this brazen infringement on the civil rights and liberties of the American people. Undeterred by the public outcry, the President vows to continue spying on American citizens. Ultimately the courts will make the final judgment whether the White House has gone too far. Independent and impartial judges must assess the proper balance between protecting our liberties and protecting our national security.

I am gravely concerned by Judge Alito's clear record of support for vast Presidential authority unchecked by the other two branches of Government. In decision after decision on the bench, he has excused abusive actions by the authorities that intrude on the personal privacy and freedoms of average Americans, and in his writings and speeches he has supported a level of overreaching Presidential power that, frankly, most Americans find disturbing and even frightening.

In fact, it is extraordinary that each of the three individuals this President has nominated for the Supreme Court, Chief Justice Roberts, Harriet Miers and now Judge Alito, has served not only as a lawyer for the executive branch, but as a defendant of the most expansive view of Presidential authority. Perhaps that is why this President nominated them. But as Justice O'Connor stated, even a state of war is not a blank check for a President to do whatever he wants. The Supreme Court must serve as an independent check on abuses by the executive branch and a protector of our liberties, not a cheerleader for an imperial presidency.

There are other areas of concern. In an era when too many Americans are losing their jobs or working for less, trying to make ends meet, in close cases Judge Alito has ruled the vast majority of the time against the claims of the individual citizens. He has acted instead in favor of Government, large corporations and other powerful interests. In a study by the well-respected expert, Professor Cass Sunstein of the University of Chicago Law School, Judge Alito was found to rule against the individual in 84 percent of his dissents. To put it plainly, average Americans have had a hard time getting a fair shake in his courtroom. In an era when America is still too divided by race and riches, Judge Alito has not written one single opinion on the merits in favor of a person of color alleging race discrimination on the job; in 15 years on the bench, not one.

When I look at that record in light of the 1985 job application to the Reagan Justice Department, it is even more troubling. That document lays out an ideological agenda that highlights his pride in belonging to an alumni group at Princeton that opposed the admission of women and proposed to curb the admission of racial minorities. It proclaims his legal opinion that the Constitution does not protect the right of women to make their own reproductive decisions. It expresses outright hostility to the basic principle of one person, one vote, affirmed by the Supreme Court as essential to ensuring that all Americans have a voice in their Government. This application was not a youthful indiscretion. It was a document prepared by a mature, 35-year-old professional.

Finally, many of us are concerned about conflicting statements that Judge Alito has made in response to questions from this Committee and others. As Chairman Specter has stated, this confirmation largely depends on the credibility of Judge Alito's statements to us, and we have questions. When asked about the ideological statements and specific legal opinions in his 1985 application, Judge Alito has dismissed those statements as just applying for a job.

When he was before this Committee in 1990 applying for a job to the circuit, he promised under oath that he would recuse himself from cases involving Vanguard, the mutual fund company in which he had most of his investments. But as a judge he participated in a Vanguard case anyway, and has offered many conflicting reasons to explain why he broke his word. We need to get to the bottom of this matter to assure ourselves that what Judge Alito says in these hearings will not be just words, but pledges that guide him in the future if he is confirmed.

Judges are appointed by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, and it is our duty to ask questions on great issues that matter to the American people and to speak for them. Many Republican Senators certainly demanded answers from Harriet Miers. We should expect no less from Judge Alito. There is not time for a double standard. If confirmed, Judge Alito could serve on the Court for a generation or more, and the decisions he will make as Justice will have a direct impact on the lives and liberties of our children, our grandchildren and even our great-grandchildren. We have only one chance to get it right, and a solemn obligation to do so.

Judge Alito, I have serious questions to ask. I congratulate you on your nomination, and I look forward to your answers in these hearings.

Chairman SPECTER. Thank you, Senator Kennedy.

Senator Grassley.

STATEMENT OF HON. CHARLES E. GRASSLEY, A U.S. SENATOR FROM THE STATE OF IOWA

Senator GRASSLEY. I have a much more positive view of Judge Alito.

[Laughter.]

Senator GRASSLEY. I think the record will sustain my view. But first, Judge Alito, I welcome you and your proud family to the Committee, and congratulations on your nomination.

I first want to remind all Americans who might be listening that the Senate has a very important responsibility to confirm only well-qualified individuals who will faithfully interpret the law and the Constitution. Confirmation should be limited to those individuals who will be fair, unbiased, devoted to addressing the facts in the law before them without imposing their own values and political beliefs when deciding cases. Nominees should not be expected to precommit to ruling on certain issues in a certain way, nor should Senators ask nominees to pledge to rule on cases in a particular way.

If we fulfill our responsibility to the Constitution, the Supreme Court will be filled with superior legal minds who will pursue the one agenda that our Founding Fathers intended in writing the Constitution, justice rather than political or personal goals. The Supreme Court will then consists of individuals who meticulously apply the law and the Constitution regardless of whether the results they reach are popular or not. If we do our job right, the Supreme Court will not be made up of men and women who are on the side of the little guy or the big guy, rather the Supreme Court will be made up of men and women who are on the side of the law and the Constitution.

From all accounts, Judge Alito has an impressive and extensive legal and judicial record, certainly one worthy of someone on the Supreme Court. Judge Alito excelled at top-notch schools, member of law review, clerked for a Federal judge. He also held important positions at the Department of Justice, Office of Legal Counsel, the Solicitor General's Office and was U.S. Attorney for New Jersey before being appointed to the Third Circuit.

I want to remind the American people this nominee, Judge Alito, has been confirmed unanimously by the U.S. Senate, not once, but twice. This is a tremendous record of accomplishment in public service equal to any Supreme Court nominee that I have considered in the 25 years I have been on this Committee. Not only that, Judge Alito has a reputation for being an exceptional and honest judge devoted to the rule of law, as well as being a man of integrity.

Judge Alito enjoys the support and respect of people who work with him, practice with him, and therefore, know him best. Example, 54 of Judge Alito's law clerks, Democrats, Republicans and Independents alike, signed a letter to the Committee that stated, "We collectively were involved in thousands of cases and it never once appeared to us that Judge Alito has prejudged a case or ruled based on political ideology." Continuing to quote, "It is our uniform experience that Judge Alito was guided by his profound respect for the Constitution and the limited role of the judicial branch." Those 54 opinions say a lot about Judge Alito and his approach to judicial function. Like Chief Justice Roberts, it appears that Judge Alito tries to act like an umpire, calling the balls and strikes, rather than advocating a particular outcome.

I am also impressed with the very complimentary things that some lawyers have had to say about Judge Alito in the Lawyers Evaluation Section of the Almanac of Federal Judiciary. With respect to his legal ability, lawyers praised him, saying that Judge Alito was "exceptional," "a brilliant jurist." Another lawyer stated that, "to say that he is outstanding is to use understatement. He's the best judge on the circuit, maybe in the country."

With respect to his demeanor and temperament, lawyers found Judge Alito to be measured and judicial while on the bench. One lawyer commented that he is demanding, but always courteous. He may occasionally, quoting, "demonstrate a little bit of impatience with lawyers that aren't quite getting it. This can be directed at either side. It's just a sign that his mind is working more efficiently than yours. He's never discourteous, never abusive." Another lawyer said, "He is pleasant and courteous." Others commented about the impression that Judge Alito is a conservative judge, but certainly not out to impose his own personal agenda while on the bench. One lawyer commented that he "is a conservative, but reaches honest decisions," while another said, "By reputation he's known to be one of the more conservative judges on the court, but he is forthright and fair. He tries to decide cases in front of him in the right way."

The American Bar Association came out just last week with an evaluation of Judge Alito to be a Justice, and they considered things like integrity, judgment, compassion, open-mindedness and freedom from bias and commitment to equal justice under the law. The ABA once again found Judge Alito to be unanimously well qualified. This recommendation should have much weight for my colleagues on the other side, who have time and time again described the rating of the ABA as, quote, "gold standard." Yet, some liberal interest groups have come out in full force and have attempted to paint Judge Alito to be an extremist and to be an activist. They have criticized a nominee who has, from what I see described by these lawyers and fellow judges, a reputation of being a restrained jurist committed to the rule of law and the Constitution, but that is what these outside-the-mainstream groups always do.

They attack individuals who they believe will not implement their agenda before the Supreme Court, so Judge Alito should see criticism as a badge of honor worn by many past and present members of the Court. Yet, I am glad to see the public fully participate in this process because this is the nature of our system of Government, but I do not like to see facts twisted, untruths fabricated to give the nominee a black eye even before he comes before our Committee.

So, Judge Alito, now you have that opportunity to set everyone straight on your record and your approach to deciding cases. These hearings are also an opportunity, a very good opportunity to remind the public about the proper role of a judge in our system of checks and balances limited Government. Judges are required by our democratic system not to overstep their positions to become policymakers or super legislators. Supreme Court nominees should know, without any doubt, that their job is not to impose their own personal opinions of what is right and wrong, but to say what the law is, rather than what they personally think the law ought to be. Supreme Court nominees should know that this exercise of judicial restraint is a key ingredient of being a good judge, as the Constitution constrains judges every bit as it constrains we legislators, executives and citizens in their actions.

Moreover, Supreme Court nominees should be individuals who not only understand but truly respect the equal roles and responsibilities of different branches of Government and our State Governments. As Alexander Hamilton said in Federalist No. 78, "The courts must decide the sense of the law, and if they should be disposed to exercise will instead of judgment, the consequences would be the substitution of their pleasure to that of the legislative body." Our Framers expected the judicial branch to be the least dangerous branch of Government.

At our meeting in my office in November, I heard Judge Alito place emphasis on the limited role of the courts in our democratic society. He also reiterated this belief in a questionnaire he submitted to this Committee. So I have some idea of how Judge Alito approaches the law and views the role of a judge. I am hopeful that his commitment to judicial restraint and to confining decisions to the law and the Constitution will shine through in this hearing, and I believe it will, and I am hopeful that my colleagues will give Judge Alito a civil, a fair and a dignified process, as well as an up or down vote, because as always, the Constitution sets the standard: the President nominates, the Senate deliberates, and then we are obligated to give our advice and consent in an up or down vote.

Judge Alito, I congratulate you.

Chairman SPECTER. Thank you very much, Senator Grassley.
Senator Biden.

STATEMENT OF HON. JOSEPH R. BIDEN, JR., A U.S. SENATOR FROM THE STATE OF DELAWARE

Senator BIDEN. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Judge, welcome. Mrs. Alito and your family, welcome. It is an incredible honor to be nominated by a President of the United States to be an Associate Justice of the Supreme Court, and you are to be congratulated.

Judge, this may be one of the most significant, consequential nominations that the Senate will vote on since I have been here in the last three decades. I think history has delivered you, fortunately or unfortunately, to a moment where Supreme Court historians far into the future are going to look back on this nomination and make a judgment whether or not with your nomination, and if you are confirmed, whether the jurisprudence of the Supreme Court begin to change from the consensus that existed the last 70 years, or whether it continued on the same path it has over the past six or seven decades, and that moment is right now.

Lest we think it is kind of like we all go through this process—and I like the phrase “minuet” that the Chairman used—we all act like there is not an elephant in the room. The truth of the matter is, there is significant debate among judicial scholars today as to whether or not we have gone off on the wrong path with regard to Supreme Court decisions. There is a very significant dispute that has existed in 5–4 decisions over the past two decades in a Court that is very closely divided on the critical, central issues of the day.

Just to make it clear, I am puzzled by some of the things you have said, and I am sure you are going to get a chance to tell me what you meant by some of the things you wrote and said, but when in your job application you talked about being proud, as you should be, to be proud of your subscription to and adhering to notions put forward in the National Review that you are a proud member of the Federalist Society, the National Conservative Political Action Committee, the American Spectator is something you look to, et cetera. These are all really very bright folks. They all have a very decided opinion on the issues of the day—very decided. And those very organizations I have named think, for example, we misread the Fifth Amendment and have been misreading it for the past three decades. Those same groups argue that, in fact, there is no right of privacy in the Constitution, et cetera. So people are not making this up. In a sense, it is not about you. You find yourself in the middle of one of the most significant national debates in modern constitutional history because you have been nominated to replace a woman, in addition, who has been the deciding vote on a significant number of these cases. Since 1995 there have been 193 5–4 decisions, and Justice O’Connor 77 percent of the time has been the deciding vote. And for 70 years, there has been a consensus among scholars and the American people on a reading of the Constitution that protects the right of privacy, the autonomy of individuals, while at the same time empowering the Federal Government to protect the less powerful. Only recently has the debate come that States rights are being trumped in a fundamental way, a reading of the 10th Amendment and 11th Amendment. That is a legitimate debate. Totally legitimate. But anybody who pretends that how you read the 10th and 11th Amendment does not have a fundamental impact on the things we care about is kidding themselves. They are either uninformed or they are kidding themselves.

So, Judge, there is a genuine struggle going on well beyond you, well beyond the Congress, in America about how to read the Constitution. And I believe at its core we have a Constitution, as our Supreme Court’s first great Justice Marshall said in 1819, and I quote, “intended to endure for the ages to come and consequently to be adapted to the various crises of human affairs.” That is the crux of the debate we are having now, whether it is an adaptable Constitution. A lot of my friends make very powerful and convincing arguments—and they may be right—that, no, no, no, no, no, it is not adaptable, it is not adaptable. And since our country's founding, we have tried to keep Government's heavy hand out of our personal lives while ensuring that we do the most important thing, which is to protect those who cannot protect themselves. And the debate raging today is about whether we will continue along that path and whether our courts will continue to be one of the places where society puts the little guy—and I know this is not something you are supposed to say—the little guy on the same footing with the big guy. The one place David is equal to Goliath is in the Supreme Court.

It is also important to note that you are slated to replace the first woman ever nominated to the Supreme Court. We can pretend that is not the fact, but it is. And through no fault of your own, we are cutting the number of women in half on the Court. And now, as I said, that is not your fault, but I think it means that we have to take, at least speaking for myself, a closer look at your stands on issues that are important to women. And, moreover, Justice O'Connor brought critical qualities to the High Court that not everybody thinks are qualities—I happen to think they are—her pragmatism and her statecraft. Not that I have always agreed with what she said, far from it, but Justice O'Connor has been properly lauded in my view as a judge who approached her duties with open-mindedness and with a sensitivity to the effects her decisions would have on everyday, ordinary people. She, unlike Judge Bork, did not think that being on the Court would be “an intellectual feast,” to quote Judge Bork. Justice O'Connor also brought balance to our highest Court. Most recently, as has been repeated many times, she cautioned about war does not give a blank check. Her decisions reflect, in my view, that our societies work very hard to improve the workaday world, to open doors to workers confronted by powerful employers and for women facing harassment and stereotypes.

Now, I acknowledge this is a very tough job a judge has in determining whether or not there is an openness that is required under the Constitution. But I also acknowledge that prejudice runs very deep in our society, and in the real world, discrimination rears its ugly head in the shadows where it is very difficult to root it out. But Justice O'Connor was not afraid to go into the shadows.

The Constitution provides for one democratic moment, Judge, before a lifetime of judicial independence when the people of the United States are entitled to know as much as we can about the person that we are about to entrust with safeguarding our future and the future of our kids. And, Judge, simply put, that is this moment, the one democratic moment in a lifetime of absolute judicial independence. And that is what these hearings are about, in my view.

In the coming days, we want to know about what you believe, Judge, how you view the Constitution, how you envision the role of the Federal courts, what kind of Justice you would seek to become. As I said, this one democratic moment when the people, through their elected representatives, get to ask questions of a President's choice for the highest Court. And I hope you will be forthcoming.

I cannot imagine, notwithstanding what many of my colleagues, whom I have great respect for, believe, I can't imagine the Founders, when they sat down and wrote the document and got to the Appointments Clause and said, You know what? The American people are entitled to know before we make him President, before we make her Senator, before we make him Congressman, what they believe on the major issues of the day. But judges, Supreme Court nominees, as long as they are smart and honest and decent, it really does not matter what they think. We do not have to know. I can't fathom—can't fathom—that that was the intent of the Founders. They intended the American people to know what their nominees thought.

And I might add—and I will end with this—we just had two Supreme Court Justices before our caucus just as they were before, I think, the Republican Caucus. They ventured opinions on everything. On everything, things that are going to come before the Court. It did not in any way jeopardize their judicial independence.

So, Judge, I really hope that this does not turn out to be a minuet. I hope it turns out to be a conversation. I believe we—you and I and this Committee—owe it to the American people in this one democratic moment to have a conversation about the issues that will affect their lives profoundly. They are entitled to know what you think.

And I remind my colleagues, many of whom are on this Committee, they sure wanted to know what Harriet Miers thought about everything. They sure wanted to know in great detail. They were about ready to administer blood tests. The good news is no blood test here. The good news is no blood test, just a conversation, and I hope you will engage in it with us because I am anxious to get a sense of how you are going to approach these big issues.

I thank you very much, Judge.

Chairman SPECTER. Thank you, Senator Biden.

Senator Kyl?

STATEMENT OF HON. JON KYL, A U.S. SENATOR FROM THE STATE OF ARIZONA

Senator KYL. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Welcome, Judge Alito, to your confirmation hearing. At the outset, I am pleased to note that you have more judicial experience than any Supreme Court nominee in more than 70 years. Indeed, only one Supreme Court Justice in history, one Horace Lurton, nominated by President Taft, had more Federal appeals court experience. Moreover, you have devoted virtually your entire professional life to public service, and the Nation owes you gratitude for that service. I look forward to a dignified hearing followed by a fair up or down vote on the Senate floor.

Before discussing your nomination, I would like to take a moment to express my respect and admiration for the Justice whom you are nominated to replace, my fellow Arizonan Sandra Day O'Connor, whom I have known for more than 30 years. Justice O'Connor has served with great distinction during her career in the Arizona Legislature, on the Arizona Court of Appeals, and for what has been a quarter of a century on the U.S. Supreme Court. Arizonans are deeply proud of Justice O'Connor's service to this country.

She will always be remembered by Arizonans and all Americans as an extraordinary public servant.

Judge Alito, I would like to discuss your background and experience in the context of other Justices on the Supreme Court so that everyone understands how well you satisfy what we have come to expect from our top judges. Like all the sitting Justices, you had an outstanding education. One of your classmates at Yale Law School, Tony Kronman, who later went on to be the dean of the law school and could, I believe, fairly be described as a political liberal, has recently remarked, and I quote, “He impressed me”—speaking of you—“as being more interested in the technical, intellectual challenges of the law and its legal reasoning than its political uses or ramifications.” Thus, even in your early 20’s, it appears you were focused on the law as an independent pursuit rather than using law to influence political ends.

With your intellect and education, you could have become a wealthy attorney, but instead you devoted virtually all of your legal career to the public service. In doing so, you meet, and even exceed, the stellar examples set by Justices Thomas and Souter, each of whom devoted most of their pre-judicial careers to public service. Perhaps this is because, like Justices Ginsburg and Scalia, you had a father who was an immigrant to this Nation. It seems that immigrants often have a special understanding of the incredible opportunities that this Nation affords its citizens. Moreover, your father’s long service to the people of New Jersey both as a school-teacher and as a civil servant in the State legislature plainly served as a model for you.

I also note that you served in the U.S. Army Reserves from 1972 until 1980. If confirmed, only you and Justice Stevens would have any military experience. You would also be the first Supreme Court Justice to have served in the Army Reserves since Justice Frank Murphy did so during World War II.

You have spent much of your career as a Federal prosecutor pursuing terrorists, mob kingpins, drug dealers, and others who threaten our safety and our security. Justice Souter had a distinguished career as a State prosecutor, but no sitting Justice has served as a Federal prosecutor. Again, this experience could prove helpful given that approximately 40 percent of the Supreme Court docket involves criminal matters.

You also served as an attorney in the executive branch. Like Chief Justice Roberts, you served in the Solicitor General’s office representing our Government before the Supreme Court. And like Justice Scalia, you served in the Office of Legal Counsel, providing constitutional advice to the President and the rest of the executive branch. In both of these roles, your job was to advance the policies of a President who twice won an electoral college landslide. He set the agenda, and you helped him implement it.

Similarly, Justice Thomas served Presidents Reagan and Bush in political/legal capacities, and Justice Breyer also worked in political jobs, both in President Johnson’s Justice Department and as a lawyer to this Committee.

I note that you were just 39 when nominated to serve on the Third Circuit. Justice Kennedy was only 38 when nominated to the Ninth Circuit, and Justice Breyer only 42 when nominated to the First Circuit. Like them, you now have a great deal of hands-on experience that you can bring to the Court for years to come.

During your judicial service, you amassed an impressive record for the Senate to review, including more than 350 authored opinions. It is this judicial record that should be the focus of this Committee, just as it was with all of the other sitting Justices on the Court. It appears to me that you easily fit into the mold of what this Nation has come to expect from a Supreme Court Justice: a first-rate intellect, demonstrated academic excellence, a life of engagement with serious constitutional analysis, and a reputation for fair-mindedness and modesty. These are the standards for a Supreme Court Justice, and you plainly meet these expectations. As a consequence, I view your nomination with a heavy presumption in favor of confirmation. Before I conclude, I would like, though, to address two other points.

First, some of my colleagues are fond of asking the question, Which side are you on? You have heard that today. Politicians must pick sides regularly, every time they vote, so it is perhaps natural that they see the world as a battle between competing groups. But it is wholly inappropriate as an approach to the judicial role. The only relevant side is that of the law and the Constitution. We do great injury to the integrity of the court system when we start speaking of sides and stop devoting ourselves to the pursuit of impartial justice.

During Chief Justice Roberts's confirmation hearings, I was struck by the way he answered the question. Then Judge Roberts explained that he had been asked earlier in the confirmation process, Are you going to be on the side of the little guy? Roberts explained that this question troubled him, and this is how he answered. He said, "If the Constitution says that the little guy should win, the little guy is going to win. But if the Constitution says that the big guy should win, well, then the big guy is going to win because my obligation is to the Constitution. That's the oath. The oath that a judge takes is not that I will look out for particular interests. The oath is to uphold the Constitution and the laws of the United States." And this is the essence of justice. Our courts provide a neutral forum for the adjudication of disputes under the law, not based on economic or political power, on race, on sex, or any other personal characteristics. Big guy, little guy—it should make no difference. The rule of law demands neutrality.

Second, I want to address the proper scope of questioning during these hearings, a matter that has also come up already. As I reminded Chief Justice Roberts at his hearings, the American Bar Association Model Code of Judicial Conduct dictates that, and I quote, "a judge or candidate for election or appointment to judicial office shall not, with respect to cases, controversies, or issues that are likely to come before the court, make pledges, promises, or commitments that are inconsistent with the impartial performance of the adjudicative duties of the office." In other words, no judicial nominee should answer any question that is designed to reveal how the nominee will rule on any issue that could come before the Court. This rule has come to be known as "the Ginsburg standard" because Justice Ginsburg stated during her own confirmation hearings that she would give no forecasts, no hints about how she would rule on issues. And I was pleased to see that Chief Justice Roberts refused to prejudge issues or make promises in exchange for confirmation votes. We are all better off because of his principled stand.

Soon after his confirmation, Justice Ginsburg was asked about this Ginsburg standard as applied to the Roberts hearings, and she said, "Judge Roberts was unquestionably right. My rule was I will not answer a question that attempts to project how I will rule in a case that might come before the Court." In other words, Justice Ginsburg reaffirmed the Ginsburg standard.

In light of the Chief Justice's confirmation hearings and Justice Ginsburg's later remarks, I asked my colleagues for basic fair play. Apply the same standards to Judge Alito that we applied to John Roberts, Stephen Breyer, Ruth Bader Ginsburg, and all of the other sitting Justices. Let's not invent a new standard for Judge Alito or change the rules in the middle of the game. Politicians must let voters know what they think about issues before the election. Judges should not.

And it is not a hypothetical matter. Senator Kennedy in his opening statement expressed concern about the extent of the executive branch's authority to conduct surveillance of terrorists and said ultimately the courts will decide whether the President has gone too far. Indeed they will.

Judge Alito, I will tell you the same thing I told John Roberts. I expect you to adhere to the Code of Judicial Conduct, and I want you to know that I will strongly defend your refusal to give any indication of how you might rule on any matter that might come before you as a judge or to answer any question that you believe to be improper under the circumstances. Congratulations, Judge Alito, on your nomination.

Chairman SPECTER. Thank you, Senator Kyl.
Senator Kohl?

STATEMENT OF HON. HERBERT KOHL, A U.S. SENATOR FROM THE STATE OF WISCONSIN

Senator KOHL. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Judge Alito, let me also send my welcome to you this afternoon and to your family. You are to be congratulated on your nomination.

Through its interpretation of the Constitution, the Supreme Court hugely shapes the fabric of our society for us and for future generations. Over the course of more than 200 years, it has found a right to equal education regardless of race. It has guaranteed an attorney and a fair trial to all Americans, rich and poor alike. It has allowed women to keep private medical decisions private. And it has allowed Americans to speak, vote, and worship without interference from their Government.

Through these decisions and many more, the judicial branch has in its finest hours stood firmly on the side of individuals against those who would trample their rights. In the words of Justice Black, "The courts stand against any winds that blow as havens of refuge for those who might otherwise suffer because they are helpless, weak, outnumbered, or because they are nonconforming victims of prejudice or public excitement."

As the guardian of our rights, the Supreme Court makes decisions every year which either protect the individual or leave him at the mercy of more powerful forces in our society. They consider questions like when can a disabled individual sue to gain access to a courthouse, when can a parent leave work to care for a sick child, when should the Government be allowed to listen to a private conversation, and when will the courthouse doors open or close to an employee suffering discrimination at work.

Whether interpreting the Constitution or filling in the blanks of a law or a regulation, every word of the Court's opinion can widen or narrow our rights as Americans and either protect us or leave us more vulnerable to any winds that blow. If confirmed, you will write the words that will either broaden or narrow our rights for the rest of your working life. You will be interpreting the Constitution in which we as a people place our faith and on which our freedoms as a Nation rest. And on a daily basis, the words of your opinions will affect countless individuals as they seek protection behind the courthouse doors.

Despite your enormous power, you will be free of all constraints, unaccountable and unrecalable. We give Supreme Court Justices this freedom because we expect them to remain above the pull of politics, to avoid the effects of public excitement and allow a broader view, not tied to the whims of the majority at a certain moment in the history. So for only a short time this month will the people through their Senators be able to question and to judge you. In short, before we give you the keys to the car, we would like to know where you plan to take us.

To a certain extent, we know more about what is in your heart and in your mind than we did with now Justice Roberts. You have a long track record as a judge and as a public official in the Justice Department. When we met privately and I asked you what sort of Supreme Court Justice you would make, your answer was fair when you said, "If you want to know what sort of a Justice I would make, then look at what sort of a judge I have been."

Taking this advice, your critics argue that your judicial record demonstrates that you will not sufficiently protect the individual, but will instead side with more powerful interests, narrow the rights we enjoy, and leave individual Americans more vulnerable to abuse. For example, they cite your Casey dissent as diminishing the power of married women over their own bodies. They identify your decision in the Chittister case as evidence that you will make it harder for working people to care for a family. They cite the Bray case and others where you often side with corporations to block the victims of discrimination from getting their day in court. Others raise concerns about your views on the rights of the accused when faced with the Government's enormous power in the criminal justice process.

In addition to your record on the bench, your opponents identify memos you wrote while in the Justice Department as further evidence of your hostility to individual rights. For example, in your now famous 1985 job application, you expressed pride in some of the work you did in the Solicitor General's office. You chose to single out the assistance that you provided in crafting Supreme Court briefs urging that "the Constitution does not protect a right to an abortion.” While these statements came in the context of your work on behalf of the Reagan administration, they were, nevertheless, your self-proclaimed personal views.

In the same job application, you wrote that you had pursued a legal career because you disagreed with many of the decisions of the Warren Court, especially, and I quote, “in the areas of criminal procedure, the Establishment Clause, and reapportionment.” These Warren Court decisions establishing one person/one vote, Miranda rights, and protections for religious minorities are some of the most important cases protecting our rights and our liberties, protecting minorities against majority abuses and protecting individuals against Government abuses, and yet antagonism toward these decisions seems to have motivated your pursuit of the law.

Your supporters, on the other hand, contend that it is not fair to select a few specific cases in light of a career as a judge spanning 15 years. Further, they dismiss some of your early memos in the Justice Department as old and not particularly relevant. They argue that you are well within the mainstream of judges, especially Republican-appointed judges.

So it is our job to sort out the truth about your record, separate the rhetoric from the reality, and decide where you will lead the country. We will need to examine whether, as your critics contend, you will consistently side against the individual or whether, as your supporters contend, you are a mainstream conservative who will fairly decide all cases. I hope these hearings will add to our record in making this critical determination.

This would be an appropriate time to share my perspective on how we will judge the nominee. We have used the same test for each of the five previous Supreme Court nomination hearings: a test of judicial excellence. Judicial excellence, it seems to me, involves at least four elements:

First, a nominee must possess the competence, character, and temperament to serve on the bench.

Second, judicial excellence means that a Supreme Court Justice must have a sense of the values from which the core of our political and economic system goes. In other words, we should not approve any nominee whose extreme judicial philosophy would undermine rights and liberties relied upon by all Americans.

Third, judicial excellence requires an understanding that the law is more than an intellectual game and more than a mental exercise. He or she must recognize that real people with real problems are affected by the decisions rendered by the Court. Justice, after all, may be blind, but it should not be deaf.

And, finally, judicial excellence requires candor before confirmation. We are being asked to give the nominee enormous power, and so we want to know what is in your mind and in your heart.

Judge Alito, we are convinced that your intellect and experience qualifies you for this position. I enjoyed meeting you a few weeks ago and appreciated our discussion. Your legal talents are undeniably impressive, and your opinions are thoughtful and well reasoned. We are now familiar with your abilities in your long tenure as a judge. And yet we do not know whether the concerns some have raised about your judicial philosophy are overstated or whether we need to have serious doubts about your nomination. I look forward to these hearings as an opportunity to learn more and measure whether you meet our test of judicial excellence.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Chairman SPECTER. Thank you, Senator Kohl.

Senator DeWine.

STATEMENT OF HON. MIKE DEWINE, A U.S. SENATOR FROM THE STATE OF OHIO

Senator DEWINE. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Judge Alito, I want to welcome you and your family, appreciate you being here with us today.

The Constitution gives the Senate a solemn duty, a solemn duty when it comes to the nomination of any individual to sit on the U.S. Supreme Court. While the President is to nominate that individual, we in the Senate must provide our advice and consent. This function is not well defined. The Constitution does not set down a road map. It does not require hearings. In fact, it does not even require questioning on your understanding of the Constitution or the role of the Supreme Court.

To me, however, these things are certainly important. The reason is obvious. When it comes to the Supreme Court, the American people have only two times when they have any input into how our Constitution is interpreted and who will have the privilege to do so. First, we elect a President who has the power to nominate Justices to the Supreme Court. Second, the people, acting through their representatives in the Senate, have their say on whether the President's nominee should in fact be confirmed.

Judge Alito, I want to use our time together today to make a point about democracy. When it comes to our Constitution, judges perform certainly an important role. But the people, acting through their elected representatives, should play an even more important role. After all, our Constitution was intended as a popular document. It was drafted and ratified by the people. It established democratic institutions. It entrusts the people with the power to make the tough decisions. In most cases, it prefers the will of the people to the unchecked rule of judges. If confirmed, Judge, you should always keep this in mind.

In my opinion, Chief Justice Roberts put it best during his recent confirmation hearings, when he said, and I quote, "The Framers were not the sort of people, having fought a revolution, having fought a revolution to get the right of self government, to sit down and say, well, let's take all the difficult issues before us, let's have the judges decide them. That would have been the farthest thing from their mind," end of quote.

Sometimes, Judge, however, I fear that the Supreme Court forgets this advice. In the last 15 years, in fact, the Court has struck down, in whole or in part, more than 35 acts of this Congress, and nearly 60 State and local laws. Without question, the Court does play a vital role in our constitutional system. Sometimes local, State, and Federal law so clearly run afoul of the Constitution, that the Court must step in and strike them down.

In most cases, the Court performs this admirably and with great restraint. In recent years, the Court has struck down some laws that, in my opinion, did not deserve such a fate. Take, for instance, the Americans with Disabilities Act; it passed this Congress with overwhelming bipartisan support. The law was supported by an extensive factual record, and it was based on our Government's long-standing constitutional power to fight discrimination wherever it exists. When the Court considered the ADA in the Garrett case, however, it ignored the Act's broad support, cast aside the legislative record, and struck down a portion of the law. The decision was a close one, 5–4. The majority relied on a highly controversial legal theory, and the case evoked a vigorous dissent.

This is precisely my problem with Garrett. In such a difficult case where the Constitution does not clearly support the majority's decision, the proper response is not to strike down the law. In such a case, the Court should defer to the will of the people. In other ways, Judge, the Court's recent decisions have made life more difficult for the democratic institutions that perform the day-to-day work of our Nation, recent cases involving affirmative action and the posting of the Ten Commandments on public property, which seem to me at least to prove the point. The Court has upheld one affirmative action program at the University of Michigan, but struck down another one, and has allowed the posting of the Ten Commandments outside of a public building, but banned it on the inside in another case.

To add to the confusion, some of the Court's decisions involve multiple concurrences and dissents, making it hard, even for lawyers and judges to figure out what the law is and why.

Chief Justice Roberts mentioned this problem at his hearing. And in one of his final statements as Chief Justice, William Rehnquist noted that one of the Court's decisions had so many opinions within it that he—and I quote—“didn't know we had so many Justices on the Court.”

What has emerged in certain areas, therefore, is a patchwork, a patchwork that leaves local officials, State legislators, Members of Congress and the public guessing what the law permits and what it does not. In 1937, President Franklin Roosevelt reminded us that the Constitution is, and I quote, “a layman's document, not a lawyer's contract.” But that very document does little to serve people when Supreme Court decisions are written so that even high-price lawyers cannot figure them out.

I am not the first to raise these democratic concerns. Many have faulted the Court for its lack of clarity in certain cases and many have criticized its recent lack of deference to decisions made by State legislatures and Congress. In fact, some have even suggested that this recent trend has transformed our democracy from one founded on “we, the people,” to one ruled by “we, the Court.” To me, the criticism has some force. The Constitution empowers the people to resolve our days' most contentious issues. When judges forget this basic truth, they do a disservice to our democracy and to our Constitution. Judges are not Members of Congress. They are not State legislators, Governors, nor Presidents. Their job is not to pass laws, implement regulations, nor to make policy. To use the words of Justice Byron White, words that I quoted at our last Supreme Court hearing: the role of the judge is simply to decide cases; to decide cases, nothing more.

Judge, from what I have seen so far, you do not need much reminding on this score. Your decisions are usually brief and to the point. You write with clarity and common sense, and in most cases you defer to the decisionmaking of those closest to the problem at hand. I do not expect to agree with every case that you decide, but your modest approach to judging seems to bode well for our democracy.

Over the next several days the members of this Committee will question you to find out what kind of Justice you will be. This hearing is really our opportunity to try to answer that question. Our constitutional system is founded on democracy, a world of people, not the unchecked rule of judges. If confirmed, it will be your job to faithfully interpret our Constitution and to defend our democracy case by case. I wish you well.

Thank you.

Chairman SPECTER. Thank you, Senator DeWine.
Senator Feinstein.

STATEMENT OF HON. DIANNE FEINSTEIN, A U.S. SENATOR FROM THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA

Senator FEINSTEIN. Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman.

Welcome, Judge Alito. I am one that believes your appointment to the Supreme Court is the pivotal appointment, and because you replace Sandra Day O'Connor and because she was the fifth vote on 148 cases, you well could be a very key and decisive vote. So during these hearings, I think it is fair for us to try to determine whether your legal reasoning is within the mainstream of American legal thought and whether you are going to follow the law regardless of your personal views about the law.

Since you have provided personal and legal opinions in the past, I very much hope that you will be straightforward with us, share your thinking, and share your legal reasoning.

I would like to use my time to discuss with you some of my concerns. I have very deep concern about the legacy of the Rehnquist Court and its efforts to restrict congressional authority to enact legislation by adopting a very narrow view of several provisions of the Constitution, including the Commerce Clause and the 14th Amendment. This trend, I believe, if continued, would restrict and could even prevent the Congress from addressing major environmental and social issues of the future.

As I see it, certain of your decisions on the Third Circuit raise questions about whether you would continue to advance the Rehnquist Court's limited view of congressional authority, and I hope to clear that up.

Let me give you one example here, and that is the Rybar case. Your dissent argued that Congress lacked the authority to ban the possession and transfer of machine guns based essentially on a technicality. The congressional findings from previous statutes were not explicitly incorporated in the legislation. You took this position even though the Supreme Court had made clear in 1939, the Miller case, that Congress did have the authority to ban the possession and transfer of firearms, and even though Congress had passed three Federal statutes that extensively documented the impact that guns and gun violence have on interstate commerce. I am concerned that your Rybar opinion demonstrates a willingness to strike down laws with which you personally may disagree by employing a narrow reading of Congress's constitutional authority to enact legislation.

The subject of Executive power has come up, and indeed it is a very big one. I think we are all concerned about how you approach and decide cases involving expanded Presidential powers. Recently there have been several actions taken by the administration that highlight why the constitutional checks and balances between the branches of Government are so essential. These include the use of torture, whether through an expansive reading of law, or disregarding Geneva Conventions, including the Convention on Torture, whether the President is bound by ratified treaties or not, allowing the detention of American citizens without providing due process—of course, Sandra Day O'Connor was dispositive in the Hamdi case—and whether the President can conduct electronic surveillance on Americans without a warrant despite legislation that establishes a court process for all electronic surveillance.

I am also concerned with the impact you could have on women's rights, and specifically, a woman's right to choose. In the 33 years since Roe was decided, there have been 38 occasions on which Roe has been taken up by the Court. The Court has not only declined to overrule Roe, but it has also explicitly reaffirmed its central holding. In our private meeting, when we spoke about Roe and precedent, you stated that you could not think of a case that has been reviewed or challenged more than Roe. You also stated that you believe that the Constitution does provide a right of privacy and that you have a deep respect for precedent.

However, in 1985, you clearly stated that you believed Roe should be overturned and that the Constitution does not protect a woman's right to choose. So despite voting to sustain Roe on the Third Circuit, your opinions also raise questions about how you might rule if not bound by precedent, and of course, obviously, I would like to find that out.

I am also concerned about the role the Court will play in protecting individual rights in this and the next century. Historically, the Court has been the forum to which individuals can turn when they believed their constitutional rights were violated. This has been especially noteworthy in the arena of civil rights, and as has been mentioned, in that same 1985 job application, you wrote that while in college you developed a deep interest in constitutional law, and then you said, motivated in part by disagreement with the Warren Court's decisions, particularly in the areas of criminal procedure, the Establishment Clause, and reapportionment. Now, of course, it was the Warren Court that brought us Brown v. Board of Education, and of course, reapportionment is the bedrock principle of "one man, one vote." So exactly what you mean by this I think is necessary to clear up.

Now, additionally, Justice O'Connor was a deciding vote on a critical affirmative action case involving the University of Michigan, Grutter v. Bollinger. So your views here may well be pivotal, so I think the American people deserve to know how you feel, how you think, how you would legally reason affirmative action legislation.

When you served in the Solicitor General's Office during the Reagan administration, you argued in three cases against the constitutionality of affirmative action programs, then once on the Third Circuit, you sided against the individual alleging discrimination in about three-quarters of the cases before you.

We have a lot to learn about what your views are and your legal reasoning, and how you would apply that legal reasoning. I really look forward to the questions, and once again, because this appointment is so important, I hope you really will be straightforward with us, and thereby be really straightforward with the American people.

So thank you, and welcome.

Chairman SPECTER. Thank you, Senator Feinstein.
Senator Sessions.

STATEMENT OF HON. JEFF SESSIONS, A U.S. SENATOR FROM THE STATE OF ALABAMA

Senator SESSIONS. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

I would like to also extend my congratulations to you, Judge Alito and your family. It is a very special day, a great honor to be nominated to the Supreme Court, the greatest court in the world, in my view, and this will be a good process. The Senate has an obligation to make a vigorous inquiry, and they will do so. I just hope and truly believe that by the end of these hearings your answers will be heard. The charges that I have heard made I know will be rebutted. People will listen and see the answers that you give, and when they do, they will feel great confidence in you as a member of the Supreme Court.

You have a record as a brilliant but modest jurist, one who follows the law, who exercises restraint and does not use the bench as an opportunity to promote any personal or political agenda. This is exactly what I believe the American people want in a Justice to the Supreme Court. It is exactly what President Bush promised to nominate. You represent philosophically that kind of judge who shows restraint, but at the same time you bring extraordinary qualifications and abilities.

As has been said, judges are not politicians. They must decide discrete cases before them based on the law and the facts of that case. They are not policymakers. Every lawyer that has practiced in America knows that. That is what they want in a judge. That is what I understand they believe you are. That is why the ABA has given you their top rating, in my view.

This ideal of American law is the rule of law. It is the American ideal of justice, not to have an agenda, not to allow personal views to impact your decisionmaking, and I am real proud to see that your record indicates that.

I like Judge Roberts's phrase of "modesty." I believe that is your philosophy also. We had the opportunity for a time to serve as United States Attorneys together. You were the top prosecutor in the office in New Jersey, one of the largest in the country. You had the whole State, much larger than my office. I know your reputation as one of ability, but modesty. In fact, I remember distinctly somebody told me, "Don't underestimate Sam Alito. He's a modest kind of guy, but he's probably the smartest guy in the Department of Justice.” I think that is the reputation you had and one that you can be quite proud of.

Your record of achievement is extraordinary. You were Phi Beta Kappa at Princeton and a Woodrow Wilson scholar. You attended Yale Law School. You were an editor of the law review, elected by your colleagues, and of course, for a graduating law student at a prestigious law school or any law school, being an editor of the law review is an extraordinary honor.

You clerked for a Federal judge on the Third Circuit. You were an Assistant United States Attorney. You did appellate work, handling criminal cases, and as United States Attorney you were primarily a prosecutor. As I have checked the record, you will be the first person to serve on the Supreme Court since Tom Clark, who was appointed by Harry Truman in 1949, that had actual Federal prosecutorial experience, which I think is a great value. Matter of fact, I know it is a value. I have seen instances of Supreme Court rulings where errors have been made, mostly as a result of just not understanding the system and how it operates.

As an Assistant Solicitor General you argued 12 cases before the Supreme Court. That is an extraordinary number. Very, very few people in our country have had the opportunity to do that. Very few lawyers will ever in their career do one case much less 12.

So you did a great job, and I think that is why the ABA, the American Bar Association has rendered their views on you. It is a 15-member committee. All of them participate on a Supreme Court nominee. They take this very seriously. They interview judges with whom you work. They interview your colleagues. They interview people who litigated against you. They interview litigants who have lost before you as well as those who won before you, your co-counsel. And at the conclusion of all of that, they unanimously gave you their highest possible rating. I think that is an important thing. Some of us on our side of the aisle criticize the ABA. We say they tilt a little to the left, but their analysis process and the way they go about it provides valuable insight to this Committee and to the people of America, that the people of the country can know that they have interviewed a host of people who have dealt with you in every single area of your life, and they found you highly qualified, the best recommendation they can give, and that is something you should take great pride in.

We do not want an activist judge. That is not what we want in this country. By “activist” I mean a judge who allows his personal views to overcome a commitment to faithfully following the law, following the law as it is, not as you would like it to be, good or bad, following that law. That is what we count on. When we violate that, we undermine law, we undermine respect for law, and endanger this magnificent heritage of law that we have been given. From what I understand your approach to law, you have it right, and your record indicates that.

The judicial oath you take is important. Some might say you have to follow precedent and precedent is a very big part of what you do, but you take the oath to swear that you will support and defend the Constitution of the United States. You will take that oath if confirmed, and you have already taken it as a Third Circuit Judge. It is an oath not to decide whether a decision is good policy or not. That is for the legislative branch. It is not an oath to defend the wall that the Supreme Court has enclosed sometimes around itself. It is not an oath to avoid admitting error in previous decision. But let me be more direct. The oath you take is not an oath to uphold precedent whether that precedent is super duper or not. If you love the Constitution, which I hope you do, and I intend to inquire about that, you will enforce the Constitution as it is, good and bad. That is your responsibility in our democracy.

We have already had this morning some matters that have been raised, and I think are worthy of just responding to briefly because allegations get made in these hearings, you may never get a chance by the time this hearing is over to rebut some of the things that have already been raised. Senator Kennedy claimed that you have not offered an opinion or a dissent siding with a claim of racial discrimination. I would point him to U.S. v. Kithcart. There you made it clear that the Constitution does not allow police officers to racially profile black drivers. A police officer received a report that two black males in a black sports car had committed three robberies. Later they pulled over a driver because he was a black man in a black sports car. You wrote that this violated the Fourth Amendment. You stated that the mere fact that Kithcart was black and the perpetrators had been described as two black males was plainly insufficient.

They also may want to look at your majority opinion in Brinson v. Vaughn, where you rule that the Constitution does not allow prosecutors to exclude African-Americans from jurors, and you granted the petitioner's habeas petition in that case, reversing the conviction. You stated the Constitution guarantees, "that a State does not use peremptory challenges of jurors to remove any black jurors because of his race, thus a prosecutor's decision to refrain from discriminating against some African-American voters does not cure discrimination against others."

As for dissents, you were the lone dissenter calling for an expansive interpretation of civil rights laws. Your dissent complained in an employer case that the majority had substituted its own opinion for the law, and you dissented, and later the Supreme Court vindicated you, 9-0.

I would also note you were questioned about judicial independence. I think some of our people have mentioned that, but an academic study of Federal Appeals Court opinions rated you the fourth most independent judge in the Federal judiciary. That is out of 98. They took that based on issues such as whether or not you are most likely to disagree with judges or agree with judges of a different political party.

Mr. Chairman, I thank you for your leadership, and look forward to a vigorous hearing. I am confident this nominee has the skills and graces to make an outstanding Supreme Court Justice.

Chairman SPECTER. Thank you, Senator Sessions.

We are going to turn to one more Senator, Senator Feingold, for an opening statement, and then we are going to take a 15-minute break. We will have concluded the opening statements of 12 of our 18 Judiciary Committee members. That will leave us four more. Then Senator Lautenberg and Governor Whitman to make the formal presentation of Judge Alito, and then Judge Alito's opening statement. At this time we will adjourn and we will reconvene at 2:10.

Pardon me. We are going to proceed with you, Senator Feingold.
[Laughter.]

Senator FEINGOLD. Thank you, Mr. Chairman, I think.

Senator LEAHY. This is called the potted plant routine, Russ.

[Laughter.]

Chairman SPECTER. I am so anxious for the recess, I jumped the gun a little.

[Laughter.]

STATEMENT OF SENATOR RUSSELL D. FEINGOLD, A U.S.
SENATOR FROM THE STATE OF WISCONSIN

Senator FEINGOLD. Mr. Chairman, I too want to welcome our nominee and thank him in advance for the long hours that he will put in this week.

Judge, I do greatly admire your legal qualifications, and of course, your record of public service, and I wish you well here. And as with the hearing and the nomination of Chief Justice Roberts, I approach this proceeding with an open mind.

Judge Alito, I know that as a long-time student of the law in the Supreme Court, you appreciate the importance of the process that we begin today. A position on the Supreme Court is one of the highest honors and greatest responsibilities in our country. The Constitution requires the Senate to offer its advice and decide whether to grant its consent to your nomination, and the Senate has duly delegated to the Judiciary Committee the task of examining your record and hearing your testimony and responses to questions about your views.

So it is our job in these hearings to try to get a sense for ourselves, for our colleagues who are not on the Committee, and for the American people, of whether you should be given the enormous responsibility of protecting our citizens' constitutional freedoms on the Supreme Court. So you will, obviously, face tough questions here, Judge.

No one is entitled to a seat on the Supreme Court simply because he has been nominated by the President. I think the burden is actually on the nominee to demonstrate that he should be confirmed.

We begin these hearings today at an important time. Less than a month ago we learned that this administration has for years been spying on American citizens without a court order and without following the laws passed by Congress. Americans are understandably asking each other whether our Government believes it is subject to the rule of law. Now more than ever we need a strong and independent judicial branch. We need judges who will stand up and tell the executive branch it is wrong when it ignores or distorts the laws passed by Congress. We need judges who see themselves as custodians of the rights and freedoms that the Constitution guarantees even when the President of the United States is telling the country that he should be able to decide unilaterally, unilaterally, how far these freedoms go.

To win my support, Judge Alito will have to show that he is up to the challenge. His instincts sometimes seem to be to defer to the executive branch to minimize the ability of the courts to question the Executive in national security cases, to grant prosecutors whatever powers they seek, and to deny relief to those accused of crimes who assert that their constitutional rights were violated. So it will be up to Judge Alito to satisfy the Senate that he can be fair and objective in these kind of cases.

We need judges on the bench who will ensure that the judicial branch of Government is the independent check on Executive power that the Constitution requires and that the American people expect.

In these days of corruption investigations and indictments in Washington, we also need judges who are beyond ethical reproach. In 1990, when the judge appeared before this Committee in connection with this nomination to the Court of Appeals, Judge Alito promised to recuse himself from cases involving a mutual fund company with which he had substantial investments, Vanguard. He kept those investments throughout his service on the Court of Appeals and still has them today. But in 2002 he sat on a panel in a case involving Vanguard. Since his nomination to the Supreme Court, we have now heard different explanations from the nominee and his supporters about why he failed to recuse himself. Needless to say, the shifting explanations and justifications are somewhat troubling. I hope that we will get the full and final story in these hearings.

Before we grant lifetime tenure to Federal judges, and particularly Justices of the Supreme Court, we must make sure that they have the highest ethical standards. The stakes for this nomination could hardly be higher. Justice O'Connor, as many have said, was the swing vote in many important decisions in the past decade. Her successor could well be the deciding vote in a number of cases that have already been argued this term, that may have to be reargued after a new Justice is confirmed. The outcome of these cases could shape our society for generations to come.

Now, we do not have the right to know how a nominee would rule on those cases. Indeed, we should all hope that the nominee does not know either, but we do have a right to know what and how a nominee thinks about the important legal issues that have come to the Court in recent years. Commenting on past Supreme Court decisions, in my view, would no more disqualify a nominee from hearing a future case on a similar topic than would a current Justice participating in those past decisions. Mr. Chairman, it simply cannot be that the only person in America who cannot express an opinion on a case where Justice O'Connor cast the deciding vote, is the person who has been nominated to replace her on the Court.

So I look forward to questioning you, Judge Alito, about Executive power, the death penalty, employment discrimination, criminal procedure and other important topics, and I look forward to your candid answers. I will have to say that I was rather pleased that the judge was actually less guarded in our private meeting, than were the other two Supreme Court nominees who I had had the privilege to meet. I hope he is even more forthcoming in this hearing.

Given his long judicial record and the memos we have seen that express his personal views on legal issues, I expect complete answers, and I think my colleagues do too. If a nominee expresses a personal view on a legal issue in a memo written over a decade ago, I think we and the American people have the right to know if he still holds that view today.

Mr. Chairman, if confirmed to the Supreme Court, Judge Alito is likely to have a profound impact on the lives of Americans for decades to come. That is a fact. It is clear, Mr. Chairman, from how you have planned these hearings, that you recognize that.

Thank you for your efforts to ensure a full and fair evaluation of this nominee, and I not only look forward to the questioning, but I want to note that I have caused the recess to occur 3 minutes and 40 seconds earlier than it normally would have.

[Laughter.]

Chairman SPECTER. Thank you, Senator Feingold, for your brevity.

We will now take a 15-minute recess until 2:15.

[Recess from 2 p.m. to 2:15 p.m.]

Chairman SPECTER. It is 2:15. We will resume these hearings. Next up on opening statement is Senator Graham.

Senator GRAHAM. Shall I wait or go ahead, Mr. Chairman?

[Pause.]

Chairman SPECTER. Senator Graham, you may begin.

STATEMENT OF HON. LINDSEY O. GRAHAM, A U.S. SENATOR FROM THE STATE OF SOUTH CAROLINA

Senator GRAHAM. Thank you, Mr. Chairman, and welcome back, Judge. I would hate for you to miss my opening statement, a loss for the ages.

Welcome to the Committee. Welcome to one of the most important events in your life. You have got the people that mean the most here with you today, your family, and I know they are proud of you, and I am certainly proud of what you have been able to accomplish.

To say the least, you come to the Senate in interesting political times. There is going to be a lot of talk by the Senators of this Committee about concepts that are important to Americans, but what I worry the most about is your time, believe it or not, will come and go. You will not be here forever. It may seem that way, but I think you are going to be just fine.

I don't know what kind of vote you are going to get, but you will make it through. It is possible you could talk me out of voting for you, but I doubt it. So I won't even try to challenge you along those lines. I feel very comfortable with you being on the Supreme Court based on what I know, and the hearings will be helpful to all of us to find out some issues that are important to us.

We had a talk recently about Executive power. That is very important to me. In time of war, I want the executive branch to have the tools to protect me, my family and my country. But also I believe even during a time of war, the rule of law applies.

I have got some problems with using a force resolution to the point that future Presidents may not be able to get a force resolution from Congress if you interpret it too broadly. And we will talk about those things and we will talk more about it.

I am going to talk a little bit about some of the points my colleagues have been making. Everybody knows you are a conservative. The question is are you a mainstream conservative. Well, the question I have for my colleagues is who would you ask to find out. Would you ask Senator Kennedy? Probably not. If you asked me who a mainstream liberal is, I would be your worst person to pick because I don't hang out over there.

I suspect that most all of us, if not all of us, will vote for you, and I would argue that we represent from the center line to the right ditch in our party and if all of us vote for you, you have got to be pretty mainstream. So the answer to the question, are you a mainstream conservative, will soon be know.

If every Republican member of the Judiciary Committee votes for you and you are not mainstream, that means we are not mainstream. And it is a word that means what you want it to mean. Advise and consent means what? Whatever you want it to mean. Advise and consent means the process has got to work to the advantage of people I like, and with people I don't want on the Court, it is a different process. That is politics.

Every Senator will have to live within themselves as to what they would like to see happen for the judiciary. My main concern here is not about you. It is about us. What are we going to be doing as a body to the judiciary when it is all said and done?

Roe v. Wade and abortion. If I wanted to work for Ronald Reagan, one of the things I would tell the Reagan administration is I think Roe v. Wade was wrongly decided. They are likely to hire me because they were trying to prove to the Court that the Court took away from elected officials a very important right, protecting the unborn.

I was on a news program with Senator Feinstein this weekend, who is a terrific person. She made a very emotional, compelling argument that she can remember back-alley abortions and women committing suicide when abortion was illegal. I understand that is very seared in her memory banks and that is important to her.

Well, let me tell you there is another side to that story. There are millions of Americans, a bunch of them in South Carolina, who are heartsick that millions of unborn children have been sent to certain death because of what judges have done. It is a two-sided argument. It is an emotional event in our society.

They are talking about filibustering maybe if you don't give the right answer. Well, what could possibly be the right answer about Roe v. Wade? If you acknowledge it is a precedent of the Court, well, then you would be right. If you refuse to listen to someone who is trying to change the way it is applied or to overturn it and you will say here I will never listen to them, you might talk me out of voting for you. I don't think any American should lose the right to challenge any precedent that the Supreme Court has issued because the judge wanted to get on the Court.

And you may be a great fan of Roe v. Wade and you think it should be there forever. There may be a case where someone disagrees with that line of reasoning. What I want from the judge is the understanding that precedent matters, but the facts, the brief and the law is what you are going to base your decision on as to whether or not that precedent stands, not some bargain to get on the Court, because I can tell you if that ever becomes a reason to filibuster, there are plenty of people that I personally know, if it became fashionable to stand on the floor of the Senate to stop a nominee on the issue of abortion, who feel so deeply, so honestly held belief that an abortion is certain death for an unborn child that they would stand on their feet forever.

And is that what we want? Is that where we are going as a Nation? Are we going to take one case and one issue and if we don't get the answer we like that represents our political view on that issue, are we going to bring the judiciary to their knees? Are we going to say as a body it doesn't matter how smart you are, how many cases you have decided, how many things you have done in your life as a lawyer, forget about it, it all comes down to this one issue?

If we do, if we go down that road, there will be no going back, and good men and women will be deterred from coming before this body to serve their Nation as a judge at the highest levels. What we are saying and what we are doing here is far more important than just whether or not Judge Alito gets through the process.

What is the proper role of a Senator when it comes to advising and consenting? I would argue that if we start taking the one or two cases we cherish the most and make that a litmus test, we have let our country down and we have changed the historical standard.

Elections matter. Values debates occur all over this country. They occur in Presidential elections. It is no mystery as to what President Bush would do if he won. He would pick people like John Roberts and Sam Alito. That is what he said he would do. That is exactly what he has done. He has picked solid strict constructionists, conservatives, who have long, distinguished legal careers.

What did President Clinton do? He picked people left of the center who worked for Democrats. And it cannot surprise the people on the other side that the two people we picked worked for Ronald Reagan. We liked Ronald Reagan. President Clinton picked Ginsburg and Breyer. Justice Ginsburg was the general counsel for the ACLU. If I am going to base my decision based on who you represented as a lawyer, how in the world could I ever vote for somebody that represented the ACLU?

If I am going to make my decision based on whether or not I agree with the Princeton faculty and administration policies on ROTC students and quotas and I am bound by that, I will get killed at home. What Princeton does with their admission policies and whether or not a ROTC unit should be on a campus is an OK thing to debate; at least I hope it is OK. I think most Americans are going to be with the group that you are associated with, not the policies of Princeton.

The bottom line is you come here as an individual with a life well lived. Everybody who seems to have worked with you as a private lawyer, public lawyer and as a judge admires you, even though they may disagree with you.

My biggest concern, members of this Committee, is if we don't watch the way we treat people like Judge Alito, we are going to drive good men and women away from wanting to serve. There will be a Democratic President one day. I don't know when, but that is likely to happen, and there will be another Justice Ginsburg come over. If she came over in this atmosphere, she wouldn't get 96 votes. Judge Scalia wouldn't get 98 votes, and that is sad to me.

I hope we will use this opportunity not only to treat you fairly, but not use a double standard. I hope we will understand that this is bigger than you, this is bigger than us, and the way we conduct ourselves and what we expect of you we had better be willing to expect when we are not in power.

Thank you.

Chairman SPECTER. Thank you, Senator Graham.

Senator Schumer.

STATEMENT OF HON. CHARLES E. SCHUMER, A U.S. SENATOR FROM THE STATE OF NEW YORK

Senator SCHUMER. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Judge Alito, welcome to you, Mrs. Alito, your two children, the rest of your family. I join my colleagues in congratulating you on your nomination. If confirmed, you will be one of nine people who collectively hold power over everyone who lives in this country. You will define our freedom, you will affect our security, and you will shape our law. You will determine on some days where we pray and how we vote. You will define on other days when life begins and what our schools may teach, and you will decide from time to time who shall live and who shall die. These decisions are final and appeals impossible.

That is the awesome responsibility and power of a Supreme Court Justice, and it is therefore only appropriate that everyone who aspires to that office bear a heavy burden when they come before the Senate and the American people to prove that they are worthy.

But while every Supreme Court nominee has a great burden, yours, Judge Alito, is triply high, first because you have been named to replace Sandra Day O'Connor, the pivotal swing vote on a divided Court; second, because you seem to have been picked to placate the extreme right wing after the hasty withdrawal of Harriet Miers; and finally, and most importantly, because your record of opinions and statements on a number of critical constitutional questions seems quite extreme.

So, first, as this Committee takes up your nomination, we can't forget recent history, because that history increases your burden and explains why the American people want us to examine every portion of your record with great care.

Harriet Miers's nomination was blocked by a cadre of conservative critics who undermined her at every turn. She didn't get to explain her judicial philosophy, she didn't get to testify at the hearing, and she did not get the up-or-down vote on the Senate floor that her critics are now demanding that you receive. Why? For the simple reason that those critics couldn't be sure that her judicial philosophy squared with their extreme political agenda. They seem to be very sure of you. The same critics who called the President on the carpet for naming Harriet Miers have rolled out the red carpet for you, Judge Alito. We would be remiss if we didn't explore why.

And there is an additional significance to the Miers precedent which is this: everyone now seems to agree that nominees should explain their judicial philosophy and ideology. After so many of my friends across the aisle spoke so loudly about the obligation of nominees to testify candidly about their legal views and their judicial philosophy when the nominee was Harriet Miers, I hope we will not see a flip-flop now that the nominee is Sam Alito.

The second reason your burden is higher, of course, is that you are filling the shoes of Sandra Day O'Connor. Those are big shoes to be sure, but hers are also special shoes. She was the first woman in the history of the Supreme Court, is the only sitting Justice with experience as a legislator, and has been the most frequent swing vote in a quarter century of service.

While Sandra Day O'Connor has been at the fulcrum of the Court, you appear poised to add weight to one side. That alone is not necessarily cause for alarm or surprise, but is certainly a reason for pause. Are you in Justice O'Connor's mold or, as the President has vowed, are you in the mold of Justices Scalia and Thomas?

Most importantly, though, your burden is high because of your record. Although I haven't made up my mind, I have serious concerns about that record. There are reasons to be troubled. You are the most prolific dissenter in the Third Circuit.

This morning, President Bush said Judge Alito has the intellect and judicial temperament to be on the Court. But the President left out the most important qualification: a nominee's judicial philosophy.

Judge Alito, in case after case, you give the impression of applying careful legal reasoning, but too many times you happen to reach the most conservative result. Judge Alito, you give the impression of being a meticulous legal navigator, but in the end you always seem to chart a right-ward course.

Some wrongly suggest that we are being results-oriented when we question the results you have reached. But the opposite is true. We are trying to make sure you are capable of being fair, no matter the identity of the party before you. Sometimes, you give the government a free pass, but refuse to give plaintiffs a fair shake. We need to know that Presidents and paupers will receive equal justice in your courtroom.

If the record showed that an umpire repeatedly called 95 percent of pitches strikes when one team's players were up and repeatedly called 95 percent of pitches balls when the other team's players were up, one would naturally ask whether the umpire was being impartial and fair.

In many areas, we will expect clear and straightforward answers because you have a record on these issues; for example, Executive power, congressional power and personal autonomy, just to name a few. The President is not a king, free to take any action he chooses without limitation by law.

The Court is not a legislature, free to substitute its own judgment for that of elected bodies, and the people are not subjects, powerless to control their own most intimate decisions. Will your judicial philosophy preserve these principles or will it erode them?

In each of these areas, there is cause for concern. In the area of Executive power, Judge Alito, you have embraced and endorsed the theory of the unitary Executive. Your deferential and absolutist view of separation of powers raises questions.

Under this view, in times of war the President would, for instance, seem to have inherent authority to wiretap American citizens without a warrant, to ignore congressional Acts at will, or to take any other action he saw fit under his inherent powers. We need to know, when a President goes to far, will you be a check on his power or will you issue him a blank check to exercise whatever power alone he thinks appropriate. Right now, that is an open question, given your stated views.

Similarly on the issue of federalism, you seem to have taken an extreme view, substituting your own judgment for that of a legislature. Certainly, one important case you wrote, in Rybar v. U.S., that Congress exceeded its power by prohibiting the possession of fully automatic machine guns. Do you still hold these cramped views of congressional power? Will you engage in judicial activism to find ways to strike down laws that the American people want their elected representatives to pass and that the Constitution authorizes?

And, of course, you have made statements expressing your view that the, quote, "Constitution does not protect the right to an abortion," unquote. In fact, you said in 1985 that you personally believe very strongly this is true. You also spoke while in the Justice Department of, quote, "the opportunity to advance the goals of bringing about the eventual overruling of Roe v. Wade."

It should not be surprising that these statements will bring a searching inquiry, as many of my colleagues have already suggested. So we will ask you, do you still personally believe very strongly that the Constitution does not protect a right to an abortion? We will ask, do you view elevation to the Supreme Court, where you will no longer be bound by High Court precedent, as the long-sought opportunity to advance the goals of bringing about the eventual overruling of Roe v. Wade, as you stated in 1985?

Judge Alito, I sincerely hope you will answer our questions. Most of the familiar arguments for ducking direct questions no longer apply and certainly don't apply in your case. For example, the logic of the mantra repeated by John Roberts at his hearing that one could not speak on a subject because the issue was likely to come before him quickly vanishes when the nominee has a written record, as you do, on so many subjects.

Even under the so-called Ginsburg precedent, which was endorsed by Judge Roberts, Republican Senators and the White House, you have an obligation to answer questions on topics that you have written about. On the issue of choice, for example, because you have already made blanket statements about your view of the Constitution and your support for overruling Roe, you have already given the suggestion of pre-judgment on a question that will likely come before the Court. So I respectfully submit you cannot use that as a basis for not answering.

So I hope, Judge Alito, that when we ask you about prior statements you have made about the law, some strong, some even strident, you will simply not answer, in effect, no comment. That will not dismiss prior expressions of decidedly legal opinions as merely personal beliefs, and that will enhance neither your credibility nor your reputation for careful legal reasoning.

I look forward, Judge, to a full and fair hearing.

Chairman SPECTER. Thank you, Senator Schumer.
Senator Cornyn.

STATEMENT OF HON. JOHN CORNYN, A U.S. SENATOR FROM THE STATE OF TEXAS

Senator CORNYN. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Judge Alito, welcome to the Committee, and to your family as well. I am a little surprised to learn that you have a triply high burden for confirmation here. I guess we will get a chance to explore that and the fairness of that, or whether all nominees ought to have the same burden before the Committee.

What I want to also make sure of is that we don't hold you to a double standard, that we don't expect of you answers to questions that Justice Ginsburg and others declined to answer in the interests of the independence of the judiciary and in the interests of observing the canons of judicial ethics.

Nevertheless, we have already heard a great deal about you and your credentials for the Supreme Court. As has been noted, you served with distinction on the court of appeals. You have served as a United States Attorney, and indeed you have served your entire adult life in public service.

We have also heard a bit today—and we will hear more as these proceedings unfold—about the testimonials from people who have worked with you, people who know you best, whether liberal, moderate or conservative. The judges on your court have praised you as a thoughtful and open-minded jurist, and we will hear more from them later in the week.

The same can be said of the dozens of law clerks who have worked with you over the last 15 years. As you know, law clerks are those who advise appellate judges on the cases they hear, and you have had law clerks from all political persuasions, from members of the Green Party, to Democrat clerks, even a clerk that went on to serve as counsel of record for John Kerry's campaign for President. And every single one of them says that you will make a terrific Supreme Court Justice, that you apply the law in a fair and even-handed manner, and that you bring no agenda to your job as a judge.

If fairness, integrity, qualifications and an open mind were all that mattered in this process, you would be confirmed unanimously. But we know that is not how the process works, or at least how it works today. We know that 22 Senators, including 5 on this committee, voted against Chief Justice Roberts's confirmation just a few short months ago. And my suspicion is that you do not come here with a total level playing field.

I am reluctantly inclined to the view that you and other nominees of this President to the Supreme Court start with no more than 13 votes on this Committee and only 78 votes in the full Senate, with a solid, immovable, and unpersuadable block of at least 22 votes against you, no matter what you say and no matter what you do. Now, that is unfortunate for you, but it is even worse for the Senate and its reputation as the world's greatest deliberative body.

The question is why—with so many people from both sides of the aisle and across the ideological spectrum supporting your nomination—are liberal special interest groups and their allies devoting so much time and so much money to defeat your nomination? The answer, I am afraid, is that there are a number of groups who really don't want a fair-minded judge who has an openness to both sides of the argument. Rather, they want judges who will impose their liberal agenda on the American people—views so liberal that they cannot prevail at the ballot box.

So they want judges who will find traditional marriage limited to one man and one woman unconstitutional. They want judges who will ban any trace of religious expression from the public square. They even want judges who will prohibit schoolchildren from reciting the Pledge of Allegiance. As I say, none of these are mainstream positions embraced by the American people. So the strategy is to try to impose their agenda through unelected judges.

Judge Alito, the reason why these groups are trying to defeat your nomination—because you won't support their liberal agenda—is precisely why I support it. I want judges on the Supreme Court who will not use their position to impose personal policy preferences or a political agenda on the American people. I want judges on the Supreme Court who will respect the words and the meaning of the Constitution, the laws enacted by Congress, and the laws enacted by State legislatures.

Now, this doesn't mean, as you know, that a judge will always reach what might be called a conservative result. It means that judges will reach whatever result is directed by the Constitution, by the law, and by the facts of a case. Sometimes it might be called conservative, sometimes it might be called liberal. But the point is that the meaning of the Constitution and other laws should not change unless we the people change them.

A Supreme Court appointment is not a roving commission to rewrite our laws however you and your colleagues see fit. I will give you one example of an area where I believe our Supreme Court has been rewriting the Constitution for a long time. It is an area near and dear to me and others in this country. I am speaking of the ability of people of faith to freely express their beliefs in the public square.

There is no doubt where the Founding Fathers stood on this issue. They believed that people of faith should be permitted to express themselves in public. They believed that this country was big enough and free enough to allow expression of an enormous variety of views and beliefs. They believed that freedom of expression included religious views and beliefs, so long as the government did not force people to worship in a particular manner and remained neutral on what those views and beliefs were.

But this country has gotten seriously off track under the Supreme Court when it went so far as to limit the right of even private citizens to freely express their religious views in public. As I mentioned to you when we met early on in these proceedings, I had an opportunity, as some have had on this Committee, to argue a case before the U.S. Supreme Court. When I was attorney general,

I helped argue a case called Santa Fe Independent School District v. Doe.

The school district in that case had the temerity to permit student-led, student-initiated prayer before football games. And, of course, someone sued. I repeat, this is student-led, student-initiated, voluntary prayer. The Supreme Court held by a vote of six to three that even this was unconstitutional.

The decision led the late Chief Justice Rehnquist to remark that the Court now exhibits “hostility to all things religious in public life.” It is hard to disagree with him. Depictions or expressions of sex, violence, crime are all permitted virtually without limit, but religion, it seems, never.

Now, this is where you come in, Judge Alito. I appreciate your record on the Third Circuit respecting the importance of neutrality of government when it comes to religious expression on a voluntary basis by individual citizens. It is my sincere hope that, when confirmed, you will persuade your colleagues to reconsider their attitude toward religious expression and grant it the same freedom currently reserved for almost all other non-religious speech.

No wonder many in America seem to believe that the Supreme Court has become one more inclined to protect pornography than to protect religious expression. Most people in America don’t believe that “God” is a dirty word. But the sad fact is that some Americans are left to wonder whether the Supreme Court might have greater regard for it if it were.

Again, welcome to the Committee and thank you for your continued willingness to serve our great Nation.

Chairman SPECTER. Thank you, Senator Cornyn.
Senator Durbin?

STATEMENT OF HON. RICHARD J. DURBIN, A U.S. SENATOR FROM THE STATE OF ILLINOIS

Senator DURBIN. Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. Judge Alito, welcome to you and your family before the Judiciary Committee. You have heard time and again from my colleagues why this seat on the Supreme Court means so much. They have quoted the statistics of 193 5–4 decisions where Sandra Day O’Connor was the deciding vote in 148 of those instances. She was a critical vote in issues of civil rights, human rights, workers’ rights, women’s rights, restraining the power of an overreaching President.

If you look at the record, the enviable record which Sandra Day O’Connor has written, you find she was the fifth and decisive vote to safeguard Americans’ right to privacy, to require courtrooms to grant access to the disabled, to allow the Federal Government to pass laws to protect the environment, to preserve the right of universities to use affirmative action, to ban the execution of children in America. And Justice O’Connor was the fifth vote to uphold the time-honored principle, which bears repeating, of separation of church and state. There was real wisdom in the decision of our forefathers in writing a Constitution that gave us an opportunity to grow as such a diverse Nation, and we should never forget it.

Justice O’Connor has been the critical decisive vote on many issues that go to the heart of who we are as a Nation. We believe, many of us, that the decision on filling this vacancy is going to tip the scales of justice on the Supreme Court one way or the other, and that is why we are so mindful of the importance of our task.

Yesterday, the Chicago Tribune editorialized that anyone who questions your nomination has a heavy burden of proof. I disagree. I believe the burden of proof is yours, Judge Alito, the burden of demonstrating to the American people and this Committee that you or any nominee is worthy to serve on the highest Court, to succeed Sandra Day O'Connor.

My friend Illinois Senator Paul Simon once said as a member of this same Committee that the test for a Supreme Court nominee is not where he stands on any given issue. The test is this: Will you use your power on the Court to restrict freedom or expand it? In the simplest terms, I think Paul Simon got it right. That is the best test because the Supreme Court is the last refuge in America for our rights and liberties. In my lifetime, it is the Supreme Court, not Congress, that integrated public schools, that allowed people of different races to marry, and established the principle that our Government should respect the value of privacy of American families. These decisions are the legacy of Justices who chose to expand American freedom. If you are confirmed, Judge Alito, will you continue their legacy?

You and I spoke about the Griswold decision in my office. It is hard to imagine that 40 years ago people could be convicted of a crime, fined, and sent to prison for using the most common forms of birth control. The Supreme Court looked at that decision and said that is just wrong. We may not find the word "privacy" in the Constitution, but that is just inherent to our freedom as Americans. It seems like a given now. Who would even question it? But it has not been that long ago that up here on Capitol Hill we were involved in a bitter debate over the tragedy of Terri Schiavo. And Republican congressional leaders threatened Federal judges with impeachment if they did not agree to intervene into that family's painful personal decision. We see it in attempts on Capitol Hill to impose gag rules on doctors on what they can say to their patients about family planning. And we certainly see it now with an effort by this Government to tap our phones, invade our medical records, credit information, library records, and the most sensitive personal information in the name of national security.

Now, Justice O'Connor was the critical fifth vote to protect our right of privacy. We want to know whether you will be that vote as well. You were the only judge on your court to authorize a very intrusive search of a 10-year-old girl. You were the only judge on your court who voted to diminish the right of privacy in the case of Planned Parenthood v. Casey, a position that was specifically rejected by the Supreme Court. And as a Government lawyer, you wrote that you personally believed very strongly the Constitution does not protect the right to an abortion.

Like many, I have thought about this issue of abortion time and again. It is not an easy issue for most people. I have thought about the law and the impact of my personal religious beliefs and feelings. I have thought about the real lives of people and the tragic experiences of the women that I have met. And I have come to believe over the years that a woman should be able to make this agonizing decision with her doctor and her family and her conscience and that we should be very careful that we don't make that decision a crime except in the most extreme circumstances.

There is also the issue of personal privacy when it comes to the Executive power. Throughout our Nation's history, during times of war, whether it was habeas corpus in the Civil War, the Alien and Sedition Acts in World War I, or Japanese internment camps in World War II, Presidents have gone too far. And in going too far, they have taken away the individual rights of American citizens. The last stop to protect those rights and liberties is the Supreme Court. That is why we want to make certain that when it comes to the checks and balances of the Constitution, you will stand with our Founding Fathers in protecting us from a Government or a President determined to seize too much power in the name of national security.

As a Government lawyer, you pushed a policy of legislative construction designed to make congressional intent secondary to Presidential intent. You wrote, and I quote, "The President will get the last word on questions of interpretation." In speeches to the Federalist Society, you have identified yourself as a strong proponent of the so-called unitary Executive theory. That is a marginal theory at best, and yet it is one that you have said you believe in.

This is not an abstract debate. The Bush administration has repeatedly cited this theory to justify its most controversial policies in the war on terrorism. Under this theory, the Bush administration has claimed the right to seize American citizens in the United States and imprison them indefinitely without charge. They have claimed the right to engage in torture, even though American law makes torture a crime. Less than 2 weeks ago, the White House claimed the right to set aside the McCain torture amendment that passed the Senate 90-9. What was the rationale? The unitary Executive theory, which you have supported.

In the Hamdi case, Justice O'Connor wrote for the plurality, and it has been quoted many times: "A state of war is not a blank check for the President when it comes to the rights of the Nation's citizens." If you are confirmed, Judge Alito, who will inspire your thinking if this President or any President threatens our fundamental constitutional rights? Will it be the Federalist Society or will it be Sandra Day O'Connor?

Two months ago, Rosa Parks was laid to rest. Her body laid in state in the Capitol Rotunda, a fitting tribute to the mother of our modern civil rights movement. Her courage is well known. The courage of Federal Judge Frank Johnson, whom we talked about, is well known as well. He was the one who gave the legal authority for the right to march from Selma to Montgomery, and he suffered dearly for it. He was ostracized and rejected. His life was threatened as a result of it.

When we met in my office, Judge Alito, you told me about how your father as a college student was almost expelled for standing up to the college president who decided that the school basketball team should not use its African-American players against an all-white opponent. That university president did not want to offend their all-white opponent, but your dad stood up, and you were so proud of that moment in your family history. I admire your father's courage as well. But just as we do not hold the son responsible for the sins of the father, neither can we credit the son for the courage of the father. As Supreme Court Justice, would you have the courage to stand up for civil rights even if it is unpopular?

We want to understand what you meant in 1985 when you said from the heart that you disagreed with the Warren Court on reapportionment, the one man/one vote principle. That was a civil rights decision. We want you to explain your membership in an organization that you highlighted at Princeton University that tried to challenge the admission of women and minorities. And I think we want to make certain of one thing. We want to make certain that every American who stood in silent tribute to Rosa Parks hopes that you will break your silence and speak out clearly for the civil rights that define our unity as a Nation.

There have been many controversial cases alluded to here. Some people have questioned, What is the difference? What difference in my life does it make if Sam Alito is on the bench or if he isn't? Why would I care if it is a narrow interpretation or a broad interpretation of the law? How does it affect my life? We know it affects everyone's life. We were reminded just very recently with the tragedy that was in the headlines. In one of your dissents, you would have allowed a Pennsylvania coal mine to escape worker safety and health requirements required by Federal law. Last week's tragedy at the Sago mine reminds us that such a decision could have life and death consequences.

Judge Alito, millions of Americans are concerned about your nomination. They are worried that you would be a judicial activist who would restrict our rights and freedoms. During your hearing, you will have a chance to respond, and I hope you do. More than any recent nominee, your speeches, your writings, your judicial opinions make it clear that you have the burden to prove to the American people that you would not come to the Supreme Court with any political agenda. Clear and candid answers are all that we ask.

I sincerely hope you can convince the U.S. Senate and the American people that you will be a fifth vote on the Supreme Court that the American people can trust to protect our most basic important freedoms and preserve our time-honored values.

Thank you very much.

Chairman SPECTER. Thank you, Senator Durbin.

Senator Brownback?

STATEMENT OF HON. SAM BROWNBACK, A U.S. SENATOR FROM THE STATE OF KANSAS

Senator BROWNBACK. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Welcome, Judge Alito, your wife and family. Delighted to have you here. You only have two more pitchers, and then you get a bat. So I am sure people will be happy to hear from you.

Mr. Chairman, before I go forward with my statement, I would like to enter into the record a summary of four cases that Judge Alito has ruled on where he backed employees claiming racial discrimination. It has been entered a couple of times here that he has not ruled in favor of people claiming racial discrimination, and I have a summary of four cases where he has, and I want to enter that into the record.

Chairman SPECTER. Without objection, it will be made a part of the record.

Senator BROWNBACK. Judge Alito, I welcome you to the hearing. This is an extraordinary process. It is a fabulous process and a chance for a discussion with you, with the American public, about the role of the judiciary in our society today. It has become an ever-expanding and important discussion because of the expanding role of the courts in recent years in American society. When the courts, improperly, I believe, assume the power to decide more political than legal issues in nature, the people naturally focus less on the law and more on the lawyers that are chosen really to administer the law. Most Americans want judges who will stick to interpreting the law rather than making it. It is beyond dispute that the Constitution and its Framers intended this to be the role of judges.

For instance, although he was perhaps the leading advocate for expansive Federal power, you can look at Founding Father Alexander Hamilton, nevertheless assuring—assuring—the countrymen in Federalist 78 that the role of the Federal courts under the proposed Constitution would be limited. He said, “The courts must declare the sense of the law, and if they should be disposed to exercise will instead of judgment, the consequences would equally be the substitution of their pleasure to that of the legislative body.”

It seems like we are back at an old debate—the role of the courts—and I believe you and others would look and say that the role of the courts is limited, and it is not to decide political matters.

Chief Justice Marshall later explained in Marbury v. Madison that the Constitution permitted Federal courts neither to write nor execute the laws but, rather, to say what the law is. That narrow scope of judicial power was the reason the people accepted the idea that the Federal courts could have the power of judicial review. That is the ability to decide whether a challenged law comports with the Constitution.

The people believed that while the courts would be independent, they would defer to the political branches on policy issues. This is the most foundational and fundamental of issues. And yet we are back in discussing it because of the role of the judiciary expanding in this society today.

It may seem ironic, but the judicial branch preserves its legitimacy through refraining from action on political questions. That concept was put forward best by Justice Frankfurter, appointed by President Roosevelt. He said, “Courts are not representative bodies. They are not designed to be a good reflex of a democratic society. Their judgment is best informed and, therefore, most dependable within narrow limits.”

Now, I want to take on this point of the reservation of certain seats on the bench for certain philosophies, which it seems as if we have heard a great deal about today that you need to be like Sandra Day O'Connor in judicial philosophy to be able to go on her seat on the bench. Some interest groups have put forward that philosophy and argued that you deserve closer scrutiny because you don't appear to have the same philosophy, or even opposition if it is not determined that you do not have the same judicial philosophy. This testimony suggests that that would change the ideological balance, that you would change that ideological balance, therefore, you should not be approved. And I say that that notion is not anywhere in the understanding of the role of the judges. It creates a double standard for your approval and looks conveniently—it looks suspiciously convenient for the opposition to put forward.

Seats on the bench are not reserved for causes or interests. They are given to those who will uphold the rule of law so long as the nominee is well qualified to interpret and apply the law. This has long been the case of the Supreme Court. And I want to note here that historically the makeup of the Court has changed just as elected branches have changed. In fact, nearly half of the Justices, 46 of 109, who have served on the Supreme Court replaced Justices appointed by a different political party. In recent years, even as the Court has become an increasingly political body, the Senate is not focused on preserving any perceived ideological balance when Democrat Presidents have appointed people to the Court. And the best example of that is the Senate rejecting that notion when Ruth Bader Ginsburg came in front of the Senate and was approved 96–3 to be on the Supreme Court to replace conservative Justice Byron White. This was in 1993.

Now, Justice Ginsburg, it was noted earlier, was the general counsel for the ACLU, certainly a liberal group. It was abundantly clear during the confirmation hearing that Ginsburg would swing the balance of the Court to the left. But because President Clinton won the election and because Justice Ginsburg clearly had the intellectual ability and integrity to serve on the Court, she was confirmed.

During her hearing, hardly any mention was made about balance with Justice White. The only discussion that occurred about Justice White was when Senator Kohl, our colleague, asked her what she thought of Justice White's career. And she started off by saying that she was not an athlete.

History has shown that she did, in fact, dramatically change the balance of the Court in many critical areas, such as abortion, the privacy debate expansion, and child pornography. And I have behind me three of the key cases where Justice White ruled one way, even wrote the majority opinion, and Justice Ginsburg ruled the other way with the majority. You talk about a swing of balance, and yet the issue was not even raised at Justice Ginsburg's confirmation hearing, and yet now it seems as if that is the paramount issue—not only the paramount issue, it actually makes you have to go to a higher standard to be approved. And that is just simply not the way we have operated in the past, nor is it the way we should operate now.

As I stated at Justice Roberts's hearing, the Court has injected itself into many of the political debates of our day, and as my colleague Senator Cornyn has mentioned, the Court has injected itself in the definition of marriage, deciding whether or not human life is worth protecting, permitting Government to transfer private property from one person to another, even interpreting the Constitution on the basis of foreign and international laws.

The Supreme Court has also issued and never reversed a number of decisions that are repugnant to the Constitution's vision of human dignity and equality. Although cases like Brown v. Board of Education in my State are famous for correcting constitutional and court errors, there remain several other instances in which the Court strayed and stayed beyond the Constitution and the laws of the United States. Among the most famous of these Supreme Court cases of exercise of political power, I believe, are the cases of Roe v. Wade and Doe v. Bolton, two 1973 cases based on false statements which created a constitutional right to abortion. And you can claim whatever you want to of being pro-life or pro-choice, but the right to abortion is not in the Constitution. The Court created it. It created a constitutional right. And these decisions removed a fully appropriate political judgment from the people of several States and has led to many adverse consequences.

For instance, it has led to the almost complete killing of a whole class of people in America. As I noted to my colleagues in the Roberts hearings, this year—this year—between 80 to 90 percent of the children in America diagnosed with Down syndrome will be killed in the womb simply because they have a positive genetic test—which can be wrong and is often wrong, but they would have a positive genetic test for Down syndrome and they will be killed.

America is poorer because of such a policy. We are at our best when we help the weakest. The weak make us strong. To kill them makes us all the poorer, insensitive, calloused, and jaded. Roe has made it not only possible but has found it constitutional to kill a whole class of people simply because of their genetic makeup. This is the effect of Roe.

I think this is a proper issue for us to consider, and the judge you are replacing noted one time “that the Court’s unworkable scheme for constitutionalizing abortion has had this institutionally debilitating effect should not be surprising since the Court is not suited to the expansive role it has claimed for itself in the series of cases that began with Roe.”

You will have many issues in front of you, many that we will not discuss here in front of this committee. I think it unfortunate that we only narrow in on so few of the cases that you are likely to hear in front of you. And yet that is the nature of the day because they are the hot, political, heat-seeking cases. You are undoubtedly qualified. You are cited by the ABA to be unanimously well qualified. I look forward to a thorough discussion and a hopeful approval of you to be able to join the Supreme Court of the United States.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Chairman SPECTER. Thank you very much, Senator Brownback.

We now move to the final opening statement. When we finish the statement of Senator Coburn, we are going to go right to the presenters, Senator Lautenberg and Governor Whitman. So I would like them to be on notice that we will be doing that in just a few moments, and following Senator Lautenberg and Governor Whitman, we will be hearing from Judge Alito.

Senator Coburn, the floor is yours.

STATEMENT OF HON. TOM COBURN, A U.S. SENATOR FROM THE STATE OF OKLAHOMA

Senator COBURN. Thank you. Judge Alito, welcome. I know you are tired of this, and I will try to be as brief as possible.

One of the advantages of going last is to be able to hear what everybody else has said, and as I have listened today, we have talked about the unfortunate, the frail. The quotes have been “fair shake for those that are underprivileged.” We have heard values, “strong, free, and fair,” “progress of our judiciary.” We have heard “the vulnerable, the more vulnerable, the weak, those who suffer.” We have heard of an “Alito mold” that has to be in the mold of somebody else. And as a practicing physician, the one disheartening thing that I hear is these very common words, this “right to choose,” and how we sterilize that to not talk about what it really is.

I have had the unfortunate privilege of caring for over 300 women who have had complications from this wonderful right to choose to kill their unborn babies. And that is what it is. It is a right of convenience to take the life. And the question that arises as we use all these adjectives and adverbs to describe our positions as we approach a Supreme Court nominee is where are we in America when we decide that it is legal to kill our unborn children. I mean, it is a real question for us. I debate honestly with those who disagree with me on this. It is a real issue of measurement of our society when we say it is fine to destroy unborn life who has a heartbeat at 16 days post-conception; 39 days post-conception you can measure the brain waves and there is pain felt. The ripping and tearing of an unborn child from its mother’s womb through the hands of another and we say that is fine, you have a constitutional right to do that.

How is it that we have a right of privacy and due process to do that, but you do not have the right, as rejected unanimously by the Supreme Court in 1997, to take your own life in assisted suicide. You know, how is it that we have sodomy protected under that due process, but prostitution unprotected. It is schizophrenic. And the reason it is schizophrenic is there is no foundation for it whatsoever other than a falsely created foundation that is in error.

I don’t know if we will ever change that. It is a measure of our society. But the fact is you cannot claim in this Senate hearing to care for those that are underprivileged, those that are at risk, those that are vulnerable, those that are weak, those that are suffering, and at the same time say I don’t care about those who have been ripped from the wombs of women and the complications that have come about throughout that.

So the debate for the American public and the real debate here is about Roe. Don’t let it—we are going to go off in all sorts of directions, but the decisions that are going to be made in votes on the Committee and the votes on the floor is going to be about Roe, whether or not we as a society have decided that this is an ethical process, that we have this convenient process that, if we want to rationalize one moral choice with another, we just do it through abortion, this taking of the life—of life of an unborn child.

I asked Chief Justice Roberts about this definition of life. You know, what is life? The Supreme Court cannot figure it out or does not want to figure it out. The fact that we know that there is no life if there is no heartbeat and brain waves, we know that in every State and every territory. But when we have heartbeat and brain waves, we refuse to accept it as the presence of life. This lack of logic of which we approach this issue because we like and we favor convenience over ethics, we favor convenience over the hard parts of life that actually make us grow.

Senator Brownback talked about those with disabilities that are destroyed in the womb because of a genetic test that is sometimes wrong. I would put forward that we all have disabilities. Some of us, you just can't see it. And yet who makes the decision on whether or not we're qualified or not. We have gone down a road to which we don't have the answers for. That is why we have the schizophrenic decisions coming out of the Supreme Court that don't balance logically with one versus another decision.

So my hope as we go through this process is to not confuse it with easy words and really be honest and straightforward about what this is about. I firmly believe that the Court should take another direction on many of these moral issues that face us. If we are to honor the heritage of our country, whether it be in terms of religious freedom, whether it be in terms of truly protecting life, protecting not just the unborn but who comes next, the infirm, the elderly, the maimed, the disabled—that is who comes next. As we get into the budget crunch of taking care of those people in the years to come, I believe we ought to have that debate honestly and openly. But the fact is we are going to cover it with everything except the real fact is we have made a mistake going down that road in terms of saying we can destroy our unborn children and there are no consequences to it.

So I welcome you. This is a difficult process for you and your family. I am hopeful that you will be treated fairly. I am very disturbed at the picture that was painted by Senator Kennedy that you are not a man of your word, that you are dishonest. The implication that you are not reliable I don't think is a fair characterization of what I have read. And I look forward to you being able to give answers as you can to your philosophy. The real debate is we have had an activist Court, and the American people do not want an activist Court. And the real fear from those who might oppose you is that you will bring the Court back within a realm of where the American people might want us to be with the Supreme Court, one that interprets the law, equal justice under the law, but not advancing without us advancing, the legislative body advancing ahead of you.

I welcome you. I return the balance of my time, and I look forward to your introduction and your opening statement.

Chairman SPECTER. Thank you very much, Senator Coburn.

We will now turn to our presenting witnesses, Senator Lautenberg and Governor Whitman. In accordance with our standing rules of the Committee, the presenters will each have 5 minutes. They have been so informed, and we first welcome our colleague, Senator Frank Lautenberg, to present Judge Alito.

PRESENTATION OF SAMUEL A. ALITO, JR., OF NEW JERSEY, NOMINEE TO BE AN ASSOCIATE JUSTICE OF THE SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES, BY HON. FRANK LAUTEN-BERG, A U.S. SENATOR FROM THE STATE OF NEW JERSEY

Senator LAUTENBERG. Thank you, Mr. Chairman, and Senator Leahy, colleagues on this Committee. Thank you for the opportunity to testify here today. John Corzine, U.S. Senator, and now Governor-elect in New Jersey, wanted to be here, but transition duties in Trenton prevent him from doing so.

Now, I have been honored to serve in the U.S. Senate for 21 years, and I am convinced that our duty to provide advice and consent for Justices of the Supreme Court is our most important constitutional responsibility. Our mandate is to be a Nation of laws, and the Supreme Court is the place where we look to safeguard our civil rights and our individual liberties.

But I believe that Justices must recognize that our Constitution is an 18th century document that needs to be applied in the context of the 21st century. We also depend on the Supreme Court to uphold the integrity of our Government. So I am privileged to have the opportunity to introduce Sam Alito, Jr., to this Committee, and his beautiful family that he brought along to fortify his candidacy.

Judge Alito was born and raised in the great State of New Jersey. Our State has a legacy of producing outstanding jurists, most notably the late William J. Brennan, who ushered in our Nation's re-commitment to civil rights in the latter half of the 20th century. Another distinguished jurist, Justice Antonin Scalia, also was born in New Jersey.

In 1950, Sam Alito was born in our State's capital city, Trenton, New Jersey, to a family of worthy achievement. Judge Alito's father—I am moving too quickly here—Judge Alito's father was an immigrant from Italy who taught history in high school and later ran the New Jersey Office of Legislative Services, which is similar to our own congressional Research Service, in that it provides objective, unbiased information to the legislature. Judge Alito's mother was a librarian, teacher and school principal, and she is now 91 and still, as I understand it, residing in the family home in Hamilton, New Jersey.

From his parents, Judge Alito learned the importance of education and integrity. Judge Alito and his sister went to public school in Hamilton, New Jersey, where they both joined the debating team. It seemed like the debating experience paid off, as both he and his sister have excelled in the legal profession.

Sam Alito then went on to Princeton University, where his yearbook entry predicted that one day he would warm a seat on the Supreme Court. He graduated from Yale School in 1975, and then served as a clerk for Circuit Court Judge Leonard Garth, with whom he currently serves.

In 1977, Sam Alito joined the U.S. Attorney's office in Newark, where he met his future wife, Martha, who is present here today. They later moved to Washington, where Sam Alito served as an assistant to the Solicitor General and later in the Department of Justice Office of Legal Counsel.

In 1987, Judge Alito returned home to New Jersey after President Reagan appointed him U.S. Attorney for the District of New Jersey. He was a strong prosecutor, and nobody was surprised when President George H.W. Bush appointed him to the Third Circuit Court in 1990, and I had the privilege of introducing him then as well.

Judge Alito's accomplishments in life are the embodiment of the American dream. I am honored today to introduce him to the Committee. He is a young man. If the Senate confirms him for a lifetime appointment to the Supreme Court, he could serve for three decades, or even longer, especially judging it from my point of view. His decisions would affect our rights, the rights of our children, our grandchildren, and other future generations.

Mr. Chairman, you know well it is the job of this Committee to evaluate Judge Alito's qualifications and fitness for the Court, including his views on legal issues. And I know every member of the Committee takes that obligation seriously, and I trust that Judge Alito will be forthcoming and cooperative in this process. I have had a chance to meet him. I know that he responded to the questions that I put to him. Maybe they were too easy, but he responded very well to them.

I thank you, Mr. Chairman. I am pleased to be here with our former Governor, Christie Whitman, and we haven't sat at a table together for a long time, but it is a good opportunity to do so.

Thank you.

Chairman SPECTER. Senator Lautenberg, do you care to make a recommendation on the nominee?

Senator LAUTENBERG. I care to present the evidence, just the evidence, Mr. Chairman, and we will let the record speak for itself.

Chairman SPECTER. Our next presenter is Governor Whitman, distinguished two-term Governor for the State of New Jersey, and in the Cabinet of President Bush as Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency.

We welcome you here, Governor Whitman, and look forward to your testimony.

PRESENTATION OF SAMUEL A. ALITO, JR., OF NEW JERSEY, NOMINEE TO BE AN ASSOCIATE JUSTICE OF THE SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES, BY CHRISTINE TODD WHIT-MAN, FORMER GOVERNOR OF NEW JERSEY, AND FORMER ADMINISTRATOR, U.S. ENVIRONMENTAL PROTECTION AGENCY

Governor WHITMAN. Thank you, Mr. Chairman. It is a pleasure to be here today with Senator Lautenberg to introduce Judge Samuel A. Alito, Jr., and I do urge your support for his nomination to the Supreme Court.

I won't go into his family background. Senator Lautenberg has done that—save to mention one member of the family that he didn't, which is that the Judge's sister, Rosemary, is a nationally recognized employment attorney and someone who is recognized as part of a family that has devoted itself to public service and continues to do that.

Judge Alito personifies the motto of the civic pride embodied in the slogan of his hometown, "Trenton makes, the world takes." And with the consent of the Senate, one of the most important bodies in the world, the U.S. Supreme Court, can take a proud product of Trenton, New Jersey, into their chambers.

But I am not here to discuss Judge Alito's family background or his State ties. I am here to discuss his own history of achievement and his potential to be a great Associate Justice of our Supreme Court.

Sam Alito has excelled at everything he has undertaken. He was an exceptional student at Princeton University and Yale Law School, an outstanding young attorney at the Justice Department, an accomplished United States Attorney, and for the past 15 years has been a respected and exemplary Federal Appeals Court Judge.

The American Bar Association just gave him their highest rating for his seat as Justice, and in his past two appearances before the Senate for confirmation, he has received unanimous support.

There is, however, more to my support of Judge Alito. Like other Americans, I have read many articles dissecting positions Judge Alito has taken throughout his career, trying to discern how he might decide on issues likely to appear before the Supreme Court that he would confront as a Justice. I too have examined the record. In the final analysis, my decision to support Judge Alito for this position is not based on whether I agree with him on a particular issue or set of issues or on his conformity with any particular political ideology. In fact, while we may agree on some political issues, I know there are others on which we disagree. Nevertheless, one's agreement or disagreement on a political question is, after all, ultimately irrelevant to the issue of whether or not Judge Alito should serve as an Associate Justice of the Supreme Court.

The Court's role is not to rule based on Justices' personal persuasions, rather on persuasive arguments grounded on fact, those facts presented in that particular case, and on their interpretation of the Constitution. Those decisions are, of course, grounded in the hard reality of disputed fact and the messiness of the real world, but they are also guided by principles of law and justice which have long been treasured by the people of this country. We should look for Justices who understand that instinctively in the very core of their being. I saw this trait in Judge Alito when he served on the Appeals Court during my terms as Governor, and I have every reason and every confidence that he will exhibit the same as a Supreme Court Justice.

Policy in the United States is defined through the laws crafted by the legislative branch of Government and carried out by the executive. Our judges make decisions based on their interpretation of the intent of those laws. We do not want Justices to conform their decisions' ideologies. We do want Justices whose opinions are shaped by the facts before them and by their understanding of the Constitution. We should also look for Justices who possess the necessary qualities of intellect and humility, desirable in those with great responsibility and who can express their thinking clearly and in understandable language. While we should expect the Justices will hold philosophies that will guide their decisions, we should equally expect that they will not hold ideologies that will predetermine their decisions. That is the genius of our system.

Mr. Chairman, some have suggested that Judge Alito has an ideological agenda. I believe that an honest and complete review of his record as a whole will find that his only agenda is fidelity to his judicial craft. If Judge Alito has a bias, it is in favor of narrowly drawn opinions that respect precedent and reflect the facts before him.

Members of the Committee, yours is an extraordinary responsibility. Decisions by our Supreme Court will affect the lives of Americans for generations to come. As politicians, whether current or retired, we all have deeply held positions we want to protect. When I was Governor, it fell to me five times to appoint members of the New Jersey State Supreme Court. One thing that experience taught me was that it is virtually impossible to find judges who will act as you would act were you in their position. That is as it should be. Your responsibility is to the extent possible to determine whether or not the nominee before you has the legal background, intelligence and integrity to be a credit to the Court.

Sam Alito has been a model as a Federal Appeals Court Judge. He has shown that he has the intellect, the experience and the temperament to serve with true distinction. I have every confidence he will be a balanced, fair and thoughtful Justice. I urge this Committee to favorably report his nomination to the U.S. Senate.

Thank you very much.

Chairman SPECTER. Thank you very much, Governor Whitman.

Without objection, the statement of Senator Corzine will be made a part of the record.

We appreciate your coming, Senator Lautenberg, appreciate your coming Governor Whitman.

Judge Alito, if you will resume center stage. Judge, you can remain standing. We now come to the formal swearing in of the nominee. I count 41 cameras in the well.

[Laughter.]

Chairman SPECTER. And there are just behind you, a grouping of cameras, seven in number, and I see three more. So you are well up to 50, which exceeds the number present, only 28, for Chief Justice Roberts. So that may be an omen. I am stalling for time a little bit here to allow the photographers to position themselves. They have sat, if not patiently, impatiently, all day. We may move the swearing in to the beginning of the ceremony in the future so they can all go out and do something productive.

[Laughter.]

Chairman SPECTER. If you would raise your right hand, do you solemnly swear that the testimony you will give before the Committee of the Judiciary of the U.S. Senate will be the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Judge ALITO. I do.

Chairman SPECTER. Thank you, Judge Alito. You may be seated, and we welcome whatever opening comments you care to make.

STATEMENT OF SAMUEL A. ALITO, JR., OF NEW JERSEY, NOMINEE TO BE AN ASSOCIATE JUSTICE OF THE SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

Judge ALITO. Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. I am deeply honored to appear before you. I am deeply honored to have been nominated for a position on the Supreme Court, and I am humbled to have been nominated for the seat that is now held by Justice O'Connor. Justice O'Connor has been a pioneer, and her dedicated service of the Supreme Court will never be forgotten, and the people of the country certainly owe her a great debt for the service that she has provided.

I am very thankful to the President for nominating me, and I am also thankful to the members of this Committee and many other Senators who took time from their busy schedules to meet with me. That was a great honor for me, and I appreciate all of the courtesies that were extended to me during those visits. And I want to thank Senator Lautenberg and Governor Whitman for coming here today and for their kind introductions.

During the previous weeks, an old story about a lawyer who argued a case before the Supreme Court has come to my mind, and I thought I might begin this afternoon by sharing that story. The story goes as follows:

This was a lawyer who had never argued a case before the Court before, and when the argument began, one of the Justices said, "How did you get here?" meaning how had his case worked its way up through the court system. But the lawyer was rather nervous, and he took the question literally, and he said—and this was some years ago. He said, "I came here on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad."

This story has come to my mind in recent weeks because I have often asked myself how in the world did I get here. And I want to try to answer that today and not by saying that I came here on I-95 or on Amtrak.

I am who I am in the first place because of my parents and because of the things that they taught me, and I know from my own experience as a parent that parents probably teach most powerfully not through their words but through their deeds. And my parents taught me through the stories of their lives, and I don't take any credit for the things that they did or the things that they experienced. But they made a great impression on me.

My father was brought to this country as an infant. He lost his mother as a teenager. He grew up in poverty. Although he graduated at the top of his high school class, he had no money for college, and he was set to work in a factory. But at the last minute, a kind person in the Trenton area arranged for him to receive a $50 scholarship, and that was enough in those days for him to pay the tuition at a local college and buy one used suit. And that made the difference between his working in a factory and going to college.

After he graduated from college, in 1935, in the midst of the Depression, he found that teaching jobs for Italian-Americans were not easy to come by, and he had to find other work for a while. But eventually he became a teacher, and he served in the Pacific during World War II, and he worked, as has been mentioned, for many years in a nonpartisan position for the New Jersey Legislature, which was an institution that he revered.

His story is a story that is typical of a lot of Americans, both back in his day and today, and it is the story, as far as I can see it, about the opportunities that our country offers and also about the need for fairness and about hard work and perseverance and the power of a small good deed.

My mother is a first-generation American. Her father worked in the Roebling Steel Mill in Trenton, New Jersey. Her mother came from a culture in which women generally did not even leave the house alone, and yet my mother became the first person in her family to get a college degree. She worked for more than a decade before marrying. She went to New York City to get a master's degree, and she continued to work as a teacher and a principal until she was forced to retire. Both she and my father instilled in my sister and me a deep love of learning.

I got here in part because of the community in which I grew up. It was a warm but definitely an unpretentious, down-to-earth community. Most of the adults in the neighborhood were not college graduates. I attended the public schools. In my spare time, I played baseball and other sports with my friends. And I have happy memories and strong memories of those days and good memories of the good sense and the decency of my friends and my neighbors.

And after I graduated from high school, I went a full 12 miles down the road, but really to a different world, when I entered Princeton University. A generation earlier, I think that somebody from my background probably would not have felt fully comfortable at a college like Princeton, but by the time I graduated from high school, things had changed. And this was a time of great intellectual excitement for me. Both college and law school opened up new worlds of ideas. But this was back in the late 1960s and early 1970s. It was a time of turmoil at colleges and universities. And I saw some very smart people and very privileged people behaving irresponsibly, and I couldn't help making a contrast between some of the worst of what I saw on the campus and the good sense and the decency of the people back in my own community.

I am here in part because of my experiences as a lawyer. I had the good fortune to begin my legal career as a law clerk for a judge who really epitomized open-mindedness and fairness. He read the record in detail in every single case that came before me. He insisted on scrupulously following precedents, both the precedents of the Supreme Court and the decisions of his own court, the Third Circuit. He taught all of his law clerks that every case has to be decided on an individual basis, and he really didn't have much use for any grand theories.

After my clerkship finished, I worked for more than a decade as an attorney in the Department of Justice, and I can still remember the day as an Assistant U.S. Attorney when I stood up in court for the first time and I proudly said, "My name is Samuel Alito, and I represent the United States in this court." It was a great honor for me to have the United States as my client during all of those years.

I have been shaped by the experiences of the people who are closest to me, by the things I have learned from Martha; by my hopes and my concerns for my children, Phillip and Laura; by the experiences of members of my family, who are getting older; by my sister's experiences as a trial lawyer in a profession that has traditionally been dominated by men. And, of course, I have been shaped for the last 15 years by my experiences as a judge of the court of appeals.

During that time, I have sat on thousands of cases. Somebody mentioned the exact figure this morning. I don't know what the exact figure is, but it is way up in the thousands. And I have written hundreds of opinions. And the members of this Committee and the members of their staff who have had the job of reviewing all of those opinions really have my sympathy.

[Laughter.]

Judge ALITO. I think that may have constituted cruel and unusual punishment.

I have learned a lot during my years on the Third Circuit, particularly, I think, about the way in which a judge should go about the work of judging. I have learned by doing, by sitting on all of these cases, and I think I have also learned from the examples of some really remarkable colleagues.

When I became a judge, I stopped being a practicing attorney, and that was the big change in role. The role of a practicing attorney is to achieve a desirable result for the client in the particular case at hand. But a judge can't think that way. A judge can't have any agenda. A judge can't have any preferred outcome in any particular case. And a judge certainly doesn't have a client. The judge's only obligation—and it's a solemn obligation—is to the rule of law, and what that means is that in every single case, the judge has to do what the law requires.

Good judges develop certain habits of mind. One of those habits of mind is the habit of delaying reaching conclusions until everything has been considered. Good judges are always open to the possibility of changing their minds based on the next brief that they read or the next argument that is made by an attorney who is appearing before them or a comment that is made by a colleague during the conference on the case, when the judges privately discuss the case.

It has been a great honor for me to spend my career in public service. It has been a particular honor for me to serve on the court of appeals for these past 15 years because it has given me the opportunity to use whatever talent I have to serve my country by upholding the rule of law. And there is nothing that is more important for our Republic than the rule of law.

No person in this country, no matter how high or powerful, is above the law, and no person in this country is beneath the law.

Fifteen years ago, when I was sworn in as a judge of the court of appeals, I took an oath. I put my hand on the Bible and I swore that I would administer justice without respect to persons, that I would do equal right to the poor and to the rich, and that I would carry out my duties under the Constitution and the laws of the United States. And that is what I have tried to do to the very best of my ability for the past 15 years, and if I am confirmed, I pledge to you that that is what I would do on the Supreme Court.

Thank you.

Chairman SPECTER. Thank you very much, Judge Alito, for those opening comments.

We will adjourn at this point, and we will resume tomorrow morning at 9:30, when we will start the first round of questioning with each Senator on round one having 30 minutes.

[Whereupon, at 3:40 p.m., the Committee was adjourned.]

[The biographical information of Judge Alito follows.]

UNITED STATES SENATE
COMMITTEE ON THE JUDICIARY

NOMINEE FOR THE SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

GENERAL (PUBLIC)

1. Name: Full name (include any former names used).

Samuel Anthony Alito, Jr.

2. Position: State the position for which you have been nominated.

Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States

3. Address: List current office address. If state of residence differs from your place of employment, please list the state where you currently reside.

Frank R. Lautenberg United States Courthouse & Post Office Building
50 Walnut Street
Newark, NJ 07101

4. Birthplace: State date and place of birth.

April 1, 1950. Trenton, New Jersey

5. Marital Status: List spouse's name, occupation, employer's name and business address(es). Please also indicate the number of dependent children.

Martha-Ann (Bomgardner) Alito. Librarian, substitute teacher, Caldwell-West Caldwell Board of Education, Harrison Building, 104 Gray Street, West Caldwell, NJ 07006. Two dependent children.

6. Education: List in reverse chronological order any college, law school, and other institutions of higher education attended. Please include dates of attendance, whether a degree was received, and the date each degree was received.

1972-1975: Yale Law School, J.D. June 1975
1968-1972: Princeton University, A.B. June 1972

7. Employment Record: List in reverse chronological order, all governmental agencies, business or professional corporations, companies, firms, or other enterprises, partnerships, institutions and organizations, non-profit or otherwise, with which you have been affiliated as an officer, director, partner, proprietor, elected official or employee since graduation from college, and if you received payment for your services. Include the name and address of the employer and job title or job description, or the name and address of the institution or organization and your title and responsibilities, where appropriate.

- June 1990 – Present: Judge, U.S. Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit. Chambers address: Frank R. Lautenberg United States Courthouse & Post Office Building, 50 Walnut Street, Newark, NJ 07101. Court headquarters: United States Courthouse, 601 Market Street, Philadelphia, PA 19106-1790. Paid.
- March 1987 – June 1990: United States Attorney for the District of New Jersey. Peter J. Rodino Federal Building, 970 Broad Street, Suite 700, Newark, NJ 07102. Paid.
- December 1985 – March 1987: Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel, U.S. Department of Justice. 950 Pennsylvania Ave., NW, Washington, DC 20530-0001. Paid.
- August 1981 – December 1985: Assistant to the Solicitor General, U.S. Department of Justice. 950 Pennsylvania Ave., NW, Washington, DC 20530-0001. Paid.
- November 1977 – August 1981: Assistant U.S. Attorney, District of New Jersey. Peter J. Rodino Federal Building, 970 Broad Street, Suite 700, Newark, NJ 07102. Paid.
- July 1976 – August 1977: Law clerk, Hon. Leonard I. Garth, U.S. Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit. Martin Luther King, Jr. Courthouse & Federal Building, Newark, NJ 07102. Paid.
- January – June 1976: Law clerk, Warren, Goldberg & Berman. 210 East Hanover Street, Trenton, NJ 08608. Paid.
- September – December 1975: Active duty, United States Army, Fort Gordon, GA. Paid.
- June – August 1974: Summer Associate, Pitney Hardin Kipp & Szuch. 163 Madison Avenue, Morristown, NJ 07960. Paid.
- June – August 1973: Intern, New Jersey Public Defender. 216 South Broad Street, Trenton, NJ 08608. Paid.
- July – August 1972: Summer Clerk, Mercer County Counsel. 209 South Broad Street, Trenton, NJ 08650. Paid.
- June – July 1972: Summer Clerk, Pemberton Township. 500 Pemberton-Browns Mills Road, Pemberton, NJ 08068. Paid.

8. Military Service and Draft Status: Identify any service in the U.S. Military, including dates of service, branch of service, rank or rate, serial number and type of discharge received. Please list, by approximate date, Selective Service classifications you have held, and state briefly the reasons for any classification other than I-A.

I was given Selective Service Classification I-A in approximately April 1968. I was enrolled in the Army Reserve Officer Training Corps from September 24, 1970, until I was commissioned as a second lieutenant in the Army Reserves upon graduation from college on June 5, 1972. After law school, I was on active duty for training as a first lieutenant for training from September 13, 1975, to December 12, 1975. I was in the Army Reserves (inactive) from 1972 to June 30, 1980, when I was honorably discharged as a captain. My serial number was my Social Security number.

9. Honors and Awards: List any scholarships, fellowships, honorary degrees, academic or professional honors or awards, honorary society memberships, military awards, and any other special recognition for outstanding service or achievement you have received.

Princeton University: Phi Beta Kappa; selected Scholar of Woodrow Wilson School of Public and International Affairs; McConnell Foundation Scholarship for summer thesis research; debating awards.

Yale Law School: Awards for best moot court argument and best contribution to Yale Law Journal.

Since Law School:

Department of Justice Awards, 1978-85;

Selected for membership in American Bar Foundation, 1991;

St. Thomas More Award, 1995, given by the St. Thomas More Association of Seton Hall University and Law School;

Peter J. Rodino Award, 1999, given by the Peter J. Rodino Law Society of Seton Hall Law School for embracing and carrying on the legacy of Peter J. Rodino;

Family Research Council Golden Gavel Award, 2001, for Saxe v. State College Area School Distr., 240 F.3d 200 (3d Cir. 2001);

N.J. Law Journal Award, 1999, for commitment to the bench, bar, and people of the Third Circuit;

Honorary membership, Phi Alpha Delta Law Fraternity International, April 2003;

Selected for membership in the American Law Institute, 2003.

- 10. Bar Associations: List all bar associations, or legal or judicial-related committees, selection panels, or conferences of which you are or have been a member, and give the titles and dates of any offices which you have held in such groups. Also, if any such association, committee, or conference of which you were or are a member issued any reports, memoranda, or policy statements prepared or produced with your participation, please furnish the committee with four (4) copies of these materials, if they are available to you. "Participation" includes, but is not limited to, membership in any working group of any such association, committee, or conference which produced a report, memorandum, or policy statement, even where you did not contribute to it.

Advisory Committee on Appellate Rules, Committee on Rules of Practice and Procedure, Judicial Conference of the United States: Chair, October 2001 – October 2005; member, October 1997 – September 2001. I have attached several reports that were issued during the period when I served as the Chair of the Advisory Committee on Appellate Rules of the Committee on Rules of Practice and Procedure.

Association of the Federal Bar of New Jersey: Member, Advisory Board, 1988 – present.

New Jersey State Bar Association, Executive Board of Federal Practice and Procedure Committee: Member, 1987 – 1989.

New Jersey State Bar Association. I have no records of membership dates. I have requested information from the New Jersey State Bar Association but have not yet received a response.

Essex County Bar Association: Member, 1975 – present.

American Bar Foundation: Fellow, June 1991 – October 2000; Lifetime Fellow, October 2000 – present.

Lawyers' Advisory Committee for the United States District Court for the District of New Jersey: Member, Executive Committee, 1987 – 1990.

American Law Institute: Member, 2003 – present.

American Judicature Society: Member, 2002 – present.

Federalist Society for Law and Public Policy Studies: Member, 1983– present.

Yale Law Journal Advisory Board: Advisory Board Member, 2004 – present.

Federal Sentencing Reporter (Vera Institute for Justice): Advisory Board Member, 1988 – 1993.

National Environmental Enforcement Council: Member. I was a member of this organization while I served as the United States Attorney for the District of New Jersey. While I do not recall the exact dates, it was between March 1987 and June 1990.

Phi Alpha Delta Law Fraternity International: Honorary Member, April 2003 – present.

Constitution Project Sentencing Initiative: Member, 2004 – present.

National Italian American Foundation International Law Institute: Member, 2005-present.

11. Bar and Court Admission:

- a. List the date(s) you took the examination and date you passed for all states where you sat for a bar examination. List any state in which you applied for reciprocal admission without taking the bar examination and the date of such admission or refusal of such admission.

New Jersey: exam taken July 31, 1975, admitted December 9, 1975

New York: reciprocal admission on July 13, 1982

- b. List all courts in which you have been admitted to practice, including dates of admission and any lapses in membership. Please explain the reason for any lapse of membership. Give the same information for administrative bodies which require special admission to practice.

U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit, November 30, 1987

New York State courts, July 13, 1982

U.S. Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit, June 11, 1981

U.S. Supreme Court, March 26, 1979

U.S. Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit, March 29, 1977

New Jersey State courts, December 9, 1975

United States District Court for the District of New Jersey, December 9, 1975

I am aware of no lapses in membership.

12. Memberships:

- a. List all professional, business, fraternal, scholarly, civic, charitable, or other organizations, other than those listed in response to Questions 10 or 11, to which you belong, or to which you have belonged, or in which you have participated since graduation from law school. Provide dates of membership or participation, and indicate any office you held. Include clubs, working groups, advisory or editorial boards, panels, committees, conferences, or publications. Please describe briefly the nature and objectives of each such organization, the nature of your participation in each such organization, and identify an officer or other person from whom more detailed information may be obtained.

Yale Law School Alumni Association of New Jersey: This is a regional alumni association for Yale Law School graduates. The alumni association serves to keep alumni involved in the law school and updated on events. I have participated as a member. I spoke at a dinner meeting and at another I introduced the Dean of the Law School. I have been a member from 1987 – present. For more information, contact Frank Pasquale, Associate Professor, Seton Hall Law School, One Newark Center, Newark, NJ 07102-5210.

Princeton Alumni Council Careers Committee: The Alumni Council represents alumni interests and concerns to the University. During 1991 – 1993, I served as the Chair of the Careers Committee, which assists in developing mentoring groups and on-campus careers programs for alumni. In this capacity, I attended meetings of the Alumni Council Executive Committee. During 1989 – 1991 and 1993 – 1994, I was a Committee member. For more information, contact Margaret Moore Miller, Director, Princeton Alumni Council, Princeton University, Princeton, NJ 08540.

Princeton Alumni Association of Essex County, New Jersey: This is a regional association for Princeton alumni. Membership is automatic for alumni in the area. I have been a member from 1987 to the present, but have not been active in my membership. For more information, contact Mary Tabor Engel, 100 Upper Mountain Ave., Montclair, NJ 07042.

Princeton Schools Committee of Essex County: I was a member from 1998 – 2003. This is regional alumni group that interviews applicants to Princeton and submits reports on interviews. I interviewed about five to ten applicants per year. For more information, contact Frank E. Ferruggia, Esq., McCarter & English, LLP, Four Gateway Center, 100 Mulberry St., P.O. Box 652, Newark, NJ 07101-0652.

Princeton Club of Washington, DC: This is a regional association for Princeton alumni. I was a member from approximately 1983 – 1987, but was not active in my membership. For more information, contact Sheila L. Summers, Executive Secretary, The Princeton Club of Washington, 4227 46th St., NW, Washington, DC 20016.

Concerned Alumni of Princeton: This was a group of Princeton alumni. A document I recently reviewed reflects that I was a member of the group in the 1980s. Apart from that document, I have no recollection of being a member, of attending meetings, or otherwise participating in the activities of the group. The group has no current officers from whom more information may be obtained.

National Italian American Foundation: This is a non-profit organization that serves to preserve and protect Italian American heritage and culture. Among other things, it sponsors programs that provide educational and career support to youth. I have participated in this group as a member from 2002 – present. For more information, contact John B. Salamone, National Executive Director, National Italian American Foundation, 1860 19th St., NW, Washington, DC 20009.

Knollwood Tennis Club: My family and I have been members from 2003 – present. It is a neighborhood group that owns two clay tennis courts but has no other facilities or property. For more information, contact Glenn Martin, 91 Westover Ave., West Caldwell, NJ 07006.

Seton Hall Law School Self Study Committee: I was a member from the fall of 1999 through spring 2000. This was a group appointed by the law school to study various aspects of the school in preparation for re-accreditation by the American Bar Association. For more information, contact Dean Patrick Hobbs, Seton Hall Law School, One Newark Center, Newark, NJ 07102.

- b. If any of these organizations of which you were or are a member or in which you participated issued any reports, memoranda, or policy statements prepared or produced with your participation, please furnish the committee with four (4) copies of these materials, if they are available to you. “Participation” includes, but is not limited to, membership in any working group of any such association, committee, or conference which produced a report, memorandum or policy statement, even where you did not contribute to it. If any of these materials are not available to you, please give the name and address of the organization that issued the report, memoranda, or policy statement, the date of the document, and a summary of its subject matter.

The Seton Hall Law School Self Study Committee produced a report entitled “2001 Self Study.” Copies are supplied.

As the Chair of the Princeton Alumni Council Careers Committee, I provided oral reports at meetings of the Alumni Council Executive Committee concerning the work of the Careers Committee, and I may have provided written materials, but I do not specifically recall ever having done so. I have not retained any papers relating to my service on this Committee, but I have contacted the Careers Committee and requested any materials from the relevant time period. I will forward any such materials to the Committee.

To the best of my recollection, I have not participated in producing any other reports, memoranda, or policy statements in conjunction with my membership in the organizations listed in response to question 12.a.

- c. Please indicate whether any of these organizations currently discriminate or formerly discriminated on the basis of race, sex, or religion – either through formal membership requirements or the practical implementation of membership policies. If so, describe any action you have taken to change these policies and practices.

To my knowledge, the entities listed in response to question 12.a. do not discriminate and never have discriminated on the basis of race, sex, or religion through formal membership requirements or the practical implementation of membership policies.

13. Published Writings, Testimony and Speeches:

- a. List the titles, publishers, and dates of books, articles, reports, letters to the editor, editorial pieces, or other material you have written or edited, including material published only on the Internet. Please supply four (4) copies of all published material to the Committee.

Foreword, 1 SETON HALL CIR. REV. 1 (2005).

Panel Speaker at the Federalist Society's 2000 National Lawyers Convention: Presidential Oversight and the Administrative State, in 2 ENGAGE (Federalist Soc'y, Wash. D.C.) 11 (2001).

The Role of the Lawyer in the Criminal Justice System, 2 FEDERALIST SOC'Y CRIM. L. NEWS (Federalist Soc'y, Wash., D.C.) 3 (1998), available at <http://www.fed-soc.org/Publications/practicegroupnewsletters/criminallaw/role-crinv2i3.htm>

Change in Continuity at the Office of Legal Counsel, 15 CARDOZO L. REV. 507 (1993).

Reviewing the Sentencing Commission's 1991 Annual Report, 5 FED. SENT. REP. 166 (1992).

The First Amendment: Information, Publication and the Media, 1 SETON HALL CONST. L.J. 327 (1991).

The Next Page in Federal Sentencing, LEGAL TIMES, August 28/September 4, 1989, at 19.

What Role Should Individual Sentencing Judges Play in the Guideline Development Process?, 1 FED SENT. REP. 372 (1989).

Racketeering Made Simple(r), in THE RICO RACKET 1 (Gary L. McDowell ed. 1989).

Introduction to After the Independent Counsel Decision: Is Separation of Powers Dead?, 26 AM. CRIM. L. REV. 1667 (1989).

Shift Won't Hamper Crime Fight, DAILY J. (Vineland, N.J.), May 5, 1989.

The Year Wasn't So Bad, NAT'L L.J., Sep. 26, 1998, at 12.

Documents and the Privilege Against Self-Incrimination, 48 U. PITT. L. REV. 27 (1986).

Equal Protection and Classification Based on Family Membership, 80 DICK. L. REV. 410 (1976).

The "Released Time" Cases Revisited: A Study of Group Decisionmaking by the Supreme Court, 83 YALE L.J. 1202 (1974).

- b. Please supply four (4) copies of any testimony, official statements, or other communications relating, in whole or in part, to matters of public policy, that you have issued or provided or that others presented on your behalf to public bodies or public officials.

Unpublished Judicial Opinions: Hearing Before the Subcomm. on Courts, the Internet, and Intellectual Prop. of the House Comm. on the Judiciary, 107th Cong. (2002).

Testimony before Committee of the N.J. Legislature in 1988 or 1989 on bills to permit pretrial detention in certain cases.

Confirmation Hearings on Federal Appointments: Hearings before the Senate Comm. on the Judiciary, 100th Cong. (1990).

- c. Please list all speeches, talks, or presentations by you which relate in whole or in part to issues of law or public policy. For each one, please give the name and address of the group before which the speech was given, the date of the speech, and a summary of its subject matter. For each of these, please supply four (4) copies of your prepared remarks or any outline or notes from which you spoke. If a recording or transcript is available, please supply four

(4) copies of those as well. If press reports about the speech, talk, or presentation are available to you, please supply them.

While I was the United States Attorney for the District of New Jersey (March 1987 – June 1990), I was frequently called upon to speak, usually regarding the work of the office or law enforcement issues. Most of these speeches were delivered extemporaneously or using notes, which I did not keep. I have listed those events that I can specifically recall or for which I have located records, but I am sure that there are others that I cannot specifically recall and for which I have no records.

Annual Judicial Conference of the United States District Court for the District of New Jersey, Princeton, NJ, March 22, 1985 (United States District Court for the District of New Jersey, Martin Luther King, Jr. Federal Building & Courthouse, 50 Walnut Street, Newark, NJ 07102). Panel member on “Multiple Representation and the Corporate Defendant in Criminal and Civil Litigation - The Tough Questions of Privilege and Strategy.” I have no recollection of the substance of my remarks and am unable to find any notes.

Kaiser-Permanente Conference, Dallas, TX, approximately 1986. (Kaiser Permanente, 1 Kaiser Plaza, Oakland, CA 94612). I summarized the Office of Legal Counsel opinion on AIDS and the Rehabilitation Act. I am unable to locate any materials relating to this talk.

The New Jersey Institute for Continuing Legal Education in cooperation with the Federal Practice and Procedures Committee of the New Jersey State Bar Association, 1988, New Brunswick, NJ (New Jersey Institute for Continuing Legal Education, One Constitution Sq., New Brunswick, NJ 08901). I participated in a CLE presentation entitled, “Special Problems Faced by Criminal Defendants and Their Lawyers: The Forfeiture of Attorney’s Fees, Subpoenas for Defense Attorneys.” I have no recollection of the substance of my remarks and am unable to find any notes.

Passaic County Bar Association’s Law Day Celebration, May 2, 1988, Paterson, NJ (77 Hamilton Street, Paterson, NJ 07505). I spoke about the history of Law Day and the meaning that has been attached to it through the years. I specifically discussed the problem of drugs. A text of the speech is supplied.

Child Pornography and Exploitation Seminar sponsored by the Law Enforcement Coordinating Committee of New Jersey, May 17, 1988, Newark, NJ (United States Attorney’s Office, Peter J. Rodino Federal Building, 970 Broad Street, Newark, NJ 07102.) I spoke about enforcement of federal laws on child pornography. A copy of the speech is supplied.

Graduation ceremony for new New Jersey State Police Troopers, July 28, 1988, West Trenton, NJ (New Jersey State Police, River Road, P.O. Box 7068, West Trenton, NJ 08628). I spoke about the importance of the work of the State Police and the problem of crime in the state of New Jersey. A copy of the speech is supplied.

Annual Federalist Society Lawyers' Convention, November 1989, Washington, DC (1015 18th St., N.W., Washington, DC 20036). I participated as a moderator on a panel entitled, "Debate -- After the Independent Counsel Decision: Is Separation of Powers Dead?" On the panel were Hon. Charles Fried, professor at Harvard Law School and former Solicitor General, and Paul M. Bator, then-professor at University of Chicago Law School and former Deputy Solicitor General. A copy of the transcript is attached.

New Jersey Institute of Continuing Legal Education, Seminar, 1989, New Brunswick, NJ (New Jersey Law Center, One Constitution Sq., New Brunswick, NJ 08901). I provided an outline of discovery in criminal cases. The outline from which I spoke is supplied.

Yale Law School Association of New Jersey, March 2, 1989, in West Orange, NJ (c/o Frank Pasquale, Associate Professor, Seton Hall Law School, One Newark Center, Newark, N.J. 07102.) I spoke about the work and priorities of the United States Attorney's Office for the District of New Jersey. I am unable to find any text or notes relating to this talk.

The 200 Club of Union County (a non-profit organization dedicated to providing aid and support to uniformed officers in the county), November 3, 1989, Mountainside, NJ (222 Park Ave., Scotch Plains, NJ 07076). I spoke about law enforcement's need for the help of private citizens. A copy of the speech is supplied.

Yale Law School Federalist Society, April 10, 1991, New Haven, CT (127 Wall Street, New Haven, CT 06520). I spoke about the evolution of federal sentencing, the Sentencing Reform Act, and the Sentencing Guidelines. The notes used in delivering this talk are supplied.

Symposium sponsored by the University of Pennsylvania chapter of the Federalist Society, October 20, 1990, Philadelphia, PA (3400 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, PA 19104). I moderated a panel discussion on "State Crime in the Federal Forum." The panel members were Judges Jon O. Newman and Roger J. Miner of the United States Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit, Professor Robert Blakey of the Notre Dame Law School, and L. Gordon Crovitz of the Wall Street Journal. I am unable to locate any text or notes relating to the substance of my remarks.

Widener Law School, early 1990s, Harrisburg, PA (Harrisburg Campus, 3800 Vartan Way, Harrisburg, PA 17106). I spoke about federal sentencing. As best I can recall, my remarks were very similar to those given at Yale Law School in 1991, and I probably used the same notes. I am unable to locate any other materials relating to the substance of my talk.

Princeton University Class in Politics 305, early 1990s, Princeton, NJ (Department of Politics, Princeton University, Princeton, NJ 98540). As best I can recall, I spoke about the Third Circuit and my work as a judge. I am unable to locate any materials relating to these remarks.

Panel discussion sponsored by the Rutgers School of Law Newark chapter of the Federalist Society, April 13, 1992, Newark, NJ (123 Washington Street, Newark, NJ 07102). I moderated a panel discussion on "Judicial Activism: Individual Rights - the Court as Super Legislature." The panel members were Hon. Charles Fried, professor at Harvard Law School and former Solicitor General; Professor James Pope of Rutgers School of Law Newark; and George McCarter, Esq., then of McCarter & English. I have no specific recollection of the substance of my remarks. I am unable to locate any materials relating to these remarks.

Seton Hall School of Law, early 1990s, Newark, NJ (One Newark Center, Newark, NJ 07102). As best I can recall, I spoke about differences between federal and New Jersey constitutional law on some issues of criminal procedure and perhaps some other issues. I am unable to locate any materials relating to these remarks.

Continuing legal education workshop sponsored by the Federalist Society, May 7, 1992, New York, NY (1015 18th St., NW, Washington, DC 20036). The workshop focused on Commerce Clause issues in the pre-Lopez era, including the dormant Commerce Clause, state taxation of commerce, and the federalization of crime. As best I can recall, my talk was basically historical. I believe that I recounted the problems relating to commerce that contributed to the call for a constitutional convention and the limited discussion of the Commerce Power in the Philadelphia Convention and the state ratifying conventions. I also recall discussing the competing arguments concerning the dormant Commerce Clause. I am unable to locate any materials relating to these remarks.

New Jersey Department of Law and Public Safety, March 24, 1993, Trenton, NJ (Hughes Justice Complex, 25 W. Market St., Trenton, NJ 08625). I spoke about the work of my court and effective appellate advocacy. Notes that I used in delivering this talk are supplied.

Yale Law School Association of New Jersey, 1995, West Orange, NJ (c/o Frank Pasquale, Associate Professor, Seton Hall Law School, One Newark Center, Newark, NJ 07102). I introduced the new dean of the Yale Law School. A copy of my remarks is supplied.

Conference on the Tenth Amendment sponsored by the Heritage Foundation and Federalist Society, September 12, 1995, Washington, DC (Heritage Foundation, 214 Mass. Ave., NE, Washington, DC 20002; Federalist Society, 1015 18th St., NW, Washington, DC 20036). I moderated a panel discussion on the Commerce Clause. The panel members were Professor Steven Calabresi, Northwestern Law School; Professor Jonathan Macey, then at Cornell Law School; and Dr. Roger Pilon, CATO Institute. I provided a brief introduction to the topic and the Supreme Court's decision in United States v. Lopez, 514 U.S. 549 (1995). I then introduced the panel members. Notes that I used are supplied.

Luncheon sponsored by Seton Hall School of Law, October 1995, West Orange, NJ (One Newark Center, Newark, NJ 07102). I gave remarks after I was presented with Seton Hall Law School's St. Thomas More Medal. A copy of the speech is supplied.

Seton Hall School of Law, October 18, 1995, Newark, NJ (One Newark Center, Newark, NJ 07102). I spoke about appellate advocacy. Notes that I used in delivering this talk are supplied. I recall giving similar talks to Seton Hall Law School students on several other occasions but I have no record of the dates and no papers relating to these talks.

Annual Conference of the United States District Court for the District of New Jersey, April 11, 1996, West Orange, NJ (United States District Court for the District of New Jersey, Martin Luther King, Jr. Federal Building & Courthouse, 50 Walnut Street, Newark NJ 07102). I spoke about technological issues facing the courts, including video taped appellate records, oral arguments by video conferencing, and televised oral arguments. A copy of the speech is supplied.

Duke Law School chapter of the Federalist Society, November 19, 1996, Durham, NC (Science Drive and Towerview Rd., Durham, NC 27708). I spoke about the selection, role, and importance of federal law clerks. Notes relating to this talk are supplied.

Portrait presentation ceremony for Judge Leonard I. Garth, June 25, 1997, Newark, NJ (United States Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit, 610 Market St., Philadelphia, PA 19106). I spoke about the work and character of my colleague, Hon. Leonard I. Garth. A copy of the remarks is supplied.

Constitutional Conclave sponsored by Pennsylvania Bar Institute, October 24, 1997, Philadelphia, PA, (5080 Ritter Rd., Mechanicsburg, PA 17055). I was a member of a panel that discussed a variety of constitutional issues. As I recall, other panel members included Hon. Louis Pollak of the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania and Professor Seth Kreimer of the University of Pennsylvania Law School. My recollection is that the remarks were extemporaneous, and I am unable to locate any materials relating to these remarks.

Annual Federalist Society Lawyers Convention, November 1997, Washington, DC (1015 18th St., NW, Washington, DC 20036). I spoke on “The Role of the Lawyer in the Criminal Justice System” and explained why the model of the lawyer as a “gladiator” is inaccurate and deleterious. A copy of the speech is supplied.

Rutgers School of Law Newark, March 23, 1998, Newark, NJ (123 Washington Street, Newark NJ 07102). I discussed effective appellate advocacy. I spoke from notes but am unable to locate the notes. I recall giving similar talks at Rutgers School of Law Newark on other occasions but have no records concerning these talks.

New Jersey State Bar Association, Federal Practice and Procedure Section, Teaneck, NJ, May 15, 1998 (N.J. State Bar Assn., One Constitution Sq., New Brunswick, NJ 08901). I spoke on “Presenting the Appeal to the Panel.” Notes relating to this talk are supplied.

Editorial Board of the New Jersey Law Journal, May 6, 1999, West Orange, NJ (238 Mulberry St., P.O. Box 20081, Newark, NJ 07101). I spoke after receiving an award from the Board. I cannot specifically recall the substance of my remarks. I am unable to locate any materials relating to these remarks.

Investiture of Hon. Melvin S. Kracov, March 22, 2000, Brennan Courthouse, Jersey City, NJ (Superior Court of New Jersey, Brennan Courthouse, Jersey City, NJ 07306). I spoke about the life, character, and work of Judge Kracov. A copy of the speech is supplied.

Seminar sponsored by American Bar Association Employment and Labor Section, June 1, 2000, Rutgers School of Law Newark, Newark, NJ (321 North Clark St., Chicago, IL 60610). I summarized recent Third Circuit cases concerning employment discrimination claims. I am unable to locate any materials relating to these remarks.

Annual American Bar Association Convention, July 2000, New York, NY (321 North Clark St., Chicago, IL 60610). I moderated a panel discussion on “Non-Delegation’s Revival.” I provided a very brief introduction to the issue and explained the decision of the District of Columbia Circuit in American Trucking Associations, Inc. v. United States EPA, 175 F.3d 1027 (D.C. Cir. 1999), rev’d sub nom Whitman v. American Trucking Associations, Inc., 531 U.S. 457 (2001), which was then pending before the Supreme Court. I also introduced the panel members. A copy of my remarks is supplied.

Third Circuit Judicial Conference, October 17, 2000, Hershey, PA (United States Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit, 610 Market St., Philadelphia, PA 19106). Judge Richard Arnold of the United States Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit and I spoke on “Use of Non-Precedential opinions.” As best I can recall, Judge

Arnold summarized his arguments in Anastasoff v. United States, 235 F.3d 1054 (8th Cir. 2000), which held that the Constitution requires that all courts of appeals' decisions be given precedential weight. As best I can recall, I summarized scholarship reaching the contrary conclusion and discussed the practical value of non-precedential opinions. I am unable to locate any materials relating to these remarks.

Annual Federalist Society Lawyers Convention, November 2000, Washington, DC (1015 18th St., NW, Washington, DC 20036). I was a member of a panel that discussed "Presidential Oversight and the Administrative State." I discussed the Framers' understanding of the power of the President over the various components of the Executive Branch as well as the treatment of this question in Morrison v. Olson, 487 U.S. 654 (1988). A transcript is supplied.

Conference sponsored by the Heritage Foundation, April 18, 2002, Philadelphia, PA (214 Mass. Ave., NE, Washington, DC 20002). I spoke about the importance of amicus curiae briefs in the court of appeals and the Supreme Court. A copy of my remarks is supplied.

Portrait presentation ceremony for Judge Morton I. Greenberg, May 30, 2002, Philadelphia, PA (United States Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit, 610 Market St., Philadelphia, PA 19106). I spoke about the work and character of my colleague, Hon. Morton I. Greenberg. A copy of the remarks is supplied.

National Symposium for United States Court of Appeals Judges, October 21, 2002, Washington, DC (Federal Judicial Center, Thurgood Marshall Federal Judiciary Building, One Columbus Circle, NE, Washington, DC 20002). Judge Richard Arnold of the Eighth Circuit and I spoke on the use of unpublished opinions. As best I can recall, I spoke about proposed Federal Rule of Appellate Procedure 32.1. I am unable to locate any materials relating to these remarks.

Rex E. Lee Advocacy Award Luncheon, February 2003, Washington, DC (J. Reuben Clark Law School, Brigham Young University, Provo, UT 84601). The luncheon was hosted by the Washington, DC chapter of the J. Reuben Clark Law Society and the Dean of the J. Reuben Clark Law School at Brigham Young University. I spoke about the life, work, and character of former Solicitor General Rex E. Lee. A copy of the speech is supplied.

Pepperdine Law School, March 17, 2003, Malibu, CA (24255 Pacific Coast Highway, Malibu, CA 90263). I discussed with first-year students the general problems faced by appellate courts in deciding cases involving civil liberties in times of national emergency. I used as examples North Jersey Media Group v. Ashcroft, 308 F.3d 198 (3d Cir. 2002); Ex Parte Milligan, 71 U.S. 2 (1866), the Japanese-American Internment Cases; Hamdi v. Rumsfeld, 316 F.3d 450 (4th Cir. 2003); and Padilla v. Rumsfeld, 352 F.3d 695 (2d Cir. 2003). Notes and printouts of Power Point slides used in giving this talk are supplied.

Pepperdine Law School, March 18, 2003, Malibu, CA (24255 Pacific Coast Highway, Malibu, CA 90263). I discussed appellate practice and procedure with upper-class students. I am unable to locate any materials relating to these remarks.

Conference sponsored by Princeton University, June 21, 2003, Williamsburg, VA (Princeton University, Princeton, NJ 08540). I was a member of a panel that addressed the question "How Does Democracy Restrain the Power of the Judiciary?" I argued that in constitutional litigation our constitutional system lacks external restraints that can be routinely invoked and thus relies heavily on judicial restraint. Notes used in delivering this talk are supplied.

ABA Appellate Practice Institute, October 3-6, 2003, Reno, NV (321 North Clark St., Chicago, IL 60610). I spoke several times about aspects of appellate advocacy. I am unable to locate any materials relating to these remarks.

Rutgers School of Law Newark, March 24, 2003, Newark, NJ (123 Washington Street, Newark NJ 07102). I spoke about federal clerkships. I am unable to locate any materials relating to these remarks.

American Bar Association, March 8, 2004 (321 North Clark St., Chicago, IL 60610). I spoke at an ABA CLE event. I am unable to locate any materials relating to these remarks.

Seton Hall University School of Law, Federalist Society Student Division, September 23, 2004, Newark, NJ (One Newark Center, Newark, NJ 07102). I spoke informally over lunch in my chambers with a small group of students. I believe that I simply described in general terms the work of my court. I did not use any notes.

Annual Federalist Society Lawyers' Convention, November 2004, Washington, DC (1015 18th St., NW, Washington, DC 20036). I moderated a panel discussion on the Patriot Act. I provided a brief introduction to the topic and introduced the participants: Hon. Viet Dinh, a professor at Georgetown Law School and the former Assistant Attorney General for the Office of Legal Policy; Timothy Lynch of the Cato Institute; Udi Ofer of the New York Civil Liberties Union; and Hon. Christopher Wray, then the Assistant Attorney General for the Criminal Division. Notes used in delivering this introduction are supplied.

Panel discussion on sentencing sponsored by the Constitution Project and the American Constitution Society, March 9, 2005, Washington, DC (Constitution Project, 1120 19th Street, NW, Eighth Floor, Washington, DC 20036; American Constitution Society for Law and Public Policy, 1333 H Street, NW, 11th Floor, Washington, DC, 20005). Judge Paul Friedman of the United States District Court for the District of Columbia, Judge Nancy Gertner of the United States District Court for the District of Massachusetts, and I participated in a panel discussion on federal sentencing. The panel discussed the effect of United States v. Booker, 125 S. Ct. 738 (2005) on the future of federal sentencing. A transcript of the panel discussion is supplied.

Conference sponsored by the Atlantic Legal Foundation on the Attorney-Client Privilege, March 10, 2005, Washington, D.C. (60 East 42nd St., New York, N.Y. 10165). I was a member of a panel assigned to discuss the question "Should the Attorney-Client Privilege be Abolished?" I discussed areas in which the privilege might be modified either through legislation or the development of case law. I specifically addressed the question of selective waiver. A transcript is supplied.

Washington & Lee Law School, March 18, 2005, Lexington, VA (Lewis Hall, Lexington, VA 24450). I gave the keynote address at a conference on the use of unpublished, "depublished," withdrawn, and per curiam opinions. My speech attempted to explain why the courts of appeals have come to rely so heavily on so-called "unpublished" opinions. I also discussed the consequences of taking an alternative approach. A copy of the speech is supplied.

- d. Please list all interviews you have given to newspapers, magazines or other publications, or radio or television stations, providing the dates of these interviews and four (4) copies of the clips or transcripts of these interviews where they are available to you.

I spoke to reporters regularly during my service as United States Attorney regarding cases handled by the office. I also recall being interviewed by reporters when I became U.S. Attorney and during my service as U.S. Attorney. I have attached as appendix 1 a list of all newspaper articles in which I was quoted. There may have been additional occasions when I spoke to a reporter for which I am unable to locate a record. I have provided copies of all articles that I was able to locate.

14. Public Office, Political Activities and Affiliations:

- a. List chronologically any public offices you have held, other than judicial offices, including the terms of service and whether such positions were elected or appointed. If appointed, please include the name of the individual who appointed you. Also, state chronologically any unsuccessful candidacies you made for elective office or unsuccessful nominations for appointed office.

July 1976 – August 1977: Law clerk, Hon. Leonard I. Garth, U.S. Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit. Appointed by Judge Leonard I. Garth.

November 1977 – August 1981: Assistant United States Attorney, Office of the United States Attorney for the District of New Jersey. Career position.

August 1981 – December 1985: Assistant to the Solicitor General, Office of the Solicitor General, U.S. Department of Justice. Career position.

December 1985 – March 1987: Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel, U.S. Department of Justice. Appointed by Attorney General Edwin Meese.

March 1987 – April 1990: United States Attorney for the District of New Jersey. Appointed by President Ronald W. Reagan.

- b. If, in connection with any public office you have held, there were any reports, memoranda, or policy statements prepared or produced with your participation, please supply four (4) copies of these materials. Please also provide four (4) copies of any resolutions, motions, legislation, nominations, or other matters on which you voted as an elected official, the corresponding votes and minutes, as well as any speeches or statements you made with regard to policy decisions or positions taken. "Participation" includes, but is not limited to, membership in any subcommittee, working group or other such group, which produced a report, memorandum, or policy statement, even where you did not contribute to it. If any of these materials are not available to you, please give the name of the document, the date of the document, a summary of its subject matter, and where it can be found.

I have attached two reports published during my tenure as U.S. Attorney for the District of New Jersey. In addition, the Department of Justice has released materials that I drafted or participated in drafting during my tenure as a Deputy Assistant Attorney General in the Office of Legal Counsel and provided copies to the Committee. An appendix of these materials is attached.

United States Attorney's Office for the District of New Jersey, 1988 Annual Report.

United States Attorney's Office for the District of New Jersey, 1989 Annual Report.

- c. List all memberships and offices held in and services rendered, whether compensated or uncompensated, to any political party, election committee, or transition team. Please supply four (4) copies of any memoranda analyzing issues of law or public policy that you wrote on behalf of or in connection with a presidential transition team.

None.

- d. If in connection with any public office, you have ever filed a financial disclosure form, ethics form, or any similar form, please supply four (4) copies of each one.

Please see attached financial disclosure forms. Both the Department of Justice and the Administrative Office of the U.S. Courts maintain financial disclosure forms for six years. In addition to those forms since 1999, I have provided forms that I was able to locate in my personal records.

15. Legal Career: Please answer each part separately.

a. Describe chronologically your law practice and legal experience after graduation from law school, including:

i. whether you served as clerk to a judge, and if so, the name of the judge, the court, and the dates of the period you were a clerk;

Yes. I served as a law clerk to Judge Leonard I. Garth, U.S. Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit, from 1976 – 1977.

ii. whether you practiced alone, and if so, the addresses and dates;

No.

iii. the dates, names and addresses of any law firms, law offices, companies, or governmental agencies with which you have been affiliated and the nature of your affiliation with each.

January – June 1976: Law clerk, law firm of Warren, Goldberg & Berman, 210 E. Hanover Street, Trenton, NJ 08608.

July 1976 – August 1977: Law clerk, Hon. Leonard I. Garth, U.S. Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit, U.S. Courthouse and Post Office Building, Newark, NJ 07101.

November 1977 – August 1981: Assistant U.S. Attorney, Office of the United States Attorney for the District of New Jersey, 970 Broad Street, Newark, NJ 07102.

August 1981 – December 1985: Assistant to the Solicitor General, Department of Justice, Washington, DC 20530.

December 1985 – March 1987: Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office Legal Counsel, Department of Justice, Washington, DC 20530.

March 1987 – June 1990: United States Attorney for the District of New Jersey, 970 Broad Street, Newark, NJ 07102.

June 1990 – Present: Judge, U.S. Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit.
U.S. Courthouse and Post Office Building, Newark, NJ 07101.

b. Describe:

i. the general character of your law practice and, where appropriate, indicate by date any changes in its character over the years.

I have devoted my legal career to public service, and while practicing law my client was the United States. I began my service in 1976 as a law clerk to Judge Leonard I. Garth, U.S. Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit. Judge Garth continues to serve on the Third Circuit, and I have been fortunate to have him as a colleague.

After my appellate clerkship, I joined the U.S. Attorney's Office for the District of New Jersey in 1977. I focused on appellate matters, primarily criminal. While an Assistant U.S. Attorney, I argued more than 20 cases and briefed more than 75 cases on behalf of the United States in the Third Circuit. I also served as an associate counsel in an important espionage trial.

In 1981, I continued my appellate work when I joined the Office of the Solicitor General, United States Department of Justice, as an Assistant to the Solicitor General. The Office of the Solicitor General is responsible for representing the United States and its agencies and officers before the Supreme Court. As an Assistant, I made recommendations to the Solicitor General, through the Deputy Solicitors General, on the merits of appellate matters. I was responsible for drafting petitions for and oppositions to certiorari, as well as merits briefs in both civil and criminal matters. All briefs and petitions were subject to the approval of the Solicitor General. During this time, I argued twelve cases before the Supreme Court on behalf of the United States.

In 1985, I joined the Office of Legal Counsel, United States Department of Justice, as a Deputy Assistant Attorney General. The Office of Legal Counsel provides legal advice and opinions to the agencies and officers of the United States. With the Assistant Attorney General and under his direction, I assisted in preparing formal opinions for the Office of Legal Counsel and in rendering informal opinions and legal advice on a wide variety of subjects and legal questions facing the departments and agencies of the Executive Branch.

In 1987, I became the United States Attorney for the District of New Jersey. I was responsible for the management of all federal criminal prosecutions and the prosecution and defense of all civil matters within the district. As U.S. Attorney, I set initiatives for the office. During my tenure, the office handled important white-collar crime, public corruption, drug trafficking, and organized crime prosecutions. I personally participated in court proceedings and in major decisions involving the office's most important trials and investigations. I also reviewed in detail the proposed charges and evidence in all major cases prosecuted by the office.

ii. your typical former clients and the areas, if any, in which you have specialized.

While practicing, all of my “clients” were federal agencies, officers, or employees. With the exception of time spent as an Assistant United States Attorney doing principally criminal work, my practice has been highly diversified.

c. Describe whether you appeared in court frequently, occasionally, or not at all. If the frequency of your appearances in court varied, describe such variance, providing dates.

i. Indicate the percentage of these appearances in:

- 1. federal courts;
- 2. state courts of record;
- 3. other courts.

Federal courts: over 99%
State courts: less than 1%

ii. Indicate the percentage of these appearances in:

- 1. civil proceedings;
- 2. criminal proceedings.

Civil: approximately 10%
Criminal: approximately 90%

Virtually all of my court appearances have been in federal court. When I was an Assistant United States Attorney (1978-81), approximately 90% of my appearances were in criminal matters. When I was an Assistant to the Solicitor General (1981-85), I argued 12 cases in the United States Supreme Court. Of these, eight cases were civil and four were criminal. When I was in the Office of Legal Counsel (1985-87), I did not appear in court. When I was the United States Attorney for the District of New Jersey (1987-90), I argued four appeals, three criminal and one civil, and I appeared in district court in a number of proceedings. Almost all, if not all, of these appearances were in criminal matters.

d. List all cases in courts of record you tried to verdict or judgment (rather than settled), indicating whether you were sole counsel, chief counsel, or associate counsel.

i. What percentage of these trials were:

- 1. jury;
- 2. non-jury.

As a practicing attorney, I focused almost exclusively on appellate matters. I did serve as lead trial counsel in two criminal cases tried to verdict or judgment, one jury and one non-jury. I was an associate counsel in one jury trial.

United States v. Kikumura, 918 F.2d 1084 (3d Cir. 1990). I served as lead counsel in this case. Kikumura involved an attempted terrorist bombing in which a verdict of guilty on all counts was reached on stipulated facts following extensive pretrial hearings. See United States v. Kikumura, 698 F. Supp. 546 (D.N.J. 1988). The verdict in Kikumura was followed by a detailed factual hearing at which the nature and circumstances of the offenses were proved for purposes of sentencing. See United States v. Kikumura, 706 F. Supp. 331 (1989).

United States v. Stonaker, 860 F.2d 1076 (3d Cir. 1988)(Table). I served as lead counsel in this 1987 trial for the shooting of an FBI agent. The defendant was convicted and sentenced to 23 years in prison.

United States v. Enger, 472 F.Supp. 490 (D.N.J. 1978). As an Assistant U.S. Attorney, I was associate counsel in this complex espionage trial.

e. List all appellate cases in which you made oral arguments, and supply four (4) copies of any briefs on which you worked.

All Supreme Court arguments are listed in response to question 15.f. I have not kept records of all oral arguments in which I participated at the appellate level, although I indicated in my questionnaire for my nomination to the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit that I argued more than 20 cases and briefed more than 75 cases in the Third Circuit while in the U.S. Attorney's Office. I have made my best efforts to reconstruct my work based on public databases and with the assistance of the U.S. Attorney's Office for the District of New Jersey and the Clerk's Office for the Third Circuit. I have been able to determine that I participated in oral argument in the published cases listed below. As best I can determine, I also presented oral argument in the cases listed below that were decided without a published opinion. It was the practice of the U.S. Attorney's Office for oral argument to be presented by the AUSA who was principally responsible for the brief, and the U.S. Attorney's Office has determined that I was principally responsible for the briefs in these cases. I have attached all appellate briefs that I was able to secure.

United States v. Kikumura, 918 F.2d 1084 (3d Cir. 1990)
United States v. Accetturo, 842 F.2d 1408 (3d Cir. 1988)
Matter of Grand Jury Empanelled March 17, 1987, 836 F.2d 150 (3d Cir. 1988)
Public Citizen v. Burke, 843 F.2d 1473 (D.C. Cir. 1988)
Matter of Grand Jury Empaneled March 19, 1980, (Docket No. 81-1782)
United States v. Friedland, 660 F.2d 919 (3d Cir. 1981)
United States v. Alessandrello, 637 F.2d 131 (3d Cir. 1980)

United States v. Miller, 624 F.2d 1198 (3d Cir. 1980)
Appeal of Malfitano, 633 F.2d 276 (3d Cir. 1980)
United States v. Costanzo, 625 F.2d 465 (3d Cir. 1980)
United States v. Martinez, 613 F.2d 473 (3d Cir. 1980)
Matter of Grand Jury Empanelled February 14, 1978, 603 F.2d 469 (3d Cir. 1979)
United States v. Stassi, 583 F.2d 122 (3d Cir. 1978)
United States v. Tonelli, 577 F.2d 194 (3d Cir. 1978)
United States v. Geary, (Docket No. 78-1330)
United States v. Holder, (Docket No. 78-1939)
United States v. Levin, (Docket No. 78-1306)
United States v. Michael, (Docket No. 78-2545)
United States v. Shabazz, (Docket No. 78-1385/5)
United States v. Labriola, (Docket No. 77-2172)
United States v. DeFalco, (Docket No. 77-1540)

- f. Describe your practice, if any, before the Supreme Court of the United States. Please supply four (4) copies of any briefs, amicus or otherwise, and, if applicable, any oral argument transcripts before the Supreme Court in connection with your practice. Give a detailed summary of the substance of each case, outlining briefly the factual and legal issues involved, the party or parties whom you represented, the nature of your participation in the litigation, and the final disposition of the case. Please also provide the individual names, addresses, and telephone numbers of co-counsel and of principal counsel for each of the other parties.

As an Assistant to the Solicitor General, I argued 12 Supreme Court cases and drafted or assisted in drafting approximately 55 merits briefs or petitions for certiorari. The relevant petitions and briefs are attached.

1. Oregon v. Kennedy, 456 U.S. 667 (1982). The issue before the Court was whether the Double Jeopardy Clause prohibits the retrial of a criminal defendant who successfully moved for a mistrial on the basis of a prosecutorial error that was not intended to provoke the mistrial request.

The United States, participating as amicus in support of Oregon, argued that a rule of law prohibiting retrial absent prosecutorial intent to obtain a mistrial would substantially impair the right of the public to secure a resolution of criminal charges and would create grave practical problems for judicial administration. The Supreme Court, in an opinion written by then-Justice Rehnquist, agreed with the reasoning advanced in our brief. The Court adopted a standard that focused on whether the government deliberately denied the defendant an opportunity to meaningfully exercise his or her due process rights. Specifically, the Court held that where a defendant in a criminal trial moves for a mistrial, he may invoke the double jeopardy bar in a subsequent prosecution only if the prosecutorial or judicial conduct in question was intended to provoke the defendant to move for a mistrial.

I worked on the government's brief as amicus curiae, and I orally argued the case on March 29, 1982. With me on the brief were Rex E. Lee, then-Solicitor General, (deceased); D. Lowell Jensen, then-Assistant Attorney General, Chambers of Senior District Judge D. Lowell Jensen, United States Courthouse, 1301 Clay Street, Oakland, CA (510) 637-3540; Andrew L. Frey, then-Deputy Solicitor General, Mayer, Brown, Rowe & Maw LLP, 1909 K Street, NW, Washington, DC 20006, (202) 263-3291; and David B. Smith, English & Smith, 626 King Street, Suite 213, Alexandria, VA 22314, (703) 548-8911. Counsel for the petitioner was David Frohnmayer, then-Attorney General of Oregon, University of Oregon, Office of the President, 110 Johnson Hall, Eugene OR 97403, (541) 346-3036. With him on the brief were Robert E. Barton, then-Assistant Attorney General, Cosgrave Vergeer Kester LLP, 805 SW Broadway, 8th Floor, Portland, OR 97205, (503) 323-9000; John C. Bradley, then-Assistant Attorney General, Multnomah County District Attorney's Office, Multnomah County Courthouse, 1021 SW Fourth Avenue, Room 600, Portland, OR 97204, (503) 988-3162; Thomas H. Denney, then-Assistant Attorney General, Oregon Department of Justice, 1162 Court Street NE, Salem, OR 97301, (503) 378-4400; and Stephen F. Peifer, then-Assistant Attorney General, Office of the United States Attorney for the District of Oregon, 1000 SW 3rd Avenue, Suite 600, Portland, OR 97204, (503) 727-1012. Counsel for the respondent was Donald C. Walker (deceased).

2. Russello v. United States, 464 U.S. 16 (1983). The petitioner, a member of an arson ring formed to defraud insurance companies, was ordered to forfeit some $340,000 in insurance proceeds. The issue before the Court was whether racketeering profits and proceeds constituted an "interest" within the meaning of the RICO statute and were thus subject to forfeiture upon conviction. The petitioner contended that the insurance profits were not an "interest," because the relevant section of the RICO statute reached only interests "in an enterprise."

On behalf of the government, I emphasized the importance of requiring the forfeiture of illegal profits and proceeds in preventing organized criminal activities. The Supreme Court unanimously agreed in an opinion written by Justice Blackmun. Following the analysis in the government's brief, the Court first examined the plain language of the RICO statute and concluded that the term "interest" included every property interest, including a right to profits or proceeds. Next, the Court examined the structure of the relevant section in relation to other statutes and to other provisions of the RICO statute, and concluded that Congress deliberately incorporated a looser definition of "interest" with respect to forfeitures. The Court determined that Congress specifically "intended to provide new weapons of unprecedented scope for an assault upon organized crime and its economic roots." Russello, 464 U.S. at 26. Relying on the language, structure, and legislative history of the RICO statute, the Court upheld the petitioner's forfeiture of insurance proceeds.

I worked on the government's brief as respondent, and I argued the case on October 5, 1997. With me on the briefs were Rex E. Lee, then-Solicitor General (deceased); D. Lowell Jensen, then-Assistant Attorney General, Chambers of Senior District Judge D. Lowell Jensen, 1301 Clay Street, Oakland, CA 94612, (510) 637-3540; Andrew L. Frey, then-Deputy Solicitor General, Mayer, Brown, Rowe & Maw LLP, 1909 K Street, NW, Washington DC 20006, (202) 263-3291; and Sara Criscitelli, 347 Boyd Avenue, Takoma Park, MD 20912, (301) 270-1045. Counsel for petitioner was Ronald A. Dion, Esq., 5701 SW Fifth Street, Plantation, FL 33317, (954) 581-4727. With him on the brief was Alvin E. Entin, Entin, Margules & Della Fere PA, 110 SE 6th Street, Suite 1970, Fort Lauderdale, FL 33301, (954) 524-8697.

3. United States v. Villamonte-Marquez, 462 U.S. 579 (1983). Customs officials and police officers boarded a sailboat anchored on a channel with access to the Gulf of Mexico. Once on board, they first inspected the vessel's documentation and then discovered 5,800 pounds of concealed marijuana. The issue before the Court was whether, under the Fourth Amendment, customs officials acting pursuant to a statute, but without reasonable suspicion, may board a vessel with easy access to the open sea and inspect its documents. The respondents argued that the statute allowing customs officials to board vessels and inspect documents infringed respondents' Fourth Amendment rights against unreasonable search and seizure.

On behalf of the government, I argued that the suspicionless boardings pursuant to the statute were consistent with the Fourth Amendment, important for public safety, and essential in the ongoing battle against drug-trafficking crimes. The Supreme Court agreed in a majority opinion authored by then-Justice Rehnquist. After acknowledging the historical pedigree of the relevant statute (modeled after a similar statute passed in 1790, by the same Congress that promulgated the Bill of Rights), the Court devoted the bulk of its opinion to explaining the differences between waterborne commerce and vehicular traffic on highways. Ultimately, the Court determined that the strength of the governmental interest in securing waterways outweighed the statute's authorization of limited intrusion on the Fourth Amendment.

I worked on the government's brief as petitioner, and I argued the case on February 23, 1983. With me on the briefs were Rex E. Lee, then-Solicitor General, (deceased); D. Lowell Jensen, then-Assistant Attorney General, Chambers of Senior District Judge D. Lowell Jensen, 1301 Clay Street, Oakland, CA 94612, (510) 637-3540; Andrew L. Frey, then-Deputy Solicitor General, Mayer, Brown, Rowe & Maw LLP, 1909 K Street NW, Washington DC 20006, (202) 263-3291; Louis M. Fischer, United States Department of Justice, 950 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW, Washington, DC, 20530, (202) 514-2613; James G. Lindsay, (current address unknown); Stuart P. Seidel, Baker & McKenzie LLP, 815 Connecticut Avenue NW, Washington, DC 20006, (202) 463-7295; and Jeanne Mullenhoff, United States Department of Justice, 950 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW, Washington, DC, 20530, (202) 616-8429. Counsel for the respondent was Richard P. Ieyoub, Esq., Couhig Partners, 1100 Poydras Street, New Orleans, LA 70163, (504) 588-9750.

4. United States v. Weber Aircraft Corp., 465 U.S. 792 (1983). An Air Force pilot, who was severely injured when he ejected from his plane, sued respondents as the entities responsible for the design and manufacture of the ejection equipment. The respondents sought discovery of confidential unsworn statements from safety investigations conducted by the Air Force after the accident. To that end, the respondents filed requests for the statements under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA). The issue before the Court was whether confidential statements made by witnesses in an Air Force air crash safety investigation were protected from disclosure under the Freedom of Information Act.

On behalf of the government, I made two principal arguments. First, I argued that the FOIA exemption for material routinely privileged in a civil discovery context applied to these confidential statements. Second, I argued that Congress specifically intended to protect confidential statements given in military air safety investigations. The Supreme Court, in a unanimous opinion written by Justice Stevens, held that the statements were protected from disclosure. The Court reasoned that exempting information that would not otherwise have been collected was consistent with FOIA because it would not reduce the amount of information available to the public.

I worked on the government's petition and brief, and I argued the case on March 30, 1984. With me on the briefs were Rex E. Lee, then-Solicitor General, (deceased); J. Paul McGrath, then-Assistant Attorney General, American Standard, One Centennial Avenue, P.O. Box 6820, Piscataway, NJ 08855, (732) 980-6000; Kenneth S. Geller, then-Deputy Solicitor General, Mayer, Brown, Rowe & Maw LLP, 1909 K Street NW, Washington, DC 20006, (202) 263-3000; Leonard Schaitman, United States Department of Justice, 950 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW, Washington, DC, 20530, (202) 514-3441; and Wendy M. Keats, Department of Justice, 950 Pennsylvania Avenue NW, Washington, DC 20530, (202) 514-0265. Counsel for the respondent was Jacques E. Soiret, Esq., Kirtland & Packard, 2361 Rosencrans Avenue, fourth floor, El Segundo, CA 90245, (310) 536-1000. With him on the brief for respondent Weber Aircraft Co. were Marshall Silberberg, 660 Newport Center Drive, Suite 340, Newport Beach, CA 92660, (949) 718-0960; and Robert M. Churella, Kirtland & Packard, 2361 Rosencrans Avenue, Fourth Floor, El Segundo, CA 90245, (310) 536-1000

5. United States v. Doe, 465 U.S. 605 (1984). During an investigation of corruption in awarding government contracts, the respondent sought to quash a subpoena of certain business records because producing the records would involve testimonial self-incrimination. Previously, the Supreme Court had held that contents of business records ordinarily are not privileged because they are created voluntarily and without compulsion. Fisher v. United States, 425 U.S. 391 (1976). The issue before the Court was the extent to which the Fifth Amendment privilege against compelled self-incrimination applied to the business records of a sole proprietorship.

On behalf of the government, I argued that the rationale of Fisher applied equally in this case because the government had not compelled the creation of the documents it sought. I also emphasized that such records were extremely important in investigations of complex criminal activity. The Supreme Court, in an opinion written by Justice Powell, held that contents of business records were not privileged, but the act of producing records was privileged and could not be compelled without a grant of use immunity. Based upon this reasoning, the Supreme Court ruled in favor of the government in Doe because the records were prepared voluntarily and because the subpoena would not force the respondent to restate, repeat, or affirm the truth of their contents.

I worked on the government's petition and brief, and I argued the case in the Supreme Court on December 7, 1983. Also on the government's briefs were Rex E. Lee, then-Solicitor General (deceased); Andrew L. Frey, then-Deputy Solicitor General, Mayer Brown Rowe & Maw, 1909 K Street, NW, Washington, DC 20006-1101, (202) 263-3291; Stephen S. Trott, then-Assistant Attorney General, Chambers of Senior Circuit Judge Stephen S. Trott, United States Courthouse, 550 West Fort Street, Suite 667, Boise, ID 83724, (208) 334-1612; and Joel M. Gershowitz, United States Department of Justice, 950 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW, Washington, DC 20530, (202) 514-3742. Counsel for the respondent was Richard T. Philips, 704 Passaic Avenue, West Caldwell, NJ 07006-6408, (973) 227-1800.

6. Community Television of Southern California v. Gottfried, 459 U.S. 498 (1983). The question presented was whether the Federal Communications Commission (FCC), as part of its licensing process for public television stations, must independently assess a station's compliance with Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act. On behalf of the FCC, I argued that Congress did not intend for the FCC to adjudicate violations of Section 504. In addition, I argued that such a requirement would be inconsistent with the provisions and policies of the Communications Act.

In an opinion authored by Justice Stevens, the Court agreed and held that the FCC could review a public television station's license renewal application under the same standard that it applied to a commercial licensee's renewal application. The Court noted that the legislative history of Section 504 did not indicate any congressional intent to impose enforcement obligations on the FCC. The Court also reasoned that because the statute did not differentiate between commercial and public television stations, the FCC acted within its discretion when it imposed uniform obligations on both groups of licensees.

I worked on the petition and brief on behalf of the FCC, and I argued the case in the Supreme Court on October 12, 1982. With me on the briefs were Rex E. Lee, then-Solicitor General (deceased); Stephen M. Shapiro, then-Deputy Solicitor General, Mayer Brown Rowe & Maw, 71 South Wacker Drive, Chicago, IL 60606-4637, (312) 782-0600; Stephen A. Sharp, then-General Counsel, Federal Communications Commission, (current address unknown); Daniel M. Armstrong, Associate General Counsel, Federal Communications Commission, 445 12th Street, SW, Washington, DC 20554, (202) 418-1740; C. Grey Pash, Jr., Federal Communications Commission, 445 12th Street, SW, Washington, DC 20554, (202) 418-1751; and Linda L. Oliver, Hogan & Hartson LLP, 555 13th Street, NW, Washington, DC 20004-1109, (202) 637-5600. Counsel for petitioner Community Television was Edgar F. Czarra, Jr., Covington and Burling, 1201 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW, Washington, DC 20004-2401, (202) 662-6000. With him on the briefs were Mark D. Nozette, Attorneys' Liability Assurance Society, Inc., Suite 5700, 311 South Wacker Drive, Chicago, IL 60606-6622, (312) 697-6900; and Richard A. Meserve, Covington and Burling, 1201 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW, Washington, DC 20004-2401, (202) 662-6000. Counsel for respondents Gottfried et al. in both cases was Charles M. Firestone, Aspen Institute, One Dupont Circle, NW, Suite 700, Washington, DC 20036-1133, (202) 736-5800. With him on the briefs were Abraham Gottfried (current address unknown) and Stanley Fleishman (deceased).

7. Federal Communications Commission v. League of Women Voters of California, 468 U.S. 364 (1984). The question presented was whether a statute prohibiting "editorializing" by public broadcasting stations that received grants from the Corporation for Public Broadcasting, 47 U.S.C. § 399, violated the First Amendment.

On behalf of the FCC, I argued that Congress has the power to establish and finance a public noncommercial and educational broadcasting system and to require that subsidized stations licensed as part of that system refrain from direct editorializing and political electioneering. Alternatively, I argued that Congress has the power to decide that it will not subsidize private editorializing and electioneering with public funds.

The Supreme Court disagreed. In an opinion by Justice Brennan, the Court struck down the statute on the ground that its ban on editorializing was broader than needed to protect against the risk of governmental interference or to prevent the public from assuming that editorials by public broadcasting stations represent the official views of the government.

I worked on the government's petition and brief, and I argued the case in the Supreme Court on January 16, 1984. With me on the brief were Rex E. Lee, then-Solicitor General (deceased); J. Paul McGrath, then-Assistant Attorney General, American Standard, One Centennial Avenue, P.O. Box 6820, Piscataway, NJ 08855-6820, (732) 980-6000; Paul Bator, then-Deputy Solicitor General (deceased); Anthony J. Steinmeyer, United States Department of Justice, 950 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW, Washington, DC, (202) 514-3388; and Michael Jay Singer, United States Department of Justice, 950 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW, Washington, DC, (202) 514-5432. Counsel for the respondent was Frederic D. Woocher, Esq., Strumwasser & Woocher LLP, 100 Wilshire Blvd Ste 1900, Santa Monica, CA, (310) 576-1233. With him on the briefs were Bill Lann Lee, Lief, Cabraser, Heimann, & Bernstein, LLP, Embarcadero Center West, 275 Battery Street, Suite 3000, San Francisco, CA 94111, (415) 956-1000; and John R. Phillips, Phillips & Cohen LLP, 2000 Massachusetts Avenue, NW, 1st Floor, Washington, DC 20036, (202) 833-4567.

8. Chemical Manufacturers Association v. Natural Resources Defense Council, 470 U.S. 116 (1985). This consolidated case arose from a challenge by the Natural Resources Defense Council to regulatory action by the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA). At issue was whether the EPA could grant variances from national pollution standards to plants whose operations involved "fundamentally different factors" from those considered by the EPA in establishing the national standards. The lower court decision prohibiting such variances threatened to interfere with the EPA's plan to implement the Clean Water Act, imperiled existing pollution standards, and would have delayed the promulgation of new standards.

On behalf of the EPA, I argued that the EPA's practice of allowing such variances constituted a reasonable and permissible exercise of its discretion under the Clean Water Act, given the statute's text, legislative history, and goals. The Supreme Court agreed with the government and reversed the lower court in an opinion authored by Justice White.

I worked on the brief on behalf of the EPA, and I argued the case in the Supreme Court on November 6, 1984. With me on the brief were Rex E. Lee, then-Solicitor General (deceased); F. Henry Habicht, II, then-Assistant Attorney General, Safety-Kleen Corp., One Brinckman Way, Elgin, IL 60123, (800)-323-5040; Louis F. Claiborne, then-Deputy Solicitor General (deceased); Jose R. Allen, Skadden, Arps, Slate, Meagher & Flom LLP, Four Embarcadero, Suite 3800, San Francisco, CA 94111, (415) 984-6400; Barry S. Neuman, Barry S. Neuman, PLLC, 1615 L Street, NW, Washington, DC 20036, (202) 466-2886; A. James Barnes, then-General Counsel, Environmental Protection Agency, Indiana University Law School, 107 South Indiana Avenue, Bloomington, IN 47405, (812) 856-3342; and Susan G. Lebow, then-Assistant General Counsel, Environmental Protection Agency, 1200 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW, Washington, DC 20460, (202) 564-7700. Counsel for the petitioner was Theodore L. Garrett, Covington and Burling, 1201 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW, Washington, DC 20004-2401, (202) 662-6000. Counsel for the respondent was Frances Dubrowski, 3215 KJingle Rd. NW, Washington, DC, (202) 295-9009.

9. Atkins v. Parker, 472 U.S. 115 (1985). Food stamp recipients in Massachusetts challenged a congressionally-mandated change in their benefit levels. At issue was whether the notice given to the recipients violated the Due Process Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment. On behalf of the Secretary of Agriculture, I argued that the notice provided was sufficient to satisfy the due process requirements of notice and opportunity to respond. I argued that the Due Process Clause does not mandate individualized advance notice of legislative changes in benefit levels. Alternatively, I argued that the Massachusetts notice, which was coupled with other procedures for reducing the risk of error, was constitutionally sufficient.

Reversing a decision of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the First Circuit, the Supreme Court agreed with the government and held that the notice disseminated to the food stamp recipients complied with all statutory, regulatory, and constitutional requirements. In an opinion authored by Justice Stevens, the Court held that the relevant statute did not require individualized notice of a general change in the law and that the notice complied with a regulation that did require individual notice of a change in the law that would affect benefit levels. In addition, the Court held that the program beneficiaries were not deprived of their constitutional right to due process because there was sufficient notice and opportunity to challenge adverse actions and the legislative process provided all the process that was due.

I argued the case in the Supreme Court on November 27, 1984. On the brief were Rex E. Lee, then-Solicitor General (deceased); Richard K. Willard, then-Acting Assistant Attorney General, The Gillette Company, Prudential Tower Building, 39th Floor, Boston, MA 02199, (617) 421-7863; Kenneth S. Geller, then-Deputy Solicitor General, Mayer, Brown, Rowe & Maw LLP, 1909 K Street, N.W., Washington, DC 20006-1101, (202) 263-3000; then-Assistant to the Solicitor General Michael W. McConnell, United States Court of Appeals for the Tenth Circuit, 125 South State Street, Suite 5402, Salt Lake City, UT 84138, (801) 524-5145; Leonard Schaitman, Civil Division, Department of Justice, 950 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW, Washington, DC, 20530, (202) 514-2000; and Bruce G. Forrest, then-Department of Justice attorney, 2709 Woodley Rd, NW, Washington, DC 20008, (202) 332-9607. Counsel for petitioner Massachusetts Commissioner of Public Welfare were: Francis X. Bellotti, then-Attorney General of Massachusetts, Mintz, Levin, Cohn, Ferris, Glovsky and Popeo P.C., One Financial Center, Boston, MA 02111, (617) 348-1606; Ellen L. Janos, then-Assistant Attorney General of Massachusetts, Gaston & Snow, One Federal Square, Boston, MA 02110, (617) 426-4600; E. Michael Sloman, then-Assistant Attorney General of Massachusetts, Meyer, Connolly, Sloman, & MacDonald, LLP, 12 Post Office Square, Boston, MA 02109, (617) 423-2254; and Carl Valvo, then-Assistant Attorney General of Massachusetts, Cosgrove, Eisenberg, and Kiley, P.C., Suite 1820, One International Place, Fort Hill Square, Boston, MA 02110, (617) 439-7775. Counsel for respondents were Steven A. Hitov, 192 Willow Street, Roxbury, MA 02032, (617) 325-6417, and J. Paterson Rae, Western Mass. Legal Services, Springfield, MA, 55 Federal Street, Greenfield, MA 01301, (413) 774-3747.

10. National Railroad Passenger Corporation v. Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railway Co., 470 U.S. 451 (1985). This case concerned the Rail Passenger Service Act of 1970 (RPSA), which created Amtrak, an independent corporation, and authorized it to contract with local railway companies to take over their passenger service obligations in exchange for a fee. After doing so, Amtrak sharply curtailed the discounted travel previously afforded to railway employees. Congress, in 1972, required Amtrak to restore these privileges, but required local railways to reimburse its costs for doing so. Subsequently, in 1979, Congress modified the reimbursement formula to increase the payments to exceed Amtrak's costs for transporting railway employees.

Several railways sued, arguing: (1) that either the RPSA or their contracts with Amtrak contractually obligated the United States to forbear charging them for the cost of intercity rail travel; and (2) that the reimbursement requirement, or at least the charge in excess of Amtrak's costs, constituted a deprivation of property without due process of law under the Fifth Amendment.

On behalf of the United States, I defended Congress's authority to legislate without creating contractual obligations. I argued that even if a right against the United States was found to exist, no such rights were violated. The RPSA did not compel private railroads to resume operation of passenger trains; instead, it simply required them to reimburse Amtrak for the continued provision of a benefit the railroads had themselves initiated. Moreover, even if the 1979 Amendments did alter contract rights, they did not violate the Fifth Amendment Due Process Clause because Congress did not act arbitrarily or irrationally.

The Court agreed that the RPSA did not restrict Congress's power because of the strong presumption that statutes do not create contractual obligations that restrict future governmental action, absent a clear expression of an intent to do so. The Court also agreed that the Amtrak contracts did not preclude legislative action because private parties may not restrict the scope of Congress's authority by contract.

I worked on the government's brief and argued the case in the Supreme Court on January 15, 1985. With me on the brief were Rex E. Lee, then-Solicitor General (deceased); Richard K. Willard, then-Acting Assistant Attorney General, Bristol-Myers Squibb Company, 345 Park Avenue, New York, NY 10154, (212) 546-4000; Leonard Schaitman, United States Department of Justice, 950 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW, Washington, DC 20530 (202) 514-3301; and Al Daniel, Jr., Cowan, DeBaets, Abrahams & Sheppard LLP, 41 Madison Avenue, New York, NY 10010, (212) 974-7474. Representing Amtrak were Paul F. Mickey Jr., Steptoe & Johnson, 1330 Connecticut Avenue, NW, Washington, DC 20036, (202) 249-3000; William R. Perlik, retired, living in McLean, VA (current address unknown); David R. Johnson, Visiting Professor of Law, New York Law School, 57 Worth Street, New York, NY 10013 (212) 431-2000; and Andrea Timko, retired, living in Washington, DC (current address unknown). Counsel for respondents were George A. Platz, retired, living in Winnetka, Illinois (current address unknown); Howard J. Trienens, Sidley Austin Brown & Wood, 1 South Dearborn Street, Chicago, IL 60603, (312) 853-7417; Thomas W. Merrill, Sidley Austin Brown & Wood, 1 South Dearborn Street, Chicago, IL 60603, (312) 853-7834; and William A. Brasher, Brasher Law Firm, 1 Metropolitan Square, 211 North Broadway, Suite 2300, Street Louis, MO 63102, (314) 621-7700.

11. Army & Air Force Exchange Services v. Sheehan, 456 U.S. 728 (1982). This case was filed by a former civilian employee of the Army & Air Force Exchange Service (AAFES) who was terminated after pleading guilty to drug possession. The plaintiff was appointed through an AAFES executive management program, which was subject to special regulations. The plaintiff alleged that his agreement to participate in this program created an actual or implied contract with the United States sufficient to create Tucker Act jurisdiction in federal court over his action for money damages.

On behalf of the government, I argued that the District Court lacked jurisdiction to entertain the claim. As instrumentalities of the United States, military exchanges share the government's sovereign immunity. Congress has the power to waive sovereign immunity, but the court below had failed to point to any statute or regulation containing the requisite waiver. I argued that the plaintiff was an appointee, rather than an employee, and therefore had no employment contract to raise under the Tucker Act. Further, in order to sustain respondent's suit, the Court would have to imply a contract enforceable under the Tucker Act using the program's regulations. The Court agreed with the government's position and, in an opinion written by Justice Blackmun, found that the Tucker Act does not itself create a cause of action; rather a plaintiff must identify another federal statute that authorizes a suit for money damages against the United States. The regulations to which respondent pointed did not do so.

I worked on the government's brief and argued the case in the Supreme Court on February 23, 1982. With me on the briefs were Rex E. Lee, then-Solicitor General (deceased); J. Paul McGrath, then-Assistant Attorney General, American Standard Companies Inc., Piscataway, NJ 08855, (732) 980-6000; Kenneth S. Geller, then-Deputy Solicitor General, Mayer, Brown, Rowe & Maw LLP, 1909 K Street, NW, Washington, DC 20006, (202) 263-3000; William Kanter, United States Department of Justice, 950 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW, Washington, DC, 20530, (202) 514-4575; and Eloise E. Davies (current address unknown). Counsel for the respondent was Ira E. Tobolowsky, Tobolowsky & Burk, P.C., 4305 West Lovers Lane, Dallas, TX 75209, (214) 352-0662.

12. Belknap v. Hale, 463 U.S. 491 (1983). This case regarded the extent to which the National Labor Relations Act (NLRA) preempts state law claims arising out of strike activity. Specifically, the question presented was whether the NLRA preempts a state law misrepresentation and breach-of-contract action against an employer, brought by strike replacements displaced by reinstated strikers after having been offered and accepted jobs on a permanent basis and assured they would not be fired to accommodate returning strikers.

On behalf of the National Labor Relations Board as amicus curiae, I argued that the NLRA preempted the state law causes of action, because allowing such suits would interfere with Congress's regulatory scheme, and would undermine the dual objectives of encouraging peaceful settlement of labor disputes and uniformly administering federal law. The argument was based on a line of preemption cases described in Machinists v. Wisconsin Employment Relations Commission, 427 U.S. 132 (1976), which proscribed state regulation and state-law causes of action concerning conduct that Congress intended to be unregulated.

The Supreme Court, in an opinion by Justice White, held otherwise. The Court noted two doctrines allowing preemption by the NLRA: the doctrine set out in the Machinists case relied upon by the NLRB and the doctrine that applies when the state cause of action concerns conduct that is prohibited or protected by the Act. See San Diego Building Trades Council v. Garmon, 359 U.S. 236 (1959). Under this latter doctrine, however, if the subject of regulation is only peripherally of concern to federal law or is so deeply rooted in local law that Congress would not have intended to preempt the application of state law, courts must balance state interests with those underlying the Act. Ultimately, the Supreme Court was not convinced that allowing state suits would impermissibly burden either the federal system of labor regulation promulgated by the Act or the employer faced with a striking work force.

I argued on behalf of the government. On the brief were Rex E. Lee, then-Solicitor General (deceased); Robert E. Allen (current address unknown); Norton J. Come, Division of Enforcement, Litigation Supreme Court Branch, Office of the General Counsel, NLRB, 1099 14th Street, NW, Washington DC, 20570, (202) 273-2977; and Linda Sher, Division of Enforcement Litigation Appellate Court Branch, Office of the General Counsel, NLRB, 1099 14th Street, NW, Washington DC, 20570, (202) 273-2960. Appearing for the petitioner was Larry E. Forrester (current address unknown). Appearing for the respondents were Cecil Davenport 4636 Swift Run Dr., Leesburg, FL 34748; and Hollis Searcy, 800 Stone Creek Parkway, Suite 1, Louisville, KY 40223, (502) 425-6200.

Following are cases that I did not argue before the Court, but in which my name appeared on the briefs.

13. United States v. Inadi, 475 U.S. 387 (1986). The issue before the Court was whether the Confrontation Clause of the Sixth Amendment barred the prosecution from introducing statements falling within the co-conspirator exception to the hearsay rule when the prosecution had not established that the declarant was unavailable to testify at trial.

On behalf of the government, we argued that no unavailability showing was required. Specifically, we argued that the Confrontation Clause was intended to prohibit trial by affidavit and comparable practices, not to proscribe or generally regulate the admission of hearsay. We also argued that the co-conspirator exception is not analogous to the prior testimony exception, and noted that the Court's Confrontation Clause decisions treat most hearsay exceptions other than the prior testimony exception as presumptively valid. Finally, we maintained that reevaluating the co-conspirator rule would be duplicative and disruptive, and would also stultify the evolution of federal and state rules of evidence.

The Supreme Court agreed with the government's position. In an opinion authored by Justice Powell, the Court held that the Confrontation Clause does not preclude admission of out-of-court statements made by a co-conspirator absent a showing of unavailability. The Court held that its earlier decision in Ohio v. Roberts, 448 U.S. 56 (1980), which held that the Confrontation Clause required unavailability for admission of prior testimony, did not apply to any out-of-court statement; that the principles underlying the unavailability rule in Roberts did not apply to statements by co-conspirators; and that the burdens of imposing an unavailability requirement in this context outweighed the benefits.

I worked on the government's briefs. With me on the briefs were Charles Fried, then-Solicitor General, Harvard Law School, Cambridge, MA, 1563 Massachusetts Avenue, Cambridge, MA 02138, (617) 495-4636; Andrew L. Frey, then-Deputy Solicitor General, Mayer, Brown, Rowe & Maw LLP, 1909 K Street, NW, Washington, DC 20006-1101, (202) 263-3000; then-Assistant Attorney General Stephen S. Trott, United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit, 550 West Fort Street, Boise, ID 83724, (208) 334-1612; and Patty Merkamp Stemler, Criminal Appellate Section, Department of Justice, 950 Constitution Avenue, NW, Washington, DC, 20530, (202) 514-2000. Representing the respondent were Holly Maguigan, New York University School of Law, 245 Sullivan Street, New York, NY 10012, (212) 998-6433; William F. Sheehan, Goodwin Procter & Hoar, 901 New York Avenue, NW Washington, DC 20001, (202) 346-4303; and Julie Shapiro, Seattle University School of Law, 901 12th Avenue, Seattle, WA 98122-1090 (206) 398-4043.

14. Mitchell v. Forsyth, 472 U.S. 511 (1985). This case involved the immunity of the Attorney General from suit for acts performed in the exercise of his national security functions. Attorney General Mitchell, upon the FBI Director's request, had approved a warrantless wiretap in a national security case. The government argued that the Attorney General should be absolutely immune from liability for damages when he acts to protect the national security, because he should be free to act promptly and effectively for the national good without concern for his personal liability or potential entanglement in litigation. Alternatively, the government argued that the Attorney General was entitled to qualified immunity under Supreme Court precedent holding that a government official is immune from liability for damages unless he violated a "clearly established" legal standard. When Attorney General Mitchell authorized the wiretaps at issue in this case, it was unclear whether the law required a warrant for national security wiretaps. The Supreme Court ruled that the Attorney General does not have absolute immunity. However, because the acts giving rise to the litigation did not clearly violate the law, the Court found that the Attorney General was entitled to qualified immunity.

I worked on the government's briefs. With me on the briefs were Rex E. Lee, then-Solicitor General (deceased); Richard K. Willard, then-Acting Assistant Attorney General, Bristol-Myers Squibb Company, 345 Park Avenue, New York, NY 10154-0037, (212) 546-4000; Paul M. Bator, then-Deputy Solicitor General (deceased); Barbara L. Herwig, United States Department of Justice, 950 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW, Washington, DC 20530, (202) 514-5425; Gordon W. Daiger, retired, living in Bethesda, MD (current address unknown); and Larry L. Gregg, U.S. Attorney's Office, Eastern District of Virginia, 2100 Jamieson Avenue, Alexandria, VA 22314, (703) 299-3700. Appearing for the respondents were David Rudovsky, Kairys, Rudovsky, Epstein & Messing, 924 Cherry Street, Suite 500, Philadelphia, PA 19107, (215) 925-4400; and Michael Avery, Suffolk University Law School, 120 Tremont Street, Boston, MA, 02108, (617) 573-8000.

15. Cargill, Inc. and Excel Corp. v. Monfort of Colorado, Inc., 479 U.S. 104 (1986). This case involved the ability of a private party to seek injunctive relief for violation of the antitrust laws. The questions presented were, first, whether Section 16 of the Clayton Act requires a plaintiff to prove a threat of antitrust injury; and, if so, whether loss or damage due to increased competition qualifies as such an injury. On behalf of the government, we argued that mere assertion of a more competitive environment would not constitute an antitrust injury; we also suggested that accusations of future predatory pricing related to corporate mergers should be viewed with skepticism. The Supreme Court, in an opinion written by Justice Brennan, clarified that a private plaintiff seeking relief under Section 16 must show threat of injury of the type that the antitrust laws were designed to prevent. The Court went on to hold that a showing of loss or damage merely due to increased competition (for example, as here, due to proposed corporate merger) does not constitute an antitrust injury, but that predatory pricing is capable of inflicting antitrust injury.

I worked on the petition for certiorari in this case, which was filed on behalf of the United States and the Federal Trade Commission as amici curiae urging reversal. Arguing the case for the United States was Louis R. Cohen, then-Deputy Solicitor General, Wilmer Cutler Pickering Hale and Dorr, 2445 M Street, NW, Washington, DC 20037, (202) 663-6000. With me on the petition for a writ of certiorari were Charles Fried, then-Solicitor General, Harvard Law School, 1563 Massachusetts Avenue, Cambridge, MA 02138, (617) 495-4636; Douglas Ginsburg, then-Assistant Attorney General, Chambers of Chief Judge Douglas H. Ginsburg, E. Barrett Prettyman United States Courthouse, 333 Constitution Avenue, NW, Washington, DC 20001, (202) 216-7190; Lawrence G. Wallace, then-Deputy Solicitor General, retired, Chevy Chase, MD 20815; Charles F. Rule, then-Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Fried, Frank, Harris, Shriver & Jacobson, 1001 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW, Suite 800, Washington, DC 20004, (202) 639-7000; Catherine G. O'Sullivan, United States Department of Justice, 950 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW, Washington, DC 20530, (202) 514-2413; and Andrea Limmer, United States Department of Justice, 950 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW, Washington, DC 20530, (202) 514-2886.

16. Wygant v. Jackson Board of Education, 476 U.S. 267 (1986). This case involved the effect and constitutionality of race-based classifications designed to benefit minorities and the appropriate degree of scrutiny to which courts should subject such classification. The question presented was whether a school board, consistent with the Equal Protection Clause, may extend preferential protection against layoffs to some of its employees because of their race or national origin. On behalf of the government, we argued that state-sponsored quotas granting preference must satisfy strict scrutiny under the Equal Protection Clause like all other state-sponsored racial classifications. The Court, in a plurality opinion authored by Justice Powell, clarified that strict scrutiny applies regardless of whether the racial classification operates against a group that historically has not been subject to governmental discrimination. Applying this standard, the Court determined that because the provision in question did not meet the heavy burden imposed by strict scrutiny, it violated the Equal Protection Clause.

I worked on the brief in this case, which was filed on behalf of the United States as amicus curiae. With me on the brief were Charles Fried, then-Acting Solicitor General, Harvard Law School, 1563 Massachusetts Avenue, Cambridge, MA 02138, (617) 495-4636; William Bradford Reynolds, then-Assistant Attorney General, Howrey LLP, 1299 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW, Washington, DC 20004, (202) 383-6912; Charles J. Cooper, then-Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Cooper & Kirk, 1500 K Street, NW, Suite 200, Washington, DC 20005, (202) 220-9600; Walter W. Barnett, (deceased); David K. Flynn, United States Department of Justice, 950 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW, Washington, DC 20530, (202) 514-2195; and Michael Carvin, then-Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Jones Day, 51 Louisiana Avenue, NW, Washington, DC 20001, (202) 879-3939. Counsel for the petitioners was K. Preston Oade, Jr., Holme Roberts & Owen, 1700 Lincoln Street, Suite 4100, Denver, CO 80203-4541, (303) 861-7000; with him on the briefs were Constance E. Brooks, Brooks & Schluter, 999 18th Street, Suite 1605, Denver, CO 80202, (303) 297-9100; and Thomas Rasmussen (current address unknown). Counsel for the respondents was Jerome A. Susskind (deceased).

17. United States v. Abel, 469 U.S. 45 (1984). The question presented in this case was whether the prosecution could present evidence regarding a defense witness's common membership with the defendant in a particular organization in order to impeach the witness's testimony. On behalf of the government, we argued that the witness's common membership with the defendant in a prison gang whose tenets required its members to commit perjury on behalf of other members was admissible to show bias. The Supreme Court agreed with our position and, in an opinion written by then-Justice Rehnquist, unanimously held that the Federal Rules of Evidence permitted such evidence to show a witness's bias in favor of the defendant.

I assisted in the drafting the government's petition and brief. With me on the government's brief were Rex E. Lee, then-Solicitor General (deceased); Stephen S. Trott, then-Assistant Attorney General, Chambers of Senior Circuit Judge Stephen S. Trott, United States Courthouse, 550 West Fort Street, Suite 667, Boise, ID 83724, (208) 334-1612; Andrew L. Frey, then-Deputy Solicitor General, Mayer, Brown, Rowe & Maw LLP, 1909 K Street NW, Washington, DC 20006, (202) 263-3291; and Gloria C. Phares, Patterson Belknap Webb & Tyler LLP, 1133 Avenue of the Americas, New York, NY 10036, (212) 336-2686. Counsel for respondent was Yolanda Barrera Gomez, 421 E. Huntington Dr., Monrovia, CA 91016. With her on the briefs was Peter M. Horstmann (current address unknown).

18. Daily Income Fund v. Fox, 464 U.S. 523 (1984). This case involved the application of the rules of civil procedure to a shareholder derivative action. The respondent, a shareholder of a mutual fund, brought an action against the fund and its investment advisor. The respondent alleged that the fees paid by the fund to the investment advisor were unreasonable, violating the investment advisor's fiduciary duties under Section 36(b) of the Investment Company Act of 1940. The question presented was whether Rule 23.1 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure requires that an investment company security holder first make a demand on the company's board of directors before bringing an action to recover allegedly excessive fees. On behalf of the government, we argued that an investment company security holder who brings suit under Section 36(b) does not need to make such a demand prior to filing his action. The Supreme Court agreed with our position and, in an opinion written by Justice Brennan, held that Rule 23.1 does not require such a demand.

I worked on the brief in this case, which urged affirmance on behalf of the Securities and Exchange Commission as amicus curiae. With me on the brief were Rex E. Lee, then-Solicitor General (deceased); Louis F. Claiborne, then-Deputy Solicitor General (deceased); Daniel L. Goelzer, Public Company Accounting Oversight Board, 1666 K Street, NW, Washington, DC 20006, (202) 207-9100; Paul Gonson, Kirkpatrick & Lockhart Nicholson Graham LLP, 1800 Massachusetts Avenue, NW, Washington, DC 20036, (202) 778-9434; Jacob H. Stillman, Office of the General Counsel, Securities and Exchange Commission, 100 F Street, NE, Washington, DC 20549, (202) 551-5100; Richard A. Kirby, Preston Gates Ellis & Rouvelas Meeds, 1735

New York Avenue, NW, Suite 500, Washington, DC 20006, (202) 661-3730; and Myrna Siegel (current address unknown). Counsel for the petitioners was Daniel A. Pollack, Pollack & Kaminsky, 114 West 47th Street, Suite 1900, New York, NY 10036, (212) 575-4700. With him on the briefs were Frederick P. Schaffer, City University of New York – Office of the General Counsel and Vice Chancellor for Legal Affairs, 535 East 80th Street, New York, NY 10021, (212) 794-5506; George C. Seward, Seward & Kissel LLP, One Battery Park Plaza, New York, NY 10004, (212) 574-1200; and Anthony R. Mansfield (deceased). Counsel for the respondent was Richard M. Meyer, Milberg Weiss Bershad & Schulman LLP, One Pennsylvania Plaza, 49th Floor, New York, NY 10119, (212) 946-9457.

19. FTC v. Grolier, Inc., 462 U.S. 19 (1983). This case involved the Freedom of Information Act's work-product exemption. The question presented was to what extent, if at all, the work product exemption applies when the litigation for which the requested documents were generated has been terminated. On behalf of the Federal Trade Commission, we argued that the work product remains privileged because disclosure, regardless of timing, would undermine the proper function of the adversarial process in ways that the exemption was designed to prevent. The Supreme Court agreed with our position and, in an opinion written by Justice White, held that under the Freedom of Information Act, attorney work product is exempt from required disclosure without regard to the status of the litigation for which it was prepared.

I assisted in the drafting the government's brief on behalf of the Federal Trade Commission as petitioner. With me on the government's brief were Kenneth S. Geller, then-Deputy Solicitor General, Mayer, Brown, Rowe & Maw LLP, 1909 K Street NW, Washington, DC 20006, (202) 263-3225; J. Paul McGrath, then-Assistant Attorney General (American Standard, One Centennial Avenue, P.O. Box 6820, Piscataway, N.J. 08855); Leonard Schaitman, United States Department of Justice, 950 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW, Washington, DC 20530, (202) 514-3441. Counsel for the respondent was Daniel S. Mason, Zelle, Hofmann, Voelbel, Mason & Gette LLP, 44 Montgomery Street, Suite 3400, San Francisco, CA 94104, (415) 693-0700, and with him on the brief were Frederick P. Furth, The Furth Firm LLP, 225 Bush Street, 15th Floor, San Francisco, California 94104, (415) 433-2070; Michael P. Lehmann, The Furth Firm LLP, 225 Bush Street, 15th Floor, San Francisco, California 94104, (415) 433-2070; and Richard M. Clark, Howard & Howard Attorneys, P.C., Comerica Building, 151 South Rose Street, Suite 800, Kalamazoo, MI 49007, (269) 382-8772.

20. Tibbs v. Florida, 457 U.S. 31 (1982). This case presented the question whether the Double Jeopardy Clause precludes re prosecution when a conviction is reversed on appeal not because the evidence was legally insufficient but because the verdict was contrary to the weight of the evidence. We argued for the government that the Double Jeopardy Clause does not bar re prosecution in this situation for two reasons. First, unlike the reversal of a conviction for legally insufficient evidence, reversal based on the weight of evidence does not establish that an acquittal should have been granted at trial. Re prosecuting a defendant whose initial conviction was not supported by the weight of the evidence therefore does not trigger the same double-jeopardy concerns. Second, barring re prosecution after reversal for evidentiary weight would usurp the jury's authority as trier of fact. The Supreme Court, in an opinion by Justice O'Connor, held after examining the policies underlying the Double Jeopardy Clause that a reversal based on weight rather than the sufficiency of the evidence allows a new prosecution.

I worked on the brief in this case, which was filed on behalf of the United States as amicus curiae urging affirmance. With me on the brief were Rex E. Lee, then-Solicitor General (deceased); D. Lowell Jensen, then-Assistant Attorney General, Chambers of Senior District Judge D. Lowell Jensen, 1301 Clay Street, Oakland, CA 94612, (510) 637-3540; and John Fichter De Pue, United States Department of Justice, 950 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW, Washington, DC, (202) 305-2335. Counsel for petitioner was Louis R. Beller 900 Euclid Avenue #14, Miami Beach, FL 33139. Counsel for respondent was Michael A. Palecki, then-Assistant Attorney General of Florida, 6194 Verdura Way, Tallahassee, FL 32311, (850) 877-8689. With him on the briefs were Jim Smith, then-Attorney General of Florida, 403 E. Park Avenue, Tallahassee, FL 32301 (850) 577-0444; and Deborah A. Osmond Frankel, then-Assistant Attorney General of Florida, 51305 Pointe Dr., Inverness, FL 34450.

21. Cleavinger v. Saxner, 474 U.S. 193 (1985). This case presented the question whether members of a prison disciplinary committee are entitled to absolute immunity from personal damages liability for actions taken while adjudicating cases in which inmates are charged with rules infractions. On behalf of the United States, we argued that absolute immunity should obtain because members of prison disciplinary committees, like grand jurors and administrative law judges, serve in a quasi-judicial capacity. Given the adjudicative nature of their work, they should be entitled to absolute immunity from personal damages liability. In addition, we argued that members of prison disciplinary committees play a vital role in maintaining prison security. Subjecting such officers to damages liability would compromise both their willingness to serve in such a capacity and their ability to engage in independent decisionmaking. Thus, institutional order and safety would be jeopardized if committee members were not afforded complete immunity. The Supreme Court rejected our arguments in an opinion by Justice Blackmun. The Court analogized service on a prison committee to service on a school board where members were entitled to only qualified immunity

I participated in drafting the brief for the United States. Also on the brief were Rex E. Lee, then-Solicitor General (deceased); Kenneth S. Geller, then-Deputy Solicitor General, Mayer, Brown, Rowe & Maw LLP, 1909 K Street, NW, Washington, DC 20006-1101, (202) 263-3000; The Honorable Stephen Trott, then-Assistant Attorney General, U.S. Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit, 550 West First Street, Boise, ID 83724, (208) 334-1612; Gloria C. Phares, Patterson Belknap Webb & Tyler LLP, 1133 Avenue of the Americas, New York, NY 10036, (212) 336-2686. Appearing for the respondents were G. Flint Taylor, People's Law Office, 1180 North Milwaukee, Chicago, IL 60622, (773) 235-0070; and Charles W. Hoffman, Office of the State Appellate Defender, 400 West Monroe, Suite 202, P.O. Box 5240, Springfield, IL 62705, (217) 782-7203.

22. Heckler v. Chaney, 470 U.S. 821 (1985). This case arose from a challenge by death row inmates to the use of certain drugs in executions by lethal injection. The inmates claimed that the use of the drugs for this purpose violated the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act (FDCA) and that the Food and Drug Administration was required to enforce their claim. At issue was whether an administrative agency's decision not to take enforcement action was subject to judicial review under the Administrative Procedure Act (APA).

On behalf of the Secretary of Health and Human Services, we argued that the APA did not authorize judicial review in these circumstances. The Supreme Court, in an opinion by then-Justice Rehnquist, unanimously agreed with the government's position and reversed a decision of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit. The Court held that judicial review is inappropriate if a statute does not offer any meaningful standard against which to judge the agency's action. In such cases, the enforcement of the statute is committed to agency discretion as a matter of law. Moreover, an agency's decision not to take action is presumed immune from judicial review under the APA, a presumption not overcome by the enforcement provisions of the FDCA.

I participated in drafting both the petition for certiorari and the merits briefs submitted for the United States, but did not argue the case. With me on the briefs were Rex E. Lee, then Solicitor-General (deceased); Richard K. Willard, then-Acting Assistant Attorney General, The Gillette Company, Prudential Tower Building, 39th Floor, Boston, MA 02199, (617) 421-7863; Kenneth S. Geller, then-Deputy Solicitor General, Mayer, Brown, Rowe & Maw LLP, 1909 K Street, NW, Washington, DC 20006-1101, (202) 263-3000; Leonard Schaitman, United States Department of Justice, 950 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW, Washington, DC 20530, (202) 514-2000; John M. Rogers, then-Department of Justice attorney, United States Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit, Community Trust Bank Building, 100 East Vine Street, Suite 400, Lexington, KY 40507, (859) 233-2680; Thomas Scarlett, then-Chief Counsel, Food and Drug Administration, Hyman, Phelps & McNamara, 700 Thirteenth Street, NW, Suite 1200, Washington, DC 20005, (202) 737-5600; Michael P. Peskoe, then-Associate Chief Counsel, Food and Drug Administration, Edwards, Angel, Palmer & Dodge, 111 Huntington Avenue, Boston, MA 02199-7613, (617) 239-0240. Counsel for the respondent were Steven M. Kristovich, Munger Tolles & Olson, 355 South Grand Avenue, 35th Floor, Los Angeles, CA 90071-1560 (213) 683-9251; David E. Kendall, Williams & Connolly LLP, 725 Twelfth Street, NW, Washington, DC 20005, (202) 434-5145; Julius LeVonne Chambers, Ferguson, Stein, Chambers, Gresham & Sumter, 741 Kenilworth Avenue, Suite 300, Charlotte, NC 28204-2828, (704) 375-8461; James M. Nabrit III, NAACP Legal Defense & Educ. Fund, Inc, 99 Hudson Street, Suite 1600, New York, NY 10013, (212) 965-2200; John Charles Boger, University of North Carolina School of Law, Van Hecke-Wettach Hall, 100 Ridge Road, Chapel Hill, NC 27599-3380, (919) 843-9288; James S. Liebman, Columbia Law School, Jerome Greene Hall, Rm. 846, Mailbox B-16, New York NY 10027, (212) 854-3423; and Anthony G. Amsterdam, New York University School of Law, 245 Sullivan Street, New York, NY 10012, (212) 998-6632.

23. SEC v. O'Brien, 467 U.S. 735 (1984). This case presented the issue whether the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) must notify a target of a non-public investigation when the SEC issues an administrative subpoena in that investigation to a third party. On behalf of the SEC, we argued that such notification was not required. No constitutional provision, statute, rule, or prior case, we noted, demanded that notification be provided. Moreover, imposition of a new notice requirement would cause law enforcement serious problems that Congress could not have intended. The Supreme Court, in an opinion by Justice Marshall, unanimously agreed and held that neither the Fourth, Fifth, nor Sixth Amendment was implicated by an administrative investigation. It also concluded that the statutes administered by the SEC did not require the agency to notify targets upon issuance of an administrative subpoena.

I worked on the government's briefs, along with Rex E. Lee, then-Solicitor General (deceased); Kenneth S. Geller, then Deputy Solicitor General, Mayer, Brown, Rowe & Maw LLP, 1909 K Street, NW, Washington, DC 20006, (202) 263-3000; Daniel L. Goelzer, Public Company Accounting Oversight Board, 1666 K Street, NW, Washington, DC 20006, (202) 207-9100; Paul Gonson, Kirkpatrick & Lockhart Nicholson Graham LLP, 1800 Massachusetts Avenue, NW, Washington, DC 20036, (202) 778-9434; Linda Feinberg, Superior Court Judge, 9 Roseberry Ct., Lawrenceville, NJ 08648; Larry Lavoie, General Counsel, First Investors Corporation, 95 Wall Street, New York, NY 10005; Harry J. Weiss, Wilmer Cutler Pickering Hale & Dorr, LLP, 2445 M Street, NW, Washington, DC 20037, (202) 663-6000; and Elizabeth A. Spurlock (current address unknown). Counsel for the respondent was William D. Symmes, Witherspoon, Kelley, Davenport & Toole, 1100 U.S. Bank Building, 422 West Riverside, Spokane, WA 99201, (509) 624-5265.

24. Dickerson v. New Banner Institute, 460 U.S. 103 (1983). The question presented in this case was whether firearms disabilities imposed by provisions of the Gun Control Act apply to a person who was convicted of a state offense punishable by imprisonment for a term exceeding one year but whose conviction was expunged. On behalf of the Director of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, we argued that statutorily prescribed disabilities are not automatically removed by expunction of the conviction under a state statute. The text of the statute applies to all persons "convicted" of certain crimes, regardless of whether the conviction is subsequently expunged. Other provisions of the Act and related federal statutes reinforce this conclusion and show that Congress carefully distinguished between present status and the occurrence of past events.

The Supreme Court agreed in an opinion by Justice Blackmun. The Court accepted our argument that an expunction under state law does not alter the effect of a disabling conviction for purposes of the federal statute, finding that the interpretation was supported not just by statutory text but by the purpose of Title IV, which was intended to curb crime by keeping firearms out of the hands of those not legally entitled to possess them.

I participated in drafting the government's briefs. With me on the briefs were Rex E. Lee, then-Solicitor General (deceased); Kenneth S. Geller, then-Deputy Solicitor General, Mayer, Brown, Rowe & Maw, 1909 K Street, NW, Washington, DC 20006, (202) 263-3000; J. Paul McGrath, then-Assistant Attorney General, American Standard, One Centennial Avenue, P.O. Box 6820, Piscataway, NJ 08855-6820, (732) 980-6000; William Kanter, United States Department of Justice, 950 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW, Washington, DC 20530, (202) 514-4575; and Douglas Letter, United States Department of Justice, 950 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW, Washington, DC 20530, (202) 514-3602. Counsel for the respondent was Lewis C. Lanier, Lanier Law Firm, 450 Summers Avenue, Orangeburg, SC 29115, (803) 268-9800; with him on the brief was Jack R. McGuinn, (current address unknown).

25. Local Number 93, International Association of Firefighters, AFL-CIO, C.L.C. v. City of Cleveland, 478 U.S. 501 (1986). This case concerned whether a federal district court may, consistent with Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, adopt and implement a consent decree that provides race-based preferences to individuals not shown to have been victims of the employer's discrimination. The United States submitted an amicus brief arguing that such a consent judgment was unlawful for two reasons: first, because it violated the remedial principle expressed in Section 706(g) of Title VII, which bars the adoption of race-based quotas; and, second, because the consent judgment was entered over the objection of a union that intervened as of right and whose members were adversely affected.

The Supreme Court, in an opinion by Justice Brennan, rejected our position and held that Title VII allows entry of a consent decree that may benefit individuals who were not victims of discriminatory practices. The majority reasoned that voluntary race-conscious relief is not rendered impermissible because it is incorporated into a consent decree, regardless of whether a court would be precluded from imposing race-conscious relief after trial. The Court concluded that a consent decree may provide broader relief than the court itself could have awarded after trial. The Court also held that the lack of consent by the union did not invalidate the consent decree as one party cannot prevent the other parties from resolving their disputes with each other by withholding consent.

I participated in drafting the government's amicus brief urging reversal. William Bradford Reynolds, then-Assistant Attorney General, Howrey LLP, 1299 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW, Washington, DC 20004-2402, (202) 383-6912, argued the case for the United States. With me on the brief were Charles Fried, then-Solicitor General, Harvard Law School, 1563 Massachusetts Avenue, Cambridge, MA 02138, (617) 495-4636; Carolyn B. Kuhl, then-Assistant Attorney General, the Chambers of Judge Carolyn B. Kuhl, Superior Court of California, 111 North Hill Street, Los Angeles, CA 90012, (213) 974-5707; Michael Carvin, then-Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Jones Day, 51 Louisiana Avenue, NW, Washington, DC 20001-2113, (202) 879-3939; Walter W. Barnett (deceased); and David K. Flynn, United States Department of Justice, 950 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW, Washington, DC 20530, (202) 514-2195. Petitioner Local Number 93 was represented by William L. Summers, Summers & Vargas Co., LPA, 23240 Chagrin Boulevard, Suite 525, Cleveland, OH 44122, (216) 591-0727. Respondent Vanguard of Cleveland was represented by Edward R. Stege, Jr., Stege & Michelson Co., LPA, 200 Public Square, Suite 3220, Cleveland, OH 44114, (216) 348-0700. Respondents City of Cleveland, et al., were represented by John D. Maddox (current address unknown).

26. Local 28 of the Sheet Metal Workers' Intel Ass'n v. E.E.O.C., 478 U.S. 421 (1986). This case arose out of a Title VII lawsuit brought by the United States against Local 28 to enjoin a pattern of discrimination against nonwhites in union membership. After finding a violation, the district court entered a remedial order requiring, among other things, that the union take steps to recruit more nonwhite members, and to achieve a 29.23% nonwhite membership goal. After the Union failed to comply, the district court held it in civil contempt. The Union's challenge to that contempt order led to this appeal. The appeal implicated the potential limitations on the remedies allowed pursuant to Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964. The principal question presented was whether the remedial provision of Title VII allows a district court to order race-based relief that may benefit persons who are not identified victims of unlawful discrimination.

On behalf of the EEOC, our principal argument was that the set-percentage membership goal was a race-based quota, and therefore improper. We based our analysis on the Supreme Court's prior decision in Firefighters Local Union No. 1784 v. Stotts, 457 U.S. 561 (1984), which held that Section 706(g) of Title VII prohibits the award of relief such as union membership to individuals who were never the actual victims of illegal discrimination. Because there was no showing that the beneficiaries of the membership quota had been victimized by the unions, we argued that the remedy was unconstitutional. The Supreme Court, in an opinion by Justice Brennan, disagreed. Six justices agreed that a district court may, in appropriate circumstances, order relief for a class, which may include individuals who are not the actual victims of discrimination as a remedy for violations of Title VII. In addition, five justices determined that the membership goal required of the Union in this case did not violate either Title VII or the Constitution.

I participated in drafting the government's brief on behalf of respondent the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission. Appearing with me on the government's brief were Charles Fried, then-Solicitor General, Harvard Law School, 1563 Massachusetts Avenue, Cambridge, MA 02138, (617) 495-4636; William Bradford Reynolds, then-Assistant Attorney General, Howrey LLP, 1299 Pennsylvania Avenue NW, Washington, DC 20004, (202) 383-6912; The Honorable Carolyn B. Kuhl, then-Assistant Attorney General, Superior Court of California, 111 North Hill Street, Los Angeles, CA 90012, (213) 974-5707; Brian K. Landsberg, McGeorge School of Law, 3200 5th Avenue, Sacramento, CA 95817, (916) 739-7101; Dennis J. Dimsey, United States Department of Justice, 950 Pennsylvania Avenue NW, Washington, DC 20530, (202) 514-2195; David K. Flynn, United States Department of Justice, 950 Pennsylvania Avenue NW, Washington, DC 20530, (202) 514-2195; and Johnny J. Butler, then-Acting General Counsel of Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, Booth & Tucker, LLP, 1617 JFK Boulevard, Suite 1700, Philadelphia, PA 19103, (215) 875-0609. Appearing for respondent the New York State Division of Human Rights were O. Peter Sherwood, then-Deputy Solicitor General of New York, Manatt, Phelps & Phillips, LLP, 7 Times Square, New York, NY 10036, (212) 830-7288; Robert Abrams, then-Attorney General of New York, Stroock & Stroock & Lavan LLP, 180 Maiden Lane, New York, NY 10038, (212) 806-5400; Robert Hermann, then-Solicitor General of New York, Thacher Proffitt & Wood LLP, 2 World Financial Center, New York, NY 10281, (212) 912-7400; Lawrence S. Kahn, New York City Law Department, 100 Church Street, New York, NY 10007, (212) 788-0600; Colvin W. Grannum, Bedford Stuyvesant Restoration Corporation, 1360 Fulton Street, Brooklyn, NY 11216, (718) 638-5705; Jane Levine, United States Attorney's Office for the Southern District of New York, 1 Street Andrews Plaza, New York, NY 10007, (212) 637-2200; and Martha J. Olson, Law Office of Martha Olson, 317 Madison Ave, Suite 1708, New York, NY 10017, (212) 867-8455. Appearing for respondent the City of New York were Frederick A. O. Schwarz, Jr., Cravath, Swaine & Moore LLP, Worldwide Plaza, 825 Eighth Avenue, New York, NY 10019, (212) 474-1000; Leonard Koerner, New York City Law Department, 100 Church Street, New York, NY 10007, (212) 788-1010; Stephen J. McGrath, New York City Law Department, 100 Church Street, New York, NY 10007, (212) 788-1056; Lorna B. Goodman, Office of the Nassau County Attorney, 1 West Street, Mineola, NY 11501, (516) 571-3056; and Lin B. Saberski, (current address unknown). Appearing for the petitioners were Martin R. Gold, Sonnenschein Nath & Rosenthal LLP, 1221 Avenue of the Americas, New York, NY 10020, (212) 768-6700; Robert P. Mulvey, Sonnenschein Nath & Rosenthal LLP, 1221 Avenue of the Americas, New York, NY 10020, (212) 768-6700; and William Rothberg, Sheet Metal & Air Conditioning Contractors Association of New York City, Inc., 16 Court Street, Brooklyn, NY 11241, (212) 624-2200.

27. Exxon Corporation v. Hunt, 475 U.S. 355 (1986). This case presented the question whether a particular provision of CERCLA, the federal act that established Superfund, preempted the previously enacted New Jersey Spill Act. On behalf of the United States, we argued in an amicus brief that the Spill Act was partially preempted. Whereas the excise tax imposed by the Spill Act could be used to compensate third parties for certain economic losses sustained as a result of hazardous substance releases, the Superfund statute provided: “Except as provided in this chapter, no person may be required to contribute to any fund, the purpose of which is to pay compensation for claims for any costs of response or damages or claims which may be compensated under this subchapter.” We argued that the phrase “compensation for claims” should be given its customary, literal meaning, and thus was not a synonym for broader terms such as payments or expenditures.

The Supreme Court agreed in an opinion by Justice Marshall, holding that the New Jersey Spill Act was preempted in part. The Court concluded that Congress intended to ban state funds to the extent that they covered Superfund-eligible expenses. To the extent that the New Jersey fund had purposes that went beyond the scope of CERCLA, it was not preempted by federal law.

I was responsible in part for drafting the government’s amicus brief. Also on the brief were: Rex E. Lee, then-Solicitor General (deceased); F. Henry Habicht II, then-Assistant Attorney General, Safety-Kleen Corporation, 2900 South Quincy Street, Suite 410, Arlington, VA 22206, (703) 379-2713; Louis F. Claiborne, then-Deputy Solicitor General, (deceased); Robert L. Klarquist, (current address unknown); and Dirk D. Snel, (deceased). Appearing for the petitioner were Daniel M. Gribbon, (deceased); John J. Carlin, Jr., Carlin & Ward, P.C., 25A Vreeland Road, Florham Park, NJ 07932, (973) 377-3350; and E. Edward Bruce, Covington & Burling, 1201 Pennsylvania Avenue NW, Washington, DC 20004, (202) 662-6000. Appearing for the respondent were the Honorable Mary C. Jacobson, then-Deputy Attorney General of New Jersey, Mercer County Civil Courts, 175 South Broad Street, Trenton, NJ 08650, (609) 571-4861; The Honorable Irwin I. Kimmelman, then-Attorney General of New Jersey, Superior Court of New Jersey, 155 Morris Avenue, Springfield, NJ 08625, (609) 292-4822; and Michael R. Cole, DeCotiis, FitzPatrick, Cole & Wisler, LLP, 500 Frank W. Burr Boulevard, Teaneck, NJ 07666, (201) 928-1100.

28. Young v. Community Nutrition Inst., 476 U.S. 974 (1986). The question presented in this case was whether the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit correctly concluded that the Food and Drug Administration’s interpretation of a particular provision of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act was in conflict with the plain language of that provision. The respondents had alleged that the Act required the FDA to set a tolerance level for a poisonous substance, aflatoxin, before allowing interstate shipment of food containing the substance. On behalf of the FDA, we argued that the agency’s construction of the relevant provision – which did not require it to set a tolerance level – was fully consistent with the overall structure and legislative history of the Act, with the role that the provision plays in the enforcement process, and with both the Supreme Court’s and Congress’s current understanding. The Supreme Court, in an opinion authored by Justice O’Connor, agreed. The analysis began with the framework set out by the Supreme Court in Chevron U.S.A. Inc. v. Natural Resources Defense Council, Inc., 467 U.S. 837 (1984), determining as an initial matter that Congress had not unambiguously expressed its intent through the plain language of the statute. Because the view of an agency charged with administering an ambiguous statute is entitled to considerable deference from the courts, the Supreme Court concluded that the FDA's interpretation was "sufficiently rational" to preclude a court from substituting its own judgment for that of the FDA.

I worked on the government's brief in this matter. Appearing with me on the brief were Charles Fried, then-Solicitor General, Harvard Law School, 1563 Massachusetts Avenue, Cambridge, MA 02138, (617) 495-4636; Richard K. Willard, then-Acting Assistant Attorney General, Bristol-Myers Squibb Company, 345 Park Avenue, New York, NY 10154-0037, (212) 546-4000; Kenneth S. Geller, then-Deputy Solicitor General, Mayer, Brown, Rowe & Maw LLP, 1909 K Street NW, Washington, DC 20006, (202) 263-3225; Paul J. Larkin, Jr., then-Assistant to the Solicitor General, Verizon Communications, 1515 North Courthouse Road, Arlington, VA 22201, (703) 351-3845; Leonard Schaitman, United States Department of Justice, 950 Pennsylvania Avenue NW, Washington, DC 20530, (202) 514-3441; Marleigh D. Dover, United States Department of Justice, 950 Pennsylvania Avenue NW, Washington, DC 20530, (202) 514-3511; Thomas Scarlett, then-Chief Counsel, Food and Drug Administration, Hyman, Phelps & McNamara, P.C., 700 Thirteenth Street NW, Suite 1200, Washington, DC 20005, (202) 737-5600; and Michael M. Landa, then-Associate Chief Counsel for Enforcement Food and Drug Administration, Food and Drug Administration, 5600 Fishers Lane, Rockville, MD 20857, (301) 827-1137. Appearing for the respondent were William B. Schultz, Zuckerman Spaeder LLP, 1800 M Street NW, Suite 1000, Washington, DC 20036, (202) 778-1800; Alan B. Morrison, Public Citizen Litigation Group, 1600 20th Street NW, Washington, DC 20009, (202) 588-1000; and Katherine A. Meyer, Meyer & Glitzenstein, 1601 Connecticut Avenue NW, Suite 700, Washington, DC 20009, (202) 588-5206.

29. United States v. Morton, 467 U.S. 822 (1984). The question presented in this case was whether the United States is liable for sums withheld from the pay of one of its employees because it complied with a writ of garnishment issued by a court without personal jurisdiction over the employee. On behalf of the United States, we argued that the government was not liable for three reasons: (1) the federal garnishment statute, 42 U.S.C. § 659(f), expressly insulates the government from liability for a payment made pursuant to proper legal process; (2) regulations implementing the statute do not allow any discretion to federal disbursing officers on the ground of latent jurisdictional defects; and (3) governmental liability would be contrary to congressional intent. In a unanimous opinion by Justice Stevens, the Court held that the government could not be held liable for honoring a writ of garnishment that was "regular on its face" and that had been issued by a court with subject-matter jurisdiction.

I worked on the petition for certiorari on behalf of the United States, but did not assist with the brief on the merits. Michael W. McConnell, then-Assistant to the Solicitor General, Chambers of Circuit Judge Michael W. McConnell, 125 South State Street, Suite 5402, Salt Lake City, UT 84138, (801) 524-5145, argued for the United States. Appearing on the briefs were Rex E. Lee, then-Solicitor General (deceased); Richard K. Willard, then-Acting Assistant Attorney General, Bristol-Myers Squibb Company, 345 Park Avenue, New York, NY 10154-0037, (212) 546-4000; Kenneth S. Geller, then-Deputy Solicitor General, Mayer, Brown, Rowe & Maw LLP, 1909 K Street, NW, Washington, DC 20006-1101, (202) 263-3000; Leonard Schaitman, United States Department of Justice, 950 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW, Washington, DC 20530, (202) 514-3441; Wendy M. Keats, United States Department of Justice, 950 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW, Washington, DC 20530, (202) 514-0265; and Mary S. Mitchelson, United States Department of Education, 400 Maryland Avenue, SW, Washington, DC 20202-1500, (202) 245-6987. Counsel for the respondent was Kaletah N. Carroll (deceased).

30. F.C.C. v. ITT World Communications, Inc., 466 U.S. 463 (1984). The primary question presented in this case was whether the Government in the Sunshine Act, 5 U.S.C. § 552(b), mandating that federal agencies hold their meetings in public, applies to international conferences attended by members of the Federal Communications Commission.

On behalf of the FCC, we argued that both the language and the legislative history of the Act support the view that the Act's open meeting rules should apply only to formal sessions where agency members with decisionmaking power deliberate over concrete proposals for action. The Supreme Court unanimously agreed in an opinion by Justice Powell, holding that the statute, according to its language, could not apply unless the FCC was deliberating upon matters within its formally delegated authority to take official action. Congress, the Court concluded, did not contemplate the broad restraint on agency processes that would necessarily result from applying the Act's open meeting rules to informal meetings, particularly those not run by the agency itself.

I worked on the petition for certiorari, which was filed on behalf of the Federal Communications Commission, but did not assist with the brief on the merits. Albert G. Lauber, Jr., then-Assistant to the Solicitor General, Caplin & Drysdale, Chartered, One Thomas Circle, NW, Washington, DC 20005, (202) 862-5000, argued the case for the United States. Appearing with him on the briefs were Rex E. Lee, then-Solicitor General (deceased); Richard K. Willard, then-Acting Assistant Attorney General, Bristol-Myers Squibb Company, 345 Park Avenue, New York, NY 10154-0037, (212) 546-4000; Kenneth S. Geller, then-Deputy Solicitor General, Mayer, Brown, Rowe & Maw LLP, 1909 K Street, NW, Washington, DC 20006-1101, (202) 263-3000; Bruce E. Fein, then-General Counsel, Federal Communications Commission, The Lichfield Group, 910 17th Street, NW, Suite 800, Washington, DC 20006, (202) 775-1787; Daniel M. Armstrong, Associate General Counsel, Federal Communications Commission, 445 12th Street, SW, Washington, DC 20554, (202) 418-1740; Leonard Schaitman, United States Department of Justice, 950 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW, Washington, DC 20530, (202) 514-3441; Frank A. Rosenfeld, (current address unknown); and C. Grey Pash, Jr., Federal Communications Commission, 445 12th Street, SW, Washington, DC 20554, (202) 418-1751. Counsel for respondents was Grant S. Lewis (deceased).

31. United States Dept. of Justice v. Falkowski, (83-2034), April 1, 1985, 471 U.S. 1001 (1985). This case concerned the proper scope of judicial review of agency decisionmaking. On behalf of the United States, we sought Supreme Court review of two questions: first, whether the Administrative Procedure Act authorized judicial review of the Department of Justice's decision not to provide legal representation for an employee sued in her individual capacity for actions taken while on the job; and second, if so, whether the court below applied the proper scope of review in overturning the Department's decision. The Supreme Court granted, vacated, and remanded the case for further consideration in light of its decision in Heckler v. Chaney, 470 U.S. 821 (1985).

I worked on the government's petition. With me on the petition were Rex E. Lee, then-Solicitor General (deceased); Richard K. Willard, then-Acting Assistant Attorney General, Bristol-Myers Squibb Company, 345 Park Avenue, New York, NY 10154, (212) 546-4000; and Paul M. Bator, then-Deputy Solicitor General (deceased).

32. United States v. Doe, (84-0823), April 1, 1985, 471 U.S. 1001 (1986). This case concerned the scope of the Fifth Amendment privilege against self-incrimination with respect to the compelled production of personal documents pursuant to grand jury subpoena. While the Supreme Court granted certiorari, during the briefing period the respondent waived his privilege, voluntarily provided the subpoenaed documents, and entered into a plea agreement with the government. At the request of all the parties, the Supreme Court vacated the lower court decisions, and remanded the case to be dismissed as moot.

I was partially responsible for drafting the government's petition. With me on the petition was Rex E. Lee, then-Solicitor General (deceased).

33. Moore v. Kenyatta (84-1445), March 12, 1985, 471 U.S. 1066 (1985). This case involved a civil claim alleging that defendant police officers committed state torts and violated plaintiff's federal constitutional rights. The Court of Appeals held that the police officers were not entitled to absolute immunity and that the denial of qualified immunity, unlike the denial of absolute immunity, was not immediately appealable under the collateral order doctrine. Although the Supreme Court denied cert in this case, it accepted our argument that a denial of qualified immunity is subject to interlocutory review in Mitchell v. Forsyth, 472 U.S. 511 (1985).

I was partially responsible for drafting the government's petition. With me on the petition were Rex E. Lee, then-Solicitor General (deceased); Richard K. Willard, then-Acting Assistant Attorney General, Bristol-Myers Squibb Company, 345 Park Avenue, New York, NY 10154, (212) 546-4000; Barbara Herwig, United States Department of Justice, 950 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW, Washington, DC 20004, (202) 514-1201; and Freddi Lipstein (current address unknown).

34. Adams v. Jasinki (84-1324), February 19, 1985, 473 U.S. 901 (1985). This case presented the question whether an order denying a motion to dismiss a complaint on the basis of qualified immunity may be appealed under the collateral order doctrine. On behalf of the United States, we submitted a petition for certiorari arguing that the district court's rejection of the defendant's immunity defense was immediately appealable. The Supreme Court granted, vacated, and remanded for further consideration in light of Mitchell v. Forsyth, 472 U.S. 511 (1985), which had accepted the government's contention that a district court's denial of qualified immunity is an appealable final decision.

I was partially responsible for drafting the government's petition. With me on the petition were Rex E. Lee, then-Solicitor General (deceased); Richard K. Willard, then-Acting Assistant Attorney General, Bristol-Myers Squibb Company, 345 Park Avenue, New York, NY 10154, (212) 546-4000; Kenneth S. Geller, then-Deputy Solicitor General, Mayer, Brown, Rowe & Maw, 1909 K Street, NW, Washington, DC 20006-1101, (202) 263-3225; Barbara L. Herwig, United States Department of Justice, 950 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW, Washington, DC 20004, (202) 514-1201; and William G. Cole, United States Department of Justice, 950 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW, Washington, DC 20004, (202) 514-1201.

16. Litigation: Describe the ten most significant litigated matters which you personally handled. Give the citations if the cases were reported, and the docket number and date if unreported. Give a capsule summary of the substance of each case, identifying the party or parties who you represented, and describing in detail the nature of your participation in the litigation and the final disposition of the case. Also state as to each case:

- a. the date of representation;
- b. the name of the court and the name of the judge or judges before whom the case was litigated; and
- c. the individual name, addresses, and telephone numbers of co-counsel and of principal counsel for each of the other parties.

If any of these cases has already been described in 15.f. above, it need not be repeated here.

I have described the following cases in response to question 15.f. Please see the response to 15.f. for the full description of the case.

1. Oregon v. Kennedy, 456 U.S. 667 (1982)
2. Russello v. United States, 464 U.S. 16 (1983)
3. United States v. Villamonte-Marquez, 462 U.S. 579 (1983)
4. United States v. Weber Aircraft Corp., 465 U.S. 792 (1983)
5. United States v. Doe, 465 U.S. 605 (1984)
6. Community Television of Southern California v. Gottfried, 459 U.S. 498 (1983)
7. Federal Communications Commission v. League of Women Voters of California, 468 U.S. 364 (1984)
8. Chemical Manufacturers Association v. Natural Resources Defense Council, 470 U.S. 116 (1985)
9. Atkins v. Parker, 472 U.S. 115 (1985)

The following case is not described in the response to 15.f.

10. United States v. Kikumura, 918 F.2d 1084 (3d Cir. 1990). See also United States v. Kikumura, 698 F. Supp. 546 (D.N.J. 1988), and United States v. Kikumura, 706 F. Supp. 331 (D.N.J. 1989). This was a prosecution of a suspected member of a terrorist group who assembled bombs for use in carrying out a terrorist attack in this country. The evidence showed that the defendant entered the United States using a forged passport and then traveled around the country acquiring the components used in making the bombs. After completing the construction of the bombs, he was apprehended in New Jersey. I was the United States Attorney for the District of New Jersey, and together with an Assistant United States Attorney, I handled the extensive pretrial motions and prepared the prosecution of the case. On the morning of the scheduled trial, the defendant stipulated to the facts alleged in the indictment and was convicted in a bench trial. I then was principally responsible for presenting the government's case at the sentencing hearing at which we successfully argued for a substantial upward departure from the low sentence prescribed by the Sentencing Guidelines. I was principally responsible for briefing the appeal, and I presented the oral argument in the Third Circuit on behalf of the government. The Third Circuit affirmed the conviction and sustained most of the upward departures imposed by the district court while remanding the case for resentencing. Specifically, the court found that under the circumstances in this case, an upward departure to 360 months was unreasonable, but an upward departure to 262 months would not be unreasonable.

I tried the matter before United States District Court Judge Alfred J. Lechner and argued the case for the United States in the Third Circuit Court of Appeals before Judges Becker, Cowen, and Rosenn. Appearing with me as co-counsel was John P. Lacey, then-Assistant United States Attorney, Connell Foley LLP, 85 Livingston Avenue, Roseland, NJ 07068, (973) 535-0500. Appearing for the defendant were William M. Kuntsler (deceased); and Ronald L. Kuby, Kuby & Perez LLP, 119 West 23rd Street, Suite 900, New York, NY 10011, (212) 529-0223.

17. Citations: From your time as a judge, please provide:

- a. citations for all opinions you have written (including concurrences and dissents);
- b. citations to all cases in which you were a panel member;
- c. a list of cases in which appeal or certiorari has been requested or granted;
- d. a list of all appellate opinions where your decision was reversed or where your judgment was affirmed;
- e. a list of and copies of all your unpublished opinions.

See attached appendix for responses to questions 17.a. through 17.e.

18. Legal Activities: Describe the most significant legal activities you have pursued, including significant litigation which did not progress to trial or legal matters that did not involve litigation. Describe fully the nature of your participation in these activities. Please list any client(s) or organization(s) for whom you performed lobbying activities and describe these activities in detail.

During most of my legal career, my work has related exclusively or almost exclusively to litigation. From late 1985 until early 1987, however, while serving as a Deputy Assistant Attorney General in the Office of Legal Counsel, I assisted in providing advice to the Attorney General and to components of the Executive Branch on legal issues that arose outside the context of litigation. I was one of three Deputies in the office at that time. One of the Deputies concentrated on matters involving foreign relations and international law, and the other was responsible for, among other things, reviewing proposed legislation for possible constitutional problems. I was responsible for a broad range of matters not falling into either of the above categories. At times, I responded to oral requests for expedited advice, but most of the work involved written requests for an opinion on a constitutional or legal question. Some requests grew out of disputes between government agencies, and OLC, acting on behalf of the Attorney General, was responsible for providing a resolution of the dispute. For the most part, I was responsible for providing the first level of supervision and review on work done by the Attorney Advisers. A list of the publicly released OLC opinions bearing my name has been provided, and these opinions are representative of much of my work during that time.

From March 1987 until June 1990, while serving as the United States Attorney for the District of New Jersey, I supervised an office of more than 60 attorneys. Most of my work during that time related directly to court cases, but a significant portion of the work did not. Within the parameters set by Department of Justice policies, I was responsible for developing and implementing the priorities of the United States Attorney's office. This required extensive consultation with the various federal investigative agencies and coordination with the state attorney general, the New Jersey state police, and the county prosecutors. Close federal-state cooperation permitted the United States Attorney's office to address the state's full range of federal law enforcement needs. We were able to reinvigorate the unit responsible for public corruption cases and to increase the resources devoted to the prosecution of white collar crime. I also brought about closer cooperation between the United States Attorney's office and the Organized Crime Strike Force, which was then under the supervision of Washington.

Other major responsibilities not directly related to litigation included assembling a supervisory staff, supervising the hiring of numerous Assistant United States Attorneys, and working with the responsible federal investigative agencies to ensure that the most important and promising criminal investigations received the investigative and legal support that was needed.

- 19. Teaching: What courses have you taught? For each course, state the title, the institution at which you taught the course, the years in which you taught the course, and describe briefly the subject matter of the course and the major topics taught. If you have a syllabus of each course, please provide four (4) copies to the committee.

In 1999 – 2000, I taught a two-semester course entitled “Constitutional Law I” at Seton Hall Law School. I do not have a copy of the syllabus, which consisted of a list of the planned reading for each week. I used Stone, Seidman, and Tushnet, Constitutional Law (3d ed. 1996), and the class read and discussed almost the entire book.

In 2002 – 2003 and 2003 – 2004, I taught a one-semester seminar called “Terrorism and Civil Liberties” at Seton Hall Law School. Copies of the syllabus and reading list for 2003 – 2004 are attached. The syllabus and reading list for the prior year were very similar, but I am unable to locate copies.

20. Party to Civil Legal or Administrative Proceedings: State whether you, or any business of which you are or were an officer, or any partnership, trust, or other business entity with which you are or were involved, have ever been a party or otherwise involved as a party in any civil, legal, or administrative proceedings. If so, please describe in detail the nature of your participation in the litigation and the final disposition of the case. Include all proceedings in which you were a party in interest.

Lawsuits in which I was named in my official capacity:

In Grompone, et al. v. Alito, et al. (District of New Jersey, Case No. 2:02-cv-04594-WHW), I was named along with two other Third Circuit judges in a pro se civil complaint alleging civil rights violations. The action was dismissed on defendants’ motion on May 13, 2003.

In Dinorscio, et al. v. Greelish, et al. (District of New Jersey, Case No. 2:91-cv-00667-JWB), in my capacity as United States Attorney I was one of more than 20 defendants, named in a prisoner civil rights complaint. The action was dismissed on September 18, 1991.

In Watson v. Baker, et al. (District of New Jersey, Case No. 2:88-cv-02899-JFG), in my capacity as United States Attorney I was one of 10 named defendants. The action was terminated on March 13, 1990.

In Guyer v. Kunz, et al. (District of Delaware, Case No. 1:99-cv-00923-GMS), I was one of approximately 70 named defendants, including 17 other current and former Third Circuit judges, in a civil rights suit brought by a pro se frequent litigant. The district court dismissed the action and denied plaintiff’s subsequent motions. The Court of Appeals affirmed on July 29, 2002.

In Noble v. Becker, et al. (District of Delaware, Case No. 1:03-cv-00906-KAJ), I was one of nearly 100 named defendants, including dozens of current and former federal judges serving within the Third Circuit, in a pro se suit brought by the same individual who brought Guyer v. Kunz, et al., listed above. The action was dismissed as frivolous on January 15, 2004.

In Blackstone v. Becker, et al. (Eastern District of Pennsylvania, Case No. 2:94-cv-04080-JF), I was one of 17 named defendants, including five other Third Circuit judges, a district court judge, and a magistrate judge, in a pro se civil rights suit. The complaint was dismissed as frivolous on July 7, 1994, and the Court of Appeals dismissed plaintiff's appeal as frivolous on January 31, 1995.

In Nickelson v. United States, et al. (Eastern District of Pennsylvania, Case No. 2:97-cv-03942-LR), I was one of 18 named defendants, including 11 other Third Circuit judges, in a pro se civil rights action. The complaint was dismissed on defendants' motion on January 8, 1998, and plaintiff's appeal was dismissed for lack of legal merit on May 8, 1998.

In Thompson v. Kramer, et al. (Eastern District of Pennsylvania, Case No. 2:95-cv-02003-RC), I was one of more than 30 named defendants, including 12 other Third Circuit judges, in a pro se civil rights action. On January 7, 1997, the court ordered that all pleadings and other papers filed after August 31, 1994 (encompassing all filings in this case) by the plaintiffs that name any federal judge, employee of the federal judiciary, judicial body, federal government employee, or agency, be stricken.

In Sassower v. Sisk, et al. (Eastern District of Pennsylvania, Case No. 2:91-cv-04047-JG), I was one of 22 named defendants in a pro se civil rights suit. The district court denied the plaintiff's motion to proceed in forma pauperis and closed the case on July 3, 1991. The Court of Appeals dismissed the plaintiff's appeal on September 23, 1991.

In Barlow v. Shanklin, et al. (Eastern District of Pennsylvania, Case No. 2:93-cv-00608-WD), I was one of five named defendants in a pro se civil rights suit. The complaint was dismissed as frivolous on May 12, 1993.

In Gaudelli v. Eisner, et al. (Western District of Pennsylvania, Case No. 00-CV-437), I was one of 25 named defendants, including 18 other current and former Third Circuit judges, in this pro se civil suit. The district court dismissed the complaint on defendants' motion on March 30, 2001; the Court of Appeals affirmed on September 17, 2001; and the Supreme Court denied certiorari on January 7, 2002.

Lawsuit in which I was named in my personal capacity:

Gerish v. Alito (Superior Court of New Jersey, Essex County, Docket No. L-672-03). My wife and another motorist were involved in a minor traffic accident on June 9, 2000. The other motorist and her husband brought suit against my wife and me on January 15, 2003. The parties reached a settlement, and the case was dismissed on August 9, 2004.

- 21. Deferred Income/ Future Benefits: List the sources, amounts and dates of all anticipated receipts from deferred income arrangements, stock, options, uncompleted contracts, and other future benefits which you expect to derive from previous business relationships, professional services, firm memberships, former employers, clients or customers. Please describe the arrangements you have made to be compensated in the future for any financial or business interest.

I do not expect to receive any deferred income as described in this question.

22. Potential Conflicts of Interest: Explain how you will resolve any potential conflict of interest, including the procedure you will follow in determining these areas of concern. Identify the categories of litigation and financial arrangements that are likely to present potential conflicts-of-interest during your initial service in the position to which you have been nominated.

If confirmed, in matters involving recusal I would seek to follow the Code of Conduct for United States Judges (although it is not formally binding on justices of the Supreme Court of the United States), the Ethics Reform Act of 1989, 28 U.S.C. § 455, and any other relevant guidelines. As I do currently, I would look to the letter and spirit of the rules and guidelines. Specifically, I would recuse myself from any cases in which I participated as a judge on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit.

23. Recusal:

- a. Please provide a list of any instance during your tenure on the Third Circuit that there has been a request for you to recuse yourself from a case, motion, or matter, or when you have otherwise considered recusing yourself from a case, motion, or matter. For each, please provide the following information:
- i. whether you considered recusal in response to a motion or other suggestion by a litigant or a party to the proceeding; in response to a suggestion by any other person or interested party; or sua sponte;
 - ii. a brief description of the real, apparent, or asserted conflict of interest or other matter which you considered as a potential ground for recusal;
 - iii. the procedure you followed in determining whether to recuse yourself;
 - iv. your reason for recusing or declining to recuse yourself, including any action taken to remove the real, apparent, or asserted conflict of interest or to cure any other ground for recusal.

Cases involving the U.S. Attorney's Office:

On May 19, 1994, I wrote the following in a letter to the clerk, Mr. P. Douglas Sisk: "As you know, since becoming a judge on June 15, 1990, I have recused myself in all cases in which the United States Attorney's Office for the District of New Jersey has appeared. I am writing to inform you that, as of June 15, 1994, the fourth anniversary of my swearing in, I am ending this blanket recusal. I will, however, continue to recuse myself in any cases that were handled by the United States Attorney's Office for the District of New Jersey during the period when I was United States Attorney, i.e., from March 23, 1987, to June 15, 1990." The letter continued: "Because of the passage of time, I believe that most cases in which the United States Attorney's Office for the District of New Jersey now appears began after I became a judge. There may, however, be some cases that were in the United States Attorney's Office during my tenure there. Unfortunately, because there were thousands of cases in the United States Attorney's Office during that period, because I do not have a list of all these cases, and because I cannot possibly remember them all, I will have to rely on counsel to a large degree to bring to my attention any cases that were in the United States Attorney's Office during the period in question. For that reason, I have written to the United States Attorney's Office and the Federal Public Defender's Office, to alert them to the fact that I am ending my blanket recusal. In those letters, I have also requested that, pursuant to Local Appellate Rule 26.1.2, they notify your office whenever an appeal in which they appear was pending in the United States Attorney's Office during the indicated period."

I do not have a record of all instances in which the United States Attorney's Office or the Federal Public Defender's Office may have notified the Court regarding the pendency of a case or investigation during my tenure as U.S. Attorney. The following list includes any case in which my records indicate that any party or person brought such a matter to my attention.

Cases in which a motion or other request or suggestion that I recuse was made by a litigant, party, or other person:

1. Delta Traffic Service, Inc. v. The Mennen Co., No. 90-5063. On September 12, 1990, approximately one month before the scheduled date of argument, I recused myself sua sponte from this case after noticing that my name appeared on the ICC's brief. The ICC had intervened in the action in late 1989. The ICC seems to have handled the district court litigation entirely on its own, and I had no reason to think that the U.S. Attorney's Office was even aware of the case. No one from the U.S. Attorney's Office was listed as counsel on either the district court docket sheets or the clearance sheet. Likewise, the appellate brief was apparently prepared entirely in Washington. It appeared that, after the brief was prepared, someone in Washington simply inserted the U.S. Attorney's name. Although the U.S. Attorney's Office apparently had no substantive involvement in the case, I did not think I could serve on the panel when my name appeared on a party's briefs. Hence, I recused myself and took no part in either the argument or the decision.
2. Borchers v. United States, Nos. 90-5937 and 90-5939. I was recused from this matter on November 11, 1990, because it involved allegations concerning the conduct of the U.S. Attorney's Office for the District of New Jersey during my tenure as U.S. Attorney. The recusal appears to have been automatic, as the U.S. Attorney's Office was on my automatic recusal list and the recusal was entered on the same day of the clerk's recusal check. On November 30, 1990, the appellant made a motion for my recusal. He alleged misconduct on the part of one or more representatives of the office of the U.S. Attorney for the District of New Jersey before, during, and after my tenure as U.S. Attorney. No action was taken on the appellant's motion as I already was recused.
3. Martin v. Delaware Law School, No. 91-1761. On October 8, 1991, James L. Martin, the appellant, moved to recuse 15 judges on the Third Circuit, myself included. Mr. Martin's motion offered different reasons for seeking to recuse different judges. As to me, his motion alleged: “Justice Alito worked as a US Attorney in NJ for several years before beginning his tenure as a judge. Because the US Attorney’s Office in NJ has been retained to represent parties in related cases involving similar issues, Justice Alito should be recused and disqualified.” The motion did not allege specific facts in support of this claim. I was not assigned to the merits panel, but I did participate in the vote to deny rehearing en banc. I did not recuse myself from the vote because Mr. Martin’s case did not involve the U.S. Attorney’s Office for the District of New Jersey, and because he presented no other basis for recusal.

4. Martin v. Sparks, No. 91-3596. On August 25, 1992, the appellant, moved to recuse 11 judges on the Third Circuit, including me. As was the case in Martin v. Delaware Law School, the appellant’s motion alleged that I should be recused because “the US Attorney’s Office in NJ has been retained to represent parties in this case and in the related cases.” This motion also did not allege specific facts in support of his claim. In an order issued on September 10, 1992, Judge Becker denied the appellant’s motion. I was not a member of the panel in this case, but I did participate in the decision to deny rehearing en banc. I did not recuse myself from the vote because the appellant’s case did not involve the U.S. Attorney’s Office for the District of New Jersey, and because he presented no other basis for recusal.
5. Hammond v. Creative Financial, No. 92-2035. On April 7, 1993, appellants Lucinda Hammond and James L. Martin moved to recuse and disqualify 11 judges on the Third Circuit, including me. As with Mr. Martin’s previous cases, the motion alleged that I should be recused because “the US Attorney’s Office in NJ has been retained to represent parties in the related cases.” This motion likewise did not allege specific facts in support of the claim. On June 18, 1993, the court, in an order issued by Judge Becker, denied appellant’s motion. I did not serve on the merits panel, and the court’s records do not indicate whether I participated in a decision to deny rehearing en banc. However, as with previous cases filed by Mr. Martin, I did not need to recuse myself because the case did not involve the conduct of the U.S. Attorney’s Office for the District of New Jersey while I was U.S. Attorney, and because no other basis for recusal was offered.
6. Martin v. Francis, No. 92-5276. On August 25, 1992, James L. Martin, the appellant, moved to recuse 11 judges on the Third Circuit, myself included. As to me, the appellant’s motion, like previous motions described above, alleged only that “the US Attorney’s Office in NJ has been retained to represent parties in the related cases.” The Court denied the motion in an order issued by Judge Becker on November 27, 1992. I did not serve on the merits panel, and the court’s records do not indicate whether I participated in a decision to deny rehearing en banc. However, as with previous cases filed by Mr. Martin, I did not need to recuse myself because the case did not involve the conduct of the U.S. Attorney’s Office for the District of New Jersey while I was U.S. Attorney, and because no other basis for recusal was offered.
7. United States v. Grewal, No. 95-3362. On May 2, 1996, I received a fax from Ronald Kuby, counsel for respondent Amarjit Grewal, informing me of “a possible basis for [my] recusal in the above-entitled matter.” Mr. Kuby’s fax informed me that the respondent was one of the Sikh leaders involved in an extradition proceeding handled by Special Assistant U.S. Attorney Judy G. Russell during my tenure as U.S. Attorney. While handling that matter, Ms. Russell reported that she had received various threatening communications. After some investigation, the FBI determined that the typewritten letters containing those threats had been typed on Ms. Russell's own typewriter. Although I was U.S. Attorney at the time, I had no involvement in the substance of the extradition proceeding, which was handled thereafter by attorneys from the Department of Justice in Washington, DC. I had no recollection of the respondent until I received Mr. Kuby's fax, and I do not think I had any basis for realizing who the respondent was prior to receiving the fax. Although I did not believe that the facts called to my attention mandated my recusal, my practice is to err on the side of caution in such matters, and I therefore recused myself from the case.

8. Vey v. Colville, No. 93-3422. On September 20, 1993, Eileen Vey, the appellant, moved to recuse all judges on the Third Circuit. The motion stated that I should be disqualified because I had served on a panel assigned to a related habeas corpus case, Vey v. Wolfe, No. 92-3362. The Court denied the motion in an order authored by Judge Becker and issued on February 28, 1994. I was not assigned to the merits panel, but I did participate in a vote to deny an initial hearing en banc. I did not need to recuse myself from the case because my role in Vey v. Wolfe did not create any actual or apparent conflict of interest.
9. Gay v. Stockdale, No. 95-3718. On March 4, 1996, Wilmer B. Gay, the petitioner, requested that Judge Becker and I, along with all but one of the other judges on the Third Circuit, be disqualified. The petition accused all judges in question of corruption. On November 8, 1996, the Court denied petitioner's request for a writ of mandamus; the order, authored by Judge Mansmann, did not specifically address the request for recusal. I did not serve on the panel, but I did participate in the vote to deny rehearing en banc, as no plausible basis for recusal was set forth in the motion.
10. Martin v. Walmer, No. 97-1572. On August 7, 1997, James L. Martin, the appellant, moved to recuse and disqualify 11 judges on the Third Circuit, myself included. As with the appellant's previous motions, this one alleged only that "the US Attorney's Office in NJ has been retained to represent parties in the related cases." The Court denied the motion on November 20, 1997, in an order authored by Judge Greenberg. I was not on the merits panel, but I did participate in the decision to deny rehearing en banc. I did not recuse myself from the vote because the appellant's case did not involve the U.S. Attorney's Office for the District of New Jersey, and because he presented no other basis for recusal.
11. Martin v. PA Real Estate Commission, No. 99-1168. On May 3, 1999, James L. Martin, appellant, moved to disqualify 12 judges on the Third Circuit, myself included. As to me, the motion alleged only that "the US Attorney's Office in NJ has been retained to represent parties in the related cases." The Court denied the motion in an order issued on December 7, 1999, and authored by Chief Judge Scirica. I did not serve on the merits panel, but I participated in the vote to deny the petition for rehearing en banc. I did not recuse myself from the vote because the appellant's case did not involve the U.S.

Attorney's Office for the District of New Jersey, and because he presented no other basis for recusal.

12. Martin v. Walmer, No. 00-2333. On September 27, 2000, James L. Martin, appellant, moved to disqualify 15 judges on the Third Circuit, myself included. As to me, the motion alleged only that "the US Attorney's Office in NJ has been retained to represent parties in the related cases." The Court denied the motion in an order authored by Judge Nygaard and issued on October 16, 2001. I did not serve on the merits panel, but I participated in the vote to deny the petition for rehearing en banc. I did not recuse myself from the vote because the appellant's case did not involve the U.S. Attorney's Office for the District of New Jersey, and because he presented no other basis for recusal.
13. Reilly v. Weiss, No. 00-3634. On August 7, 2001, Paul Reilly, appellant, moved to disqualify all three judges assigned to the merits panel for his appeal, including myself. Reilly claimed that the entire Third Circuit had violated the Constitution by delegating judicial duties to staff attorneys, and that the entire court was disqualified because a judge may not decide the constitutionality of his own conduct. The motion was denied on August 23, 2001, in an order authored by Judge Weis, because appellant had failed to present any legitimate basis for recusal. On October 25, 2001, I issued an order denying Reilly's petition for rehearing en banc.
14. Foster v. NJ Mfg. Ins. Co., Nos. 01-1533 and 01-2876. On October 1, 2003, Ivan Foster moved to vacate a previous order of the Court and to recuse 14 judges on the Third Circuit, myself included. Mr. Foster alleged that the named judges had perpetrated a fraud on the court by either denying his request for relief in a previous case or by denying review en banc. I did not serve on the merits panel but did participate in the vote regarding en banc review. I opted not to recuse myself from the vote because the allegations set forth in the motion were not true.
15. Monga v. Ottenberg, No. 01-1827. On November 24, 2003, appellant Monga made a motion to disqualify me from participating in his appeal. As I explained in a letter to Senator Specter: "I sat on the original panel that heard the appeal. Due to an oversight, it did not occur to me that Vanguard's status in the matter might call for my recusal. After the court's unanimous decision was issued affirming the district court ruling, the appellant raised the issue of my interest in Vanguard. My principal financial interest in Vanguard is in the mutual funds I own, which were not at issue in this lawsuit. After the issue was raised, I reviewed the applicable ethical rules and guidelines. According to the Code of Conduct and parallel language in 28 U.S.C. section 455, I did not have a financial interest in the outcome of the case. This law states that a financial interest exists in this type of case only 'if the outcome of the proceeding could substantially affect the value of the interest.' (Canon 3C.(3)(c)(iii) and 28 U.S.C. 455(d)(4)(iii)). Nevertheless, my personal practice is to recuse myself once my participation was called into question. Moreover, notwithstanding the fact that my vote on the unanimous panel did not affect the outcome, I took the extra and unnecessary step of requesting that a new panel of judges be appointed to rehear the case. The new panel of judges reached the same unanimous conclusion as the prior panel."

16. Guyer v. Kunz, No. 01-2012. On June 6, 2011, Thomas D. Guyer, appellant, requested the recusal of all Third Circuit judges. The appellant filed suit against fifty different judges sitting in the state court, the Eastern District of Pennsylvania, and the Third Circuit; he alleged that the defendants had conspired to wrongfully imprison him for over fifteen years in a Pennsylvania state prison on state burglary charges. In affirming the decision of the district court, the court, addressing the appellant's request for recusal, stated: "Recusal is not mandated upon the merest unsubstantiated suggestion of personal bias or prejudice, and we will not allow Guyer to impede the administration of justice by suing every judge within the jurisdiction of this circuit in an effort to have his case transferred out of the Third Circuit." I did not serve on the merits panel but did participate in the vote on the petition for rehearing en banc. I opted not to recuse myself for the same reason set forth in the court's opinion.
17. Chapman v. Commonwealth of PA, No. 01-3815. On October 12, 2001, Chapman moved for recusal of the entire en banc panel of judges of the Third Circuit. He argued that the entire panel was disqualified as a matter of law from considering his request for a writ of mandamus because the court had decided against rehearing in a prior case – and had thus "tried" the case previously for purposes of 28 U.S.C. § 47. I did not serve on the merits panel but did participate in the vote on the petition for rehearing en banc. I decided not to recuse myself from the vote because petitioner's argument incorrectly stated the law.
18. Reynolds v. USX Corp., No. 01-3941. On June 6, 2002, appellant Reynolds moved to strike the opposing party's brief and to recuse any panel member who had viewed the brief. Reynolds argued that the appellee's brief contained "impertinent material regarding appellee's counsel's recollection of settlement conversations, including settlement offers, between counsel involved in this appeal in violation of L.A.R. 33.5(c) and F.R.E. 408." The merits panel, on which I sat, granted the motion to strike but denied the motion to recuse in an order authored by Chief Judge Scirica and issued on July 22, 2002. I declined to recuse myself because the brief had not compromised my ability to consider the case.
19. Reilly v. Weiss, Nos. 02-1382, 02-2821, 02-3261 and 03-1402. On November 6, 2003, appellant Reilly moved to disqualify all Third Circuit Judges. The appellant alleged that the entire court was disqualified because, among other reasons, the judges were all biased against pro se litigants and had "abdicated critical judicial functions to staff attorneys." I was not on the merits panel but did participate in the vote denying a rehearing en banc. I did not recuse myself because the appellant made no plausible argument for recusal.
20. Martin v. Delaware Law School, No. 02-1424. On March 22, 2002, appellant, James L. Martin, moved to recuse and disqualify 15 judges on the Third Circuit, myself included. As with previous cases filed by the appellant, his motion in this case alleged that I should be recused because "the US Attorney's Office in NJ has been retained to represent parties in related cases involving similar issues." The Court denied the motion on October 23, 2002, in an order issued by Judge Nygaard. I was not a member of the merits panel, but participated in the vote to deny rehearing en banc. I opted not to recuse myself because the appellant's case did not involve the U.S. Attorney's Office for the District of New Jersey, and because he presented no other basis for recusal.

21. Manna v. United States, No. 04-4282. In this habeas case, Louis A. Manna, the appellant, filed a motion on November 30, 2004, to recuse Judge Barry, Judge Chertoff, and me. On December 14, 2004, the U.S. Attorney for the District of New Jersey, George S. Leone, also requested that all three judges be recused. At the time of the appellant's original trial, I was the United States Attorney for the District of New Jersey. The appellant alleged that Judge Chertoff and I were "relentless adversaries" with a "win at all cost" mentality. He also claimed that Judge Chertoff and I conspired to deny him due process of law. On December 14, 2004, in keeping with my standard practice, I recused because of my involvement in the original prosecution.
22. In re Shemonsky, No. 05-1736. In this case Michael R. Shemonsky moved to recuse the entire Third Circuit Court of Appeals, and also "move[d] under the theory of King's Bench under the Magna Carta to act as the Court." Mr. Shemonsky claimed that the Judicial Council for the Third Circuit had been sued in the Court of Common Pleas for the County of Monroe, and that the Third Circuit Judicial Council controls the activity of the Third Circuit Court of Appeals. He also claimed that "numerous fraudulent orders were entered under the bogus facsimile signature" of the Clerk. On July 13, 2005, Chief Judge Scirica issued an order denying the motion to recuse the entire court but allowing each judge to choose whether to recuse. On July 14, 2005, I recused myself solely to avoid any appearance of impropriety arising from the fact that I had been named as a defendant in Mr. Shemonsky's suit against the Third Circuit Judicial Council.
23. D'Amario v. Bailey, No. 05-4333. On Oct. 6, 2005, the appellant in this case, Arthur D'Amario III, moved to recuse the entire Third Circuit because U.S. Marshals had identified him as "a 'security concern,' resulting in his banishment from all federal courtrooms in Philadelphia." This designation, the appellant argued, gives the entire court a vested interest in maintaining his allegedly illegal custody. The appellant's underlying conviction was for threatening to assault and murder a federal judge, in violation of 18 U.S.C. § 115(a)(1)(B). See United States v. D'Amario, 350 F.3d 348 (3d Cir. 2003) (Alito, J.). This motion is pending before a panel of the Third Circuit. I was not assigned to the panel, and have not considered the motion.

Appendix 3, attached, includes, to the best of my knowledge, all cases from which I was recused during my tenure as a judge on the Third Circuit, regardless of whether the recusal was automatic. The Office of the Clerk assisted me in compiling the list. I have done my best to state the apparent reason for recusal for each case listed. Because the court's records only note the fact of recusal, however, I cannot be absolutely sure that the stated reason was the only or the actual reason for recusal. Where the explanation seems reasonably apparent, I have listed it. I have not offered any explanation for cases in which I could not recall the basis for recusal from my review of the parties and the attorneys involved in the case.

24. Outside Commitments During Court Service: Do you have any plans, commitments, or agreements to pursue outside employment, with or without compensation, during your service with the Court? If so, please explain.

I have no plans, commitments, or agreements to pursue outside employment in the future.

25. Sources of Income: List sources and amounts of all income received during the calendar year preceding your nomination and for the current calendar year, including all salaries, fees, dividends, interest, gifts, rents, royalties, patents, honoraria, and other items exceeding $500 or more. (Copies of the financial disclosure report, required by the Ethics in Government Act of 1978, may be substituted here.)

Please see attached financial disclosure report.

26. Statement of Net Worth: Please complete the attached financial net worth statement in detail (add schedules as called for).

Please see attached statement of net worth.

27. Pro Bono Work: An ethical consideration under Canon 2 of the American Bar Association's Code of Professional Responsibility calls for "every lawyer, regardless of professional prominence or professional workload, to find some time to participate in serving the disadvantaged." Describe what you have done to fulfill these responsibilities, listing specific instances and the amount of time devoted to each.

Since my clerkship, I have spent my entire legal career as an employee or officer of the Department of Justice or a judge and have thus been precluded from representing private clients. As a judge, I have worked, together with the other members of my court, to provide parties appearing before us with high quality pro bono representation. We have encouraged lawyers to place their names on the list of attorneys who are willing to undertake pro bono appellate representation, and we regularly appoint pro bono attorneys in pro se cases in which it appears that such representation would be beneficial. We have recently sought to encourage attorneys to accept pro bono assignments in asylum and other immigration cases and have agreed to hear oral argument in all such cases.

28. Selection Process:

- a. Please describe your experience in the entire judicial selection process, from beginning to end (including the circumstances which led to your nomination and the interviews in which you participated). List all interviews or communications you had with anyone in the Executive Office of the President or the Justice Department regarding this nomination, or any other judicial nomination for which you have been considered, the dates of such interviews or communications, and all persons present or participating in such interviews or communications.

A short time before June 24, 2001, I was invited to an interview with then-Counsel to the President Alberto Gonzales and then-Deputy Counsel to the President, Timothy Flanigan. I was told that the interview concerned a possible future Supreme Court vacancy. I was interviewed by Judge Gonzales and Mr. Flanigan on June 24, 2001.

Some time before May 5, 2005, I was invited to another interview about a possible future Supreme Court vacancy. I was interviewed on May 5, 2005, by Vice President Cheney, Attorney General Gonzales, Andrew Card, Karl Rove, Harriet Miers, and I. Lewis Libby. A few weeks later, I was interviewed by Ms. Miers.

In July 2005, I was invited to an interview with the President and was interviewed by the President on July 15, 2005; Ms. Miers was present.

On October 28, 2005, I was telephoned by Mr. Card and told that I might receive a call from the President. The President telephoned me on that date and we discussed the possibility of my nomination. I met with the President on the morning of October 31, 2005, and he formally offered to nominate me and I accepted.

- b. Has anyone involved in the process of selecting you as a judicial nominee (including, but not limited to anyone in the Executive Office of the President, the Justice Department, or the Senate and its staff) ever discussed with you any specific case, legal issue, or question in a manner that could reasonably be interpreted as seeking any express or implied assurances concerning your position on such case, issue, or question? If so, please explain fully. Please identify each communication you had prior to the announcement of your nomination with anyone in the Executive Office of the President, the Justice Department or the Senate or its staff referring or relating to your views on any case, issue or subject that could come before the Supreme Court of the United States, state who was present or participated in such communication, and describe briefly what transpired.

No one involved in the process of selecting or recommending me as a judicial nominee has ever discussed with me any specific case, legal issue, or question in a manner that could reasonably be interpreted as seeking any express or implied assurances concerning my position on such case, issue, or question.

- c. Did you make any representations to any individuals or interest groups as to how you might rule as a Justice, if confirmed? If you know of any such representations made by the White House or individuals acting on behalf of the White House, please describe them, and if any materials memorializing those communications are available to you, please provide four (4) copies.

I have made no representations to any individuals or interest groups as to how I might rule as a justice, if confirmed. I am not aware of any such representations made by the White House or any individuals acting on behalf of the White House

29. Judicial Activism: Please discuss your views on the following criticism involving “judicial activism.”

The role of the Federal judiciary within the Federal government, and within society, generally, has become the subject of increasing controversy in recent years. It has become the target of both popular and academic criticism that alleges that the judicial branch has usurped many of the prerogatives of other branches and levels of government.

Some of the characteristics of this “judicial activism” have been said to include:

- a. a tendency by the judiciary toward problem-solution rather than grievance-resolution;
- b. a tendency by the judiciary to employ the individual plaintiff as a vehicle for the imposition of far-reaching orders extending to broad classes of individuals;
- c. a tendency by the judiciary to impose broad, affirmative duties upon governments and society;
- d. a tendency by the judiciary toward loosening jurisdictional requirements such as standing and ripeness; and
- e. a tendency by the judiciary to impose itself upon other institutions in the manner of an administrator with continuing oversight responsibilities.

The Constitution sets forth a limited role for the judicial branch. As the question notes, in recent years there have been charges that the federal judiciary has exceeded the proper bounds of judicial authority through court decisions. My experience has taught me that any such criticism should be informed by a balanced understanding of the role that the federal courts should play.

The Constitution charges the federal courts with the duty to exercise “[t]he judicial Power of the United States,” Art. III, sec. 1, and as Alexander Hamilton aptly put it in Federalist 78, the courts should carry out that role with “firmness and independence.” “Without this,” he observed, “all the reservations of particular rights or privileges [in the Constitution] would amount to nothing.” But while the federal courts should act firmly and independently within their proper sphere, they must always keep in mind that their proper sphere is circumscribed. The “judicial Power” is distinct from the “legislative Powers” given to Congress and from “the executive Power,” and the federal courts must engage in a constant process of self-discipline to ensure that they respect the limits of their authority.

Judicial self-discipline is especially important when federal courts are interpreting the Constitution. In non-constitutional cases, the political branches can check what they perceive to be erroneous judicial decisions by enacting corrective legislation. Decisions based on an interpretation of the Constitution, by contrast, cannot be checked in this manner, and a thoughtful appreciation of the nature and essential limits of the judicial function is therefore acutely necessary to protect the democratic values that underlie our Constitution.

Article III of the Constitution, which is the source of the federal courts' power, simultaneously limits that power. Most importantly, Article III, section 2 restricts the jurisdiction of the federal courts to actual "Cases" and "Controversies," and this limitation necessarily means that the federal courts lack jurisdiction unless the constitutional elements of "standing" and "ripeness" are met. These elements serve to ensure that the federal courts stay within the role that courts have traditionally performed and that they are trained and equipped to perform – entertaining and adjudicating real disputes that are brought before them by real parties. By restraining the courts from reaching out to decide abstract issues and nascent disputes that may not need judicial resolution, these doctrines promote better decision making, serve democratic values, and work to prevent clashes with the authority of Congress and the Executive by reserving to the political process issues that rightly belong there. In recent decades, Supreme Court decisions have stressed the importance of these constitutional restrictions on the power of the federal courts, and as a judge of the court of appeals I have applied these precedents.

Other valuable statutory and judge-made limitations on the exercise of judicial power serve similar purposes. These limitations include prudential standing and ripeness requirements, statutory and non-statutory limitations on the scope of review that courts may properly exercise in particular contexts, and the doctrine of stare decisis, which supplies essential stability to the law and is a fundamental feature of our legal system. My experience as a court of appeals judge for the past 15 years has fortified my appreciation of the value of these important limitations.

A criticism of the federal courts cited in the question concerns the overreaching in crafting and implementing remedies, an area that highlights the tension between the federal courts' obligation to discharge their proper role firmly and independently and the need to avoid inappropriate encroachment on the authority of other government institutions. When a constitutional or statutory violation has been proven, a court should not hesitate to impose a strong and lawful remedy if that is what is needed to provide full redress. Some of the finest chapters in the history of the federal courts have been written when federal judges, despite resistance, have steadfastly enforced remedies for deeply rooted constitutional violations. At the same time, however, judges must always be sensitive to the need to avoid unnecessary interference with the authority and competence of the political branches. In addition, courts should recognize that their legitimacy is tested when they undertake in the remedial context to perform functions that are ordinarily the province of the political branches.

A paradox is inherent in our constitutional structure. The framers of the Constitution generally did not think that government institutions and actors could be trusted to refrain from unduly extending their own powers, but our constitutional system relies heavily on the judiciary to restrain itself. To do this, judges must engage in a continual process of self-questioning about the way in which they are performing the responsibilities of their offices. Judges must also have faith that the cause of justice in the long run is best served if they scrupulously heed the limits of their role rather than transgressing those limits in an effort to achieve a desired result in a particular case. Judges must maintain a deep respect for the authority of the other branches of government – based on their democratic legitimacy – and a keen appreciation of the comparative advantages that other government institutions and actors have in making empirical judgments, devising comprehensive solutions for social problems, and administering complex programs and institutions. In addition, judges must be appropriately modest in their estimation of their own abilities; they must respect the judgments reached by predecessors; and they must be sensibly cautious about the scope of their decisions. And judges should do all these things without shirking their duty to say what the law is and to carry out their proper role with energy and independence.

FINANCIAL STATEMENT

NET WORTH

Provide a complete, current financial net worth statement which itemizes in detail all assets (including bank accounts, real estate, securities, trusts, investments, and other financial holdings) all liabilities (including debts, mortgages, loans, and other financial obligations) of yourself, your spouse, and other immediate members of your household.

ASSETS				LIABILITIES
Cash on hand and in banks		243	700	Notes payable to banks-secured
U.S. Government securities-add schedule		60	000	Notes payable to banks-unsecured
Listed securities-add schedule		788	750	Notes payable to relatives
Unlisted securities--add schedule				Notes payable to others
Accounts and notes receivable:				Accounts and bills due
Due from relatives and friends				Unpaid income tax
Due from others				Other unpaid income and interest
Doubtful				Real estate mortgages payable-add schedule
Real estate owned-add schedule		869	550	Chattel mortgages and other liens payable
Real estate mortgages receivable				Other debts-itemize:
Autos and other personal property		150	000
Cash value-life insurance
Other assets itemize:
				Total liabilities			0
				Net Worth	2	112	000
Total Assets	2	112	000	Total liabilities and net worth	2	112	000
CONTINGENT LIABILITIES				GENERAL INFORMATION
As endorser, comaker or guarantor				Are any assets pledged? (Add schedule)	NO
On leases or contracts				Are you defendant in any suits or legal actions?	NO
Legal Claims				Have you ever taken bankruptcy?	NO
Provision for Federal Income Tax
Other special debt

FINANCIAL STATEMENT

NET WORTH SCHEDULES

U.S. Government Securities
Series EE Bonds	$ 60,000
 Listed Securities
Vanguard Small Cap Index Fund	$ 96,000
Vanguard Total Stock Market Index Fund	86,000
Windsor II Fund	25,500
XOM Common Stock	161,000
Wellington Fund	101,000
Vanguard Intermediate Term Tax Exempt Fund	90,000
Vanguard Insured Long Term Tax Exempt Fund	26,000
Vanguard N.J. Long Term Tax Exempt Fund	30,000
Star Fund	25,000
Windsor II Fund	51,000
Vanguard Intermediate Term bond Index Fund	18,000
INTC Common Stock	13,800
Fidelity Equity II Income Fund	29,400
MCD Common Stock	25,200
BMV Common Stock	8,400
DIS Common Stock	2,450
Total Listed Securities	$788,750
 Real Estate Owned
Personal residence	$ 869,550

Appendix 1 Question 13.d.

Response to question 13.d.

( indicates information that is unknown)

Different Schools of Thought, Dallas Morning News, July 7, 2005, at 9A

Emilie Lounsberry, The Appeals Court Judge Is a Contender, Philadelphia Inquirer, July 3, 2005, at A8

Kate Coscarelli, Supremely Qualified – Jersey Judge’s Resume Could Land Him a Job on the Nation’s Highest Court, Newark Star Ledger, May 23, 2005, at 1

News in Brief from Philadelphia, Associated Press, Dec. 15, 2003

L. Stuart Ditzen, Judge Denies Having a Conflict, Philadelphia Inquirer, Dec. 15, 2003, at B1

Joseph A. Slobodzian, Court Hears a Case That Could Shake Campaign-spending Law by Asserting That the Rules Are Too Meaningless to Be Enforced, Philadelphia Inquirer, Feb. 17, 2000, at A18

Court Hears Plea to Reinstate N.J. law Banning Late-term Abortions, Associated Press, Nov. 20, 1999

Thomas Ginsberg, N.J. Abortion Limit is Back in Court, Philadelphia Inquirer, Nov. 20, 1999, at B01

Robert Schwaneberg, Abortion Limit Case Puts Lawyers to Test, Newark Star Ledger, Nov. 20, 1999, at 11

Jeffrey Gold, Court Hears Plea to Reinstate N.J. Law Banning Late-term Abortions, Associated Press, Nov. 19, 1999

Would-be Annie Wins Right to Sue, Gazette Montreal, Sept. 4, 1999, at C11

‘Orphan’ Actress Finds a Friend in Federal Court, Newark Star Ledger, Sept. 4, 1999, at 3

Search Appears Over for Gumbel’s Co-Anchor, Sun-Sentinel, Sept. 4, 1999, at 2A

People in the News, Associated Press, Sept. 3, 1999

Joseph A. Slobodzian, Judges Mull Abu-Jamal Complaint, Philadelphia Inquirer, Dec. 9, 1997, at B1

Marylynne Pitz, Officer Who Lost Suit Gets New Trial, Pittsburgh Post-Gazette, July 17, 1997, at B6

- Pfizer Did Not Conspire to Hide Asbestos Risk, Court Rules*, Dow Jones News Serv., Dec. 29, 1994
- U.S.'s Pfizer/Asbestos-2: Reduces Potential Liability*, Dow Jones Int'l News, Dec. 29, 1994
- Gay Jervey, Michael Chertoff—Justice on the Jersey Side, N.J.L.J., Oct. 5., 1992, at 4
- Gay Jervey, An Off-Broadway Star, Am. Lawyer, Oct. 1992, at 46
- Robert Schwaneberg, State Ends New Probe of Lobby Shakedown Claim, Newark Star Ledger, July 18, 1991
- Walking the Line Between Free Press and Fair Trial*, N.J.L.J., May 24, 1990, at 9
- Mark J. McGuire, Fahy Nominee for Bergen Post, N. Jersey Herald, May 18, 1990, at ***
- Gene Mueller, Conservationists Honor Area Men, Wash. Times, May 11, 1990, at D7
- David Friedman, Sports Director Faces the Odds, Newsday, May 7, 1990, at 3
- Darlene Superville, Norwood Candy Distributor, Nine Associates Named in Racketeering Indictment, Associated Press, Apr. 20, 1990
- Joseph F. Sullivan, Businessman Held in Coercing Rivals, N.Y. Times, Apr. 20, 1990, at B2
- Robert Rudolph, FBI Seizes Jersey Candy King on 'Reign of Terror' Charges, Newark Star Ledger, Apr. 20, 1990, at ***
- Stephanie Stokes, Candy Man Held in Brutal Scam, Bergen Record, Apr. 20, 1990, at 1
- Government Sues Exxon over Fines*, J. of Commerce, Apr. 16, 1990, at 8B
- Exxon Sued by Federal Government over $50 Fine*, Associated Press, Apr. 13, 1990
- Memo To: Assembly Democrats, From: The Trentonian, Re: Del Tufo's Decision*, The Trentonian, Apr. 9, 1990, at 17
- David F. White, Former Shipping Executive Indicted in Bogus Cargo Case, J. of Commerce, Apr. 6, 1990, at 3B
- Robert Cohen, Alito Easily Clears Key Committee, Newark Star Ledger, Apr. 6, 1990, at ***
- Scott Friedman, Probe Clears Doria, Hudson Dispatch, Apr. 5, 1990, at 1
- Dan Weissman, State Won't Prosecute Dem Leaders Accused of Shaking Down Lobbyist, Newark Star Ledger, Apr. 5, 1990, at 25

- Eight Indicted in Penny Stock Fraud Case*, Reuters, Mar. 28, 1990
- 2 Found Guilty in Scam*, United Press Int'l, Mar. 23, 1990
- Judith A. Osborne, Retail Execs Guilty, Newark Star Ledger, Mar. 15, 1990, at 1
- Chain's Ex-CEO Says He Cooked the Books*, N.Y. Post, Mar. 15, 1990, at 43
- Barbara Boyer, Franklin Lakes Man Admits Fraud, N. Jersey Herald, Mar. 15, 1990, at 3
- A Brooklyn Man is Charged with the Theft of 15 Torahs*, Associated Press, Mar. 11, 1990
- 2 Essex Investigators Draw Stiff Prison Terms*, Newark Star Ledger, Mar. 6, 1990, at ***
- Robert Rudolph, The Sound and the Jury, Newark Star Ledger, Mar. 5, 1990, at 10
- Joseph D. McCaffrey, Father, Son Admit Plot to Embezzle, , Mar. 1, 1990, at 26
- Robert Rudolph, Corruption Probes Expand to Encompass More HUD-financed Agencies, Newark Star Ledger, Feb. 25, 1990, at 12
- Helen J. Simon, Ex-housing Chiefs Admit Corruption, N. Jersey Herald, Feb. 24, 1990, at ***
- Fifth Guilty Plea in a U.S. Housing Inquiry*, N.Y. Times, Feb. 23, 1990, at B3
- Robert Hanley, H.U.D. Finds Bribes at 3 Authorities, N.Y. Times, Feb. 18, 1990, at 43
- Rudy Larini, Graft Guilt Admitted by Pair of Ex-Jersey Housing Execs, Newark Star Ledger, Feb. 16, 1990, at 1
- Ex-First Jersey Aide Gets Prison Sentence for Laundering Cash*, Wall St. J., Feb. 15, 1990, at 4
- Christopher Kilbourne, Three Suspects in Drug-Money Ring Held Without Bail, Bergen Record, Feb. 15, 1990, at 5
- Alito Terms Nomination Bittersweet*, Associated Press, Feb. 14, 1990
- Alito Tapped for Court Post*, Trenton Times, Feb. 14, 1990, at 1
- Paul J. Hendrie, U.S. Attorney Picked for Bench, Bergen Record, Feb. 14, 1990, at 4
- Robert Cohen, Alito Picked for Court; Rivals Jockey for Post, Newark Star Ledger, Feb. 14, 1990, at 7

- J. Craig Shearman, Alito Named to Appeals Court Seat, Philadelphia Inquirer, Feb. 14, 1990, at ***
- National Digest*, St. Petersburg Times, Feb. 10, 1990, at 9A
- Emily Tobias, Giant Drug Money Bust, Elizabeth Daily J., Feb. 10, 1990, at 1
- Daniel J. Wakin, Cocaine Money Laundry Shut Down, Morristown Daily Record (Morris County), Feb. 10, 1990, at 8
- Cocaine Money Ring Smashed*, Bergen Record, Feb. 10, 1990, at 3
- $100M Drug Money Ring Smashed in New Jersey*, N. Jersey Herald, Feb. 10, 1990, at 5
- Pat Politano, Drug-money Raids Net $10M, , Feb. 10, 1990, at 1
- Robert Rudolph and Lenny Melisurgo, Lawmen Dismantle Drug Fund 'Laundry', Newark Star Ledger, Feb. 10, 1990, at 1
- Robert Rudolph, 'Car Gang' Teens Guilty of Stickup of Federal Prosecutors in Newark, Newark Star Ledger, Jan. 26, 1990, at 36
- Armored Car Guard Guilty of Thefts*, ***, ***, ***
- Bill Gannon, Aide Charged in Expense Padding, Newark Star Ledger, Feb. 10, 1990, at 15
- Man Arrested in N.J. Linked to Slaying of 12-Year-Old Girl*, Associated Press, ***
- P.L. Wyckoff, U.S. Attorney to Lead Anti-mob Strike Force, Newark Star Ledger, Dec. 31, 1989, at 35
- Daniel Wakin, Fed Who Aided Defense: Quisling or Quixote?, N.J.L.J., Dec. 21, 1989, at 19
- P.L. Wyckoff, Ex-Wayne Planner Faces Long Term After Admitting Guilt in Extortion, Newark Star Ledger, Dec. 19, 1989, at 34
- SEC: Crazy Eddie's 'Insanity' Included Insider Trading Scam*, Associated Press, Dec. 12, 1989
- Daniel J. Wakin, Two Investigators Convicted of Protecting Drug Dealer, Associated Press, Dec. 9, 1989
- Robert Rudolph, Two Lawmen Guilty of Drug-graft Plot, Newark Star Ledger, Dec. 9, 1989, at 1
- William T. Quinn, U.S. Seizes Ailing State Thrift, Newark Star Ledger, Dec. 9, 1989, at 5
- 2 Essex Lawmen Guilty of Corruption*, Bergen Record, Dec. 9, 1989, at 3

- Kirk Moore, Developers of Dover Homes Snared in Federal Crime Net, Asbury Park Press, Dec. 6, 1989, at 10
- Maryann Spoto, Riggi Pal Indicted in Fraud, Elizabeth Daily J., Dec. 5, 1989, at 1
- Doc Took $ to Fake AIDS Test Results*, The Trentonian, Dec. 1, 1989, at ***
- Robert Rudolph, Stickup Suspects Get Lesson in Victim Selection, Newark Star Ledger, Nov. 19, 1989, at 34
- Robert Rudolph, Edison Twp. Official Pleads Innocent to Upgraded Racketeering Charges, Newark Star Ledger, Nov. 14, 1989, at 25
- Alain L. Sanders, The Wrath of "Maximum Bob", Time, Nov. 6, 1989, at 62
- Robert Rudolph, Prosecutor Testifies for Defense at Corruption Trial of 2 Essex Cops, Newark Star Ledger, Nov. 4, 1989, at ***
- Paul Mickle, Barkeep Admits Plot with Banker to Get Funds to Buy Go-go Tavern, The Trentonian, Oct. 21, 1989, at 3
- Metro Datelines*, N.Y. Times, Oct. 17, 1989, at B4
- Alleged Head of N.J. Mob Indicted*, Associated Press, Oct. 17, 1989
- Grand Jury Indicts 5 in Mob-Union Case*, N.Y. Times, Oct. 17, 1989
- Robert Rudolph, Crime Boss Indicted, Newark Star Ledger, Oct. 17, 1989, at ***
- Frances Ann Burns, Reputed Head of DeCavalcante Crime Family Arrested, United Press Int'l, Oct. 16, 1989
- Frederick W. Byrb and Bill Gannon, Needy Reap a Harvest of Apples Used to Camouflage Shipment of Cocaine, Newark Star Ledger, Oct. 13, 1989, at 23
- Food Bank Benefits from Drug Bust*, United Press Int'l, Oct. 12, 1989
- Steven Mufson, 3 Brokers Charged with 'Penny Stock' Fraud, Wash. Post, Oct. 6, 1989, at D1
- $10-M Penny Stock Fraud: Trio Indicted*, The Trentonian, Oct. 6, 1989, at ***
- Trio Charged in $10 Million Stock Scheme*, Hudson Dispatch, Oct. 6, 1989, at ***
- Penny Stock Firm Charged with Racketeering, Fraud*, Trenton Times, Oct. 6, 1989, at ***
- David Hardy, 3 Bad Pennies, Says Indictment, N.Y. Daily News, Oct. 6, 1989, at ***

- Paul Tharp, Racketeering Raps Against 3 in 'Penny' Case, N.Y. Post, Oct. 6, 1989, at ***
- Tom DiPiazza, 3 Indicted in Penny Stock Case, Bergen Record, Oct. 6, 1989, at B-1
- William T. Quinn, Racketeering Charged in Penny Stock Case, Newark Star Ledger, Oct. 6, 1989, at ***
- David Henry, Penny-Stock Veteran Indicted, N.Y. Newsday, Oct. 6, 1989, at B-1
- Penny Stock Fraud Case*, N.Y. Times, Oct. 6, 1989, at ***
- Arthur S. Hayes and Michael Waldholz, Penny Stock Broker Is Indicted in First Such Use of RICO Law, Wall. St. J., Oct. 6, 1989, at B4
- Melanie Burney, Meat Processor Pleads Guilty to Fraud, Agrees to Pay $1 Million Fine, Associated Press, Oct. 5, 1989
- Daniel J. Wakin, U.S. Attorney: Indictment First Calling Penny Stock Firm a RICO Enterprise, Associated Press, Oct. 5, 1989
- Diana Marder, Record Fine in N.J. Meat Adulteration, , Oct. 5, 1989, at 1
- Joseph D. McCaffrey, Meatpackers Admit Bloating Ham in Water, Newark Star Ledger, Oct. 5, 1989, at 55
- Michele DiGirolamo, Canned Ham Scam Sparks Record $1 Million Fine, United Press Int'l, Oct. 4, 1989
- Judge Refuses Plea Bargain in Corruption Case*, Associated Press, Oct. 3, 1989
- Robert Rudolph, U.S. Targets Penny-stock Fraud in State, Newark Star Ledger, Sep. 25, 1989, at 1
- NYC Man Admits Running 'Credit Help' Scam*, Associated Press, ***
- U.S. Using N.J. Lawyers to Collect Debts*, Trenton Times, Sep. 24, 1989, at A9
- Daniel J. Wakin, Nerve Gas Conspirator Sentenced to 30 Months in Prison, Associated Press, Sept. 19, 1989
- Would-be Seller of Lethal Gas Sentenced*, Associated Press, Sep. 19, 1989
- Robert Rudolph, Korean Draws Jail for Nerve Gas Export Scheme, Newark Star Ledger, Sep. 19, 1989, at 14

Michael Moran, Military Contractor Agrees to Pay $1.4 Million Fine, Official Says, Associated Press, Sept. 15, 1989

First Jersey Securities Ex-Broker Admits Laundering Money, Wall St. J., Sep. 6, 1989, at 8

The Next Page in Federal Sentencing, Legal Times, Aug. 28, 1989, at 19

Michael Markowitz, Officials Protest G-man's Remark, Hudson Dispatch, Aug. 23, 1989, at 1

Helen J. Simon, Hispanics Call Statements by Top FBI Agent Discriminatory, Asbury Park Press, Aug. 23, 1989, at ***

Blanca M. Quintanilla, Hispanics Want FBI Apology, Jersey City J., Aug. 23, 1989, at ***

12 Indicted in FBI Drug Sting, , , at ***

FBI Sting Catches 12 in Drug Rings, Wash. Times, Aug. 16, 1989

12 Indicted in FBI Drug Sting, Wash. Post, Aug. 16, 1989, at A9

FBI Agents Use Electronics Store to Snare Cocaine Dealers, The Press (Atlantic City), Aug. 16, 1989, at A5

Michael Finnegan, The Sting: Cocaine Cartel Tricked by FBI, N. Jersey Herald, Aug. 16, 1989, at A1

Jane Greenstein, FBI Sting Operation Yields Coke Indictments, Jersey City J., Aug. 16, 1989, at 1

Michael Finnegan, Drug Network Busted, Hudson Dispatch, Aug. 16, 1989, at 1

Ex-Bellcore Computer Operator Guilty, United Press Int'l, Aug. 12, 1989

J. Scott Orr, State Suffers 'Alarming' Rise in Cocaine Traffic, Newark Star Ledger, Aug. 6, 1989, at 1

Michael Finnegan, Mob's in Shambles, Federal Officials Say, Hudson Dispatch, July 31, 1989, at 1

Daniel J. Wakin, Indictment Aimed at Genovese Family, Daily Record (Morris County), July 27, 1989, at A8

8 Indicted in Gambling Ring Linked to Genovese Family, Asbury Park Press, July 27, 1989, at ***

Rocco Cammarere, Big Bet Ring Smashed, Hudson Dispatch, July 27, 1989, at 1

- Wendell Jamieson, U.S. Indicts 8 in Gambling Probe, Jersey City J., July 27, 1989, at ***
- Randy Diamond and James Harney, Eight in Genovese Mob is Indicted by U.S., N.Y. Daily News, July 27, 1989, at ***
- 8 Indicted in Gambling Ring Linked to Genovese*, Trenton Times, July 27, 1989, at A10
- Peter J. Sampson, U.S. Indicts 8 in Mob Gambling, Bergen Record, July 27, 1989, at ***
- Daniel J. Wakin, 5 Found Guilty in N.J. Mob Racketeering Case, , July 27, 1989, at ***
- Adrienne Knox and Guy Sterling, 8 Genovese Mob Figures Charged on Rackets, Newark Star Ledger, July 27, 1989, at ***
- Rocco Cammarere, G-men Bust Bergen Mob, N. Jersey Herald, July 27, 1989, at A1
- Optician Guilty of Fraud*, Trenton Times, July 20, 1989, at A10
- Oil Exec Accused of Tax Evasion*, Newark Star Ledger, July 20, 1989, at ***
- Peter F. Donohue, Doctor Faces Charge in AIDS Test Coverup, Elizabeth Daily J., July 15, 1989, at 1
- R. Clinton Taplin, Physician is Charged with Falsifying AIDS Report, Bergen Record, July 16, 1989, at ***
- Summer Reruns: Courter Campaign Has Same Old Ingredients*, , July 14, 1989, at A-7
- Steve Chambers, Hot Line Open to 9-to-5 Whistleblowers, Asbury Park Press, July 11, 1989, at A1
- Kirstin Downey & Sandra Torry, HUD Fraud in District Detailed, Wash. Post, July 2, 1989, at A1
- Robert Rudolph, Murders, Convictions Set Stage for Major Power Struggle in Mob Families, , July 2, 1989, at ***
- Stephanie Stokes, Wayne Endures a Year of Torment, , June 29, 1989, at ***
- 5 Convicted of Plotting to Kill Reputed Mob Boss*, Chicago Tribune, June 27, 1989
- Daniel J. Wakin, Guilty Verdicts in Genovese Racketeering Trial, Associated Press, June 27, 1989
- Frances Ann Burns, Mafia Convictions May Lead to Rise of Green Mobsters, United Press Int'l, June 27, 1989

- 5 Men Convicted in Mafia Activities*, Wash. Post, June 27, 1989, at A7
- Three Top Members of Organized Crime Guilty in Slay Plot*, Asbury Park Press, June 27, 1989, at ***
- Daniel J. Wakin, Jurors: Mafia 3 Guilty, Elizabeth Daily J., June 27, 1989, at ***
- 5 in Genovese Clan Guilty in Plot to Murder Gotti*, Courier News, June 27, 1989, at A-6
- 3 Top N.J. Mobsters Guilty in Murder Plot*, N. Jersey Herald, June 27, 1989, at A1
- Scott Ladd, Trio in Jersey Guilty of Plot to Kill Gottis, N.Y. Newsday, June 27, 1989, at 5
- 3 NJ Crime Family Members Guilty*, The Trentonian, June 27, 1989, at ***
- Robert Rudolph and Guy Sterling, Genovese Boss and 3 Guilty of Plot to Rub Out John Gotti, Newark Star Ledger, June 27, 1989, at 1
- Manna Convicted of Murder Plot*, Trenton Times, June 27, 1989, at A7
- Michael Finnegan, Manna, Pals Nailed in Gotti Death Plot, Hudson Dispatch, June 27, 1989, at 1
- Frances Ann Burns, Verdict Is Guilty in Plot to Kill Gotti, Bergen Record, June 27, 1989, at A-3
- William J. Slattery and Mel Juffe, N.J. Jury Convicts 3 Genovese Bigs in 'Fat Man' Hit, N.Y. Post, June 27, 1989, at ***
- David Hardy and Randy Diamond, 4 in Mob Convicted in Plot to Slay Gotti, N.Y. Daily News, June 27, 1989, at 3
- Anthony DePalma, 3 Mobsters Found Guilty of Plotting to Kill Gotti, N.Y. Times, June 27, 1989, at B1
- Daniel J. Wakin, Guilty Verdicts in Genovese Racketeering Trial, Associated Press, June 26, 1989
- Frances Ann Burns, Guilty Verdicts in Marathon Mob Trial, United Press Int'l, June 26, 1989
- Joseph F. Sullivan, Ex-Fed Official Admits Disclosing Rate Data, N.Y. Times, June 22, 1989, at D2
- Joseph R. Perone, Sussex Banker Admits Fraud while Serving as Fed Director, Newark Star Ledger, June 22, 1987, at 1

- Shelby Gilje, This Traffic Violator May Face a Long, Restrictive 'Vacation', Seattle Times, June 8, 1989, at G3
- Laurence Arnold, Man Indicted in Franklin Phone Scam, Courier-News, June 7, 1989, at B-1
- Harris Collingwood, From Penny Stocks to a Guilty Plea, Bus. Week, June 5, 1989, at 96
- Lisa A. Soloway, Fight Against Political Corruption a Priority, N. Jersey Herald, June 5, 1989, at ***
- Tom Renner and Michael Arena, Strike Forces Strike Out, N.Y. Newsday, May 28, 1989, at 5
- Jersey Brokers Are Indicted*, N.Y. Times, May 26, 1989, at D12
- Todd Richissin, Three Former First Jersey Securities Indicted for Money Laundering, Associated Press, May 25, 1989
- Joseph R. Perone, 3 Ex-stockbrokers Indicted in Million-dollar Bilk, Newark Star Ledger, May 25, 1989, at 71
- Todd Richissin, Four Plead Guilty in Penny Stock Fraud Scheme, Associated Press, May 24, 1989
- Joseph Albright, Hudson Man Cited in Stock Scheme, Jersey J., May 24, 1989, at ***
- Earlene C. McMichael and Blanca M. Quintanilla, Hudson's Mayors Aren't Condemning Cicco, Jersey J., May 24, 1989, at ***
- Tom DiPiazza, In for a Penny, in for $67M, Bergen Record, May 24, 1989, at A1
- William T. Quinn, 4 Brokers Admit Role in Penny Stock Fraud, Newark Star Ledger, May 24, 1989, at 1
- Frances Ann Burns, Four From Penny Stock Firm Admit $67 Million Fraud, United Press Int'l, May 23, 1989
- Daniel J. Wakin, Jury Finds Korean-Born Businessman Guilty of Conspiracy, Associated Press, May 20, 1989
- Daniel J. Wakin, Jury Finds Businessman Guilty of Conspiracy in Nerve Gas Dealings, Associated Press, May 19, 1989
- Frances Ann Burns, Korean-American Exporter Convicted in Nerve Gas Plot, United Press Int'l, May 19, 1989
- Shipper Briefs*, J. of Commerce, May 16, 1989, at 1A

- Mark J. McGuire, Abuse Probe Grows, N. Jersey Herald, May 16, 1989, at ***
- Two City Officials Indicted*, , May 12, 1989, ***
- Rita Henley, Confidential Warning, Nat'l L.J., May 1, 1989, at ***
- Genevieve Gerard, Princeternships Provide Students Chance to Explore Career Options, Daily Princetonian, May 1, 1989, at ***
- Six Plead Innocent to Fraud*, J. of Commerce, May 1, 1989, at 9A
- Robert Rudolph, Guttenberg Mayor, Councilman Indicted, , , at ***
- Woman Indicted in Death*, , , at ***
- Paul Mickle, Woman Held in Death of Retarded Man, 23, , , at ***
- Insurance Briefs*, J. of Commerce, Apr. 21, 1989, at 9A
- 2 Camden Lawyers and Doctor Indicted in Insurance Fraud*, The Trentonian, Apr. 20, 1989, at ***
- Joseph McCaffery, South Jersey Doctor, 2 Lawyers Cited in Decade-long Insurance Scam, Newark Star Ledger, Apr. 20, 1989, at 40
- Jane M. Von Bergen, Insurance Scheme is Alleged, , , at ***
- Robert Rudolph, Chauffeur for 'Fat Man' Recalls Lifestyle of Rich, Famous for Rackets Trial, Newark Star Ledger, Apr. 15, 1989, at ***
- Edison Official Hit with Extortion Rap*, The Trentonian, Apr. 14, 1989, at ***
- Edison Official Charged with Taking Kickbacks*, United Press Int'l, Apr. 14, 1989
- Daniel J. Wakin, Feds Charge Edison Buyer Took Bribes, Elizabeth Daily J., Apr. 14, 1989, at ***
- Pat Politano, Edison Official Indicted in Kickback Case, Courier-News, Apr. 14, 1989, at ***
- Jim Consoli, 56 Linked to Cocaine Network, Bergen Record, Apr. 13, 1989, at A-1
- Accused Kingpin's Lawyer Subpoenaed*, N. Jersey Herald, Apr. 13, 1989, at ***
- Scott Friedman, Drug Cartel Smashed, N. Jersey Herald, Apr. 13, 1989, at B1

- Robert Rudolph, Judge Sentences Rapist to Life Without Parole, Newark Star Ledger, Apr. 12, 1989, at ***
- Todd Richissin, "Fat Tony" Salerno Pleads Guilty to Extortion, Associated Press, Apr. 11, 1989
- Ralph Siegel, Lawyer Hit with Tax Evasion Charges, Burlington County Times, Apr. 9, 1989, at ***
- Carol Comegno, Attorney for Camden County Indicted on Tax Evasion Charges, Camden County Courier-Post, Apr. 8, 1989, at 1
- Kathy Barrett Carter, Attorney for Camden County Faces Tax Counts, Newark Star Ledger, Apr. 8, 1989, at ***
- Alan Sipress, Paglione Indicted on Tax Counts, Philadelphia Inquirer, Apr. 8, 1989, at 1-B
- Michael Booth, Home's Operator Indicted, Trenton Times, Apr. 8, 1989, at ***
- Operator Is Charged in Death of Boarder*, , Apr. 8, 1989, at ***
- Woman Indicted in Death*, Newark Star Ledger, Apr. 8, 1989, at ***
- P.L. Wyckoff, Last 2 in Truck Theft Sting Operation Guilty in Federal Court Plea Bargain, Newark Star Ledger, Apr. 4, 1989, at ***
- Guy Sterling, Official Sees 'Satisfaction' in Probe by U.S. of Hudson Jail Conditions, , Apr. 23, 1989, at ***
- Beating Death at Jail Prompts U.S. Inquiry*, N.Y. Times, Mar., 21, 1989, at B4
- R. Clinton Taplin, U.S. Probing Hudson Lockup, Bergen Record, Mar. 21, 1989, at A-20
- Randy Diamond, More Jail-beating Allegations, N.Y. Daily News, Mar. 21, 1989, at 12
- Jeffrey Rubin, Alito Examining Rights Violations, Hudson Dispatch, Mar. 21, 1989, at 1
- Yun Guilty in Nerve Gas Case*, Associated Press, ***
- Charges Dismissed in Extortion Trial of Newark Councilman*, Associated Press, ***
- Michael O'Regan, Gang War Looms as Mafia Splits under Pressure, Hobart Mercury, Mar. 18, 1989
- Frances Ann Burns, Prosecutor Found Insane in Obstruction Case, United Press Int'l, Mar. 10, 1989

- Patricia Cappon, Former Wayne Mayor Messercola Pleads Guilty in $50,000 Extortion, Newark Star Ledger, Mar. 10, 1989, at ***
- Elite Mob Squads May End*, Hudson Dispatch, Mar. 6, 1989, at ***
- Robert Rudolph, Thornburgh Weighs Merger of Crime Strike Forces into Justice 'Machinery', Newark Star Ledger, Mar. 5, 1989, at 26
- Dave Neese, On the Run, The Trentonian, Mar. 3, 1989, at 37
- David Hardy, Embezzler Rap: 2 1/2 Years, N.Y. Daily News, Mar. 2, 1989, at ***
- Robert Rudolph, Mob Trial Focusing Its Glare on Gotti Slay Plot, Newark Star Ledger, Feb. 26, 1989, at 17
- A Call for Tougher Wiretap Law in N.J.*, Bergen Record, Feb. 24, 1989, at A-5
- Richard Esposito and Scott Ladd, Kikumura in Prison: 'This Is My World', , , at 4
- Todd Richissin, Accused Terrorist Found Tools to Kill in K Marts, Art Stores, Associated Press, Feb. 10, 1989
- Ex-Regina Executives Plead Guilty to Fraud*, Chicago Tribune, Feb. 9, 1989, at C6
- Robert Hanley, 2 Former Regina Officers Plead Guilty to Fraud Charges, N.Y. Times, Feb. 9, 1989, at D2
- 2 Plead Guilty to Fraud at Regina*, St. Louis Post-Dispatch, Feb. 9, 1989, at 14D
- Regina Sues Ex-Chairman*, United Press Int'l, Feb. 9, 1989
- William T. Quinn, 2 Ex-Regina Top Execs Admit $15 Million Fraud, Newark Star Ledger, Feb. 9, 1989, at 1
- Andrea Rothman, Two Ex-Officers of Regina Plead Guilty of Fraud, Wall St. J., Feb. 9, 1989, at ***
- U.S. Sentences Man who had Bombs*, Chicago Tribune, Feb. 8, 1989, at 15C
- Former Regina Officers Admit Fraud*, L.A. Times, Feb. 8, 1989, at Part 1, Page 2
- Suspected Terrorist Sentenced*, St. Louis Post-Dispatch, Feb. 8, 1989, at 7A
- Wayne Beissert, Red Army Terrorist Sentenced to 30 Years, USA Today, Feb. 8, 1989, at 3A

- Mike Koleniaka and Marsha Kranes, 'Red Bomber' Targeted Three City Colleges, Feb. 8, 1989, at 3
- Robert Rudolph, Defiant Pike Terrorist Draws 30-year Term, Newark Star Ledger, Feb. 8, 1989, at 1
- Thomas Moran, International Terrorist Gets 30-year Term, Bergen Record, Feb. 8, 1989, at ***
- Robert Hanley, Defendant Gets 30 Years in Jail in Bombing Plot, N.Y. Times, Feb. 8, 1989, at ***
- Todd Richissin, Accused Terrorist Sentenced to 30 Years, Associated Press, Feb. 7, 1989
- Melanie Mader, Sentencing of Accused Japanese Red Army Terrorist Delayed, Associated Press, Feb. 7, 1989
- Melanie Mader, Convicted Japanese Terrorist to be Sentenced, Associated Press, Feb. 6, 1989
- Frances Ann Burns, Sentencing for Alleged Terrorist, United Press Int'l, Feb. 6, 1989
- Ken Stier, Kikumura Doing Gaddafi's Biddin, U.S. Prosecutors Say, Japan Econ. Newswire, Feb. 4, 1989
- Robert Rudolph, Pike Bomb Carrier Tied to Libya, Newark Star Ledger, Feb. 4, 1989, at ***
- Howard Kurtz, Terrorist Bomb Plot Outlined; Kikumura Allegedly Targeted New York, Wash. Post, Feb. 3, 1989, at A3
- Darlene J. Weiner, 'Scheme' Arrest, The Trentonian, Jan. 31, 1989, at ***
- Darlene J. Weiner, Scam Indictment Names Three Men, The Trentonian, Jan. 27, 1989, at 28
- Michael Booth, 3 Indicted on Charges of $1M Housing Scam, Trenton Times, , at ***
- James Berzok, 3 Accused of Defrauding Desperate Homeowners, Newark Star Ledger, Jan. 27, 1989, at 3
- Robert Rudolph, Mastermind of School Bus Graft Draws 6 Years, Newark Star Ledger, Jan. 26, 1989, at 32
- Joseph F. Sullivan, School Official Admits Guilt in Bribery Case, N.Y. Times, Jan. 24, 1989, at B3
- Lauren Robinson, Newark School Official Admits 'Jobs-for-pay', Newark Star Ledger, Jan. 24, 1989, at 1

- Robert Rudolph, Dad, 2 Cadets Seized in Armored Car Heist, Newark Star Ledger, Jan. 19, 1989, at 1
- U.S. Seeks to Force Information From Fraud Suspect with Jail Term*, Associated Press, ***
- Robert Rudolph, Terrorist Threat Keeps Jersey Lawmen Vigilant, Newark Star Ledger, Dec. 26, 1988, at ***
- Jane M. Von Bergen, Staff Gaps Hinder Corruption Probes, , Dec. 25, 1988, at 1-B
- Report: N.J. Faces Risk of Terrorism*, United Press Int'l, ***
- Ex-Regulator Denies Charges of Fraud in U.S.*, Toronto Star, Dec. 16, 1988, at E2
- Tom Toolen, Three Indicted in Stock Fraud, Bergen Record, Dec. 16, 1988, at B-8
- Daniel J. Wakin, Three Charged in Stock Fraud, Associated Press, Dec. 15, 1998
- Robert Rudolph, Sewage Official Admits False Pollution Reports, Newark Star Ledger, Dec. 13, 1988, at ***
- New Jersey Man Sentenced, Fined for Illegal Cable Decoders*, Broadcasting, Dec. 12, 1988, at 59
- Ron Givens, Verdict on a Terrorist, Newsweek, Dec. 12, 1988, at 6
- Robert Rudolph, 'Tips' from the Public Enlarge Federal Probes of Corruption in Newark, Dec. 11, 1988, at ***
- Christine Winter, Ex-Fed Official Charged in Leks on Discount Rate, Dec. 9, 1988, at 1C
- Daniel J. Wakin, Former NY Fed Member Indicted for Insider Trading, Associated Press, Dec. 9, 1988
- Fed Ex-Director Indicted as Insider*, World News Digest, Dec. 9, 1988, at 911 C2
- Joseph F. Sullivan, A Former Official of Federal Bank Indicted as Insider, N.Y. Times, Dec. 9, 1988, at A1
- Marilee Loboda Braue and Kathleen Lynn, Ex-Fed Director Indicted in Leak, Dec. 9, 1988, at 1
- Matthew Winkler, Ex-Director of New York Fed Charged with Revealing Data on Discount Rate, Wall St. J., Dec. 9, 1988, at ***
- Former Director of N.Y. Fed Charged*, Trenton Times, Dec. 9, 1988, at B16

- Joseph R. Perone, Top Jersey Banker Indicted in Fed Leaks, Newark Star Ledger, Dec. 9, 1988, at 1
- Daniel J. Wakin, Former NY Fed Director Charged for Insider Trading, Associated Press, Dec. 8, 1988
- Al Frank, 2 Orange Cops Admit Drug Dealer Payoffs, Newark Star Ledger, Dec. 8, 1988, at ***
- David Brooks, Pipe Bomb Trial Turns into a Dud, N.J.L.J., Dec. 8, 1988, at 1
- Cable Piracy Charges Net Three-Year Sentence*, United Press Int'l, Dec. 5, 1988
- U.S. Convicts Reputed Terrorist in Weapons Case*, Chicago Tribune, Nov. 30, 1988, at 3C
- Court Convicts Japanese Man in Bombing Plot*, L.A. Times, Nov. 30, 1988, at Part 1, Page 24
- Robert Hanley, Suspected Terrorist Convicted in Bomb Case, N.Y. Times, Nov. 30, 1988, at B1
- Suspected Terrorist Guilty of Carrying Pipe Bombs*, Wash. Post, Nov. 30, 1988, at A16
- Robert Rudolph, Pike Terrorist Gains a 'Deal', Newark Star Ledger, Nov. 30, 1988, at 1
- Thomas Moran, Suspected Terrorist Is Convicted, Bergen Record, Nov. 30, 1988, at A-1
- A Terror Verdict*, N.Y. Daily News, Nov. 30, 1988, at 10
- Nina Shapiro, Bomber Admits Guilt, Hudson Dispatch, Nov. 30, 1988, at 1
- Charges Admitted at Trial*, Associated Press, Nov. 30, 1988
- Thomas Moran, Lawyer Admits Terror Suspect Had Bombs, Bergen Record, , at ***
- Daniel J. Wakin, Judge Convicts Uncontesting Japanese of Transporting Bombs, Associated Press, Nov. 29, 1988
- Frances Ann Burns, Terrorist Suspect Guilty of Explosives Charges, United Press Int'l, Nov. 29, 1988
- Daniel J. Wakin, Accused Japanese Terrorist Says He Will Admit Charges, Associated Press, Nov. 28, 1988
- Andrew Blum et. al., Sikhs can be Extradited, Nat'l L.J., Nov. 21, 1988, at 6
- Fraud is Charged at Eagle-Picher*, N.Y. Times, Nov. 19, 1988, at A35
- Ohio Firm Defrauded U.S.: Gov't*, The Trentonian, Nov. 18, 1988, at 11

- Defense Contractor Accused of Fraud*, Associated Press, Nov. 18, 1988
- Newark School Official Denies Extorting Cash from Teachers for Promotions*, Newark Star Ledger, Nov. 11, 1988, at ***
- Robert Rudolph, Owner of Routing Firm Admits Lying to School Bus Corruption Probers, Newark Star Ledger, Nov. 11, 1988, at ***
- Yardley Resident Admits Perjury*, Trenton Times, Nov. 11, 1988, at A2
- Yardley Man Says He Lied to Jury*, The Trentonian, Nov. 11, 1988, at 10
- Henry Gottlieb, Drug Bill to the Rescue, N.J.L.J., Nov. 10, 1988, at 1
- Eugene Kelly, Man Admits Guilt in Gambling Ring, Bergen Record, Nov. 8, 1988, at ***
- Daniel J. Wakin, Dredging Linked to Garbage, Associated Press, , at ***
- Maritime Briefs*, J. of Commerce, Nov. 7, 1988, at 3B
- Jesus Rangel, Federal Brief Describes Illegal New York Dumping, N.Y. Times, Nov. 6, 1988, at A55
- Eugene Kiely, Garbage Slicks Linked to N.Y. Dredging, Bergen Record, Nov. 4, 1988, at A-5
- Robert Rudolph, N.Y. Dredging Linked to 'Trashed' Shore, Newark Star Ledger, Nov. 4, 1988, at 1
- Jesus Rangel, Extortion of Teachers is Charged, N.Y. Times, Nov. 1, 1988, at B1
- Patricia Cappon, Newark School Official Cited on Job Extortion, Newark Star Ledger, Nov. 1, 1988, at ***
- Newark School Official Indicted*, United Press Int'l, Nov. 1, 1988, at ***
- Ex-school Bus Official Gets Prison*, Associated Press, ***
- School Board Member Indicted in Newark Corruption Investigation*, Associated Press, Oct. 31, 1988
- Bribes for Promotions Probed in Newark*, Associated Press, Oct. 31, 1988, at A3
- Mary E. Derieg, Sewer Plant Head Indicted, The Progress, Oct. 27, 1988, at 1
- Analyses of Sewage Falsified*, Asbury Park Press, Oct. 22, 1988, at ***

- Meg Nugent and Guy Sterling, Caldwell Sewage Plant Chief Accused of Falsifying Test Data, Newark Star Ledger, Oct. 22, 1988, at 1
- Daniel J. Wakin, Civil Racketeering Charge Brought Against Reputed Mob Head, Associated Press, Oct. 14, 1988
- Daniel J. Wakin, Mob Figure Sued in Teamsters Case; Jury Selection in Ohio Union Trial, Associated Press, Oct. 14, 1988
- Newark School Probe Is One of a Series Under Way Throughout the State*, Newark Star Ledger, Oct. 3, 1988, at 1
- Jesus Rangel, 2 Bribery Inquiries Examine Newark School System, N.Y. Times, Oct. 2, 1988, at A41
- Patricia Cappon, Teachers in Newark Tell of Job Extortion, , , at ***
- U.S. Attorney's Office May Reduce Staff*, Burlington County Times, Sept. 29, 1988, at ***
- U.S. Attorney's Office in N.J. Facing Possible Cuts in Staff*, Trenton Times, Sept. 29, 1988, at A7
- Justice Department Plans to Trim Staff*, Associated Press, Sept. 29, 1988
- Jersey Man Pleads Guilty in Cable TV Fraud*, N.Y. Times, Sept. 18, 1988, at A40
- Man Pleads Guilty on Cable TV Piracy Ring*, N.Y. Times, Sept. 17, 1988, at A34
- Leader of Alleged Major Cable Piracy Ring Pleads Guilty*, Trenton Times, Sept. 17, 1988, at A8
- Man Pleads Guilty in Cable Scam*, Atlantic City Press, Sept. 17, 1988, at ***
- Robert Rudolph, Jerseyan Cited as the Kingpin of Cable Fraud, Newark Star Ledger, Sept. 17, 1988, at 1
- David Hardy, Cable TV Thief Admits Guilt, N.Y. Daily News, Sept. 17, 1988, at ***
- Frances Ann Burns, Regional News: New Jersey, United Press Int'l, Sept. 16, 1988
- Rita Henley Jensen, Not a Good Year, Nat'l L.J., Sept. 12, 1988, at 2
- Tom Krattenmaker, Man Stripped of U.S. Citizenship Because of Death Camp Activity, Associated Press, Sept. 9, 1988
- Mafia Trial: 21 Months, 20 Cleared*, Facts on File World News Digest, Sept. 9, 1988, at E2

- Bonnie Britt, Action Foreseen on Garbage Slick, , Asbury Park Press, Sept. 4, 1988, at A1
- Endurance Trial*, Trenton Times Aug. 30, 1988, at A6
- Lucia Annunziata, "E' Vero, La Mafia Ci Ha Sconfitti": Lo Sfogo Del Grande Inquisitore USA, la Repubblica, Aug. 30, 1988, at 1
- Jury: Judge Blamed for Confusion on Verdicts*, Bergen Record, Aug. 30, 1988, at 1
- Michael White, US Jury Acquits Mafia Family, The Guardian, Aug. 29, 1988
- Neil Reisner and Fred Pieretti, Lynch: City Never Knew of New Gassaro Charges, Central N.J. Home News, Aug. 29, 1988, at A1
- Tom Johnson, 'Minor' Polluters Pay Toward Lipari Cleanup, Newark Star Ledger, Aug. 29, 1988, at ***
- Trucking Exec Cited in Fraud*, Newark Star Ledger, Aug. 29, 1988, at ***
- 20 Reputed Mobsters Acquitted; Verdict Hands U.S. a Stunning Defeat in 21-Month Long Trial*, L.A. Times, Aug. 28, 1988, Part 1, Page 6
- Kirk Johnson, Dissension Among Jurors Emerges after Lucchese Verdict, N.Y. Times, Aug. 28, 1988, at A30
- 20 Cleared of Mob Racketeering; U.S. Jury Verdict Stuns Prosecution in 21-Month Trial*, Chicago Tribune, Aug. 27, 1988, at C4
- Daniel J. Wakin, All Acquitted in Longest-Running Federal Criminal Trial, Associated Press, Aug. 27, 1988
- Jesus Rangel, All 20 Acquitted in Jersey Mob Case, N.Y. Times, Aug. 27, 1988, at A1
- Scott Ladd, Federal Jury in Rackets Trial Stuns by Acquitting All 20, Newsday, Aug. 27, 1988, at 3
- Jesus Rangel, 20 Acquitted in Organized Crime Trial, St. Petersburg Times, Aug. 27, 1988, at 1A
- Daniel J. Wakin, Lucchese Jury Quickly Acquits 20, Trenton Times, Aug. 27, 1988, at A1
- Daniel J. Wakin, Jury Begins Deliberating in 2-Year Racketeering Trial, Associated Press, Aug. 26, 1988
- Domestic News*, United Press Int'l, Aug. 26, 1988

- Prosecutor: Not Embarrassed by Mob Loss*, United Press Int'l, Aug. 26, 1988
- Daniel J. Wakin, Jury Begins Deliberating in 2-Year Racketeering Trial, Associated Press, Aug. 25, 1988
- Daniel J. Wakin, Mob Trial Concluding After Nearly Two Years, Associated Press, Aug. 22, 1998
- Brothers Indicted for Fraud in Moving Service Members Out of State*, Associated Press, Aug. 12, 1998
- Inmate Is Accused of Running a Scam From Federal Prison*, Wall St. J., Aug. 8, 1988, at 5
- Domestic News*, United Press Int'l, Aug. 5, 1998
- 'Crippling' Indictments Illuminate Mob Activity*, Burlington County Times, June 29, 1988, at 30
- Robert Rudolph, , Newark Star Ledger, July 29, 1988, at 5
- EPA Announces Partial Settlement at No. 1 Superfund Site in U.S.*, PR Newswire, July 28, 1998
- David Brooks, U.S. Attorney Seeks to Remove Two Predecessors from a Case, N.J.L.J., July 28, 1988, at 1
- New Charges Filed for Bomb Suspect*, N.Y. Times, July 23, 1988, at A32
- U.S. Attorney Sees Conflict of Interest*, Bergen Record, July 20, 1988, at ***
- U.S. Attorney Aims to Exclude Law Firm from Trucking Case*, Associated Press, ***
- $24M Due U.S. Is Paid in N.J.*, , , at ***
- Lawyer Terms Bribery Charge Against Mayor Possible Setup*, Associated Press, ***
- Traffic Briefs*, J. of Commerce, July 14, 1988, at 2B
- Daniel J. Watkin, Stolen Tractor-trailer Sting Nets 26 Arrests, Nw. N.J. Daily Record (Morris County), July 13, 1988, at 1
- Stephen Redshaw, Hot Rigs for 'Sale', Newark Star Ledger, July 13, 1988, at 1
- 2-year Operation Rings up $9 Million in Tractors and Cars at 'Leasing' Firm*, , , at ***
- Alito Decides Against Appeal in Garage Case*, Associated Press, ***
- FBI Sting Operation Nets 170 Stolen Vehicles*, Burlington County Times, July 13, 1988, at ***

- Meg Lundstrom, Biggest FBI Sting Nets 34 in Thefts, Bergen Record, July 13, 1988, at A-12
- Neil Reisner, Web Gets Bigger in Bus Scandal, Central N.J. Home News, , at 1
- Domestic News*, United Press Int'l, July 12, 1988
- Jenny Kellner, Bus Scam Widens, Woodbridge News Tribune, July 7, 1988, at 1
- Daniel J. Wakin, Prosecution Viewed as Weakening Mob Ruling Body, Associated Press, July 4, 1988
- Daniel J. Wakin, Gotti Plot Sign of Weakened Mob "Commission," Associated Press, July 3, 1988
- Stephanie Stokes, Denies FBI Charge of Extorting Bribe, Bergen Record, July 1, 1988, at A-1
- Daniel J. Wakin, Reputed N.J. Mob Figures Accused of Plot to Kill Gotti, Associated Press, ***,
- Luchese Family Trial, Dragged out to Record Length, May Be Unique*, United Press Int'l, ***,
- Frances Ann Burns, "Kidnapped" Mayor Released on Bail, United Press Int'l, June 30, 1988
- Daniel J. Wakin, Reputed Genovese Crime Family Members Indicted, Associated Press, June 29, 1988
- Daniel J. Wakin, FBI Warned Reputed Mobster of Assassination Plot, Associated Press, June 29, 1988
- Robert Hanley, 3 Indicted by U.S. in '87 Mob Slaying, N.Y. Times, June 29, 1988, at A1
- Frances Ann Burns, Prosecutor: Accused Mob Boss May Flee Rival's Wrath, United Press Int'l, June 29, 1988
- Mary Belcher, Racketeering Charges Slapped on 22 Figures, Wash. Times, June 29, 1988, at ***,
- Robert Hanley, 22 Mob Figures Charged by U.S., N.Y. Times, June 29, 1988, at 1
- Businessman Admits Importing Tainted Cheese*, Woodbridge News Tribune, June 28, 1988, at ***,
- NJ Trucking Executive Indicted*, J. of Commerce, June 27, 1988, at 2B
- David Hardy, Cheezy Way to go, Bizman Admits, N.Y. Daily News, June 26, 1988, at ***,

- Robert Schwaneberg, Judiciary Panel Hears Both Sides of Preventive Detention Argument, Newark Star Ledger, June 24, 1988, at ***
- Murray Weiss, Jersey Drug Kingpin Busted, N.Y. Post, June 23, 1988, at ***
- Robert Rudolph, 'The Family': Essex Man Seized as Jersey Drug Overlord, Newark Star Ledger, June 23, 1988, at 1
- FBI 'Sting' Brings 26 Arrests in Thefts of Tractor-trailers*, Associated Press, ***
- Company Founder Found Guilty of Conspiracy*, Associated Press, ***
- Robert Hanley, U.S. Charges Ex-School Official in Jersey City Corruption Inquiry, N.Y. Times, June 16, 1988, at B4
- N.J. School Extortion*, Newsday, June 16, 1988, at 14
- Jersey City Ex-schools Official Tied to Extortion*, Central N.J. Home News, June 16, 1988, at ***
- Robert Rudolph, Ex-Jersey City School Official Cited Amid Corruption Probe, Newark Star Ledger, June 16, 1988, at 1
- Ronald Leir, U.S. Charges Fisher in $250G Extortion, Jersey J., June 16, 1988, at 1
- Seaside Park Man Charged in Extortion*, Associated Press, June 16, 1988
- Elliot Pinsley, Ex-Jersey City Aide Charged with Extortion, Bergen Record, June 16, 1988, at ***
- Daniel J. Wakin, Ex-Jersey City School Official Named in Extortion Indictment, Daily Record (Morris County), June 16, 1988, at ***
- Matthew Dietrich, Ex-school Official Indicted, Hudson Dispatch, June 16, 1988, at 1
- Daniel J. Wakin, Attorney: Director Innocent of Charges in Jersey City Probe, Burlington County Times, June 16, 1988, at 28
- Ex-judge Admits to Downgrading Charge*, Burlington County Times, June 8, 1988, at 29
- Former School Employee Indicted*, Trenton Times, , at A4
- Ex-Insurance Agent in Jersey Pleads Guilty in Fraud Case*, N.Y. Times, June 4, 1988, at A32
- Gregory A. Robb, Inquires Into Crazy Eddie Find False Financial Data, N.Y. Times, May 28, 1988, at 33

- Cuban Pleads Guilty to Illegal Arms Shipment*, PR Newswire, May 26, 1988
- Mary Helen Gillespie, Woodbury Firm, Former Executive Plead Guilty to Illegal Arms Sales, Associated Press, May 26, 1988
- Analyst Admits Tax-Evasion Try*, Asbury Park Press, May 26, 1988, at C24
- Lawyers Fight Charges Against Bomb Suspect*, Asbury Park Press, May 26, 1988
- 9 Accused of Arranging Marriages So Aliens Could Gain Citizenship*, N.Y. Times, May 25, 1988, at B2
- Arranged Marriages for U.S. Citizenship Charged in 2 Cases*, Asbury Park Press, May 25, 1988, at ***
- Clothing Maker Gets Three Years in Tax Evasion Case*, Associated Press, May 23, 1988
- Barbara Kukla, Branch Indictment Part of Larger Probe, Newark Star Ledger, May 23, 1988, at N1
- Robert Rudolph, U.S. Begins Drive to Collect Millions from Loan, Fine Deadbeats in Jersey, Newark Star Ledger, May 22, 1988, at 20
- Matt Fagan, U.S. Sweep for 'Defaulters' Nets Lawrenceville Doctor, The Trentonian, May 22, 1988, at ***
- New Jerseyans Forced to Fork It Over*, Associated Press, Herald News, May 22, 1988
- Rich Wilner, Trucker Walsh Faces New Indictments, Daily News Record, May 19, 1988, at 15
- Mark Uhlig, 8 Reputed Members of Genovese Family Indicted by U.S. Jury, N.Y. Times, May 19, 1988, at B5
- Rich Wilner, Trucker Walsh Indicted on Reputed Mob Payoffs, Women's Wear Daily, May 19, 1988, at 2
- Peter J. Sampson, 8 Indicted in Mobsters' Sandpit Plot, Bergen Record, May 19, 1988, B-1
- Robert Rudolph, Mob Chiefs Charged in Takeover of Firm, Newark Star Ledger, May 19, 1988, at 1
- Crime Family Members Indicted in Firm's Takeover*, Burlington County Times, May 19, 1988, at 18

Stanley E. Terrell, Man, 2 Sons Indicted in Cattle Scam, Newark Star Ledger, May 19, 1988, at ***

 The Trentonian, May 19, 1988, at ***

Michael Booth, Hopewell Cattlemen Held in $6M Tax Fraud, Trenton Times, May 19, 1988, at A1

Paul Mickle, Feds Indict Rancher on Fraud Charges, The Trentonian, May 19, 1988, at 1

A Newark Councilman is Charged with Graft, N.Y. Times, May 18, 1988, at B3

Federal Commission Denies Parole for Reputed Mobster, Trenton Times, May 18, 1988, at ***

Jim Consoli, Parole Is Denied to Labor Racketeer, Bergen Record, May 18, 1988, at ***

Robert Rudolph, U.S. Indicts Newark Councilman for Kickbacks on City Properties, Newark Star Ledger, May 18, 1988, at 1

Newark Official Charged, United Press Int'l, May 18, 1988

Robert Rudolph, Firms to Pay $5 Million for Cleanup of Landfill, Newark Star Ledger, May 17, 1988, at ***

Elliot Pinsley, Truck Executive Indicted, Bergen Record, May 17, 1988, at A-1

Robert Rudolph, 'Sweetheart' Mob Deal is Detailed, Newark Star Ledger, May 17, 1988, at 14

Daniel J. Wakin, Firm Official Charged in Racketeering Scheme, Burlington County Times, May 17, 1988, at 4

Frances Ann Burns, Trucker Charged with Paying off Teamsters Local, United Press Int'l, May 16, 1988

Robert Rudolph, FBI Is Ready to Move Against Mob Infiltration, Newark Star Ledger, May 16, 1988, at 1

Judy Peet, 10 Paterson Post Office Workers Arraigned on Heroin, Coke Charges, Newark Star Ledger, May 12, 1988, at ***

Postal Workers Charged in Sale of Illegal Drugs, Asbury Park Press, May 12, 1988, at ***

Joe B. Warrick, Domestic News, United Press Int'l, May 10, 1988

Guy Sterling, Lawmen Base Search for DiGilio on Possibility of a Fatal Mob Fued, Newark Star Ledger, May 10, 1988, at 1

- James Berzok, White-Collar Crime, Newark Star Ledger, May 8, 1988, at 46
- Robert Rudolph, Firms to Pay Millions for Key Toxic Cleanup, Newark Star Ledger, May 5, 1988, at 1
- $17.25 Million Cash Settlement Reached on Price's Landfill*, PR Newswire, May 4, 1988
- Robert Rudolph, Heroin 'Supermarket' Smashed in Newark, Newark Star Ledger, May 4, 1988, at 1
- Arrests Bring End in Newark to Heroin Ring*, Asbury Park Press, May 4, 1988, at ***
- Diane Haines, U.S. Attorney: Drug War Winnable, N. Jersey Herald, May 3, 1988, at B-4
- Attorney: Deck Stacked Against Terrorist Suspect*, N. Jersey Herald, May 1, 1988
- Henry Stern, Kunstler: Deck Stacked Against Suspected Japanese Terrorist, Associated Press, Apr. 30, 1988
- Kunstler Claims U.S. Creating Hysteria in Pipe Bombs Case*, Trenton Times, Apr. 30, 1988, at A13
- Japanese Pleads Not Guilty in Turnpike Explosives Case*, Wash. Post, Apr. 30, 1988, at A11
- Henry Stern, Kunstler: Government Creating Paranoia Around Alleged Turnpike Bomb-Carrier, Associated Press, Apr. 29, 1988
- Henry Stern, Japanese Terrorist Suspect Pleads Innocent to Weapons Possession Charges, Associated Press, Apr. 29, 1988
- Frances Ann Burns, Japanese Terror Suspect Pleads Not Guilty, United Press Int'l, Apr. 29, 1988
- Bombs in New Jersey and Naples*, Time, Apr. 25, 1988, at 36
- Government Files 12-Count Indictment Against Man Arrested on Turnpike*, Associated Press, Apr. 23, 1988
- U.S. Grand Jury Indicts Kikumura on 12 Counts*, Japan Econ. Newswire, Apr. 23, 1988
- Japanese Man Indicted in Pipe Bomb Probe*, L.A. Times, Apr. 23, 1988, at Part 1, Page 26
- Robert Hanley, Grand Jury Indicts Man Arrested on Jersey Turnpike with Bombs, N.Y. Times, Apr. 23, 1988, at A34

- Government Files 12-Count Indictment Against Man Arrested on Turnpike*, Associated Press, Apr. 22, 1988
- Kikumura Pleads Not Guilty in U.S.*, Japan Econ. Newswire, Apr. 20, 1988
- Reputed Mobster Could Get Paroled*, Asbury Park Press, Apr. 20, 1988, at B20
- Sam Meddis, Lawyer Kunstler Wants Red Army Case, USA Today, Apr. 19, 1988, at 4A
- Suspected Japanese Terrorist Nabbed in U.S. Denied Bail*, Japan Econ. Newswire, Apr. 16, 1988
- Howard Kurtz, Suspected Terrorist Sparks Intense Probe, Wash. Post, Apr. 16, 1988, at A20
- Federal Judge Orders Japanese Man on Explosives Charges Held without Bail*, Associated Press, Apr. 15, 1988
- Robert Hanley, U.S. Says Man May be Linked with Terrorists, N.Y. Times, Apr. 15, 1988, at B3
- Indictment: 2 Lawmen Tipped Drug Dealer*, Associated Press, Apr. 15, 1988
- Indictment Says Investigators Protected Cocaine 'Kingpin'*, Associated Press, Apr. 15, 1988
- Robert Rudolph, Two Essex Lawmen Accused of Selling out to Drug Kingpin, Newark Star Ledger, Apr. 15, 1988, at 1
- Diane Curcio, 2 Suspended in Probe of Police Graft, , Apr. 15, 1988, at ***
- Bob McMahon, Suspected Japanese Red Army Terrorist Held on Federal Charges, Associated Press, Apr. 14, 1988
- Rita Henley Jensen, A Career Careens Off Track, Nat'l L.J., Apr. 11, 1988, at 1
- New Hearing Requested for Two Sikhs*, Asbury Park Press, Mar. 31, 1988, at A3
- New Hearing Is Sought for 2 Sikhs*, Associated Press, Mar. 31, 1988
- Wayward Buses*, Trenton Times, Mar. 30, 1988, at A16
- Extradition Hearing for Two Sikhs Is Sought*, Trenton Times, Mar. , 1988, at ***
- Alfonso A. Narvaez, 5 Are Charged with Deception in Bus Scheme, N.Y. Times, Mar. 29, 1988, at B2
- 5 Accused in School Bus Payoffs*, Daily J. (Vineland, N.J.), Mar. 29, 1988, at 1
- Former Officials Charged with Taking Payoffs*, Asbury Park Press, Mar. 29, 1988

- 3 Charged with Taking Payoffs from Bus Firms*, Bergen Record, Mar. 29, 1988, at A-4
- N.J. School Board Officials Charged with Taking Payoffs*, The Trentonian, Mar. 29, 1988, at 20
- U.S. Attorney Says Lawyer Fabricated Sikh Death Threats*, United Press Int'l, ***
- Prosecutor Describes Suspect in Allegedly Fabricated Threats*, Associated Press, ***
- Daniel J. Wakin, Court to Disclose Some Records on Allegedly Fabricated Threats, Associated Press, Mar. 27, 1988
- Metro Datelines: Lawyer Says Official Misled FBI*, N.Y. Times, Mar. 23, 1988, at B2
- Sikh's Lawyer Says Prosecutor Faked Description of Suspect*, Asbury Park Press, Mar. 23, 1988, at B18
- Prosecutor Said to Give Data for Sketch to FBI*, Jersey J., Mar. 23, 1988, at 34
- Sherry Conohan and Steve Chambers, FBI Plans Mob Cases in Court, , , at ***
- Doctor Denies Faking Data in Arthritis Studies*, Associated Press, ***
- Man Found with Bombs in Car in N.J. is Jailed without Bail*, Associated Press, ***
- U.S. Attorney Appoints Eight to Fill Top Posts*, Associated Press, ***
- Daniel J. Wakin, Lawyer: Prosecutor Described Suspect in Allegedly Fabricated Threats, Associated Press, Mar. 22, 1988
- Daniel J. Wakin, Special Prosecutor Implicated in Manufacturing Threats in Terror Case, Associated Press, Mar. 22, 1988
- Sam Howe Verhovek, Bogus Threats Suspected in Indian Case, N.Y. Times, Mar. 22, 1988, at B1
- False Threats Alleged*, Wash. Post, Mar. 22, 1988, at A16
- Robert Rudolph, 'Insider' Accused: U.S. Says Prosecutor Mailed Death Threats, Newark Star Ledger, Mar. 22, 1988, at 1
- Jim Consoll, Ex-federal Prosecutor Accused of Fake Threats, Bergen Record, Mar. 22, 1988, at A-1
- Sikh Case Threats Result in Probe of Ex-Prosecutor*, Asbury Park Press, Mar. 22, 1988, at ***

- Former Prosecutor under Investigation Concerning Threats*, Associated Press, Mar. 22, 1988
- Daniel J. Wakin, Special Prosecutor Implicated in Manufacturing Threats in Terror Case, Associated Press, Mar. 21, 1988
- Frances Ann Burns, Prosecutor Accused of Manufacturing Death Threats, United Press Int'l, Mar. 21, 1988
- Alfonso A. Narvaez, U.S. Indicts Co-Founder of an Irradiation Concern, N.Y. Times, Mar. 20, 1988, at A36
- Daniel J. Wakin, Vast, Worldwide Money-Laundering Scheme Charged, Associated Press, Mar. 18, 1988
- Former Casino Pit Boss Gambles, Loses with IRS*, Associated Press, Mar. 18, 1988
- Alfonso A. Narvaez, A Radiation Company Admits Safety Violations, N.Y. Times, Mar. 17, 1988, at B1
- Joseph McCaffery, Lawyer Asked to Defend Mob Boss Says Judge Overstepped Authority, Newark Star Ledger, Mar. 9, 1988, at 20
- Michael Booth, Stronger Pontani Indictment Sought, , , at ***
- Pontani, in Jail for Life, Is Victim of System, His Attorney Says*, United Press Int'l, ***
- Daniel J. Wakin, Physician, Ex-Hospital Official Charged in Drug Study Fraud, Associated Press, Feb. 20, 1988
- Morton Mintz, M.D. Indicted for Drug Tests, Wash. Post, Feb. 20, 1988, at G2
- Bruce Bailey, Prominent MD Accused of Reaping Millions in Clinical Drug Studies Scam, Newark Star Ledger, Feb. 20, 1988, at 1
- Frances Ann Burns, Domestic News, United Press Int'l, Feb. 18, 1988
- Robert Rudolph, Probe Links Mobsters to Waterfront Project, Newark Star Ledger, Feb. 15, 1988, at 1
- Kathryn Kahler, U.S. Attorneys Will Assume Control of Independent Mob Strike Forces, Newark Star Ledger, Feb. 11, 1988, at 58
- Elliot Pinsley and Amalia Duarte, Judge Bars 2 Teterboro Firms from Running Flights, N.J. Record, Jan. 28, 1988, at B-7
- Judge Won't Stop Air Cargo Operation*, Asbury Park Press, Jan. 28, 1988, at ***

- Nick Chiles, Defender to Appeal Stiff Term, , Jan. 28, , at ***
- Richard Witkin, 2 Cargo Companies Accused of Illegal Fights, N.Y. Times, Jan. 27, 1988, at B1
- Robert Rudolph, Probers in Jersey See 'Institutionalized' Graft, Newark Star Ledger, Jan. 11, 1988, at 1
- Dick Laventhal, Accused SS Guard: Neighbors Paint a Different Picture, , , at ***
- N.J. Man Loses Citizenship for Serving as Nazi Guard*, Associated Press, Dec. , 1987
- Ex-union President Charged with Fraud*, United Press Int'l, ***
- Robert Rudolph, U.S. and State Will Pool Resources to Bolster War on Organized Crime, Newark Star Ledger, Dec. 23, 1987, at 1
- Reactions Mixed to the News of Fugitive's Capture*, Bergen Record, at ***
- Fugitive Ex-Senator, 'Dead' 27 Months, is Captured*, Chicago Tribune, Dec. 24, 1987, at 8C
- Judy Giannettino, Fugitive Former State Senator Seized on Island, Associated Press, Dec. 23, 1987
- Joseph F. Sullivan, Fugitive New Jersey Politician Seized Off India's Coast, N.Y. Times, Dec. 23, 1987, at B1
- Friedland Arrested on Resort Island*, Trenton Times, Dec. 23, 1987, at A1
- Judy Giannettino, Fugitive Politician Nabbed Overseas, Daily Record (Morris County), Dec. 23, 1987, at A1
- Jim DeRogatis, Fugitive Ex-legislator Caught after Two Years, Jersey J., Dec. 23, 1987, at 1
- Taken into Custody in Maldive Islands*, , , at 1
- Judy Giannettino, Former State Senator-Turned-Fugitive Apprehended, Associated Press, Dec. 22, 1987
- Alito Targets Former Chief of Teamsters*, Bergen Record, Dec. 20, 1987, at ***
- Joseph F. Sullivan, Kean and Jersey City Mayor Clash on Schools, N.Y. Times, Dec. 16, 1987, at B1
- Maryann Spoto, Jury Probes Racketeering in Union County, Daily J. (Vineland, N.J.), Dec. 15, 1987, at ***

- Robert Rudolph, Agents Fly to Maldives for Friedland, , , at 1
- Robert Rudolph, Taiwan Exec Charged as Smuggler of $6 Million in Gems, Art into U.S., Newark Star Ledger, Dec. 9, 1987, at 50
- Robert Cohen, Alito Confirmed as U.S. Attorney for New Jersey, Newark Star Ledger, Dec. 9, 1987, at 51
- R. Clinton Taplin, Indictment in Smuggling, Bergen Record, Dec. 9, 1987, at A-3
- Maryann Spoto, Smuggling Suspect Hunted, Hudson Dispatch, Dec. 9, 1987, at 11
- Customs Accuses Taiwan National in Jewelry Scheme*, Associated Press, ***
- High-priced Haul*, Trenton Times, Dec. 9, 1987, at A6
- Kathy Barrett Carter, Mercer Man Guilty of Attempt to Kill FBI Agent, , , at ***
- Lawrence Man Guilty of Shooting FBI Agent*, Associated Press, ***
- Frances Ann Burns, New Jersey Man Charged with Nazi Past, United Press Int'l, Dec. 8, 1987
- Kathy Barrett Carter, Jury Still Deliberating on Suspect Accused of Trying to Murder FBI Agent, Newark Star Ledger, Dec. 4, 1987, at ***
- Jury Urged to Convict Man of Shooting FBI Agent*, Asbury Park Press, Dec. 4, 1987, at B19
- Stonaker Shooting Case Goes to Jury*, Associated Press, Dec. 4, 1987
- Texan Admits Insurance Bilk*, Newark Star Ledger, Dec. 4, 1987, at ***
- Terrorist Suspect Faces Trial*, United Press Int'l, Nov. 27, 1988
- Alito Decides Against Appeal in Garage Case*, Trenton Times, Nov. 20, 1987, at ***
- U.S. Officials Won't Appeal Voiding of 2 Fraud Verdicts*, Asbury Park Press, Nov. 20, 1987
- Jay McDaniel, U.S. Drops Appeal on 2 New Brunswick Officials, Newark Star Ledger, Nov. 19, 1987, at 47
- Angela Stewart, Businessman Convicted of Check-cashing Scam, Newark Star Ledger, Nov. 19, 1987, at 29
- Authorities: Drug Ring One of Biggest*, Associated Press, ***

- Robert Rudolph, Cocaine Queen: Lawmen Smash Female-led Drug Empire, , , at 1
- Daniel J. Wakin, Coke Ring Run by Colombian Woman Busted, Authorities Say, Associated Press, Nov. 18, 1987
- Daniel J. Wakin, Matriarchal Coke Ring, One of NJ's Biggest, Busted, Authorities Say, Associated Press, Nov. 18, 1987
- Alfonso A. Narvaez, U.S. Arrests 14 as Members of Cocaine Ring, N.Y. Times, Nov. 18, 1997, at B2
- Pamela Geurds, Rivera Construction Co. Barred from State, Military Contracts, Trenton Times, Nov. 13, 1987, at A9
- New Jersey Contractor Guilty in Bribery Case*, United Press Int'l, Nov. 12, 1987
- Paul Coady, Company, President Guilty of Bribery at Fort Dix, Asbury Park Press, Nov. 12, 1987, at A24
- Area Firm, Exec Guilty of Fraud*, , , at ***
- Jim Consoli, Child Pornography Sting Nets 150, Including 12 from NJ, Bergen Record, Nov. 10, 1987, at A-1
- Officials Arrest 15 for Drugs*, Associated Press, ***
- Reginald Roberts, Construction Firm Convicted of Bribing Procurement Officials at Fr. Dix, Newark Star Ledger, Nov. 12, 1987, at 20
- Daniel J. Wakin, U.S. Attorney in Newark Lends Ear to Both the Weird and the Woeful, , Nov. 4, 1987, at ***
- Daniel J. Wakin, Prosecutors Take Turns Fielding Complaints, Big and Small, Associated Press, Nov. 4, 1987
- Robert Rudolph, U.S. Probe in Jersey Finds Kickbacks a 'Way of Life' in Corporate Circles, Newark Star Ledger, Nov. 1, 1987, at 36
- Officials Plead Guilty to Taking Kickbacks*, Associated Press, ***
- Pat Turner, Robert Rudolph, and Mitchell Seidel, U.S. Drops Charges Against New Brunswick Duo, Newark Star Ledger, Oct. 30, 1987, at 31
- Gregory A. Robb, Crazy Eddie is Facing 2 Federal Investigations, N.Y. Times, Oct. 29, 1987, at D20

- James Popkin, Anti-Sandanistas Train at Secret Jersey Camp, United Press Int'l, Oct. 11, 1987
- P.L. Wyckoff, Atlantic City Union Official, 5 Others Indicted in Labor Racketeering Plot, Newark Star Ledger, Oct. 8., 1987, at 1
- Scarfo's Sister Is Indicted*, Associated Press, ***
- Daniel J. Wakin, Sister of Reputed Mob Boss Charged in No-Show Job Scheme, Associated Press, Sept. 24, 1987
- David Hardy, Pa. Mob Boss' Sis Indicted, N.Y. Daily News, Sept. 24, 1987, at ***
- Robert Rudolph, Three Charged in Separate Federal Indictments Alleging Union Corruption, Newark Star Ledger, Sept. 24, 1987, at 17
- Daniel J. Wakin, Scarfo's Sister Indicted on Labor Corruption Charges, Associated Press, Sept. 23, 1987
- Daniel J. Wakin, Plot to Export Missiles to Mainland China Alleged, Associated Press, Sept. 20, 1987
- Anne-Marie Cottone, Federal Undercover Sweep Nets 12 Jerseyans on Child Porno Charges, Newark Star Ledger, Sept. 16, 1987, at 26
- Guy Sterling, Executive Pleads Guilty on Toxic Waste Hauling, Newark Star Ledger, Sept. 15, 1987, at ***
- Robert Hanley, U.S. Subpoenas 7 Sanitation Workers, N.Y. Times, Sept. 12, 1987, at A31
- Tom Johnson, Robert Rudolph, and P.L. Wyckoff, Pier Raid Turns up Clues in Probe of Shore Slick, Newark Star Ledger, Sept. 12, 1987, at 1
- Reputed Mob Boss' Kin Indicted by Federal Jury*, Asbury Park Press, , at ***
- Mary Helen Gillespie, Nine Charged in Child Pornography Offenses, Associated Press, Sept. 11, 1987
- 9 Charged in Child Pornography*, N.Y. Times, Sept. 11, 1987, at B6
- P.L. Wyckoff, Tom Johnson, and Robert Rudolph, Lawmen Raid N.Y. Trash Pier, Newark Star Ledger, Sept. 11, 1987, at 1
- Mary Helen Gillespie, Nine Charged in Child Pornography Offenses, Associated Press, Sept. 11, 1987
- Jane M. Von Bergen, 9 Charged in Child Pornography Case, , , at ***

- Joseph D. McCaffrey, Two-year Federal Probe Yields Indictment of 9 as Child Porn Traffickers, Newark Star Ledger, Sept. 11, 1987, at 23
- Helen Gillespie, Nine Men Charged for Child Porn, Burlington County Times, Sept. 11, 1987, at 1
- Nine Men Indicted on Federal Child Porn Counts*, United Press Int'l, ***
- Renee Winkler, 9 Charged with Mailing Child Pornography, S. Jersey Courier-Post, Sept. 11, 1987, at 1
- Another Garbage Slick Hits the Jersey Shore*, Associated Press, Sept. 4, 1987
- Patricia C. Turner, Banker Fined, Borrower Admits Loan Bilks, Newark Star Ledger, Aug. 28, 1987, at ***
- Craig R. McCoy, State's Interim U.S. Attorney Gets President's Nomination for Post, Philadelphia Inquirer, Aug. 4, 1987, at 6-BJ
- Alito Named to Attorney Post in N.J.*, Newhouse News Serv., ***
- Robert Cohen, Reagan Appoints Alito for U.S. Attorney Post, Newark Star Ledger, , at 16
- U.S. Attorney in N.J. Fills Eight Positions*, Associated Press, ***
- Robert Rudolph, Top Prosecutor Picked as U.S. Attorney Aide, Newark Star Ledger, , at 1
- Robert Rudolph, U.S. Attorney for Jersey Confirms Choice of N.Y. Prosecutor as Aide, Newark Star Ledger, , at ***
- Debra La Quaglia, County Native Returns as Jersey Crimebuster, Daily J. (Vineland, N.J.), July 8, 1987, at ***
- Steve Chambers, U.S. Attorney General Finds Post Exciting, Challenging, Asbury Park Press, Apr. 12, 1987, at ***
- U.S. Attorney's Aid Is Unique in Nation*, Associated Press, ***
- Pennsauken Firm Admits Selling Watered-Down Hams*, Associated Press, ***
- Bank Bribery Charged*, Associated Press, ***
- Sussex Official Pleads Guilty to Tax Fraud*, United Press Int'l, ***
- Ralph Blumenthal, Ruling May Bar Graft Prosecutions, N.Y. Times, June 26, 1987, at B3

- Kathleen Bird, Alito Comes Home to be U.S. Attorney, N.J.L.J., Apr. 2, 1987, at 27
- William Scott, Alito Takes Aim at Drug Dealers, Daily J. (Vineland, N.J.), Mar. 30, 1987, at 1
- P.L. Wyckoff, Cocaine Cartel Suspect Arrested at INS Office, Newark Star Ledger, Mar. 26, 1987, at ***
- State's Prosecutor Returns to His Roots*, Central N.J. Home News, Mar. 21, 1987, at 1
- Alito Eager to Start New Job*, The Trentonian, Mar. 21, 1987
Attorney to Return to Court, Asbury Park Press, Mar. 21, 1987
- New U.S. Attorney Returning to His Home Turf*, Trenton Times, Mar. 21, 1987, at 1
- Interim U.S. Attorney 'Coming Home'*, Associated Press, ***
- Jack Dolan, States News Serv., Mar. 20, 1987
- Robert Cohen, New U.S. Attorney Appointed for Jersey, Newark Star Ledger, Mar. 20, 1987, at 1

Appendix 2

Question 14.b.

Office of Legal Counsel Documents

Memorandum to James M. Spears, Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Civil Division, from Charles J. Cooper, Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel, "Request for Reimbursement of Attorney Fees Incurred by Anne M. Burford" (Dec. 19, 1985)

Letter to Edward T. Sullivan from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel (Dec. 20, 1985)

Memorandum from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel, "Proposed Executive order entitled 'President's Blue Ribbon Commission on Defense Management'" (Dec. 20, 1985)

Memorandum to Evelyn Long, Staff Assistant, Office of the Associate Attorney General, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel, "Reimbursement from National Council of Juvenile and Family Court Judges" (1986)

Memorandum to Wm. Bradford Reynolds, Assistant Attorney General, Civil Rights Division, and Stephen S. Trott, Assistant Attorney General, Criminal Division, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel, "Death Penalty Review by the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights" (Jan. 6, 1986)

Letter to Marshall Hoffman from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel (Jan. 9, 1986)

Memorandum to John R. Bolton, Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legislative and Intergovernmental Affairs, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel, "H.R. 1083" (Jan. 10, 1986)

Memorandum to John H. Carley, General Counsel, Office of Management and Budget, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel, "Applicability of the Apportionment Requirements of the Antideficiency Act to the Nonadministrative Funds of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation" (Jan. 10, 1986)

Letter to the Honorable William Webster, Director, Federal Bureau of Investigation, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel (Jan. 10, 1986)

Memorandum to Kenneth Cribb, Counsel to Attorney General; Stephen Galebach, Special Assistant; and Robert Cynkar, Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Civil Division, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel, "Archives Rules on Nixon Papers" (Jan. 15, 1986)

Memorandum to Richard K. Willard, Assistant Attorney General, Civil Division, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel, "Proposed D.C. Model Rules of Professional Responsibility" (Jan. 24, 1986)

Letter to Donald L. Ivers, Office of General Counsel, Veterans Administration, from Charles J. Cooper, Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel (Jan. 28, 1986)

Memorandum for the Attorney General from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel, "Proposed Attorney General's policy guidelines with respect to the use of special masters and with respect to consent decrees and settlement agreements" (Jan. 29, 1986)

Letter to William R. Burchill, General Counsel, Administrative Office of the U.S. Courts, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel (Feb. 10, 1986)

Memorandum for Ronald E. Robertson, General Counsel, Department of Health and Human Services, from Charles J. Cooper, Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel, "Funding of Grants by the National Institutes of Health" (Feb. 11, 1986)

Memorandum to Samuel A. Alito, Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel, from W. Lawrence Wallace, Assistant Attorney General for Administration, "Appointment as Deputy Designated Agency Ethics Official" (Feb. 26, 1986)

Memorandum to Richard K. Willard, Assistant Attorney General, Civil Division, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel, "Authority of the Federal Bureau of Investigation to Transfer Restricted Records to the National Archives and Records Administration" (Feb. 27, 1986)

Letter to Marcy J.K. Tiffany, Acting General Counsel, Federal Trade Commission, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel (Mar. 3, 1986)

Memorandum to John R. Bolton, Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legislative and Intergovernmental Affairs, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel, "Congressional Testimony of Constance Horner, Director, OPM" (Mar. 3, 1986)

Letter to James Burns, Deputy General Counsel, Office of Personal Management, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel, "Congressional Testimony of Constance J. Horner" (Mar. 14, 1986)

Memorandum to Norman Carlson, Director, Bureau of Prisons, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel, "Disposition of Income From Prison Vending Machines Under the Randolph-Sheppard Act" (Mar. 25, 1986)

Letter to Philip E. Cushman, National President, Veterans Due Process, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel (Mar. 28, 1986)

Memorandum to _____ from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel, "Your Severance Arrangements with [law firm]" (Mar. 31, 1986)

Memorandum for W. Scott Burke, General Counsel, Office of Personal Management, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel, "The Guam Territorial Income Tax" (Apr. 1, 1986)

Letter to Frank De Balogh, Chairman, National Selective Service Appeal Board, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel (Apr. 4, 1986)

Memorandum to William F. Long, Director, General Legal Services Division, Office of Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel, "ABA Formal Opinion 337" (Apr. 4, 1986)

Memorandum to John Richardson, Special Assistant to the Attorney General, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel, "Attorney General Order on Reimbursement for Spousal Travel" (Apr. 14, 1986)

Memorandum to W. Lawrence Wallace, Assistant Attorney General for Administration, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel, "Department Policy on Use of Government Vehicles by Attorney General's Spouse" (Apr. 17, 1986)

Memorandum to _____ from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel, "Your Acceptance of an Honorarium for Publishing Two Articles" (Apr. 18, 1986)

Memorandum for Stephen J. Markman, Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Policy, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel, "Administrative Conference Recommendation on Federal Agencies' Use of Alternative Dispute Resolution Techniques" (Apr. 24, 1986)

Memorandum for the Attorney General, from Charles J. Cooper, Assistant Attorney General, "Response to Congressional Requests for Information Regarding Decisions Made under the Independent Counsel Act" (Apr. 28, 1986)

Memorandum for Charles Hauser, Chairperson, Architectural and Transportation Barriers Compliance Board, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel, "Enforcement Authority of the Architectural and Transportation Barriers Compliance Board Under the Rehabilitation Act" (May 1, 1986)

Memorandum to _____ from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Assistant Attorney General [sic], Office of Legal Counsel, "Invitation to Attend President's Dinner" (May 2, 1986)

Memorandum to _____ from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel, "Invitation to Attend President's Dinner" (May 6, 1986)

Letter to the Honorable Abraham Sofaer, Legal Adviser, Department of State, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel (May 15, 1986)

Letter to David H. Martin, Director, Office of Government Ethics, Office of Personnel Management, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel (May 20, 1986)

Memorandum to H. Gerald Staub, Office of Chief Counsel, National Aeronautics and Space Administration, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel, "Emoluments Clause Questions raised by NASA Scientist's Proposed Consulting Arrangement with the University of New South Wales" (May 23, 1986)

Memorandum for Wendell L. Wilkie, II, General Counsel, Department of Education, and John H. Carley, Counsel to the Director, Office of Management and Budget, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel (Jun. 2, 1986)

Letter to Gary L. Brooks, Acting Director, Legal Services Staff, National Archives, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel (____ 11, 1986)

Memorandum for Walter C. Wallace, Chairman, National Mediation Board, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel (Jun. 13, 1986)

Letter to the Honorable George R. Salem, Acting Solicitor, Department of Labor, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel (Jun. 18, 1986)

Letter to Thomas E. Harvey, General Counsel, United States Information Agency, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel (Jun. 27, 1986)

Letter to the Honorable Romano L. Mazzoli, Chairman, Subcommittee on Immigration, Refugees, and International Law, Committee on the Judiciary, House of Representatives, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel (Jun. 27, 1986)

Memorandum to _____ from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel, "Reimbursement of Travel Expenses in Connection with Attendance at Liberty Weekend Conference" (Jun. 27, 1986)

Letter to the Honorable Allan Paul Shatkin from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel (Jul. 7, 1986)

Memorandum to Randy L. Levine, Deputy Associate Attorney General, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel, "Request for Permission to Teach - _____" (Jul. 16, 1986)

Memorandum to Victoria Toensing, Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Criminal Division, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal

Counsel, "Payment of U.S. Attorney's Travel Expenses by Government of Saudi Arabia" (Jul. 29, 1986)

Letter to the Honorable Abraham Sofaer, Legal Adviser, Department of State, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel (Jul. 29, 1986)

Memorandum to Linda A. Cinciotta, Director, Office of Attorney Personnel Management, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel, "Automation of Experienced Attorney Program – Resume Referral" (Jul. 29, 1986)

Memorandum to Randy L. Levine, Associate Deputy Attorney General, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel, "Request from _____ to Service on the Board of Christmas In April, Inc." (Aug. 8, 1986)

Memorandum to Randy L. Levine, Associate Deputy Attorney General, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel, "Request for Approval for Outside Professional Practice - _____" (Aug. 8, 1986)

Memorandum for Arnold I. Burns, Deputy Attorney General, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel, "Department of Defense Proposal to Detail Army Lawyers to Department of Justice" (Aug. 22, 1986)

Memorandum to Joseph R. Davis, Assistant Director, Legal Counsel Division, Federal Bureau of Investigation, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel, "Personnel Security Investigations – Executive Order No. 10450" (Sept. 9, 1986)

Letter to Frank De Balogh, Chairman, National Appeal Board, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel (Sept. 15, 1986)

Memorandum to Randy L. Levine, Associate Deputy Attorney General, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel, "Cinquegrana Teaching Proposal" (Sept. 19, 1986)

Memorandum for Peter J. Wallison, Counsel to the President, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel, "Federal Retirement Thrift Investment Board" (Sept. 23, 1986)

Memorandum to _____, Assistant to the Solicitor General, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel, "Your Participation in United States v. Fausto" (Sept. 23, 1986)

Memorandum for Peter J. Wallison, Counsel to the President, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel, "Federal Retirement Thrift Investment Board" (Sept. 24, 1986)

Letter to Arthur Fisher, Executive Director, Delmarva Advisory Council, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel (Sept. 25, 1986)

Memorandum to John N. Richardson, Special Assistant to the Attorney General, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel, "Letter to the Attorney General from L. Ralph Mecham, Director of the Administrative Office of the U.S. Courts" (Sept. 29, 1986)

Memorandum to Randy L. Levine, Associate Deputy Attorney General, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel, "Rothenberg Teaching Proposal" (Oct. 1, 1986)

Memorandum to Randy L. Levine, Associate Deputy Attorney General, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel, "_____ Publication Request" (Oct. 2, 1986)

Memorandum to Randy L. Levine, Associate Deputy Attorney General, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel, "U.S. Attorney _____ request for retroactive approval of his retention of a referral fee" (Oct. 15, 1986)

Memorandum to Janis Sposato, General Counsel, Justice Management Division, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel, "INS opinion on Crosland conflict of interest inquiry" (Oct. 31, 1986)

Letter to David H. Martin, Director, United States Office of Government Ethics, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel (Nov. 3, 1986)

Memorandum to William F. Weld, Assistant Attorney General, Criminal Division, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel, "Proposed delegation of authority from the Attorney General to the Assistant Attorney General, Criminal Division, to approve exemptions for DEA undercover operations" (Nov. 4, 1986)

Memorandum to Frederick W. Kramer, Staff Director, Organized Crime Drug Enforcement Task Force, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel, "Overtime Pay Obligations of State and Local Law Enforcement Agencies" (Nov. 7, 1986)

Memorandum to Arnold I. Burns, Deputy Attorney General, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel, "Review of DEA Undercover Operations By The Attorney General" (Nov. 12, 1986)

Memorandum to William F. Weld, Assistant Attorney General, Criminal Division, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel, "Retrocession of Criminal Jurisdiction on the Colville Federated Tribes" (Nov. 12, 1986)

Memorandum to William P. Tyson, Director, Executive Office for United States Attorneys, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel, "Definition of Vacancy for the Purpose of Interim Appointment of United States Attorneys Pursuant to 28 U.S.C. 546, as amended" (Nov. 13, 1986)

Letter to Patricia Rizzi, Health Sciences Learning Resources, University of Minnesota, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel (Nov. 14, 1986)

Memorandum for J. Michael Farrell, General Counsel, Department of Energy, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel, "Matter of _____" (Nov. 17, 1986)

Memorandum to John C. Keeney, Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Criminal Division, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel (Nov. 17, 1986)

Memorandum for Paul G. Cassell, Associate Deputy Attorney General, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel, "Administrative Conference Proposal on Alternative Dispute Resolution" (Nov. 18, 1986)

Memorandum for David H. Martin, Director, Office of Government Ethics, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel, "USIA Director's Service on the Board of the United States Telecommunications Training Institute" (Dec. 3, 1986)

Memorandum to William P. Tyson, Director, Executive Office for United States Attorneys, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel (Dec. 12, 1986)

Memorandum for Joseph R. Davis, Assistant Director, Legal Counsel, Federal Bureau of Investigation, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel, "Message-Switching" (Dec. 12, 1986)

Memorandum to John R. Bolton, Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legislative Affairs and Intergovernmental Affairs, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel, "Letter from Congressman Glenn English on Nixon Papers" (Dec. 22, 1986)

Letter to Maurice C. Inman, Jr., General Counsel, Immigration and Naturalization Service, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel (Dec. 2, 1986)

Letter to Lynn R. Collins, Deputy Special Counsel, Office of the Special Counsel, U.S. Merit Systems Protection Board, from Charles J. Cooper, Assistant Attorney General (Dec. 23, 1986)

Memorandum for the Deputy Attorney General from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel, "Provisions of the Special Foreign Assistance Act of 1986 Relating to the Assets of Jean Claude Duvalier" (Jan. 2, 1987)

Memorandum for Richard C. Stienner, Chief, INTERPOL-United States National Central Bureau, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel, "Interface between Users of the National Law Enforcement Telecommunications System and the Canadian Law Enforcement System" (Jan. 9, 1987)

Memorandum for the Solicitor of the Interior, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel, "Scope of the Term 'Particular Matter' Under 18 U.S.C. 208" (Jan. 12, 1987)

Memorandum to Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel, from _____, Office of the Solicitor General, "Request for Interpretation of 28 C.F.R. Part 45" (Jan. 13, 1987)

Memorandum to John R. Bolton, Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legislative and Intergovernmental Affairs, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel, "Convention on the Rights of the Child" (Jan. 14, 1987)

Memorandum to Wm. Bradford Reynolds, Assistant Attorney General, Civil Division, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel, "Endorsement of State and Local Legal Center" (Jan. 14, 1987)

Memorandum for Christopher Hicks, General Counsel, Department of Agriculture, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel, "Release of Information Collected under the Agricultural Marketing Agreement Act of 1937" (Jan. 15, 1987)

Letter to Leonard J. Asselin, The Domino Group, Inc., from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel (Jan. 16, 1987)

Memorandum from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel, "Proposed Executive order entitled 'President's Special Review Board'" (Jan. 23, 1987)

Memorandum for Norman A. Carlson, Director, Bureau of Prisons, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel, "Authority of Federal Agencies to Contract with State Prison Industries" (Jan. 28, 1987)

Memorandum to John C. Keeney, Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Criminal Division; Joseph R. Davis, Assistant Director-Legal Counsel, Federal Bureau of Investigation; and Michael E. Shaheen, Jr., Counsel, Office of Professional Responsibility, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel, "Response to letters regarding Federal Form FD-645" (Jan. 28, 1987)

Memorandum to Wm. Bradford Reynolds, Assistant Attorney General, Civil Rights Division, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel, "Proposed amendment to 18 U.S.C. 242" (Jan. 29, 1987)

Memorandum to William F. Weld, Assistant Attorney General, Criminal Division, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel, "United States v. 1984 Ford Pickup" (Feb. 3, 1987)

Letter to James S. Heller, University of Idaho Law Library, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel (Feb. 10, 1987)

Letter to H. Lawrence Garrett, III, General Counsel, Department of Defense, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel (Feb. 11, 1987)

Letter to James J. Marquez, General Counsel, Department of Transportation, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel (Feb. 11, 1987)

Letter to the Honorable David H. Martin, Director, Office of Government Ethics, Office of Personnel Management, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel (Feb. 11, 1987)

Memorandum to Files, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel (Feb. 12, 1987)

Letter to Carl Shipley, Shipley, Smoak, Henry and Holdgreiwe, from Charles J. Cooper, Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel, Re: Application of the Anti-Apartheid Act of 1986 to Namibia" (Feb. 12, 1987)

Memorandum to _____, Office of the Solicitor General, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel, "Your Participation in a Pending Case in light of 18 U.S.C. 208" (Feb. 13, 1987)

Memorandum to John N. Richardson, Jr., Assistant to the Attorney General and Chief of Staff, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel, "Release Forms for Attorney General Speeches" (Feb. 19, 1987)

Letter to MaryEllen A. Brown, Board Ethics Official, Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel (Feb. 19, 1987)

Memorandum to Thomas J. Stanton, Director and Counsel, Executive Office for United States Trustees, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel, "Conversion of Bankruptcy Cases Pending on the Effective Date of the Family Farmer Amendments" (Feb. 25, 1987)

Letter to James P. Corcoran from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel (Feb 26, 1987)

Letter to Laurie A. Lipper, The Nation Institute, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel (Feb. 26, 1987)

Memorandum to Jim Byrnes, Associate Deputy Attorney General, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel, "Luoma request" (Mar. 6, 1987)

Letter to J. Thomas Johnson, Director, Illinois Department of Revenue, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel (Mar. 6, 1987)

Memorandum for Dennis F. Hoffman, Chief Counsel, Drug Enforcement Administration, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel, "Use of 'Trafficker-Directed' Funds" (Mar. 11, 1987)

Letter to Gary H. Sampliner from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel (Mar. 11, 1987)

Memorandum to Joe Casper, Vice President's Office, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel, "Summary of Smith v. Board of School Commissioners" (Mar. 12, 1987)

Letter to ____ from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel, Re: Interpretation of 18 U.S.C. 207(c) (Mar. 13, 1987)

Memorandum to Floyd I. Clarke, Assistant Director, Criminal Investigative Division, Federal Bureau of Investigation, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel, "Federal Bureau of Investigation Background Investigations of Candidates for Position of Postmaster General (Mar. 13, 1987)

Letter to J. Clayton Undercofler, III, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel, Re: Federal Form FD-645 (Mar. 20, 1987)

Memorandum for Clyde C. Pearce, Jr., General Counsel, General Services Administration, from Douglas W. Kmiec, Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel (Mar. 27, 1987)

Memorandum for Alan Raul, Associate Counsel to the President, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel, "White House Use of Volunteers in the Pay of National Political Organizations" (Mar. 27, 1987)

Memorandum for Terry S. Coleman, General Counsel, Department of Health and Human Services, from Samuel A. Alito, Jr., Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel, "Application of 202(x)(1) of the Social Security Act to Beneficiaries Incarcerated in Foreign Prisons" (Apr. 24, 1987)

Appendix 3

Questions 17.a. through 17.e.

17. Citations: From your time as a judge, please provide:a. citations for all opinions you have written (including concurrences and dissents);

The Third Circuit issues both “precedential” and “non-precedential” opinions. In parts “a.” and “b.” of this question I list precedential opinions. In part “c.” I list non-precedential opinions I authored or joined. [Citations are current through November 11, 2005.]

MBIA Ins. Corp. v. Royal Indem. Co., 426 F.3d 204 (3d Cir. 2005)
 Forrest v. Beloit Corp., 424 F.3d 344, 362–63 (3d Cir. 2005) (concurring)
 McDowell v. Philadelphia Hous. Auth., 423 F.3d 233 (3d Cir. 2005)
 Digiacomo v. Teamsters Pension Trust Fund, 420 F.3d 220, 228–31 (3d Cir. 2005) (dissenting)
 Oyebanji v. Gonzales, 418 F.3d 260 (3d Cir. 2005)
 Partyka v. Attorney Gen., 417 F.3d 408, 417–18 (3d Cir. 2005) (concurring in the judgment in part and dissenting in part)
 Overall v. Univ. of Pa., 412 F.3d 492 (3d Cir. 2005)
 Zhang v. Gonzales, 405 F.3d 150 (3d Cir. 2005)
 Bronshtein v. Horn, 404 F.3d 700 (3d Cir. 2005)
 Trippe Mfg. Co. v. Niles Audio Corp., 401 F.3d 529 (3d Cir. 2005)
 Banks v. Beard, 399 F.3d 134, 148–50 (3d Cir. 2005) (dissenting)
 Brinson v. Vaughn, 398 F.3d 225 (3d Cir. 2005)
 Yang v. Odom, 392 F.3d 97, 112–14 (3d Cir. 2004) (concurring and dissenting)
 Southco, Inc. v. Kanebridge Corp., 390 F.3d 276 (3d Cir. 2004) (en banc)
 Pascack Valley Hosp. v. Local 464A UFCW Welfare Reimbursement Plan, 388 F.3d 393, 404–05 (3d Cir. 2004) (concurring in the judgment)
 Child Evangelism Fellowship v. Stafford Twp. Sch. Dist., 386 F.3d 514 (3d Cir. 2004)
 In re G-I Holdings, Inc., 385 F.3d 313 (3d Cir. 2004)
 Soltane v. U.S. Dept. of Justice, 381 F.3d 143 (3d Cir. 2004)
 Blackhawk v. Pennsylvania, 381 F.3d 202 (3d Cir. 2004)
 Chen v. Ashcroft, 381 F.3d 221 (3d Cir. 2004)
 Shore Reg’l High Sch. Bd. of Educ. v. P.S., 381 F.3d 194 (3d Cir. 2004)
 Fielder v. Varner, 379 F.3d 113 (3d Cir. 2004)
 Pitt News v. Pappert, 379 F.3d 96 (3d Cir. 2004)
 Khodara Envtl., Inc. v. Blakey, 376 F.3d 187 (3d Cir. 2004)
 United States v. Pray, 373 F.3d 358 (3d Cir. 2004)
 Liu v. Ashcroft, 372 F.3d 529 (3d Cir. 2004)
 Benn v. Universal Health Sys., Inc., 371 F.3d 165 (3d Cir. 2004)
 Penn W. Assocs., Inc. v. Cohen, 371 F.3d 118, 130–34 (3d Cir. 2004) (dissenting)
 White v. Commc’ns Workers of Am., 370 F.3d 346 (3d Cir. 2004)
 Jansen v. United States, 369 F.3d 237, 250 (3d Cir. 2004) (concurring)
 Poole v. Family Court, 368 F.3d 263 (3d Cir. 2004)
 Lee v. Ashcroft, 368 F.3d 218, 225–28 (3d Cir. 2004) (dissenting)
 Sabree v. Richman, 367 F.3d 180, 194 (3d Cir. 2004) (concurring)
 United States v. Wright, 363 F.3d 237 (3d Cir. 2004)
 Doe v. Groody, 361 F.3d 232, 244–29 (3d Cir. 2004) (dissenting)

United States v. Lloyd, 361 F.3d 197 (3d Cir. 2004)
 Hay Group, Inc. v. E.B.S. Acquisition Corp., 360 F.3d 404 (3d Cir. 2004)
 Rompilla v. Horn, 359 F.3d 310 (3d Cir. 2004) (en banc)
 United States v. Lee, 359 F.3d 194 (3d Cir. 2004)
 Rompilla v. Horn, 355 F.3d 233 (3d Cir. 2004) Dia v. Ashcroft, 353 F.3d 228, 261–66 (3d Cir. 2003) (en banc) (concurring in part and dissenting in part)
 Munroe v. Ashcroft, 353 F.3d 225 (3d Cir. 2003)
 McCurdy v. Dodd, 352 F.3d 820, 831 n.9 (3d Cir. 2003) (concurring in judgment)
 United States v. D'Amario, 350 F.3d 348 (3d Cir. 2003)
 In re Fed. Mogul-Global, Inc., 348 F.3d 390 (3d Cir. 2003)
 Williams v. Price, 343 F.3d 223 (3d Cir. 2003)
 Acosta v. Ashcroft, 341 F.3d 218 (3d Cir. 2003)
 In re Hechinger Inv. Co., 335 F.3d 243 (3d Cir. 2003)
 China Minmetals Materials Imp. & Exp. Co. v. Chi Mei Corp., 334 F.3d 274, 292–94 (3d Cir.
 2003) (concurring)
 Official Comm. of Unsecured Creditors of Cybergenics Corp., 330 F.3d 548, 580–87 (3d Cir.
 2003) (en banc) (joining dissent)
 Artz v. Barnhart, 330 F.3d 170 (3d Cir. 2003)
 LePage's Inc. v. 3M, 324 F.3d 141, 169–82 (3d Cir. 2003) (en banc) (joining dissent)
 Desi's Pizza, Inc. v. City of Wilkes-Barre, 321 F.3d 411 (3d Cir. 2003)
 United States v. Thomas, 319 F.3d 640 (3d Cir. 2003)
 United Artists Theatre Circuit, Inc. v. Twp. of Warrington, 316 F.3d 392 (3d Cir. 2003)
 United Artists Theatre Co. v. Walton, 315 F.3d 217, 235 (3d Cir. 2003) (concurring)
 Forbes v. Twp. of Lower Merion, 313 F.3d 144 (3d Cir. 2002)
 Chadwick v. Janecka, 312 F.3d 597 (3d Cir. 2002)
 Romero v. SmithKline Beecham, 309 F.3d 113 (3d Cir. 2002)
 United States v. $92,422.57, 307 F.3d 137 (3d Cir. 2002)
 United States v. Cohen, 301 F.3d 152 (3d Cir. 2002)
 Lawson v. Fortis Ins. Co., 301 F.3d 159 (3d Cir. 2002)
 United States v. Tiller, 302 F.3d 98 (3d Cir. 2002)
 Chadwick v. Janecka, 302 F.3d 107 (3d Cir.), amended and superseded by 312 F.3d 597 (2002)
 Betterbox Commc'ns Ltd. v. BB Techs., Inc., 300 F.3d 325 (3d Cir. 2002)
 New Jersey Payphone Ass'n, Inc. v. Town of W. New York, 299 F.3d 235, 247–50 (3d Cir.
 2002) (concurring in judgment)
 Alden Leeds, Inc. v. Occupational Safety & Health Review Comm'n, 298 F.3d 256 (3d Cir.
 2002)
 In re Hechinger Inv. Co., 298 F.3d 219 (3d Cir. 2002)
 Swartzwelder v. McNeilly, 297 F.3d 228 (3d Cir. 2002)
 Carpenter v. Vaughn, 296 F.3d 138 (3d Cir. 2002)
 Thomas v. Comm'r of Soc. Sec., 294 F.3d 568 (3d Cir. 2002) (en banc)
 Shapiro v. Twp. of Lakewood, 292 F.3d 356 (3d Cir. 2002)
 Transamerica Occidental Life Ins. Co. v. Aviation Office of Am., Inc., 292 F.3d 384 (3d Cir.
 2002)
 Neonatology Assocs., P.A. v. C.I.R., 293 F.3d 128 (3d Cir. 2002)
 Truesdell v. Philadelphia Hous. Auth., 290 F.3d 159 (3d Cir. 2002)

Ziccardi v. City of Philadelphia, 288 F.3d 57 (3d Cir. 2002)
Nextel Partners Inc. v. Kingston Twp., 286 F.3d 687 (3d Cir. 2002)
Pa. Pharmacists Ass'n v. Houstoun, 283 F.3d 531 (3d Cir. 2002) (en banc)
Fraise v. Terhune, 283 F.3d 506 (3d Cir. 2002)
Bovkun v. Ashcroft, 283 F.3d 166 (3d Cir. 2002)
Nextel W. Corp. v. Unity Twp., 282 F.3d 257 (3d Cir. 2002)
Brosius v. Warden, U.S. Penitentiary, 278 F.3d 239 (3d Cir. 2002)
United States v. Zimmerman, 277 F.3d 426, 438–41 (3d Cir. 2002) (dissenting)
United States v. Gricco, 277 F.3d 339 (3d Cir. 2002)
Riley v. Taylor, 277 F.3d 261, 317–31 (3d Cir. 2001) (en banc) (dissenting)
Pa. Power Co. v. Local 272, Int'l Bhd. of Elec. Workers, 276 F.3d 174, 182–83 (3d Cir. 2001)
(dissenting)
Joint Stock Soc'y v. UDV N. Am., Inc., 266 F.3d 164 (3d Cir. 2001)
Wenger v. Frank, 266 F.3d 218 (3d Cir. 2001)
Acceptance Ins. Co. v. Sloan, 263 F.3d 278 (3d Cir. 2001)
Leckey v. Stefano, 263 F.3d 267 (3d Cir. 2001)
Abramson v. William Paterson Coll. of New Jersey, 260 F.3d 265, 289–90 (3d Cir. 2001)
(concurring)
Einhorn v. Fleming Foods of Pa., Inc., 258 F.3d 192 (3d Cir. 2001) Nordhoff Invs., Inc. v. Zenith Elecs. Corp., 258 F.3d 180, 191–92 (3d Cir. 2001) (concurring in the judgment)
Leveto v. Lapina, 258 F.3d 156 (3d Cir. 2001)
Southco, Inc. v. Kanebridge Corp., 258 F.3d 148 (3d Cir. 2001)
Eddy v. V.I. Water & Power Auth., 256 F.3d 204 (3d Cir. 2001)
Robert S. v. Stetson Sch., Inc., 256 F.3d 159 (3d Cir. 2001)
In re Four Three Oh, Inc., 256 F.3d 107, 115–20 (3d Cir. 2001) (dissenting)
George v. Sively, 254 F.3d 438 (3d Cir. 2001)
Keller v. Larkins, 251 F.3d 408 (3d Cir. 2001)
United States v. Hodge, 246 F.3d 301 (3d Cir. 2001)
ACLU v. Twp. of Wall, 246 F.3d 258 (3d Cir. 2001)
Saxe v. State Coll. Area Sch. Dist., 240 F.3d 200 (3d Cir. 2001)
Marshak v. Treadwell, 240 F.3d 184 (3d Cir. 2001)
Khodara Envtl., Inc. v. Beckman, 237 F.3d 186 (3d Cir. 2001)
Riley v. Taylor, 237 F.3d 300 (3d Cir.), withdrawn by 237 F.3d 348 (2001)
Tucker v. Fischbein, 237 F.3d 275 (3d Cir. 2001) BP Chems. Ltd. v. Formosa Chem. & Fibre Corp., 229 F.3d 254, 268 (3d Cir. 2000) (concurring in the judgment)
In re Tamecki, 229 F.3d 205, 208 (3d Cir. 2000) (concurring)
Pa. Prot. & Advocacy, Inc. v. Houstoun, 228 F.3d 423 (3d Cir. 2000)
Nicholas v. Pa. State Univ., 227 F.3d 133 (3d Cir. 2000)
Oran v. Stafford, 226 F.3d 275 (3d Cir. 2000)
Applebaum v. Nissan Motor Acceptance Corp., 226 F.3d 214 (3d Cir. 2000)
Chittister v. Dept. of Cmty. & Econ. Dev., 226 F.3d 223 (3d Cir. 2000)
C.H. v. Oliva, 226 F.3d 198, 203–14 (3d Cir. 2000) (en banc) (dissenting)
Bell Atl. Corp. v. United States, 224 F.3d 220 (3d Cir. 2000)
Donahue v. Consol. Rail Corp., 224 F.3d 226 (3d Cir. 2000)

Suter v. Munich Reinsurance Co., 223 F.3d 150, 162–65 (3d Cir. 2000) (dissenting)
 Planned Parenthood v. Farmer, 220 F.3d 127, 152–53 (3d Cir. 2000) (concurring in the judgment)
 Zubi v. AT&T Corp., 219 F.3d 220, 227–32 (3d Cir. 2000) (dissenting)
 Syed v. Hercules Inc., 214 F.3d 155 (3d Cir. 2000)
 Shane v. Fauver, 213 F.3d 1137 (3d Cir. 2000)
 United States v. One Toshiba Color Television, 213 F.3d 147, 159–61 (3d Cir. 2000) (concurring and dissenting)
 Nat'l Data Payment Sys., Inc. v. Meridian Bank, 212 F.3d 849 (3d Cir. 2000)
 United States v. Hecht, 212 F.3d 847 (3d Cir. 2000)
 Watson v. Se. Pa. Transp. Auth., 207 F.3d 207 (3d Cir. 2000)
 T.R. v. Kingwood Twp. Bd. of Educ., 205 F.3d 572 (3d Cir. 2000)
 United States ex rel. Merena v. SmithKline Beecham Corp., 205 F.3d 97 (3d Cir. 2000)
 United States v. McGlory, 202 F.3d 664, 674–76 (3d Cir. 2000) (en banc) (dissenting)
 Pa. Tidewater Dock Co. v. Dir., OWCP, 202 F.3d 656 (3d Cir. 2000)
 United States v. Harple, 202 F.3d 194 (3d Cir. 1999)
 United States v. Eleven Vehicles, 200 F.3d 203, 215–18 (3d Cir. 2000) (concurring)
 United States v. Stephens, 198 F.3d 389 (3d Cir. 1999)
 Raquel v. Educ. Mgmt. Corp., 196 F.3d 171, 182–86 (3d Cir. 1999) (dissenting)
 Hopp v. City of Pittsburgh, 194 F.3d 434 (3d Cir. 1999)
 United States v. Roberson, 194 F.3d 408 (3d Cir. 1999)
 Pacitti v. Macy's, 193 F.3d 766 (3d Cir. 1999)
 Caruso v. Blockbuster-Sony Music Entm't Ctr. at Waterfront, 193 F.3d 730 (3d Cir. 1999)
 Showalter v. Univ. of Pittsburgh Med. Ctr., 190 F.3d 231 (3d Cir. 1999)
 United States v. Medford, 194 F.3d 419 (3d Cir. 1999)
 United States ex rel. Mistick PBT v. Hous. Auth. of Pittsburgh, 186 F.3d 376 (3d Cir. 1999)
 Alexander v. Univ. of Pittsburgh Med. Cent. Sys., 185 F.3d 141, 151–53 (3d Cir. 1999) (dissenting)
 Waterman v. Farmer, 183 F.3d 208 (3d Cir. 1999)
 Rouse v. Plantier, 182 F.3d 192 (3d Cir. 1999)
 U.S. Fire Ins. Co. v. Asbestospray, Inc., 182 F.3d 201 (3d Cir. 1999)
 R.A. Glancy & Sons, Inc. v. U.S. Dept. of Veterans Affairs, 180 F.3d 553 (3d Cir. 1999)
 Arnold M. Diamond, Inc. v. Gulf Coast Trailing Co., 180 F.3d 518 (3d Cir. 1999)
 Council of Alternative Political Parties v. Hooks, 179 F.3d 64 (3d Cir. 1999)
 United States v. Coates, 178 F.3d 681 (3d Cir. 1999)
 United States v. Williams, 176 F.3d 714 (3d Cir. 1999)
 Caruso v. Blockbuster-Sony Music Entm't Ctr., 174 F.3d 166 (3d Cir. 1999)
 Orson, Inc. v. Miramax Film Corp., 174 F.3d 377, 1999 WL 243617, *16–*17 (3d Cir. Apr 27, 1999) (dissenting), withdrawn by 174 F.3d 392 (1999)
 Local 54, Hotel Employees & Rest. Employees Int'l Union v. Elsinore Shore Assocs., 173 F.3d 175, 187–88 (3d Cir. 1999) (concurring)
 Fraternal Order of Police Newark Lodge No. 12 v. City of Newark, 170 F.3d 359 (3d Cir. 1999)
 Imprisoned Citizens Union v. Ridge, 169 F.3d 178 (3d Cir. 1999)
 ACLU v. Schundler, 168 F.3d 92 (3d Cir. 1999)
 Kapral v. United States, 166 F.3d 565, 577–81 (3d Cir. 1999) (concurring)

Sandoval v. Reno, 166 F.3d 225, 242–43 (3d Cir. 1999) (concurring in part and dissenting in part)

SecuraComm Consulting Inc. v. Securacom Inc., 166 F.3d 182 (3d Cir. 1999)

Buehl v. Vaughn, 166 F.3d 163 (3d Cir. 1999)

Conte Bros. Auto., Inc. v. Quaker State-Slick 50, Inc., 165 F.3d 221 (3d Cir. 1998)

Fotta v. Trs. of United Mine Workers of Am., 165 F.3d 209, 215 (3d Cir. 1998) (concurring)

United States v. Tyler, 164 F.3d 150, 159–63 (3d Cir. 1998) (concurring)

Mondzelewski v. Pathmark Stores, Inc., 162 F.3d 778 (3d Cir. 1998)

Mellott v. Heemer, 161 F.3d 117 (3d Cir. 1998)

United States v. Tobin, 155 F.3d 636 (3d Cir. 1998)

ErieNet, Inc. v. Velocity Net, Inc., 156 F.3d 513, 521–23 (3d Cir. 1998) (dissenting)

Edwards v. Cal. Univ. of Pa., 156 F.3d 488 (3d Cir. 1998)

United States v. Lake, 150 F.3d 269 (3d Cir. 1998)

Michaels v. New Jersey, 150 F.3d 257 (3d Cir. 1998)

Fiore v. White, 149 F.3d 221 (3d Cir. 1998)

United States v. Moses, 148 F.3d 277 (3d Cir. 1998)

United States v. Ramos, 147 F.3d 281 (3d Cir. 1998)

Fitzgerald v. Apfel, 148 F.3d 232 (3d Cir. 1998)

Gulla v. N. Strabane Twp., 146 F.3d 168 (3d Cir. 1998)

Ford v. Schering-Plough Corp., 145 F.3d 601, 614–15 (3d Cir. 1998) (concurring in the judgment)

In re Kaplan, 143 F.3d 807 (3d Cir. 1998)

Nationwide Mut. Fire Ins. Co. of Columbus v. Pipher, 140 F.3d 222, 228–29 (3d Cir. 1998) (concurring)

United States v. Kithcart, 134 F.3d 529 (3d Cir. 1998)

United States v. Russell, 134 F.3d 171, 184–88 (3d Cir. 1998) (concurring and dissenting)

Keller v. Orix Credit Alliance, Inc., 130 F.3d 1101 (3d Cir. 1997) (en banc)

Reynolds v. Wagner, 128 F.3d 166 (3d Cir. 1997)

United States v. Williams, 124 F.3d 411 (3d Cir. 1997)

United States v. Palma-Ruedas, 121 F.3d 841, 859–65 (3d Cir. 1997) (concurring in part and dissenting in part)

Sw. Pa. Growth Alliance v. Browner, 121 F.3d 106 (3d Cir. 1997)

Robinson v. City of Pittsburgh, 120 F.3d 1286 (3d Cir. 1997)

United States v. Igbonwa, 120 F.3d 437, 444–46 (3d Cir. 1997) (dissenting)

Smith v. Horn, 120 F.3d 400, 419–26 (3d Cir. 1997) (dissenting)

John Wyeth & Bro. Ltd. v. CIGNA Int'l Corp., 119 F.3d 1070 (3d Cir. 1997)

Chang v. I.N.S., 119 F.3d 1055, 1068–69 (3d Cir. 1997) (dissenting)

Barton & Pittinos, Inc. v. SmithKline Beecham Corp., 118 F.3d 178 (3d Cir. 1997)

Beauty Time, Inc. v. VU Skin Sys., Inc., 118 F.3d 140, 150–54 (3d Cir. 1997) (dissenting)

RNS Servs., Inc. v. Sec'y of Labor, 115 F.3d 182, 188–92 (3d Cir. 1997) (dissenting)

In re Burlington Coat Factory Sec. Litig., 114 F.3d 1410 (3d Cir. 1997)

Alexander v. Whitman, 114 F.3d 1392, 1409 (3d Cir. 1997) (concurring)

United States v. Bell, 113 F.3d 1345 (3d Cir. 1997)

Konstantopoulos v. Westvaco Corp., 112 F.3d 710 (3d Cir. 1997)

Belcufine v. Aloe, 112 F.3d 633 (3d Cir. 1997)

Bray v. Marriott Hotels, 110 F.3d 986, 998–1003 (3d Cir. 1997) (dissenting)

United States v. Kauffman, 109 F.3d 186, 191–94 (3d Cir. 1997) (dissenting)
 Caterpillar, Inc. v. Int'l Union, United Auto., Aerospace & Agr. Implement Workers of Am., 107 F.3d 1052, 1066–73 (3d Cir. 1997) (en banc) (dissenting)
 Phillips v. Borough of Keyport, 107 F.3d 164, 183–87 (3d Cir. 1997) (en banc) (concurring and dissenting)
 In re Yuhas, 104 F.3d 612 (3d Cir. 1997)
 AL Tech Specialty Steel Corp. v. Allegheny Int'l Credit Corp., 104 F.3d 601 (3d Cir. 1997)
 United States v. Murray, 103 F.3d 310 (3d Cir. 1997)
 United States v. Rybar, 103 F.3d 273, 286–94 (3d Cir. 1996) (dissenting)
 Pa. Dept. of Pub. Welfare v. U.S. Dept. of Health & Human Servs., 101 F.3d 939 (3d Cir. 1996)
 Sheridan v. E.I. DuPont de Nemours & Co., 100 F.3d 1061, 1078–89 (3d Cir. 1996) (concurring in part and dissenting in part)
 Meyers v. Gillis, 93 F.3d 1147 (3d Cir. 1996)
 In re Cont'l Airlines, 91 F.3d 553, 567–73 (3d Cir. 1996) (en banc) (dissenting)
 United States v. Balter, 91 F.3d 427 (3d Cir. 1996)
 Massieu v. Reno, 91 F.3d 416 (3d Cir. 1996)
 In re Westinghouse Sec. Litig., 90 F.3d 696 (3d Cir. 1996)
 Homar v. Gilbert, 89 F.3d 1009, 1023–31 (3d Cir. 1996) (concurring in part and dissenting in part)
 Delli Santi v. CNA Ins. Cos., 88 F.3d 192, 207–10 (3d Cir. 1996) (concurring and dissenting)
 Artway v. Attorney Gen. of N.J., 83 F.3d 594, 595–98 (3d Cir. 1996) (en banc) (dissenting from denial of reh'g en banc)
 Antol v. Perry, 82 F.3d 1291, 1303–04 (3d Cir. 1996) (concurring)
 United States v. Edmonds, 80 F.3d 810, 829–36 (3d Cir. 1996) (en banc) (concurring in part and dissenting in part)
 In re Cont'l Airlines, 75 F.3d 868, *12–*14 (3d Cir. Feb. 7, 1996) (dissenting), withdrawn by 75 F.3d 880, and superceded by 91 F.3d 553 (1996)
 Sheridan v. E.I. Du Pont de Nemours & Co., 74 F.3d 1439 (3d Cir.), superceded by 100 F.3d 1061 (1996)
 United States v. Copple, 74 F.3d 479, 485–86 (3d Cir. 1996) (concurring)
 Rogal v. Am. Broad. Cos., Inc., 74 F.3d 40 (3d Cir. 1996)
 Mitchum v. Hurt, 73 F.3d 30 (3d Cir. 1995)
 United States v. $184,505.01, 72 F.3d 1160 (3d Cir. 1995)
 Bodine v. Warwick, 72 F.3d 393 (3d Cir. 1995)
 Hakimoglu v. Trump Taj Mahal Assocs., 70 F.3d 291 (3d Cir. 1995)
 Flamer v. Delaware, 68 F.3d 736 (3d Cir. 1995)
 Flamer v. Delaware, 68 F.3d 710 (3d Cir. 1995)
 W. United Life Assurance Co. v. Hayden, 64 F.3d 833 (3d Cir. 1995)
 Cooper Distrib. Co., Inc. v. Amana Refrigeration, Inc., 63 F.3d 262 (3d Cir. 1995)
 United States v. Salemo, 61 F.3d 214, 222–24 (3d Cir. 1995) (concurring)
 Nicholson v. C.I.R., 60 F.3d 1020 (3d Cir. 1995)
 Reich v. Compton, 57 F.3d 270 (3d Cir. 1995)
 Baker v. Monroe Twp., 50 F.3d 1186, 1195–1203 (3d Cir. 1995) (concurring and dissenting)
 Harris v. City of Philadelphia, 47 F.3d 1342, 1356–59 (3d Cir. 1995) (concurring and dissenting)
 Tabas v. Tabas, 47 F.3d 1280, 1302 (3d Cir. 1995) (en banc) (concurring)
 Lesal Interiors, Inc. v. Echotree Assocs., L.P., 47 F.3d 607 (3d Cir. 1995)

United States v. Jacobs, 44 F.3d 1219 (3d Cir. 1995)
 In re Asbestos Sch. Litig., 46 F.3d 1284 (3d Cir. 1994)
 Stardyne, Inc. v. N.L.R.B., 41 F.3d 141 (3d Cir. 1994)
 United States v. Rosero, 42 F.3d 166 (3d Cir. 1994)
 United States v. Fields, 39 F.3d 439 (3d Cir. 1994)
 United States v. Shoupe, 35 F.3d 835, 839–40 (3d Cir. 1994) (dissenting)
 United States v. Mummert, 34 F.3d 201 (3d Cir. 1994)
 Glass v. Philadelphia Elec. Co., 34 F.3d 188, 196–201 (3d Cir. 1994) (dissenting)
 In re A.M., 34 F.3d 153 (3d Cir. 1994)
 St. Francis Med. Ctr. v. Shalala, 32 F.3d 805 (3d Cir. 1994)
 Luden's Inc. v. Local 6, Bakery, Confectionery & Tobacco Workers' Int'l Union of Am., 28
 F.3d 347, 364–66 (3d Cir. 1994) (dissenting)
 United States v. McDade, 28 F.3d 283 (3d Cir. 1994)
 Virgin Islands v. Charleswell, 24 F.3d 571 (3d Cir. 1994)
 Pa. Dept. of Env'tl. Res. v. Conroy, 24 F.3d 568 (3d Cir. 1994)
 Tipu v. I.N.S., 20 F.3d 580, 587–88 (3d Cir. 1994) (dissenting)
 Pemberthy v. Beyer, 19 F.3d 857 (3d Cir. 1994)
 U.S. Tr. v. Price Waterhouse, 19 F.3d 138 (3d Cir. 1994)
 Johnson & Johnson-Merck Consumer Pharms. Co. v. Rhone-Poulenc Rorer Pharms., Inc., 19
 F.3d 125, 136–38 (3d Cir. 1994) (dissenting)
 Matthews v. Pineo, 19 F.3d 121 (3d Cir. 1994)
 Rappa v. New Castle County, 18 F.3d 1043, 1079–80 (3d Cir. 1994) (concurring)
 In re Texas E. Transmission Corp. PCB Contamination Ins. Coverage Litig., 15 F.3d 1249, 1256–58 (3d Cir. 1994) (dissenting in part)
 In re Texas E. Transmission Corp. PCB Contamination Ins. Coverage Litig., 15 F.3d 1230, 1244–49 (3d Cir. 1994) (dissenting)
 Reich v. Gateway Press, Inc., 13 F.3d 685, 703–04 (3d Cir. 1994) (dissenting in part)
 United States v. Sharapan, 13 F.3d 781 (3d Cir. 1994)
 Pa. Dept. of Env'tl. Res. v. U.S. Postal Serv., 13 F.3d 62 (3d Cir. 1993)
 Fatin v. I.N.S., 12 F.3d 1233 (3d Cir. 1993)
 Houck v. Drummond, 12 F.3d 394, 397–401 (3d Cir. 1993) (dissenting)
 Exxon Shipping Co. v. Exxon Seamen's Union, 11 F.3d 1189 (3d Cir. 1993)
 Indiana Hosp., Inc. v. N.L.R.B., 10 F.3d 151 (3d Cir. 1993)
 United States v. Stiver, 9 F.3d 298 (3d Cir. 1993)
 Lerman v. Joyce Int'l, Inc., 10 F.3d 106 (3d Cir. 1993)
 Purificato v. C.I.R., 9 F.3d 290 (3d Cir. 1993)
 United States v. Fisher, 10 F.3d 115 (3d Cir. 1993)
 United States v. DeRewal, 10 F.3d 100 (3d Cir. 1993)
 Rodriguez v. Reading Hous. Auth., 8 F.3d 961 (3d Cir. 1993)
 Gade v. Csomos, 8 F.3d 137 (3d Cir. 1993)
 Cain v. Darby Borough, 7 F.3d 377, 384 (3d Cir. 1993) (joining in concurrence and dissent)
 Gillis v. Hoechst Celanese Corp., 4 F.3d 1137, 1149–51 (3d Cir. 1993) (concurring)
 Dunn v. HOVIC, 1 F.3d 1371, 1391–93 (3d Cir. 1993) (en banc) (concurring)
 Tigor Title Ins. Co. v. F.T.C., 998 F.2d 1129, 1141–43 (3d Cir. 1993) (dissenting)
 Cort v. Dir., OWCP, 996 F.2d 1549 (3d Cir. 1993)
 Pa. Office of Budget v. Dept. of Health & Human Servs., 996 F.2d 1505 (3d Cir. 1993)

Specter v. Garrett, 995 F.2d 404, 411–14 (3d Cir. 1993) (dissenting)
 Petrocelli v. Daniel Woodhead Co., 993 F.2d 27 (3d Cir. 1993)
 United States v. Brown, 991 F.2d 1162 (3d Cir. 1993)
 Clowes v. Allegheny Valley Hosp., 991 F.2d 1159 (3d Cir. 1993)
 Kleinknecht v. Gettysburg Coll., 989 F.2d 1360, 1375 (3d Cir. 1993) (dissenting)
 Grant v. Shalala, 989 F.2d 1332 (3d Cir. 1993)
 In re Channel Home Ctrs., Inc., 989 F.2d 682 (3d Cir. 1993)
 John Hancock Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Route 37 Bus. Park Assocs., 987 F.2d 154 (3d Cir. 1993)
 Dailey v. Nat'l Hockey League, 987 F.2d 172, 179–80 (3d Cir. 1993) (dissenting)
 United States v. Chapple, 985 F.2d 729 (3d Cir. 1993)
 Wheeler v. Graco Trucking Corp., 985 F.2d 108 (3d Cir. 1993)
 Aliota v. Graham, 984 F.2d 1350 (3d Cir. 1993)
 Ramseur v. Beyer, 983 F.2d 1215, 1242–46 (3d Cir. 1992) (en banc) (concurring)
 In re Mkt. Square Inn, Inc., 978 F.2d 116, 121 (3d Cir. 1992) (concurring)
 Moats v. United Mine Workers of Am. Health & Ret. Funds, 981 F.2d 685 (3d Cir. 1992)
 Terry v. Petsock, 974 F.2d 372 (3d Cir. 1992)
 Fisher v. USAA Cas. Ins. Co., 973 F.2d 1103 (3d Cir. 1992)
 United States v. Belletiere, 971 F.2d 961, 973–74 (3d Cir. 1992) (concurring)
 Specter v. Garrett, 971 F.2d 936, 956–61 (3d Cir. 1992) (concurring in part and dissenting in part)
 United States v. Polan, 970 F.2d 1280 (3d Cir. 1992)
 Althouse v. Resolution Trust Corp., 969 F.2d 1544 (3d Cir. 1992)
 Elkin v. Fauver, 969 F.2d 48 (3d Cir. 1992)
 Griffin v. Spratt, 969 F.2d 16 (3d Cir. 1992)
 Sanguigni v. Pittsburgh Bd. of Pub. Educ., 968 F.2d 393 (3d Cir. 1992)
 Fed. Labor Relations Auth. v. U.S. Dept. of Navy, 966 F.2d 747, 765 (3d Cir. 1992) (en banc) (dissenting)
 Tigg Corp. v. Dow Corning Corp., 962 F.2d 1119 (3d Cir. 1992)
 McArdle v. Tronetti, 961 F.2d 1083 (3d Cir. 1992)
 United States v. Rodriguez, 961 F.2d 1089 (3d Cir. 1992)
 Gluck v. Unisys Corp., 960 F.2d 1168, 1186–87 (3d Cir. 1992) (concurring)
 Dillinger v. Caterpillar, Inc., 959 F.2d 430, 448–51 (3d Cir. 1992) (dissenting)
 United States v. Parson, 955 F.2d 858, 875 (3d Cir. 1992) (concurring)
 Grupo Protexa, S.A. v. All Am. Marine Slip, 954 F.2d 130 (3d Cir. 1992)
 Bolden v. Se. Pa. Transp. Auth., 953 F.2d 807 (3d Cir. 1991) (en banc)
 Arnotek Indus. v. Employers Ins. of Wausau, 952 F.2d 756 (3d Cir. 1991)
 Burkett v. Fulcomer, 951 F.2d 1431, 1449–51 (3d Cir. 1991) (dissenting)
 Bricklayers & Allied Craftsmen Int'l Union Local 33 Benefit Funds v. America's Marble Source, Inc., 950 F.2d 114 (3d Cir. 1991)
 Manor Care, Inc. v. Yaskin, 950 F.2d 122 (3d Cir. 1991)
 Virgin Islands v. Smith, 949 F.2d 677, 687–90 (3d Cir. 1991) (dissenting)
 Hosp. Council v. City of Pittsburgh, 949 F.2d 83 (3d Cir. 1991)
 Rock v. Zimmerman, 1991 WL 148490, *11–*17 (3d Cir. 1991) (dissenting), superceded on reh'g by 959 F.2d 1237 (1992)
 United States v. 1500 Lincoln Ave., 949 F.2d 73 (3d Cir. 1991)

Planned Parenthood v. Casey, 947 F.2d 682, 719–27 (3d Cir. 1991) (concurring in part and dissenting in part)
 Smith v. Dept. of Educ., 942 F.2d 199 (3d Cir. 1991)
 N. Ins. Co. of New York v. Aardvark Assocs., Inc., 942 F.2d 189 (3d Cir. 1991)
 United States v. $1,322,242.58, 938 F.2d 433 (3d Cir. 1991)
 N.L.R.B. v. Alan Motor Lines Inc., 937 F.2d 887 (3d Cir. 1991)
 Charpentier v. Godsil, 937 F.2d 859 (3d Cir. 1991)
 Virgin Islands v. Mills, 935 F.2d 591 (3d Cir. 1991)
 Sheet Metal Workers Local 19 v. Keystone Heating & Air Conditioning, 934 F.2d 35 (3d Cir. 1991)
 United States v. Murillo, 933 F.2d 195, 200 n.4 (3d Cir. 1991) (concurring in result)
 Cruz v. Chesapeake Shipping, Inc., 932 F.2d 218, 235–39 (3d Cir. 1991) (dissenting)
 Bolden v. Se. Pa. Transp. Auth., 1991 WL 41909, *20–*24 (3d Cir. Apr. 1, 1991) (concurring in part and dissenting in part), vacated on reh'g by 953 F.2d 807 (1991)
 Miller v. Ind. Hosp., 930 F.2d 334 (3d Cir. 1991)
 United States v. Reyes, 930 F.2d 310 (3d Cir. 1991)
 United States v. Davis, 929 F.2d 930 (3d Cir. 1991)
 United States v. Shoupe, 929 F.2d 116 (3d Cir. 1991)
 Kehr Packages, Inc. v. Fidelcor, Inc., 926 F.2d 1406, 1419–23 (3d Cir. 1991) (concurring in part and dissenting in part)
 Nathanson v. Med. Coll. of Pa., 926 F.2d 1368, 1392–96 (3d Cir. 1991) (concurring and dissenting)
 Welch v. Folsom, 925 F.2d 666 (3d Cir. 1991)
 Gridley v. Cleveland Pneumatic Co., 924 F.2d 1310 (3d Cir. 1991)
 United States v. Bierley, 922 F.2d 1061, 1070–73 (3d Cir. 1990) (dissenting)
 Bhaya v. Westinghouse Elec. Corp., 922 F.2d 184 (3d Cir. 1990)
 E.E.O.C. v. U.S. Steel Corp., 921 F.2d 489 (3d Cir. 1990)
 Fialkowski v. Greenwich Home for Children, Inc., 921 F.2d 459 (3d Cir. 1990)
 Berardi v. Swanson Mem'l Lodge No. 48, 920 F.2d 198 (3d Cir. 1990)
 Burden v. United States, 917 F.2d 115, 121–23 (3d Cir. 1990) (concurring in part and dissenting in part)
 Lewis v. Mazurkiewicz, 915 F.2d 106 (3d Cir. 1990)

b. citations to all cases in which you were a panel member;

Wilderman v. Cooper & Scully, P.C., --- F.3d ---, 2005 WL 2807376 (3d Cir. Oct. 28, 2005)
 Mahmood v. Gonzales, --- F.3d ---, 2005 WL 2785204 (3d Cir. Oct. 27, 2005)
 Cudjoe v. Dep't of Veterans Affairs, 426 F.3d 241 (3d Cir. 2005)
 United States v. Naranjo, 426 F.3d 221 (3d Cir. 2005)
 Herring v. United States, 424 F.3d 384 (3d Cir. 2005)
 Baxter v. Baxter, 423 F.3d 363 (3d Cir. 2005)
 Gordon v. Lewistown Hosp., 423 F.3d 184 (3d Cir. 2005)
 United States v. Bennett, 423 F.3d 271 (3d Cir. 2005)
 Franklin Prescriptions, Inc. v. New York Times Co., 424 F.3d 336 (3d Cir. 2005)
 Leshko v. Servis, 423 F.3d 337 (3d Cir. 2005)

Richardson v. Pa. Bd. of Prob. & Parole, 423 F.3d 282 (3d Cir. 2005)
Warren v. Kyler, 422 F.3d 132 (3d Cir. 2005)
In re Wagner, 421 F.3d 275 (3d Cir. 2005)
Garcia v. Plaza Oldsmobile Ltd., 421 F.3d 216 (3d Cir. 2005)
Vitale v. Latrobe Area Hosp., 420 F.3d 278 (3d Cir. 2005)
Shingara v. Skiles, 420 F.3d 301 (3d Cir. 2005)
Dobrek v. Phelan, 419 F.3d 259 (3d Cir. 2005)
In re Erie Forge & Steel, Inc., 418 F.3d 270 (3d Cir. 2005)
United States v. Williams, 417 F.3d 373 (3d Cir. 2005)
United States v. Miller, 417 F.3d 358 (3d Cir. 2005)
In re Joubert, 411 F.3d 452 (3d Cir. 2005)
Metromedia Energy, Inc. v. Enserch Energy Servs., Inc., 409 F.3d 574 (3d Cir. 2005)
United States v. Davis, 407 F.3d 162 (3d Cir. 2005)
Graham v. City of Philadelphia, 402 F.3d 139 (3d Cir. 2005)
Auguste v. Ridge, 395 F.3d 123 (3d Cir. 2005)
Johnson v. Pinchak, 392 F.3d 551 (3d Cir. 2004)
In re Integrated Telecom Express, Inc., 389 F.3d 423 (3d Cir. 2004)
Lambert v. Blackwell, 387 F.3d 210 (3d Cir. 2004)
Fiscus v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., 385 F.3d 378 (3d Cir. 2004)
Singh-Kaur v. Ashcroft, 385 F.3d 293 (3d Cir. 2004)
United States v. Torres, 383 F.3d 92 (3d Cir. 2004)
Golden v. Golden, 382 F.3d 348 (3d Cir. 2004)
Petroleos Mexicanos Refinacion v. King A, 377 F.3d 329 (3d Cir. 2004)
Lorillard Tobacco Co. v. Bisan Food Corp., 377 F.3d 313 (3d Cir. 2004)
United States v. Rutland, 372 F.3d 543 (3d Cir. 2004)
McLeod v. Hartford Life & Accident Ins. Co., 372 F.3d 618 (3d Cir. 2004)
In re Tops Appliance City, Inc., 372 F.3d 510 (3d Cir. 2004)
Spruill v. Gillis, 372 F.3d 218 (3d Cir. 2004)
Skretvedt v. E.I. DuPont De Nemours, 372 F.3d 193 (3d Cir. 2004)
In re Alpharma Inc. Sec. Litig., 372 F.3d 137 (3d Cir. 2004)
United States v. Rennert, 374 F.3d 206 (3d Cir. 2004)
2660 Woodley Rd. Joint Venture v. ITT Sheraton Corp., 369 F.3d 732 (3d Cir. 2004)
United States v. Allegheny Ludlum Corp., 366 F.3d 164 (3d Cir. 2004)
United States v. Rivera, 365 F.3d 213 (3d Cir. 2004)
Jones v. Barnhart, 364 F.3d 501 (3d Cir. 2004)
Jackson v. Egyptian Navigation Co., 364 F.3d 113 (3d Cir. 2004)
Hampe v. Butler, 364 F.3d 90 (3d Cir. 2004)
Brzozowski v. Corr. Physician Servs., Inc., 362 F.3d 876 (3d Cir. 2004)
Miller v. Nissan Motor Acceptance Corp., 362 F.3d 209 (3d Cir. 2004)
Lum v. Bank of Am., 361 F.3d 217 (3d Cir. 2004)
Crews v. Horn, 360 F.3d 146 (3d Cir. 2004)
United States v. Rivera, 357 F.3d 290 (3d Cir. 2004)
CGB Occupational Therapy, Inc. v. RHA Health Servs. Inc., 357 F.3d 375 (3d Cir. 2004)
United States v. Himler, 355 F.3d 735 (3d Cir. 2004)
McCurdy v. Dodd, 352 F.3d 820 (3d Cir. 2003)
Tineo v. Ashcroft, 350 F.3d 382 (3d Cir. 2003)

Wilson v. Ashcroft, 350 F.3d 377 (3d Cir. 2003)
 Brown v. Philadelphia Hous. Auth., 350 F.3d 338 (3d Cir. 2003)
 Mulanga v. Ashcroft, 349 F.3d 123 (3d Cir. 2003)
 In re Pillowtex, Inc., 349 F.3d 711 (3d Cir. 2003)
 United States v. Phillips, 349 F.3d 138 (3d Cir. 2003)
 Lewis v. Pinchak, 348 F.3d 355 (3d Cir. 2003)
 Worldcom, Inc. v. Graphnet, Inc., 343 F.3d 651 (3d Cir. 2003)
 United States v. Rodriguez, 342 F.3d 296 (3d Cir. 2003)
 Roberts v. Fleet Bank (R.I.), 342 F.3d 260 (3d Cir. 2003)
 Krystal Cadillac-Oldsmobile GMC Truck, Inc. v. Gen. Motors Corp, 337 F.3d 314 (3d Cir. 2003)
 Virgin Islands v. Rivera, 333 F.3d 143 (3d Cir. 2003)
 United States v. Jenkins, 333 F.3d 151 (3d Cir. 2003)
 Shire US Inc. v. Barr Labs., Inc., 329 F.3d 348 (3d Cir. 2003)
 Delvoe v. Lee, 329 F.3d 330 (3d Cir. 2003)
 Grazier v. City of Philadelphia, 328 F.3d 120 (3d Cir. 2003)
 Otto v. Pa. State Educ. Ass'n-NEA, 328 F.3d 715 (3d Cir. 2003)
 In re Cellnet Data Sys., Inc., 327 F.3d 242 (3d Cir. 2003)
 United States v. Pollard, 326 F.3d 397 (3d Cir. 2003)
 In re Tutu Water Wells CERCLA Litig., 326 F.3d 201 (3d Cir. 2003)
 United States v. Cordo, 324 F.3d 223 (3d Cir. 2003)
 In re PPI Enters. (U.S.), Inc., 324 F.3d 197 (3d Cir. 2003)
 Citicorp Venture Capital, Ltd. v. Comm. of Creditors Holding Unsecured Claims, 323 F.3d 228 (3d Cir. 2003)
 Srein v. Frankford Trust Co., 323 F.3d 214 (3d Cir. 2003)
 In re Trans World Airlines, Inc., 322 F.3d 283 (3d Cir. 2003)
 Colbert v. Dymacol, Inc., 344 F.3d 334 (3d Cir. 2003)
 United States v. One "Piper" Aztec "F" De Luxe Model 250 PA 23 Aircraft, 321 F.3d 355 (3d Cir. 2003)
 Bluebeard's Castle, Inc. v. Virgin Islands, 321 F.3d 394 (3d Cir. 2003)
 United Artists Theatre Circuit, Inc. v. Twp. of Warrington, 324 F.3d 133 (3d Cir. 2003)
 Fotta v. Trs. of United Mine Workers of Am., 319 F.3d 612 (3d Cir. 2003)
 Martinez-Sanes v. Turnbull, 318 F.3d 483 (3d Cir. 2003)
 Toys "R" Us, Inc. v. Step Two, S.A., 318 F.3d 446 (3d Cir. 2003)
 Grand Union Supermarkets of the V.I., Inc. v. H.E. Lockhart Mgmt., Inc., 316 F.3d 408 (3d Cir. 2003)
 Paper Magic Group, Inc. v. J.B. Hunt Transp., Inc., 318 F.3d 458 (3d Cir. 2003)
 In re Prudential Ins. Co. of Am. Sales Practices Litig., 314 F.3d 99 (3d Cir. 2002)
 United States v. Cross, 308 F.3d 308 (3d Cir. 2002)
 Official Comm. of Unsecured Creditors of Cybergenics Corp. v. Chinery, 304 F.3d 316 (3d Cir.), vacated by 310 F.3d 785 (2002)
 Lyons v. Mendez, 303 F.3d 285 (3d Cir. 2002)
 Brown v. Pa. Dept. of Health Emergency Med. Servs. Training Inst., 300 F.3d 311 (3d Cir. 2002)
 United States v. Peppers, 302 F.3d 120 (3d Cir. 2002)
 United States v. Zats, 298 F.3d 182 (3d Cir. 2002)

Smathers v. Multi-Tool, Inc./Multi-Plastics, Inc. Employee Health & Welfare Plan, 298 F.3d 191 (3d Cir. 2002)

United States v. Pharis, 298 F.3d 228 (3d Cir. 2002)

Planned Parenthood v. Attorney Gen. of State of N.J., 297 F.3d 253 (3d Cir. 2002)

Balsavage v. Dir., OWCP, 295 F.3d 390 (3d Cir. 2002)

In re Joshua Hill, Inc., 294 F.3d 482 (3d Cir. 2002)

United States v. Sanchez-Gonzalez, 294 F.3d 563 (3d Cir. 2002)

De Leon-Reynoso v. Ashcroft, 293 F.3d 633, 640 n.4 (3d Cir. 2002) (joining in part)

In re Pittsburgh & Lake Erie Prop., Inc., 290 F.3d 516 (3d Cir. 2002)

Dam Things from Denmark v. Russ Berrie & Co., 290 F.3d 548 (3d Cir. 2002)

Robinson v. Johnson, 283 F.3d 582 (3d Cir. 2002)

Crissman v. Dover Downs Entm't Inc., 289 F.3d 231 (3d Cir. 2002)

Robinson v. Johnson, 283 F.3d 582 (3d Cir. 2002)

Pontarelli v. U.S. Dept. of the Treasury, 285 F.3d 216 (3d Cir. 2002)

United States v. Nelson, 284 F.3d 472 (3d Cir. 2002)

Lapid-Laurel, L.L.C. v. Zoning Bd. of Adjustment, 284 F.3d 442 (3d Cir. 2002)

United States v. Stewart, 283 F.3d 579 (3d Cir. 2002)

Johnson v. Elk Lake Sch. Dist., 283 F.3d 138, 154 n.11 (3d Cir. 2002) (joining in part)

United States v. Jake, 281 F.3d 123 (3d Cir. 2002)

Rossmann v. Fleet Bank (R.I.) Nat'l Ass'n, 280 F.3d 384 (3d Cir. 2002)

Sultan Chemists, Inc. v. U.S. E.P.A., 281 F.3d 73 (3d Cir. 2002)

United States v. Jasin, 280 F.3d 355 (3d Cir. 2002)

Bailey v. United Airlines, 279 F.3d 194 (3d Cir. 2002)

LePage's Inc. v. 3M, 277 F.3d 365, (3d Cir.), withdrawn by 2002 U.S. App. LEXIS 3254 (Feb. 25, 2002)

City of Philadelphia v. Beretta U.S.A. Corp., 277 F.3d 415 (3d Cir. 2002)

United States v. Szehinskyj, 277 F.3d 331 (3d Cir. 2002)

Gritzer v. CBS, Inc., 275 F.3d 291 (3d Cir. 2002)

Highmark, Inc. v. UPMC Health Plan, Inc., 276 F.3d 160 (3d Cir. 2001)

Camden County Bd. of Chosen Freeholders v. Beretta, U.S.A. Corp., 273 F.3d 536 (3d Cir. 2001)

Brown v. Muhlenberg Twp., 273 F.3d 390 (3d Cir. 2001)

E.I. DuPont de Nemours & Co. v. Rhone Poulenc Fiber & Resin Intermediates, S.A.S., 269 F.3d 187 (3d Cir. 2001)

United States v. Vazquez, 271 F.3d 93 (3d Cir. 2001)

In re Brightful, 267 F.3d 324 (3d Cir. 2001)

Comuso v. Nat'l R.R. Passenger Corp., 267 F.3d 331 (3d Cir. 2001)

TKR Cable Co. v. Cable City Corp., 267 F.3d 196 (3d Cir. 2001)

United States v. Pharis, 264 F.3d 1149 (3d Cir. 2001)

W.R. Grace & Co. v. U.S. E.P.A., 261 F.3d 330 (3d Cir. 2001)

United States v. Omoruyi, 260 F.3d 291 (3d Cir. 2001)

Pa. Pharmacists Ass'n v. Houstoun, 257 F.3d 843 (3d Cir. 2001)

Bass v. Butler, 258 F.3d 176 (3d Cir. 2001) (joining in part)

Crissman v. Dover Downs Entm't Inc., 254 F.3d 467 (3d Cir. 2001)

Pryer v. C.O. 3 Slavic, 251 F.3d 448 (3d Cir. 2001)

United States v. Brown, 250 F.3d 811 (3d Cir. 2001)

Beta Spawn, Inc. v. FFE Transp. Servs., Inc., 250 F.3d 218 (3d Cir. 2001)
Smith v. Davis, 248 F.3d 249 (3d Cir. 2001)
Cinicola v. Scharffenberger, 248 F.3d 110 (3d Cir. 2001)
Woodside v. Sch. Dist. of Philadelphia Bd. of Educ., 248 F.3d 129 (3d Cir. 2001)
Fargnoli v. Massanari, 247 F.3d 34 (3d Cir. 2001)
United States v. Brooks, 245 F.3d 291 (3d Cir. 2001)
United States v. Vazquez, 243 F.3d 710 (3d Cir. 2001)
Doe v. County of Ctr., 242 F.3d 437 (3d Cir. 2001)
Riley v. Taylor, 237 F.3d 348 (3d Cir. 2001)
Virgin Islands v. Albert, 241 F.3d 344 (3d Cir. 2001)
Berke v. Bloch, 242 F.3d 131 (3d Cir. 2001)
Rauser v. Horn, 241 F.3d 330 (3d Cir. 2001)
United States v. Richards, 241 F.3d 335 (3d Cir. 2001)
Matthews v. Apfel, 239 F.3d 589 (3d Cir. 2001)
Virgin Islands v. Martinez, 239 F.3d 293 (3d Cir. 2001)
Scully v. US WATS, Inc., 238 F.3d 497 (3d Cir. 2001)
Pinho v. I.N.S., 249 F.3d 183 (3d Cir. 2001)
Abdul-Akbar v. McKelvie, 239 F.3d 307 (3d Cir. 2001)
Remick v. Manfredy, 238 F.3d 248 (3d Cir. 2001)
Alkon v. United States, 239 F.3d 565 (3d Cir. 2001)
United States v. Clark, 237 F.3d 293 (3d Cir. 2001)
United States v. Hammer, 239 F.3d 302 (3d Cir. 2001)
United States v. Se. Pa. Transp. Auth., 235 F.3d 817 (3d Cir. 2000)
United States v. Kalb, 234 F.3d 827 (3d Cir. 2000)
Battaglia v. McKendry, 233 F.3d 720 (3d Cir. 2000)
United States v. DeLaurentis, 230 F.3d 659 (3d Cir. 2000)
United States v. Brooks, 230 F.3d 643 (3d Cir. 2000)
Kane v. BOC Group, Inc., 234 F.3d 160 (3d Cir. 2000)
Guardian Life Ins. Co. of Am. v. Goduti-Moore, 229 F.3d 212 (3d Cir. 2000)
United States v. Bockius, 228 F.3d 305 (3d Cir. 2000)
Goosby v. Johnson & Johnson Med., Inc., 228 F.3d 313 (3d Cir. 2000)
Alvin v. Suzuki, 227 F.3d 107 (3d Cir. 2000)
DeHart v. Horn, 227 F.3d 47 (3d Cir. 2000)
United States v. Dodd, 225 F.3d 340 (3d Cir. 2000)
United States v. Cepero, 224 F.3d 256 (3d Cir. 2000)
Tanimura & Antle, Inc. v. Packed Fresh Produce, Inc., 222 F.3d 132 (3d Cir. 2000)
Shelton v. Univ. of Med. & Dentistry of N.J., 223 F.3d 220 (3d Cir. 2000)
Bines v. Kulaylat, 215 F.3d 381 (3d Cir. 2000)
Holmes v. Pension Plan of Bethlehem Steel Corp., 213 F.3d 124 (3d Cir. 2000)
Nicini v. Morra, 212 F.3d 798 (3d Cir. 2000)
Mariani v. United States, 212 F.3d 761 (3d Cir. 2000)
S.E.C. v. Infinity Group Co., 212 F.3d 180 (3d Cir. 2000)
Times Mirror Magazines, Inc. v. Las Vegas Sports News, L.L.C., 212 F.3d 157 (3d Cir. 2000)
Soc'y Hill Towers Owners' Ass'n v. Rendell, 210 F.3d 168 (3d Cir. 2000)
In re Rashid, 210 F.3d 201 (3d Cir. 2000)
Campbell v. Vaughn, 209 F.3d 280 (3d Cir. 2000)

United States v. Torres, 209 F.3d 308 (3d Cir. 2000)
Chamberlain v. Giampapa, 210 F.3d 154 (3d Cir. 2000)
Wood v. Prudential Ins. Co. of Am., 207 F.3d 674 (3d Cir. 2000)
Figueroa v. Blackburn, 208 F.3d 435 (3d Cir. 2000)
United States v. Universal Rehab. Servs. (PA), Inc., 205 F.3d 657 (3d Cir. 2000)
Coss v. Lackawanna County Dist. Atty., 204 F.3d 453 (3d Cir. 2000)
Hedges v. Musco, 204 F.3d 109 (3d Cir. 2000)
Nyhuis v. Reno, 204 F.3d 65 (3d Cir. 2000)
Stanziale v. Jargowsky, 200 F.3d 101 (3d Cir. 2000)
Doe v. Nat'l Bd. of Med. Exam'rs, 199 F.3d 146 (3d Cir. 1999)
United States v. Johnson, 199 F.3d 123 (3d Cir. 1999)
C.H. v. Oliva, 197 F.3d 63 (3d Cir. 1999)
Pa. Mines Corp. v. Holland, 197 F.3d 114 (3d Cir. 1999)
Motley v. N.J. State Police, 196 F.3d 160 (3d Cir. 1999)
Ryan v. Butera, Beausang, Cohen & Brennan, 193 F.3d 210 (3d Cir. 1999)
United States v. Pitt, 193 F.3d 751 (3d Cir. 1999)
Hankins v. City of Philadelphia, 188 F.3d 217 (3d Cir. 1999)
In re U.S. Healthcare, Inc., 193 F.3d 151 (3d Cir. 1999)
In re Blatstein, 192 F.3d 88 (3d Cir. 1999)
United States v. Sharma, 190 F.3d 220 (3d Cir. 1999)
DeSousa v. Reno, 190 F.3d 175 (3d Cir. 1999)
Nicini v. Morra, 183 F.3d 866 (3d Cir. 1999)
Noorily v. Thomas & Betts Corp., 188 F.3d 153 (3d Cir. 1999)
Orson, Inc. v. Miramax Film Corp., 189 F.3d 377 (3d Cir. 1999)
Int'l Union, United Auto., Aerospace & Agr. Implement Workers of Am. v. Skinner Engine Co., 188 F.3d 130 (3d Cir. 1999)
Plummer v. Apfel, 186 F.3d 422 (3d Cir. 1999)
Lucent Info. Mgmt., Inc. v. Lucent Technologies, Inc., 186 F.3d 311 (3d Cir. 1999)
United States v. Fordham, 187 F.3d 344 (3d Cir. 1999)
In re O'Brien Envtl. Energy, Inc., 181 F.3d 527 (3d Cir. 1999)
United States v. One Toshiba Color Television, 183 F.3d 866 (3d Cir. 1999)
United States v. Stewart, 185 F.3d 112 (3d Cir. 1999)
Tourscher v. McCullough, 184 F.3d 236 (3d Cir. 1999)
United States v. McGlory, 179 F.3d 952 (3d Cir. 1999)
Kleissler v. U.S. Forest Serv., 183 F.3d 196 (3d Cir. 1999)
In re Resorts Int'l, Inc., 181 F.3d 505 (3d Cir. 1999)
Richards v. United States, 180 F.3d 564 (3d Cir. 1999)
Beidleman v. Stroh Brewery Co., 182 F.3d 225 (3d Cir. 1999)
Shell Petroleum, Inc. v. United States, 182 F.3d 212 (3d Cir. 1999)
Rego v. ARC Water Treatment Co. of Pa., 181 F.3d 396 (3d Cir. 1999)
Cooper Distrib. Co., Inc. v. Amana Refrigeration, Inc., 180 F.3d 542 (3d Cir. 1999)
In re First Jersey Sec., Inc., 180 F.3d 504 (3d Cir. 1999)
Orson, Inc. v. Miramax Film Corp., 174 F.3d 392 (3d Cir. 1999)
Collins v. Montgomery County Bd. of Prison Inspectors, 176 F.3d 679 (3d Cir. 1999)
Express Servs., Inc. v. Careers Exp. Staffing Servs., 176 F.3d 183 (3d Cir. 1999)
United States v. Universal Rehab. Servs. (PA), Inc., 173 F.3d 914 (3d Cir. 1999)

Connecticut Gen. Life Ins. Co. v. C.I.R., 177 F.3d 136 (3d Cir. 1999)
United States v. Universal Rehab. Servs. (PA), Inc., 167 F.3d 172 (3d Cir. 1999)
Bayer AG v. Betachem, Inc., 173 F.3d 188 (3d Cir. 1999)
United States v. Dorsey, 174 F.3d 331 (3d Cir. 1999)
Ridgewood Bd. of Educ. v. N.E., 172 F.3d 238 (3d Cir. 1999)
Reform Party of Allegheny County v. Allegheny County Dept. of Elections, 174 F.3d 305 (3d Cir. 1999)
Matteo v. Superintendent, SCI Albion, 171 F.3d 877 (3d Cir. 1999)
Am. Disabled for Attendant Programs Today v. U.S. Dept. of Hous. & Urban Dev., 170 F.3d 381 (3d Cir. 1999)
AMP Inc. v. AlliedSignal Corp., 168 F.3d 649 (3d Cir. 1999)
A & H Sportswear, Inc. v. Victoria's Secret Stores, Inc., 166 F.3d 197 (3d Cir. 1999)
A.S. Goldmen & Co., Inc. v. N.J. Bureau of Sec., 163 F.3d 780 (3d Cir. 1999)
United States v. Kole, 164 F.3d 164 (3d Cir. 1998)
Newport Assocs. Dev. Co. v. Travelers Indem. Co. of Ill., 162 F.3d 789 (3d Cir. 1998)
Fultz v. Dunn, 165 F.3d 215 (3d Cir. 1998)
S.E.C. v. Black, 163 F.3d 188 (3d Cir. 1998)
Torres v. McLaughlin, 163 F.3d 169 (3d Cir. 1998)
Hassine v. Zimmerman, 160 F.3d 941 (3d Cir. 1998)
United States v. Brown, 159 F.3d 147 (3d Cir. 1998)
United States v. Parise, 159 F.3d 790 (3d Cir. 1998)
ACM P'ship v. C.I.R., 157 F.3d 231 (3d Cir. 1998)
In re City of Philadelphia Litig., 158 F.3d 711 (3d Cir. 1998)
In re City of Philadelphia Litig., 158 F.3d 723 (3d Cir. 1998)
Abu-Jamal v. Price, 154 F.3d 128 (3d Cir. 1998)
In re Fesq, 153 F.3d 113 (3d Cir. 1998)
United States v. Askari, 151 F.3d 131 (3d Cir. 1998)
In re Madden, 151 F.3d 125 (3d Cir. 1998)
Iberia Foods Corp. v. Romeo, 150 F.3d 298 (3d Cir. 1998)
United States v. Sherman, 150 F.3d 306 (3d Cir. 1998)
Koppers Co., Inc. v. Aetna Cas. & Sur. Co., 158 F.3d 170 (3d Cir. 1998)
United States v. Boynes, 149 F.3d 208 (3d Cir. 1998)
United States v. Varlack Ventures, Inc., 149 F.3d 212 (3d Cir. 1998)
First Liberty Inv. Group v. Nicholsberg, 145 F.3d 647 (3d Cir. 1998)
Tara M. v. City of Philadelphia, 145 F.3d 625 (3d Cir. 1998)
Transp. Workers Union of Am., Local 290 v. Se. Pa. Transp. Auth., 145 F.3d 619 (3d Cir. 1998)
Matteo v. Albion, 144 F.3d 882 (3d Cir. 1998)
Pappan Enters., Inc. v. Hardee's Food Sys., Inc., 143 F.3d 800 (3d Cir. 1998)
Ingram v. County of Bucks, 144 F.3d 265 (3d Cir. 1998)
O'Neill v. United States, 140 F.3d 564 (3d Cir. 1998)
United States v. Faulks, 143 F.3d 133 (3d Cir. 1998)
In re Krystal Cadillac Oldsmobile GMC Truck, Inc., 142 F.3d 631 (3d Cir. 1998)
Deane v. Pocono Med. Ctr., 142 F.3d 138 (3d Cir. 1998)
Krebs Chrysler-Plymouth, Inc. v. Valley Motors, Inc., 141 F.3d 490 (3d Cir. 1998)
United States v. Askari, 159 F.3d 774 (3d Cir. 1998)
United States v. Askari, 140 F.3d 536 (3d Cir. 1998)

Henkels & McCoy, Inc. v. Adochio, 138 F.3d 491 (3d Cir. 1998)
In re Gutpelet, 137 F.3d 748 (3d Cir. 1998)
Harris v. City of Philadelphia, 137 F.3d 209 (3d Cir. 1998)
Sabo v. Metro. Life Ins. Co., 137 F.3d 185 (3d Cir. 1998)
Newton v. Merrill, Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, Inc., 135 F.3d 266 (3d Cir. 1998)
In re Prudential Ins. Co. of Am. Sales Practice Litig., 133 F.3d 225 (3d Cir. 1998)
United States v. Fiorelli, 133 F.3d 218 (3d Cir. 1998)
Lambert v. Blackwell, 134 F.3d 506 (3d Cir. 1997)
United States v. Knobloch, 131 F.3d 366 (3d Cir. 1997)
United States v. Ward, 131 F.3d 335 (3d Cir. 1997)
Queen City Pizza, Inc. v. Domino's Pizza, Inc., 129 F.3d 724 (3d Cir. 1997)
United States v. Schwegel, 126 F.3d 551 (3d Cir. 1997)
Ryder v. Westinghouse Elec. Corp., 128 F.3d 128 (3d Cir. 1997)
Kaplan v. Exxon Corp., 126 F.3d 221 (3d Cir. 1997)
United States v. Skandier, 125 F.3d 178 (3d Cir. 1997)
W.P. v. Verniero, 127 F.3d 298 (3d Cir. 1997)
E. B. v. Verniero, 127 F.3d 298 (3d Cir. 1997)
Martin v. Dana Corp., 124 F.3d 590 (3d Cir. 1997)
Queen City Pizza, Inc. v. Domino's Pizza, Inc., 124 F.3d 430 (3d Cir. 1997)
Pub. Interest Research Group of N.J., Inc. v. Magnesium Elektron, Inc., 123 F.3d 111 (3d Cir. 1997)
Fallon Elec. Co., Inc. v. Cincinnati Ins. Co., 121 F.3d 125 (3d Cir. 1997)
Newton v. Merrill, Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, Inc., 115 F.3d 1135 (3d Cir. 1997)
Walling v. Brady, 125 F.3d 114 (3d Cir. 1997)
In re Tutu Wells Contamination Litig., 120 F.3d 368 (3d Cir. 1997)
Martin v. Dana Corp., 114 F.3d 428 (3d Cir. 1997)
Clinton County Comm'r v. U.S. E.P.A., 116 F.3d 1018 (3d Cir. 1997)
Jenkins v. Manning, 116 F.3d 685 (3d Cir. 1997)
Mengine v. Runyon, 114 F.3d 415 (3d Cir. 1997)
Bromwell v. Mich. Mut. Ins. Co., 115 F.3d 208 (3d Cir. 1997)
New Castle County v. Halliburton NUS Corp., 116 F.3d 82 (3d Cir. 1997)
United States v. Eyer, 113 F.3d 470 (3d Cir. 1997)
Rush v. Scott Specialty Gases, Inc., 113 F.3d 476 (3d Cir. 1997)
United States v. Lewis, 113 F.3d 487 (3d Cir. 1997)
United States v. Powell, 113 F.3d 464 (3d Cir. 1997)
Schuylkill Energy Res., Inc. v. Pa. Power & Light Co., 113 F.3d 405 (3d Cir. 1997)
Rhone Poulenc Rorer Pharms. Inc. v. Newman Glass Works, 112 F.3d 695 (3d Cir. 1997)
Pittsburgh Food & Beverage, Inc. v. Ranallo, 112 F.3d 645 (3d Cir. 1997)
Bollman Hat Co. v. Root, 112 F.3d 113 (3d Cir. 1997)
Barren Creek Coal Co. v. Witmer, 111 F.3d 352 (3d Cir. 1997)
Woodson v. Scott Paper Co., 109 F.3d 913 (3d Cir. 1997)
Williams v. Stone, 109 F.3d 890 (3d Cir. 1997)
Davis v. Glanton, 107 F.3d 1044 (3d Cir. 1997)
Keller v. Orix Credit Alliance, Inc., 105 F.3d 1528 (3d Cir. 1997)
Smith v. Philadelphia Hous. Auth., 107 F.3d 223 (3d Cir. 1997)
E & R Erectors, Inc. v. Sec'y of Labor, 107 F.3d 157 (3d Cir. 1997)

In re Barshak, 106 F.3d 501 (3d Cir. 1997)
Long v. Sears Roebuck & Co., 105 F.3d 1529 (3d Cir. 1997)
Jackson v. Byrd, 105 F.3d 145 (3d Cir. 1997)
Donaldson v. Bernstein, 104 F.3d 547 (3d Cir. 1997)
United States v. Cornish, 103 F.3d 302 (3d Cir. 1997)
Madden v. Myers, 102 F.3d 74 (3d Cir. 1996)
United States v. Stelmokas, 100 F.3d 302 (3d Cir. 1996)
Santana v. United States, 98 F.3d 752 (3d Cir. 1996)
In re Unisys Corp. Long-Term Disability Plan ERISA Litig., 97 F.3d 710 (3d Cir. 1996)
Elliott v. Kiesewetter, 98 F.3d 47 (3d Cir. 1996)
Beverly Enters.-Pa., Inc. v. Dist. 1199C Nat'l Union of Hosp. & Health Care Employees, 98 F.3d 730 (3d Cir. 1996)
Doctor v. Walters, 96 F.3d 675 (3d Cir. 1996)
Inmates of Allegheny County Jail v. Wecht, 93 F.3d 1146 (3d Cir. 1996)
Susquenita Sch. Dist. v. Raelee S., 96 F.3d 78 (3d Cir. 1996)
Gov't Guarantee Fund v. Hyatt Corp., 95 F.3d 291 (3d Cir. 1996)
Patriot Party of Allegheny County v. Allegheny County Dept. of Elections, 95 F.3d 253 (3d Cir. 1996)
Azzaro v. County of Allegheny, 91 F.3d 490 (3d Cir. 1996)
Subbe-Hirt v. Baccigalupi, 94 F.3d 111 (3d Cir. 1996)
Glaziers & Glassworkers Union Local No. 252 Annuity Fund v. Newbridge Sec., Inc., 93 F.3d 1171 (3d Cir. 1996)
First Oak Brook Corp. Syndicate v. Comly Holding Corp., 93 F.3d 92 (3d Cir. 1996)
Kelly v. Drexel Univ., 94 F.3d 102 (3d Cir. 1996)
Inmates of Allegheny County Jail v. Wecht, 93 F.3d 1124 (3d Cir.), vacated by 93 F.3d 1146 (1996)
Taxman v. Bd. of Educ. of Twp. of Piscataway, 91 F.3d 1547 (3d Cir. 1996)
United States v. Conley, 92 F.3d 157 (3d Cir. 1996)
Azzaro v. County of Allegheny, 91 F.3d 471 (3d Cir.), vacated by 91 F.3d 490 (1996), superceded by 110 F.3d 968 (1997)
Contractors Ass'n of E. Pa., Inc. v. City of Philadelphia, 91 F.3d 586 (3d Cir. 1996)
Feige v. Sechrest, 90 F.3d 846 (3d Cir. 1996)
Coffin v. Malvern Fed. Sav. Bank, 90 F.3d 851 (3d Cir. 1996)
Reich v. D.M. Sabia Co., 90 F.3d 854 (3d Cir. 1996)
Shiring v. Runyon, 90 F.3d 827 (3d Cir. 1996)
Pa. Nurses Ass'n v. Pa. State Educ. Ass'n, 90 F.3d 797 (3d Cir. 1996)
Burkett v. Love, 89 F.3d 135 (3d Cir. 1996)
Presbyterian Univ. Hosp. v. N.L.R.B., 88 F.3d 1300 (3d Cir. 1996)
United States v. Avila, 88 F.3d 229 (3d Cir. 1996)
United States v. Brady, 88 F.3d 225 (3d Cir. 1996)
Tate & Lyle, Inc. v. C.I.R., 87 F.3d 99 (3d Cir. 1996)
Dayhoff Inc. v. H.J. Heinz Co., 86 F.3d 1287 (3d Cir. 1996)
Mathews v. Lancaster Gen. Hosp., 87 F.3d 624 (3d Cir. 1996)
Chem. Leaman Tank Lines, Inc. v. Aetna Cas. & Sur. Co., 89 F.3d 976 (3d Cir. 1996)
Duffey v. Lehman, 84 F.3d 668 (3d Cir. 1996)
Georgine v. Amchem Prods., Inc., 83 F.3d 610 (3d Cir. 1996)

United States v. Various Computers & Computer Equip., 82 F.3d 582 (3d Cir. 1996)
In re Cont'l Airlines, 75 F.3d 880 (3d Cir. 1996)
Kalwaytis v. Preferred Meal Sys., Inc., 78 F.3d 117 (3d Cir. 1996)
N.L.R.B. v. Konig, 79 F.3d 354 (3d Cir. 1996)
Sheridan v. E.I. DuPont de Nemours & Co., 74 F.3d 1459 (3d Cir. 1996)
United States v. Price, 76 F.3d 526 (3d Cir. 1996)
United States v. Bros., 75 F.3d 845 (3d Cir. 1996)
H.K. Porter Co., Inc. v. Pa. Ins. Guar. Ass'n, 75 F.3d 137 (3d Cir. 1996)
Resolution Trust Corp. v. W.W. Dev. & Mgmt., Inc., 73 F.3d 1298 (3d Cir. 1996)
United States v. Brannan, 74 F.3d 448 (3d Cir. 1996)
Exxon Shipping Co. v. Exxon Seamen's Union, 73 F.3d 1287 (3d Cir. 1996)
In re Unisys Sav. Plan Litig., 74 F.3d 420 (3d Cir. 1996)
N.J. Hosp. Ass'n v. Waldman, 73 F.3d 509 (3d Cir. 1995)
In re Penn Cent. Transp. Co., 71 F.3d 1113 (3d Cir. 1995)
In re Faish, 72 F.3d 298 (3d Cir. 1995)
Labelle Processing Co. v. Swarrow, 72 F.3d 308 (3d Cir. 1995)
United States v. Stokes, 73 F.3d 23 (3d Cir. 1995)
Yang v. Maugans, 68 F.3d 1540 (3d Cir. 1995)
United States v. USX Corp., 68 F.3d 811 (3d Cir. 1995)
Harvey & Harvey, Inc. v. County of Chester, 68 F.3d 788 (3d Cir. 1995)
English v. Mentor Corp., 67 F.3d 477 (3d Cir. 1995)
Hennessy v. F.D.I.C., 66 F.3d 659 (3d Cir. 1995)
United States v. Derewal, 66 F.3d 52 (3d Cir. 1995)
Beth V. v. Carroll, 87 F.3d 80 (3d Cir. 1995)
Brader v. Allegheny Gen. Hosp., 64 F.3d 869 (3d Cir. 1995)
Stelwagon Mfg. Co. v. Tarmac Roofing Sys., Inc., 63 F.3d 1267 (3d Cir. 1995)
Parry v. Rosemeyer, 64 F.3d 110 (3d Cir. 1995)
Burlington N. R.R. Co. v. Hyundai Merch. Marine Co., Ltd., 63 F.3d 1227 (3d Cir. 1995)
Pa. Coal Ass'n v. Babbitt, 63 F.3d 231 (3d Cir. 1995)
United States v. Baird, 63 F.3d 1213 (3d Cir. 1995)
Moench v. Robertson, 62 F.3d 553 (3d Cir. 1995)
McCray v. Corry Mfg. Co., 61 F.3d 224 (3d Cir. 1995)
Davin v. U.S. Dept. of Justice, 60 F.3d 1043 (3d Cir. 1995)
Riley v. Taylor, 62 F.3d 86 (3d Cir. 1995)
Neely v. Club Med Mgmt. Servs., Inc., 63 F.3d 166 (3d Cir. 1995)
Elizabeth Blackwell Health Ctr. for Women v. Knoll, 61 F.3d 170 (3d Cir. 1995)
United States v. Koreh, 59 F.3d 431 (3d Cir. 1995)
Fashauer v. N.J. Transit Rail Operations, Inc., 57 F.3d 1269 (3d Cir. 1995)
Resolution Trust Corp. v. Cityfed Fin. Corp., 57 F.3d 1231 (3d Cir. 1995)
Asplundh Mfg. Div. v. Benton Harbor Eng'g, 57 F.3d 1190 (3d Cir. 1995)
Clean Ocean Action v. York, 57 F.3d 328 (3d Cir. 1995)
Granite State Ins. Co. v. Aamco Transmissions, Inc., 57 F.3d 316 (3d Cir. 1995)
Horowitz v. Fed. Kemper Life Assurance Co., 57 F.3d 300 (3d Cir. 1995)
Affiliated Mfrs., Inc. v. Aluminum Co. of Am., 56 F.3d 521 (3d Cir. 1995)
Blanche Rd. Corp. v. Bensalem Twp., 57 F.3d 253 (3d Cir. 1995)

Whittle v. Local 641, Int'l Broth. of Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Warehousemen & Helpers of Am., 56 F.3d 487 (3d Cir. 1995)
 Christy v. Pa. Tpk. Comm'n, 54 F.3d 1140 (3d Cir. 1995)
 88 Transit Lines, Inc. v. N.L.R.B., 55 F.3d 823 (3d Cir. 1995)
 Dev. Fin. Corp. v. Alpha Hous. & Health Care, Inc., 54 F.3d 156 (3d Cir. 1995)
 Simon v. Cebrick, 53 F.3d 17 (3d Cir. 1995)
 United States v. Edmonds, 52 F.3d 1236 (3d Cir. 1995)
 In re Gen. Motors Corp. Pick-Up Truck Fuel Tank Prods. Liab. Litig., 55 F.3d 768 (3d Cir. 1995)
 Advo, Inc. v. Philadelphia Newspapers, Inc., 51 F.3d 1191 (3d Cir. 1995)
 Mark v. Borough of Hatboro, 51 F.3d 1137 (3d Cir. 1995)
 Abrams v. Lightolier Inc., 50 F.3d 1204 (3d Cir. 1995)
 Douglas v. Owens, 50 F.3d 1226 (3d Cir. 1995)
 Valhal Corp. v. Sullivan Assocs., Inc., 48 F.3d 760 (3d Cir. 1995)
 Beatty v. Danri Corp. & Triangle Enters., 49 F.3d 993 (3d Cir. 1995)
 In re City of Philadelphia Litig., 49 F.3d 945 (3d Cir. 1995)
 Liberty Mut. Ins. Co. v. Ward Trucking Corp., 48 F.3d 742 (3d Cir. 1995)
 United States v. Marrone, 48 F.3d 735 (3d Cir. 1995)
 Atl. Coast Demolition & Recycling, Inc. v. Bd. of Chosen Freeholders, 48 F.3d 701 (3d Cir. 1995)
 DiBiase v. SmithKline Beecham Corp., 48 F.3d 719 (3d Cir. 1995)
 Harris v. City of Philadelphia, 47 F.3d 1333 (3d Cir. 1995)
 Harris v. City of Philadelphia, 47 F.3d 1311 (3d Cir. 1995)
 Marcella v. Brandywine Hosp., 47 F.3d 618 (3d Cir. 1995)
 Linan-Faye Constr. Co., Inc. v. Hous. Auth., 49 F.3d 915 (3d Cir. 1995)
 Midlantic Nat'l Bank v. Hansen, 48 F.3d 693 (3d Cir. 1995)
 Smith v. Se. Pa. Transp. Auth., 47 F.3d 97 (3d Cir. 1995)
 Michael v. Shiley, Inc., 46 F.3d 1316 (3d Cir. 1995)
 Petrucelli v. Bohringer & Ratzinger, 46 F.3d 1298 (3d Cir. 1995)
 Helen L. v. DiDario, 46 F.3d 325 (3d Cir. 1995)
 Fisher Bros. Sales, Inc. v. United States, 46 F.3d 279 (3d Cir. 1995)
 Miller v. CIGNA Corp., 47 F.3d 586 (3d Cir. 1995)
 United States v. Zehrbach, 47 F.3d 1252 (3d Cir. 1995)
 Riley v. Simmons, 45 F.3d 764 (3d Cir. 1995)
 Jaguar Cars, Inc. v. Royal Oaks Motor Car Co., 46 F.3d 258 (3d Cir. 1995)
 Freehold Cogeneration Assocs., L.P. v. Bd. of Regulatory Comm'rs, 44 F.3d 1178 (3d Cir. 1995)
 Sempier v. Johnson & Higgins, 45 F.3d 724 (3d Cir. 1995)
 Feldman v. Philadelphia Hous. Auth., 43 F.3d 823 (3d Cir. 1994)
 T & N v. Pa. Ins. Guar. Ass'n, 44 F.3d 174 (3d Cir. 1994)
 United States v. Himelwright, 42 F.3d 777 (3d Cir. 1994)
 N.L.R.B. v. Greensburg Coca-Cola Bottling Co., 40 F.3d 669 (3d Cir. 1994)
 Bernardsville Bd. of Educ. v. J.H., 42 F.3d 149 (3d Cir. 1994)
 United States v. Brace, 41 F.3d 117 (3d Cir. 1994)
 Gemini Physical Therapy & Rehab., Inc. v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 40 F.3d 63 (3d Cir. 1994)
 Kruzits v. Okuma Mach. Tool, Inc., 40 F.3d 52 (3d Cir. 1994)

United States v. Breyer, 41 F.3d 884 (3d Cir. 1994)
Acierno v. Cloutier, 40 F.3d 597 (3d Cir. 1994)
Venen v. United States, 38 F.3d 100 (3d Cir. 1994)
Alvord-Polk, Inc. v. F. Schumacher & Co., 37 F.3d 996 (3d Cir. 1994)
Bensalem Twp. v. Int'l Surplus Lines Ins. Co., 38 F.3d 1303 (3d Cir. 1994)
In re Columbia Gas Transmission Corp., 37 F.3d 982 (3d Cir. 1994)
Troy Chem. Corp. v. Teamsters Union Local No. 408, 37 F.3d 123 (3d Cir. 1994)
Jones v. Lilly, 37 F.3d 964 (3d Cir. 1994)
Brown v. Borough of Mahaffey, 35 F.3d 846 (3d Cir. 1994)
Harris v. City of Philadelphia, 35 F.3d 840 (3d Cir. 1994)
United States v. Hyde, 37 F.3d 116 (3d Cir. 1994)
Goepel v. Nat'l Postal Mail Handlers Union, a Div. of LIUNA, 36 F.3d 306 (3d Cir. 1994)
Easley v. Snider, 36 F.3d 297 (3d Cir. 1994)
Schulman v. J.P. Morgan Inv. Mgmt., Inc., 35 F.3d 799 (3d Cir. 1994)
Greate Bay Hotel & Casino v. Tose, 34 F.3d 1227 (3d Cir. 1994)
United States v. DiSalvo, 34 F.3d 1204 (3d Cir. 1994)
Salem Blue Collar Workers Ass'n v. City of Salem, 33 F.3d 265 (3d Cir. 1994)
McKenna v. Pac. Rail Serv., 32 F.3d 820 (3d Cir. 1994)
United States v. Reilly, 33 F.3d 1396 (3d Cir. 1994)
Connors v. Fawn Mining Corp., 30 F.3d 483 (3d Cir. 1994)
Virgin Islands v. Robinson, 29 F.3d 878 (3d Cir. 1994)
United States v. Wexler, 31 F.3d 117 (3d Cir. 1994)
Nowak v. Faberge USA Inc., 32 F.3d 755 (3d Cir. 1994)
Lundy v. Adamar of N.J., Inc., 34 F.3d 1173 (3d Cir. 1994)
Robin Woods Inc. v. Woods, 28 F.3d 396 (3d Cir. 1994)
FMC Corp. v. U.S. Dept. of Commerce, 29 F.3d 833, 841 n.1 (3d Cir. 1994) (joining in part)
Apex Fountain Sales, Inc. v. Kleinfeld, 27 F.3d 931 (3d Cir. 1994)
Kaplan v. First Options of Chicago, Inc., 29 F.3d 111 (3d Cir. 1994)
Durant v. Husband, 28 F.3d 12 (3d Cir. 1994)
V.I. Hous. Auth. v. Coastal Gen. Constr. Servs. Corp., 27 F.3d 911 (3d Cir. 1994)
In re Modular Structures, Inc., 27 F.3d 72 (3d Cir. 1994)
United States v. Jemal, 26 F.3d 1267 (3d Cir. 1994)
Sun Buick, Inc. v. Saab Cars USA, Inc., 26 F.3d 1259 (3d Cir. 1994)
Ortiz v. City of Philadelphia Office of City Com'rs Voter Registration Div., 28 F.3d 306 (3d Cir. 1994)
Robinson v. Arvonio, 27 F.3d 877 (3d Cir. 1994)
In re Hammond, 27 F.3d 52 (3d Cir. 1994)
Pacheco v. Coats Co., Inc., 26 F.3d 418 (3d Cir. 1994)
United States v. Carr, 25 F.3d 1194 (3d Cir. 1994)
Graham v. Lanfong, 25 F.3d 203 (3d Cir. 1994)
United States v. Alcan Aluminum, Inc., 25 F.3d 1174 (3d Cir. 1994)
United States v. Menon, 24 F.3d 550 (3d Cir. 1994)
United States v. Copple, 24 F.3d 535 (3d Cir. 1994)
Sinnovich v. Port Auth. of Allegheny County, 25 F.3d 163 (3d Cir. 1994)
Kline v. First W. Gov't Sec., Inc., 24 F.3d 480 (3d Cir. 1994)
Pansy v. Borough of Stroudsburg, 23 F.3d 772 (3d Cir. 1994)

United States v. Gaev, 24 F.3d 473 (3d Cir. 1994)
Fagan v. City of Vineland, 22 F.3d 1296 (3d Cir. 1994)
United States v. Obialo, 23 F.3d 69 (3d Cir. 1994)
Fisher Bros. Sales, Inc. v. United States, 17 F.3d 657 (3d Cir. 1994)
Billing v. Ravin, Greenberg & Zackin, P.A., 22 F.3d 1242 (3d Cir. 1994)
SPM Corp. v. M/V Ming Moon, 22 F.3d 523 (3d Cir. 1994)
Yonadi v. C.I.R., 21 F.3d 1292 (3d Cir. 1994)
Bolden v. Se. Pa. Transp. Auth., 21 F.3d 29 (3d Cir. 1994)
Grupo Protexa, S.A. v. All Am. Marine Slip, 20 F.3d 1224 (3d Cir. 1994)
David B. Lilly Co., Inc. v. Fisher, 18 F.3d 1112 (3d Cir. 1994)
United States v. Am. Ins. Co., 18 F.3d 1104 (3d Cir. 1994)
Wagner v. Dep't of Agric., 28 F.3d 279 (3d Cir. 1994)
In re Molded Acoustical Prods., Inc., 18 F.3d 217 (3d Cir. 1994)
Kontakis v. Beyer, 19 F.3d 110 (3d Cir. 1994)
Grimes v. Vitalink Commc'ns Corp., 17 F.3d 1553 (3d Cir. 1994)
United States v. Porat, 17 F.3d 660 (3d Cir. 1994)
In re Bridge, 18 F.3d 195 (3d Cir. 1994)
In re Swedeland Dev. Group, Inc., 16 F.3d 552 (3d Cir. 1994)
Doherty v. Teamsters Pension Trust Fund, 16 F.3d 1386 (3d Cir. 1994)
FMC Corp. v. U.S. Dept. of Commerce, 10 F.3d 1003 (3d Cir. 1994)
In re DeSeno, 17 F.3d 642 (3d Cir. 1994)
Consumers Produce Co., Inc. v. Volante Wholesale Produce, Inc., 16 F.3d 1374 (3d Cir. 1994)
United States v. Cochran, 17 F.3d 56 (3d Cir. 1994)
McFarland v. Miller, 14 F.3d 912 (3d Cir. 1994)
Peters v. Del. River Port Auth., 16 F.3d 1346 (3d Cir. 1994)
United States v. Price, 13 F.3d 711 (3d Cir. 1994)
Schmid v. Milwaukee Elec. Tool Corp., 13 F.3d 76 (3d Cir. 1994)
In re Coastal Group Inc., 13 F.3d 81 (3d Cir. 1994)
Pope v. E. Brunswick Bd. of Educ., 12 F.3d 1244 (3d Cir. 1993)
Parkway Garage, Inc. v. City of Philadelphia, 5 F.3d 685 (3d Cir. 1993)
Doe v. Am. Red Cross, 14 F.3d 196 (3d Cir. 1993)
Rosetti v. Shalala, 12 F.3d 1216 (3d Cir. 1993)
Livingstone v. N. Belle Vernon Borough, 12 F.3d 1205 (3d Cir. 1993)
Jewelcor Inc. v. Asia Commercial Co., Ltd., 11 F.3d 394 (3d Cir. 1993)
Guarino v. Larsen, 11 F.3d 1151 (3d Cir. 1993)
In re Dykes, 10 F.3d 184 (3d Cir. 1993)
Serbin v. Ziebart Int'l Corp., 11 F.3d 1163 (3d Cir. 1993)
Clark v. Modern Group Ltd., 9 F.3d 321 (3d Cir. 1993)
Resolution Trust Corp. v. Daddona, 9 F.3d 312 (3d Cir. 1993)
In re Swedeland Dev. Group, Inc., 9 F.3d 11 (3d Cir. 1993)
United States v. Essig, 10 F.3d 968 (3d Cir. 1993)
PAS v. Travelers Ins. Co., 7 F.3d 349 (3d Cir. 1993)
In re Donald J. Trump Casino Sec. Litig., 7 F.3d 357 (3d Cir. 1993)
Reich v. Local 30, Int'l Broth. of Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Warehousemen, & Helpers of Am., 6
F.3d 978 (3d Cir. 1993)
Dyszal v. Marks, 6 F.3d 116 (3d Cir. 1993)

1st Westco Corp. v. Sch. Dist. of Philadelphia, 6 F.3d 108 (3d Cir. 1993)
Lansford-Coaldale Joint Water Auth. v. Tonolli Corp., 4 F.3d 1209 (3d Cir. 1993)
Fagan v. City of Vineland, 5 F.3d 647 (3d Cir. 1993)
United States v. Harvey, 2 F.3d 1318 (3d Cir. 1993)
Powers v. Southland Corp., 4 F.3d 223 (3d Cir. 1993)
United States v. Williams, 3 F.3d 69 (3d Cir. 1993)
United States v. 717 S. Woodward St., 2 F.3d 529 (3d Cir. 1993)
Donatelli v. Mitchell, 2 F.3d 508 (3d Cir. 1993)
Evans v. United Arab Shipping Co. S.A.G., 4 F.3d 207 (3d Cir. 1993)
United States v. Rohm & Haas Co., 2 F.3d 1265 (3d Cir. 1993)
Edmundson v. Borough of Kennett Square, 4 F.3d 186 (3d Cir. 1993)
Olde Disc. Corp. v. Tupman, 1 F.3d 202 (3d Cir. 1993)
United States v. Frost, 999 F.2d 737 (3d Cir. 1993)
Williams v. Sch. Dist. of Bethlehem, 998 F.2d 168 (3d Cir. 1993)
In re Lower Lake Erie Iron Ore Antitrust Litig., 998 F.2d 1144 (3d Cir. 1993)
Fischer v. Philadelphia Elec. Co., 994 F.2d 130 (3d Cir. 1993)
Kurz v. Philadelphia Elec. Co., 994 F.2d 136 (3d Cir. 1993)
Westinghouse Elec. Corp. v. Franklin, 993 F.2d 349 (3d Cir. 1993)
Exxon Shipping Co. v. Exxon Seamen's Union, 993 F.2d 357 (3d Cir. 1993)
Packard v. Provident Nat'l Bank, 994 F.2d 1039 (3d Cir. 1993)
EF Operating Corp. v. Am. Bldgs., 993 F.2d 1046 (3d Cir. 1993)
Searles v. Se. Pa. Transp. Auth., 990 F.2d 789 (3d Cir. 1993)
Coar v. Kazimir, 990 F.2d 1413 (3d Cir. 1993)
Prudential Ins. Co. of Am. v. U.S. Gypsum Co., 991 F.2d 1080 (3d Cir. 1993)
Hakeem v. Beyer, 990 F.2d 750 (3d Cir. 1993)
Grand Entm't Group, Ltd. v. Star Media Sales, Inc., 988 F.2d 476 (3d Cir. 1993)
Griffiths v. CIGNA Corp., 988 F.2d 457 (3d Cir. 1993)
Kilbarr Corp. v. Bus. Sys. Inc., B.V., 990 F.2d 83 (3d Cir. 1993)
Jones v. Ryan, 987 F.2d 960 (3d Cir. 1993)
Coca-Cola Bottling Co. of Elizabethtown, Inc. v. Coca-Cola Co., 988 F.2d 386 (3d Cir. 1993)
Coca-Cola Bottling Co. of Shreveport, Inc. v. Coca-Cola Co., 988 F.2d 414 (3d Cir. 1993)
United States v. Love, 985 F.2d 732 (3d Cir. 1993)
Gottshall v. Consol. Rail Corp., 988 F.2d 355 (3d Cir. 1993)
Geisinger Health Plan v. C.I.R., 985 F.2d 1210 (3d Cir. 1993)
Castrol Inc. v. Pennzoil Co., 987 F.2d 939 (3d Cir. 1993)
Painwebber Inc. v. Hofmann, 984 F.2d 1372 (3d Cir. 1993)
Black v. Ind. Area Sch. Dist., 985 F.2d 707 (3d Cir. 1993)
Taylor Inv., Ltd. v. Upper Darby Twp., 983 F.2d 1285 (3d Cir. 1993)
Sinnovich v. Port Auth., 983 F.2d 1266 (3d Cir. 1993), vacated by 25 F.3d 163 (1994)
United States v. Dixon, 982 F.2d 116 (3d Cir. 1992)
Ezold v. Wolf, Block, Schorr & Solis-Cohen, 983 F.2d 509 (3d Cir. 1992)
United States v. Lattany, 982 F.2d 866 (3d Cir. 1992)
United States v. Tabaka, 982 F.2d 100 (3d Cir. 1992)
Crown Cork & Seal Co., Inc. v. Cent. States Se. & Sw. Areas Pension Fund, 982 F.2d 857 (3d Cir. 1992)
United States v. Holloman, 981 F.2d 690 (3d Cir. 1992)

Fleck v. KDI Sylvan Pools, Inc., 981 F.2d 107 (3d Cir. 1992)
United States v. Frazier, 981 F.2d 92 (3d Cir. 1992)
Clark v. K-Mart Corp., 979 F.2d 965 (3d Cir. 1992)
Quinn v. Stone, 978 F.2d 126 (3d Cir. 1992)
Planned Parenthood v. Casey, 978 F.2d 74 (3d Cir. 1992)
Int'l Raw Materials, Ltd. v. Stauffer Chem. Co., 978 F.2d 1318 (3d Cir. 1992)
Fineman v. Armstrong World Indus. 980 F.2d 171 (3d Cir. 1992)
Perez v. I.N.S., 979 F.2d 299 (3d Cir. 1992)
United States v. Cruz-Jiminez, 977 F.2d 95 (3d Cir. 1992)
In re Lansdale Family Rests., Inc., 977 F.2d 826 (3d Cir. 1992)
Gillette Foods Inc. v. Bayernwald-Fruchteverwertung, GmbH, 977 F.2d 809 (3d Cir. 1992)
Campbell Soup Co. v. ConAgra, Inc., 977 F.2d 86 (3d Cir. 1992)
United States v. Stewart, 977 F.2d 81 (3d Cir. 1992)
In re Sch. Asbestos Litig., 977 F.2d 764 (3d Cir. 1992)
Armstrong World Indus. v. C.I.R., 974 F.2d 422 (3d Cir. 1992)
Haines v. Liggett Group Inc., 975 F.2d 81 (3d Cir. 1992)
Waltz v. County of Lycoming, 974 F.2d 387 (3d Cir. 1992)
ALM Corp. v. EPA, 974 F.2d 380 (3d Cir. 1992)
Raymark Indus. v. Lai, 973 F.2d 1125 (3d Cir. 1992)
Kozyra v. Allen, 973 F.2d 1110 (3d Cir. 1992)
Chauffeurs, Teamsters & Helpers Local 776 v. N.L.R.B., 973 F.2d 230 (3d Cir. 1992)
Oracare DPO, Inc. v. Merin, 972 F.2d 519 (3d Cir. 1992)
Stinson v. Kaiser Gypsum Co., Inc., 972 F.2d 59 (3d Cir. 1992)
D.R. v. Middle Bucks Area Vocational Technical Sch., 972 F.2d 1364 (3d Cir. 1992)
Katz v. Aetna Cas. & Sur. Co., 972 F.2d 53 (3d Cir. 1992)
Kelly v. Crown Equip. Co., 970 F.2d 1273 (3d Cir. 1992)
Angst v. Mack Trucks, Inc., 969 F.2d 1530 (3d Cir. 1992)
Conoco, Inc. v. Skinner, 970 F.2d 1206 (3d Cir. 1992)
Williams v. Sullivan, 970 F.2d 1178 (3d Cir. 1992)
1975 Salaried Ret. Plan v. Nobers, 968 F.2d 401 (3d Cir. 1992)
J. Meade Williamson & F.D.I.B., Inc. v. Piper Aircraft Corp., 968 F.2d 380 (3d Cir. 1992)
Sapos v. Provident Inst. of Sav. in Town of Boston, 967 F.2d 918 (3d Cir. 1992)
S & R Corp. v. Jiffy Lube Int'l, Inc., 968 F.2d 371 (3d Cir. 1992)
United States v. Hill, 967 F.2d 902 (3d Cir. 1992)
Geschwendt v. Ryan, 967 F.2d 877 (3d Cir. 1992)
Dranoff-Perlstein Assocs. v. Sklar, 967 F.2d 852 (3d Cir. 1992)
Clark v. K-Mart Corp., 967 F.2d 841 (3d Cir. 1992)
Langer v. Monarch Life Ins. Co., 966 F.2d 786 (3d Cir. 1992)
Mindek v. Rigatti, 964 F.2d 1369 (3d Cir. 1992)
Mazur v. Merck & Co., Inc., 964 F.2d 1348 (3d Cir. 1992)
Shapiro v. UJB Fin. Corp., 964 F.2d 272 (3d Cir. 1992)
Ramseur v. Beyer, 964 F.2d 271 (3d Cir. 1992)
United States v. Alcan Aluminum Corp., 964 F.2d 252 (3d Cir. 1992)
Borse v. Piece Goods Shop, Inc., 963 F.2d 611 (3d Cir. 1992)
United States v. Phillips, 959 F.2d 1187 (3d Cir. 1992)
In re Williams, 963 F.2d 567 (3d Cir. 1992)

Yaron v. Twp. of Northampton, 963 F.2d 33 (3d Cir. 1992)
St. Francis Med. Ctr. v. Sullivan, 962 F.2d 1110 (3d Cir. 1992)
Armstrong World Indus. v. Adams, 961 F.2d 405 (3d Cir. 1992)
United States v. Brentley, 961 F.2d 425 (3d Cir. 1992)
In re Grand Jury Subpoena, 963 F.2d 566 (3d Cir. 1992)
Sheet Metal Workers' Local 28 v. Gallagher, 960 F.2d 1195 (3d Cir. 1992)
Borman v. Raymark Indus., 960 F.2d 327 (3d Cir. 1992)
Town Sound & Custom Tops, Inc. v. Chrysler Motors Corp., 959 F.2d 468 (3d Cir. 1992)
Rock v. Zimmerman, 959 F.2d 1237 (3d Cir. 1992)
Kreimer v. Bureau of Police for Town of Morristown, 958 F.2d 1242 (3d Cir. 1992)
Jones v. Century Oil U.S.A., Inc., 957 F.2d 84 (3d Cir. 1992)
Elliot Coal Mining Co. v. Dir., OWCP, 956 F.2d 448 (3d Cir. 1992)
Ditri v. Coldwell Banker Residential Affiliates, Inc., 954 F.2d 869 (3d Cir. 1992)
United States v. RD 1, Box 1, 952 F.2d 53 (3d Cir. 1991)
Felton v. Se. Pa. Transp. Auth., 952 F.2d 59 (3d Cir. 1991)
Limbach Co. v. Sheet Metal Workers Int'l Ass'n, 949 F.2d 1241 (3d Cir. 1991)
Nazay v. Miller, 949 F.2d 1323 (3d Cir. 1991)
United States v. Kopp, 951 F.2d 521 (3d Cir. 1991)
United States v. Paoello, 951 F.2d 537 (3d Cir. 1991)
Mar. Elec. Co., Inc. v. United Jersey Bank, 959 F.2d 1194 (3d Cir. 1991)
Velis v. Kardanis, 949 F.2d 78 (3d Cir. 1991)
Borman v. Raymark Indus., 946 F.2d 1031 (3d Cir. 1991)
Kramer v. Thompson, 947 F.2d 666 (3d Cir. 1991)
United States v. Hayes, 946 F.2d 230 (3d Cir. 1991)
Monongahela Valley Hosp., Inc. v. Sullivan, 945 F.2d 576 (3d Cir. 1991)
Limbach Co. v. Sheet Metal Workers Int'l Ass'n, 949 F.2d 1240 (3d Cir. 1991)
United States v. Rieger, 942 F.2d 230 (3d Cir. 1991)
Habecker v. Clark Equip. Co., 942 F.2d 210 (3d Cir. 1991)
United States v. Werme, 939 F.2d 108 (3d Cir. 1991)
Temple Univ. v. White, 941 F.2d 201 (3d Cir. 1991)
Turbe v. Virgin Islands, 938 F.2d 427 (3d Cir. 1991)
Taylor v. Freeland & Kronz, 938 F.2d 420 (3d Cir. 1991)
Virgin Islands v. Harris, 938 F.2d 401 (3d Cir. 1991)
Osei-Afriyie v. Med. Coll. of Pa., 937 F.2d 876 (3d Cir. 1991)
United States v. Perakis, 937 F.2d 110 (3d Cir. 1991)
Colgan v. Fisher Scientific Co., 935 F.2d 1407 (3d Cir. 1991)
United States v. John, 936 F.2d 764 (3d Cir. 1991)
Lony v. E.I. Du Pont de Nemours & Co., 935 F.2d 604 (3d Cir. 1991)
United States v. Georgiadis, 933 F.2d 1219 (3d Cir. 1991)
Inst. for Scientific Info., Inc. v. Gordon & Breach, Sci. Publishers, Inc., 931 F.2d 1002 (3d Cir. 1991)
GK MGT Inc. v. Local 274, Hotel Employees & Rest. Employees Union, 930 F.2d 301 (3d Cir. 1991)
Ford Motor Co. v. Summit Motor Prods., Inc., 930 F.2d 277 (3d Cir. 1991)
United States v. Soberon, 929 F.2d 935 (3d Cir. 1991)
Matute v. Procoast Navigation Ltd., 928 F.2d 627 (3d Cir. 1991)

CNA Ins. Cos. v. Waters, 926 F.2d 247 (3d Cir. 1991)
Bane v. Netlink, Inc., 925 F.2d 637 (3d Cir. 1991)
Helen Mining Co. v. Dir., OWCP, 924 F.2d 1269 (3d Cir. 1991)
United States v. Pa. Dept. of Envtl. Res., 923 F.2d 1071 (3d Cir. 1991)
Univ. of Md. at Baltimore v. Peat Marwick Main & Co., 923 F.2d 265 (3d Cir. 1991)
Ticor Title Ins. Co. v. F.T.C., 922 F.2d 1122 (3d Cir. 1991)
In re Joshua Slocum Ltd., 922 F.2d 1081 (3d Cir. 1990)
Ingersoll-Rand Fin. Corp. v. Anderson, 921 F.2d 497 (3d Cir. 1990)
Dole v. Arco Chem. Co., 921 F.2d 484 (3d Cir. 1990)
United States v. Wright, 921 F.2d 42 (3d Cir. 1990)
News Am. Publ'ns, Inc. v. Newark Typographical Union Local 103, 921 F.2d 40 (3d Cir. 1990)
Opticians Ass'n of Am. v. Indep. Opticians of Am., 920 F.2d 187 (3d Cir. 1990)
United States v. Jacobs, 919 F.2d 10 (3d Cir. 1990)
Smith v. Walter C. Best, Inc., 927 F.2d 736 (3d Cir. 1990)
United States v. Columbus Country Club, 915 F.2d 877 (3d Cir. 1990)
Boyer v. Snap-on Tools Corp., 913 F.2d 108 (3d Cir. 1990)
Schoch v. First Fid. Bancorporation, 912 F.2d 654 (3d Cir. 1990)
In re Hanratty, 907 F.2d 1418 (3d Cir. 1990)

c. a list of cases in which appeal or certiorari has been requested or granted;

Bronshtein v. Horn, 404 F.3d 700 (3d Cir. 2005) (petition for certiorari pending)
Banks v. Beard, 399 F.3d 134, 148-50 (3d Cir. 2005) (dissenting), cert. granted, 2005 U.S.
LEXIS 8383 (Nov 14, 2005)

Metromedia Energy, Inc. v. Enserch Energy Servs., 409 F.3d 574 (3d Cir. 2005) (petition for certiorari pending)

Span v. Flaherty, 135 Fed. Appx. 525 (3d Cir. 2005) (petition for certiorari pending)

Dubois v. Abode, 142 Fed. Appx. 62 (3d Cir. 2005), cert. denied, 2005 U.S. LEXIS 7962 (Oct. 31, 2005)

Hess v. Kunkle, 142 Fed. Appx. 578 (3d Cir. (2005), cert. denied, 2005 U.S. LEXIS 7944 (Oct. 31, 2005)

United States v. Bronson, 141 Fed. Appx. 78 (3d Cir. 2005), cert. denied, 2005 U.S. LEXIS 7614 (Oct. 11, 2005)

Jones v. United States, 131 Fed. Appx. 819 (3d Cir. 2005), cert. denied, 2005 U.S. LEXIS 6816 (Oct. 3, 2005)

Jetter v. Beard, 130 Fed. Appx. 523 (3d Cir. 2005), cert. denied, 2005 U.S. LEXIS 7992 (Oct. 31, 2005)

Bastista v. Dep't of Justice, 129 Fed. Appx. 724 (3d Cir. 2005), cert. denied, 2005 U.S. LEXIS 8172 (Oct. 31, 2005)

United States v. Stewart, 131 Fed. Appx. 350 (3d Cir. 2005), cert. denied, 2005 U.S. LEXIS 6668 (Oct. 3, 2005)

United States v. Thomas, 127 Fed. Appx. 582 (3d Cir. 2005), cert. denied, 125 S.Ct. 219 (2005)

Jones v. Leavitt, 125 Fed. Appx. 457 (3d Cir. 2005) (table), cert. denied, 126 S.Ct. 204 (2005)

Lawrence v. O'Neil Buick, Inc., 125 Fed. Appx. 457 (3d Cir. 2005) (table), cert. denied, 126 S.Ct. 84 (2005)

Brinson v. Vaughn, 398 F.3d 225 (3d Cir. 2005), cert. denied, 2005 U.S. LEXIS 7631 (Oct. 11, 2005)

Merit v. Se. Pa. Transp. Auth., 122 Fed. Appx. 598 (3d Cir. 2005) (table), cert. denied, 126 S.Ct. 95 (2005)

United States v. Neidig, 122 Fed. Appx. 599 (3d Cir. 2005) (table), cert. denied, 126 S.Ct. 172 (2005)

Johnson v. Pinchak, 392 F.3d 551 (3d Cir. 2004), cert. denied, 2005 U.S. LEXIS 6862 (Oct. 3, 2005)

Yang v. Odom, 392 F.3d 97, 112-14 (3d Cir. 2004) (dissenting in part), cert. denied, 125 S.Ct. 2294 (2005)

Southco, Inc. v. Kanebridge, Corp., 390 F.3d 276 (3d Cir. 2004) (en banc), cert. denied, 126 S.Ct. 336 (2005)

Pascack Valley Hosp., Inc. v. Local 464A UFCW Welfare Reimbursement Plan, 388 F.3d 393, 404-05 (3d Cir. 2004) (concurring in the judgment), cert. denied, 126 S.Ct. 336 (2005)

Lambert v. Blackwell, 387 F.3d 210 (3d Cir. 2004), cert. denied, 125 S.Ct. 2516 (2005)

Camara v. Ashcroft, 110 Fed. Appx. 262 (3d Cir. 2004), cert. denied, 125 S.Ct. 1861 (2005)

United States v. Cunningham, 110 Fed. Appx. 238 (3d Cir. 2004), cert. denied, 125 S.Ct. 1101 (2005)

United States v. Clark, 110 Fed. Appx. 245 (3d Cir. 2004), cert. denied, 125 S.Ct. 1100 (2005)

United States v. Johnson, 108 Fed. Appx. 741 (3d Cir. 2004), cert. denied, 125 S.Ct. 1101 (2005)

D.T.B. v. Farmer, 114 Fed. Appx. 446 (3d Cir. 2004), cert. denied, 125 S.Ct. 2934 (2005)

Singh v. Ashcroft, 112 Fed. Appx. 868 (3d Cir. 2004) (table), cert. denied, 125 S.Ct. 2252 (2005)

Fielder v. Varner, 379 F.3d 113 (3d Cir. 2004), cert. denied, 125 S.Ct. 904 (2005)

- United States v. Rennert, 374 F.3d 206 (3d Cir. 2004), vacated and remanded 125 S.Ct. 1744 (2005) (vacating and remanding for further consideration in light of United States v. Booker, 125 S.Ct. 738 (2005))
- White v. Comms. Workers of Am., Local 13000, 370 F.3d 346 (3d Cir. 2004), motion denied 125 S.Ct. 642 (2004)
- Poole v. Family Court, 368 F.3d 263 (3d Cir. 2004), cert. denied, 125 S.Ct. 861 (2005)
- United States v. Jacobs, 96 Fed. Appx. 812 (3d Cir. 2004), vacated and remanded 125 S.Ct. 1009 (2005) (vacating and remanding for further consideration in light of United States v. Booker, 125 S.Ct. 738 (2005))
- United States v. Phyllian, 95 Fed. Appx. 430 (3d Cir. 2004), vacated and remanded 125 S.Ct. 1025 (2005) (vacating and remanding for further consideration in light of United States v. Booker, 125 S.Ct. 738 (2005))
- United States v. Wiggins, 94 Fed. Appx. 959 (3d Cir. 2004), vacated and remanded 125 S.Ct. 985 (2005) (vacating and remanding for further consideration in light of United States v. Booker, 125 S.Ct. 738 (2005))
- United States v. Morris, No. 04-3050 (3d Cir. Nov. 16, 2004) (unreported order), vacated and remanded 125 S.Ct. 1959 (2005) (vacating and remanding for further consideration in light of United States v. Booker, 125 S.Ct. 738 (2005)), and dismissed on remand 143 Fed. Appx. 505 (2005)
- United States v. Worrells, 94 Fed. Appx. 927 (3d Cir. 2004), cert. denied, 2005 U.S. LEXIS 6747 (Oct. 3, 2005)
- United States v. Pagley, 94 Fed. Appx. 104 (3d Cir. 2004), vacated and remanded 125 S.Ct. 1030 (2005) (vacating and remanding for further consideration in light of United States v. Booker, 125 S.Ct. 738 (2005))
- Corneal v. Jackson Twp., 94 Fed. Appx. 76 (3d Cir. 2004), cert. denied, 125 S.Ct. 91 (2004)
- United States v. Mora-Zapata, 94 Fed. Appx. 63 (3d Cir. 2004), cert. denied, 125 S.Ct. 245 (2004)
- United States v. Jacobs, 94 Fed. Appx. 893 (3d Cir. 2004), vacated and remanded 125 S.Ct. 1021 (2005) (vacating and remanding for further consideration in light of United States v. Booker, 125 S.Ct. 738 (2005))
- United States v. Jacobs, 93 Fed. Appx. 488 (3d Cir. 2004), vacated and remanded 125 S.Ct. 1007 (2005) (vacating and remanding for further consideration in light of United States v. Booker, 125 S.Ct. 738 (2005))
- United States v. Watson, 93 Fed. Appx. 481 (3d Cir. 2004), vacated and remanded 125 S.Ct. 1001 (2005) (vacating and remanding for further consideration in light of United States v. Booker, 125 S.Ct. 738 (2005))
- United States v. Wright, 363 F.3d 237 (3d Cir. 2004), motion denied 125 S.Ct. 243 (2004)
- Doe v. Groody, 361 F.3d 232, 244-49 (3d Cir. 2004) (dissenting), cert. denied, 125 S.Ct. 111 (2004)
- Headley v. INS, 92 Fed. Appx. 35 (3d Cir. 2004), cert. denied, 125 S.Ct. 178 (2004)
- Lum v. Bank of Am., 361 F.3d 217 (3d Cir. 2004), cert. denied, 125 S.Ct. 271 (2004)
- Landau v. Vastine-Smith, 94 Fed. Appx. 969 (3d Cir. 2004), cert. denied, 125 S.Ct. 163 (2004)
- United States v. Lee, 359 F.3d 194 (3d Cir. 2004), cert. denied, 125 S.Ct. 408 (2004)
- Singletary v. Blaine, 89 Fed. Appx. 790 (3d Cir. 2004), cert. denied, 125 S.Ct. 451 (2004)
- Martinez v. Sudduth, 2004 U.S. App. LEXIS 4419 (3d Cir. 2004), cert. denied, 125 S.Ct. 115 (2004)

- Superior Proside, Inc. v. Comm'r, 86 Fed. Appx. 510 (3d Cir. 2004), cert. denied, 125 S.Ct. 60 (2004)
- Rompilla v. Horn, 355 F.3d 233 (3d Cir. 2004), cert. granted 542 U.S. 966, and rev'd 125 S.Ct. 2456 (2005)
- Kunco v. Attorney Gen., 85 Fed. Appx. 819 (3d Cir. 2003), cert. denied, 541 U.S. 979 (2004)
- Gale v. Vaughn, 83 Fed. Appx. 472 (3d Cir. 2003), cert. denied, 124 S.Ct. 2850 (2004)
- United States v. Wright, 83 Fed. Appx. 432 (3d Cir. 2003), cert. denied, 125 S.Ct. 220 (2004)
- United States v. Schofield, 80 Fed. Appx. 798 (3d Cir. 2003), cert. denied, 541 U.S. 1003 (2004)
- United States v. Knight, 2003 U.S. App. LEXIS 27929 (3d Cir. 2003), cert. denied, 125 S.Ct. 200 (2004)
- United States v. Gates, 85 Fed. Appx. 875 (3d Cir. 2003), cert. denied, 541 U.S. 965 (2004)
- Rearдон v. Hendricks, 82 Fed. Appx. 272 (3d Cir. 2003), cert. denied, 540 U.S. 1198 (2004)
- United States v. Phillips, 349 F.3d 138 (3d Cir. 2003), vacated and remanded 125 S.Ct. 992 (2005) (vacating and remanding for further consideration in light of United States v. Booker, 125 S.Ct. 738 (2005))
- United States v. Carter, 80 Fed. Appx. 253 (3d Cir. 2003), cert. denied, 125 S.Ct. 99 (2004)
- Lewis v. Pinchak, 348 F.3d 355 (3d Cir. 2003), cert. denied, 540 U.S. 1200 (2004)
- Elder v. Dodrill, 85 Fed. Appx. 870 (3d Cir. 2003), cert. denied, 541 U.S. 1052 (2004)
- United States v. Hawkins, 78 Fed. Appx. 193 (3d Cir. 2003), cert. denied, 541 U.S. 1018 (2004)
- Cole v. Benefit Coordinators Corp., 2003 U.S. App. LEXIS 23043 (3d Cir. 2003), cert. denied, 540 U.S. 1193 (2004)
- United States v. White, 75 Fed. Appx. 894 (3d Cir. 2003), cert. denied, 540 U.S. 1199 (2004)
- United States v. Warren, 76 Fed. Appx. 432 (3d Cir. 2003), cert. denied, 540 U.S. 1228 (2004)
- Eisen v. Bush, 85 Fed. Appx. 870 (3d Cir. 2003), cert. denied, 540 U.S. 1162 (2004)
- Perry v. Byrd, 85 Fed. Appx. 873 (3d Cir. 2003), cert. denied, 541 U.S. 991 (2004)
- Robertson v. Casual Corner, 85 Fed. Appx. 873 (3d Cir. 2003), cert. denied, 541 U.S. 905 (2004)
- United States v. Roberts, 77 Fed. Appx. 561 (3d Cir. 2003), cert. denied, 540 U.S. 1129 (2004)
- Krystal Cadillac-Oldsmobile GMC Truck, Inc. v. GMC, 337 F.3d 314 (3d Cir. 2003), cert. denied, 541 U.S. 1043 (2004)
- Gueson v. Sheppard, 85 Fed. Appx. 870 (3d Cir. 2003), cert. denied, 541 U.S. 1010 (2004)
- Coombs v. Dragovich, 80 Fed. Appx. 285 (3d Cir. 2003), cert. denied, 541 U.S. 907 (2004)
- Virgin Islands v. Rivera, 333 F.3d 143 (3d Cir. 2003), cert. denied, 540 U.S. 1161 (2004)
- United States v. Jenkins, 333 F.3d 151 (3d Cir. 2003), cert. denied, 540 U.S. 932 (2003)
- United States v. Carstarphen, 65 Fed. Appx. 424 (3d Cir. 2003), cert. denied, 540 U.S. 962 (2003)
- Official Comm. of Unsecured Creditors of Cybergeneics Corp. ex rel. Cybergeneics Corp. v. Chinery, 330 F.3d 548, 580-87 (3d Cir. 2003) (en banc) (joining in the dissent of Fuentes, J.), petition for cert. dismissed 540 U.S. 1001 (2003)
- Delvoye v. Lee, 329 F.3d 330 (3d Cir. 2003), cert. denied, 540 U.S. 967 (2003)
- Cazeau v. Romine, 80 Fed. Appx. 284 (3d Cir. 2003), cert. denied, 540 U.S. 998 (2003)
- Allah v. Blaine, 65 Fed. Appx. 873 (3d Cir. 2003), cert. denied, 540 U.S. 987 (2003)
- Okonkwo v. INS, 69 Fed. Appx. 57 (3d Cir. 2003), cert. denied, 540 U.S. 917 (2003)
- Smith v. Horn, 65 Fed. Appx. 874 (3d Cir. 2003), cert. denied, 540 U.S. 958 (2003)
- United States v. Pollard, 326 F.3d 397 (3d Cir. 2003), cert. denied, 540 U.S. 932 (2003)

Dionisio v. U.S. Tr.'s Office (In re Dionisio), 2003 U.S. App. LEXIS 12432 (3d Cir. 2003), cert. denied, 540 U.S. 1049 (2003)

Plaskett v. Esso Standard Oil S.A. (In re Tutu Water Wells CERCLA Litig.), 326 F.3d 201 (3d Cir. 2003), cert. denied, 540 U.S. 984 (2003)

United States v. Cordo, 324 F.3d 223 (3d Cir. 2003), cert. denied, 540 U.S. 1018 (2003)

Rashid v. United States Parole Comm'n, 65 Fed. Appx. 874 (3d Cir. 2003), cert. denied, 540 U.S. 996 (2003)

United States v. Stackpole, 64 Fed. Appx. 842 (3d Cir. 2003), cert. denied, 540 U.S. 887 (2003)

United States v. Miller, 2003 U.S. App. LEXIS 12440 (3d Cir. 2003), cert. denied, 540 U.S. 893 (2003)

LePage's Inc. v. 3M, 324 F.3d 141, 169-82 (3d Cir. 2003) (en banc) (joining in the dissent of Greenberg, J.), cert. denied, 542 U.S. 953 (2004)

Citicorp. Venture Capital, Ltd. v. Comm. of Creditors Holding Unsecured Claims (In re Papercraft Corp.), 323 F.3d 228 (3d Cir. 2003), cert. denied, 540 U.S. 825 (2003)

Bluebeard's Castle, Inc. v. Virgin Islands, 321 F.3d 394 (3d Cir. 2003), cert. denied, (540 U.S. 823 (2003)

United States v. Berry, 61 Fed. Appx. 797 (3d Cir. 2003), cert. denied, 540 U.S. 1063 (2003)

United States v. Thomas, 319 F.3d 640 (3d Cir. 2003), cert. denied, 540 U.S. 829 (2003)

Fotta v. Trs. of the UMW Health & Ret. Fund of 1974, 319 F.3d 612 (3d Cir. 2003), cert. denied, 540 U.S. 982 (2003)

Brosnahan Builders, Inc. v. Harleysville Mut. Ins. Co., 2003 U.S. App. LEXIS 1204 (3d Cir. 2003), cert. denied, 540 U.S. 820 (2003)

United States v. Grubb, 58 Fed. Appx. 889 (3d Cir. 2003), cert. denied, 538 U.S. 1023 (2003)

United States v. Dufresne, 58 Fed. Appx. 890 (3d Cir. 2003), cert. denied, 538 U.S. 1064 (2003)

United States v. Parker, 58 Fed. Appx. 886 (3d Cir. 2003), cert. denied, 126 S.Ct. 309 (2005)

United States v. Adames, 59 Fed. Appx. 442 (3d Cir. 2003), cert. denied, 540 U.S. 946 (2003)

United States v. Stewart, 57 Fed. Appx. 936 (3d Cir. 2003), cert. denied, 538 U.S. 1036 (2003)

Kelley v. Coleman, 55 Fed. Appx. 104 (3d Cir. 2003), cert. denied, 538 U.S. 1047 (2003)

Williams v. Mendez, 55 Fed. Appx. 106 (3d Cir. 2003), cert. denied, 540 U.S. 1065 (2003)

Spindle v. Sec'y of the Army, 55 Fed. Appx. 105 (3d Cir. 2003), cert. denied, 540 U.S. 905 (2003)

United States v. Bright, 54 Fed. Appx. 765 (3d Cir. 2002), cert. denied, 538 U.S. 952 (2003)

Chadwick v. Janecka, 312 F.3d 597 (3d Cir. 2002), cert. denied, 538 U.S. 1000 (2003)

United States v. Hitchens, 62 Fed. Appx. 417 (3d Cir. 2002), cert. denied, 538 U.S. 952 (2003)

Bazargani v. Haverford State Hosp., 52 Fed. Appx. 187 (3d Cir. 2002), cert. denied, 538 U.S. 978 (2003)

Jones v. Mendez, 52 Fed. Appx. 188 (3d Cir. 2002), cert. denied, 539 U.S. 962 (2003)

Coombs v. Myers, 52 Fed. Appx. 187 (3d Cir. 2002), cert. denied, 539 U.S. 917 (2003)

United States v. Fellows, 50 Fed. Appx. 82 (3d Cir. 2002), cert. denied, 538 U.S. 1049 (2003)

Istvanik v. Rogge, 50 Fed. Appx. 533 (3d Cir. 2002), cert. denied, 539 U.S. 916 (2003)

United States v. Jones, 48 Fed. Appx. 835 (3d Cir. 2002), cert. denied, 537 U.S. 1178 (2003)

In re Prudential Ins. Co. of Am. Sales Practice Litig., 47 Fed. Appx. 78 (3d Cir. 2002), cert. denied, 537 U.S. 1233 (2003)

Chinn v. Postmaster Gen., 48 Fed. Appx. 40 (3d Cir. 2002), cert. denied, 540 U.S. 926 (2003)

United States v. Peppers, 302 F.3d 120 (3d Cir. 2002), cert. denied, 537 U.S. 1062 (2002)

Williams v. Sturm, 43 Fed. Appx. 524 (3d Cir. 2002), cert. denied, 538 U.S. 931 (2003)

Monga v. Ottenberg, 43 Fed. Appx. 523 (3d Cir. 2002), cert. denied, 538 U.S. 998 (2003), recalled and vacated 95 Fed. Appx. 463 (3d Cir. 2004), cert. denied, 125 S.Ct. 1328 (2005)

United States v. Hall, 44 Fed. Appx. 532 (3d Cir. 2002), cert. denied, 537 U.S. 1177 (2003)

Brown v. Gerlinski, 43 Fed. Appx. 521 (3d Cir. 2002), cert. denied, 538 U.S. 937 (2003)

United States v. Gomez, 39 Fed. Appx. 794 (3d Cir. 2002), cert. denied, 537 U.S. 917 (2002)

Riseman v. Advanta Corp., 39 Fed. Appx. 761 (3d Cir. 2002), cert. denied, 537 U.S. 1190
(2003)

Thomas v. Comm’r of Soc. Sec., 294 F.3d 568 (3d Cir. 2002), cert. granted 537 U.S. 1187, and rev’d 540 U.S. 20 (2003)

Perna v. United States, 36 Fed. Appx. 61 (3d Cir. 2002), cert. denied, 537 U.S. 1232 (2003)

Davage v. United States, 35 Fed. Appx. 356 (3d Cir. 2002), cert. denied, 537 U.S. 1012 (2002)

United States v. Kithcart, 34 Fed. Appx. 872 (3d Cir. 2002), cert. denied, 537 U.S. 1061 (2002)

United States v. Bullard, 38 Fed. Appx. 753 (3d Cir. 2002), cert. denied, 537 U.S. 1039 (2002)

McDavis v. Pa. State Governor, 2002 U.S. App. LEXIS 11356 (3d Cir. 2002), cert. denied, 537
U.S. 977 (2002)

Crissman v. Dover Downs Entm’tainment, 289 F.3d 231 (3d Cir. 2002) (en banc), cert. denied,
537 U.S. 886 (2002)

United States v. Nelson, 284 F.3d 472 (3d Cir. 2002), cert. denied, 537 U.S. 940 (2002)

Pa. Pharmacists Ass’n v. Houstoun, 283 F.3d 531 (3d Cir. 2002), cert. denied, 537 U.S. 821
(2002)

Civiello v. Rosemeyer, 28 Fed. Appx. 127 (3d Cir. 2002), cert. denied, 535 U.S. 1104 (2002)

United States v. Jasin, 280 F.3d 355 (3d Cir. 2002), cert. denied, 537 U.S. 947 (2002)

Pender v. Union County, 281 F.3d 223 (3d Cir. 2002), cert. denied, 537 U.S. 952 (2002)

United States v. Allen, 29 Fed. Appx. 819 (3d Cir. 2002), cert. denied, 535 U.S. 1120 (2002)

Brosius v. Warden, 278 F.3d 239 (3d Cir. 2002), cert. denied, 537 U.S. 947 (2002)

Robinson v. Reish, 281 F.3d 223 (3d Cir. 2002) (table), cert. denied, 537 U.S. 849 (2002)

United States v. Szehinskyj, 277 F.3d 331 (3d Cir. 2002), cert. denied, 537 U.S. 880 (2002)

Pa. Power Co. v. Local Union No. 272, 276 F.3d 174 (3d Cir. 2001), cert. denied, 536 U.S. 959
(2002)

United States v. Ounigian, 281 F.3d 225 (3d Cir. 2001) (table), cert. denied, 535 U.S. 1007
(2002)

Ackeridge v. Morgan, 276 F.3d 575 (2001) (table), cert. denied, 535 U.S. 1034 (2002)

Costa v. McCullough, 276 F.3d 576 (3d Cir. 2001) (table), cert. denied, 536 U.S. 905 (2002)

United States v. Vasquez, 271 F.3d 93 (3d Cir. 2001) (en banc), cert. denied, 536 U.S. 963
(2002)

Blasi v. Attorney Gen. of Pa., 275 F.3d 33 (3d Cir. 2001) (table), cert. denied, 535 U.S. 987
(2002)

Fessler v. Karis, 275 F.3d 34 (3d Cir. 2001) (table), cert. denied, 537 U.S. 815 (2002)

Ramirez v. Gerlinski, 275 F.3d 37 (3d Cir. 2001) (table), cert. denied, 536 U.S. 909 (2002)

United States v. Fontanez, 275 F.3d 38 (3d Cir. 2001) (table), cert. denied, 534 U.S. 1031
(2001)

Wenger v. Frank, 266 F.3d 218 (3d Cir. 2001), cert. denied, 535 U.S. 957 (2002)

Hart v. United States, 275 F.3d 35 (3d Cir. 2001) (table), cert. denied, 534 U.S. 1163 (2002)

United States v. Omoruyi, 260 F.3d 291 (3d Cir. 2001), cert. denied, 534 U.S. 1100 (2002)

Khan v. Accurate Mold, Inc., 265 F.3d 1055 (3d Cir. 2001) (table), cert. denied, 534 U.S. 1133 (2002)

United States v. Duina, 265 F.3d 1057 (3d Cir. 2001) (table), cert. denied, 534 U.S. 1147 (2002)

Storti v. Se. Pa. Transp. Auth., 265 F.3d 1056 (3d Cir. 2001) (table), cert. denied, 534 U.S. 1132 (2002)

Triola v. Viera, 265 F.3d 1056 (3d Cir. 2001) (table), cert. denied, 535 U.S. 970 (2002)

Gaudelli v. Eisner, 265 F.3d 1055 (3d Cir. 2001) (table), cert. denied, 534 U.S. 1082 (2002)

Lochbaum v. United States Fid. & Gaur. Co., 265 F.3d 1055 (3d Cir. 2001), cert. denied, 534 U.S. 1066 (2001)

Caterina v. Unified Judicial Sys., 265 F.3d 1054 (3d Cir. 2001) (table), cert. denied, 535 U.S. 988 (2002)

United States v. Barrera-Anica, 265 F.3d 1057 (3d Cir. 2001) (table), cert. denied, 534 U.S. 1167 (2002)

Morales v. P.F. Labs., Inc., 265 F.3d 1056 (3d Cir. 2001) (table), cert. denied, 534 U.S. 1080 (2002)

United States v. Sanders, 265 F.3d 1057 (3d Cir. 2001) (table), cert. denied, 534 U.S. 1012 (2001)

In re Four Three Oh, Inc., 256 F.3d 107, 115-20 (3d Cir. 2001) (dissenting), cert. denied, 534 U.S. 1056 (2001)

United States v. Brown, 263 F.3d 160 (3d Cir. 2001) (table), cert. denied, 535 U.S. 1005 (2002)

Jimenez v. Horn, 263 F.3d 158 (3d Cir. 2001) (table), cert. denied, 537 U.S. 957 (2002)

Histed v. E.I. DuPont de Nemours & Co., 263 F.3d 158 (3d Cir. 2001) (table), cert. denied, 534 U.S. 1101 (2002)

Keller v. Larkins, 251 F.3d 408 (3d Cir. 2001), cert. denied, 534 U.S. 973 (2001)

Lee v. Romine, 259 F.3d 716 (3d Cir. 2001) (table), cert. denied, 534 U.S. 960 (2001)

DeSantis v. Verniero, 261 F.3d 491 (3d Cir. 2001) (table), cert. denied, 534 U.S. 1144 (2002)

United States v. Simmons, 259 F.3d 718 (3d Cir. 2001) (table), cert. denied, 534 U.S. 932 (2001)

In re Jury, 261 F.3d 491 (3d Cir. 2001) (table), cert. denied, 534 U.S. 1022 (2001)

United States v. Van Wyk, 262 F.3d 405 (3d Cir. 2001) (table), cert. denied, 534 U.S. 826 (2001)

United States v. Richards, 241 F.3d 335 (3d Cir. 2001), cert. denied, 533 U.S. 960 (2001)

White v. Riverfront State Prison, 250 F.3d 737 (3d Cir. 2001) (table), cert. denied, 533 U.S. 968 (2001)

United States v. Correa, 250 F.3d 736 (3d Cir. 2001) (table), cert. denied, 534 U.S. 941 (2001)

United States v. Lizardo, 250 F.3d 736 (3d Cir. 2001) (table), cert. denied, 534 U.S. 897 (2001)

Sumter v. Saybolt, Inc., 248 F.3d 1131 (3d Cir. 2000) (table), petition for cert. dismissed 533 U.S. 901 (2001)

Geidel v. Horn, 248 F.3d 1129 (3d Cir. 2000) (table), cert. denied, 532 U.S. 985 (2001)

Abdul-Akbar v. McKelvie, 239 F.3d 307 (3d Cir. 2001) (en banc), cert. denied, 533 U.S. 953 (2001)

United States v. Wongus, 254 F.3d 1079 (3d Cir. 2001) (table), cert. denied, 534 U.S. 852 (2001)

Tucker v. Fischbein, 237 F.3d 275 (3d Cir. 2001), cert. denied, 534 U.S. 815 (2001)

United States v. W. Indies Transp. Co., 251 F.3d 155 (3d Cir. 2000) (table), cert. denied, 534 U.S. 992 (2001)

United States v. Kalb, 234 F.3d 827 (3d Cir. 2000), cert. denied, 534 U.S. 1113 (2001)
 Swoyer v. Edgars, 251 F.3d 154 (3d Cir. 2000) (table), cert. denied, 534 U.S. 832 (2001)
 United States v. Crandon, 234 F.3d 1266 (3d Cir. 2000) (table), cert. denied, 531 U.S. 1131 (2001)
 United States v. Acosta-Gonzalez, 234 F.3d 1266 (3d Cir. 2000) (table), cert. denied, 531 U.S. 1101 (2001)
 Sortman v. Pennsylvania, 234 F.3d 1265 (3d Cir. 2000) (table), cert. denied, 532 U.S. 1022 (2001)
 Koch v. Pa., 234 F.3d 1265 (3d Cir. 2000) (table), cert. denied, 532 U.S. 1023 (2001)
 Olup v. County of Allegheny Dep't of Aviation, 234 F.3d 1265 (3d Cir. 2000) (table), cert. denied, 532 U.S. 995 (2001)
 Dawson v. Snyder, 234 F.3d 1264 (3d Cir. 2000) (table), cert. denied, 532 U.S. 951 (2001)
 Applebaum v. Nissan Motor Acceptance Corp., 226 F.3d 214 (3d Cir. 2000), cert. denied, 533 U.S. 929 (2001)
 C.H. v. Oliva, 226 F.3d 198, 203-14 (3d Cir. 2000) (en banc) (dissenting), cert. denied, 533 U.S. 915 (2001)
 Venezia v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc'y of the United States, 230 F.3d 1350 (3d Cir. 2000) (table), cert. denied, 532 U.S. 922 (2001)
 United States v. Dodd, 225 F.3d 340 (3d Cir. 2000), cert. denied, 532 U.S. 959 (2001)
 United States v. Cepero, 224 F.3d 256 (3d Cir. 2000) (en banc), cert. denied, 531 U.S. 1114 (2001)
 United States v. Chipps, 230 F.3d 1349 (3d Cir. 2000) (table), cert. denied, 531 U.S. 1057 (2000)
 United States v. McClain, 230 F.3d 1349 (3d Cir. 2000) (table), cert. denied, 531 U.S. 1056 (2000)
 United States v. Piedrahita-Cano, 229 F.3d 1140 (3d Cir. 2000) (table), cert. denied, 531 U.S. 1025 (2000)
 United States v. Lake, 229 F.3d 1139 (3d Cir. 2000) (table), cert. denied, 531 U.S. 1028 (2000)
 McClain v. Horn, 229 F.3d 1138 (3d Cir. 2000) (table), cert. denied, 532 U.S. 1067 (2000)
 Aloe v. Energy Corp. v. Apfel, 225 F.3d 648 (3d Cir. 2000) (table), vacated and remanded 534 U.S. 1159 (2002) (vacating and remanding for further consideration in light of Barnhart v. Sigmon Coal Co., 534 U.S. 438 (2002))
 United States v. Nicklaus, 225 F.3d 651 (3d Cir. 2000) (table), cert. denied, 531 U.S. 972 (2000)
 United States v. Mazzotta, 225 F.3d 651 (3d Cir. 2000) (table), cert. denied, 531 U.S. 951 (2000)
 United States v. Rantin, 225 F.3d 651 (3d Cir. 2000), cert. denied, 531 U.S. 939 (2000)
 Smith v. McCullough, 225 F.3d 650 (3d Cir. 2000) (table), cert. denied, 531 U.S. 951 (2000)
 Handicomp, Inc. v. U.S. Golf Ass'n, 2000 U.S. App. LEXIS 6861 (3d Cir. 2000), cert. denied, 531 U.S. 928 (2000)
 Afrika v. Kirkland, 216 F.3d 1075 (3d Cir. 2000) (table), cert. denied, 531 U.S. 966 (2000)
 Syed v. Hercules, Inc. 214 F.3d 155 (3d Cir. 2000), cert. denied, 531 U.S. 1148 (2001)
 Taylor v. Watson, 216 F.3d 1077 (3d Cir. 2000) (table), cert. denied, 531 U.S. 1023 (2000)
 United States v. Kelsey, 216 F.3d 1077 (3d Cir. 2000) (table), cert. denied, 531 U.S. 907 (2000)
 Mariani v. United States, 212 F.3d 761 (3d Cir. 2000) (en banc), cert. denied, 531 U.S. 1010 (2000)

Feist v. Consol. Freightways Corp., 216 F.3d 1075 (3d Cir. 2000) (table), cert. denied, 532 U.S. 920 (2001)

SEC v. Infinity Group Co., 212 F.3d 180 (3d Cir. 2000), cert. denied, 532 U.S. 905 (2001)

Grimes v. Nw. Airlines, Inc., 216 F.3d 1076 (3d Cir. 2000) (table), cert. denied, 531 U.S. 879 (2000)

Times Mirror Magazines, Inc. v. Las Vegas Sports News, L.L.C., 212 F.3d 157 (3d Cir. 2000), cert. denied, 531 U.S. 1071 (2001)

Campbell v. Vaughn, 209 F.3d 280 (3d Cir. 2000), cert. denied, 531 U.S. 1084 (2001)

United States v. Torres, 209 F.3d 308 (3d Cir. 2000), cert. denied, 531 U.S. 864 (2000)

Scheidly v. St. Paul Mercury Ins., 215 F.3d 1315 (3d Cir. 2000) (table), cert. denied, 531 U.S. 894 (2000)

United States v. Diaz, 213 F.3d 629 (3d Cir. 2000) (table), cert. denied, 531 U.S. 1001 (2000)

United States v. Heard, 213 F.3d 629 (3d Cir. 2000) (table), cert. denied, 531 U.S. 884 (2000)

United States v. Hecht, 212 F.3d 847 (3d Cir. 2000), cert. denied, 530 U.S. 1249 (2000)

Wood v. Prudential Ins. Co. of Am., 207 F.3d 674 (3d Cir. 2000), cert. denied, 531 U.S. 927 (2000)

Watson v. Se. Pa. Transp. Auth., 207 F.3d 207 (3d Cir. 2000), cert. denied, 531 U.S. 1147 (2001)

Coit v. Morton, 211 F.3d 1261 (3d Cir. 2000) (table), cert. denied, 531 U.S. 860 (2000)

In re Ford, 211 F.3d 1261 (3d Cir. 2000) (table), cert. denied, 531 U.S. 901 (2000)

Coss v. Lackawanna County D.A., 204 F.3d 453 (3d Cir. 2000) (en banc), cert. granted 531 U.S. 923 (2000), and rev'd 532 U.S. 394 (2001)

Aziz v. Grove City Coll., 210 F.3d 357 (3d Cir. 2000) (table), cert. denied, 531 U.S. 827 (2000)

Fowler v. United States, 210 F.3d 357 (3d Cir. 2000) (table), cert. denied, 529 U.S. 1103 (2000)

United States v. Sharma, 208 F.3d 207 (3d Cir. 2000) (table), cert. denied, 531 U.S. 851 (2000)

United States v. Montes, 208 F.3d 207 (3d Cir. 2000) (table), cert. denied, 530 U.S. 1221 (2000)

United States v. Villagran, 208 F.3d 207 (3d Cir. 2000) (table), cert. denied, 529 U.S. 1123 (2000)

Riddick v. Bogus, 208 F.3d 206 (3d Cir. 2000) (table), cert. denied, 530 U.S. 1249 (2000)

Burchill v. Pennsylvania, 205 F.3d 1328 (3d Cir. 1999) (table), cert. denied, 531 U.S. 855 (2000)

Whiteford v. Reed, 205 F.3d 1331 (3d Cir. 1999) (table), cert. denied, 530 U.S. 1220 (2000)

Robinson v. Ridge, 205 F.3d 1329 (3d Cir. 1999) (table), cert. denied, 532 U.S. 1025 (2000)

Caskey v. Pension Benefit Gaur. Corp., 203 F.3d 816 (3d Cir. 1999) (table), cert. denied, 530 U.S. 1263 (2000)

Raquel v. Educ. Mgmt. Corp., 196 F.3d 171, 182-86 (3d Cir. 1999) (dissenting), vacated and remanded 531 U.S. 952 (2000)

Motley v. New Jersey State Police, 196 F.3d 160 (3d Cir. 1999), cert. denied, 529 U.S. 1087 (2000)

United States v. Daniels, 202 F.3d 255 (3d Cir. 1999) (table), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 1178 (2000)

In re U.S. Healthcare, Inc., 193 F.3d 151 (3d Cir. 1999), cert. denied, 530 U.S. 1242 (2000)

United States v. Harple, 202 F.3d 194 (3d Cir. 1999), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 1054 (1999)

Noorily v. Thomas & Betts Corp., 188 F.3d 153 (3d Cir. 1999), cert. denied, 529 U.S. 1053 (2000)

Orson, Inc. v. Miramax Film Corp., 189 F.3d 377 (3d Cir. 1999) (en banc), cert. denied, 529 U.S. 1012 (2000)

Killino v. Riverside Sch. Dist., 191 F.3d 445 (3d Cir. 1999) (table), cert. denied, 529 U.S. 1068 (2000)

Huff v. Nw. Sav. Bank, 1999 U.S. App. LEXIS 26290 (3d Cir. 1999), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 1190 (2000)

Lucent Info. Mgmt., Inc. v. Lucent Techs., Inc., 186 F.3d 311 (3d Cir. 1999), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 1106 (2000)

United States ex rel. Mistick PBT v. Hous. Auth., 186 F.3d 376 (3d Cir. 1999), cert. denied, 529 U.S. 1018 (2000)

United States v. Ingram, 187 F.3d 627 (3d Cir. 1999) (table), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 894 (1999)

United States v. Tucker, 187 F.3d 627 (3d Cir. 1999) (table), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 848 (1999)

United States v. Fordham, 187 F.3d 344 (3d Cir. 1999), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 1175 (2000)

United States v. Stewart, 185 F.3d 112 (3d Cir. 1999), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 1063 (2000)

Lowenschuss v. Resorts Int'l, Inc., 181 F.3d 505 (3d Cir. 1999), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 1021 (2000)

United States v. Locskai, 181 F.3d 85 (3d Cir. 1999) (table), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 1177 (2000)

Fioriglio v. City of Atl. City, 185 F.3d 861 (3d Cir. 1999) (table), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 1075 (2000)

Doe v. Constantine, 182 F.3d 903 (3d Cir. 1999) (table), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 1038 (1999)

Price v. Mazurkiewicz, 182 F.3d 904 (3d Cir. 1999) (table), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 1008 (1999)

Collins v. Montgomery County Bd. of Prison Inspectors, 176 F.3d 679 (3d Cir. 1999) (en banc), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 1115 (2000)

Connecticut Gen. Life Ins. Co. v. Comm'r, 177 F.3d 136 (3d Cir. 1999), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 1003 (1999)

United States v. Schwyhart, 187 F.3d 627 (3d Cir. 1999) (table), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 895 (2000)

United States v. Cruz, 187 F.3d 627 (3d Cir. 1999) (table), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 896 (1999)

Loftus v. Se. Pa. Transp. Auth., 187 F.3d 626 (3d Cir. 1999) (table), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 1047 (1999)

United States v. Dorsey, 174 F.3d 331 (3d Cir. 1999), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 885 (1999)

Sullivan v. Snyder, 187 F.3d 626 (3d Cir. 1999) (table), cert. denied, 527 U.S. 1065 (1999)

Allah v. Stachelek, 178 F.3d 1278 (3d Cir. 1999) (table), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 1141 (2000)

United States v. Rojas-Ortiz, 178 F.3d 1281 (3d Cir. 1999) (table), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 855 (2000)

Matteo v. Superintendent, SCI Albion, 171 F.3d 877 (3d Cir. 1999) (en banc), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 824 (1999)

United States v. Bacchus, 178 F.3d 1280 (3d Cir. 1999) (table), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 861 (1999)

Johnson v. Super Fresh Food Mkts., Inc., 178 F.3d 1279 (3d Cir. 1999) (table), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 936 (1999)

United States v. Dan, 178 F.3d 1281 (3d Cir. 1999) (table), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 844 (1999)

FOP Newark Lodge No. 12 v. City of Newark, 170 F.3d 359 (3d Cir. 1999), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 817 (1999)

Guidish v. Lehman, 175 F.3d 1010 (3d Cir. 1999) (table), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 824 (1999)

Newhard v. Philadelphia, Bethlehem & New Eng. R.R., 175 F.3d 1011 (3d Cir. 1999) (table), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 812 (1999)

United States v. Herrera, 175 F.3d 1011 (3d Cir. 1999) (table), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 844 (1999)
 Balliet v. Heydt, 176 F.3d 471 (3d Cir. 1999) (table), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 877 (1999)
 Jackson v. The Right Stuff, 176 F.3d 472 (3d Cir. 1999) (table), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 824 (1999)
 Nelson v. Barbo, 176 F.3d 472 (3d Cir. 1999) (table), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 989 (1999)
 A.S. Goldman & Co. v. New Jersey Bureau of Sec., 163 F.3d 780 (3d Cir. 1999), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 868 (1999)
 Buehl v. Vaughn, 166 F.3d 163 (3d Cir. 1999), petition for cert. dismissed 527 U.S. 1050 (1999)
 United States v. Kole, 164 F.3d 164 (3d Cir. 1998) (joining the opinion of the Court, except as explained in footnote 4), cert. denied, 526 U.S. 1079 (1999)
 Walden v. Hines, 164 F.3d 621 (3d Cir. 1998) (table), motion denied 525 U.S. 1137 (1999)
 Fultz v. Dunn, 165 F.3d 215 (3d Cir. 1998), cert. denied, 527 U.S. 1006 (1999)
 Torres v. McLaughlin, 163 F.3d 169 (3d Cir. 1998), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 1079 (2000)
 United States v. Tyler, 164 F.3d 150, 159-63 (3d Cir. 1998) (concurring), cert. denied, 526 U.S. 1077 (1999)
 Burks v. Green, 173 F.3d 420 (3d Cir. 1998) (table), cert. denied, 527 U.S. 1008 (1999)
 Fisher v. ADT Sec. Sys., 173 F.3d 420 (3d Cir. 1998) (table), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 846 (1999)
 Rives v. County of Monmouth, 172 F.3d 41 (3d Cir. 1998) (table), cert. denied, 527 U.S. 1024 (1999)
 United States v. Oblea-Gonzalez, 172 F.3d 41 (3d Cir. 1998) (table), cert. denied, 526 U.S. 1032 (1999)
 Fleming v. Cape May County Courthouse, 172 F.3d 859 (3d Cir. 1998) (table), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 845 (1999)
 Bryant v. Morton, 172 F.3d 859 (3d Cir. 1998) (table), cert. denied, 526 U.S. 1150 (1999)
 United States v. Lonergan, 172 F.3d 861 (3d Cir. 1998) (table), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 1060 (1999)
 United States v. Clayton, 168 F.3d 480 (3d Cir. 1998) (table), cert. denied, 525 U.S. 1185 (1999)
 United States v. Perez, 168 F.3d 480 (3d Cir. 1998) (table), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 879 (1999)
 United States v. Rodriguez, 168 F.3d 480 (3d Cir. 1998) (table), cert. denied, 525 U.S. 1163 (1999)
 Hassine v. Zimmerman, 160 F.3d 941 (3d Cir. 1998), cert. denied, 526 U.S. 1065 (1999)
 Mellott v. Heemer, 161 F.3d 117 (3d Cir. 1998), cert. denied, 526 U.S. 1160 (1999)
 United States v. Brown, 159 F.3d 147 (3d Cir. 1998), cert. denied, 525 U.S. 1184 (1999)
 ACM Partnership v. Comm'r, 157 F.3d 231 (3d Cir. 1998), cert. denied, 526 U.S. 1017 (1999)
 Williams v. Brown, 166 F.3d 1207 (3d Cir. 1998) (table), cert. denied, 525 U.S. 1047 (1998)
 United States v. Fisher, 1998 U.S. App. LEXIS 17357 (3d Cir. 1998), cert. denied, 525 U.S. 954 (1998)
 United States v. Jackson, 166 F.3d 1206 (3d Cir. 1998) (table), cert. denied, 526 U.S. 1100 (1999)
 United States v. Samuels, 166 F.3d 1206 (3d Cir. 1998) (table), cert. denied, 525 U.S. 1086 (1999)
 United States v. Tobin, 155 F.3d 636 (3d Cir. 1998), cert. denied, 525 U.S. 1171 (1999)
 Belfer v. Zee, 166 F.3d 1204 (3d Cir. 1998), cert. denied, 526 U.S. 1006 (1999)
 United States v. Borrome, 166 F.3d 1206 (3d Cir. 1998) (table), cert. denied, 526 U.S. 1033 (1999)

In re Fesq, 153 F.3d 113 (3d Cir. 1998), cert. denied, 526 U.S. 1018 (1999)
 Edwards v. California Univ. of Pa., 156 F.3d 488 (3d Cir. 1998), cert. denied, 525 U.S. 1143 (1999)
 Collins v. Apfel, 164 F.3d 621 (3d Cir. 1998) (table), cert. denied, 526 U.S. 1056 (1999)
 United States v. Telleria, 162 F.3d 1153 (3d Cir. 1998) (table), cert. denied, 525 U.S. 906 (1998)
 Jackson v. White, 159 F.3d 1351 (3d Cir. 1998) (table), cert. denied, 526 U.S. 1125 (1999)
 Fiore v. White, 149 F.3d 221 (3d Cir. 1998), cert. granted 526 U.S. 1038, question certified 528 U.S. 23 (1999), certified question answered 562 Pa. 634 (2000), and rev'd 531 U.S. 225 (2001)
 United States v. Lake, 150 F.3d 269 (3d Cir. 1998), cert. denied, 525 U.S. 1088 (1999)
 United States v. Richman, 159 F.3d 1354 (3d Cir. 1998) (table), cert. denied, 525 U.S. 1087 (1999)
 United States v. Hall, 159 F.3d 1354 (3d Cir. 1998) (table), cert. denied, 525 U.S. 1009 (1998)
 Knox v. Vaughn, 159 F.3d 1351 (3d Cir. 1998) (table), cert. denied, 525 U.S. 989 (1998)
 United States v. Moses, 148 F.3d 277 (3d Cir. 1998), cert. denied, 525 U.S. 1148 (1999)
 Gibson v. Pa. Nat'l Gaurd, 159 F.3d 1351 (3d Cir. 1998) (table), cert. denied, 525 U.S. 986 (1998)
 United States v. Baird, 159 F.3d 1353 (3d Cir. 1998), cert. denied, 525 U.S. 1056 (1998)
 Williams v. McLaughlin, 159 F.3d 1354 (3d Cir. 1998) (table), cert. denied, 525 U.S. 1079 (1999)
 Ford v. Schering-Plough Corp., 145 F.3d 601 (3d Cir. 1998) (concurring in the judgment), cert. denied, 525 U.S. 1093 (1999)
 United States v. Lena, 151 F.3d 1027 (3d Cir. 1998) (table), cert. denied, 525 U.S. 1166 (1999)
 Fritz v. Lancaster County, 151 F.3d 1025 (3d Cir. 1998) (table), cert. denied, 525 U.S. 983 (1998)
 Melody v. Borough of Eatontown, 151 F.3d 1026 (3d Cir. 1998) (table), cert. denied, 525 U.S. 963 (1998)
 United States v. Shavers, 151 F.3d 1027 (3d Cir. 1998) (table), cert. denied, 525 U.S. 917 (1998)
 Foremanye v. Univ. of Pa., 151 F.3d 1025 (3d Cir. 1998) (table), cert. denied, 525 U.S. 904 (1998)
 Lee v. Kyler, 142 F.3d 428 (3d Cir. 1998) (table), cert. denied, 523 U.S. 1084 (1998)
 Byrd v. Robison, 149 F.3d 1163 (3d Cir. 1998) (table), cert. denied, 525 U.S. 893 (1998)
 Fernandes v. EPA, 142 F.3d 428 (3d Cir. 1998) (table), cert. denied, 525 U.S. 869 (1998)
 Sabo v. Metro. Life Ins. Co., 137 F.3d 185 (3d Cir. 1998), cert. denied, 525 U.S. 1129 (1999)
 United States v. Okoro, 142 F.3d 430 (3d Cir. 1998) (table), cert. denied, 523 U.S. 1102 (1998)
 United States v. Rothwell, 142 F.3d 430 (3d Cir. 1998) (table), cert. denied, 523 U.S. 1131 (1998)
 Brodnax v. Stepanik, 142 F.3d 427 (3d Cir. 1998) (table), cert. denied, 525 U.S. 855 (1998)
 Bellesfield v. Attorney Gen. of New Jersey, 142 F.3d 427 (3d Cir. 1998) (table), cert. denied, 525 U.S. 812 (1998)
 Castaphney v. White, 142 F.3d 427 (3d Cir. 1998) (table), cert. denied, 524 U.S. 931 (1998)
 Newton v. Merrill, Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, 135 F.3d 266 (3d Cir. 1998) (en banc), cert. denied, 525 U.S. 811 (1998)
 United States v. Pizza, 141 F.3d 1155 (3d Cir. 1998) (table), cert. denied, 523 U.S. 1112 (1998)

- Laessig v. City of Philadelphia, 141 F.3d 1154 (3d Cir. 1998) (table), cert. denied, 524 U.S. 944 (1998)
- Hulmes v. Honda Motor Co., 141 F.3d 1154 (3d Cir. 1998) (table), cert. denied, 525 U.S. 814 (1998)
- In re Prudential Ins. Co. of Am. Sales Practice Litig., 133 F.3d 225 (3d Cir. 1998), cert. denied, 525 U.S. 817 (1998)
- United States v. Briggs, 135 F.3d 767 (3d Cir. 1997) (table), cert. denied, 523 U.S. 1131 (1998)
- Shawley v. Kyler, 135 F.3d 766 (3d Cir. 1997) (table), cert. denied, 525 U.S. 834 (1998)
- Craw v. Horn, 1998 U.S. App. LEXIS 2514 (3d Cir. 1998), cert. denied, 524 U.S. 931 (1998)
- Weissman v. Cohn, Lifland, Perlman, Hermann & Knopf, 133 F.3d 912 (3d Cir. 1997) (table), cert. denied, 523 U.S. 1122 (1998)
- United States v. Johnson, 133 F.3d 911 (3d Cir. 1997) (table), cert. denied, 523 U.S. 1033 (1998)
- Messam v. Morton, 133 F.3d 910 (3d Cir. 1997) (table), cert. denied, 523 U.S. 1074 (1998)
- Deblase v. Roth, 1997 U.S. App. LEXIS 30238 (3d Cir. 1997) (en banc), cert. denied, 523 U.S. 1083 (1998)
- Ryder v. Westinghouse Elec. Corp., 128 F.3d 128 (3d Cir. 1997), cert. denied, 522 U.S. 1116 (1998)
- United States v. Pevarnik, 129 F.3d 1257 (3d Cir. 1997) (table), cert. denied, 522 U.S. 1082 (1998)
- United States v. Marr, 129 F.3d 1257 (3d Cir. 1997) (table), cert. denied, 522 U.S. 1067 (1998)
- Gagliardi v. United States, 129 F.3d 1255 (3d Cir. 1997) (table), cert. denied, 524 U.S. 955 (1998)
- Jones v. Bernstein, 129 F.3d 1255 (3d Cir. 1997) (table), cert. denied, 522 U.S. 1135 (1998)
- United States v. Green, 129 F.3d 1256 (3d Cir. 1997) (table), cert. denied, 522 U.S. 1067 (1998)
- Queen City Pizza v. Domino's Pizza, 124 F.3d 430 (3d Cir. 1997), cert. denied, 523 U.S. 1059 (1998)
- United States v. Williams, 124 F.3d 411 (3d Cir. 1997), cert. denied, 522 U.S. 1051 (1998)
- United States v. Igbonwa, 120 F.3d 437, 444-46 (3d Cir. 1997) (dissenting), cert. denied, 522 U.S. 1119 (1998)
- United States v. Palma-Ruedas, 121 F.3d 841, 859-865 (3d Cir. 1997) (concurring and dissenting), cert. granted 524 U.S. 915, and rev'd 526 U.S. 275 (1999)
- Smith v. Horn, 120 F.3d 400, 419-26 (3d Cir. 1997) (dissenting), cert. denied, 522 U.S. 1109 (1998)
- Benjamin v. EEOC, 124 F.3d 185 (3d Cir. 1997) (table), cert. denied, 522 U.S. 923 (1997)
- Duarte v. United States, 124 F.3d 186 (3d Cir. 1997) (table), cert. denied, 522 U.S. 938 (1997)
- Griffin v. Lehman, 124 F.3d 187 (3d Cir. 1997) (table), cert. denied, 522 U.S. 1003 (1997)
- Tucker v. Bayside State Prison, 124 F.3d 189 (3d Cir. 1997) (table), cert. denied, 522 U.S. 1007 (1998)
- United States v. Hawkins, 124 F.3d 189 (3d Cir. 1997) (table), cert. denied, 522 U.S. 1005 (1997)
- Delor v. ATX Telecom Servs., 124 F.3d 186 (3d Cir. 1997) (table), cert. denied, 522 U.S. 1019 (1997)
- United States v. Sanders, 124 F.3d 189 (3d Cir. 1997) (table), cert. denied, 522 U.S. 1006 (1997)

Clinton County Comm'rs v. EPA, 116 F.3d 1018 (3d Cir. 1997) (en banc), cert. denied, 522 U.S. 1045 (1998)

Alexander v. Whitman, 114 F.3d 1392, 1409 (3d Cir. 1997) (concurring), cert. denied, 522 U.S. 949 (1997)

United States v. Kaczmariski, 114 F.3d 1173 (3d Cir. 1997) (table), cert. denied, 522 U.S. 901 (1997)

United States v. Bell, 113 F.3d 1345 (3d Cir. 1997), cert. denied, 522 U.S. 984 (1997)

United States v. Lewis, 113 F.3d 487 (3d Cir. 1997), cert. denied, 523 U.S. 1108 (1998)

United States v. Powell, 113 F.3d 464 (3d Cir. 1997), cert. denied, 522 U.S. 987 (1997)

Konstantopoulos v. Westvaco Corp., 112 F.3d 710 (3d Cir. 1997), cert. denied, 522 U.S. 1128 (1998)

United States v. Thompson, 1997 U.S. App. LEXIS 33395 (3d Cir. 1997), cert. denied, 522 U.S. 1138 (1998)

United States v. Doe #1, 1997 U.S. App. LEXIS 33409 (3d Cir. 1997), cert. denied, 522 U.S. 1138 (1998)

United States v. Kelly, 116 F.3d 470 (3d Cir. 1997) (table), cert. denied, 522 U.S. 891 (1997)

United States v. Lisk, 114 F.3d 1173 (3d Cir. 1997) (table), cert. denied, 522 U.S. 885 (1997)

Chapman v. Kozakiewicz, 111 F.3d 125 (3d Cir. 1997) (table), cert. denied, 522 U.S. 986 (1997)

Williams v. Stone, 109 F.3d 890 (3d Cir. 1997), cert. denied, 522 U.S. 956 (1997)

Parker v. Wertenberger, 111 F.3d 127 (3d Cir. 1997) (table), cert. denied, 522 U.S. 849 (1997)

Ramos v. Nemetz, 111 F.3d 127 (3d Cir. 1997) (table), cert. denied, 522 U.S. 819 (1997)

Brown v. Am. Motorists Ins. Co., 111 F.3d 125 (3d Cir. 1997) (table), cert. denied, 522 U.S. 950 (1997)

Caterpillar, Inc. v. Int'l Union, United Auto., Aerospace & Agric. Implement Workers of Am., 107 F.3d 1052, 1066-73 (3d Cir. 1997) (en banc) (dissenting), cert. granted 521 U.S. 1152, and cert. dismissed 523 U.S. 1015 (1998).

Phillips v. Borough of Keyport, 107 F.3d 164, 183-87 (3d Cir. 1997) (en banc) (dissenting), cert. denied, 522 U.S. 932 (1997)

In re Yuhas, 104 F.3d 612 (3d Cir. 1997), cert. denied, 521 U.S. 1105 (1997)

United States v. O'Neal, 107 F.3d 9 (3d Cir. 1997) (table), cert. denied, 520 U.S. 1236 (1997)

United States v. Mathis, 107 F.3d 9 (3d Cir. 1997) (table), cert. denied, 522 U.S. 825 (1997)

Klingensmith v. Roy, 107 F.3d 7 (3d Cir. 1997) (table), cert. denied, 520 U.S. 1278 (1997)

United States v. Goins, 107 F.3d 9 (3d Cir. 1997) (table), cert. denied, 520 U.S. 1235 (1997)

United States v. Rybar, 103 F.3d 273, 286-294 (3d Cir. 1996) (dissenting), cert. denied, 522 U.S. 807 (1997)

United States v. Kennedy, 106 F.3d 387 (3d Cir. 1996) (table), cert. denied, 520 U.S. 1212 (1997)

United States v. Thomas, 103 F.3d 115 (3d Cir. 1996) (table), cert. denied, 520 U.S. 1221 (1997)

Sheridan v. E.I. Dupont de Nemours & Co., 100 F.3d 1061, 1078-89 (3d Cir. 1996) (en banc) (concurring and dissenting), cert. denied, 521 U.S. 1129 (1997)

United States v. Smith, 101 F.3d 693 (3d Cir. 1996) (table), cert. denied, 519 U.S. 1141 (1997)

United States v. Balboa, 101 F.3d 692 (3d Cir. 1996) (table), cert. denied, 519 U.S. 1141 (1997)

United States v. Lopez, 101 F.3d 693 (3d Cir. 1996) (table), cert. denied, 519 U.S. 1138 (1997)

United States v. Gulati, 101 F.3d 693 (3d Cir. 1996) (table), cert. denied, 519 U.S. 1139 (1997)

United States v. Ebo, 101 F.3d 692 (3d Cir. 1996) (table), cert. denied, 520 U.S. 1130 (1997)

United States v. Dowell, 101 F.3d 692 (3d Cir. 1996) (table), cert. denied, 519 U.S. 1083 (1997)

Jae v. Kessler, 101 F.3d 690 (3d Cir. 1996) (table), cert. denied, 520 U.S. 1159 (1997)

United States v. Simpson, 101 F.3d 693 (3d Cir. 1996) (table), cert. denied, 519 U.S. 1019 (1996)

United States v. Zayid, 101 F.3d 694 (3d Cir. 1996) (table), cert. denied, 519 U.S. 1128 (1997)

Sadowski v. NCUA, 100 F.3d 948 (3d Cir. 1996) (table), cert. denied, 520 U.S. 1122 (1997)

United States v. Davidson, 96 F.3d 1435 (3d Cir. 1996) (table), cert. denied, 519 U.S. 1021 (1996)

Russo v. Marut, 96 F.3d 1434 (3d Cir. 1996) (table), cert. denied, 519 U.S. 1117 (1997)

United States v. Williams, 1996 U.S. App. LEXIS 15078 (3d Cir. 1996), cert. denied, 519 U.S. 869 (1996)

Hedden v. AMTRAK, 1996 U.S. App. LEXIS 15066 (3d Cir. 1996), cert. denied, 519 U.S. 930 (1996)

Windley v. Potts Welding & Boiler Repair Co., 96 F.3d 1437 (3d Cir. 1996) (table), cert. denied, 510 U.S. 1078 (1997)

United States v. Salome, 96 F.3d 1436 (3d Cir. 1996) (table), cert. denied, 519 U.S. 1066 (1997)

CNG Transmission Corp. v. Stitt, 96 F.3d 1432 (3d Cir. 1996) (table), cert. denied, 519 U.S. 1112 (1997)

Bronson v. Walker, 96 F.3d 1431 (3d Cir. 1996) (table), cert. denied, 519 U.S. 1067 (1997)

Taxman v. Bd. of Educ., 91 F.3d 1547 (3d Cir. 1996) (en banc), cert. granted 521 U.S. 1117, and cert. dismissed 522 U.S. 1010 (1997)

United States v. Conley, 92 F.3d 157 (3d Cir. 1996), cert. denied, 520 U.S. 1115 (1997)

In re Cont'l Airlines, 91 F.3d 553, 567-73 (3d Cir. 1996) (en banc) (dissenting), cert. denied, 519 U.S. 1057 (1997)

United States v. Balter, 91 F.3d 427 (3d Cir. 1996), cert. denied, 519 U.S. 1011 (1996)

United States v. Garcia, 92 F.3d 1173 (3d Cir. 1996) (table), cert. denied, 519 U.S. 1011 (3d Cir. 1996)

United States v. Martinez, 92 F.3d 1173 (3d Cir. 1996), cert. denied, 522 U.S. 843 (1997)

United States v. Brady, 88 F.3d 225 (3d Cir. 1996), cert. denied, 519 U.S. 1094 (1997)

Durkin v. Major League Baseball, 85 F.3d 611 (3d Cir. 1996) (table), cert. denied, 519 U.S. 825 (1996)

United States v. Salemo, 91 F.3d 127 (3d Cir. 1996) (table), cert. denied, 519 U.S. 999 (1996)

Dayhoff Inc. v. HJ Heinz Co., 86 F.3d 1287 (3d Cir. 1996), cert. denied, 519 U.S. 1028 (1996)

Rogers v. White, 1996 U.S. App. LEXIS 15045 (3d Cir. 1996), cert. denied, 519 U.S. 874 (1996)

Brooks v. Price, 1996 U.S. App. LEXIS 15041 (3d Cir. 1996), cert. denied, 519 U.S. 905 (1996)

Aaron v. Cunningham, 1996 U.S. App. LEXIS 14980 (3d Cir. 1996), cert. denied, 519 U.S. 1031 (1996)

United States v. Edmonds, 80 F.3d 810, 829-36 (3d Cir. 1996) (en banc) (dissenting), cert. denied, 519 U.S. 927 (1996)

Miller v. Delaware River Port Auth., 82 F.3d 405 (3d Cir. 1996) (table), cert. denied, 519 U.S. 1095 (1997)

Nestler v. Chatler, 82 F.3d 406 (3d Cir. 1996) (table), cert. denied, 519 U.S. 984 (1996)

Haddock v. Christos, 82 F.3d 405 (3d Cir. 1996) (table), cert. denied, 520 U.S. 1232 (1997)

United States v. Zhadanov, 82 F.3d 407 (3d Cir. 1996) (table), cert. denied, 517 U.S. 1169 (1996)

Zilich v. Reid, 82 F.3d 408 (3d Cir. 1996) (table), cert. denied, 517 U.S. 1248 (1996)

Kalwaytis v. Preferred Meal Sys., 78 F.3d 117 (3d Cir. 1996), cert. denied, 519 U.S. 819 (1996)

United States v. Nelson, 77 F.3d 465 (3d Cir. 1996) (table), cert. denied, 517 U.S. 1229 (1996)

United States v. Claypool, 77 F.3d 464 (3d Cir. 1996) (table), cert. denied, 517 U.S. 1149 (1996)

Thompson v. BIC Corp., 77 F.3d 464 (3d Cir. 1996) (table), cert. denied, 519 U.S. 813 (1996)

Armstrong v. Commodity Futures Trading Comm'n, 77 F.3d 461 (3d Cir. 1996) (table), cert. denied, 517 U.S. 1245 (1996)

United States v. Titus, 77 F.3d 465 (3d Cir. 1996) (table), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 1181 (1996)

Exxon Shipping Co. v. Exxon Seaman's Union, 73 F.3d 1287 (3d Cir. 1996), cert. denied, 517 U.S. 1251 (1996)

Barbee v. Pa. Dep't of Corr., 77 F.3d 461 (3d Cir. 1996) (table), cert. denied, 517 U.S. 1226 (1996)

Sutton v. Gibson, 77 F.3d 464 (3d Cir. 1996) (table), cert. denied, 517 U.S. 1191 (1996)

United States v. Jefferson, 77 F.3d 464 (3d Cir. 1996) (table), cert. denied, 519 U.S. 853 (1996)

In re Hinchliffe, 77 F.3d 462 (3d Cir. 1996) (table), cert. denied, 517 U.S. 1209 (1996)

United States v. $184,505.01 in United States Currency, 72 F.3d 1160 (3d Cir. 1995), cert. denied, 519 U.S. 807 (1996)

In re Penn Cent. Transp. Co., 71 F.3d 1113 (3d Cir. 1995), cert. denied, 517 U.S. 1221 (1996)

Di Lauro v. Ver Strate, 74 F.3d 1226 (3d Cir. 1995) (table), cert. denied, 519 U.S. 864 (1996)

United States v. Terry, 72 F.3d 125 (3d Cir. 1995) (table), cert. denied, 517 U.S. 1158 (1996)

United States v. Casas, 72 F.3d 124 (3d Cir. 1995) (table), cert. denied, 517 U.S. 1148 (1996)

Arce v. Good, 72 F.3d 122 (3d Cir. 1995) (table), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 1132 (1996)

Tamakloe v. United States, 72 F.3d 124 (3d Cir. 1995) (table), cert. denied, 517 U.S. 1127 (1996)

Akech v. United States, 72 F.3d 122 (3d Cir. 1995) (table), cert. denied, 517 U.S. 1125 (1996)

Whitehead v. Upland Mortgages Corp., 1995 U.S. App. LEXIS 35877 (3d Cir. 1995), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 1176 (1996)

Flatley v. Whitman, 1995 U.S. App. LEXIS 35887 (3d Cir. 1995), cert. denied, 518 U.S. 1019 (1996)

Harvey & Harvey, Inc. v. County of Chester, 68 F.3d 788 (3d Cir. 1995), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 1173 (1996)

Flamer v. Delaware, 68 F.3d 736 (3d Cir. 1995) (en banc), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 1088 (1996)

United States v. Ruffin, 70 F.3d 1258 (3d Cir. 1995) (table), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 1136 (1996)

English v. Mentor Corp., 67 F.3d 477 (3d Cir. 1995), vacated and remanded 518 U.S. 1030 (vacating and remanding for further consideration in light of Medtronic, Inc. v. Lohr, 518 U.S. 470 (1996))

United States v. Kinney, 68 F.3d 458 (3d Cir. 1995) (table), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 1098 (1996)

United States v. Edelson, 68 F.3d 457 (3d Cir. 1995) (table), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 1181 (1996)

Mates v. OSHA, 67 F.3d 291 (3d Cir. 1995) (table), cert. denied, 517 U.S. 1105 (1996)

United States v. Levy, 68 F.3d 458 (3d Cir. 1995) (table), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 1166 (1996)

United States v. Bayron, 67 F.3d 292 (3d Cir. 1995) (table), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 1131 (1996)

Am. Atlas Corp. v. Allegheny County Indus. Dev. Auth., 68 F.3d 456 (3d Cir. 1995), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 1116 (1996)

- Kuhns v. Meridian Bancorp, 68 F.3d 456 (3d Cir. 1995) (table), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 1114 (1996)
- Parry v. Rosemeyer, 64 F.3d 110 (3d Cir. 1995), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 1058 (1996)
- United States v. McLeggan, 66 F.3d 313 (3d Cir. 1995) (table), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 1062 (1996)
- United States v. Battiste, 66 F.3d 313 (3d Cir. 1995) (table), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 1032 (1995)
- United States v. Rashid, 66 F.3d 314 (3d Cir. 1995) (table), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 1121 (1996)
- Moore v. Vaughn, 66 F.3d 311 (3d Cir. 1995) (table), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 949 (1995)
- United States v. McIntyre, 66 F.3d 313 (3d Cir. 1995) (table), cert. denied, 517 U.S. 1199 (1996)
- United States v. Woods, 66 F.3d 314 (3d Cir. 1995) (table), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 1031 (1996)
- United States v. Bernas, 66 F.3d 313 (3d Cir. 1995) (table), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 999 (1995)
- United States v. Salemo, 61 F.3d 214, 222-24 (3d Cir. 1995) (concurring), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 1001 (1995)
- Elizabeth Blackwell Health Ctr. for Women v. Knoll, 61 F.3d 170 (3d Cir. 1995), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 1093 (1996)
- Homar v. Gilbert, 89 F.3d 1009, 1023-31 (3d Cir. 1995) (concurring and dissenting), cert. granted 519 U.S. 1052, and rev'd 520 U.S. 924 (1997)
- Jamhoury v. Matheis, 65 F.3d 162 (3d Cir. 1995) (table), motion denied 516 U.S. 1109 (1996)
- United States v. Holt, 61 F.3d 897 (3d Cir. 1995) (table), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 898 (1995)
- Hinds v. United Parcel Serv., 61 F.3d 894 (3d Cir. 1995), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 1078 (1996)
- Resolution Trust Corp. v. Cityfed Fin. Corp., 57 F.3d 1231 (3d Cir. 1995), cert. granted 517 U.S. 1133 (1996), and vacated and remanded 519 U.S. 213 (1997)
- Rauser v. Beard, 61 F.3d 896 (3d Cir. 1995) (table), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 883 (1995)
- Osborne v. Montgomery Eng'g Co., 60 F.3d 816 (3d Cir. 1995) (table), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 905 (1995)
- Christy v. Pa. Tpk. Comm'n, 54 F.3d 1140 (3d Cir. 1995), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 932 (1995)
- United States v. Gonzalez, 60 F.3d 818 (3d Cir. 1995) (table), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 902 (1995)
- United States v. Salb, 60 F.3d 819 (3d Cir. 1995) (table), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 1118 (1996)
- Van Belle v. Atl. Equip. Eng'rs, 60 F.3d 819 (3d Cir. 1995) (table), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 1079 (1996)
- Baijnath v. Attorney Gen., 60 F.3d 813 (3d Cir. 1995) (table), cert. denied, 517 U.S. 1141 (1996)
- United States v. Stewart, 54 F.3d 771 (3d Cir. 1995) (table), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 899 (1995)
- DeMauro v. Coldwell Banker & Co., 54 F.3d 767 (3d Cir. 1995) (table), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 978 (1995)
- In re GMC Pick-up Truck Fuel Tank Prods. Liab. Litig., 55 F.3d 768 (3d Cir. 1995), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 824 (1995)
- Johnson v. Love, 54 F.3d 768 (3d Cir. 1995) (table), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 884 (1995)
- Giles v. Vaughn, 52 F.3d 314 (3d Cir. 1995) (table), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 855 (1995)
- Olszewski v. Am. Tel. & Tel. Co., 52 F.3d 316 (3d Cir. 1995) (table), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 906 (1995)
- United States v. Skandier, 52 F.3d 319 (3d Cir. 1995) (table), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 854 (1995)
- United States v. Johnson, 52 F.3d 318 (3d Cir. 1995) (table), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 857 (1995)
- United States v. Murcer, 52 F.3d 318 (3d Cir. 1995) (table), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 899 (1995)

- Tabas v. Tabas, 47 F.3d 1280, 1302 (3d Cir. 1995) (en banc) (concurring), cert. denied, 515 U.S. 1118 (1995)
- United States v. Troublefield, 1995 U.S. App. LEXIS 5013 (3d Cir. 1995), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 900 (1995)
- United States v. McCune, 47 F.3d 1162 (3d Cir. 1995) (table), cert. denied, 514 U.S. 1135 (1995)
- Fisher Bros. Sales, Inc. v. United States, 46 F.3d 279 (3d Cir. 1995) (en banc), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 806 (1995)
- United States v. Devon, 47 F.3d 1162 (3d Cir. 1995) (table), cert. denied, 514 U.S. 1135 (1995)
- United States v. Thompson, 47 F.3d 1162 (3d Cir. 1995) (table), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 877 (1995)
- United States v. Zehrbach, 47 F.3d 1252 (3d Cir. 1995) (en banc), cert. denied, 514 U.S. 1067 (1995)
- United States v. Educ. Dev. Network Corp., 47 F.3d 1162 (3d Cir. 1995) (table), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 818 (1995)
- United States v. Jacobs, 44 F.3d 1219 (3d Cir. 1995), cert. denied, 514 U.S. 1101 (3d Cir. 1995)
- United States v. Renfroe, 46 F.3d 1120 (3d Cir. 1994) (table), cert. denied, 515 U.S. 1166 (1995)
- Bivolcic v. United States, 46 F.3d 1115 (3d Cir. 1994) (table), cert. denied, 514 U.S. 1075 (1995)
- United States v. Courtney, 46 F.3d 1119 (3d Cir. 1994) (table), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 1174 (1995)
- United States v. Washington, 46 F.3d 1120 (3d Cir. 1994) (table), cert. denied, 514 U.S. 1057 (1995)
- Moretti v. Dinice, 46 F.3d 1117 (3d Cir. 1994) (table), cert. denied, 515 U.S. 1143 (1994)
- United States v. Isenburg, 43 F.3d 1463 (3d Cir. 1994) (table), cert. denied, 514 U.S. 1044 (1995)
- Adams v. Melnick/Nickel, 43 F.3d 1460 (3d Cir. 1994) (table), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 1177 (1995)
- Moretti v. New Jersey, 43 F.3d 1462 (3d Cir. 1994) (table), cert. denied, 514 U.S. 1066 (1995)
- United States v. Jackson, 43 F.3d 1463 (3d Cir. 1994) (table), cert. denied, 514 U.S. 1031 (1995)
- United States v. Lombardo, 43 F.3d 1463 (3d Cir. 1994) (table), cert. denied, 514 U.S. 1029 (1995)
- United States v. Brennan, 43 F.3d 1463 (3d Cir. 1994) (table), cert. denied, 514 U.S. 1029 (1995)
- United States v. Michaels, 43 F.3d 1463 (3d Cir. 1994) (table), cert. denied, 514 U.S. 1029 (1995)
- Basheer v. Stepanik, 43 F.3d 1460 (3d Cir. 1994) (table), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 1170 (1995)
- W. Virginia State Dep't of Tax & Rev. v. IRS, 37 F.3d 982 (3d Cir. 1994), cert. denied, 514 U.S. 1082 (2005)
- United States v. Tabas, 39 F.3d 1173 (3d Cir. 1994) (table), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 973 (1995)
- Kviatovsky v. Temple Univ., 39 F.3d 1170 (3d Cir. 1994) (table), cert. denied, 514 U.S. 1113 (1995)
- United States v. Seligsohn, 39 F.3d 1173 (3d Cir. 1994) (table), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 1170 (1995)

United States v. Seligsohn, 39 F.3d 1172 (3d Cir. 1994) (table), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 1119 (1995)

United States v. Beil, 39 F.3d 1171 (3d Cir. 1994) (table), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 1132 (1995)

United States v. Lowery, 39 F.3d 1172 (3d Cir. 1994) (table), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 1196 (1995)

Wakefield v. Egles, 39 F.3d 1173 (3d Cir. 1994) (table), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 1087 (1995)

Webber v. County of Franklin, 37 F.3d 1491 (3d Cir. 1994) (table), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 950 (1994)

St. Francis Med. Ctr. v. Shalala, 32 F.3d 805 (3d Cir. 1994), cert. denied, 514 U.S. 1016 (1995)

United States v. Burke, 31 F.3d 1174 (3d Cir. 1994) (table), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 1110 (1995)

George v. Bethlehem Steel Corp., 31 F.3d 1171 (3d Cir. 1994) (table), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 1043 (1994)

United States v. Rosebar, 31 F.3d 1175 (3d Cir. 1994) (table), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 1006 (1994)

Robinson v. Aronio, 27 F.3d 877 (3d Cir. 1994), vacated and remanded 513 U.S. 1186 (1995) (vacating and remanding for further consideration in light of O'Neal v. McAninch, 513 U.S. 432 (1995))

United States v. McDade, 28 F.3d 283 (3d Cir. 1994), cert. denied, 514 U.S. 1003 (1995)

United States v. Ramsey, 30 F.3d 1489 (3d Cir. 1994) (table), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 1026 (1994)

Twiggs v. Vaughn, 27 F.3d 559 (3d Cir. 1994) (table), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 937 (1994)

United States v. Copple, 24 F.3d 535 (3d Cir. 1994), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 989 (1994)

United States v. Lynch, 27 F.3d 559 (3d Cir. 1994) (table), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 838 (1994)

Se. Pa. Transp. Auth. v. Pa. Pub. Util. Comm'n, 27 F.3d 558 (3d Cir. 1994) (table), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 928 (1994)

Virgin Islands v. Greer, 27 F.3d 556 (3d Cir. 1994) (table), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 1065 (1994)

Virgin Islands v. Duberry, 27 F.3d 556 (3d Cir. 1994) (table), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 953 (1994)

Virgin Islands v. Gonzalez, 27 F.3d 556 (3d Cir. 1994) (table), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 1065 (1994)

Kennedy v. Zimmerman, 26 F.3d 122 (3d Cir. 1994) (table), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 897 (1994)

United States v. Chapple, 22 F.3d 304 (3d Cir. 1994) (table), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 861 (1994)

Johnson v. Rosenmeyer, 22 F.3d 301 (3d Cir. 1994), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 977 (1994)

Auriti v. Segal, 1994 U.S. App. LEXIS 9816 (3d Cir. 1994), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 825 (1994)

Nyenekor v. Boston, 22 F.3d 303 (3d Cir. 1994) (table), cert. denied, 514 U.S. 1038 (1994)

Pemberthy v. Beyer, 19 F.3d 857 (3d Cir. 1994), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 969 (1994)

Matthews v. Pineo, 19 F.3d 121 (3d Cir. 1994), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 820 (1994)

United States v. Baines, 22 F.3d 303 (3d Cir. 1994) (table), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 852 (1994)

United States v. Schindler, 22 F.3d 304 (3d Cir. 1994) (table), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 852 (1994)

United States v. Garrison, 22 F.3d 304 (3d Cir. 1994) (table), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 851 (1994)

United States v. Hayes, 22 F.3d 304 (3d Cir. 1994) (table), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 877 (1994)

Dooley v. Morgan, 1994 U.S. App. LEXIS 9831 (3d Cir. 1994), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 846 (1994)

United States v. Carper, 22 F.3d 303 (3d Cir. 1994) (table), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 1084 (1995)

United States v. Backstrom, 19 F.3d 644 (3d Cir. 1994) (table), cert. denied, 512 U.S. 1225 (1994)

Rodenbaugh v. Singer, 17 F.3d 1431 (3d Cir. 1994) (table), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 858 (1994)

- Macario v. Pratt & Whitney Can., 17 F.3d 1430 (3d Cir. 1994), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 915 (1994)
- United States v. Carroll, 17 F.3d 1431 (3d Cir. 1994) (table), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 829 (1994)
- United States v. Snitkin, 17 F.3d 1432 (3d Cir. 1994) (table), cert. denied, 511 U.S. 1097 (1994)
- In re Tex. E. Transmission Corp. PCB Contamination Ins. Coverage Litig., 15 F.3d 1230, 1244-49 (3d Cir. 1994) (dissenting), cert. denied, 53 U.S. 915 (1994)
- United States v. Correll, 16 F.3d 405 (3d Cir. 1993) (table), cert. denied, 511 U.S. 1011 (1994)
- Brooks v. McCausland, 14 F.3d 46 (3d Cir. 1993) (table), cert. denied, 512 U.S. 1240 (1994)
- United States v. Stiver, 9 F.3d 298 (3d Cir. 1993), cert. denied, 510 U.S. 1136 (1994)
- Rodenbaugh v. Gerson, 14 F.3d 49 (3d Cir. 1993) (table), cert. denied, 512 U.S. 1210 (1994)
- Kodak v. Comm'r, 14 F.3d 47 (3d Cir. 1993) (table), cert. denied, 512 U.S. 1238 (1994)
- Purificato v. Comm'r, 9 F.3d 290 (3d Cir. 1993), cert. denied, 511 U.S. 1018 (1994)
- United States v. Fisher, 10 F.3d 115 (3d Cir. 1993), cert. denied, 512 U.S. 1238 (1994)
- United States v. DeRewal, 10 F.3d 100 (3d Cir. 1993), cert. denied, 511 U.S. 1033 (1994)
- Cain v. Darby Borough, 7 F.3d 377, 383-84 (3d Cir. 1993) (en banc) (joining the partial dissent of Greenberg, J.), cert. denied, 510 U.S. 1195 (1994)
- In re Donald J. Trump Casino Sec. Litig., 7 F.3d 357 (3d Cir. 1993), cert. denied, 510 U.S. 1178 (1994)
- Shoop v. Dauphin County, 9 F.3d 1541 (3d Cir. 1993) (table), cert. denied, 511 U.S. 1088 (1994)
- United States v. Cianca, 9 F.3d 1541 (3d Cir. 1993) (table), cert. denied, 510 U.S. 1002 (1993)
- United States v. Chew, 9 F.3d 1541 (3d Cir. 1993) (table), cert. denied, 510 U.S. 1169 (1994)
- United States v. Bowers, 9 F.3d 1541 (3d Cir. 1993) (table), cert. denied, 510 U.S. 1133 (1994)
- United States v. Fields, 8 F.3d 813 (3d Cir. 1993) (table), cert. denied, 510 U.S. 1079 (1994)
- United States v. Perales, 8 F.3d 814 (3d Cir. 1993) (table), cert. denied, 510 U.S. 1128 (1994)
- United States v. Avila, 8 F.3d 813 (3d Cir. 1993) (table), cert. denied, 510 U.S. 1100 (1994)
- Gillis v. Hoechst Celanese Corp., 4 F.3d 1137, 1149-51 (3d Cir. 1993) (concurring), cert. denied, 511 U.S. 1031 (1994)
- Cardwell v. United States, 6 F.3d 778 (3d Cir. 1993) (table), cert. denied, 511 U.S. 1051 (1994)
- United States v. Arnold, 6 F.3d 780 (3d Cir. 1993) (table), cert. denied, 510 U.S. 1062 (1994)
- Dunn v. HOVIC, 1 F.3d 1371, 1391-94 (3d Cir. 1993) (en banc), cert. denied, 510 U.S. 1031 (1993)
- United States v. Frost, 999 F.2d 737 (3d Cir. 1993), cert. denied, 510 U.S. 1001 (1993)
- Ticor Title Ins. Co. v. FTC, 998 F.2d 1129, 1141-43 (3d Cir. 1993) (dissenting), cert. denied, 510 U.S. 1190 (1993)
- United States v. Yeager, 5 F.3d 1492 (3d Cir. 1993) (table), cert. denied, 510 U.S. 956 (1993)
- United States v. Hernandez, 5 F.3d 1491 (3d Cir. 1993) (table), cert. denied, 510 U.S. 1136 (1994)
- McManus v. Hous. Auth., 5 F.3d 1489 (3d Cir. 1993) (table), cert. denied, 510 U.S. 1119 (1994)
- Goldberg v. Cleveland Clinic, 5 F.3d 1489 (3d Cir. 1993) (table), cert. denied, 510 U.S. 998 (1993)
- Collier v. Marshall, Dennehey, Warner, Coleman & Goggin, 998 F.2d 1002 (3d Cir. 1993) (table), cert. denied, 510 U.S. 977 (1993)
- Willis v. Rison, 998 F.2d 1007 (3d Cir. 1993) (table), cert. denied, 510 U.S. 1001 (1993)
- Commonwealth Office of Budget v. Dep't of Health & Human Servs., 996 F.2d 1505 (3d Cir. 1993), cert. denied, 510 U.S. 1010 (1993)

Byrd v. Cabbage, 998 F.2d 1002 (3d Cir. 1993) (table), cert. denied, 510 U.S. 982 (1993)
 United States v. Gonzalez, 998 F.2d 1005 (3d Cir. 1993) (table), cert. denied, 510 U.S. 936 (1993)
 United States v. Bohn, 998 F.2d 1005 (3d Cir. 1993) (table), cert. denied, 510 U.S. 956 (1993)
 United States v. Torres, 995 F.2d 220 (3d Cir. 1993) (table), cert. denied, 510 U.S. 925 (1993)
 Smith v. Lower Merion Twp., 995 F.2d 219 (3d Cir. 1993) (table), cert. denied, 510 U.S. 947 (1993)
 United States v. 3201 Caughy Rd., 995 F.2d 219 (3d Cir. 1993) (table), cert. denied, 510 U.S. 950 (1993)
 Bronson v. Zimmerman, 995 F.2d 216 (3d Cir. 1993) (table), cert. denied, 510 U.S. 970 (1993)
 Fisher v. Rutgers State Univ., 510 U.S. 1042 (3d Cir. 1993) (table), cert. denied, 510 U.S. 1042 (1994)
 Specter v. Garrett, 995 F.2d 404, 411-14 (3d Cir. 1993) (dissenting), cert. granted 510 U.S. 930, and rev'd 511 U.S. 462 (1994)
 Kim v. Sec'y of Labor, 995 F.2d 217 (3d Cir. 1993) (table), cert. denied, 510 U.S. 1053 (1994)
 Akins v. Cotton, 995 F.2d 215 (3d Cir. 1993) (table), cert. denied, 510 U.S. 981 (1993)
 Murray v. Vaughn, 1993 U.S. App. LEXIS 14343 (3d Cir. 1993), cert. denied, 510 U.S. 893 (1993)
 Richardson v. United States Dep't of Health & Human Servs., 993 F.2d 878 (3d Cir. 1993) (table), cert. denied, 511 U.S. 1033 (1994)
 Clowes v. Allegheny Valley Hosp., 991 F.2d 1159 (3d Cir. 1993), cert. denied, 510 U.S. 964 (1993)
 Thomas Jefferson Univ. v. Shalala, 993 F.2d 879 (3d Cir. 1993) (table), cert. denied, 510 U.S. 1039 (1994)
 United States v. Arnold, 993 F.2d 879 (3d Cir. 1993) (table), cert. denied, 510 U.S. 979 (1993)
 Resolution Trust Corp. v. Beck, 993 F.2d 878 (3d Cir. 1993) (table), cert. denied, 510 U.S. 865 (1993)
 United States v. Boozer, 993 F.2d 879 (3d Cir. 1993) (table), cert. denied, 510 U.S. 884 (1993)
 United States v. Heflin, 993 F.2d 879 (3d Cir. 1993) (table), cert. denied, 509 U.S. 911 (1993)
 Williams v. Lehigh Valley Carpenters Union, 993 F.2d 880 (3d Cir. 1993) (table), cert. denied, 510 U.S. 873 (1993)
 United States v. Vereb, 993 F.2d 880 (3d Cir. 1993) (table), cert. denied, 510 U.S. 870 (1993)
 Hunt v. Beyer, 993 F.2d 877 (3d Cir. 1993) (table), cert. denied, 510 U.S. 979 (1993)
 Plymouth Healthcare Sys. Inc. v. Keystone Health Plan E., Inc., 993 F.2d 878 (3d Cir. 1993) (table), cert. denied, 510 U.S. 863 (1993)
 United States v. Lincoln, 1993 U.S. App. LEXIS 11863 (3d Cir. 1993), cert. denied, 510 U.S. 863 (1993)
 United States v. Diamond, 993 F.2d 879 (3d Cir. 1993) (table), cert. denied, 509 U.S. 932 (1993)
 Legacy, Ltd. v. Channel Home Ctrs., 989 F.2d 682 (3d Cir. 1993), cert. denied, 510 U.S. 865 (1993)
 Dailey v. Nat'l Hockey League, 987 F.2d 172, 179-80 (3d Cir. 1993) (dissenting), cert. denied, 510 U.S. 816 (1993)
 Coca-Cola Bottling Co. v. Coca-Cola Co., 988 F.2d 414 (3d Cir. 1993), cert. denied, 510 U.S. 908 (1993)
 United States v. Chapple, 985 F.2d 729 (3d Cir. 1993), cert. denied, 508 U.S. 980 (1993)

Sullivan v. Love, 989 F.2d 489 (3d Cir. 1993), cert. denied, 510 U.S. 832 (1993)
 Johnson v. United States, 989 F.2d 489 (3d Cir. 1993) (table), cert. denied, 508 U.S. 980 (1993)
 United States v. Tantalo, 986 F.2d 1410 (3d Cir. 1993), cert. denied, 509 U.S. 908 (1993)
 Aliota v. Graham, 984 F.2d 1350 (3d Cir. 1993), cert. denied, 510 U.S. 817 (1993)
 Browne v. Maze, 986 F.2d 1408 (3d Cir. 1993) (table), cert. denied, 510 U.S. 840 (1993) Ramseur v. Beyer, 983 F.2d 1215, 1239-46 (3d Cir. 1993) (en banc) (concurring and joining the concurrence of Greenberg, J.), cert. denied, 508 U.S. 947 (1993)
 United States v. Dixon, 982 F.2d 116 (3d Cir. 1992), cert. denied, 508 U.S. 921 (1993)
 United States v. Beveridge, 983 F.2d 1052 (3d Cir. 1992) (table), cert. denied, 508 U.S. 975
 (1993)
 Pub. Interest Research Group, Inc. v. Magnesium Elektron, Inc., 983 F.2d 1052 (3d Cir. 1992)
 (table), cert. denied, 508 U.S. 946 (1993)
 Hickey v. Ballingall, 981 F.2d 1247 (3d Cir. 1992) (table), cert. denied, 508 U.S. 981 (1993)
 United States v. Frazier, 981 F.2d 92 (3d Cir. 1992) (table), cert. denied, 507 U.S. 1010 (1993)
 Rodolico v. Rauch, 981 F.2d 1248 (3d Cir. 1992) (table), cert. denied, 507 U.S. 1021 (1993)
 Gackebach v. Uniroyal, Inc., 980 F.2d 723 (3d Cir. 1992) (table), cert. denied, 507 U.S. 1019
 (1993)
 Int'l Raw Materials v. Stauffer Chem Co., 978 F.2d 1318 (3d Cir. 1992), cert. denied, 507 U.S.
 988 (1993)
 Guy v. Westmoreland County Sheriff's Dep't, 977 F.2d 568 (3d Cir. 1992) (table), cert. denied,
 507 U.S. 926 (1993)
 Kurz v. Mairone, 977 F.2d 568 (3d Cir. 1992) (table), cert. denied, 508 U.S. 912 (1993)
 ALM Corp. v. EPA, 974 F.2d 380 (3d Cir. 1992), cert. denied, 507 U.S. 972 (1993)
 Terry v. Petsock, 974 F.2d 372 (3d Cir. 1992), cert. denied, 507 U.S. 940 (1993)
 Sabb v. United States, 975 F.2d 1551 (3d Cir. 1992) (table), cert. denied, 506 U.S. 990 (1992)
 United States v. Stepoli, 975 F.2d 1552 (3d Cir. 1992) (table), cert. denied, 506 U.S. 1068
 (1993)
 Chauffeurs, Teamsters & Helpers Local 776 v. NLRB, 973 F.2d 230 (3d Cir. 1992), cert. denied,
 507 U.S. 959 (1993)
 In re Extradition of Duncan, 975 F.2d 1549 (3d Cir. 1992) (table), cert. denied, 506 U.S. 1066
 (1993)
 United States v. MacFarlane, 975 F.2d 1552 (3d Cir. 1992) (table), cert. denied, 506 U.S. 1062
 (1993)
 D.R. v. Middle Bucks Area Vocational Technical Sch., 972 F.2d 1364 (3d Cir. 1992) (en banc), cert. denied, 506 U.S. 1079 (1993)
 United States v. Wallace, 975 F.2d 1552 (3d Cir. 1992) (table), cert. denied, 506 U.S. 1027
 (1992)
 United States v. Polan, 970 F.2d 1280 (3d Cir. 1992), cert. denied, 507 U.S. 953 (1993)
 Williams v. United States, 972 F.2d 1335 (3d Cir. 1992) (table), cert. denied, 506 U.S. 894
 (1992)
 Nicholson v. Hawk, 972 F.2d 1332 (3d Cir. 1992) (table), cert. denied, 506 U.S. 1037 (1992)
 Barber v. Horsey, 972 F.2d 1330 (3d Cir. 1992) (table), cert. denied, 507 U.S. 916 (1993)
 Elkin v. Fauver, 969 F.2d 48 (3d Cir. 1992), cert. denied, 506 U.S. 977 (1992)
 United States v. Gray, 972 F.2d 1333 (3d Cir. 1992) (table), cert. denied, 506 U.S. 1057 (1993)
 United States v. Jones, 972 F.2d 1333 (3d Cir. 1992) (table), cert. denied, 506 U.S. 964 (1992)

1975 Salaried Ret. Plan for Eligible Employees of Crucible, Inc. v. Nobers, 968 F.2d 401 (3d Cir. 1992), cert. denied, 506 U.S. 1086 (1993)

Geschwendt v. Ryan, 967 F.2d 877 (3d Cir. 1992) (en banc), cert. denied, 506 U.S. 977 (1992)

Blair v. United States, 970 F.2d 900 (3d Cir. 1992) (table), cert. denied, 506 U.S. 1007 (1992)

United States v. Salandra, 968 F.2d 15 (3d Cir. 1992) (table), cert. denied, 506 U.S. 902 (1992)

Mazur v. Merck & Co., 964 F.2d 1348 (3d Cir. 1992), cert. denied, 506 U.S. 974 (1992)

United States v. Palmer, 968 F.2d 15 (3d Cir. 1992) (table), cert. denied, 506 U.S. 875 (1992)

United States v. Maker, 968 F.2d 15 (3d Cir. 1992) (table), cert. denied, 506 U.S. 900 (1992)

United States v. Morris, 968 F.2d 15 (3d Cir. 1992) (table), cert. denied, 506 U.S. 895 (1992)

United States v. Wilson, 968 F.2d 15 (3d Cir. 1992) (table), cert. denied, 506 U.S. 1006 (1992)

Tigg Corp. v. Dow Corning Corp., 962 F.2d 1119 (3d Cir. 1992), petition for cert. dismissed 506 U.S. 1042 (1993)

Mierzejewski v. Fauver, 961 F.2d 1568 (3d Cir. 1992) (table), cert. denied, 506 U.S. 889 (1992)

Festa v. New Jersey Bd. of Pub. Utils., 961 F.2d 1566 (3d Cir. 1992) (table), cert. denied, 506 U.S. 916 (1992)

Blake v. Kaplan, 961 F.2d 1566 (3d Cir. 1992) (table), cert. denied, 506 U.S. 869 (1992)

Niyogi v. Equibank, 961 F.2d 1568 (3d Cir. 1992) (table), cert. denied, 506 U.S. 1034 (1992)

Specter v. Garrett, 971 F.2d 936, 956-61 (3d Cir. 1992) (concurring and dissenting), vacated and remanded 506 U.S. 969 (1992) (vacating and remanding for further consideration in light of Franklin v. Massachusetts, 505 U.S. 788 (1992))

Town Sound & Custom Tops, Inc. v. Chrysler Motor Corp., 959 F.2d 468 (3d Cir. 1992) (en banc), cert. denied, 506 U.S. 868 (1992)

Rock v. Zimmerman, 959 F.2d 1237 (3d Cir. 1992) (en banc) (joining except as to Part III), cert. denied, 505 U.S. 1222 (1992)

Caldwell v. Tom Mistick & Sons, 961 F.2d 207 (3d Cir. 1992) (table), cert. denied, 506 U.S. 849 (1992)

Clarke v. DRX, Inc., 961 F.2d 207 (3d Cir. 1992) (table), cert. denied, 506 U.S. 872 (1992)

Impounded, 961 F.2d 209 (3d Cir. 1992) (table), cert. denied, 506 U.S. 998 (1992)

Reese v. Love, 958 F.2d 364 (3d Cir. 1992) (table), cert. denied, 505 U.S. 1224 (1992)

Prostko v. Rand, 958 F.2d 364 (3d Cir. 1992) (table), cert. denied, 506 U.S. 865 (1992)

Dunn v. Marco, 953 F.2d 1379 (3d Cir. 1992) (table), cert. denied, 506 U.S. 832 (1992)

Huffsmith v. Wyoming County Prison Bd. 953 F.2d 1380 (3d Cir. 1992) (table), motion denied 504 U.S. 907 (1992)

Bolden v. Se. Pa. Transp. Auth., 953 F.2d 807 (3d Cir. 1991) (en banc), cert. denied, 504 U.S. 943 (1992)

United States v. Bendetto, 952 F.2d 1394 (3d Cir. 1991) (table), cert. denied, 504 U.S. 929 (1992)

Gaydos v. Gaydos, 952 F.3d 1392 (3d Cir. 1991) (table), cert. denied, 505 U.S. 1225 (1992)

Williams v. Fauver, 952 F.2d 1395 (3d Cir. 1991) (table), cert. denied, 505 U.S. 1208 (1992)

Burkett v. Fulcomer, 951 F.2d 1431, 1449 (3d Cir. 1991) (dissenting), cert. denied, 505 U.S. 1229 (1992)

Urdenis v. Thermal Indus., Inc., 952 F.2d 1394 (3d Cir. 1991) (table), cert. denied, 504 U.S. 987 (1992)

United States v. Audinot, 952 F.2d 1394 (3d Cir. 1991) (table), cert. denied, 503 U.S. 995 (1992)

- Balsamo v. Mazurkiewicz, 952 F.2d 1391 (3d Cir. 1992) (table), cert. denied, 503 U.S. 993 (1992)
- Shriver v. GAF Corp., 950 F.2d 723 (3d Cir. 1991) (table), cert. denied, 503 U.S. 987 (1992)
- United States v. Anderson, 947 F.2d 937 (3d Cir. 1991) (table), cert. denied, 503 U.S. 923 (1992)
- United States v. McGeary, 947 F.2d 938 (3d Cir. 1991) (table), cert. denied, 504 U.S. 958 (1992)
- Planned Parenthood v. Casey, 947 F.2d 682, 719-27 (3d Cir. 1991) (concurring and dissenting), cert. granted 502 U.S. 1056, and rev'd in part 505 U.S. 833 (1992)
- Goos v. Comm'r, 947 F.2d 935 (3d Cir. 1991) (table), cert. denied, 503 U.S. 940 (1992)
- United States v. Netelkos, 947 F.2d 938 (3d Cir. 1991) (table), cert. denied, 503 U.S. 908 (1992)
- Kramer v. Thompson, 947 F.2d 666 (3d Cir. 1992) (table), cert. denied, 504 U.S. 940 (1992)
- United States v. Ferguson, 945 F.2d 396 (3d Cir. 1992) (table), cert. denied, 503 U.S. 946 (1992)
- Saleem v. 3-M Co., 1991 U.S. App. LEXIS 24536 (3d Cir. 1991), cert. denied, 502 U.S. 1124 (1992)
- Zilich v. Nichols, 945 F.2d 397 (3d Cir. 1991) (table), cert. denied, 502 U.S. 1063 (1992)
- United States v. Vereb, 944 F.2d 899 (3d Cir. 1992) (table), cert. denied, 502 U.S. 990 and 502 U.S. 992 (1991)
- Prinski v. Termar Nav. Co., 944 F.2d 898 (3d Cir. 1991) (table), cert. denied, 502 U.S. 1120 (1992)
- Eidukonis v. Se. Pa. Transp. Auth., 944 F.2d 896 (3d Cir. 1991) (table), cert. denied, 502 U.S. 1034 (1992)
- Temple Univ. v. White, 941 F.2d 201 (3d Cir. 1991), cert. denied, 502 U.S. 1032 (1992)
- United States v. Werme, 939 F.2d 108 (3d Cir. 1991), cert. denied, 502 U.S. 1092 (1992)
- Coombs v. Baldwin, 941 F.2d 1200 (3d Cir. 1991) (table), cert. denied, 502 U.S. 1077 (1992)
- United States v. DiLoreto, 941 F.2d 1203 (3d Cir. 1991) (table), cert. denied, 502 U.S. 973 (1991)
- Taylor v. Freeland & Kronz, 938 F.2d 420 (3d Cir. 1991), cert. granted 502 U.S. 976, and aff'd 503 U.S. 638 (1992)
- Osei-Afriyie v. Med. Coll., 937 F.2d 876 (3d Cir. 1991), motion denied 502 U.S. 979 (1991)
- United States v. Van Tassel, 937 F.2d 600 (3d Cir. 1991), cert. denied, 502 U.S. 1015 (1991)
- Colgan v. Fisher Scientific Co., 935 F.2d 1407 (3d Cir. 1991), cert. denied, 502 U.S. 941 (1991)
- United States v. Plair, 937 F.2d 600 (3d Cir. 1991) (table), cert. denied, 502 U.S. 949 (1991)
- Hodges v. Rafferty, 937 F.2d 597 (3d Cir. 1991), cert. denied, 502 U.S. 990 (1991)
- Purvin v. Bergens, 935 F.2d 1282 (3d Cir. 1991) (table), cert. denied, 502 U.S. 890 (3d Cir. 1991)
- United States v. Recalde, 935 F.2d 1283 (3d Cir. 1991) (table), cert. denied, 502 U.S. 893 (1991)
- United States v. Montilla-Davilla, 935 F.2d 1283 (3d Cir. 1991) (table), cert. denied, 502 U.S. 958 (1991)
- Inst. for Scientific Info., Inc. v. Gordon & Breach, Sci. Pub., Inc., 931 F.2d 1002 (3d Cir. 1991), cert. denied, 502 U.S. 909 (1991)
- United States v. Berkery, 932 F.2d 961 (3d Cir. 1991) (table), cert. denied, 502 U.S. 894 (1991)
- Ford Motor Co. v. Summit Motor Prods., Inc., 930 F.2d 277 (3d Cir. 1991), cert. denied, 502 U.S. 939 (1991)

United States v. Soberon, 929 F.2d 935 (3d Cir. 1991) cert. denied, 502 U.S. 818 (1991)
 United States v. Shoupe, 929 F.2d 116 (3d Cir. 1991), cert. denied, 502 U.S. 943 (1991)
 Matute v. Procoast Navigation, Ltd., 928 F.2d 627 (3d Cir. 1991), cert. denied, 502 U.S. 919 (1991)
 Harner v. Moore, 931 F.2d 50 (3d Cir. 1991) (table), cert. denied, 502 U.S. 819 (1991)
 United States v. Lytle, 931 F.2d 52 (3d Cir. 1991) (table), cert. denied, 501 U.S. 1211 (1991)
 Kehr Packages v. Fidelcor, Inc., 926 F.2d 1406, 1419-23 (3d Cir. 1991) (concurring and dissenting), cert. denied, 501 U.S. 1222 (1991)
 United States v. Thomas, 931 F.2d 52 (3d Cir. 1991) (table), cert. denied, 502 U.S. 840 (1991)
 Gridley v. Cleveland Pneumatic Co., 924 F.2d 1310 (3d Cir. 1991), cert. denied, 501 U.S. 1232 (1991)
 United States v. Barnes, 925 F.2d 420 (3d Cir. 1991) (table), cert. denied, 501 U.S. 1208 (1991)
 King v. Zimmerman, 925 F.2d 417 (3d Cir. 1991) (table), cert. denied, 502 U.S. 828 (1991)
 Bhaya v. Westinghouse Elec. Corp., 922 F.2d 184 (3d Cir. 1990), cert. denied, 501 U.S. 1217 (1991)
 Coleman v. Dunbarton Oaks Apts., 922 F.2d 830 (3d Cir. 1990) (table), cert. denied, 500 U.S. 923 (1991)
 United States v. Wright, 921 F.2d 42 (3d Cir. 1990), cert. denied, 501 U.S. 1207 (1991)
 Davis v. Beard, 922 F.2d 830 (3d Cir. 1990) (table), cert. denied, 500 U.S. 907 (1991)
 Auger v. Teneyck, 919 F.2d 730 (3d Cir. 1990) (table), cert. denied, 502 U.S. 809 (1991)
 Muhammad v. Newark Bd. of Educ., 919 F.2d 731 (3d Cir. 1990) (table), cert. denied, 499 U.S. 928 (1991)
 United States v. Snead, 919 F.2d 732 (3d Cir. 1990) (table), cert. denied, 499 U.S. 982 (1991)
 Morris v. Puleo, 919 F.2d 731 (3d Cir. 1990) (table), cert. denied, 499 U.S. 928 (1991)
 Estate of Ramos v. York, 919 F.2d 730 (3d Cir. 1990) (table), cert. denied, 501 U.S. 1235 (1991)
 United States v. Jacobs, 919 F.2d 10 (3d Cir. 1990), cert. denied, 499 U.S. 930 (1991)
 United States v. Azar, 919 F.2d 732 (3d Cir. 1990) (table), cert. denied, 499 U.S. 981 (1991)
 Thomas v. New Jersey, 919 F.2d 137 (3d Cir. 1990) (table), cert. denied, 499 U.S. 964 (1991)
 Harrison v. Beyer, 919 F.2d 135 (3d Cir. 1990) (table), cert. denied, 499 U.S. 980 (1991)
 United States v. Pierce, 919 F.2d 138 (3d Cir. 1990) (table), cert. denied, 498 U.S. 1108 (1991)
 Powell v. Owens, 919 F.2d 136 (3d Cir. 1990) (table), cert. denied, 498 U.S. 1096 (1991)
 Posey v. United States Army, 915 F.2d 1561 (3d Cir. 1990) (table), cert. denied, 498 U.S. 1122 (1991)
 Boyer v. Snap-On Tools, Corp., 913 F.2d 108 (3d Cir. 1990), cert. denied, 498 U.S. 1085 (1991)
 James v. Dropsie Coll., 914 F.2d 243 (3d Cir. 1990) (table), cert. denied, 499 U.S. 938 (1991)
 Dodson v. Pennsylvania, 914 F.2d 242 (3d Cir. 1990) (table), cert. denied, 498 U.S. 1071 (1991)
 United States v. Ramos, 914 F.2d 245 (3d Cir. 1990) (table), cert. denied, 498 U.S. 1035 (1991)
 Marshall v. Fulcomer, 914 F.2d 243 (3d Cir. 1990) (table), cert. denied, 498 U.S. 1035 (1991)
 United States v. Williard, 914 F.2d 245 (3d Cir. 1990) (table), cert. denied, 498 U.S. 989 (1990)
 Gauracino v. Sullivan, 908 F.2d 962 (3d Cir. 1990) (table), cert. denied, 498 U.S. 875 (1990)
 United States v. King, 908 F.2d 965 (3d Cir. 1990) (table), cert. denied, 498 U.S. 991 (1990)

d. a list of appellate opinions where your decision was reversed or where your judgment was affirmed”

- United States v. Rennert, 374 F.3d 206 (3d Cir. 2004), vacated and remanded 125 S.Ct. 1744 (2005) (vacating and remanding for further consideration in light of United States v. Booker, 125 S.Ct. 738 (2005))
- United States v. Jacobs, 96 Fed. Appx. 812 (3d Cir. 2004), vacated and remanded 125 S.Ct. 1009 (2005) (vacating and remanding for further consideration in light of United States v. Booker, 125 S.Ct. 738 (2005))
- United States v. Phyllian, 95 Fed. Appx. 430 (3d Cir. 2004), vacated and remanded 125 S.Ct. 1025 (2005) (vacating and remanding for further consideration in light of United States v. Booker, 125 S.Ct. 738 (2005))
- United States v. Wiggins, 94 Fed. Appx. 959 (3d Cir. 2004), vacated and remanded 125 S.Ct. 985 (2005) (vacating and remanding for further consideration in light of United States v. Booker, 125 S.Ct. 738 (2005))
- United States v. Morris, No. 04-3050 (Nov. 16, 2004) (unreported order), vacated and remanded 125 S.Ct. 1959 (2005) (vacating and remanding for further consideration in light of United States v. Booker, 125 S.Ct. 738 (2005)), and dismissed on remand 143 Fed. Appx. 505 (2005)
- United States v. Pagley, 94 Fed. Appx. 104 (3d Cir. 2004), vacated and remanded 125 S.Ct. 1030 (2005) (vacating and remanding for further consideration in light of United States v. Booker, 125 S.Ct. 738 (2005))
- United States v. Jacobs, 94 Fed. Appx. 893 (3d Cir. 2004), vacated and remanded 125 S.Ct. 1021 (2005) (vacating and remanding for further consideration in light of United States v. Booker, 125 S.Ct. 738 (2005))
- United States v. Jacobs, 93 Fed. Appx. 488 (3d Cir. 2004), vacated and remanded 125 S.Ct. 1007 (2005) (vacating and remanding for further consideration in light of United States v. Booker, 125 S.Ct. 738 (2005))
- United States v. Watson, 93 Fed. Appx. 481 (3d Cir. 2004), vacated and remanded 125 S.Ct. 1001 (2005) (vacating and remanding for further consideration in light of United States v. Booker, 125 S.Ct. 738 (2005))
- Rompilla v. Horn, 355 F.3d 233 (3d Cir. 2004), cert. granted, 542 U.S. 966, and rev'd 125 S.Ct. 2456 (2005)
- United States v. Phillips, 349 F.3d 138 (3d Cir. 2003), vacated and remanded 125 S.Ct. 992 (2005) (vacating and remanding for further consideration in light of United States v. Booker, 125 S.Ct. 738 (2005))
- Thomas v. Comm'r of Soc. Sec., 294 F.3d 568 (3d Cir. 2002), cert. granted, 537 U.S. 1187, and rev'd 540 U.S. 20 (2003)
- Aloe v. Energy Corp. v. Apfel, 225 F.3d 648 (3d Cir. 2000) (table), vacated and remanded 534 U.S. 1159 (2002) (vacating and remanding for further consideration in light of Barnhart v. Sigmon Coal Co., 534 U.S. 438 (2002))
- Coss v. Lackawanna County D.A., 204 F.3d 453 (3d Cir. 2000) (en banc), cert. granted, 531 U.S. 923 (2000), and rev'd 532 U.S. 394 (2001)
- Raquel v. Educ. Mgmt. Corp., 196 F.3d 171, 182-86 (3d Cir. 1999) (dissenting), vacated and remanded 531 U.S. 952 (2000)
- Fiore v. White, 149 F.3d 221 (3d Cir. 1998), cert. granted, 526 U.S. 1038, question certified 528 U.S. 23 (1999), certified question answered 562 Pa. 634 (2000), and rev'd 531 U.S. 225 (2001)

United States v. Palma-Ruedas, 121 F.3d 841, 859-865 (3d Cir. 1997) (concurring and dissenting), cert. granted, 524 U.S. 915, and rev'd 526 U.S. 275 (1999)

English v. Mentor Corp., 67 F.3d 477 (3d Cir. 1995), vacated and remanded 518 U.S. 1030 (vacating and remanding for further consideration in light of Medtronic, Inc. v. Lohr, 518 U.S. 470 (1996))

Homar v. Gilbert, 89 F.3d 1009, 1023-31 (3d Cir. 1995) (concurring and dissenting), cert. granted, 519 U.S. 1052, and rev'd 520 U.S. 924 (1997)

Resolution Trust Corp. v. Cityfed Fin. Corp., 57 F.3d 1231 (3d Cir. 1995), cert. granted, 517 U.S. 1133 (1996), and vacated and remanded 519 U.S. 213 (1997)

Robinson v. Aronio, 27 F.3d 877 (3d Cir. 1994), vacated and remanded 513 U.S. 1186 (1995) (vacating and remanding for further consideration in light of O'Neal v. McAninch, 513 U.S. 432 (1995))

Specter v. Garrett, 995 F.2d 404, 411-14 (3d Cir. 1993) (dissenting), cert. granted, 510 U.S. 930, and rev'd 511 U.S. 462 (1994)

Specter v. Garrett, 971 F.2d 936, 956-61 (3d Cir. 1992) (concurring and dissenting), vacated and remanded 506 U.S. 969 (1992) (vacating and remanding for further consideration in light of Frankin v. Massachusetts, 505 U.S. 788 (1992))

Planned Parenthood v. Casey, 947 F.2d 682, 719-27 (3d Cir. 1991) (concurring and dissenting), cert. granted, 502 U.S. 1056, and rev'd in part 505 U.S. 833 (1992)

Taylor v. Freeland & Kronz, 938 F.2d 420 (3d Cir. 1991), cert. granted, 502 U.S. 976, and aff'd 503 U.S. 638 (1992)

e. a list of and copies of all your unpublished opinions.

The clerk of the Third Circuit has provided me the following list of merits panels on which I sat that issued an unpublished or non-precedential opinion.

Reiser v. New Jersey Air Nat'l Guard (Oct. 28, 2005)	Williams v. Commissioner of Social Security (Oct. 20, 2005)
Chen v. Attorney General of the United States (Oct. 28, 2005)	Arboleda v. Attorney General of the United States (Oct. 19, 2005)
American Postal Workers v. NLRB (Oct. 27, 2005)	United States v. Cummings (Oct. 19, 2005)
Zappan v. Pennsylvania Board of Probation and Parole (Oct. 26, 2005)	Giangrante v. Varallo (Oct. 19, 2005)
Roadmaster (USA) v. Calmodal Freight Sys (Oct. 26, 2005)	Chhibba v. Federal Bureau of Prisons (Oct. 19, 2005)
Terrell v. Hawk (Oct. 26, 2005)	Chen v. Attorney General of the United States (Oct. 18, 2005)
Thomas v. Williamson (Oct. 25, 2005)	Arena v. McShane (Oct. 14, 2005)
United States v. Arlett (Oct. 24, 2005)	Singh v. Attorney General of the United States (Oct. 13, 2005)
United States v. Speckmann (Oct. 21, 2005)	Wilderman v. Cooper & Scully PC (Oct. 13, 2005)
Hassan v. Attorney General of the United States (Oct. 21, 2005)	EEOC v. Avecia, Inc. (Oct. 13, 2005)
Wortham v. Karstadtquelle AG (Oct. 20, 2005)	Ford v. BICE (Oct. 13, 2005)
	Lyles v. Phila Gas Works (Oct. 13, 2005)

- Luis-Feliz v. Attorney General of the United States* (Oct. 12, 2005)
- Beam v. Downey* (Oct. 12, 2005)
- Vargas v. Attorney General of the United States* (Oct. 12, 2005)
- Mason v. Kyler* (Oct. 11, 2005)
- Falzett v. Pocono Mountain Sch. Dist.* (Oct. 11, 2005)
- Carrasquillo v. Commissioner of Social Security* (Oct. 11, 2005)
- McGonigal v. Commissioner of Social Security* (Oct. 11, 2005)
- Conerly v. Yates* (Oct. 11, 2005)
- Hannah v. City of Dover* (Oct. 11, 2005)
- United States v. Matthews* (Oct. 6, 2005)
- Shoukat v. Attorney General of the United States* (Oct. 3, 2005)
- Ignatov v. Attorney General of the United States* (Sep. 30, 2005)
- Thomas v. Leach* (Sep. 28, 2005)
- Allen v. Ripoll* (Sep. 26, 2005)
- Allen v. Ripoll* (Sep. 26, 2005)
- United States v. Morris* (Sep. 23, 2005)
- Maydak v. United States Department of Education* (Sep. 21, 2005)
- Richards v. Attorney General of the United States* (Sep. 21, 2005)
- Hattman v. Commissioner IRS* (Sep. 21, 2005)
- Hudson v. Coxon* (Sep. 21, 2005)
- Richards v. Attorney General of the United States* (Sep. 21, 2005)
- United States v. Kenny* (Sep. 19, 2005)
- Saunders-El v. United States* (Sep. 19, 2005)
- Romansky v. Stickman* (Sep. 19, 2005)
- Gallup, Inc. v. Kenexa Corp.* (Sep. 19, 2005)
- Saunders-El v. USA* (Sep. 19, 2005)
- Sichel v. Lappin* (Sep. 16, 2005)
- Miller v. Federal Bureau of Prisons* (Sep. 16, 2005)
- Attoh-Mensah v. Attorney General of the United States* (Sep. 14, 2005)
- Attoh-Mensah v. Attorney General of the United States* (Sep. 14, 2005)
- Rotshteyn v. Agnati* (Sep. 13, 2005)
- Jacobs v. Pennsylvania Dep't of Corrections* (Sep. 6, 2005)
- United States v. Sanchez-Sanchez* (Sep. 6, 2005)
- Thibeau v. Apker* (Sep. 6, 2005)
- Brody v. Hankin* (Aug. 29, 2005)
- United States v. Torres* (Aug. 12, 2005)
- Chandra v. Attorney General of the United States* (Aug. 11, 2005)
- Mkanyaia v. Attorney General of the United States* (Aug. 10, 2005)
- Spinelli v. Costco Wholesale, Inc.* (Aug. 10, 2005)
- United States v. Santos* (Aug. 10, 2005)
- United States v. Santos* (Aug. 10, 2005)
- Mohabir v. Attorney General of the United States* (Aug. 9, 2005)
- Wolfe v. Frank* (Aug. 8, 2005)
- United States v. Arellano* (Aug. 5, 2005)
- Vogin v. Nicosia* (Aug. 5, 2005)
- Kong v. Attorney General of the United States* (Aug. 4, 2005)
- In re Abdul-Malik* (Aug. 4, 2005)
- Shultz v. Potter* (Aug. 4, 2005)
- Bartlebaugh v. Corcoran* (Aug. 4, 2005)
- Herrera v. Williamson* (Aug. 4, 2005)
- Johnson v. Apker* (Aug. 4, 2005)
- DeBiasse v. Chevy Chase Bank Corp.* (Aug. 4, 2005)
- In re Davis v.* (Aug. 3, 2005)
- Commonwealth Capital Corp. v. Getronics, Inc.* (Aug. 3, 2005)
- Strope v. Warden, FCI Schuylkill* (Aug. 3, 2005)
- Solomon v. Philadelphia Housing Auth.* (Aug. 2, 2005)
- National Grange Mutual Ins. Co. v. Goldstein, Heslop, Steel, Clapper, Oswald & Stoehr* (Aug. 2, 2005)
- Alexander v. Gennarini* (Aug. 2, 2005)
- Hill v. True* (Aug. 2, 2005)
- Hazel v. Smith* (Aug. 2, 2005)
- Shelley v. Sprowls* (Aug. 2, 2005)
- In re Timothy Hale v.* (Aug. 2, 2005)
- Farah v. Attorney General of the United States* (Aug. 1, 2005)
- Ash v. Redevelopment Auth. of Philadelphia* (Aug. 1, 2005)

Maria C. v. School Dist. of Philadelphia (July 29, 2005)
Maria C. v. School Dist. of Philadelphia (July 29, 2005)
Dambrosio v. Comcast Corp. (July 29, 2005)
Covone v. Commissioner of Social Security (July 29, 2005)
United States v. Nesgoda (July 28, 2005)
Taylor v. Philadelphia (July 28, 2005)
Siswanto v. Attorney General of the United States (July 28, 2005)
Kreider Dairy Farms v. Secretary of Agriculture (July 28, 2005)
United States v. Stevens (July 27, 2005)
Dubois v. Abode (July 27, 2005)
Hess v. Kunkle (July 26, 2005)
United States v. Bronson (July 25, 2005)
Spaho v. Attorney General of the United States (July 22, 2005)
Doherty v. Teamsters Pension Trust Fund of Philadelphia and Vicinity (July 22, 2005)
United States v. Rose (July 21, 2005)
United States v. Quattrone (July 21, 2005)
United States v. Johns (July 21, 2005)
United States v. Hale (July 21, 2005)
Brunner v. Commissioner, IRS (July 21, 2005)
Magdalena v. Attorney General of the United States (July 20, 2005)
United States v. Brame (July 20, 2005)
Liong v. Attorney General of the United States (July 20, 2005)
United States v. Irvin (July 20, 2005)
United States v. Waltman (July 20, 2005)
Li v. Attorney General of the United States (July 19, 2005)
United States v. Lewis (July 19, 2005)
Hidayat v. Attorney General of the United States (July 18, 2005)
Straining v. AT&T Wireless Sers., Inc. (July 18, 2005)
Lin v. Attorney General of the United States (July 15, 2005)
United States v. Peterson (July 14, 2005)
United States v. Leak (July 14, 2005)
United States v. Buie (July 14, 2005)
United States v. Morgan (July 13, 2005)
Kelley v. Commissioner of Social Security (July 13, 2005)
Russell v. Pugh (July 12, 2005)
Russell v. Pugh (July 12, 2005)
Li v. Attorney General of the United States (July 12, 2005)
United States v. Horsey (July 12, 2005)
In re Georges (July 8, 2005)
United States v. Maydak (July 1, 2005)
Oriakhi v. United States (July 1, 2005)
Nye v. Federal Bureau of Prisons (June 30, 2005)
Burnside v. Moser (June 30, 2005)
In re Mendez (June 30, 2005)
Nelson v. Horn (June 29, 2005)
United States v. Walker (June 29, 2005)
Perez v. Warden McKean FCI (June 29, 2005)
Boatner v. Hinds (June 29, 2005)
McEachin v. Beard (June 28, 2005)
United States v. Jimenez-Calderon (June 27, 2005)
Wrench Trans. Serv. v. Bradley (June 27, 2005)
Viggiano v. New Jersey (June 23, 2005)
Jones v. Falor (June 23, 2005)
In re Jimenez v. (June 23, 2005)
Thomas v. Fetzko (June 21, 2005)
Rosal-Olavarrieta v. Attorney General of the United States (June 20, 2005)
McLaughlin v. Atlantic City (June 20, 2005)
United States v. Guzman (June 15, 2005)
Verbejus v. Attorney General of the United States (June 15, 2005)
Hartford Ins. Midwest v. Green (June 15, 2005)
In re Georges (June 15, 2005)
Longport Ocean Plaza v. Robert Cato Assoc. (June 14, 2005)
Liu v. Oriental Buffet Inc. (June 14, 2005)
Chernavsky v. Holmdel Township Police Dep't (June 14, 2005)
Mitchell v. Obenski (June 14, 2005)
Gueson v. Sheppard (June 10, 2005)
Span v. Flaherty (June 10, 2005)
Mati v. Attorney General of the United States (June 10, 2005)

- McDaniels v. Commissioner of Social Security* (June 10, 2005)
Lin v. Attorney General of the United States (June 9, 2005)
Owens-El v. Pittsburgh (June 8, 2005)
Edwards v. Wyatt (June 8, 2005)
Richardson v. Commissioner of Social Security (June 8, 2005)
Yang v. Attorney General of the United States (June 8, 2005)
Ruiz v. Attorney General of the United States (June 7, 2005)
Nationwide Mutual Fire v. Quinn (June 7, 2005)
Gunawan v. Attorney General of the United States (June 7, 2005)
Oroh v. Attorney General of the United States (June 7, 2005)
United States v. Ramos (June 6, 2005)
United States v. Wilder (June 6, 2005)
United States v. De La Cruz (June 6, 2005)
United States v. Santana (June 6, 2005)
Dontas v. Holt (June 6, 2005)
Stokes v. Vaughn (June 3, 2005)
Ulbin v. Director OWCP (June 3, 2005)
Beddini v. Dilts (June 3, 2005)
United States v. Leonor (June 2, 2005)
Perry v. Commissioner of Social Security (May 31, 2005)
United States v. Williams (May 26, 2005)
United States v. Barbour (May 25, 2005)
United States v. Gallashaw (May 25, 2005)
Keller v. Fortis Benefits Ins. (May 24, 2005)
Keller v. Fortis Benefits Ins. (May 24, 2005)
Henry v. Dep't of Corrections (May 19, 2005)
Jones v. USA (May 17, 2005)
United States v. Fishman (May 17, 2005)
EEOC v. Muhlenberg College (May 17, 2005)
Fei v. Attorney General of the United States (May 16, 2005)
Constr Drilling Inc. v. Chusid (May 11, 2005)
United States v. Wright (May 11, 2005)
Rucci v. Cranberry (May 11, 2005)
United States v. Byock (May 11, 2005)
United States v. Ginesi (May 10, 2005)
Johnson v. Knorr (May 10, 2005)
Holston v. Subers (May 10, 2005)
Gordon v. Morton (May 10, 2005)
Cambria County Children & Youth Services v. Lucas (May 9, 2005)
Jetter v. Beard (May 5, 2005)
Garland v. Taylor (May 5, 2005)
Acharya v. Attorney General of the United States (May 5, 2005)
Bastista v. United States Dep't of Justice (May 4, 2005)
United States v. McCarty (May 2, 2005)
Goldstein v. Associates in Gastroenterology of Pittsburgh Amended and Restated Plan (Apr. 29, 2005)
In Re: PHP Healthcare (Apr. 28, 2005)
Dodaj v. Attorney General of the United States (Apr. 27, 2005)
United States v. Stewart (Apr. 27, 2005)
Zhang v. Attorney General of the United States (Apr. 27, 2005)
United States v. Vitiello (Apr. 26, 2005)
United States v. Cunningham (Apr. 25, 2005)
Lynch v. Vineland Bd. of Educ. (Apr. 25, 2005)
Parsons Energy & Chemicals Group, Inc. v. Williams Union Boiler (Apr. 25, 2005)
Brown v. Daniels (Apr. 25, 2005)
United States v. Romero (Apr. 21, 2005)
United States v. Guzman (Apr. 21, 2005)
United States v. Childs (Apr. 19, 2005)
Setiawan v. Attorney General of the United States (Apr. 19, 2005)
C.M. v. Board of Educ. of Union County Regional High School Dist. (Apr. 19, 2005)
Henry v. Apker (Apr. 19, 2005)
United States v. Ramirez-Elias (Apr. 18, 2005)
United States v. Ramirez-Meza (Apr. 18, 2005)
Awaadeh v. Attorney General of the United States (Apr. 18, 2005)
Wimberly v. Commissioner of Social Security (Apr. 18, 2005)
Kaci v. Attorney General of the United States (Apr. 15, 2005)
Wellness Publishing v. Barefoot (Apr. 14, 2005)

- United States v. Parker* (Apr. 14, 2005)
Lin v. Attorney General of the United States
 (Apr. 14, 2005)
United States v. Jones (Apr. 13, 2005)
Allen v. York (Apr. 13, 2005)
United States v. Garcia-Torres (Apr. 12, 2005)
D'Angelo v. ADS Machinery Corp. (Apr. 12, 2005)
Santiago v. Commissioner of Social Security
 (Apr. 12, 2005)
Jakubowski v. Commissioner of Social Security (Apr. 12, 2005)
United States v. Ayinde (Apr. 7, 2005)
United States v. Paz (Apr. 7, 2005)
United States v. Paz (Apr. 7, 2005)
Breslin v. Brainard (Apr. 7, 2005)
Chen v. Attorney General of the United States
 (Apr. 7, 2005)
Jones v. Blaine (Apr. 7, 2005)
Blakeney v. Dauphin (Apr. 7, 2005)
Bender v. Bur Prisons (Apr. 7, 2005)
Larosiliere v. Moore (Apr. 6, 2005)
Buddington v. Commissioner of Social Security (Apr. 6, 2005)
United States v. Thomas (Apr. 5, 2005)
United States v. Grieser (Apr. 5, 2005)
Tisoit v. Commissioner of Social Security
 (Apr. 4, 2005)
United States v. Dugan (Apr. 1, 2005)
United States v. Smith (Mar. 29, 2005)
Pranvoku v. Attorney General of the United States (Mar. 29, 2005)
Lowe v. Loud Records (Mar. 23, 2005)
Sonecha v. New England Life Ins. Co. (Mar.
 23, 2005)
In re Willy Farah (Mar. 22, 2005)
United States v. Ajaegbu (Mar. 22, 2005)
United States v. Griggs (Mar. 18, 2005)
Moon v. Varner (Mar. 18, 2005)
Crews v. Bitner (Mar. 17, 2005)
United States v. Lloyd (Mar. 17, 2005)
Nouri v. Pennsylvania State University (Mar.
 17, 2005)
Miller v. Brasili (Mar. 17, 2005)
Miguel v. Commissioner of Social Security
 (Mar. 16, 2005)
NLRB v. Pro-Spec Painting (Mar. 16, 2005)
Chiang v. Attorney General of the United States (Mar. 14, 2005)
Fields v. Kobielski (Mar. 14, 2005)
Rechko v. Woodbridge (Mar. 14, 2005)
United States v. Mitchell (Mar. 11, 2005)
In re Alghny Health (Mar. 11, 2005)
Maddox v. Transp Freight Ser (Mar. 11, 2005)
Pupo-Carrera v. Lamanna (Mar. 11, 2005)
Molina v. Chairman, United States Parole
Commission (Mar. 11, 2005)
United States v. Currie (Mar. 10, 2005)
In re Najieb (Mar. 10, 2005)
United Fed. Leasing v. United States (Mar. 10, 2005)
Voicenet Comm. Inc. v. Attorney General of Pennsylvania (Mar. 9, 2005)
Singh v. Attorney General of the United States
 (Mar. 9, 2005)
Voicenet Comm Inc. v. Attorney General of
Pennsylvania (Mar. 9, 2005)
Jones v. Leavitt (Mar. 9, 2005)
In re David Dickson (Mar. 8, 2005)
United States v. Paz (Mar. 8, 2005)
Audian v. BICE (Mar. 8, 2005)
United States v. Paz (Mar. 8, 2005)
Lawrence v. O'Neil Buick Inc. (Mar. 8, 2005)
Washington v. Donegan (Mar. 8, 2005)
Lolita v. Attorney General of the United States
 (Mar. 7, 2005)
Arrow Drilling Co. v. Carpenter (Mar. 3, 2005)
Midgette v. Wal Mart Stores Inc. (Mar. 3, 2005)
Amer Hardware Mutual v. Harley Davidson
Mtr (Feb. 22, 2005)
Kohls Dep't Stores v. LevCo. Route 46 Assoc
 (Feb. 18, 2005)
Salas v. Attorney General of the United States
 (Feb. 17, 2005)
Bazzone v. Nationwide Mutual Ins. Co. (Feb.
 15, 2005)
Still v. Regulus Grp LLC (Feb. 15, 2005)
Cole v. USA (Feb. 15, 2005)

Suherman v. Attorney General of the United States (Feb. 3, 2005)
In re Hilley (Feb. 3, 2005)
Carr v. Elizabeth (Feb. 2, 2005)
Adam Tech Inc. v. Hewlett Packard Co. (Feb. 2, 2005)
Dunsmuir v. May Dep't Stores Co. (Feb. 1, 2005)
Khudyakov v. Attorney General of the United States (Jan. 31, 2005)
Newell v. Commissioner of Social Security (Jan. 25, 2005)
Merit v. SEPTA (Jan. 25, 2005)
Diaab v. Rhodes (Jan. 21, 2005)
Singh v. Attorney General of the United States (Jan. 20, 2005)
Mackay v. United States Dep't Labor (Jan. 20, 2005)
Geiser-Cameron v. United States (Jan. 20, 2005)
Miller v. Warden (Jan. 20, 2005)
McClellan v. Pennsylvania (Jan. 19, 2005)
United States v. Neidig (Jan. 19, 2005)
Jackson v. Baddick (Jan. 19, 2005)
Shakoor v. Peters (Jan. 14, 2005)
Sylvester v. Newark (Jan. 14, 2005)
Sides v. Goodman (Jan. 14, 2005)
Bonham v. Edgewater Psych. Ctr. (Jan. 14, 2005)
Shakoor v. Peters (Jan. 13, 2005)
Kaba v. Secretary of Homeland Security (Jan. 12, 2005)
Nicholson v. Snyder (Jan. 11, 2005)
Foley v. Coughlin (Jan. 4, 2005)
United States v. Summers (Jan. 4, 2005)
United States v. Moya (Jan. 3, 2005)
Elder v. NJ Transit Corp. (Dec. 29, 2004)
Booth v. Loreno (Dec. 28, 2004)
Steinmetz v. Alleghany Gen. Hosp. (Dec. 28, 2004)
Calcano-Castillo v. Attorney General of the United States (Dec. 28, 2004)
NLRB v. Cray Constr. Group (Dec. 23, 2004)
Tucker v. Main (Dec. 20, 2004)
McDivitt v. Blackwood (Dec. 20, 2004)
In re SEPTA (Dec. 20, 2004)
In re Paul Lee (Dec. 17, 2004)
Fliegler v. Commissioner of Social Security (Dec. 16, 2004)
Howard Johnson Int'l v. Cupola Entr LLC (Dec. 15, 2004)
Barber v. University Medicine (Dec. 15, 2004)
Smith v. Pennsylvania (Dec. 14, 2004)
Renart v. Chartwells (Dec. 13, 2004)
Terminello v. City of Passaic (Dec. 13, 2004)
Garcia v. Warden, Lebanon Cty (Dec. 13, 2004)
Sontag v. Pennsylvania (Dec. 13, 2004)
Pristas v. Pristas (Dec. 13, 2004)
La v. Hayducka (Dec. 7, 2004)
United States v. Landry (Dec. 6, 2004)
In re G-I Holdings (Dec. 6, 2004)
Hollis v. Commissioner of Social Security (Dec. 3, 2004)
Crosby v. Attorney General of the United States (Dec. 2, 2004)
Scarnati v. Vanliner Ins. Co. (Nov. 30, 2004)
Lamanna v. Commissioner of Social Security (Nov. 24, 2004)
Jones v. Schierck (Nov. 23, 2004)
In re Todd Koger (Nov. 23, 2004)
Buggs v. Meyers (Nov. 22, 2004)
Elliott v. Carnuchie (Nov. 22, 2004)
Walker v. Sussex Cty Probation (Nov. 22, 2004)
Walker v. Dist Ct DE (Nov. 22, 2004)
Walker v. First Corr. Med Inc. (Nov. 22, 2004)
Tyson v. Martin (Nov. 19, 2004)
Todd v. Benning (Nov. 19, 2004)
McClain v. Horn (Nov. 17, 2004)
Minor v. John (Nov. 17, 2004)
Chatman v. USA (Nov. 16, 2004)
Wolbert v. Horn (Nov. 9, 2004)
Ogden v. Stepanik (Nov. 2, 2004)
Ellis v. 88 Transit Lines Inc. (Oct. 29, 2004)
Marriot v. Attorney General of the United States (Oct. 29, 2004)
Porter v. Cancelmi (Oct. 29, 2004)
Petrillo v. New Comm Corp. (Oct. 29, 2004)
Rodenbaugh v. Augello (Oct. 29, 2004)
Floyd v. Dugal (Oct. 28, 2004)

Gibson v. Brennan (Oct. 6, 2004)
Sheng v. Attorney General of the United States
(Oct. 6, 2004)
Barron v. Barbo (Oct. 5, 2004)
Safko v. Director OWCP (Oct. 5, 2004)
Peters v. BICE (Oct. 5, 2004)
United States v. Sierra (Sep. 30, 2004)
Askari v. Attorney General of the United States (Sep. 30, 2004)
Boll v. Safe Harbor Marina Ltd. (Sep. 30, 2004) Bacone v. Philadelphia Housing Auth. (Sep.
30, 2004)
Valdivia v. Attorney General of the United States (Sep. 30, 2004)
Nachtsheim v. Cont Airlines (Sep. 30, 2004)
United States v. Gonzalez (Sep. 30, 2004)
United States v. Clark (Sep. 30, 2004)
United States v. Miller (Sep. 30, 2004)
Szusterman v. Amoco Oil Co. (Sep. 30, 2004)
Valdivia v. Attorney General of the United States (Sep. 30, 2004)
Allstate Ins. Co. v. Drumheller (Sep. 30, 2004)
Askari v. Attorney General of the United States (Sep. 30, 2004)
United States v. Cunningham (Sep. 30, 2004)
Douglas v. Kimberly-Clark Corp. (Sep. 30, 2004)
United States v. O'Connell (Sep. 30, 2004)
Camara v. Attorney General of the United States (Sep. 30, 2004)
Garbacik v. Janson (Sep. 29, 2004)
Corey H. v. Cape Henlopen Sch. Dist. (Sep.
29, 2004)
Malak v. Attorney General of the United States (Sep. 24, 2004)
United States v. Larwa (Sep. 24, 2004)
United States v. Reynoso (Sep. 24, 2004)
Malak v. Attorney General of the United States (Sep. 24, 2004)
United States v. Johnson (Sep. 23, 2004)
D.T.B. v. Advisory Comm. On Judicial Conduct (Sep. 14, 2004)
O'Callaghan v. Farmer (Sep. 14, 2004)
Woods v. Beard (Sep. 14, 2004)

Pedraza v. Attorney General of the United States (Sep. 14, 2004)
United States v. Gibbs (Aug. 30, 2004)
Smith v. Vaughn (Aug. 27, 2004)
Singh v. Attorney General of the United States
(Aug. 27, 2004)
Caldwell v. Brubach (Aug. 25, 2004)
Ward v. Def Logistics Agcy (Aug. 24, 2004)
United States v. Pepsny (Aug. 23, 2004)
United States v. Difeo (Aug. 23, 2004)
Ayers v. Higinis. (Aug. 18, 2004)
Scherzer v. Ortiz (Aug. 18, 2004)
Archer v. Rizzo (Aug. 18, 2004)
Malmros v. Jones (Aug. 18, 2004)
NLRB v. Bookbinders (Aug. 10, 2004)
Goguadze v. Attorney General of the United States (Aug. 5, 2004)
Lima-Gonzalez v. Attorney General of the United States (Aug. 2, 2004)
Snyder v. Fisher (July 29, 2004)
Sidibeh v. Attorney General of the United States (July 28, 2004)
Bien-Aime v. Attorney General of the United States (July 28, 2004)
Sookhoo v. Becton Dickinson Co. (July 28, 2004)
Prevet v. Blaine (July 28, 2004)
Sinclair v. Commissioner of Social Security
(July 26, 2004)
Rodriguez v. Commissioner of Social Security
(July 26, 2004)
Catanzaro v. Lackawanna (July 21, 2004)
Maiorano v. Commissioner of Social Security
(July 21, 2004)
Catanzaro v. Lackawanna (July 21, 2004)
In re Armstrong (July 20, 2004)
Botts v. NY Times Co. (July 20, 2004)
Uzuegbunam v. United States (July 20, 2004)
Yang v. Attorney General of the United States
(July 16, 2004)
Roberts v. Puff Discount Tobacco (July 16, 2004)
Zheng v. Attorney General of the United States (July 16, 2004)
United States v. Bost (July 16, 2004)
Ortiz-Gutierrez v. INS (July 15, 2004)

- Williams v. Pugh* (July 15, 2004)
Phillips v. DaimlerChrysler Corp. (July 15, 2004)
Nasr v. Attorney General of the United States (July 1, 2004)
United States v. Orlando (July 1, 2004)
Nelson v. Commissioner of Social Security (June 28, 2004)
Musa v. Ashcroft (June 25, 2004)
Thimou v. Commissioner of Social Security (June 22, 2004)
NLRB v. Safe Disposal Sys (June 17, 2004)
Polini v. Lucent Tech Inc. (June 10, 2004)
Allan v. Attorney General of the United States (June 9, 2004)
Staples Inc. v. Wausau Underwriters Ins. Co. (June 3, 2004)
Corley v. Pelter (June 3, 2004)
NLRB v. Bookbinders (May 28, 2004)
Oliver v. Stidd (May 26, 2004)
United States v. McKoy (May 25, 2004)
Jones v. Pennsylvania Dep't of Corrections (May 24, 2004)
Williams v. Warden, FCI Loretto (May 24, 2004)
Edwards v. Department of Homeland Security (May 24, 2004)
Camden Fire Ins. Assoc. v. KML Sales (May 19, 2004)
T.W. v. Sch Dist Philadelphia (May 18, 2004)
Frederick v. Kyler (May 12, 2004)
Smiriglio v. Hudson United Bank (May 11, 2004)
In re Martins. (May 5, 2004)
Jordan v. Stanziola (May 4, 2004)
NLRB v. Morrone (Apr. 30, 2004)
United States v. Hoffner (Apr. 29, 2004)
Washington v. Klem (Apr. 29, 2004)
Beecher v. Nash (Apr. 29, 2004)
United States v. Hoffner (Apr. 28, 2004)
Murray v. Maple Creek Mining (Apr. 28, 2004)
United States v. Maydak (Apr. 28, 2004)
Askew v. Ridge (Apr. 28, 2004)
Branch v. Dodrill (Apr. 28, 2004)
In Re: Wagner (Apr. 28, 2004)
Brobst v. Comm'r of Soc. Sec. (Apr. 27, 2004)
United States v. Clark (Apr. 26, 2004)
Kelley v. Wegmans Food Mkt. (Apr. 26, 2004)
McChesney v. Comm'r of Soc. Sec. (Apr. 26, 2004)
United States v. Jacobs (Apr. 23, 2004)
United States v. Mosley (Apr. 23, 2004)
Wang v. Attorney General of the United States (Apr. 23, 2004)
Lark v. Paul (Apr. 23, 2004)
United States v. Phyllian (Apr. 22, 2004)
Lewis v. Wolfe (Apr. 22, 2004)
Moriarty v. Bradford Cty (Apr. 22, 2004)
Nireh v. Immigration and Naturalization Serv. (Apr. 22, 2004)
Holder v. Gallagher (Apr. 21, 2004)
Dailey v. Whirlow (Apr. 21, 2004)
In Re: Alton Brown (Apr. 21, 2004)
United States v. Johnson (Apr. 20, 2004)
United States v. Wiggins (Apr. 20, 2004)
United States v. Worrells (Apr. 19, 2004)
United States v. Katzin (Apr. 19, 2004)
Chen v. Attorney General of the United States (Apr. 19, 2004)
United States v. Worrells (Apr. 19, 2004)
Adams v. Rosemeyer (Apr. 16, 2004)
Leach v. Comm'r of Soc. Sec. (Apr. 16, 2004)
Tahiraj-Datui v. Attorney General of the United States (Apr. 15, 2004)
Ou v. Attorney General of the United States (Apr. 15, 2004)
Cardona v. Comm'r of Soc. Sec. (Apr. 15, 2004)
United States v. Pagley (Apr. 14, 2004)
Schmidt v. Comm'r of Soc. Sec. (Apr. 14, 2004)
United States v. Rodgers (Apr. 14, 2004)
Corneal v. Jackson (Apr. 13, 2004)
United States v. Taylor (Apr. 9, 2004)
United States v. Mora-Zapata (Apr. 8, 2004)
In Re: D'Amario (Apr. 8, 2004)
United States v. Watson (Apr. 7, 2004)
United States v. Jacobs (Apr. 7, 2004)
United States v. Scott (Apr. 7, 2004)
Trimi v. Attorney General of the United States (Apr. 7, 2004)

- United States v. Boglin* (Apr. 6, 2004)
Reed v. Commonwealth of Pennsylvania (Apr. 2, 2004)
Pagniellio v. Sentry Ins. (Mar. 25, 2004)
Jarmuth v. Frinzi (Mar. 24, 2004)
Alexis v. Int'l Harvester Inc. (Mar. 24, 2004)
Breiner v. Litwhiler (Mar. 23, 2004)
Tjandra v. Attorney General of the United States (Mar. 22, 2004)
Jones v. Toyota Motor Sales USA (Mar. 22, 2004)
United States v. Williams (Mar. 19, 2004)
Ruiz v. Beard (Mar. 19, 2004)
Headley v. Immigration and Naturalization Serv. (Mar. 19, 2004)
Williams v. Hilton Group PLC (Mar. 17, 2004)
DeWyer v. Temple Univ. (Mar. 15, 2004)
Wills v. Minora (Mar. 12, 2004)
Landau v. Vastine-Smith (Mar. 11, 2004)
Singh v. Attorney General of the United States (Mar. 11, 2004)
Ernst v. Barr (Mar. 10, 2004)
McCrae v. KLLM, Inc. (Mar. 9, 2004)
DuPree v. State of Delaware (Mar. 9, 2004)
Pendleton v. Dodrill (Mar. 5, 2004)
United States v. Terry (Mar. 4, 2004)
Rivera v. Sobina (Mar. 3, 2004)
Garcia v. Workers Comp. Appeals Bd. (Mar. 3, 2004)
Mei v. Attorney General of the United States (Mar. 2, 2004)
Jung v. Attorney General of the United States (Mar. 2, 2004)
McDaniels v. SCI Albion (Mar. 2, 2004)
Ahmed v. Attorney General of the United States (Mar. 1, 2004)
Henglein v. Colt Indus. Operating Plan (Feb. 26, 2004)
Rill v. Meyers (Feb. 20, 2004)
Marwood v. Elizabeth Forward (Feb. 19, 2004)
Singletary v. Blaine (Feb. 18, 2004)
Li v. Attorney General of the United States (Feb. 17, 2004)
Martinez v. Sudduth (Feb. 17, 2004)
- United States v. Santo* (Feb. 13, 2004)
SCM Group United States v. Custom Designs & Mfg. Co. (Feb. 13, 2004)
Delcarpio v. Abode (Feb. 11, 2004)
Jones v. Commissioner of Social Security (Feb. 10, 2004)
Marwood v. Elizabeth Forward (Feb. 5, 2004)
Allstate Ins. Co. v. Neary (Feb. 4, 2004)
Jimenez-Mora v. Attorney General of the United States (Feb. 3, 2004)
Robinson v. R.R. Ret. Bd. (Feb. 3, 2004)
United States v. Johnson (Feb. 3, 2004)
Berry v. Klem (Jan. 30, 2004)
A. H. Meyers & Co. v. CNA Ins. Co. (Jan. 29, 2004)
Collins v. Sload (Jan. 28, 2004)
Chiou v. Zima (Jan. 28, 2004)
Douris v. Dougherty (Jan. 28, 2004)
Hoder v. Home Serv. Store (Jan. 28, 2004)
Schwartz v. Wilson (Jan. 28, 2004)
Vega v. Kyler (Jan. 28, 2004)
Mulig v. Johnson (Jan. 28, 2004)
Superior Proside Inc. v. Comm'r Internal Revenue Serv. (Jan. 28, 2004)
Commonwealth of Pennsylvania v. Emerson (Jan. 27, 2004)
Heimbecker v. 555 Assocs. (Jan. 27, 2004)
Cobbs v. Page (Jan. 26, 2004)
Lettrich v. JC Penney Co. Inc. (Jan. 22, 2004)
Parker v. Port Auth. Alleghany County (Jan. 21, 2004)
Perez-Gonzalez v. Pugh (Jan. 21, 2004)
Jurena v. Lipa (Jan. 16, 2004)
Thomas v. Meyers (Jan. 16, 2004)
Saunders v. Taylor (Jan. 16, 2004)
Jurena v. Lipa (Jan. 16, 2004)
Guiddy v. Turhune (Jan. 15, 2004)
Shephard v. Holland (Jan. 15, 2004)
United States v. Moore (Jan. 15, 2004)
Cunningham v. Streib (Jan. 15, 2004)
Marslett v. United States Dep't of Agric. (Jan. 15, 2004)
Galtieri v. Kane (Jan. 15, 2004)
In Re: Ibrahim (Jan. 12, 2004)
Livermore v. Comm'r of Soc. Sec. (Jan. 9, 2004)

- Shapiro v. Prudential Ins. Co.* (Jan. 7, 2004)
Burns v. JC Penney Co. Inc. (Jan. 7, 2004)
Gatto v. JC Penney Co. Inc. (Jan. 7, 2004)
Beisel v. JC Penney Co. Inc. (Jan. 7, 2004)
Bufalini v. JC Penney Co. Inc. (Jan. 7, 2004)
Rohland v. JC Penney Co. Inc. (Jan. 7, 2004)
Feldman v. Comm. Coll. of Alleghany (Jan. 6, 2004)
Bowser v. Comm'r of Soc. Sec. (Jan. 6, 2004)
Royer v. Pennsylvania State Univ. (Jan. 5, 2004)
Abbott v. Reish (Dec. 31, 2003)
Wolbert v. Horn (Dec. 31, 2003)
KunCo. v. Attorney General of Pennsylvania (Dec. 29, 2003)
Parker v. Royal Oaks Enters. Inc. (Dec. 29, 2003)
Wang v. Attorney General of the United States (Dec. 23, 2003)
Herrera-Duarte v. Immigration and Naturalization Serv. (Dec. 22, 2003)
Burnett v. Clearfield Hospital (Dec. 22, 2003)
Phifer v. Comm'r of Soc. Sec. (Dec. 22, 2003)
Anker Energy Corp. v. Consol. Coal Co. (Dec. 22, 2003)
Doe v. Goldstein's Deli (Dec. 19, 2003)
Dieguez-Frias v. Attorney General of the United States (Dec. 18, 2003)
McGorrian v. E.M.S.A. (Dec. 18, 2003)
Johnson v. Gober (Dec. 18, 2003)
Gale v. Vaughn (Dec. 18, 2003)
Atlantic Mutual Ins. Co. v. Gula (Dec. 17, 2003)
Diakite v. Attorney General of the United States (Dec. 17, 2003)
Conchatta Inc. v. Evanko (Dec. 12, 2003)
Gordon v. Gonzalez (Dec. 12, 2003)
Liu v. Attorney General of the United States (Dec. 11, 2003)
Martinez-Maciell v. USA (Dec. 11, 2003)
United States v. Wright (Dec. 10, 2003)
Nixon v. Comm'r of Soc. Sec. (Dec. 9, 2003)
Norris v. Comm'r of Soc. Sec. (Dec. 9, 2003)
Mahramas v. Bristol Hotel Mgmt. (Dec. 8, 2003)
Bramlett v. Vertical Resources, Inc. (Dec. 4, 2003)
Smith v. English (Dec. 3, 2003)
United States v. Rodriquez (Dec. 2, 2003)
Brand v. Gillis (Dec. 2, 2003)
Hart v. Pennsylvania Bd. of Probation and Parole (Nov. 25, 2003)
Thompson v. General Elec. Co. (Nov. 24, 2003)
Kamara v. Immigration and Naturalization Serv. (Nov. 20, 2003)
United States v. Schofield (Nov. 20, 2003)
United States v. Knight (Nov. 18, 2003)
United States v. Gates (Nov. 14, 2003)
Woodfolk v. Romine (Nov. 13, 2003)
Reardon v. Hendricks (Nov. 13, 2003)
Riddle v. Comm'r of Soc. Sec. (Nov. 12, 2003)
Smith v. Comm'r of Soc. Sec. (Nov. 7, 2003)
Winters v. Comm'r of Soc. Sec. (Nov. 5, 2003)
Neiderlander v. Am. Video Glass Co. (Nov. 5, 2003)
Miller v. Berry Metal Co. (Nov. 5, 2003)
United States v. Carter (Nov. 5, 2003)
Schomer v. Comm'r of Soc. Sec. (Nov. 5, 2003)
Demeter v. Reibman (Nov. 5, 2003)
In Re: James Murray (Nov. 5, 2003)
Ridley v. Romine (Nov. 4, 2003)
Penman v. Comm'r of Soc. Sec. (Nov. 4, 2003)
United States v. White (Nov. 4, 2003)
Chatman v. United States (Nov. 4, 2003)
Araya v. Attorney General of the United States (Nov. 3, 2003)
Rystsov v. Attorney General of the United States (Nov. 3, 2003)
Fearbry v. Comm'r of Soc. Sec. (Nov. 3, 2003)
Hoechstetter v. Pittsburgh (Nov. 3, 2003)
Covanta Energy Group v. Sarkar (Oct. 31, 2003)
Howard v. New Jersey Transit Rail (Oct. 29, 2003)
Shapiro v. Prudential Ins. Co. (Oct. 28, 2003)
CitiSteel USA Inc. v. General Elec. Co. (Oct. 28, 2003)

Morris v. Comm'r of Soc. Sec. (Oct. 28, 2003)
Perkins v. Comm'r of Soc. Sec. (Oct. 28, 2003)
Lora v. Bureau of Prisons (Oct. 22, 2003)
Bey v. USA (Oct. 22, 2003)
Elder v. Dodrill (Oct. 22, 2003)
Miller v. Scannell (Oct. 22, 2003)
Gaines v. Franklin Township Police (Oct. 22, 2003)
Nat'l Labor Relations Bd. v. Richard Mellow (Oct. 22, 2003)
United States v. Thornhill (Oct. 20, 2003)
United States v. Hawkins. (Oct. 17, 2003)
Koorn v. Lacey (Oct. 17, 2003)
United States v. Boyer (Oct. 16, 2003)
Fouch v. Comm'r of Soc. Sec. (Oct. 16, 2003)
Roche v. New Jersey Mfg. Ins. Co. (Oct. 15, 2003)
Paputchi v. Attorney General of the United States (Oct. 10, 2003)
Tucker v. Walsh (Oct. 9, 2003)
Locklear v. Remington (Oct. 7, 2003)
United States v. Pompei (Oct. 6, 2003)
PXRE Corp. v. Terra Nova Ins. Co. (Oct. 6, 2003)
Cole v. Benefit Coordinators (Oct. 3, 2003)
United States v. Reese (Oct. 2, 2003)
Forbes v. Township of Lower Merion (Oct. 1, 2003)
United States v. Zimmerman (Sept. 30, 2003)
United States v. Mapp (Sept. 30, 2003)
United States v. Green (Sept. 30, 2003)
Miller v. Ashcroft (Sept. 30, 2003)
Tucker v. Smith (Sept. 30, 2003)
McCabe v. Philadelphia (Sept. 30, 2003)
Bullock v. Fed. Express Newark Hub (Sept. 29, 2003)
Wong v. Attorney General of the United States (Sept. 29, 2003)
Williams v. Quarantillo (Sept. 26, 2003)
United States v. Kittoe (Sept. 26, 2003)
United States v. Warren (Sept. 26, 2003)
Connell v. Merck & Co. Inc. (Sept. 26, 2003)
United States v. White (Sept. 26, 2003)
In Re: Baysura (Sept. 26, 2003)
United States v. Molina (Sept. 25, 2003)
Little v. Terhune (Sept. 22, 2003)
Shemonsky v. United States (Sept. 19, 2003)
Sinatra v. Comm'r of Soc. Sec. (Sept. 18, 2003)
Eisen v. Bush (Sept. 18, 2003)
United States v. Wood (Sept. 17, 2003)
In Re: Rashid (Sept. 17, 2003)
United States v. Merced (Sept. 16, 2003)
Plastipak Pkg Inc. v. DePasquale (Sept. 12, 2003)
Khan v. Elwood (Sept. 12, 2003)
United States v. D'Ambrosia (Sept. 11, 2003)
Matos v. Comm'r of Soc. Sec. (Sept. 11, 2003)
Dike v. USA (Sept. 11, 2003)
Onyeawwu v. Immigration and Naturalization Serv. (Sept. 11, 2003)
Hafiz v. Barbo (Sept. 5, 2003)
United States v. Robinson (Sept. 5, 2003)
Day v. Reish (Sept. 5, 2003)
Benjamin v. E.I. DuPont de Nemours (Sept. 5, 2003)
Fields v. Romine (Sept. 5, 2003)
Nat'l Labor Relations Bd. v. Northgate II Assoc (Sept. 5, 2003)
Perry v. Byrd (Sept. 2, 2003)
Robertson v. Casual Corner Group (Sept. 2, 2003)
In Re: Milton Rider (Sept. 2, 2003)
Robertson v. Casual Corner Group (Sept. 2, 2003)
Derevianko v. Ashcroft (Aug. 29, 2003)
Clarke v. Readington Farm (Aug. 29, 2003)
Ford v. Hillside Police Dep't (Aug. 29, 2003)
United States v. Rubashkin (Aug. 29, 2003)
Tucker v. Waldron (Aug. 29, 2003)
Golms. v. Dodrill (Aug. 29, 2003)
Sulaiman v. Immigration and Naturalization Serv. (Aug. 29, 2003)
Riddick v. Dodrill (Aug. 29, 2003)
Hill v. Nash (Aug. 29, 2003)
Moore v. Dodrill (Aug. 29, 2003)
Tucker v. Roberts (Aug. 29, 2003)
United States v. Jeffries (Aug. 25, 2003)
DeShields v. Meyers (Aug. 22, 2003)
Brown v. Reed Elsevier Inc. (Aug. 22, 2003)

- Hray v. Attorney General of the United States* (Aug. 22, 2003)
United States v. Roberts (Aug. 22, 2003)
Seiler v. Am. Int'l Ins. Co. (Aug. 21, 2003)
Northern New Jersey Ltd. v. Yacuk (Aug. 20, 2003)
In Re: BCI Pancake (Aug. 18, 2003)
In Re: Koutoufaris (Aug. 18, 2003)
Shah v. Attorney General of the United States (Aug. 18, 2003)
Potopowicz v. Meyers (Aug. 14, 2003)
Johar v. Attorney General of the United States (Aug. 14, 2003)
United States v. Hartman (Aug. 11, 2003)
Banks v. Governor PA (Aug. 11, 2003)
United States v. Marion (Aug. 7, 2003)
Carroll v. UPS Inc. (Aug. 6, 2003)
Saunders v. Taylor (Aug. 5, 2003)
Hartman v. Greenwich Walk (Aug. 4, 2003)
Cooper v. Greater Atl Pac Tea (July 31, 2003)
United States v. Earhart (July 31, 2003)
Bechtel v. Virtue (July 30, 2003)
Carroll v. Rochford (July 30, 2003)
Ahmed v. Attorney General of the United States (July 30, 2003)
United States v. Blakely (July 18, 2003)
United States v. LaCroix (July 17, 2003)
United States v. Francis (July 16, 2003)
Dover v. Local 54 (July 14, 2003)
Salesky v. Domers & Bonamassa (July 14, 2003)
Gueson v. Sheppard (July 11, 2003)
Roberts v. Mayor and Burgesses (July 9, 2003)
Coombs v. Dragovich (July 3, 2003)
Sheet Workers Int'l v. New Brunswick Gen (June 30, 2003)
Wauford v. Hawk (June 30, 2003)
Fay v. Postmaster General (June 30, 2003)
Schalles v. Secretary HHS (June 30, 2003)
Briones v. Bon Secours Health (June 25, 2003)
Williams v. Price (June 24, 2003)
United States v. Patterson (June 23, 2003)
United States v. Fletcher (June 20, 2003)
- Ballardo v. Comm'r of Soc. Sec.* (June 20, 2003)
United States v. Amankwah (June 17, 2003)
Ritterbusch v. Superior Valve Co. (June 12, 2003)
Maguire v. Rosato (June 11, 2003)
Clauso v. Lazzaro (June 10, 2003)
United States v. Cashwell (June 10, 2003)
United States v. Green (June 10, 2003)
Felton v. Comm'r of Soc. Sec. (June 9, 2003)
Beasich v. Comm'r of Soc. Sec. (June 6, 2003)
United States v. Carstarphen (June 5, 2003)
Nat'l Labor Relations Bd. v. Bart Weisman Partner (May 29, 2003)
Harris v. Bailey (May 27, 2003)
In Re: Tare (May 27, 2003)
Allen v. USA (May 23, 2003)
Banks v. Bailey (May 23, 2003)
Green v. Squires (May 23, 2003)
United States v. Forrest (May 22, 2003)
Willow Inn Inc. v. Public Service Mutual (May 20, 2003)
Return on Equity v. MPM Tech Inc. (May 20, 2003)
Fetterolf v. Harcourt General Inc. (May 19, 2003)
Maddelin v. Broome (May 12, 2003)
St James Assoc v. Larsen (May 12, 2003)
Kirk v. Comm'r of Soc. Sec. (May 12, 2003)
Cazeau v. Romine (May 9, 2003)
Peppers v. Salort (May 9, 2003)
Robertson v. Zenk (May 9, 2003)
Acheampong v. Attorney General of the United States (May 9, 2003)
Maccado v. Bailey (May 9, 2003)
Walker v. Dodrill (May 9, 2003)
In Re: Shemonsky (May 9, 2003)
Pelliccia v. United States Department of Education (May 2, 2003)
Swinehart v. McAndrews (May 2, 2003)
Holmes v. Vaughn (Apr. 30, 2003)
Allah v. Blaine (Apr. 30, 2003)
Place v. Bradford City Corr (Apr. 29, 2003)
PersiCo. v. Jersey City (Apr. 29, 2003)
Okonkwo v. Immigration and Naturalization Serv. (Apr. 29, 2003)

- United States v. Lewis* (Apr. 28, 2003)
United States v. Hilliard (Apr. 28, 2003)
Do Little Corp. v. Bristol (Apr. 25, 2003)
Do Little Corp. v. Bristol (Apr. 25, 2003)
He v. Attorney General of the United States
 (Apr. 25, 2003)
Smith v. Horn (Apr. 24, 2003)
Perry v. Gold & Lane (Apr. 23, 2003)
United States v. Salawu (Apr. 23, 2003)
United States v. Forrest (Apr. 23, 2003)
Gist v. Comm'r of Soc. Sec. (Apr. 23, 2003)
Ahern v. Comm'r of Soc. Sec. (Apr. 23, 2003)
Jones v. Pinchak (Apr. 22, 2003)
United States v. Watkins (Apr. 18, 2003)
Boguslavsky v. Hosman (Apr. 17, 2003)
United States v. Rios (Apr. 17, 2003)
United States v. Swint (Apr. 17, 2003)
United States v. Harrity (Apr. 17, 2003)
United States v. Washington (Apr. 17, 2003)
United States v. Smith (Apr. 17, 2003)
United States v. Belique-Emilia (Apr. 17, 2003)
United States v. Lawton (Apr. 17, 2003)
United States v. Hurtado (Apr. 17, 2003)
In Re: Dionisio (Apr. 17, 2003)
Demeter v. Tomandl (Apr. 16, 2003)
United States v. Martin (Apr. 16, 2003)
DelValle v. Ward (Apr. 14, 2003)
Cent. Dauphin Sch. Dist. v. Rashawn S. (Apr.
 14, 2003)
Pack v. Beyer (Apr. 11, 2003)
Chacko v. Miner (Apr. 10, 2003)
Nudge v. New Jersey State Parole Bd. (Apr. 9, 2003)
Peladis v. Larsen (Apr. 9, 2003)
In Re: Almahdi (Apr. 9, 2003)
Rashid v. United States Parole Comm. (Apr.
 4, 2003)
Hemphill v. Meyerson (Apr. 4, 2003)
United States v. Stackpole (Apr. 3, 2003)
United States v. Klepper (Apr. 3, 2003)
United States v. Miller (Apr. 3, 2003)
Wolfgang v. Kocher Coal Co. (Mar. 31, 2003)
Ar-Rashid v. Leone (Mar. 28, 2003)
Oelsner v. USA (Mar. 27, 2003)
Sulaiman v. Attorney General of the United States (Mar. 26, 2003)
Wilson v. ICI Americas Inc. (Mar. 24, 2003)
Rios v. Comm. of Conservation (Mar. 18, 2003)
Noone v. Ocean City (Mar. 14, 2003)
Gov't of Virgin Islands v. Marsham (Mar. 13, 2003)
United States v. Parchment (Mar. 13, 2003)
In Re: Nicola (Mar. 11, 2003)
Maye-El v. United States (Mar. 10, 2003)
Greer v. Smith (Mar. 10, 2003)
United States v. Munoz-Valencia (Mar. 7, 2003)
Cranbury Brook Farms v. Township of Cranbury (Mar. 6, 2003)
Essex Ins. Co. v. Kennedy (Mar. 5, 2003)
Gov't of Virgin Islands v. Edwards (Mar. 5, 2003)
Bihola v. Attorney General of the United States (Mar. 5, 2003)
De La Roca v. Attorney General of the United States (Mar. 4, 2003)
Myers v. Comm'r of Soc. Sec. (Feb. 25, 2003)
United States v. Jones (Feb. 24, 2003)
United States v. Shalata (Feb. 24, 2003)
Gomez v. Bailey (Feb. 24, 2003)
Esposito v. Commissioner IRS (Feb. 21, 2003)
United States v. Leuthe (Feb. 19, 2003)
Allmond v. Terhune (Feb. 14, 2003)
United States v. Berry (Feb. 13, 2003)
Monroy-Vargas v. Baily (Feb. 13, 2003)
United States v. Gisewhite (Feb. 12, 2003)
United States v. Pearson (Feb. 12, 2003)
United States v. Warner (Feb. 12, 2003)
Hidy v. TIAA Group Long Term (Feb. 12, 2003)
Karaha Bodas Co. LLC v. Virginia Indonesia
Co. (Feb. 12, 2003)
Ortuno v. Zenk (Feb. 11, 2003)
Bramson v. Bailey (Feb. 10, 2003)
Goodheart v. Pitney Bowes Inc. (Feb. 6, 2003)
Doehler-Jarvis, Inc. v. Kopystecki (Feb. 3, 2003)
United States v. Farrington (Jan. 31, 2003)
Ernest v. Paul Revere Life Ins. (Jan. 31, 2003)

- Toll v. Am. Airlines Inc.* (Jan. 30, 2003)
Gardner v. Eaton (Jan. 28, 2003)
S&S Servs. Corp. v. Rogers (Jan. 27, 2003)
Jett v. Arch (Jan. 27, 2003)
Barnes v. Kerr (Jan. 24, 2003)
Pontillo v. Sewickley Valley (Jan. 24, 2003)
Giles v. Ward (Jan. 23, 2003)
Brosnahan Builders Inc. v. Harleysville Mutual Ins. Co. (Jan. 21, 2003)
United States v. Hull (Jan. 21, 2003)
Caran v. Attorney General of the United States (Jan. 21, 2003)
NVF Company v. New Castle County (Jan. 21, 2003)
United States v. DuFresne (Jan. 17, 2003)
United States v. Grubb (Jan. 17, 2003)
Lichtman v. Zelenkofski Axelrod (Jan. 17, 2003)
Nat'l Grange Mutual Ins. Co. v. Sharp Equip. Co. of Reading (Jan. 17, 2003)
United States v. Lanzilotti (Jan. 17, 2003)
Reynolds v. USX Corp. (Jan. 15, 2003)
United States v. Parker (Jan. 15, 2003)
In Re: Oliver (Jan. 15, 2003)
In Re: Geiger (Jan. 14, 2003)
United States v. Adames (Jan. 14, 2003)
United States v. Dolison (Jan. 14, 2003)
United States v. Stewart (Jan. 13, 2003)
United States v. Tartan Holdings Ltd. (Jan. 13, 2003)
Davies v. Attorney General of the United States (Jan. 13, 2003)
Eisenstein v. Zampino (Jan. 9, 2003)
United States v. Marrero (Jan. 7, 2003)
Ascheim v. Jug (Jan. 7, 2003)
Long v. McQuirns (Jan. 6, 2003)
Cipriano v. Comm'r of the Internal Revenue Serv. (Jan. 6, 2003)
Kelley v. Romine (Jan. 6, 2003)
Narvaez v. United States Bureau of Prisons (Jan. 6, 2003)
Lucas v. Fetzner (Jan. 6, 2003)
Gregory v. Romine (Jan. 3, 2003)
Williams v. Mendez (Jan. 3, 2003)
Woolley v. Huntingdon County Comm'rs (Jan. 3, 2003)
- Lee v. Romine* (Jan. 3, 2003)
Azzollini v. Crawford (Jan. 3, 2003)
Spindle v. Secretary of the Army (Jan. 3, 2003)
United States v. Ingram (Jan. 3, 2003)
Keystone Filler & Mfg. Co., Inc. v. Am. Mining Ins. Co. (Dec. 30, 2002)
Hand v. Am. Bd. of Surgery (Dec. 30, 2002)
Drysdale v. Woerth (Dec. 24, 2002)
Allah v. Seiverling (Dec. 24, 2002)
Gilberton Power Co. v. United States (Dec. 24, 2002)
Brooks v. Fiore (Dec. 23, 2002)
Beam v. Downey (Dec. 23, 2002)
United States v. Rosario (Dec. 20, 2002)
United States v. Jiminez (Dec. 20, 2002)
Adams v. Coppola (Dec. 20, 2002)
United States v. Latimer (Dec. 18, 2002)
United States v. Bright (Dec. 16, 2002)
Gilberton Power Co. v. United States (Dec. 24, 2002)
Brooks v. Fiore (Dec. 23, 2002)
Beam v. Downey (Dec. 23, 2002)
United States v. Rosario (Dec. 20, 2002)
United States v. Jiminez (Dec. 20, 2002)
Adams v. Coppola (Dec. 20, 2002)
United States v. Latimer (Dec. 18, 2002)
United States v. Bright (Dec. 16, 2002)
United States v. Felix (Dec. 16, 2002)
United States v. Augustin (Dec. 16, 2002)
United States v. Nesbitt (Dec. 16, 2002)
United States v. Cherys (Dec. 13, 2002)
Jacobs v. Gov't of Virgin Islands (Dec. 12, 2002)
Brown & Root Braun, Inc. v. Bogan, Inc. (Dec. 5, 2002)
United States v. Moncado-Polomo (Dec. 4, 2002)
United States v. Sanchez (Nov. 19, 2002)
United States v. Hitchens (Nov. 19, 2002)
Smith v. McConnell (Nov. 18, 2002)
Reardon v. New Jersey Senate (Nov. 18, 2002)
In re Fugarino (Nov. 15, 2002)
Morley v. Hoffman (Nov. 15, 2002)
Beatty v. Temple Univ. (Nov. 12, 2002)

- Benenson & Assoc. Inc. v. Orthopedic Network of New Jersey* (Nov. 8, 2002)
Tucker v. Oliva (Nov. 7, 2002)
Perlberger v. Perlberger Law Assoc. (Nov. 7, 2002)
Perlberger v. Caplan & Luber LLP (Nov. 7, 2002)
Bazargani v. Haverford State Hosp. (Nov. 7, 2002)
Oguh v. AT&T (Nov. 6, 2002)
Kronk v. Sobina (Nov. 6, 2002)
Teti v. Towamencin Township (Nov. 6, 2002)
Calter v. Henderson (Nov. 6, 2002)
Schulze v. Higley (Nov. 6, 2002)
Coombs v. Myers (Nov. 5, 2002)
Vora v. Johnstown Police Dept. (Nov. 5, 2002)
United States v. Fellows (Oct. 29, 2002)
Istvanik v. Rogge (Oct. 28, 2002)
Girty v. Sch. Dist. of Valley (Oct. 28, 2002)
Morgan v. Comm'r of Social Sec. (Oct. 28, 2002)
United States v. Toran (Oct. 18, 2002)
Trimble v. Fleetwood Homes of Pennsylvania, Inc. (Oct. 18, 2002)
United States v. Lamb (Oct. 16, 2002)
Cecchanechio v. Continental Cas. Co. (Oct. 15, 2002)
PPG Indus., Inc. v. Zurawin (Oct. 11, 2002)
Holland v. GEICO Gen. Ins. Co. (Oct. 8, 2002)
Chukwuezi v. Ashcroft (Oct. 4, 2002)
Flynn v. Horn (Oct. 4, 2002)
Borkon v. First Union Nat'l Bank (Sep. 30, 2002)
Elwell v. PP&L, Inc. (Sep. 30, 2002)
Young v. Pennsauken Township School District (Sep. 27, 2002)
United States v. Daniels (Sep. 26, 2002)
Petko v. Tone (Sep. 25, 2002)
Holloway v. Muccino (Sep. 24, 2002)
In re Zolicoffer (Sep. 24, 2002)
United States v. Zolicoffer (Sep. 23, 2002)
United States v. Jones (Sep. 20, 2002)
Buchanan v. Pennsylvania (Sep. 20, 2002)
In re Karlheim (Sep. 20, 2002)
- Ferranti Int'l PLC v. Jasin* (Sep. 18, 2002)
Crowder v. Pike County (Sep. 12, 2002)
In re Elmer Thomas (Sep. 10, 2002)
In re Larosiliere (Sep. 10, 2002)
In re Prudential Ins. Co. of Am. (Sep. 3, 2002)
United States v. Elliott (Aug. 28, 2002)
Chinn v. Postmaster General (Aug. 28, 2002)
Watson v. United States (Aug. 28, 2002)
Kyem v. INS (Aug. 28, 2002)
Tallman v. Barnegat Bd. of Educ. (Aug. 21, 2002)
R&B, Inc. v. Needa Parts Mfg., Inc. (Aug. 20, 2002)
Ramada Franchise Sys., Inc. v. Pleasant, Inc. (Aug. 20, 2002)
Temple Univ. v. Rehnquist (Aug. 20, 2002)
Williams v. Rumsfeld (Aug. 13, 2002)
Operating Sys. Support, Inc. v. Wang Laboratories, Inc. (Aug. 5, 2002)
Prusky v. Prudential Ins. Co. of Am. (Aug. 1, 2002)
Vaughan v. Pathmark Stores (July 31, 2002)
Lindsay v. Mendez (July 31, 2002)
Armstrong v. Firstrust Bank (July 31, 2002)
Williams v. Sturm (July 31, 2002)
Milby v. United States (July 31, 2002)
Martinsburg v. Milby (July 31, 2002)
Pawlowski v. Director (July 31, 2002)
Cuneo v. Cumer (July 31, 2002)
In re Farber (July 31, 2002)
Allen v. Romine (July 31, 2002)
Johnson v. Zenk (July 31, 2002)
Karotka v. Pastewka (July 31, 2002)
Boardley v. Federal Bureau of Prisons (July 31, 2002)
Monga v. Ottenberg (July 30, 2002)
United States v. Prunty (July 29, 2002)
United States v. Roldan-Hernandez (July 26, 2002)
United States v. Rendon (July 26, 2002)
United States v. Hall (July 25, 2002)
United States v. Massaquoi (July 25, 2002)
Sponaugle v. First Union Mort. Corp. (July 25, 2002)
In re Collazo (July 25, 2002)

- Hruban v. Steinman* (July 24, 2002)
Barr v. Horn (July 24, 2002)
Brown v. Gerlinski (July 24, 2002)
In re Thomas (July 24, 2002)
Easterling v. Chesney (July 23, 2002)
Jones v. Barnhart (July 23, 2002)
Howard v. Pottstown (July 23, 2002)
Centeno v. Beeler (July 23, 2002)
Pena v. Lehigh County (July 19, 2002)
Keita v. INS (July 19, 2002)
Nedmac Assoc., Inc. v. City of Camden (July 19, 2002)
Veneri v. Ferson (July 19, 2002)
Prudential Ins. Co. of Am. v. Massaro (July 18, 2002)
United States v. Gomez (July 17, 2002)
Mazurek v. Massanari (July 17, 2002)
Aloe Energy Corp. v. Barnhart (July 12, 2002)
Diaz v. Warden FCI Fairton (July 9, 2002)
United States v. Alexander (July 9, 2002)
United States v. Chen (July 9, 2002)
Miller v. Township of Readington (July 9, 2002)
Riseman v. Advanta Corp. (July 8, 2002)
Smith v. Bailey (July 3, 2002)
Mitcheal v. Mendez (June 28, 2002)
Hart v. Miner (June 28, 2002)
Duarte v. Shearin (June 28, 2002)
Smith v. Bailey (June 28, 2002)
Wilson v. Delaware Dept. of Corrections (June 26, 2002)
Snyder's of Hanover, Inc. v. NLRB (June 24, 2002)
Stolz v. Massanari (June 12, 2002)
Gayle v. York County Prison (June 6, 2002)
Clark v. Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms (June 6, 2002)
Sabu v. Fauver (June 6, 2002)
Perna v. United States (June 5, 2002)
Ellis v. Horn (June 4, 2002)
In re Charter (June 3, 2002)
Tomalis v. Office of Attorney General of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania (June 3, 2002)
Bent Creek Ltd. Partnership v. Silver Spring Township Auth. (May 31, 2002)
- United States v. Basroon* (May 30, 2002)
United States v. Stratton (May 29, 2002)
Spruill v. Rosemeyer (May 28, 2002)
United States v. Burgos (May 24, 2002)
Lewis v. Bekele (May 24, 2002)
Davage v. United States (May 24, 2002)
Gadson v. United States (May 24, 2002)
Armstrong v. Smith (May 23, 2002)
United States v. Morrison (May 23, 2002)
United States v. Kithcart (May 23, 2002)
Daniels v. United States (May 23, 2002)
Pro Line Filter Sys., Inc. v. JC Carter Co., Inc. (May 23, 2002)
Martinez-Perez v. Ashcroft (May 23, 2002)
Collins v. Univ. of Pennsylvania (May 22, 2002)
United States v. Early (May 21, 2002)
Prince v. Gov't of Guyana (May 21, 2002)
Griffin Indus., Inc. v. Slammin' Canz, Inc. (May 21, 2002)
United States v. Drake (May 21, 2002)
United States v. Bullard (May 17, 2002)
Yerger v. Director (May 13, 2002)
Kennedy v. Commonwealth of Pennsylvania (May 9, 2002)
Leuschen v. Wehan (May 9, 2002)
Burton v. Mendez (May 9, 2002)
Reed v. United States Bureau of Prisons (May 9, 2002)
Frazier v. Hairston (May 9, 2002)
Maye-El v. Mendez (May 3, 2002)
Smith v. Addy (May 2, 2002)
Czernicki v. Ellis (May 2, 2002)
McDavis v. Casey (May 1, 2002)
Tejada v. Olson (May 1, 2002)
Muldrow v. Brooks (Apr. 29, 2002)
Carlos-Martinez v. Reno (Apr. 25, 2002)
Fryer v. Noecker (Apr. 23, 2002)
Katekovich v. Team Rent a Car of Pittsburgh, Inc. (Apr. 19, 2002)
Brown v. United States (Apr. 18, 2002)
Herbert v. Wilbur (Apr. 17, 2002)
Oliver v. Dragovich (Apr. 15, 2002)
Nwainokpor v. Ashcroft (Apr. 15, 2002)
Jurena v. Pittsburgh (Apr. 15, 2002)
Carter v. City of Philadelphia (Apr. 10, 2002)

- Fortune v. Marshall* (Apr. 4, 2002)
Williams v. R.O. Corp. (Apr. 4, 2002)
Catanese v. Vance (Apr. 2, 2002)
Canallas v. Quay Corp. (Apr. 2, 2002)
Vazquez v. Rossnagle (Mar. 29, 2002)
Soumounou v. INS (Mar. 29, 2002)
ProDent Inc. v. Zurich U.S. (Mar. 29, 2002)
Poling v. K Hovnanian Enters., Inc. (Mar. 28, 2002)
Shea v. Massanari (Mar. 28, 2002)
Sinopoli v. Am. Arbitration Association (Mar. 25, 2002)
Bryan v. All Out Die Cutting, Inc. (Mar. 22, 2002)
United States v. McArthur (Mar. 22, 2002)
Garner v. Comm'r of Social Sec. (Mar. 21, 2002)
United States v. Diaz-Himely (Mar. 20, 2002)
United States v. Mendinueta-Ibarro (Mar. 20, 2002)
Ochsenhirt v. Bureau of Prisons (Mar. 19, 2002)
In re Brunwasser (Mar. 19, 2002)
Shinko v. Miele (Mar. 19, 2002)
Espitia-Contreras v. Bailey (Mar. 18, 2002)
United States v. Williams (Mar. 15, 2002)
Johnson v. Hoagland (Mar. 15, 2002)
United States v. Morel (Mar. 14, 2002)
United States v. Parra (Mar. 14, 2002)
Bronga v. Massanari (Mar. 14, 2002)
Helfant v. Margate (Mar. 13, 2002)
Lutheran Brotherhood v. Kraynak (Mar. 12, 2002)
Burke v. Zemski (Mar. 6, 2002)
Grosset v. Waste Mgmt., Inc. (Mar. 5, 2002)
United States v. Rosario (Mar. 5, 2002)
Stevenson v. Whitman (Feb. 28, 2002)
R.J. Reynolds Tobacco v. Philip Morris, Inc. (Feb. 28, 2002)
Civiello v. Rosemeyer (Feb. 22, 2002)
United States v. Matthews (Feb. 8, 2002)
Morris v. Dep't of the Army (Feb. 7, 2002)
United States v. Stewart (Feb. 6, 2002)
Cargill-Alliant, Inc. v. GPU Servs., Inc. (Feb. 1, 2002)
- Public Serv. Elec. & Gas Co. v. Local 94* (Jan. 31, 2002)
Wilson v. Massanari (Jan. 31, 2002)
Pender v. Union County (Jan. 31, 2002)
Ash-Bey v. Fauntleroy (Jan. 30, 2002)
Bushman v. Mendez (Jan. 29, 2002)
Coates v. United States Dept. of Labor (Jan. 28, 2002)
Nickens v. Pennsylvania Dept. of Transp. Bureau of Licensing (Jan. 23, 2002)
Mu'min v. United States Parole Comm'n (Jan. 22, 2002)
Mikkilineni v. Gallitzin (Jan. 18, 2002)
In re Jones (Jan. 17, 2002)
Gaito v. Lindsay (Jan. 16, 2002)
Mikkilineni v. Indiana County Transit Auth. (Jan. 15, 2002)
Mikkilineni v. Borough of Forest Hills (Jan. 15, 2002)
Mikkilineni v. Pittsburgh Water Sewer Auth. (Jan. 15, 2002)
Mikkilineni v. Gibson-Thomas Eng'g Co. (Jan. 15, 2002)
Mikkilineni v. Mallory (Jan. 15, 2002)
Robinson v. Reish (Jan. 15, 2002)
Commeger v. Muccino (Jan. 10, 2002)
Mackay v. Estate of Elizabeth Mackay (Jan. 10, 2002)
Armstrong v. Firstrust Bank (Jan. 10, 2002)
Schilling v. Cambria County Children and Youth Servs. (Jan. 9, 2002)
Shabazz v. Morris County Correctional Facility (Jan. 9, 2002)
Kramer v. Cresmer, Woodward, O'Mara & Ormsbee, Inc. (Jan. 9, 2002)
Hart v. IRS (Jan. 8, 2002)
Lloyd v. MBNA Am. Bank, N.A. (Jan. 7, 2002)
United States v. Robles (Dec. 28, 2001)
Eisen v. Allegheny County Dist. Attorney's Office (Dec. 28, 2001)
Watkins v. Fisher (Dec. 27, 2001)
Boucher v. Bell Atlantic-New Jersey, Inc. (Dec. 21, 2001)
United States v. Davis (Dec. 21, 2001)
United States v. Watson (Dec. 21, 2001)

- Douglas Transp. Corp. v. Berkeley Fed. Bank & Trust FSB* (Dec. 19, 2001)
Weinhold v. Apfel (Dec. 19, 2001)
In re Boone (Dec. 19, 2001)
Atkinson v. City of Philadelphia (Dec. 18, 2001)
United States v. Hayward (Dec. 18, 2001)
In re Bernheim (Dec. 18, 2001)
Valentino v. Weinstock (Dec. 17, 2001)
United States v. Jackson (Dec. 17, 2001)
United States v. Roon (Dec. 17, 2001)
McNinch v. Harris Trust Savings Bank (Dec. 17, 2001)
Moussa v. Fisher (Dec. 17, 2001)
United States v. Williams (Dec. 14, 2001)
United States v. Ounigian (Dec. 14, 2001)
In re Constable (Dec. 11, 2001)
United States v. Jones (Dec. 11, 2001)
Aziz v. United States (Dec. 10, 2001)
United States v. Elliot (Dec. 10, 2001)
Baker v. South Side School Dist. (Dec. 5, 2001)
McGuigan v. Sonny Scaffoldings, Inc. (Nov. 21, 2001)
Curenton v. Xerox Corp. (Nov. 21, 2001)
Townhall of Am., Inc. v. Salem Township (Nov. 16, 2001)
Tucker v. New Jersey (Nov. 16, 2001)
Ackeridge v. Morgan (Nov. 15, 2001)
Small v. Nesbitt (Nov. 15, 2001)
Adelman v. Social Sec. Admin. (Nov. 14, 2001)
Marche v. Parrachak (Nov. 14, 2001)
Kiefer v. Vora (Nov. 14, 2001)
Thompson v. Williams (Nov. 14, 2001)
Crist v. Federated Investors, Inc. (Nov. 14, 2001)
Brown v. Leftridge Byrd (Nov. 14, 2001)
Bailey v. Crisanti (Nov. 14, 2001)
Tiedemann v. Warden Schuylkill (Nov. 14, 2001)
Byrd v. Hahn (Nov. 14, 2001)
Gueson v. Security Pacific Corp. (Nov. 9, 2001)
Catchings v. Burke (Nov. 9, 2001)
Furlow v. Boro (Nov. 8, 2001)
Costa v. McCullough (Nov. 8, 2001)
Smith v. Cartia (Nov. 6, 2001)
United States v. Allen (Oct. 31, 2001)
DiPaola v. Commonwealth of Pennsylvania (Oct. 31, 2001)
Seton Co. v. NLRB (Oct. 30, 2001)
United States v. Lee (Oct. 30, 2001)
Spekis v. Pine Richland School (Oct. 29, 2001)
Mycka v. Jefferson County (Oct. 25, 2001)
United States v. Harper (Oct. 24, 2001)
Feldman v. Evanko (Oct. 24, 2001)
Rogan v. Giant Eagle Inc. (Oct. 22, 2001)
Feldman v. City of Pittsburgh (Oct. 22, 2001)
Doren Inc. v. NLRB (Oct. 22, 2001)
Boyd v. Massanari (Oct. 22, 2001)
United States v. Snyder (Oct. 19, 2001)
Davis v. Pennsylvania Liquor Control Bd. (Oct. 19, 2001)
In re Rosado (Oct. 19, 2001)
Fotta v. Sears Roebuck & Co. (Oct. 18, 2001)
Pope v. AT&T (Oct. 12, 2001)
Ziegenfuss v. Comm'r of Social Sec. (Oct. 11, 2001)
Beneficial Nat'l Bank, USA v. Westchester Fire Ins. Co. (Oct. 11, 2001)
The Rajbir and Sasha Sandhu Trust v. Sandhu, Inc. (Oct. 10, 2001)
Kwality Kidz Society v. Environ Tech Water Co. (Oct. 9, 2001)
Kazakevich v. McKeesport Hosp. (Oct. 2, 2001)
Noble v. Meyers (Sep. 28, 2001)
United States v. Lee (Sep. 28, 2001)
Fessler v. Karis (Sep. 28, 2001)
Blasi v. Attorney General of the State of Pennsylvania (Sep. 28, 2001)
Boats v. Hughes (Sep. 27, 2001)
United States v. Moore (Sep. 26, 2001)
United States v. Aghili (Sep. 26, 2001)
United States v. Fontanez (Sep. 26, 2001)
Ramirez v. Gerlinski (Sep. 25, 2001)
United States v. Katz (Sep. 24, 2001)
Lavergne v. Pattershall (Sep. 17, 2001)
Smith v. Pinnacle Health Sys. (Sep. 17, 2001)

- Binswanger of Pennsylvania, Inc. v. Melitta North America, Inc.* (Sep. 14, 2001)
United States v. Givens (Sep. 13, 2001)
Elliott v. Kiesewetter (Sep. 13, 2001)
United States v. Burry (Sep. 12, 2001)
United States v. Arrango (Sep. 12, 2001)
Menoken v. Standard Forms, Inc. (Aug. 30, 2001)
Hansen v. Caldwell Diving Co. (Aug. 29, 2001)
Whitehead v. Stemborowski (Aug. 24, 2001)
Hart v. United States (Aug. 24, 2001)
Reilly v. Weiss (Aug. 23, 2001)
Laws v. McKeen (Aug. 21, 2001)
The Bald Eagle Ridge Protection Ass'n, Inc. v. Mallory (Aug. 21, 2001)
Grinblat v. Benel (Aug. 21, 2001)
Taylor v. Marshall (Aug. 16, 2001)
Grinblat v. Orenberg (Aug. 8, 2001)
Burchill v. Southwhitehall Township (Aug. 2, 2001)
Khan v. Accurate Mold, Inc. (July 31, 2001)
Lochbaum v. United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co. (July 30, 2001)
United States v. Duina (July 30, 2001)
Cole v. Hudock (July 27, 2001)
Douglas v. Trenton (July 27, 2001)
Melisauskas v. Director, Office of Workers Comp. Progs., United States Dept. of Labor (July 27, 2001)
Ken Smith Motors Inc. v. Dilts (July 27, 2001)
Perkins v. Unicor Indus. (July 27, 2001)
Storti v. SEPTA (July 27, 2001)
In re MGL Corp. (July 26, 2001)
Marchitto v. Connelly (July 26, 2001)
Fahmie v. Mahwah (July 26, 2001)
Caterina v. Unified Judicial Sys. of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania (July 25, 2001)
Triola v. Viera (July 24, 2001)
Coleman v. United States Postal Serv. (July 23, 2001)
Auto. Chauffers, Parts and Garage Employees, Local Union No. 926 v. Mizee Jet Air Sales, Inc. (July 20, 2001)
Welch v. Apfel (July 20, 2001)
Gaston v. Shetter (July 20, 2001)
United States v. Salladino (July 19, 2001)
Rahim v. Berks County Children and Youth Servs. (July 19, 2001)
S. L. v. Friends Central School (July 18, 2001)
United States v. Baxt (July 18, 2001)
Whiteford v. Pennsylvania Med. Prof. Liab. Catastrophic Loss Fund (July 18, 2001)
Kramer-Haugh v. Bald Eagle Area School Dist. (July 18, 2001)
Morales v. P.F. Laboratories, Inc. (July 17, 2001)
United States v. Barrera-Anica (July 17, 2001)
Bellino v. County of Hudson (July 16, 2001)
Chatman v. Pennsylvania State Police (July 16, 2001)
United States v. Burnan (July 16, 2001)
United States v. Fields (July 16, 2001)
Edwards v. Allentown (July 16, 2001)
Carter v. Fleming Co. Inc. (July 13, 2001)
United States v. Arana (July 13, 2001)
Role v. White Storage (July 11, 2001)
Terminello v. City of Passaic (July 9, 2001)
Ali v. True (July 6, 2001)
Amer Life Ins. Co. v. Parra (July 6, 2001)
United States v. Sparrow (July 5, 2001)
Boyer v. Lichtenstader (July 5, 2001)
Konschnik v. CertainTeed Corp. (July 5, 2001)
United States v. Sanders (July 5, 2001)
Grompone v. Greenberg (July 5, 2001)
Plummer v. United States Dept. of Veterans Affairs (June 26, 2001)
Blye v. Blair Constr. Co. (June 22, 2001)
In re Terry (June 22, 2001)
Porter v. Montgomery County Correctional Facility (June 22, 2001)
In re Hill (June 22, 2001)
United States v. Brown (June 22, 2001)
Smith v. Fanello (June 22, 2001)
Seachrist v. Lancaster County Prison Warden (June 20, 2001)
Simmons v. Doe (June 18, 2001)
Finnegan v. Byrd (June 15, 2001)
In re Gueson (June 15, 2001)

- Jimenez v. Horn* (June 15, 2001)
Davis v. Warden, Jefferson County Jail (June 15, 2001)
Histed v. EI DuPont de Nemours and Co. (June 14, 2001)
Williams v. Horn (June 11, 2001)
Pivoli v. World Flavors Inc. (June 11, 2001)
United States v. McCoy (June 7, 2001)
United States v. Barnette (June 7, 2001)
CNG Transmission Corp. v. An Exclusive Natural Gas Storage Easement Beneath 2.37 Acres, More or Less Located in Salem Township Westmoreland Cty (June 7, 2001)
In re 4M's Food Serv. Corp. (May 31, 2001)
Weldon v. Provident Life and Accident Ins. Co., Inc. (May 30, 2001)
United States v. Redrick (May 30, 2001)
Copija v. Local 595, United Auto., Aerospace and Agric. Implement Workers of Am. (May 25, 2001)
Wade v. Hellenic Lines Ltd (May 24, 2001)
Rivera v. Ellis (May 23, 2001)
In re Home Tech (May 22, 2001)
Harris v. Kinahan (May 18, 2001)
Security Pacific v. Gueson (May 16, 2001)
Irving v. Sullivan (May 16, 2001)
Lee v. Romine (May 15, 2001)
United States v. Loner (May 15, 2001)
United States v. Friday (May 10, 2001)
Sligh v. Meyers (May 7, 2001)
AMH Mgmt. Corp. v. The Mall at One Group Ltd. Partnership (May 4, 2001)
United States v. Simmons (May 4, 2001)
Consolidated Rail v. Canada Malting Co. (May 3, 2001)
United States v. Price (May 3, 2001)
Ryan v. New Providence Bd. of Education (May 2, 2001)
United States v. Delgado (May 2, 2001)
DeSantis v. Verniero (Apr. 30, 2001)
George v. Delaware State Police (Apr. 30, 2001)
In re All Plaintiffs (Apr. 30, 2001)
United States v. Johnson (Apr. 27, 2001)
Hudson v. Coppola (Apr. 16, 2001)
SEC v. Future Vision Direct (Apr. 16, 2001)
- Phillips v. Weaver* (Apr. 13, 2001)
United States v. Stringer (Apr. 12, 2001)
Sacavage v. Thomas Jefferson (Apr. 11, 2001)
In re Grand Jury (Apr. 11, 2001)
Hinton v. Federal Bureau of Prisons (Apr. 6, 2001)
In re Robinson (Apr. 6, 2001)
Williams v. Hartford Cas. Ins. Co. (Apr. 4, 2001)
United States v. Bartunek (Apr. 3, 2001)
Sailer v. New Jersey (Apr. 3, 2001)
United States v. Brand-Martinez (Mar. 30, 2001)
Snead v. Warden Allenwood (Mar. 29, 2001)
United States v. Van Wyk (Mar. 29, 2001)
United States v. Fields (Mar. 29, 2001)
Garrison v. Glassboro Police Dept. (Mar. 28, 2001)
Rivera v. Callahan (Mar. 28, 2001)
Jones v. Comm'r of Social Sec. (Mar. 28, 2001)
Lloyd v. Jefferson (Mar. 28, 2001)
Rawles v. Anderson (Mar. 28, 2001)
United States v. Hausman (Mar. 27, 2001)
Glasse v. Glasse (Mar. 26, 2001)
In re Kramer (Mar. 22, 2001)
Marcolongo v. School Dist. of Philadelphia (Mar. 21, 2001)
Farinelli v. United States Small Business Administration (Mar. 21, 2001)
Pendleton v. Largey (Mar. 12, 2001)
In re Lucabaugh (Mar. 8, 2001)
Cornell v. City of Union City (Mar. 7, 2001)
United States v. Green (Feb. 28, 2001)
Compania Agricola v. American Centennial Insurance (Feb. 27, 2001)
White v. Riverfront Prison (Feb. 26, 2001)
Muhammad v. Klotz (Feb. 21, 2001)
United States v. Cherys (Feb. 16, 2001)
United States v. Lizardo (Feb. 16, 2001)
Edison Medical Laboratory Inc. v. Health Care Finance Administration (Feb. 15, 2001)
Gallagher v. Borough of Downingtown (Feb. 12, 2001)
Hofmann v. United States (Feb. 9, 2001)
Smith v. Moriarty (Feb. 9, 2001)

- United States v. Martinez* (Feb. 9, 2001)
Hilda Feibus Foundation v. Feibus (Feb. 8, 2001)
United States v. Correa (Feb. 5, 2001)
Hubbard v. English (Feb. 5, 2001)
United States v. Lopez-Cepero (Feb. 1, 2001)
Pinho v. INS (Jan. 31, 2001)
Gomes v. Attorney General of the United States (Jan. 30, 2001)
In re Robson Gomes (Jan. 30, 2001)
United States v. Jackson (Jan. 30, 2001)
United States v. Marrero (Jan. 24, 2001)
Bowdoin v. Oriol (Jan. 23, 2001)
United States v. Wongus (Jan. 18, 2001)
United States v. Hugg Insurance (Jan. 17, 2001)
Mullin v. Apfel (Jan. 11, 2001)
United States v. Skursky (Jan. 10, 2001)
United States v. Fredericks (Jan. 9, 2001)
United States v. Verilli (Jan. 4, 2001)
Scott v. Hendricks (Jan. 3, 2001)
NLRB v. Overnite Transportation Company (Jan. 2, 2001)
Overnite Transp Co. v. NLRB. (Jan. 2, 2001)
David v. AMR Services Corp. (Dec. 28, 2000)
Woods v. Brewington-Carr (Dec. 26, 2000)
Rashid v. Mendez (Dec. 21, 2000)
Thompson v. Johnson (Dec. 21, 2000)
United States v. Romero (Dec. 20, 2000)
United States v. Castellanos (Dec. 20, 2000)
United States v. Greenaway (Dec. 20, 2000)
Boyardjian v. Cigna Companies (Dec. 20, 2000)
Virgin Islands v. Glasgow (Dec. 19, 2000)
United States v. West Indies Transportation Company (Dec. 19, 2000)
Harbas v. State of New Jersey (Dec. 15, 2000)
Switzer v. Commissioner of Social Security (Dec. 14, 2000)
Prousi v. Unum Life Insurance Company (Dec. 12, 2000)
Prousi v. Monarch Life Insurance Company (Dec. 12, 2000)
Swoyer v. Edgars (Dec. 8, 2000)
In re Enigwe (Dec. 8, 2000)
- Brokerage Concepts v. U.S. Healthcare* (Dec. 8, 2000)
Rogers v. Moore (Dec. 6, 2000)
United States v. Hernandez (Nov. 29, 2000)
Evans v. Prison Health Services (Nov. 28, 2000)
United States v. Scott (Nov. 27, 2000)
Sharpe v. Travelers Insurance Company (Nov. 24, 2000)
Dais v. Court of Common Pleas (Nov. 22, 2000)
Sumter v. Saybolt Inc. (Nov. 22, 2000)
White v. Kane (Nov. 17, 2000)
Geidel v. Horn (Nov. 16, 2000)
Ballard v. Commonwealth of Pennsylvania (Nov. 14, 2000)
Baylor Rush Inc. v. Harner (Nov. 13, 2000)
Approved Mortgage v. SEC (Nov. 9, 2000)
Adolph v. Apfel (Nov. 7, 2000)
Lippert v. Pennsylvania Board of Probation (Nov. 7, 2000)
Wilson v. Commissioner of Social Security (Nov. 6, 2000)
Johnson v. Brandywine Hundred (Nov. 6, 2000)
Hope v. State Correctional Institution (SCI) Graterford (Nov. 3, 2000)
Elder v. Menden (Nov. 3, 2000)
Simon v. Federal Prison Industries Inc. (Oct. 23, 2000)
Segal v. Temple University School of Law (Oct. 19, 2000)
Labar v. Commissioner of Social Security (Oct. 19, 2000)
In re Independent Silicon. (Oct. 19, 2000)
United States v. Merritt (Oct. 18, 2000)
United States v. Napier (Oct. 17, 2000)
Wall v. United States Administrative Office (Oct. 17, 2000)
United States v. Acosta (Oct. 16, 2000)
United States v. Rosado (Oct. 11, 2000)
United Trading v. Commonwealth Insurance Company (Oct. 11, 2000)
United States v. Kelly (Oct. 10, 2000)
Jeffrey v. Commissioner of Social Security (Oct. 10, 2000)

- United States v. Johnson* (Oct. 5, 2000)
Brown v. Markowitz (Oct. 4, 2000)
Morris v. Pennsylvania Board of Psychology (Oct. 3, 2000)
Johnson v. Childrens Reach (Sep. 29, 2000)
United States v. Hall (Sep. 29, 2000)
United States v. Conyer (Sep. 29, 2000)
United States v. Crandon (Sep. 29, 2000)
Johnson v. Coastal Milling Inc. (Sep. 29, 2000)
Grompone v. D'Italia (Sep. 29, 2000)
Brady v. Kawa (Sep. 28, 2000)
Burton v. N.Y.S.A.-I.L.A. Control Board (Sep. 26, 2000)
United States v. Acosta-Gonzalez (Sep. 26, 2000)
Frazier v. Commissioner of Social Security (Sep. 25, 2000)
United States v. Johnson (Sep. 21, 2000)
NLRB v. Local 13000 (Sep. 21, 2000)
Ohup v. Allegheny (Sep. 20, 2000)
Murphy v. Attorney General of the United States (Sep. 18, 2000)
Swaney v. Uniontown Hospital (Sep. 15, 2000)
Greene v. Wilson-Greene (Sep. 15, 2000)
Frost v. State of New Jersey (Sep. 15, 2000)
United States v. Corbitt (Sep. 15, 2000)
United States v. Medina (Sep. 14, 2000)
Hunt v. Kyler (Sep. 14, 2000)
Sortman v. Commonwealth of Pennsylvania (Sep. 13, 2000)
Koch v. Commonwealth of Pennsylvania (Sep. 13, 2000)
Valentin v. Zifovski (Sep. 11, 2000)
Holbrook v. Brennan (Sep. 8, 2000)
Burchill v. Commonwealth of Pennsylvania (Sep. 7, 2000)
Pinet v. Benning (Sep. 6, 2000)
Kosterowski v. Allstate Insurance Company (Sep. 6, 2000)
Bumpess v. Philadelphia Housing Authority (Sep. 5, 2000)
Cook v. Emory (Sep. 5, 2000)
Chittister v. Department of Community & Economic Development (Aug. 30, 2000)
- Venezia v. Equitable Life* (Aug. 25, 2000)
United States v. Babich (Aug. 22, 2000)
Annunziata v. Commissioner of Social Security (Aug. 22, 2000)
McNamara v. McDonough (Aug. 21, 2000)
Friedland v. Pinchak (Aug. 18, 2000)
Ndiaye v. Acting District Director, Immigration & Nationalization Service (Aug. 17, 2000)
In re Nwanze (Aug. 17, 2000)
United States v. Chipps (Aug. 17, 2000)
United States v. Dixon (Aug. 16, 2000)
United States v. Morris (Aug. 16, 2000)
Bunnion v. Consolidated Rail (Aug. 10, 2000)
United States v. McClain (Aug. 9, 2000)
La Corte v. Apfel (Aug. 9, 2000)
In re Steven Stamen (Aug. 9, 2000)
Price v. New Dominion School Inc. (Aug. 9, 2000)
Jones v. Johnson (Aug. 4, 2000)
Melvin v. Fontoura (Aug. 4, 2000)
Reynolds v. Mendoza (Aug. 4, 2000)
Alvarez v. Apfel (July 31, 2000)
United States v. Amerman (July 31, 2000)
Rashid v. Reno (July 31, 2000)
Dawson v. Polite (July 28, 2000)
United States v. Groff (July 28, 2000)
Owen v. Computer Sciences (July 28, 2000)
United States v. Zapata (July 28, 2000)
Astheimer v. Apfel (July 27, 2000)
Niedzwecki v. J.C. Penney Co. Inc. (July 27, 2000)
Nonack v. Beth Energy Mines (July 27, 2000)
BethEnergy Mines Inc. v. Director, Office of Worker Compensation Programs (July 27, 2000)
Bennett v. Fisher (July 26, 2000)
Steiger v. Abflex USA Inc. (July 26, 2000)
Patton v. Groner (July 21, 2000)
United States v. Piedrahita-Cano (July 20, 2000)
Joseph L. Muscarelle Inc. v. Drake Bakeries Inc. (July 19, 2000)
McCafferty v. Social Security Administration (July 17, 2000)
In re Grand Union (July 14, 2000)

- District 3 v. Sorensen* (July 13, 2000)
Pierce v. Pauls Trucking Corp. (July 13, 2000)
Talley v. Southeastern Pennsylvania Transportation Authority (July 13, 2000)
Cruz-Garcia v. Attorney General of the United States (July 13, 2000)
Primo v. Commissioner IRS (July 13, 2000)
In re Del Vecchio (July 13, 2000)
Rovnak v. Greenville Regional (July 12, 2000)
United States v. Lake (July 12, 2000)
McClain v. Horn (July 10, 2000)
Patton v. PHB Inc. (July 10, 2000)
United States v. Eakman (July 10, 2000)
Campione v. Wal Mart Stores Inc. (July 10, 2000)
Odelli v. North Belle Vernon (July 6, 2000)
United States v. Palmer (June 28, 2000)
Nelson v. Commissioner of Social Security (June 27, 2000)
United States v. Garone (June 27, 2000)
Diaz v. Commissioner of Social Security (June 26, 2000)
United States v. Mittermayr (June 22, 2000)
Aloe Energy Corp. v. Commissioner of Social Security (June 20, 2000)
Tumolo v. Triangle Pacific (June 15, 2000)
United States v. Nicklaus (June 15, 2000)
Santos v. Commissioner of Social Security (June 14, 2000)
United States v. Mazzotta (June 14, 2000)
United States v. Albanese (June 14, 2000)
United States v. Davis (June 14, 2000)
United States v. Virelli (June 14, 2000)
Acosta v. City of Philadelphia Prison System (June 13, 2000)
Tyler v. O'Neill (June 9, 2000)
Delazaro v. Lehigh University (June 9, 2000)
Glendora v. Nickerson (June 9, 2000)
United States v. McIntosh (June 8, 2000)
In re Civiello (June 8, 2000)
Tomlinson v. Continental Express (June 8, 2000)
United States v. Sanders (June 8, 2000)
United States v. Rantin (June 7, 2000)
Johnson v. Kyler (June 7, 2000)
Smith v. McCullough (June 2, 2000)
Caldarera v. International Terminal (June 2, 2000)
Camastro v. United States (May 31, 2000)
Afrika v. Kirkland (May 31, 2000)
Burns v. Patino (May 22, 2000)
Taylor v. Watson (May 19, 2000)
United States v. Hodge (May 19, 2000)
Dravo Corp. v. IMO Industries Inc. (May 19, 2000)
United Transportation Union v. Southeastern Pennsylvania Transportation Authority (May 15, 2000)
Omega Healthcare Inc. v. Algheney Health Education (May 15, 2000)
Meade v. Meade (May 11, 2000)
Morris v. Southeastern Pennsylvania Transportation Authority (May 11, 2000)
Shelby Casualty Insurance v. Dehaas (May 11, 2000)
AT&T v. Group Long Distance (May 10, 2000)
Feist v. Consolidated Freightways (May 10, 2000)
Van Buskirk v. West Bend Co. (May 10, 2000)
Hayes v. Ridge (May 10, 2000)
Patterson v. Commonwealth of Pennsylvania (May 10, 2000)
Elimeleh v. Chester (May 10, 2000)
In re Fortune (May 8, 2000)
United States v. Kelsey (May 5, 2000)
Grimes v. Northwest Airlines (May 4, 2000)
Shephard v. Holland (May 2, 2000)
Parker v. Department of Public Safety (Apr. 25, 2000)
Jobin v. American & Foreign Insurance (Apr. 21, 2000)
Marshall v. Shiley (Apr. 17, 2000)
Singha v. INS (Apr. 11, 2000)
Balasingham v. INS (Apr. 10, 2000)
Carter v. Luther (Apr. 7, 2000)
Scheidly v. St. Paul Mercury (Apr. 5, 2000)
Sallee v. United States Parole Commission (Apr. 5, 2000)
In re Carlton Clark (Mar. 31, 2000)
John E Long Inc. v. Ringwood (Mar. 31, 2000)

- Hooks v. City of Philadelphia Prison System* (Mar. 31, 2000)
United States v. Heard (Mar. 31, 2000)
United States v. Diaz (Mar. 31, 2000)
In re MAC TAV Inc. (Mar. 31, 2000)
Hu v. INS (Mar. 31, 2000)
Banks v. Livingood (Mar. 30, 2000)
United States v. Powell (Mar. 29, 2000)
Nichols v. DeJoy (Mar. 29, 2000)
In re Rickey Alford (Mar. 28, 2000)
Newman v. Brill (Mar. 28, 2000)
United States v. Cibellis (Mar. 27, 2000)
United States v. Rosario (Mar. 27, 2000)
Capella v. Container Corporation of America (Mar. 24, 2000)
Parke v. Commissioner of Social Security (Mar. 24, 2000)
United States v. Gardner (Mar. 23, 2000)
Hartman v. Shearin (Mar. 22, 2000)
Handicomp Inc. v. U.S. Golf Association (Mar. 22, 2000)
Gbadegsin v. INS (Mar. 22, 2000)
Dutton v. Buckingham Township (Mar. 16, 2000)
Harper v. Commissioner of Social Security (Mar. 14, 2000)
Hodgkinson v. Jacoby & Myers (Mar. 13, 2000)
Coit v. Morton (Mar. 10, 2000)
United States v. Santos-Jimenez (Mar. 10, 2000)
TopCo. Inc. v. Secretary Labor (Mar. 10, 2000)
Palmer v. Wal Mart Stores Inc. (Mar. 9, 2000)
In re Henry Ford (Mar. 8, 2000)
Valosik v. National City Bank (Mar. 7, 2000)
Murphy v. Garrett (Mar. 7, 2000)
Fisher v. Vandergoot (Mar. 6, 2000)
Frempong-Atuahene v. Redevelopment Authority (Mar. 2, 2000)
United States v. Hecht (Feb. 29, 2000)
United States v. Westburg (Feb. 28, 2000)
United States v. Allen (Feb. 28, 2000)
United States v. Mitchell (Feb. 28, 2000)
Blanchard v. Wal Mart Stores Inc. (Feb. 28, 2000)
- In re James Cole* (Feb. 25, 2000)
Royal Insurance Company of America v. Hussey Cooper Ltd (Feb. 25, 2000)
Commerce Ltd v. Hudson Motor Lodge Inc. (Feb. 25, 2000)
Mastricola v. DiminiCo. (Feb. 18, 2000)
Cohen v. Supervisor – United States Probation (Feb. 18, 2000)
United States v. Gadson (Feb. 18, 2000)
NLRB v. Sys Elec Maintenance (Feb. 18, 2000)
Stewart v. Kyler (Feb. 16, 2000)
In re Fortune v. (Feb. 16, 2000)
Royster v. Kelshaw (Feb. 16, 2000)
Feliciano v. Laubham (Feb. 15, 2000)
Aziz v. Grove Cty College (Feb. 15, 2000)
Cuneo v. Kusturiss (Feb. 14, 2000)
Lieber v. Perreault (Feb. 11, 2000)
Lepre v. Rinaldi (Feb. 11, 2000)
United States v. Yusim (Feb. 8, 2000)
Fowler v. United States (Jan. 31, 2000)
In re Kalmanowicz (Jan. 31, 2000)
United States v. Montes (Jan. 31, 2000)
Kalmanowicz v. Nogi Appleton (Jan. 31, 2000)
United States v. Sharma (Jan. 31, 2000)
United States v. AdkIns. (Jan. 31, 2000)
United States v. Castillo (Jan. 31, 2000)
Rafferty v. Delaware River Port Authority (Jan. 31, 2000)
Johnson v. E.I. DuPont de Nemours (Jan. 31, 2000)
United States v. Diaz (Jan. 28, 2000)
Mitchell v. Commissioner of Social Security (Jan. 28, 2000)
United States v. Zimmerman (Jan. 21, 2000)
United States v. Lowe (Jan. 18, 2000)
United States v. Villagran (Jan. 18, 2000)
United States v. Fejeran (Jan. 18, 2000)
Smith v. Hulick (Jan. 13, 2000)
Morgan Stiftung v. AmEuro Capital Corp. (Jan. 12, 2000)
Riddick v. Bogus (Jan. 4, 2000)
Walters v. Fullum (Dec. 28, 1999)
Giannantonio v. Commissioner of Social Security (Dec. 28, 1999)

- Linson v. University of Pennsylvania* (Dec. 23, 1999)
United States v. Konuwa (Dec. 22, 1999)
Sumter v. Dowd (Dec. 22, 1999)
Burchill v. Commonwealth of Pennsylvania (Dec. 22, 1999)
In re New England (Dec. 22, 1999)
Morrone v. Thuring (Dec. 22, 1999)
Whiteford v. Reed (Dec. 20, 1999)
Spina v. Kurtz (Dec. 17, 1999)
Scott v. Horn (Dec. 16, 1999)
Nickelson v. United States (Dec. 15, 1999)
Rauso v. Vaughn (Dec. 14, 1999)
Bronson v. Mrkonja (Dec. 9, 1999)
Oliver v. Attorney General of Pennsylvania (Dec. 9, 1999)
United States v. Zamarra (Dec. 9, 1999)
United States v. Cheston (Dec. 9, 1999)
Commonwealth of Pennsylvania v. Provident Embassy (Dec. 8, 1999)
Allen v. Brown (Dec. 8, 1999)
United States v. Sanin-Rincon (Dec. 8, 1999)
Martin v. Pennsylvania Real Estate Commission (Dec. 7, 1999)
Robinson v. Ridge (Dec. 7, 1999)
Smith v. Mendez (Dec. 7, 1999)
Singleton v. Newark Police Department (Dec. 7, 1999)
Pikitus v. Ferrier (Dec. 6, 1999)
Parrott v. United States (Dec. 3, 1999)
Turner v. Vaughn (Dec. 3, 1999)
United States v. Rahmini (Nov. 30, 1999)
MAQ Summit Oakes v. Shell Oil Co. (Nov. 30, 1999)
United States v. Puerta (Nov. 30, 1999)
Channel Group v. Vertex Industries (Nov. 30, 1999)
In re Camille Neto (Nov. 30, 1999)
Tedeschi v. Deutsche Wurlitzer (Nov. 30, 1999)
Szalkowski v. Roy F. Weston Inc. (Nov. 30, 1999)
United States v. Richardson (Nov. 30, 1999)
United States v. Cohen (Nov. 30, 1999)
Morton-Smith v. Sea Land Corp. (Nov. 29, 1999)
Davis v. Ort (Nov. 29, 1999)
Caskey v. Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation (Nov. 26, 1999)
Talley v. United Transportation Union (Nov. 26, 1999)
United States v. Camargo-Miranda (Nov. 24, 1999)
Mikkilineni v. Amwest Surety Insurance Co. (Nov. 24, 1999)
International Hobby Corp. v. Rivarossi SpA (Nov. 22, 1999)
In re Jose Santiago (Nov. 17, 1999)
Rodriguez v. Bakley Marino (Nov. 16, 1999)
Wapnick v. FranCo. (Nov. 4, 1999)
United States v. Blake (Oct. 26, 1999)
United States v. Rishell (Oct. 26, 1999)
Greene v. Morris (Oct. 22, 1999)
Hopper v. Quinn (Oct. 22, 1999)
United States v. Gallina (Oct. 21, 1999)
Smith v. English (Oct. 19, 1999)
Jones v. Secretary of the Navy (Oct. 14, 1999)
Olender v. Rubenstein (Oct. 14, 1999)
United States v. Brown (Oct. 13, 1999)
United States v. Daniels (Oct. 13, 1999)
Flagg v. American Federation of State & County Employees (Oct. 13, 1999)
Smith v. Apfel (Oct. 13, 1999)
United States v. Bazarte (Oct. 8, 1999)
United States v. University of Medicine (Sep. 29, 1999)
Robinson v. Clemons (Sep. 27, 1999)
Cannon v. Montgomery County (Sep. 23, 1999)
Armstrong v. Firstrust Bank (Sep. 10, 1999)
United States v. Harple (Sep. 10, 1999)
In re I. Parker Huff (Sep. 10, 1999)
Bonenberger v. Plymouth Township (Sep. 9, 1999)
NJ Protection & Advocacy, Inc. v. Waldman (Aug. 26, 1999)
Ray Foggs Bldg v. Parmenter (Aug. 25, 1999)
Iadanza v. Bell Atlantic Network (Aug. 20, 1999)
Betts v. Pinchak (Aug. 20, 1999)
Cotton v. Jranud (Aug. 19, 1999)

- Curran v. Southeastern Pennsylvania Transportation Authority* (Aug. 19, 1999)
United States v. Bethea (Aug. 17, 1999)
In re Grand Jury (Aug. 17, 1999)
Warrick v. Snider (Aug. 17, 1999)
United States v. Padilla (Aug. 16, 1999)
United States v. Celestine (Aug. 16, 1999)
Killino v. Riverside School District (Aug. 16, 1999)
In re Walter Kates (Aug. 13, 1999)
In re Plummer (Aug. 13, 1999)
In re SacCo. (Aug. 11, 1999)
United States Ex Rel Aultman v. Vaughn (Aug. 9, 1999)
Veneri v. Court of Common Pleas (Aug. 6, 1999)
United States v. Tabas (Aug. 6, 1999)
In re Roldan (Aug. 4, 1999)
Haithcoach v. Fanello (Aug. 4, 1999)
Truskowski v. Apfel (July 19, 1999)
United States v. Vitello (July 16, 1999)
United States v. Stewart (July 16, 1999)
Dickler v. Cigna Property (July 15, 1999)
United States v. Yumpo (July 15, 1999)
Marcone v. Penns Landing Marine (July 15, 1999)
Reilly v. Weiss (July 14, 1999)
McConnaughey v. West Central Production Credit Association (July 8, 1999)
United States v. Medford (July 2, 1999)
United States v. Cszmazia (July 2, 1999)
Atlantic Contracting v. International Fidelity Insurance Company (June 30, 1999)
Tucker v. Ogden Corp. (June 29, 1999)
In re Advanced Ele (June 29, 1999)
United States v. Locskai (June 29, 1999)
Miller v. United States (June 28, 1999)
U.S. Fidelity Guaranty v. Feibus (June 18, 1999)
Skidmore v. Duquesne Light Company (June 17, 1999)
In re Eric Keller (June 17, 1999)
Wilder v. Tittle (June 17, 1999)
Melbourne v. Irvington (June 17, 1999)
Pundik v. Towamensing Trails (June 17, 1999)
Roof Pro Inc. v. Local 44 (June 17, 1999)
Chambers v. Acme Markets Inc. (June 11, 1999)
In re Ashendorf (June 4, 1999)
United States v. Fishbone (June 2, 1999)
United States v. Autrey (June 2, 1999)
Carulli v. Apfel (June 2, 1999)
United States v. Rivera-Ortega (May 28, 1999)
United States v. Colon (May 28, 1999)
Continental Insurance Company v. Alperin Inc. (May 28, 1999)
United States v. Mease (May 28, 1999)
Reese v. United Steelworkers (May 28, 1999)
Toronto v. Commissioner IRS (May 28, 1999)
Pine Creek Coal Co. v. Koppenhaver (May 28, 1999)
Bethenergy Mines Inc. v. Director, Office of Workers Compensation Programs (May 27, 1999)
Wenner v. Pennsylvania Power & Light Co. (May 27, 1999)
Moore v. Acme Corrugated Box (May 26, 1999)
Doe v. Constantine (May 21, 1999)
DeShields v. City of Philadelphia (May 20, 1999)
Hockin v. Bushkirk (May 20, 1999)
Mensah v. INS (May 20, 1999)
Price v. Mazurkiewicz (May 20, 1999)
Medical-Legal v. McHugh (May 14, 1999)
United States v. Rosa (May 11, 1999)
Walton v. City of Philadelphia (May 6, 1999)
Seaton v. Delaware County Prison (May 5, 1999)
Williams v. Commissioner of Social Security (Apr. 30, 1999)
Grove v. Commissioner IRS (Apr. 30, 1999)
Cattalo v. Commissioner IRS (Apr. 30, 1999)
United States v. Willis (Apr. 30, 1999)
Ryan v. Commissioner IRS (Apr. 30, 1999)
Giongo v. Commissioner IRS (Apr. 30, 1999)
Wilson v. Commissioner IRS (Apr. 30, 1999)
United States v. DiPoalo (Apr. 30, 1999)
In re Bensinger (Apr. 30, 1999)
In re Allah (Apr. 30, 1999)

- Byrne v. Journal Register Company* (Apr. 29, 1999)
- Winans v. Praeger* (Apr. 27, 1999)
- Mangan v. Leopold* (Apr. 27, 1999)
- In re Smith* (Apr. 27, 1999)
- United States v. Harper* (Apr. 22, 1999)
- Friedrich v. U.S. Computer Sys., Inc.* (Apr. 15, 1999)
- United States v. Tucker* (Apr. 14, 1999)
- United States v. McIntosh* (Apr. 14, 1999)
- United States v. Morris* (Apr. 14, 1999)
- United States v. Davis* (Apr. 14, 1999)
- Thomas v. Mctigue* (Apr. 14, 1999)
- United States v. Cruz* (Apr. 14, 1999)
- United States v. Feliciano* (Apr. 14, 1999)
- Kulowski v. Messano* (Apr. 14, 1999)
- United States v. Ingram* (Apr. 14, 1999)
- United States v. White* (Apr. 14, 1999)
- United States v. Schwyhart* (Apr. 14, 1999)
- Loftus v. SEPTA* (Apr. 13, 1999)
- United States v. Chambers* (Apr. 12, 1999)
- Sullivan v. Snyder* (Apr. 2, 1999)
- Bui v. Children's Hosp. of Philadelphia* (Mar. 31, 1999)
- Allah v. Stachelek* (Mar. 31, 1999)
- Allah v. Ridge* (Mar. 31, 1999)
- Gaviria v. Beeler* (Mar. 31, 1999)
- Tudor Ins. Co. v. Mackin Eng'g Co.* (Mar. 30, 1999)
- Baird v. Goldstein* (Mar. 29, 1999)
- United States v. Waltman* (Mar. 26, 1999)
- Wiernik v. Scott Elec. Co.* (Mar. 25, 1999)
- Hart v. United States* (Mar. 25, 1999)
- United States v. Morea* (Mar. 25, 1999)
- United States v. Salazar-Mesa* (Mar. 25, 1999)
- United States v. Springer* (Mar. 25, 1999)
- United States v. Rojas-Ortiz* (Mar. 25, 1999)
- Nat'l RR Passenger v. Pub Util Comm PA* (Mar. 24, 1999)
- Johnson v. Super Fresh Food* (Mar. 24, 1999)
- Moran v. Holiday Inn Centro* (Mar. 23, 1999)
- Platts v. Lanzaro* (Mar. 22, 1999)
- Online Yellow Pages v. Bell Atl.* (Mar. 22, 1999)
- In re Jovanovic* (Mar. 22, 1999)
- Castillo v. Reno* (Mar. 22, 1999)
- Krystal Cadillac v. Estate of Eckert* (Mar. 22, 1999)
- United States v. Bacchus* (Mar. 22, 1999)
- King v. Comm'r* (Mar. 19, 1999)
- Ogike v. Franco* (Mar. 19, 1999)
- Mintz v. Comm'r* (Mar. 17, 1999)
- In re Cole* (Mar. 16, 1999)
- Harner v. Nicholls* (Mar. 11, 1999)
- United States v. Dan* (Mar. 10, 1999)
- In re Whiteford* (Mar. 9, 1999)
- Leslie v. United States* (Mar. 4, 1999)
- United States v. Obisesan* (Mar. 3, 1999)
- Schneider v. State of New Jersey* (Feb. 25, 1999)
- Nieves v. Dragovich* (Feb. 22, 1999)
- United States v. Ayala* (Feb. 18, 1999)
- Ashford v. Skiles* (Feb. 17, 1999)
- United States v. Jackson* (Feb. 16, 1999)
- Guidish v. Lehman* (Feb. 12, 1999)
- United States v. Soto* (Feb. 11, 1999)
- Minchin v. S.A.S. Safety Corp.* (Feb. 10, 1999)
- Newhard v. Philadelphia, Bethlehem & New England R.R. Co.* (Feb. 9, 1999)
- Segen v. Thomas B. Rutter, Ltd.* (Feb. 9, 1999)
- Johnson v. INS* (Feb. 9, 1999)
- Hayes v. Franco* (Feb. 9, 1999)
- Williams v. Millar Elevator Serv. Co.* (Feb. 8, 1999)
- Talley v. Horn* (Feb. 8, 1999)
- United States v. Lampley* (Feb. 5, 1999)
- Jackson v. Postmaster General* (Feb. 4, 1999)
- United States v. Glickstein* (Feb. 4, 1999)
- United States v. Walker* (Feb. 3, 1999)
- Thomas v. United States* (Feb. 3, 1999)
- United States v. Herrera* (Feb. 3, 1999)
- Buckwalter v. ICI Explosives* (Feb. 2, 1999)
- United States v. Walker* (Jan. 29, 1999)
- Balliet v. Heydt* (Jan. 29, 1999)
- United States v. Fiorelli* (Jan. 29, 1999)
- Harmer v. Perry* (Jan. 29, 1999)
- United Food and Commercial Workers v. Cinnaminson Supermarket, Inc.* (Jan. 29, 1999)
- Blair v. Cornucopia Caterers* (Jan. 28, 1999)
- Jackson v. The Right Stuff* (Jan. 28, 1999)
- Allen v. Mazurkiewicz* (Jan. 27, 1999)

- Oates v. City of Philadelphia* (Jan. 26, 1999)
Malone v. Redavid (Jan. 26, 1999)
Nelson v. Barbo (Jan. 26, 1999)
Hernandez v. Fabo (Jan. 15, 1999)
In re Rodney Evans (Jan. 14, 1999)
United States v. Lopez (Jan. 7, 1999)
Young v. Burke (Jan. 7, 1999)
In re Thorpe (Jan. 7, 1999)
United States v. Commonwealth of Pennsylvania (Jan. 4, 1999)
Queen v. TRUE (Jan. 4, 1999)
Gray v. Ellis (Dec. 31, 1998)
In re Belfore (Dec. 31, 1998)
Williams v. Secretary of the Navy (Dec. 30, 1998)
Hopkins v. Larkins (Dec. 18, 1998)
Butler v. Northstar Health Serv., Inc. (Dec. 17, 1998)
United States v. Figueroa (Dec. 15, 1998)
McCray v. United States Healthcare Sys. of Pennsylvania (Dec. 15, 1998)
United States v. Small (Dec. 11, 1998)
Anderson v. Terra (Dec. 9, 1998)
Beck v. County of Mercer (Dec. 7, 1998)
United States v. McDougall (Dec. 7, 1998)
Newport Assoc. Dev. Co. v. Travelers Indem. Co. (Dec. 3, 1998)
Nelson v. Vaughn (Dec. 3, 1998)
Fisher v. ADT Sec. Sys., Inc. (Dec. 2, 1998)
United States v. Banks (Nov. 27, 1998)
Getty Realty Corp. v. Hettler (Nov. 25, 1998)
Compton v. Nat'l League (Nov. 25, 1998)
Quaciari v. Allstate Ins. Co. (Nov. 25, 1998)
Rigle v. Director OWCP (Nov. 25, 1998)
Rives v. County of Monmouth (Nov. 25, 1998)
United States v. Womack (Nov. 25, 1998)
United States v. Oblea-Gonzalez (Nov. 25, 1998)
DeSimone v. Xerox Corp. (Nov. 23, 1998)
United States v. Alicea (Nov. 23, 1998)
United States v. Fasolino (Nov. 23, 1998)
Kowalczyk v. TRUE (Nov. 23, 1998)
Fleming v. Cape May Cty (Nov. 20, 1998)
Lutz v. Attorney General of Pennsylvania (Nov. 18, 1998)
United States v. Lonergan (Nov. 16, 1998)
In re Y.J. Sons & Co. (Nov. 16, 1998)
Bryant v. Morton (Nov. 16, 1998)
Auth'd Foreign Car Specialists of Westfield v. Jaguar Cars, Inc. (Nov. 16, 1998)
Harris v. Mercy Health Corp. (Nov. 13, 1998)
McAllister v. Greyhound Lines, Inc. (Nov. 13, 1998)
Laster v. Comm'r (Nov. 13, 1998)
McCargo v. Birkhimer (Nov. 12, 1998)
Byrd v. Lucas (Nov. 12, 1998)
In re Steven Shawley (Nov. 12, 1998)
In re Nicoletti (Nov. 10, 1998)
Kessler v. Philadelphia Dep't Human Serv. (Oct. 15, 1998)
Whichard v. Cheltenham Township (Oct. 8, 1998)
Halvajian v. Bank of New York (Oct. 8, 1998)
Faltermayer v. Burdette (Oct. 5, 1998)
Patzlaff v. Miller (Oct. 2, 1998)
United States v. Ginsberg (Oct. 2, 1998)
Enigwe v. Capone (Oct. 2, 1998)
Holz v. Horn (Oct. 2, 1998)
United States v. Clayton (Oct. 2, 1998)
United States v. Rodriguez (Oct. 1, 1998)
United States v. Perez (Oct. 1, 1998)
Mohr v. Whitehall-Robins Lab. (Oct. 1, 1998)
Casino v. INS (Oct. 1, 1998)
United States v. Felton (Oct. 1, 1998)
Ribeiro v. Delcolle (Sep. 30, 1998)
Bolen v. Comm'r (Sep. 29, 1998)
Edwards v. Comm'r (Sep. 28, 1998)
Kotas v. Eastman Kodak Co. (Sep. 24, 1998)
Singh v. INS (Sep. 24, 1998)
United States v. Montoya-Castano (Sep. 24, 1998)
In re Sharon Steel (Sep. 22, 1998)
Belfer v. Zee (Sep. 22, 1998)
United States v. Calderon (Sep. 17, 1998)
Prusinowski v. Sears Roebuck & Co. (Sep. 16, 1998)
United States v. Brandon (Sep. 16, 1998)
Matous v. Commonwealth of Pennsylvania (Sep. 15, 1998)
Watson v. Spears (Sep. 4, 1998)
Marracino v. Pennsylvania Dep't of Transportation (Aug. 31, 1998)

- Bergstein v. Domovich* (Aug. 31, 1998)
Fleming v. Derosé (Aug. 31, 1998)
Williams v. TRUE (Aug. 31, 1998)
United States v. Galeano (Aug. 26, 1998)
Williams v. Brown (Aug. 26, 1998)
United States v. Gordon (Aug. 26, 1998)
United States v. Samuels (Aug. 26, 1998)
Kuhla v. Director OWCP (Aug. 26, 1998)
Smith v. Plantier (Aug. 26, 1998)
United States v. Borrone (Aug. 24, 1998)
Simchoni v. John Guest (U.S.A.), Inc. (Aug. 24, 1998)
Chnupa v. Postmaster General (Aug. 21, 1998)
United States v. Raindrop (Aug. 21, 1998)
Boyce v. Penn Fishing Tackle (Aug. 21, 1998)
Wiernik v. Scott Elec. Co. (Aug. 20, 1998)
McKnight v. House (Aug. 20, 1998)
Moat v. Sobina (Aug. 20, 1998)
McVey v. Comm'r (Aug. 20, 1998)
Int'l Terminal v. Bonilla (Aug. 20, 1998)
Lichtman v. United States (Aug. 19, 1998)
United States v. Edwards (Aug. 19, 1998)
Rodgers v. Ford Motor Co. (Aug. 19, 1998)
Bodine v. Warwick (Aug. 19, 1998)
Bodine v. Warwick (Aug. 19, 1998)
United States v. Torres (Aug. 19, 1998)
Olivencia v. Gillis (Aug. 19, 1998)
Ellis v. TRUE (Aug. 19, 1998)
In re Lohoefer (Aug. 19, 1998)
Olivencia v. Gillis (Aug. 19, 1998)
Norton v. Wilshire Credit Corp. (Aug. 18, 1998)
Moeller v. Danek Med., Inc. (Aug. 18, 1998)
Boyer v. Macarski (Aug. 18, 1998)
CollIns. v. United States Parole Commission (Aug. 17, 1998)
Jubilee v. Vaughn (Aug. 12, 1998)
S.J. Groves & Sons v. Director OWCP (Aug. 12, 1998)
Lawrence v. Barto Technical Serv., Inc. (Aug. 6, 1998)
Walden v. Hines (Aug. 6, 1998)
CollIns v. Comm'r (Aug. 6, 1998)
In re Ristagno (Aug. 3, 1998)
Boyer v. Macarski (July 31, 1998)
- Jackson v. White* (July 30, 1998)
United States v. Booher (July 29, 1998)
Jess v. Wagner (July 27, 1998)
Vargo v. Dir. Lyons VA Hosp. (July 24, 1998)
In re Coleman (July 24, 1998)
Koppers Co. Inc. v. Aetna Cas. & Sur. Co. (July 22, 1998)
DB v. Ocean Township Board of Education (July 21, 1998)
Riddick v. Potts (July 17, 1998)
United States v. Rabin (July 15, 1998)
United States v. Fishbone (July 14, 1998)
Gerardi v. Pelullo (July 14, 1998)
Lloyd v. United States (July 14, 1998)
United States v. Hall (July 14, 1998)
Russo v. Guardian Ins. & Annuity Co., Inc. (July 10, 1998)
United States v. Richman (July 10, 1998)
Snisky v. Pugh (July 10, 1998)
Whitlatch v. Pechin Leasing Inc. (July 9, 1998)
E.S.G. v. Collingswood Board of Education (July 9, 1998)
C.R. Bard, Inc. v. W.L. Gore & Assoc. (July 9, 1998)
Knox v. Vaughn (July 9, 1998)
Desbiens v. Comm'r (July 8, 1998)
United States v. Baird (July 7, 1998)
In re Little (July 7, 1998)
Joyce v. Secretary of Dep't of Health and Human Services (July 7, 1998)
Zhang v. Reno (July 7, 1998)
Gibson v. Pennsylvania Nat'l Guard (July 7, 1998)
Williams v. McLaughlin (July 6, 1998)
Lewis v. State of New Jersey (July 2, 1998)
United States v. Craig (July 2, 1998)
Local 827 v. FKW, Inc. (July 2, 1998)
Kramer v. Tribe (July 2, 1998)
McClellan v. Comm'r (July 1, 1998)
Hammer v. Holland (June 29, 1998)
Raimo v. Housing Auth. of the Township of Irvington (June 26, 1998)
United States v. Gilmore (June 26, 1998)
Smith v. Pennsylvania Bd. of Probation & Parole (June 26, 1998)

- Sarkar v. Temple University* (June 25, 1998)
United States v. Telleria (June 25, 1998)
Son v. State Farm Ins. Co. (June 24, 1998)
United States v. 6 Tenby Ct. (June 22, 1998)
Farabaugh v. Jones (June 22, 1998)
Wollaver v. Gilhooly (June 22, 1998)
United States v. Fisher (June 17, 1998)
Newsome v. Port Auth. of Allegheny Co. (June 17, 1998)
Dwight v. Erhard (June 8, 1998)
Van Gores v. Dep't of Interior (June 8, 1998)
Virgin Islands Maritime Serv., Inc. v. Puerto Rice Maritime Shipping Auth. (June 8, 1998)
Ball v. Sprat Bay Corp. (June 8, 1998)
Peters v. Heydt (June 5, 1998)
Kennedy v. CNA Ins. Co. (May 29, 1998)
United States v. Belardo (May 29, 1998)
Marsh v. Riter (May 29, 1998)
Rowe v. Westinghouse Elec. Corp. (May 26, 1998)
United States v. Varlack Ventures, Inc. (May 22, 1998)
United States v. Boynes (May 22, 1998)
Bair v. USI/Clearing/Div. of S.S. Industries, Inc. (May 21, 1998)
First Federal Fin. Corp. v. Jackson (May 18, 1998)
Amaechi v. West Manchester Township (May 18, 1998)
United States v. Ray (May 7, 1998)
United States v. Williams (May 7, 1998)
Hobbs v. Rubin (May 7, 1998)
Tuthill v. Consolidated Rail Corp. (May 5, 1998)
United States v. Gibson (May 5, 1998)
Hackett v. Pennsylvania Bd. of Probation & Parole (May 5, 1998)
United States v. Lena (May 1, 1998)
United States v. Baptiste (Apr. 30, 1998)
United States v. Gumbs (Apr. 30, 1998)
Oh v. Kang (Apr. 29, 1998)
NLRB v. Local No. 469 (Apr. 28, 1998)
Winokur v. Chesney (Apr. 24, 1998)
Nelson v. Evans (Apr. 23, 1998)
Muller v. Lettsome (Apr. 23, 1998)
Snuggs v. Fedorczyk (Apr. 23, 1998)
Brown v. Hawk (Apr. 22, 1998)
United States v. Holmes (Apr. 20, 1998)
Gibson v. City of Philadelphia (Apr. 17, 1998)
Gov't of the Virgin Islands v. Maynard (Apr. 17, 1998)
Brown v. Gov't of the Virgin Islands (Apr. 17, 1998)
Clark v. Schneider (Apr. 17, 1998)
Fritz v. Lancaster Co. (Apr. 16, 1998)
Zotter v. Murphy (Apr. 15, 1998)
Gov't of the Virgin Islands v. Charles (Apr. 15, 1998)
Local No. 98 v. Brassell Co., Inc. (Apr. 14, 1998)
Foremanye v. University of Pennsylvania (Apr. 14, 1998)
Cuoco v. Quinlan (Apr. 14, 1998)
United States v. Shavers (Apr. 13, 1998)
Gaston v. United States Postal Service (Apr. 10, 1998)
United States v. Herrera (Apr. 10, 1998)
Delgrande v. Temple University (Apr. 9, 1998)
Dompur v. INS (Apr. 9, 1998)
United States v. Ahanotu (Apr. 9, 1998)
Wirs v. York Co. (Apr. 2, 1998)
Pacelli v. Hurley (Apr. 1, 1998)
Shemonsky v. Hynes (Apr. 1, 1998)
Byrd v. Robison (Mar. 31, 1998)
Pisani v. Angelilli (Mar. 30, 1998)
SEC v. 1st Amer. Corp. (Mar. 30, 1998)
United States v. Correll (Mar. 27, 1998)
Van Buskirk v. West Bend Co. (Mar. 27, 1998)
Walsh v. Benjamin (Mar. 26, 1998)
United States v. Fasolino (Mar. 25, 1998)
Paskins v. Brown (Mar. 24, 1998)
Beyah v. Vaughn (Mar. 23, 1998)
United States v. Wright (Mar. 23, 1998)
United States v. Karimi (Mar. 20, 1998)
Peters v. Smith (Mar. 20, 1998)
Marshall v. Joy Tech., Inc. (Mar. 20, 1998)
United States v. Riddick (Mar. 19, 1998)
United States v. Williams (Mar. 18, 1998)
United States v. Spence (Mar. 18, 1998)
Schwec v. Schultheis (Mar. 13, 1998)
Homar v. Gilbert (Mar. 9, 1998)

- Via v. Pennsylvania Board of Probation & Parole* (Mar. 9, 1998)
Embry v. Fleckenstein (Mar. 4, 1998)
Cooper v. Port Auth. (Mar. 3, 1998)
Glen Lincoln, Inc. v. Zurich Ins. Co. (Feb. 27, 1998)
Fernandes v. EPA (Feb. 26, 1998)
Contreras v. INS (Feb. 20, 1998)
Keystone Truck Equip. v. Russell Chevrolet (Feb. 19, 1998)
McCann v. Nat'l Amusements Inc. (Feb. 19, 1998)
United States v. Okoro (Feb. 18, 1998)
Shaffer v. Mt. Laurel R.R. Co. (Feb. 18, 1998)
Jackson v. Watson (Feb. 18, 1998)
United States v. Gaudelli (Feb. 13, 1998)
McCann v. Lower Bank (Feb. 11, 1998)
Rawls v. Comm'r (Feb. 6, 1998)
Bellesfield v. Attorney General of New Jersey (Feb. 6, 1998)
Ferguson v. University of Pennsylvania (Feb. 5, 1998)
United States v. Walker (Feb. 5, 1998)
United States v. Way (Feb. 5, 1998)
Castaphney v. White (Feb. 5, 1998)
United States v. Sotelo (Feb. 5, 1998)
Reiss v. Pocono Mountain School District (Feb. 5, 1998)
Brodnax v. Stepanik (Feb. 4, 1998)
Laessig v. City of Philadelphia (Jan. 26, 1998)
United States v. Haynes (Jan. 23, 1998)
Martiri v. INS (Jan. 22, 1998)
Jerry v. Zaborowski (Jan. 22, 1998)
United States v. Pizza (Jan. 15, 1998)
McDuffie v. City of Philadelphia (Jan. 15, 1998)
United States v. Brown (Jan. 14, 1998)
Craw v. Horn (Jan. 7, 1998)
Pi Lambda Phi v. Univ. of Pittsburgh (Jan. 7, 1998)
Walton v. Div. of Revenue (Jan. 7, 1998)
United States v. Benson (Jan. 7, 1998)
Cole v. Fetzner (Jan. 6, 1998)
Hernandez v. Tassos (Dec. 31, 1997)
Moriarty v. Shiner (Dec. 30, 1997)
Kovach v. Brownsville Hosp. (Dec. 23, 1997)
United States v. Patel (Dec. 23, 1997)
United States v. Briggs (Dec. 22, 1997)
United States v. Lewis (Dec. 22, 1997)
United States v. Berry (Dec. 22, 1997)
Pacek v. Botula (Dec. 22, 1997)
United States v. Boyd (Dec. 19, 1997)
United States v. Delgado (Dec. 19, 1997)
Mellon Bank, N.A. v. Sheehan (Dec. 19, 1997)
United States v. Wilson (Dec. 19, 1997)
Sarbello v. Eastman Kodak Co. (Dec. 19, 1997)
United States v. Watson (Dec. 18, 1997)
Gutknecht v. SmithKline Beecham (Dec. 18, 1997)
United States v. Boniella (Dec. 18, 1997)
Miller v. Cent. New Jersey Med. Group (Dec. 15, 1997)
Kendall v. Vaughn (Dec. 5, 1997)
Builders Square, Inc. v. Saraco. (Dec. 5, 1997)
Builders Square, Inc. v. Nat'l Union Fire Ins. Co. (Dec. 5, 1997)
Shawley v. Kyler (Dec. 3, 1997)
United States v. Stallings (Dec. 2, 1997)
Karasik v. Schatz (Nov. 28, 1997)
United States v. Abreau (Nov. 28, 1997)
Smith v. Aspimwall (Nov. 25, 1997)
Mulson v. Pennsylvania Bd. of Probation & Parole (Nov. 25, 1997)
Hodanic v. Nat'l Recovery Corp. (Nov. 24, 1997)
Kaplan v. Prins Recycling (Nov. 21, 1997)
Amato v. Prins (Nov. 21, 1997)
Ballard v. Prins (Nov. 21, 1997)
Denigris v. Prins (Nov. 21, 1997)
Messam v. Morton (Nov. 19, 1997)
McFarland v. Nesbitt (Nov. 19, 1997)
United States v. Johnson (Nov. 19, 1997)
United States v. Tally (Nov. 17, 1997)
United States v. Albright (Nov. 17, 1997)
Youssef v. Intoplast Corp. (Nov. 17, 1997)
Irwin v. Duquesne Light Co. (Nov. 10, 1997)
Cuffeld v. Nix (Nov. 7, 1997)
2175 Lemoine Ave v. Wattiker (Nov. 6, 1997)
United States v. Rios (Oct. 31, 1997)
Sylvester v. Inland Bay (Oct. 31, 1997)

- Smith v. Rosenberger* (Oct. 31, 1997)
United States v. Doe #1 (Oct. 23, 1997)
Adelman v. Ungaro-Schaivone (Oct. 16, 1997)
United States v. Thompson (Oct. 16, 1997)
United States v. Osorio (Sep. 30, 1997)
NLRB v. United Enviro (Sep. 30, 1997)
Knight v. Mercer Co. Housing Auth. (Sep. 26, 1997)
Kirkland v. York Co. Bd. of Elections (Sep. 23, 1997)
United States v. Pevarnik (Sep. 17, 1997)
Jones v. Bernstein (Sep. 17, 1997)
Furman Foods, Inc. v. Ross Sys., Inc. (Sep. 15, 1997)
United States v. One 1982 Brown Jeep (Sep. 12, 1997)
Moody v. Marlboro (Sep. 10, 1997)
United States v. Martinson (Sep. 9, 1997)
United States v. Marr (Sep. 8, 1997)
Johnston v. HBO Film Mgmt. (Sep. 3, 1997)
Martin v. Davis (Aug. 29, 1997)
Winkey v. Frame (Aug. 21, 1997)
United States v. Brown (Aug. 15, 1997)
Hannon v. Thomas (July 31, 1997)
Doe v. Methacton School District (July 28, 1997)
Hodanic v. Emanuele (July 25, 1997)
United States v. Alexander (July 24, 1997)
Ward v. Ridley School District (July 24, 1997)
Byrd v. Connelly (July 24, 1997)
Fay v. Price (July 24, 1997)
Intratech Corp. v. H. Landau & Co. (July 23, 1997)
Brooks-Bey v. Smith (July 18, 1997)
Chnaider v. INS (July 18, 1997)
Nixon v. White (July 15, 1997)
DeFelice v. Comm'r (July 14, 1997)
Klein v. Opp (June 30, 1997)
Morgan v. Holt Cargo Systems (June 30, 1997)
Sheehan v. Mellon Bank, N.A. (June 27, 1997)
Fowler v. BIC Corp. (June 27, 1997)
United States v. Sekoumar (June 26, 1997)
Barnes & Tucker v. Director OWCP (June 23, 1997)
Helen Mining Co. v. Jack (June 23, 1997)
United States v. Outen (June 23, 1997)
Malone v. First Freedom Group (June 20, 1997)
Derzack v. Allegheny (June 20, 1997)
United States v. Bernardi (June 20, 1997)
United States v. Camille (June 18, 1997)
Halprin v. Bd. of Education of the Vocational Sch. of the County of Ocean (June 9, 1997)
In re Prudential (May 22, 1997)
Prall v. Saltzman (May 21, 1997)
Aliu v. INS (May 6, 1997)
Robinson v. United States Navy (May 2, 1997)
United States v. Kelly (May 1, 1997)
United States v. Kaczmarek (Apr. 30, 1997)
United States v. Sliwowski (Apr. 30, 1997)
United States v. Salmon (Apr. 29, 1997)
Voelker v. State Farm Ins. Co. (Apr. 29, 1997)
Kostenbader v. Chater (Apr. 28, 1997)
United States v. Ortiz (Apr. 18, 1997)
United States v. Lisk (Apr. 18, 1997)
National Labor Relations Board v. Lower Bucks Cooling Heating, Inc. (Apr. 18, 1997)
L.F. Driscoll Co. v. American Protection Insurance Co. (Apr. 17, 1997)
In re Thomas Grubb (Apr. 17, 1997)
Berry v. Sparkman (Apr. 17, 1997)
Nyenekor v. Isamoyer (Apr. 15, 1997)
DePasquale v. IBM Corp. (Apr. 15, 1997)
Davis v. Commissioner of Social Security (Apr. 4, 1997)
2347 J.F.K. Blvd Corp. v. United States (Mar. 28, 1997)
United States v. Crosson (Mar. 27, 1997)
Dang v. State Farm Mutual Auto Insurance Co. (Mar. 18, 1997)
American International Surplus Lines Insurance Co. v. IES Lead Paint Division, Inc. (Mar. 17, 1997)
United States v. Gonzalez-Gonzalez (Mar. 17, 1997)
Ramos v. Nemetz (Mar. 13, 1997)
United States v. Villanueva (Mar. 12, 1997)
Danko v. Uniontown Area School District (Mar. 7, 1997)
Barilla v. USAir, Inc. (Feb. 26, 1997)

- Robert Billet Promotions v. IMI Cornelius Inc.* (Feb. 13, 1997)
Grabowski v. Bonner (Jan. 31, 1997)
United States v. Rogers (Jan. 30, 1997)
Bronson v. Spagnoletti (Jan. 21, 1997)
Alkop Agriservices v. Agro Marketing International (Jan. 21, 1997)
United States v. Mendoza-Rodriguez (Jan. 21, 1997)
United States v. Mathis (Jan. 17, 1997)
Boyd v. Southern Home Services (Jan. 16, 1997)
Ferrari v. Magee Womens Hospital (Jan. 16, 1997)
United States v. Lemanski (Jan. 16, 1997)
Fisher v. Blairsville Machine Products Co. (Jan. 15, 1997)
United States v. Cascio (Jan. 15, 1997)
United States v. Oley (Jan. 15, 1997)
Whittle v. Local 641, International Brotherhood of Teamsters (Jan. 14, 1997)
3D, Ltd., v. Crown Roll Leaf, Inc. (Jan. 14, 1997)
United States v. Cotto (Jan. 13, 1997)
Struck v. Binns (Jan. 13, 1997)
Shinehouse v. Guerin (Jan. 13, 1997)
Baynard v. Milton S. Hershey Medical Center Hospital (Jan. 10, 1997)
Bodine Oil, Inc. v. USA (Jan. 10, 1997)
Edwards Business Machines, Inc. v. Laughlin (Jan. 8, 1997)
United States v. McCoy (Jan. 8, 1997)
Burnett v. United States Air Corp. (Jan. 8, 1997)
Dolenc v. Zwierzyna (Jan. 2, 1997)
Siskavitch v. Director, Office of Workers' Compensation Programs (Dec. 27, 1996)
Fichter v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. (Dec. 26, 1996)
Rodriguez v. Luscavage (Dec. 24, 1996)
United States v. Packer (Dec. 20, 1996)
United States v. Davis (Dec. 11, 1996)
Corn v. Marks (Dec. 10, 1996)
United States v. Mannino (Dec. 6, 1996)
Turner v. Church Mutual Insurance Co. (Dec. 5, 1996)
- United States v. Kennedy* (Dec. 4, 1996)
United States v. Thomas (Dec. 3, 1996)
United States v. Balboa (Oct. 21, 1996)
Marchese v. Counties Investment Corp. (Oct. 11, 1996)
In re Mercury America Corp. (Oct. 11, 1996)
United States v. Binstein (Oct. 10, 1996)
Quasarano v. Chater (Oct. 8, 1996)
United States v. Myers (Oct. 7, 1996)
United States v. Lollis (Sep. 20, 1996)
United States v. Dillon (Sep. 20, 1996)
Torre v. Commissioner of Social Security (Sep. 16, 1996)
Fallowfield Development Corp. v. Strunk (Aug. 20, 1996)
Breker v. Hershey Foods Corp. (Aug. 20, 1996)
United States v. Goodwin (Aug. 20, 1996)
United States v. Davis (Aug. 20, 1996)
United States v. Frechette (Aug. 16, 1996)
United States v. Salome (Aug. 15, 1996)
United States v. Trautman (Aug. 15, 1996)
United States v. Benedict (Aug. 15, 1996)
United States v. Brown (Aug. 15, 1996)
United States v. Simeone (Aug. 15, 1996)
United States v. Chagra (Aug. 15, 1996)
United States v. Demeo (Aug. 15, 1996)
CNG Transmission Corp. v. Titt (Aug. 14, 1996)
United States v. Din (Aug. 9, 1996)
Martz v. Kurtz (July 23, 1996)
Lynch v. Tobyhanna Township (July 8, 1996)
United States v. Brown (July 5, 1996)
United States v. Bowling (July 5, 1996)
United States v. Ray (July 3, 1996)
United States v. Jones (July 3, 1996)
Rogers v. Lehman (July 3, 1996)
Cole v. Warner (June 28, 1996)
Paul v. Gladstone (June 28, 1996)
United States v. Goggans (June 28, 1996)
Silk v. Casino Reinvestment Investment Authority (June 28, 1996)
Associated Wholesalers, Inc. v. Teamsters Local Union No. 229 (June 28, 1996)
QVC, Inc. v. Bozek (June 28, 1996)
United States v. Thomson (May 29, 1996)

- United States v. Williams* (May 20, 1996)
United States v. Grewal (May 15, 1996)
Hedden v. National Railroad Passenger Corp.
 (May 13, 1996)
United States v. Flores (May 13, 1996)
Good Lad v. Aetna Casualty & Surety Co.
 (May 9, 1996)
Villamil v. Munley (May 8, 1996)
United States v. Demarco (May 8, 1996)
United States v. Zaverukha (May 8, 1996)
Durkin v. Major League Baseball (Apr. 30, 1996)
United States v. Unangst (Apr. 30, 1996)
Sanders v. Commissioner of Social Security
 (Apr. 30, 1996)
Tobia v. Commissioner of Social Security
 (Apr. 30, 1996)
IBM Credit Corp. v. Compuhouse Systems,
Inc. (Apr. 25, 1996)
Mullenax v. Shrewsbury Township (Apr. 22, 1996)
United States v. Haut (Apr. 18, 1996)
United States v. Ruiz (Mar. 27, 1996)
United States v. Zhadanov (Mar. 15, 1996)
Bakari v. Attorney General of New Jersey
 (Mar. 15, 1996)
Johnson v. Director Office of Workers'
Compensation Programs (Mar. 14, 1996)
Wadleigh v. Rhone Poulenc Rorer (Mar. 14, 1996)
Zilich v. Reid (Mar. 13, 1996)
Avery Coal Co. v. Tripp (Mar. 12, 1996)
United States v. Vesbach (Mar. 12, 1996)
United States v. Watson (Mar. 12, 1996)
United States v. Doe (Mar. 11, 1996)
Pasek v. North Star Hockey Partnership (Feb.
 6, 1996)
Alford v. Commissioner of Social Security
 (Feb. 6, 1996)
Crain v. Commissioner of Social Security
 (Feb. 5, 1996)
Local 522, I.B.T. v. Joule Maintenance Corp.
 (Jan. 31, 1996)
United States v. Jefferson (Jan. 29, 1996)
United States v. Claypool (Jan. 26, 1996)
Redman v. Nixon (Jan. 24, 1996)
- United States v. Jones* (Jan. 24, 1996)
Thompson v. Bic Corporation (Jan. 23, 1996)
Obermayer v. Fiber-Lite Corp. (Jan. 19, 1996)
United States v. Titus (Jan. 18, 1996)
United States v. Hayden (Jan. 18, 1996)
United States v. Saldamarco (Jan. 18, 1996)
United States v. Conner (Jan. 18, 1996)
Rausser v. Freeman (Jan. 17, 1996)
Bethenergy Inc. v. Director, Office of Workers' Compensation Programs (Jan. 17, 1996)
Nwachia v. United States (Jan. 17, 1996)
Edwards v. Walsh (Dec. 27, 1995)
United States v. Kocher (Dec. 13, 1995)
Hinchliffe v. Transamerica Fin (Nov. 20, 1995)
United States v. Withers (Nov. 17, 1995)
Darden v. Timms (Nov. 17, 1995)
United States v. McLaud (Nov. 15, 1995)
United States v. Carattini (Nov. 13, 1995)
Hammond v. Brown (Nov. 13, 1995)
Lax v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue Service (Nov. 13, 1995)
Fox v. Adams (Nov. 9, 1995)
United States v. Terry (Nov. 9, 1995)
United States v. Robinson (Nov. 9, 1995)
United States v. Smith (Nov. 9, 1995)
Fisher v. Department of Labor (Oct. 18, 1995)
Herbert v. Temple University School of Law
 (Oct. 6, 1995)
United States v. Ruffin (Oct. 5, 1995)
Paschal v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue Service (Oct. 4, 1995)
Great Western Funding, Inc. v. Mendelson
 (Sep. 29, 1995)
Hunter v. H.L. Yoh, Inc. (Sep. 29, 1995)
United States v. Funkhouser (Sep. 28, 1995)
Regal Industries, Inc. v. Genal Strap, Inc.
 (Sep. 26, 1995)
United States v. Shehata (Sep. 25, 1995)
United States v. Levy (Sep. 18, 1995)
Ferraira v. Mobil Oil Corp. (Sep. 15, 1995)
United States v. Pineda (Sep. 14, 1995)
American Atlas Corp. v. Allegheny County Industrial Development Authority (Sep. 13, 1995)

- Burla v. City of Trenton* (Sep. 13, 1995)
Dugan v. Pennsylvania Millers Mutual Insurance Co. (Sep. 13, 1995)
Rodetsky v. Carlson (Sep. 11, 1995)
Kuhns v. Meridian Bancorp (Sep. 8, 1995)
H.K. Porter Co., Inc. v. Columbia Casualty Co. (Sep. 8, 1995)
United States v. Jenkins (Sep. 7, 1995)
Tershansy v. Army Corps of Engineers (Aug. 23, 1995)
Fiber-Lite Corp. v. Moulded Acoustical Products of Easton, Inc. (Aug. 22, 1995)
United States v. Rashid (Aug. 15, 1995)
Moore v. Vaughn (Aug. 11, 1995)
United States v. McIntyre (Aug. 10, 1995)
United States v. Fish (Aug. 8, 1995)
Fisher v. LTV Steel Corp. (July 31, 1995)
United States v. Gore (July 31, 1995)
Saunders v. Shalala (July 18, 1995)
Granberry v. Pennsylvania Department of Probation and Parole (June 30, 1995)
United States v. Holt (June 30, 1995)
Hinds v. UPS Corp. (June 27, 1995)
United States v. Saldana (June 23, 1995)
United States v. McCrory (June 21, 1995)
In re Brown (June 20, 1995)
Rausser v. Beard (June 16, 1995)
United States v. Tallone (June 16, 1995)
Jerman v. Shalala (June 14, 1995)
United States v. Long (June 13, 1995)
United States v. Jennings (June 13, 1995)
Jackson & Coker Locum Tenens v. Slawek (June 8, 1995)
United States v. Lozada (May 31, 1995)
Fugah v. McGrory (May 25, 1995)
United States v. Gonzalez (May 22, 1995)
Vilcapoma v. Immigration and Naturalization Service (May 19, 1995)
Woodley v. Scalzott (May 19, 1995)
Griffiths v. CIGNA Corporation (May 16, 1995)
Kosydar v. United States (May 12, 1995)
United States v. Salb (May 12, 1995)
United States v. White (May 11, 1995)
Reardon v. Fauver (May 11, 1995)
United States v. Farias (May 10, 1995)
- Jones v. Secretary, Secretary, Health and Human Services* (May 9, 1995)
United States v. Martinez (May 4, 1995)
Atwood v. United States Cargo Corp. (May 3, 1995)
Stephenson v. Brown (May 3, 1995)
Nationwide Mutual Insurance Co. v. Yeager (May 3, 1995)
88 Transit Lines, Inc. v. National Labor Relations Board (May 3, 1995)
National Labor Relations Board v. 88 Transit Lines Inc. (May 3, 1995)
Clewell v. United Methodist Church (Apr. 20, 1995)
Johnson v. Love (Apr. 13, 1995)
Antrim Mining, Inc. v. Milliron (Mar. 31, 1995)
United States v. Richardson (Mar. 29, 1995)
Giles v. Vaughn (Mar. 27, 1995)
United States v. Simpson (Mar. 16, 1995)
United States v. Martin (Mar. 16, 1995)
Simmons v. Urban Redevelopment Authority (Mar. 16, 1995)
United States v. Johnson (Mar. 15, 1995)
United States v. Creighton (Mar. 15, 1995)
Board of Managers of the Glen Mills Schools v. Westchester Area School District (Mar. 2, 1995)
Allied-Signal, Inc. v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue Service (Feb. 23, 1995)
Allah v. Beyer (Feb. 22, 1995)
Uzick v. Atlas Powder Co. (Feb. 6, 1995)
United States v. Troublefield (Feb. 3, 1995)
United States v. Dorsey (Feb. 3, 1995)
Construction and Design Services v. The Children's Place Retail Stores, Inc. (Feb. 2, 1995)
United States v. Rankin (Feb. 1, 1995)
Smith v. Lehman (Jan. 31, 1995)
Smith v. Vick (Jan. 31, 1995)
Taylor Forge Stainless, Inc. v. National Labor Relations Board (Jan. 30, 1995)
National Labor Relations Board v. Taylor Forge Stainless, Inc. (Jan. 30, 1995)
United States v. McCune (Jan. 26, 1995)
United States v. Kimatu (Jan. 25, 1995)

- United States v. Devon* (Jan. 25, 1995)
Curley v. Cumberland Farms Dairy, Inc. (Jan. 25, 1995)
United States v. Thompson (Jan. 24, 1995)
Kwasizur v. Shalala (Jan. 24, 1995)
United States v. Warner (Jan. 24, 1995)
Rofi v. Connecticut General Life Insurance Co. (Jan. 19, 1995)
Rushton v. Director, Office of Workers' Compensation Programs (Jan. 19, 1995)
Walters v. Secretary of Health and Human Services (Jan. 19, 1995)
In re Hing Quan Lum (Jan. 19, 1995)
Sebrell v. Smith (Jan. 13, 1995)
United States v. Elliott (Jan. 12, 1995)
United States v. Renfroe (Dec. 21, 1994)
Aultman v. Harrison (Dec. 15, 1994)
United States v. Courtney (Dec. 8, 1994)
Mengine v. Runyon (Dec. 8, 1994)
N.B.A. Credit Union, Inc. v. Hargrove (Dec. 7, 1994)
United States v. Washington (Dec. 6, 1994)
United States v. Golashevsky (Dec. 5, 1994)
Electra Cable Sales v. Americable (Nov. 28, 1994)
Crawford v. Spiegel, Inc. (Nov. 28, 1994)
Brocklehurst v. Ottawa Newspaper, Inc. (Nov. 23, 1994)
Sanchez v. Secretary of Health and Human Services (Nov. 23, 1994)
United States v. Ramos (Nov. 21, 1994)
Mesirov v. Paul Revere Life Insurance Co. (Nov. 16, 1994)
United States v. Jackson (Nov. 16, 1994)
United States v. Stanko (Nov. 16, 1994)
Basheer v. Stepanik (Nov. 14, 1994)
United States v. Lombardo (Nov. 14, 1994)
United States v. Brennan (Nov. 14, 1994)
United States v. Michaels (Nov. 14, 1994)
United States v. Telepman (Nov. 14, 1994)
Clark v. Philadelphia Housing Authority (Nov. 14, 1994)
United States v. Edmonds (Nov. 14, 1994)
Bryant v. Armstrong County Children and Youth Services (Nov. 14, 1994)
Martin v. Warren Consolidated Industries (Nov. 14, 1994)
Borodaty v. West Penn Power Co., Inc. (Nov. 14, 1994)
Schult v. Kay Bee Toy and Hobby Shops, Inc. (Nov. 14, 1994)
United States v. Fields (Nov. 3, 1994)
Castro v. Passaic County, N.J. Board of Chosen Freeholders (Oct. 27, 1994)
Howell v. Myers (Oct. 26, 1994)
Kauffman v. Securities and Exchange Commission (Oct. 20, 1994)
Thompson v. CIGNA Health Plan of Northern New Jersey (Oct. 14, 1994)
United States v. Greene (Sep. 29, 1994)
USX Corp. v. Director, Office of Workers' Compensation Programs (Sep. 29, 1994)
United States v. Chromatex Inc. (Sep. 29, 1994)
Bryant v. Jamison Door Co. (Sep. 28, 1994)
Myszka v. AON Corp. (Sep. 28, 1994)
Higdon v. Nagle (Sep. 23, 1994)
United States v. Damon (Sep. 21, 1994)
United States v. Tucker (Sep. 21, 1994)
United States v. Ragin (Sep. 21, 1994)
United States v. Almeida (Sep. 20, 1994)
United States v. Beckford (Sep. 20, 1994)
United States v. Beil (Sep. 19, 1994)
United States v. Seligsohn (Sep. 19, 1994)
United States v. Seligsohn (Sep. 19, 1994)
Nash v. Letizia (Sep. 19, 1994)
Durham Life Insurance Co. v. Evans (Sep. 19, 1994)
Walker v. Transcontinental Gas Pipeline (Sep. 19, 1994)
United States v. Valois (Sep. 16, 1994)
United States v. Lowery (Sep. 16, 1994)
United States v. Valdez (Sep. 16, 1994)
Lichtenstein v. Kidder, Peabody & Co. (Sep. 12, 1994)
Hall v. State of New Jersey (Sep. 12, 1994)
Clark v. Fuchs (Sep. 9, 1994)
In re Delaware Valley Health Network, Inc. (Sep. 2, 1994)
Franco v. New Jersey Dep't of Environmental Protection (Aug. 19, 1994)

- Kite v. Semco Capital Corp.* (Aug. 11, 1994)
Conto v. Martin (July 29, 1994)
United States v. Schoenbohm (July 22, 1994)
Campbell v. Lehman (July 22, 1994)
United States v. Burke (July 20, 1994)
Rauser v. Freeman (July 19, 1994)
United States v. Santiago (July 18, 1994)
United States v. Holtz (July 18, 1994)
Zampirri v. Hartford Insurance Co. (July 18, 1994)
Hymon v. Southland Corp. (July 15, 1994)
United States v. Rosebar (July 15, 1994)
United States v. Crespo (July 14, 1994)
Greene County Memorial Park v. Behm Funeral Homes (July 6, 1994)
Apex Fountain Sales v. Kleinfeld (June 29, 1994)
Scimeca v. Umanoff (June 28, 1994)
Texaco Refining Corp. v. Delaware River Basin Commission (June 24, 1994)
Chevron USA Inc. v. Delaware River Basin Commission (June 24, 1994)
Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. v. Furnace Brook Assoc. (June 22, 1994)
Barber v. New Jersey Turnpike Authority (June 21, 1994)
United States v. Shelton (June 13, 1994)
United States v. Ramsey (June 13, 1994)
Bamidele v. Immigration and Naturalization Service (June 3, 1994)
Chinnery v. Calendar (May 27, 1994)
United Steelworkers of America v. Virgin Islands Industrial Maintenance Corp. (May 25, 1994)
United States v. Hickman (May 23, 1994)
Govt of Virgin Islands v. Sebastian (May 20, 1994)
Caribbean Communication Corp. v. National Labor Relations Board (May 17, 1994)
National Labor Relations Board v. Caribbean Communication Corp. (May 17, 1994)
Fidler v. Commonwealth of Pennsylvania (May 16, 1994)
Government of the Virgin Islands v. Rhymer (May 16, 1994)
United States v. Douglas (May 12, 1994)
United States v. Cruse (May 12, 1994)
Government of the Virgin Islands v. Callwood (May 12, 1994)
Southeastern Pennsylvania Transportation Authority v. Pennsylvania Public Utility Commission (May 10, 1994)
Virgin Islands v. Xavier (May 10, 1994)
United States v. Henry (May 9, 1994)
Sudek v. Malcom (May 9, 1994)
Virgin Islands v. Henry (May 5, 1994)
Govt of VI v. Greer (May 5, 1994)
Govt of VI v. Gonzalez (May 4, 1994)
Govt of VI v. Duberry (May 4, 1994)
Kennedy v. Attorney General of Pennsylvania (Apr. 21, 1994)
Schilling v. City of Johnstown Police (Apr. 21, 1994)
United States v. Chapple (Mar. 30, 1994)
United States v. Smith (Mar. 30, 1994)
Cara Corp. v. Continental Bank (Mar. 29, 1994)
United States v. Cruz-Pagan (Mar. 23, 1994)
Tran v. Domovich (Mar. 23, 1994)
Miley v. Harmony Hill, Ltd (Mar. 22, 1994)
Duncan v. Gerber Products Co. (Mar. 21, 1994)
Kline v. Kemper Group, Inc. (Mar. 17, 1994)
United States v. Baines (Mar. 15, 1994)
Wagner v. Department of Agriculture (Mar. 15, 1994)
United States v. McGoldrick (Mar. 14, 1994)
United States v. Schindler (Mar. 14, 1994)
Henning v. Love (Mar. 10, 1994)
United States v. Jones (Mar. 10, 1994)
United States v. Garrison (Mar. 9, 1994)
United States v. Carmona (Mar. 9, 1994)
Dooley v. Morgan (Mar. 8, 1994)
Seven Fields Development Corp. v. Reilly (Mar. 8, 1994)
United States v. Carper (Mar. 8, 1994)
Turner Construction Co. v. Space U.S.A., Inc. (Mar. 7, 1994)
King v. Irvington (Mar. 7, 1994)
Erie Insurance Co. v. Greene (Mar. 3, 1994)
Delta Traffic Services v. Carney (Feb. 25, 1994)

- Klancher v. GTE Products Corp.* (Feb. 24, 1994)
- United States v. Backstrom* (Feb. 10, 1994)
- United States v. Erb* (Feb. 10, 1994)
- Mylotte, David & Fitzpatrick v. Pullman* (Feb. 4, 1994)
- Allstate Insurance Co. v. Grace* (Feb. 2, 1994)
- Gunita Technologies, LTD. v. Willingboro* (Jan. 31, 1994)
- King v. Vaughn* (Jan. 28, 1994)
- United States v. Black* (Jan. 28, 1994)
- Macario v. Pratt & Whitney Canada* (Jan. 28, 1994)
- Barnes v. United States* (Jan. 26, 1994)
- United States v. Shriner* (Jan. 26, 1994)
- United States v. Smith* (Jan. 24, 1994)
- Kot v. Court of Common Pleas* (Jan. 21, 1994)
- United States v. Stevens* (Jan. 21, 1994)
- Hathaway v. Ryan* (Jan. 14, 1994)
- United States v. Snitkin* (Jan. 14, 1994)
- Aloe v. Gerlach* (Jan. 14, 1994)
- Henglein v. Colt Industries Operating Corp.* (Jan. 13, 1994)
- United States v. Noquerol* (Dec. 30, 1993)
- Inmates of the Allegheny County Jail v. Wecht* (Dec. 23, 1993)
- McNeill v. Red Publishing USA Inc.* (Dec. 20, 1993)
- United States v. Louis* (Dec. 17, 1993)
- Sipp v. New England Log Homes, Inc.* (Dec. 14, 1993)
- Culley v. Beyer* (Dec. 10, 1993)
- United States v. Holloway* (Dec. 8, 1993)
- United States v. Correll* (Dec. 8, 1993)
- United States v. Patchell* (Dec. 7, 1993)
- Weiss v. Old Dominion Freight Line, Inc.* (Dec. 7, 1993)
- United States v. Dye* (Dec. 7, 1993)
- Carmo v. Secretary of Health and Human Services* (Nov. 23, 1993)
- Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. v. Penn Center West Associates* (Nov. 15, 1993)
- Wenzel v. Patrick Petro Co.* (Oct. 26, 1993)
- Jupina v. United States Department of Labor* (Oct. 25, 1993)
- Fenstermaker v. Nesfedder* (Oct. 18, 1993)
- Ehrig v. I.T. & T. Consumer Financial Corp.* (Oct. 18, 1993)
- United States v. Boyd* (Oct. 7, 1993)
- United States v. Schwager* (Oct. 7, 1993)
- United States v. Cianca* (Oct. 7, 1993)
- United States v. Holmes* (Oct. 6, 1993)
- United States v. Unuakhalu* (Oct. 4, 1993)
- Scalzo v. United Food and Commercial Workers Union* (Oct. 4, 1993)
- United States v. One 1980 Mercedes Benz* (Oct. 1, 1993)
- United States v. 3.266 Acres of Land* (Oct. 1, 1993)
- United States v. Bowers* (Oct. 1, 1993)
- Yarris v. Attorney General of Pennsylvania* (Sep. 20, 1993)
- Woods v. New Jersey Department of Education* (Sep. 17, 1993)
- United States v. Hartley* (Sep. 16, 1993)
- Capaldo v. Union Indemnity Insurance Co. of New York* (Sep. 13, 1993)
- Cuevas v. Immigration and Naturalization Service* (Sep. 10, 1993)
- United States v. Fullwood* (Sep. 7, 1993)
- United States v. Figueroa* (Sep. 2, 1993)
- J-Mar Fabricating Co. v. Continental Manufacturing Corp.* (Sep. 2, 1993)
- National Corp. v. AME International, Inc.* (Aug. 12, 1993)
- Catanzariti v. Stover* (Aug. 10, 1993)
- Silver v. Francis Automotive Services* (July 29, 1993)
- United States v. Correa* (July 12, 1993)
- Golden v. Parmi Tool Co., Inc.* (June 30, 1993)
- Willis v. Rison* (June 30, 1993)
- United States v. Atwood* (June 29, 1993)
- Rodgers v. Prudential Insurance Co.* (June 24, 1993)
- United States v. White* (June 23, 1993)
- United States v. Santiago* (June 23, 1993)
- United States v. Urrutia* (June 23, 1993)
- Alabek v. Department of Labor* (June 10, 1993)
- Marshall v. Little Professor Book Center, Inc.* (June 3, 1993)

- Vito v. Bray* (June 2, 1993)
Ratner v. Christie, Manson & Woods, Inc.
 (June 1, 1993)
In re Texas Eastern Transmission Corp.
Contamination Insurance Coverage
Litigation (May 28, 1993)
United States v. Wadley (May 20, 1993)
International Anthracite Corp. v. Director,
Office of Workers' Compensation Programs
 (May 14, 1993)
Murray v. Vaughn (May 7, 1993)
United States v. Taylor (Apr. 19, 1993)
United States v. Heflin (Apr. 19, 1993)
United States v. Boozer (Apr. 19, 1993)
United States v. Lincoln (Apr. 13, 1993)
United States v. Leroy (Apr. 13, 1993)
United States v. Terry (Apr. 13, 1993)
United States v. Lloyd (Apr. 13, 1993)
Harr v. Creative Pultrusions (Apr. 9, 1993)
Wagner v. Continental Bank (Mar. 29, 1993)
Wagner v. Cont Bank Pension (Mar. 29, 1993)
Med-Chek Lab Inc. v. Nichols Inst (Mar. 26, 1993)
Euell v. Rosemeyer (Mar. 5, 1993)
Bryant v. Kline (Feb. 26, 1993)
Harrington v. Stirn Med Prod Inc. (Feb. 22, 1993)
Peterson v. Philadelphia Stock Exchange
 (Feb. 16, 1993)
United States v. Johnson (Feb. 2, 1993)
Trucking Employees v. Colville (Jan. 28, 1993)
Felker v. Christine (Dec. 22, 1992)
United States v. Pena (Dec. 15, 1992)
Presbytery of NJ v. Florio (Dec. 14, 1992)
Kershentsev v. Mascotte Prod Inc. (Nov. 16, 1992)
United States v. Lopez (Nov. 16, 1992)
Deman v. Univ. of Pittsburgh (Nov. 5, 1992)
Reid v. Beyer (Oct. 29, 1992)
Dennis v. Pertec Computer Corp. (Oct. 20, 1992)
In re Grand Jury v. (Oct. 19, 1992)
Matthews v. Freedman (Oct. 16, 1992)
Felker v. Angradi (Oct. 15, 1992)
Gackebach v. Uniroyal Inc. (Oct. 14, 1992)
- Local 28 v. Gallagher* (Oct. 9, 1992)
Baumler v. Secretary HHS (Sep. 30, 1992)
Markovich v. Bell Helicopter (Sep. 22, 1992)
Stanko v. Lemond (Sep. 10, 1992)
Schurr v. Director OWCP (Aug. 31, 1992)
United States v. Stepoli (Aug. 27, 1992)
2101 Allegheny Assoc v. Cox Home Video Inc.
 (Aug. 24, 1992)
Frantz & Benjamin v. Lexington Ins. Co.
 (Aug. 24, 1992)
EmcasCo. Insurance Co. v. Nasuti (Aug. 21, 1992)
In re Duncan (Aug. 21, 1992)
United States v. MacFarlane (Aug. 11, 1992)
Krszal v. Linden Mtr Freight (Aug. 7, 1992)
United States v. Baptiste (Aug. 6, 1992)
United States v. Collins (Aug. 6, 1992)
United States v. Sanders (Aug. 5, 1992)
Wurst v. Nestle Foods Corp. (Aug. 5, 1992)
O'Donnell v. Omark Industries Inc. (Aug. 5, 1992) CoreStates N.A. v. Brink's Incorporated (Aug.
 4, 1992)
United States v. Broderick (Aug. 4, 1992)
Marchbein v. Sec Comm PA (July 30, 1992)
Barber v. Horsey (July 17, 1992)
United States v. Earle (July 9, 1992)
Stillings v. Secretary HHS (July 2, 1992)
United States v. Lebron (June 30, 1992)
United States v. Mack (June 30, 1992)
Queensgate Dental v. USA (June 30, 1992)
Keystone Health Serv v. USA (June 30, 1992)
Colonial Family v. USA (June 30, 1992)
United States v. Lewis (June 18, 1992)
United States v. Flores (June 18, 1992)
United States v. Blair (June 11, 1992)
Brisco-Bey v. City of Wilm Parks (June 8, 1992)
Haddad v. Crown Life Ins. Co. (June 5, 1992)
Janicsko v. Pellman (June 5, 1992)
Hickson v. Int'l Bus Machines (May 29, 1992)
United States v. Palmer (May 18, 1992)
Grookett v. CSX Transportation Corp. (May 13, 1992)
United States v. Elliot (May 12, 1992)
Altieri v. USA (Apr. 3, 1992)

- Caputo v. Celotex Corporation* (Apr. 1, 1992)
Johnson v. Ryan (Mar. 30, 1992)
Midnight Sessions v. City of Philadelphia
 (Mar. 30, 1992)
Harris v. Williamsport School (Mar. 26, 1992)
United States v. Taylor (Mar. 17, 1992)
Slavin v. Liberty Place Hotel (Mar. 16, 1992)
Palm Beach Federal v. Metrobank Savings
 (Mar. 16, 1992)
Boyce v. Rodgers (Mar. 11, 1992)
Nealen v. Roberts (Feb. 19, 1992)
Gibson v. United States (Feb. 5, 1992)
Manahan v. Direct Transit Inc. (Jan. 30, 1992)
Sposito v. Reuben H. Donnelley (Jan. 8, 1992)
Ahram v. Roxborough Hospital (Dec. 23, 1991)
United States v. Leon (Dec. 20, 1991)
United States v. McKreith (Dec. 13, 1991)
United States v. Audinot (Dec. 13, 1991)
United States v. Fisher (Dec. 13, 1991)
Kane v. Magna Mixer Co. (Nov. 14, 1991)
Inners v. McCrory Corporation (Nov. 7, 1991)
Sos v. Mack Trucks Inc. (Nov. 6, 1991)
United States v. Gibbs (Nov. 6, 1991)
Oxford Ind Inc. v. LuminCo. Inc. (Oct. 31, 1991)
United States v. Anderson (Oct. 31, 1991)
Garner v. City of Pittsburgh (Oct. 31, 1991)
United States v. Pauls (Oct. 31, 1991)
NLRB v. Reid Plastics Inc. (Oct. 30, 1991)
Whaley v. Boyle (Oct. 22, 1991)
Joshua Slocum Ltd v. (Oct. 3, 1991)
Frazier v. Norwegian Cruise (Sep. 27, 1991)
United States v. Ferguson (Sep. 20, 1991)
Ritter v. GAF Corp. (Aug. 29, 1991)
United States v. Fisher (Aug. 13, 1991)
United States v. Hill (Aug. 12, 1991)
United States v. Vereb (Aug. 12, 1991)
United States v. Higley (Aug. 12, 1991)
Bush #AY-9768 v. Lehman (July 25, 1991)
United States v. Pieri (July 24, 1991)
United States v. DiLoreto (July 24, 1991)
United States v. DiLoreto (July 24, 1991)
United States v. Claypool (July 24, 1991)
United States v. Vella (July 24, 1991)
United States v. DiLoreto (July 24, 1991)
Lawless v. Waugh (July 23, 1991)
NLRB v. Alan Motor Lines Inc. (July 5, 1991)
Alan Motor Lines Inc. v. NLRB (July 5, 1991)
Lingle v. Coll (July 2, 1991)
Govt of VI v. Hogan (June 26, 1991)
Jean-Louis v. Keohane (June 25, 1991)
Washington v. Secretary HHS (June 21, 1991)
Redden v. Sundermeir (June 19, 1991)
County of Dauphin PA v. Fidelity & Deposit
 (June 18, 1991)
Virgin Islands v. Cruz (June 13, 1991)
Virgin Islands v. Perez (May 31, 1991)
Cleveland v. St Thomas Food Prod (May 29, 1991)
Owens v. Davis (May 24, 1991)
United States v. Francis (May 20, 1991)
Govt of VI v. Thomas (May 20, 1991)
United States v. Creque (May 13, 1991)
Virgin Islands v. Payne (May 10, 1991)
National Indemnity v. Patrick A Reilly Ins.
 (May 2, 1991)
Nat'l Indemnity Co. v. Pittsburgh Fayette
 (May 2, 1991)
Galgay v. Gangloff (Apr. 22, 1991)
American Unvrsl Ins. Grp v. Rhoades (Apr. 2, 1991)
Santiago v. Temple University (Feb. 25, 1991)
Bane v. Netlink Inc. (Jan. 31, 1991)
Affiliated Food Dist v. Int'l Bro Local 229
 (Jan. 23, 1991)
United States v. Nardone (Jan. 17, 1991)
United States v. Clarke (Jan. 16, 1991)
United States v. Alexander (Jan. 16, 1991)
Barnes v. Secretary HHS (Jan. 16, 1991)
Rack Engineering Co. v. United Steelworkers
 (Jan. 16, 1991)
Rosario v. Horvatits (Dec. 11, 1990)
United States v. Gennaro (Nov. 23, 1990)
Birchler v. Kulicke & Soffa Ind (Nov. 20, 1990)
Ashcroft v. Class (Nov. 14, 1990)
Byrne v. Detample (Nov. 9, 1990)
United States v. Azar (Nov. 9, 1990)
Gilliam v. Inductotherm Corp. (Nov. 7, 1990)

Flicker v. Pan Amer Airways Inc. (Nov. 7, 1990)
North American Coal v. Tweedy (Nov. 7, 1990)
United States v. Walton (Nov. 7, 1990)
Smith v. Walter C Best Inc. (Nov. 5, 1990)
Orig Brass Rail v. Firman (Oct. 24, 1990)
United States v. Famiano (Oct. 23, 1990)
Crosby v. Luzerne Housing Auth. (Oct. 22, 1990)

William Penn Bank v. North River Ins. Co. (Oct. 17, 1990)
Bryant v. Gates Constr Corp. (Oct. 17, 1990)
Gibbs v. Howard (Oct. 16, 1990)
Dixon v. Sullivan (Oct. 16, 1990)
United States v. Schroyer (Oct. 16, 1990)
Bilan v. Sullivan (Oct. 15, 1990)
Posey v. United States Army (Sep. 26, 1990)

The Clerk of the Third Circuit Court also provided me the following list of merits panels on which I sat that issued judgment orders.

United States v. Alexander (Oct. 13, 2005)
Okoth v. Gonzalez (Sep. 9, 2005)
Okoth v. Gonzalez (Aug. 5, 2005)
United States v. Hinnes (Aug. 5, 2005)
United States v. Berberena (July 21, 2005)
United States v. Roebuck (July 14, 2005)
United States v. Thomas (July 14, 2005)
United States v. White (Apr. 22, 2005)
United States v. Walker (Nov. 18, 2004)
United States v. Certain Real Prop (Jan. 13, 2004)
Burke v. Mee (June 30, 2003)
Lastimosa v. Ashcroft (May 19, 2003)
United States v. Curcio (May 19, 2003)
Mendez v. Klem (July 29, 2002)
Matsen v. United States (Feb. 8, 2002)
Gonzalez v. INS (Oct. 25, 2001)
Wilder v. DMR Consul Group Inc. (July 25, 2001)
Miller v. Vaughn (May 11, 2001)
Fiore v. White (Apr. 25, 2001)
United States v. Lively (Feb. 14, 2001)
Allmond v. Barbo (June 23, 2000)
Elliott v. Kiesewetter (Mar. 10, 2000)
Rebel v. Duquesne Light Co. (Nov. 18, 1999)
NLRB v. Diamond Sys. Inc. (Sep. 13, 1999)
Armstrong v. Reisman (Aug. 6, 1999)
In re Byron Chase (Aug. 6, 1999)
In Re: Richard Wilson (June 18, 1999)
NLRB v. New Brunswick Gen (June 9, 1999)
Fioriglio v. City Atlantic City (June 8, 1999)

Rish v. Finegan (May 25, 1999)
Jones v. Love (May 14, 1999)
Isaac v. Varner (Apr. 29, 1999)
NLRB v. Local Union 807 (Mar. 31, 1999)
Oliver v. Allstate Life Ins. Co. (Dec. 8, 1998)
Burks v. Green (Dec. 8, 1998)
NLRB v. Grasso Foods Inc. (Sep. 29, 1998)
United States v. Jackson (Sep. 24, 1998)
Schultz v. Citibank (Aug. 26, 1998)
Wise v. Pennsylvania Bd Probation (July 31, 1998)
In re Crescent Park (July 27, 1998)
McLinko v. Snell (July 21, 1998)
NJ Sports Prod Inc. v. McCall (July 14, 1998)
Jews For Jesus v. Brodsky (July 2, 1998)
Prisoner Legal Ass'n v. Roberson (July 2, 1998)
Exxon Corp. v. Local Union 877 (June 26, 1998)
Rhodes v. Saddle Brook (June 26, 1998)
Bruder v. Varner (June 12, 1998)
Nayyar v. INS (May 21, 1998)
United States v. Cable (May 5, 1998)
Barth v. Public Serv. Elec & Gas (May 4, 1998)
United States v. Smith (May 4, 1998)
NLRB v. Metro Regional Cncl (Apr. 29, 1998)
Vargo v. Costello (Apr. 22, 1998)
Rice v. Davis-Rice (Apr. 17, 1998)

- United States v. Julius* (Apr. 17, 1998)
Melody v. Eatontown (Apr. 14, 1998)
United States v. Longabardi (Apr. 14, 1998)
United States v. Digital Creations (Mar. 23, 1998)
Pavuk v. Amer States Ins. Co. (Mar. 18, 1998)
United States v. Caputo (Mar. 18, 1998)
Bundy v. Lehman (Mar. 9, 1998)
Brady v. Price (Feb. 25, 1998)
Rashid v. Kite (Feb. 18, 1998)
Rhoades v. Mazurkiewicz (Feb. 12, 1998)
United States v. Rashid (Feb. 12, 1998)
Hok-Chung v. United States Bureau of Prisons (Feb. 12, 1998)
United States v. Bissell (Feb. 10, 1998)
Pharmhouse Corp. v. Mark Ctr Trust Ltd (Feb. 9, 1998)
Lee v. Kyler (Feb. 5, 1998)
Logan v. Lillie (Feb. 5, 1998)
Sheppard v. Glock Inc. (Feb. 4, 1998)
United States v. James (Feb. 4, 1998)
United States v. Rothwell (Feb. 4, 1998)
United States v. Spicer (Feb. 4, 1998)
Mineard v. Duquesne Light Co. (Jan. 29, 1998)
Hulmes v. Honda Mtr Co. Ltd (Jan. 28, 1998)
United States v. Hanulik (Jan. 21, 1998)
Hayes v. Muller (Jan. 14, 1998)
DE Hlth Care Inc. v. MCD Holding Co. (Jan. 12, 1998)
Beverly Entr Pennsylvania Inc. v. District 1199P (Jan. 8, 1998)
PTI Services Inc. v. Quotron Sys. Inc. (Dec. 30, 1997)
United States v. Keller (Dec. 23, 1997)
Foy v. Dicks (Dec. 19, 1997)
United States v. Montes (Dec. 15, 1997)
Weissman v. Cohn & Lifland (Nov. 24, 1997)
United States v. Rothschild (Nov. 20, 1997)
Gillis v. United States Parole Comm'r (Nov. 17, 1997)
Roberts v. Toal (Nov. 14, 1997)
Hawkins v. Mazurkiewicz (Nov. 12, 1997)
- United States v. Rashid* (Nov. 7, 1997)
Vartan v. Nix (Nov. 6, 1997)
Brown v. NJ Supreme Court (Nov. 3, 1997)
Stevens v. Zettlemyer (Oct. 31, 1997)
Blanche Road Corp. v. Bensalem Township (Oct. 27, 1997)
United States v. Brown (Oct. 27, 1997)
Falkenberg Cap Corp. v. Dakota Cellular Inc. (Oct. 24, 1997)
Blanche Road Corp. v. Bensalem Township (Oct. 21, 1997)
Alcman Services Corp. v. Commonwealth of Pennsylvania (Oct. 21, 1997)
United States v. Trice (Oct. 21, 1997)
Ramirez v. Reno (Oct. 15, 1997)
United States v. Martin (Oct. 8, 1997)
Shimano Inc. v. Kennedy (Oct. 6, 1997)
Chambers v. Upper Darby Twp (Sep. 30, 1997)
Bryant v. Penns Grove (Sep. 23, 1997)
Gagliardi v. United States (Sep. 17, 1997)
Furman Foods Inc. v. Ross Sys. Inc. (Sep. 16, 1997)
Commerce & Ind. Ins. v. Salem Paint Inc. (Sep. 12, 1997)
Travelers Ins. Co. v. Viking Yacht Co. Inc. (Sep. 10, 1997)
Fetter v. Bixler (Sep. 9, 1997)
Larsen v. Cober (Sep. 9, 1997)
Local Union 628 v. Daily & Sunday (Sep. 9, 1997)
Keenan v. Mount Airy Lodge Inc. (Sep. 9, 1997)
Schmidt v. Dev Corp. for Israel (Sep. 8, 1997)
United States v. Green (Sep. 8, 1997)
Mikos v. DYFS (Sep. 2, 1997)
Kearny Barge Co. Inc. v. Global Ins. Co. (Aug. 27, 1997)
United States v. Bateman (Aug. 26, 1997)
United States v. Bennett (Aug. 26, 1997)
United States v. Savage (Aug. 26, 1997)
Dae v. St Barnabas Med Ctr (Aug. 26, 1997)
Streams v. Tamewitz (Aug. 26, 1997)

- Braid v. Camden Cty Probation* (Aug. 21, 1997)
Gourmet Gardens Inc. v. Foster Wheeler Mt (Aug. 18, 1997)
Torres v. Worth (Aug. 14, 1997)
Gaudelli v. Thiemann (Aug. 7, 1997)
Boykin v. Celmer (Aug. 6, 1997)
Waldman v. Lipscher (July 30, 1997)
Bardsley v. Lawrence (July 29, 1997)
Scott v. Riggs (July 29, 1997)
Smith v. Young (July 28, 1997)
Abraham v. Gold (July 25, 1997)
Hendrickson v. Larkins (July 25, 1997)
Stinson v. DE River Port Auth (July 23, 1997)
Benjamin v. EEOC (July 23, 1997)
Griffin v. Lehman (July 23, 1997)
Sanford v. McCloskey (July 23, 1997)
Duarte v. United States (July 23, 1997)
Bieregu v. DEA (July 22, 1997)
Spann v. Passaic Crushed (July 22, 1997)
Louis v. INS (July 21, 1997)
Spiegel v. Poritz (July 21, 1997)
Tucker v. Bayside State Prison (July 18, 1997)
United States v. Hawkins (July 18, 1997)
Rodriguez v. Hurley (July 18, 1997)
Delor v. ATX Telecomm Serv. (July 17, 1997)
Fullwood v. Delaware Cty Prison (July 17, 1997)
United States v. Sanders (July 16, 1997)
Lehman Bros Inc. v. Cheung (July 3, 1997)
Mediq Incorporated v. Kuperstein (June 26, 1997)
S&F Gas Works Inc. v. Rendell (June 26, 1997)
Rogers v. Commonwealth of Pennsylvania (June 25, 1997)
United States v. Nelson (June 25, 1997)
United States v. Tinsley (June 25, 1997)
United States v. White (June 25, 1997)
Harrington v. Lauer (June 24, 1997)
Sklaroff v. Allegheny Health Ed (June 20, 1997)
- Booker v. Commissioner, Social Security* (June 20, 1997)
Newland v. Kelchner (June 17, 1997)
Valentine v. Young (June 17, 1997)
Ball v. Reno (June 2, 1997)
Sterley v. Empl Ins. Wausu (May 22, 1997)
Markward v. Gander Hill Prison (May 22, 1997)
Alessi v. Swinson (May 16, 1997)
United States v. Richardson (May 15, 1997)
Sullivan v. Chrysler Motors Corp. (Apr. 29, 1997)
Ballys Park Place v. Local Union 54 (Apr. 29, 1997)
United States v. Rosado (Apr. 29, 1997)
United States v. Zoka (Apr. 29, 1997)
Manning v. D'Alessio (Apr. 24, 1997)
Diaab v. White (Apr. 24, 1997)
Weiss v. Pegalis & Wachsmann (Apr. 15, 1997)
Fugah v. McGrory (Apr. 10, 1997)
Ghana v. United States (Apr. 1, 1997)
Williard v. Commonwealth of Pennsylvania (Mar. 31, 1997)
Chapman v. Kozakiewicz (Mar. 28, 1997)
United States v. Moser (Mar. 28, 1997)
Keystone Coal Mining v. Kolich (Mar. 21, 1997)
Ford v. Chrysler Corporation (Mar. 20, 1997)
HK Porter Co. Inc. v. Columbia Cslty Co. (Mar. 20, 1997)
Puricelli v. Estate of Elizabeth (Mar. 20, 1997)
Pfleger v. City of Reading (Mar. 18, 1997)
Parker v. Wertenberger (Mar. 18, 1997)
United States v. Granero (Mar. 17, 1997)
Greene v. Lansing (Mar. 14, 1997)
United States v. Lohoefer (Mar. 13, 1997)
United States v. Spangler (Mar. 13, 1997)
Thomas v. Carpenter (Mar. 12, 1997)
DePatch v. United States (Mar. 12, 1997)
Brown v. Amer Motorists Ins (Mar. 7, 1997)
United States v. Kohli (Mar. 6, 1997)
Ghana v. Essig (Feb. 28, 1997)
Saunders v. Taylor (Feb. 28, 1997)

- Ortiz v. East Jersey Prison* (Feb. 27, 1997)
Coleman v. Union Cty Prison (Feb. 13, 1997)
Wyndmoor Learning v. City of Wilmington (Jan. 27, 1997)
Reading Company v. City of Philadelphia (Jan. 24, 1997)
In Re Tseng Labs Inc. (Jan. 24, 1997)
United States v. O'Neal (Jan. 21, 1997)
Muslim v. Frame (Jan. 17, 1997)
United States v. Rhodes (Jan. 17, 1997)
Zaidi v. Hamerslag (Jan. 16, 1997)
DiTullio v. Hawk (Jan. 16, 1997)
Mier v. Kozakiewicz (Jan. 16, 1997)
Klingensmith v. Roy (Jan. 16, 1997)
In re Edward Bosta (Jan. 16, 1997)
United States v. Goins (Jan. 15, 1997)
Farrow v. Bell Atl Pennsylvania Inc. (Jan. 9, 1997)
NLRB v. Yerger Trkng (Jan. 6, 1997)
United States v. Washington (Dec. 20, 1996)
NLRB v. GFC Foam Inc. (Dec. 19, 1996)
Barbee v. Pennsylvania Dept Corrections (Dec. 19, 1996)
Price v. Vaughn (Dec. 18, 1996)
Davis v. Winslow (Dec. 18, 1996)
Keene v. Wal-Mart Stores Inc. (Dec. 11, 1996)
Merrihew v. Runyon (Dec. 10, 1996)
McDowell v. Commonwealth of Pennsylvania (Dec. 9, 1996)
Kinnear v. Cerami (Dec. 6, 1996)
Patterson v. Northern Montgomery (Dec. 5, 1996)
Garlikov v. Cont Cslty Co. (Dec. 4, 1996)
Northern Ins Co. NY v. Mooney (Dec. 4, 1996)
Sisson v. Director OWCP (Dec. 3, 1996)
United States v. Aberkar (Nov. 29, 1996)
Rodriguez v. Beyer (Nov. 29, 1996)
Medina v. Commissioner, Social Security (Nov. 29, 1996)
United States v. Ballard (Nov. 27, 1996)
United States v. Herbert (Nov. 27, 1996)
United States v. Thomas (Nov. 27, 1996)
Impounded (Nov. 26, 1996)
Wenhold v. Ford Mtr Co. (Nov. 22, 1996)
Midwest Portland v. Ranallo (Nov. 21, 1996)
United States v. Barnes (Nov. 19, 1996)
Gerrity v. Brogan (Nov. 19, 1996)
Pgh Food Beverage v. PNC Bank NA (Nov. 19, 1996)
LeGrande v. United States Parole Comm'r (Nov. 14, 1996)
Trimino v. Fauver (Nov. 5, 1996)
Smith v. Western State Prison (Nov. 5, 1996)
Brawley v. United States (Oct. 31, 1996)
United States v. Gammon (Oct. 30, 1996)
United States v. Kent (Oct. 30, 1996)
United States v. Smith (Oct. 30, 1996)
PNC Bank Natl Ass'n v. Liberty Mutual Ins (Oct. 22, 1996)
United States v. Reisig (Oct. 22, 1996)
Rausser v. Freeman (Oct. 21, 1996)
United States v. Grant (Oct. 21, 1996)
United States v. Harris (Oct. 21, 1996)
United States v. Lopez (Oct. 16, 1996)
Restifo v. Magill (Oct. 16, 1996)
Bronson v. Ferson (Oct. 15, 1996)
United States v. Gulati (Oct. 11, 1996)
United States v. Cohn (Oct. 10, 1996)
Cunningham v. Computer Machinery (Oct. 10, 1996)
Mazzone v. IBM (Oct. 10, 1996)
United States v. Yancy (Oct. 10, 1996)
Lehotay v. Zenith Data Sys. Corp. (Oct. 10, 1996)
In Re Request From (Oct. 10, 1996)
United States v. Anusionwu (Oct. 9, 1996)
United States v. Dike (Oct. 9, 1996)
United States v. Dowell (Oct. 9, 1996)
United States v. Ebo (Oct. 9, 1996)
Jae v. Kessler (Oct. 9, 1996)
United States v. Ogbuehi (Oct. 9, 1996)
United States v. Ogike (Oct. 9, 1996)
Felder v. Pennsylvania Dept Corrections (Oct. 9, 1996)
United States v. Roberts (Oct. 9, 1996)
United States v. Simpson (Oct. 9, 1996)
United States v. Ukandu (Oct. 9, 1996)

- Graziano v. Director OWCP* (Oct. 8, 1996)
Kukich v. Westmoreland (Oct. 8, 1996)
United States v. Aita (Oct. 7, 1996)
United States v. DeRatto (Oct. 7, 1996)
United States v. Zayid (Oct. 7, 1996)
Britton v. City of Erie (Sep. 30, 1996)
Chambers v. Holland (Sep. 30, 1996)
Spence v. Price (Sep. 30, 1996)
Anderson v. Unicor Fed Prison (Sep. 30, 1996)
Sadowski v. Natl Credit Union (Sep. 27, 1996)
Wilson v. Morris (Sep. 26, 1996)
Stephens v. Rafferty (Sep. 26, 1996)
Cyber Promotions Inc. v. Amer Online Inc. (Sep. 20, 1996)
Amer Online Inc. v. Cyber Promotions Inc. (Sep. 20, 1996)
Wanto v. Consol Coal Co. (Sep. 10, 1996)
First Strike v. Aetna Insurance Co. (Aug. 23, 1996)
CRST Inc. v. Connor (Aug. 23, 1996)
Brethwaite v. Cincinnati Milacron (Aug. 21, 1996)
United States v. Davidson (Aug. 21, 1996)
Oshiver v. Levin Fishbein (Aug. 21, 1996)
United States v. Publicker (Aug. 21, 1996)
Davis v. Budd Company (Aug. 20, 1996)
United States v. Crosson (Aug. 20, 1996)
United States v. Cruz (Aug. 20, 1996)
United States v. Emanuele (Aug. 20, 1996)
Bailey v. Hafer (Aug. 20, 1996)
Russo v. Marut (Aug. 20, 1996)
Blizzard v. Motorola Inc. (Aug. 20, 1996)
Brown v. Sturges (Aug. 20, 1996)
United States v. Thomas (Aug. 20, 1996)
Hopton v. Cyprus Emerald Res (Aug. 19, 1996)
Windley v. Potts Welding Boiler (Aug. 19, 1996)
Clarion Ceramics Inc. v. Hitachi Metals Amer (Aug. 14, 1996)
Meadows v. Henry (Aug. 12, 1996)
Bronson v. Walker (Aug. 12, 1996)
Grungo v. United States (Aug. 9, 1996)
United States v. Washington (Aug. 9, 1996)
United States v. Laporta (Aug. 8, 1996)
Burgess v. Libhart (Aug. 8, 1996)
United States v. Pagan (Aug. 8, 1996)
Scales v. Dept of Corr (Aug. 7, 1996)
Hoffman v. Domovich (Aug. 7, 1996)
Hollawell v. Lehman (Aug. 7, 1996)
United States v. McLaurin (Aug. 7, 1996)
Wheeler v. O'Hanlon (Aug. 7, 1996)
Vasporv v. Shannon (Aug. 7, 1996)
Rosa v. United States (Aug. 7, 1996)
United States v. Garcia (July 29, 1996)
NLRB v. Sys. Elec Maintenance (July 22, 1996)
In re Westinghouse (July 19, 1996)
In Re Zukowsky (July 9, 1996)
Reyes v. Wigen (July 8, 1996)
Slomnicki v. Alghny Cty Health (July 5, 1996)
United States v. Allen (July 5, 1996)
United States v. Martinez (July 5, 1996)
Re: Frank J. Marcone (July 3, 1996)
United States v. Bales (June 28, 1996)
United States v. Conde (June 28, 1996)
Ahmed v. INS (June 28, 1996)
Merriam Gateway v. Newton (June 28, 1996)
United States v. Salemo (June 28, 1996)
United States v. Velez (June 28, 1996)
United States v. Winton (June 28, 1996)
In re Jays Markets (June 28, 1996)
United States v. $9,480 in United States Currency (June 27, 1996)
Taylor v. Johnson (June 27, 1996)
United States v. Millan (June 27, 1996)
Hernandez v. Norris Square Civic (June 27, 1996)
Savoia v. Reagan (June 25, 1996)
Morris v. City of Philadelphia (June 24, 1996)
Welch v. Julius (June 24, 1996)
Griffin v. Langdon (June 24, 1996)
Gundlach v. Swain (June 24, 1996)
Musko v. United States (June 24, 1996)
Henning v. Butler Cty Comm'r (June 21, 1996)

- Wells v. Commonwealth of Pennsylvania* (June 21, 1996)
United States v. Cromwell (June 21, 1996)
NLRB v. Omnitest Inspection (June 13, 1996)
Johnson v. Shaffer (May 31, 1996)
Campbell v. IBM (May 30, 1996)
Miller v. Mellon Bank (May 29, 1996)
Blackmon v. Morton (May 29, 1996)
NLRB v. MusCorp. (May 29, 1996)
Rogers v. White (May 29, 1996)
Brown v. Horn (May 23, 1996)
United States v. McGahee (May 21, 1996)
Smith v. Dept of Welfare (May 20, 1996)
Davison v. Alghny Metal Working (May 14, 1996)
Crider v. Black & Decker (US) (May 14, 1996)
Pennsylvania v. Couch (May 14, 1996)
Brooks v. Price (May 14, 1996)
Doyle v. United States Dept of Justice (May 14, 1996)
Zucker v. Henderson (May 13, 1996)
Deco Davis Inc. v. Kenney Mfg Co. (May 13, 1996)
McGinley v. Medina (May 9, 1996)
Talley v. Feldman (May 8, 1996)
Beecham v. City of East Orange (May 7, 1996)
Aaron v. Cunningham (May 7, 1996)
Gagliardi v. Pennsylvania American Water Co. (May 7, 1996)
Saffo v. Teny (May 7, 1996)
Quinn v. Cunningham (Apr. 18, 1996)
United States v. Curcio (Apr. 18, 1996)
United States v. Rivera (Apr. 18, 1996)
Smith v. Philadelphia (Mar. 19, 1996)
Nestler v. Comm'r, Social Security (Mar. 18, 1996)
DeMauro v. Comm'r IRS (Mar. 18, 1996)
Miller v. DE River Port Auth (Mar. 18, 1996)
Britt v. May Dept Stores Co. (Mar. 18, 1996)
Coombs v. Simpson (Mar. 18, 1996)
Newstat v. Sizer (Mar. 18, 1996)
Haddock v. Christos (Mar. 15, 1996)
CRST Inc. v. Connor (Mar. 15, 1996)
United States v. De Lussey (Mar. 15, 1996)
United States v. Felton (Mar. 15, 1996)
United States v. Tracy (Mar. 15, 1996)
In re Santarsiero (Mar. 15, 1996)
Denk v. Boeing Company (Mar. 14, 1996)
United States v. Stiver (Mar. 14, 1996)
Slade v. Hollingsworth & Vose (Mar. 13, 1996)
Gangemi v. Commissioner, Social Security (Mar. 12, 1996)
Lichtenstein v. PGH Sch. Dist. (Mar. 12, 1996)
Trinsey v. FEC (Feb. 23, 1996)
Konstantopoulos v. Westvaco Corp. (Feb. 5, 1996)
Stafford v. EI DuPont De Nemours (Feb. 1, 1996)
Talley v. SEPTA (Feb. 1, 1996)
Anderson v. Tyson (Feb. 1, 1996)
In re Port Liberte (Jan. 31, 1996)
Mervan v. Darrell (Jan. 30, 1996)
HEM Pharm. Corp. v. Cohn (Jan. 29, 1996)
Ringer v. Fallis (Jan. 29, 1996)
United States v. Nelson (Jan. 29, 1996)
Bowman v. Bell Atlantic Network (Jan. 26, 1996)
Jones v. Commissioner, Social Security (Jan. 26, 1996)
Nguyen v. Commissioner, Social Security (Jan. 26, 1996)
Harkovich v. Pfirrmann (Jan. 26, 1996)
Zarzycki v. Pitney Bowes Inc. (Jan. 26, 1996)
United States v. Galati (Jan. 23, 1996)
Armstrong v. CFTR (Jan. 19, 1996)
McGraw v. Amato (Jan. 18, 1996)
Ashton v. Commissioner, Social Security (Jan. 10, 1996)
Jamison v. DiSabato (Jan. 10, 1996)
Barbee v. Pennsylvania Dep't of Corrections (Jan. 10, 1996)
Yi v. Maugans (Jan. 4, 1996)
In Re Hinchliffe (Jan. 2, 1996)
United States v. Valenteen (Dec. 28, 1995)

- United States v. Zhadanov* (Dec. 22, 1995)
Friedland v. McManimon (Dec. 21, 1995)
Jamison v. Arvonio (Dec. 20, 1995)
United States v. Casas (Dec. 8, 1995)
Giarratano v. Pennsylvania Lawyers Fund
 (Dec. 7, 1995)
Friedland v. Van Lieu (Dec. 7, 1995)
Di Lauro v. Ver Strate (Dec. 7, 1995)
Kaiser v. DP Realty Trust (Nov. 28, 1995)
Quintero v. INS (Nov. 22, 1995)
Ridenour v. Secretary HHS (Nov. 20, 1995)
Hicks v. Arthur (Nov. 15, 1995)
Sykes v. Commissioner, Social Security
 (Nov. 14, 1995)
United States v. George (Nov. 14, 1995)
United States v. Ridings (Nov. 14, 1995)
Pache v. Wallace (Nov. 14, 1995)
Nilon v. Angus (Nov. 13, 1995)
Castro-Carvache v. INS (Nov. 13, 1995)
Morris v. Foster (Nov. 9, 1995)
Arce v. Good (Nov. 9, 1995)
Gibson v. QED Comm'r Inc. (Nov. 9, 1995)
Morris v. Robinson (Nov. 9, 1995)
Williams v. Secretary Defense (Nov. 9, 1995)
Jacobs v. Stephens (Nov. 9, 1995)
Woods v. Owens (Nov. 7, 1995)
Bryan v. Perry (Nov. 7, 1995)
Tamakloe v. United States (Nov. 7, 1995)
Dockins v. Vaughn (Nov. 7, 1995)
Roebuck v. Carney (Nov. 6, 1995)
Akech v. United States (Nov. 6, 1995)
Whitehead v. Upland Mortgage Corp. (Nov.
 3, 1995)
Primo v. Flick (Nov. 2, 1995)
Byrne v. Hillsborough Bd Ed (Nov. 2, 1995)
Flatley v. Whitman (Nov. 1, 1995)
Flatley v. Whitman (Nov. 1, 1995)
Blohm v. United States (Oct. 5, 1995)
United States v. King (Sep. 29, 1995)
Mourad v. O'Halloran (Sep. 29, 1995)
Fernandez v. United States (Sep. 29, 1995)
Eisenman v. Commissioner IRS (Sep. 28, 1995)
Borra v. Commissioner IRS (Sep. 28, 1995)
Reitz v. Dieter (Sep. 28, 1995)
- NLRB v. Herman Ott* (Sep. 28, 1995)
State Farm Auto v. Boden (Sep. 26, 1995)
United States v. Kinney (Sep. 26, 1995)
Prudential Prop v. Liberty Mutl Ins. Co.
 (Sep. 26, 1995)
Spring Garden Ass'n v. Resolution Trust
 (Sep. 26, 1995)
United States v. Edelson (Sep. 25, 1995)
Tennant v. Atl Elec Co. (Sep. 19, 1995)
United States v. Farley (Sep. 19, 1995)
Torres v. Garis (Sep. 19, 1995)
Schuldiner v. K Mart Corp. (Sep. 19, 1995)
Russell v. Leiser (Sep. 19, 1995)
O'Hare v. Morris (Sep. 19, 1995)
Mates v. OSHA (Sep. 19, 1995)
United States v. Bayron (Sep. 18, 1995)
Busfield v. Shalala (Sep. 18, 1995)
United States v. Bayron (Sep. 14, 1995)
NLRB v. Wesley Manor Health (Sep. 11, 1995)
Willis v. Natl Equip Design Co. (Aug. 24, 1995)
United States v. McLeggan (Aug. 22, 1995)
Lindsay v. Valley Forge Mil (Aug. 22, 1995)
Legal Comm'r Ltd v. Lawyers Weekly Pub
 (Aug. 17, 1995)
United States v. Battiste (Aug. 15, 1995)
Perry v. Twp of Franklin (Aug. 15, 1995)
United States v. Puglin (Aug. 11, 1995)
Patterson v. Resolution Trust (Aug. 11, 1995)
Maurer v. Harner (Aug. 10, 1995)
United States v. Dascenzo (Aug. 9, 1995)
United States v. Woods (Aug. 9, 1995)
Atlantic Mutual Ins. v. Acker (Aug. 8, 1995)
United States v. Maydak (Aug. 8, 1995)
United States v. Bernas (Aug. 7, 1995)
Derzack v. Commonwealth of Pennsylvania (Aug. 7, 1995)
United States v. Rashid (Aug. 4, 1995)
NLRB v. CBF Inc. (Aug. 2, 1995)
United States v. Jones (Aug. 2, 1995)
Jae v. O'Toole (July 31, 1995)
Pinson v. United States Dept of Justice (July 31, 1995)
Wrenn v. Wrenn (July 31, 1995)

- United States v. Salemo* (July 26, 1995)
Fraisar v. Orié (July 17, 1995)
United States v. Yusuf (July 17, 1995)
Wiker v. Crump (July 14, 1995)
United States v. Holloman (July 14, 1995)
Jamhoury v. Matheis (July 14, 1995)
Hardy v. Moran (July 14, 1995)
NLRB v. Local Union No. 274 (July 11, 1995)
Local Union No 274 v. NLRB (July 11, 1995)
Bilgrami v. Turner (July 11, 1995)
Coldwell Banker & Co. v. DeMauro (July 7, 1995)
Smolsky v. Hamlin (July 7, 1995)
Carita v. Kandianis (July 3, 1995)
United States v. Haver (June 23, 1995)
United States v. Davis (June 21, 1995)
United States v. Garrido (June 21, 1995)
United States v. Martin (June 21, 1995)
United States v. Fuentes (June 20, 1995)
Credit Contr Serv. Inc. v. Greate Bay Hotel & Casino (June 20, 1995)
Oncology Serv. Corp. v. Mitsubishi Intl Corp. (June 20, 1995)
Pansy v. Preate (June 20, 1995)
Brunwasser v. United States (June 20, 1995)
Pierce v. Syracuse China Corp. (June 19, 1995)
United States v. Strafford (June 13, 1995)
Montgomery v. Pennsylvania Airlines (June 12, 1995)
Price v. Philadelphia Electric Co. (June 12, 1995)
Hines v. SEPTA (June 12, 1995)
Pavinski v. Director OWCP (June 2, 1995)
Hardy v. Markward (June 2, 1995)
In re Ralph Hubbard (June 2, 1995)
Harris v. Wagner (June 1, 1995)
Perez v. Lansing (May 31, 1995)
Osborne v. Montgomery Eng Co. (May 31, 1995)
Kennedy v. RRRB (May 31, 1995)
Anderson v. Bureau of Prison (May 26, 1995)
Esser v. Golmb (May 26, 1995)
- Little v. Lycoming County* (May 26, 1995)
Ramos v. Owens (May 26, 1995)
United States v. Ramos (May 26, 1995)
NLRB v. S&C Excavating Co. (May 22, 1995)
Berry v. First Natl Bank (May 12, 1995)
Van Belle v. Atlantic Equip. Engr's (May 11, 1995)
United States v. Morales (May 11, 1995)
Williams v. Phoebe-Devitt Home (May 11, 1995)
Shearin v. Cavanaugh (May 10, 1995)
United States v. Rembert (May 9, 1995)
Williams v. Hauck (May 4, 1995)
Bajjnath v. Atty Gen. NJ (May 3, 1995)
United States v. Doe (May 3, 1995)
Jaffe v. Edward Meyers Real (Apr. 27, 1995)
Jaffe v. Philadelphia Bar Ass 'n (Apr. 27, 1995)
Jaffe v. Ukranian Archdiocese (Apr. 27, 1995)
Moore v. United States Dept of Justice (Apr. 27, 1995)
Jaffe v. Women of Hope (Apr. 27, 1995)
Rifkin v. Attorney General of Pennsylvania (Apr. 24, 1995)
DeMauro v. Coldwell Banker & Co. (Apr. 24, 1995)
United States v. Peoples (Apr. 24, 1995)
United States v. Stewart (Apr. 24, 1995)
NLRB v. Mountview Nursing (Apr. 20, 1995)
Maxwell v. Arvonio (Apr. 19, 1995)
Parker v. Beehler (Apr. 19, 1995)
Crump v. Folcroft Police Dep 't (Apr. 7, 1995)
United States v. Sortino (Apr. 7, 1995)
Wirs v. York Pennsylvania (Apr. 4, 1995)
Olszewski v. AT&T Co. (Mar. 27, 1995)
Buhl v. Beyer (Mar. 27, 1995)
Reggie v. Keiper (Mar. 27, 1995)
Bensinger v. Nichols (Mar. 27, 1995)
Rivera v. Edmiston (Mar. 22, 1995)
Camacho v. Jetro Cash & Carry (Mar. 22, 1995)

- Carraballo v. Morton* (Mar. 22, 1995)
Debruyne v. Reno (Mar. 22, 1995)
Keenan v. Trenton State Prison (Mar. 22, 1995)
NLRB v. Interstate Truck Parts (Mar. 21, 1995)
Reich v. PTC Career Inst. (Mar. 21, 1995)
United States v. Skandier (Mar. 21, 1995)
Walsh v. Cap Cities Media Inc. (Mar. 20, 1995)
Cannella v. Commissioner IRS (Mar. 20, 1995)
Vinci v. Demas (Mar. 17, 1995)
United States v. Ingram (Mar. 17, 1995)
Pelzer Constr Co. v. George Hyman Constr Co. (Mar. 16, 1995)
United States v. Mickman (Mar. 16, 1995)
Richardson v. National R.R. Passenger Corp. (Mar. 16, 1995)
Lynch v. County of Monroe (Mar. 15, 1995)
United States v. Murcer (Mar. 15, 1995)
Mouzon v. Philadelphia Housing Auth (Mar. 15, 1995)
Kenny v. Prison Health Servs. (Mar. 15, 1995)
Roe v. Scranton Lackawanna (Mar. 15, 1995)
United States v. Tom (Mar. 15, 1995)
In re Hertzberg (Mar. 15, 1995)
Maxwell v. Berk (Feb. 8, 1995)
Bajoko v. United States (Feb. 8, 1995)
Dunn v. Feener (Feb. 7, 1995)
Zilich v. Lucht (Feb. 7, 1995)
Lee v. McGovern (Feb. 7, 1995)
McGuire v. Forr (Feb. 6, 1995)
Boyd v. Owens (Feb. 6, 1995)
In re Savich v. United States (Feb. 6, 1995)
Burchill v. Kane (Feb. 2, 1995)
Mayberry v. Love (Feb. 2, 1995)
Van Wagner v. Wigen (Feb. 2, 1995)
NLRB v. Ind Disposal Inc. (Jan. 30, 1995)
301 Smithfield Ass'n v. City of Pittsburgh (Jan. 24, 1995)
United States v. Ed Dev Network Corp. (Jan. 23, 1995)
Fenstermaker v. Nesfedder (Jan. 23, 1995)
Ramos v. Hoboken (Jan. 20, 1995)
Johnson v. Temple University (Jan. 20, 1995)
Liberty Mut. Ins. Co. v. Ward Trucking Corp. (Jan. 20, 1995)
Gruber v. Hubbard Bert Karle (Jan. 19, 1995)
Soboleski v. Secretary HHS (Jan. 19, 1995)
Oliver v. Domovich (Dec. 30, 1994)
Anderson v. Cheney (Dec. 21, 1994)
Little v. Comm. Bank & Trust Co. (Dec. 20, 1994)
Fontrou v. Reid (Dec. 16, 1994)
Bivolcic v. United States (Dec. 16, 1994)
Yepes v. United States (Dec. 15, 1994)
All Prop Owners v. Meaney (Dec. 14, 1994)
Harper v. Owens (Dec. 14, 1994)
Scales v. Vaughn (Dec. 14, 1994)
United States v. Coleman (Dec. 13, 1994)
Zilich v. Cunningham (Dec. 13, 1994)
Nance v. Keim (Dec. 13, 1994)
Scott v. Local 542 (Dec. 13, 1994)
NLRB v. Glassport Transp. Ctr (Dec. 12, 1994)
Fant v. Savoy (Dec. 12, 1994)
Moretti v. Dinice (Dec. 2, 1994)
Rivera v. Hundley (Dec. 2, 1994)
United States v. Isenburg (Nov. 30, 1994)
Rivera v. Scotland Yard (Nov. 30, 1994)
Stephens v. City of Pittsburgh (Nov. 29, 1994)
Adams v. Melnick/Nickel (Nov. 29, 1994)
Oren v. Nat'l Westminster (Nov. 29, 1994)
Wagers v. Pendu Inc. (Nov. 29, 1994)
Gordon v. Runyon (Nov. 29, 1994)
Moretti v. State of NJ (Nov. 29, 1994)
United States v. Abron (Nov. 28, 1994)
Grosso v. Grine (Nov. 25, 1994)
Bronson v. Paul (Nov. 23, 1994)
United States v. Terzini (Nov. 23, 1994)
Rodgers v. SmithKline Beecham (Nov. 17, 1994)
Young v. Twp of Harris (Nov. 17, 1994)
McManus v. Commonwealth of Pennsylvania (Nov. 10, 1994)
Weaver v. Redman (Sep. 29, 1994)

- United States v. Tabas* (Sep. 29, 1994)
NLRB v. Jersey Windows Inc. (Sep. 28, 1994)
Nappier v. Virgin Islands Bd. of Examiners for the Practice of Veterinary Medicine (Sep. 26, 1994)
Barron v. Nat'l R.R. Passenger (Sep. 21, 1994)
Kviatkovsky v. Temple University (Sep. 21, 1994)
RCR Sportswear Inc. v. NLRB (Sep. 20, 1994)
NLRB v. RCR Sportswear Inc. (Sep. 20, 1994)
Keffalas v. Wile (Sep. 20, 1994)
Mosely v. Keyes (Sep. 19, 1994)
Morrison v. Smith (Sep. 19, 1994)
United States v. Carter (Sep. 13, 1994)
Anders v. Jordan (Sep. 13, 1994)
Flagg v. Delaware County (Sep. 12, 1994)
Wakefield v. Egles (Sep. 12, 1994)
Walker v. Walker v. Jewelcor Corp. (Sep. 12, 1994)
Mayer v. Secretary HHS (Sep. 12, 1994)
Holloway v. Stepanik (Sep. 12, 1994)
Johnson v. Walker (Sep. 12, 1994)
Hypolitus v. United States (Sep. 8, 1994)
Specter v. Garrett (Aug. 31, 1994)
Birmingham v. Sony Corp. of Am. (Aug. 25, 1994)
McGinley v. Hill (Aug. 19, 1994)
Salloum v. USAir Inc. (Aug. 19, 1994)
United States v. Bax (Aug. 18, 1994)
United States v. McBride (Aug. 18, 1994)
Air Products Chem v. Secretary of Labor (Aug. 18, 1994)
Acceptance Ins. Co. v. Segal Segal (Aug. 18, 1994)
United States v. Tucker (Aug. 18, 1994)
Gray v. Brandon Oil Co. Inc. (Aug. 15, 1994)
Keaveney v. Feinberg (Aug. 15, 1994)
McMahon v. New Castle Ass'n (Aug. 12, 1994)
Webber v. Franklin (Aug. 11, 1994)
- Piszker v. Pittsburg Shawmut R.R.* (Aug. 11, 1994)
Colarossi v. Schmid Lab Inc. (Aug. 11, 1994)
Kodak v. Commissioner, IRS (Aug. 10, 1994)
United States v. Schneider (Aug. 10, 1994)
Smith v. Zeneca Inc. (Aug. 8, 1994)
Gotaskie v. Commonwealth of Pennsylvania (Aug. 3, 1994)
Schreiber v. Kellogg (Aug. 2, 1994)
Hall v. Carper (July 29, 1994)
Buster v. City of Philadelphia (July 29, 1994)
Stanton v. Court of Common Pleas (July 29, 1994)
United States v. Rodriguez (July 29, 1994)
Collins v. State Correctional Inst. Camp Hill (July 29, 1994)
Brobst v. Commonwealth of Pennsylvania (July 26, 1994)
Anderson v. Gay (July 22, 1994)
George v. Bethlehem Steel Corp. (July 19, 1994)
Bernard v. Bethenergy Mines Inc. (July 18, 1994)
Naccarato v. Burlington Air (July 18, 1994)
United States v. Isenberg (July 8, 1994)
Brantner v. Black & Decker Mfg (June 30, 1994)
NLRB v. Local 1566 (June 28, 1994)
Estate Apr. Cooper v. Montgomery Cty Ofc (June 24, 1994)
Stoumen v. Public Serv. Mut. Ins. Co. (June 24, 1994)
Amer Motorists Ins. v. Seven Up Meriden CT (June 24, 1994)
Solt v. Alpo Petfoods Inc. (June 23, 1994)
Bloomfield v. Bohonovsky (June 20, 1994)
Estate Thiele v. Prudential Insurance (June 17, 1994)
Polselli v. Nationwide Mut. Fire Ins. Co. (June 16, 1994)
Chrysler Credit Corp. v. B.J.M. Jr Inc. (June 15, 1994)

- NLRB v. Star Dental Products* (June 15, 1994)
Byrne v. Halliburton Co. (June 13, 1994)
Robison v. Stanley Vidmar Inc. (June 13, 1994)
Bodenstein v. Wigen (June 8, 1994)
Tulam v. Beyer (May 27, 1994)
Apex Constr Co. Inc. v. Govt of VI (May 27, 1994)
Kot v. Hackett (May 27, 1994)
Byrne v. Halliburton Co. (May 27, 1994)
Copple v. Mechem Financial Inc. (May 27, 1994)
Kot v. Stolle (May 27, 1994)
Twiggs v. Vaughn (May 27, 1994)
Barnes v. Fauver (May 25, 1994)
Ross v. BASF (May 24, 1994)
Anderson v. New Castle (May 24, 1994)
NLRB v. Chelle Sportswear (May 23, 1994)
McKenna v. Lehman (May 19, 1994)
Fant v. Geisinger Med Ctr (May 12, 1994)
United States v. Salandra (May 11, 1994)
Nygard v. Erhard (May 10, 1994)
Messer v. Messer (May 5, 1994)
Ventura v. Neit (May 5, 1994)
Govt of VI v. Serieux (May 5, 1994)
Rivera v. United States (May 5, 1994)
United States v. Caesar (May 4, 1994)
United States v. Lynch (May 4, 1994)
Ruszkowski v. Bleen (Apr. 28, 1994)
Zolicoffer v. Class (Apr. 20, 1994)
Gagliardi v. Batdorf (Mar. 31, 1994)
Bonace v. Caiazza (Mar. 31, 1994)
Gagliardi v. Cty Clairton (Mar. 31, 1994)
Lee v. Jacobs (Mar. 31, 1994)
Riley v. Redman (Mar. 31, 1994)
United States v. Pagan (Mar. 28, 1994)
Nyenekor v. Boston (Mar. 25, 1994)
United States v. Parr (Mar. 25, 1994)
Johnson v. Rosemeyer (Mar. 25, 1994)
Auriti v. Segal (Mar. 25, 1994)
Smith v. Seaford (Mar. 24, 1994)
Mellott v. York Farm Credit (Mar. 24, 1994)
NLRB v. Gilbert Spruance Co. (Mar. 21, 1994)
Planert v. Secretary HHS (Mar. 17, 1994)
- Cent Greene Sch Dist v. Consol Coal Co.* (Mar. 16, 1994)
West Greene Sch Dist v. Consol Coal Co. (Mar. 16, 1994)
County of Greene v. Consol Coal Co. (Mar. 16, 1994)
Liberty Mutual Ins. Co. v. Trusio (Mar. 16, 1994)
Hurlbert v. National Amusements Inc. (Mar. 15, 1994)
Botts v. Secretary, HHS (Mar. 15, 1994)
United States v. Hayes (Mar. 9, 1994)
Pana v. Domovich (Feb. 28, 1994)
Hill v. Blevins (Feb. 7, 1994)
United States v. Nauss (Feb. 3, 1994)
Perkasie Indus. Corp. v. Advance Transformer (Feb. 2, 1994)
Akins v. Deptford (Jan. 28, 1994)
Thompson v. Farmers Home Admn (Jan. 28, 1994)
Taha v. INS (Jan. 28, 1994)
Brooks-Bey v. Michaels (Jan. 28, 1994)
Rodenbaugh v. Singer (Jan. 28, 1994)
McKeithan v. Altmanshofer (Jan. 27, 1994)
Denman v. Cleland (Jan. 27, 1994)
Wasiela v. Franklin (Jan. 27, 1994)
Kolb v. Geist (Jan. 27, 1994)
Roseme v. IBM (Jan. 27, 1994)
Goscinski v. Sec Dept Treas (Jan. 27, 1994)
Magim v. United States (Jan. 27, 1994)
Graven v. Willingboro (Jan. 27, 1994)
United States v. Carter (Jan. 26, 1994)
Liu v. Motorist Mut. Ins. Co. (Jan. 26, 1994)
NLRB v. Silco Spec Inc. (Jan. 26, 1994)
United States v. Carroll (Jan. 25, 1994)
United States v. Cruse (Jan. 25, 1994)
Bellaire Corp. v. Florence Mining Co. (Jan. 25, 1994)
Senior Conformation v. Penta (Jan. 25, 1994)
London v. Secretary HHS (Jan. 25, 1994)
United States v. Robinson (Jan. 24, 1994)
Alexander v. Roth (Jan. 21, 1994)
NLRB v. Local 695 (Dec. 30, 1993)
Local 695 v. NLRB (Dec. 30, 1993)
In re Stoenescu (Dec. 30, 1993)

- NLRB v. Hatfield Tile Marble* (Dec. 21, 1993)
Kern v. Nissan Indus. Equip. Co. (Dec. 14, 1993)
Kosik v. Director OWCP (Dec. 13, 1993)
Smith v. Elizabeth Township (Dec. 13, 1993)
DeWitt v. Hammermill Salaried (Dec. 13, 1993)
NLRB v. Local Union No. 626 (Dec. 13, 1993)
Local Union No. 626 v. NLRB (Dec. 13, 1993)
Garner v. Twp of Wrightstown (Dec. 13, 1993)
Ludmer v. UNUM Life Ins. Co. (Dec. 13, 1993)
Prabhu v. Westminster College (Dec. 13, 1993)
In re Goodyear Tire (Dec. 13, 1993)
Treacy v. City of Philadelphia (Dec. 10, 1993)
Kramer v. Newman (Dec. 10, 1993)
United States v. Seldon (Dec. 10, 1993)
National Industri USA v. Boch (Dec. 8, 1993)
In re Continental (Dec. 8, 1993)
In re Trinsey (Nov. 30, 1993)
In re Gulph Woods (Nov. 29, 1993)
Locklear v. United States Dep't of Justice (Nov. 24, 1993)
Bagwell v. Marvel (Nov. 24, 1993)
Washington v. Kranitz (Nov. 23, 1993)
Jones v. Morgan (Nov. 23, 1993)
Barbee v. American Fed'n of State (Nov. 22, 1993)
Brooks v. McCausland (Nov. 22, 1993)
Riley v. Sullivan (Nov. 19, 1993)
Weaver v. Weachter (Nov. 19, 1993)
Venner v. Dean Witter Reynolds (Nov. 18, 1993)
United States v. Harris (Nov. 18, 1993)
Reid v. NJ Dep't of Corrections (Nov. 18, 1993)
Leininger v. Bond (Nov. 12, 1993)
Kodak v. Commissioner, IRS (Nov. 12, 1993)
Rodenbaugh v. Gerson (Nov. 12, 1993)
Fuentes v. South Hills Health (Nov. 12, 1993)
Tulam v. Beyer (Nov. 10, 1993)
Cox v. Master Lock Co. (Nov. 10, 1993)
Davis v. Morgan (Nov. 10, 1993)
Simpson v. United States (Nov. 10, 1993)
NLRB v. Diccico (Nov. 1, 1993)
Fuentes v. Divine Providence (Oct. 25, 1993)
NLRB v. Waddell Eng (Oct. 18, 1993)
Bear Stearns & Co. v. Lavin (Oct. 15, 1993)
United States v. Colon (Oct. 13, 1993)
Enigwe v. Jarvis (Oct. 13, 1993)
Ullman v. Meridian Bank (Oct. 13, 1993)
Royster v. Duke (Oct. 12, 1993)
Borges v. Pennsylvania (Oct. 6, 1993)
Shoop v. Dauphin County (Oct. 6, 1993)
Prichard v. NFL Films Inc. (Oct. 6, 1993)
Lerman v. Valley Day School (Oct. 6, 1993)
McCaughrean v. Westchester Fire Ins (Oct. 6, 1993)
Larkin v. Union Natl Corp. (Oct. 5, 1993)
United States v. Chew (Oct. 4, 1993)
Consol Coal Co. v. District 4 (Oct. 4, 1993)
United States v. Glover (Oct. 4, 1993)
United States v. Ukaji (Oct. 4, 1993)
Larkin v. Union Nail Corp. (Oct. 4, 1993)
Fredericks v. Yerushalmi (Oct. 4, 1993)
TRT/FTC Comm'r Inc. v. Ins Co. of Pennsylvania (Oct. 1, 1993)
Aldoff v. Aldoff (Sep. 30, 1993)
Tell v. Belamowicz (Sep. 30, 1993)
St. Clair v. Bellizia (Sep. 30, 1993)
Johnson v. Commissioner IRS (Sep. 30, 1993)
Delaware v. Johnson (Sep. 30, 1993)
Parker v. Link Comm'r School Inc. (Sep. 30, 1993)
Watkins v. Ameristar Transp. Servs. (Sep. 28, 1993)
Mastalski v. Consolidated Rail Corp. (Sep. 28, 1993)
United States v. Fields (Sep. 28, 1993)
United States v. Perales (Sep. 28, 1993)
United States v. Russell (Sep. 28, 1993)

- United States v. Avila* (Sep. 21, 1993)
Utica Mut'l Ins. Co. v. Whitworth (Sep. 21, 1993)
United States v. Lacko (Sep. 20, 1993)
Gramm v. United States (Sep. 20, 1993)
Ramos v. Boone (Sep. 17, 1993)
Amos v. Redman (Sep. 17, 1993)
United States v. Smith (Sep. 16, 1993)
United States v. Edwards (Sep. 14, 1993)
United Paperworkers v. Int'l Paper Co. (Sep. 14, 1993)
Long v. City of Philadelphia Bd. of Educ. (Sep. 10, 1993)
Smith v. Pennsylvania (Sep. 9, 1993)
United States v. Gordon (Sep. 9, 1993)
NLRB v. Polis Wallcovering (Sep. 8, 1993)
Pietluck v. Danella Companies (Sep. 1, 1993)
United States v. Cabrera (Aug. 31, 1993)
Bell Savings Bank v. Cul-Dadd Dev Corp. (Aug. 31, 1993)
Gov't of Virgin Islands v. Smith (Aug. 31, 1993)
Whitney Associates v. Travelers Ins. Co. (Aug. 30, 1993)
Cardwell v. United States (Aug. 30, 1993)
Murrin v. Secretary HHS (Aug. 26, 1993)
Mendez v. Govt of VI (Aug. 17, 1993)
United States v. Arnold (Aug. 9, 1993)
Marshall v. Fulcomer (Aug. 9, 1993)
Goscinski v. Brady (Aug. 4, 1993)
Calland v. Brody (Aug. 2, 1993)
Culp v. Newspaper & Magazine Employees Union (Aug. 2, 1993)
Culp v. Philadelphia Newspapers Inc. (Aug. 2, 1993)
Vos v. Ciazza (July 30, 1993)
Dolenc v. Joyce (July 30, 1993)
Safron v. Diamond (July 23, 1993)
Patriot-News Co. v. NLRB (July 16, 1993)
NLRB v. Patriot-News Co. (July 16, 1993)
Schell v. Chicago Title Ins. Co. (July 15, 1993)
United States v. Kramm (July 15, 1993)
Trump v. General Motors Corp. (July 8, 1993)
- Kennedy v. Bethenergy Mines Inc.* (July 7, 1993)
United States v. Hernandez (July 7, 1993)
Gigliotti v. Security-Connecticut Life Ins. Co. (July 7, 1993)
United States v. Yeager (July 7, 1993)
Consol Coal Co. (July 7, 1993)
McManus v. Housing Englewood (July 2, 1993)
Goldberg v. Cleveland Clinic (July 1, 1993)
United States v. Wright (July 1, 1993)
Anderson v. Alcoa Alum Co. (June 30, 1993)
Resolution Trust v. EDPAS New Brunswick (June 30, 1993)
Collier v. Marshall Dennehey (June 30, 1993)
Safety Kleen Oil Serv. v. NLRB (June 29, 1993)
NLRB v. Safety Kleen Oil (June 29, 1993)
Meade v. Meade (June 28, 1993)
United States v. Rodriguez (June 28, 1993)
White v. Temple University (June 21, 1993)
Dilouie v. United States (June 21, 1993)
United States v. Burke (June 17, 1993)
Brown #AP-5968 v. Manning (June 17, 1993)
White v. Temple University (June 17, 1993)
Isenberg v. Ziegler (June 17, 1993)
Byrd v. Cabbage (June 10, 1993)
United States v. Bohn (June 7, 1993)
United States v. Gonzalez (June 7, 1993)
CATV Serv. Inc. v. Lewis Township (June 2, 1993)
Guyer v. Blaw-Knox Constr (May 28, 1993)
NLRB v. Bldg Constr Trades (May 28, 1993)
Utica Fire Ins. Co. v. Martino (May 28, 1993)
United States v. Richards (May 28, 1993)
United States v. Torres (May 28, 1993)
Petro-Tech Inc. v. Herskovitz (May 27, 1993)
Smith v. Lower Merion Twp (May 27, 1993)
Barclays Bank PLC v. MII Exports Inc. (May 27, 1993)

- United States v. Real Property* (May 27, 1993)
Fisher v. Rutgers University (May 27, 1993)
Beerhalter v. SEPTA (May 27, 1993)
Scott v. Story (May 27, 1993)
BerGen. County v. United States DOL (May 27, 1993)
Bronson v. Zimmerman (May 27, 1993)
Davis v. AT&T (May 26, 1993)
Lodigiani United States, Ltd v. Comm'r Union Ins. Co. (May 20, 1993)
United States v. Torres (May 19, 1993)
Riedmiller v. Lackawanna County (May 11, 1993)
Sanders v. Sanders (May 11, 1993)
Akins v. Cotton (May 10, 1993)
Kim v. Secretary of Labor (May 10, 1993)
NLRB v. Silver Court Nursing (Apr. 28, 1993)
Cotton v. Harris (Apr. 26, 1993)
Richardson v. United States (Apr. 26, 1993)
Thomas Jefferson v. Secretary HHS (Apr. 21, 1993)
United States v. Arnold (Apr. 20, 1993)
Resolution Trust v. Beck (Apr. 20, 1993)
Harding v. Daggett (Apr. 20, 1993)
Terrant v. Director, OWCP (Apr. 20, 1993)
Webster v. Castle (Apr. 19, 1993)
Williams v. Lehigh Carpenters (Apr. 19, 1993)
Hunt v. Beyer (Apr. 16, 1993)
United States v. Gould (Apr. 16, 1993)
Kodenkandeth v. AT&T (Apr. 14, 1993)
Plymouth Healthcare v. Keystone Health Plan (Apr. 14, 1993)
Mack v. Thorp (Apr. 14, 1993)
Home Ins Co. v. Thorp (Apr. 14, 1993)
Haas v. Boeing Company (Apr. 13, 1993)
Hoffman Elec Inc. v. Emerson Elec Co. (Apr. 13, 1993)
Thornton v. First Natl Bank (Apr. 13, 1993)
Toole v. Grange Natl Bank (Apr. 13, 1993)
First Nat'l Boston v. Patel (Apr. 13, 1993)
Brown v. SEPTA (Apr. 13, 1993)
Cutaiar v. United States (Apr. 13, 1993)
Carpenter Tech Corp. v. Armco Inc. (Apr. 12, 1993)
Ohio Casualty Ins. Co. v. Aron (Apr. 12, 1993)
Federal Insurance Co. v. McAnally (Apr. 12, 1993)
Nat'l Union Fire Ins. v. Main (Apr. 9, 1993)
McGuire v. NJ Transit (Apr. 9, 1993)
United States v. Tolomeo (Apr. 9, 1993)
NLRB v. Allegheny Graphics (Apr. 8, 1993)
Carpenter Tech Corp. v. Armco Inc. (Apr. 8, 1993)
Lightner v. Dauman Pallet Inc. (Apr. 8, 1993)
United States v. Diamond (Apr. 8, 1993)
In re Lewis C Bower (Apr. 8, 1993)
Shemonsky v. Clk Ct Middle Dist (Mar. 9, 1993)
Huff v. Nationwide Ins. Co. (Feb. 11, 1993)
Brawley v. Walker (Feb. 10, 1993)
US DOL v. XGW Inc. (Feb. 8, 1993)
Presutti v. Coltec Ind Inc. (Feb. 5, 1993)
Bressi v. Commissioner IRS (Feb. 5, 1993)
Close v. Director OWCP (Feb. 5, 1993)
Presutti v. Goempel (Feb. 5, 1993)
Sullivan v. Love (Feb. 5, 1993)
Essex v. Secretary of Labor (Feb. 5, 1993)
Addiego v. Boardwalk Regency (Feb. 4, 1993)
Siegel v. City Sav Bank FSB (Feb. 4, 1993)
Stanton v. Ct of Common Pleas (Feb. 4, 1993)
NLRB v. Derr Lumber (Feb. 4, 1993)
United States v. Guillermo (Feb. 4, 1993)
Shirinian-Orlando v. AT&T Bell Labs. (Feb. 3, 1993)
Hill v. Walters (Feb. 3, 1993)
United States v. Westphal (Feb. 3, 1993)
Schoenfeld v. Bernstein (Jan. 29, 1993)
Kemp v. Bowen (Jan. 29, 1993)
Greubel v. Kennametal Inc. (Jan. 29, 1993)
Finotti v. Smathers (Jan. 29, 1993)
United States v. Jacobs (Jan. 25, 1993)
United States v. Tantalo (Jan. 25, 1993)
Robb v. Carlson (Jan. 19, 1993)
Rinehart v. Dragovich (Jan. 19, 1993)

- Comm Workers of American v. AT&T* (Jan. 14, 1993)
Maletto v. Admn Staff (Jan. 11, 1993)
Simmons v. Brandt (Jan. 5, 1993)
Browne v. Maze (Jan. 5, 1993)
Jones v. Blum (Dec. 29, 1992)
Payson v. Ryan (Dec. 29, 1992)
Preston v. Zimmerman (Dec. 29, 1992)
United States v. Munsch (Dec. 28, 1992)
Oliver v. Asteak (Dec. 22, 1992)
Gavin v. Secretary of Labor (Dec. 22, 1992)
White v. Commonwealth of Pennsylvania (Dec. 21, 1992)
NLRB v. White (Dec. 21, 1992)
Forester v. Borough of Oxford (Dec. 18, 1992)
Brainard v. Foster (Dec. 18, 1992)
Monarch Life Ins. Co. v. Pistone (Dec. 18, 1992)
Maylie v. Natl R.R. Passenger (Dec. 16, 1992)
United States v. Achuff (Dec. 15, 1992)
United States v. Beveridge (Dec. 15, 1992)
United States v. Calabrese (Dec. 15, 1992)
United States v. Chang (Dec. 15, 1992)
Fritz v. Consolidated Rail Corp. (Dec. 15, 1992)
Daniel v. ICI Americas Inc. (Dec. 15, 1992)
Petrosky v. Jersey City Bd Ed (Dec. 15, 1992)
Public Research v. Magnesium Elektron (Dec. 15, 1992)
Aydin Corporation v. RGB Sales (Dec. 15, 1992)
United States v. Salb (Dec. 15, 1992)
In re Grand Jury Matter (Dec. 15, 1992)
Atlantic Mutual Ins. v. Ctr Cap Corp. (Dec. 14, 1992)
McMullen v. Guise Shipping Co. (Dec. 14, 1992)
Stevenson v. Pennsylvania Bd. of Probation (Dec. 14, 1992)
United States v. Soto (Dec. 14, 1992)
Re Lease-A-Fleet Inc. (Dec. 14, 1992)
Brooks-Bey v. Reid (Dec. 11, 1992)
Fontroty v. Owens (Dec. 8, 1992)
Peterson v. Owens (Dec. 8, 1992)
Brown v. Middlesex Services (Dec. 7, 1992)
Haskins v. State of DE (Dec. 7, 1992)
Green v. Western Psychiatric (Dec. 1, 1992)
Hickey v. Ballingall (Nov. 27, 1992)
Green v. Bush (Nov. 25, 1992)
Kates v. Casey (Nov. 13, 1992)
Rodolico v. Venturi (Nov. 13, 1992)
Comer v. Bd Legal Dept (Nov. 12, 1992)
St. Clair v. DeRamus (Nov. 12, 1992)
Boyle v. Frank (Nov. 12, 1992)
United States v. McKnight (Nov. 12, 1992)
Marshall v. Owens (Nov. 12, 1992)
Stevens v. Wiggins (Nov. 12, 1992)
NLRB v. District 2 (Oct. 28, 1992)
Insurance Co. of NA v. Ahuja (Oct. 27, 1992)
Aultman v. Lehman (Oct. 27, 1992)
Kot v. Matty (Oct. 27, 1992)
Flanagan v. Shively (Oct. 27, 1992)
Hahn v. Prudential Prop (Oct. 15, 1992)
St. Paul's AUFCEMP v. Comegys (Oct. 9, 1992)
United States v. Prince Hagwood (Oct. 9, 1992)
NLRB v. Landers Laminates (Oct. 5, 1992)
Manning v. Maloney (Oct. 5, 1992)
United States v. Gall (Oct. 2, 1992)
United States v. Hickman (Oct. 2, 1992)
Johnson v. Midlantic Jet (Oct. 2, 1992)
Brunwasser v. Goehring (Oct. 1, 1992)
United States v. Urrutia (Sep. 30, 1992)
Glickman v. Commissioner IRS (Sep. 29, 1992)
Matthews v. Pan Ocean Shipping (Sep. 22, 1992)
Guy v. Sheriff Westmoreland (Sep. 14, 1992)
Kurz v. Mairone (Sep. 11, 1992)
Oatess v. Abood (Aug. 31, 1992)
Burns v. Luther (Aug. 31, 1992)
Bond v. City of Philadelphia (Aug. 28, 1992)
Turcotte v. Komsisky (Aug. 28, 1992)
Peterson v. Lehman (Aug. 28, 1992)
Gargiulo v. MGI Comm'r (Aug. 28, 1992)

- Higgins v. Neubert* (Aug. 28, 1992)
Sabb v. United States (Aug. 28, 1992)
Greater Atlantic v. Carman (Aug. 25, 1992)
Western World Ins. v. Hubbard (Aug. 18, 1992)
WPNT Inc. v. Arbitron Ratings Co. (Aug. 13, 1992)
McDonnell Douglas v. Crown Cork & Seal (Aug. 13, 1992)
United States v. Mustakeem (Aug. 13, 1992)
Bartek v. Urban Redevel Auth (Aug. 13, 1992)
DeLucca v. Pagano (Aug. 12, 1992)
Miller v. Indiana Hospital (Aug. 11, 1992)
Ware v. United States Postal Service (Aug. 10, 1992)
Kursman v. Wright/Egan & Ass'n (Aug. 10, 1992)
Grazier v. Davy Dravo Div (Aug. 7, 1992)
Brock v. Lincoln Univ Pennsylvania (Aug. 7, 1992)
Adamski v. Meritor Savings Bank (Aug. 6, 1992)
Kirk v. Commissioner IRS (Aug. 5, 1992)
Grill v. Lubetsky (Aug. 5, 1992)
Cont Life Ins Co. v. Shearson Lehman (Aug. 5, 1992)
United States v. Wallace (Aug. 5, 1992)
Smith v. Blaine (Aug. 4, 1992)
Danese v. Morrison-Knudsen (Aug. 4, 1992)
United States v. Murray (Aug. 4, 1992)
Duran v. Nitsche (July 31, 1992)
Shipp v. Holland (July 28, 1992)
Shelton v. ARA Serv Inc. (July 27, 1992)
Hanson v. Beard (July 27, 1992)
Miller v. City of Lock Haven (July 27, 1992)
Williams v. United States (July 27, 1992)
Davalos v. McMonagle (July 24, 1992)
Hemming v. O'Brien (July 23, 1992)
In re Pruitt (July 23, 1992)
Sutton v. Adams County Prison (July 21, 1992)
Jones v. Bucks Co. Ct Common (July 21, 1992)
Ross v. Commonwealth of Pennsylvania (July 21, 1992)
Veneri v. Domovich (July 21, 1992)
Longnecker v. Graham (July 21, 1992)
Nicholson v. Hawk (July 21, 1992)
United States v. Major (July 21, 1992)
Massaro v. UPS (July 21, 1992)
Bombalski v. United States (July 21, 1992)
Kuntz v. Varsity Corporation (July 21, 1992)
United States v. Barnes (July 20, 1992)
United States v. Keegan (July 17, 1992)
United States v. Kelly (July 17, 1992)
United States v. Rorke (July 17, 1992)
United States v. Smythe (July 17, 1992)
Carlson Co. Inc. v. Travel Network Ltd (July 17, 1992)
United States v. Vinnacombe (July 17, 1992)
United States v. Zahorian (July 17, 1992)
United States v. Caldwell (July 10, 1992)
United States v. Gray (July 10, 1992)
Govt of VI v. Baez (July 9, 1992)
United States v. Colon (July 9, 1992)
United States v. Jones (July 8, 1992)
United States v. Jordan (July 8, 1992)
Horosky v. North Coventry Twp (July 2, 1992)
First NY Bank Bus v. Laden (June 30, 1992)
School Asbestos v. Lake Asbestos Quebec (June 30, 1992)
United States v. Rampp (June 30, 1992)
United States v. Vancol (June 8, 1992)
Mycka v. Lessey (June 1, 1992)
Sopko v. Rosemeyer (June 1, 1992)
United States v. Salandra (May 28, 1992)
United States v. Spiewak (May 28, 1992)
Vartan v. Sobolevitch (May 26, 1992)
United States v. Ahmad (May 21, 1992)
Lavin v. Bear Stearns & Co. (May 21, 1992)
Doubles v. Consol Freightways (May 21, 1992)
Eisele v. Holloway (May 21, 1992)
Pazder v. Intl Paper Co. (May 21, 1992)
United States v. Smith (May 21, 1992)
Covey v. Varano (May 21, 1992)
Barry v. White Sell Constr (May 21, 1992)
United States v. Wilson (May 21, 1992)
Gurneak v. Chevron United States Inc. (May 20, 1992)

- Morand v. Hickory Hills West* (May 20, 1992)
Decker v. Landmark Savings (May 20, 1992)
United States v. Reyes (May 20, 1992)
United States v. Terry (May 20, 1992)
Ozmina v. GAF Corporation (May 19, 1992)
Battle v. City of Reading (May 13, 1992)
United States v. Maker (May 13, 1992)
United States v. Morris (May 13, 1992)
State Bank of India v. Victory Garden (May 13, 1992)
United States v. Morrissey (May 12, 1992)
United States v. Wilson (May 12, 1992)
Mierzejewski v. Fauver (Apr. 29, 1992)
Festa v. State of NJ (Apr. 24, 1992)
Blake v. Kaplan (Apr. 23, 1992)
Vey v. Casey (Apr. 22, 1992)
Niyogi v. Equibank (Apr. 22, 1992)
Brunner v. Buchanan (Apr. 21, 1992)
NLRB v. Local Union 825 (Apr. 21, 1992)
Culp v. Philadelphia Newspapers Inc. (Apr. 21, 1992)
Swift v. Dragovich (Apr. 15, 1992)
Liquid Glass Entr v. Liquid Glass Product (Apr. 8, 1992)
United States v. Theodoropoulos (Apr. 2, 1992)
In re Pepe Oldsmble (Mar. 26, 1992)
NLRB v. District 5 (Mar. 25, 1992)
Caldwell v. Tom Mistick & Sons (Mar. 24, 1992)
Clarke v. DRX Inc. (Mar. 23, 1992)
Bunting v. Atlantic Refining (Mar. 19, 1992)
Erie Ins. Exchange v. Celina Mutual Ins. Co. (Mar. 19, 1992)
Lavner v. Cutler (Mar. 18, 1992)
Abrahams v. Commissioner IRS (Mar. 17, 1992)
Becker v. Commissioner IRS (Mar. 17, 1992)
Hurst v. Commissioner IRS (Mar. 17, 1992)
Elgart v. Commissioner IRS (Mar. 17, 1992)
Rhode v. Commissioner IRS (Mar. 17, 1992)
- Westinghouse Elec v. Hartford Accident* (Mar. 17, 1992)
Summers v. Secretary HHS (Mar. 17, 1992)
State of New Jersey v. Briar Lake Dev Corp. (Mar. 16, 1992)
United States v. Damiano (Mar. 16, 1992)
In Re Grand Jury (Mar. 16, 1992)
Slaweks Anchorage v. Hargrave (Feb. 28, 1992)
Navarro v. United States Government (Feb. 28, 1992)
Birth v. United States (Feb. 28, 1992)
Pennsylvania v. Flaherty (Feb. 24, 1992)
Milisavic v. Aetna Life & Csly (Feb. 6, 1992)
Reese v. Love (Feb. 6, 1992)
Eastman Kodak Co. v. SS Sealand Voyager (Feb. 6, 1992)
Howard v. City of Bethlehem (Feb. 5, 1992)
Grant v. United States (Feb. 5, 1992)
In re Alghny Intl (Feb. 5, 1992)
Grenell v. NJ Supreme Court (Feb. 4, 1992)
Cheque Rite Inc. v. Pineo (Feb. 4, 1992)
United States v. Rish (Feb. 4, 1992)
Wetherell v. Sentry Reinsurance (Feb. 4, 1992)
Hadjiyannis v. SEPTA (Feb. 4, 1992)
Crouche v. Trans Union Credit (Feb. 4, 1992)
In Matter of Lenzi (Feb. 4, 1992)
Prostko v. Rand (Feb. 3, 1992)
Home Ins Co. v. Stegenga (Feb. 3, 1992)
United States v. Beasley (Jan. 31, 1992)
MacNamara v. Korean Air Lines (Jan. 31, 1992)
Dunn v. Marco (Jan. 31, 1992)
Vito v. Prudential Bache (Jan. 31, 1992)
Layfield v. Zurich American Ins Co. (Jan. 31, 1992)
Ferri v. Allegheny County (Jan. 24, 1992)
Hodges v. Fauver (Jan. 24, 1992)
Huffsmith v. Wyoming Cty Prison (Jan. 24, 1992)
Conway v. Frank (Jan. 17, 1992)
Martin v. Kaplan (Jan. 16, 1992)

- NLRB v. Amalgamated Council* (Jan. 10, 1992)
- United States v. Benedetto* (Dec. 31, 1991)
- Williams v. Fauver* (Dec. 31, 1991)
- Gaydos v. Gaydos* (Dec. 31, 1991)
- Dodson v. Logan Twp Bd Supv* (Dec. 31, 1991)
- United States v. Oleck* (Dec. 31, 1991)
- Maginn v. United States* (Dec. 31, 1991)
- Williams v. Vaughn* (Dec. 31, 1991)
- Odesser v. Continental Bank* (Dec. 30, 1991)
- Angott v. Owens Illinois* (Dec. 26, 1991)
- Wyant v. Redman* (Dec. 24, 1991)
- Ciano v. Amer-Darling Valve* (Dec. 20, 1991)
- Glickman v. Lightolier Inc.* (Dec. 20, 1991)
- Enviromaster Intl v. TCR Byberry Creek* (Dec. 20, 1991)
- Christ v. Secretary HHS* (Dec. 19, 1991)
- Urdenis v. Thermal Ind Inc.* (Dec. 19, 1991)
- United States v. Malesic* (Dec. 18, 1991)
- Hays v. Beverly Entr Inc.* (Dec. 17, 1991)
- United States v. Cole* (Dec. 17, 1991)
- Comm Unsecured v. Doemling* (Dec. 17, 1991)
- Palumbo v. Haney* (Dec. 17, 1991)
- NLRB v. Local Union 158* (Dec. 17, 1991)
- United Crane Shovel v. OSHC* (Dec. 17, 1991)
- Balsamo v. Mazurkiewicz* (Dec. 5, 1991)
- Hercules Enterprises v. City of Harrisburg* (Nov. 13, 1991)
- McElyea v. Cooper Tire & Rubber* (Nov. 12, 1991)
- Rodgers v. Harris Graphics Corp.* (Nov. 12, 1991)
- United States v. Cordero* (Nov. 7, 1991)
- Shriver v. GAF Corporation* (Nov. 7, 1991)
- Clarke v. Brandolini* (Nov. 6, 1991)
- Baily v. Lewis* (Nov. 6, 1991)
- Conway v. Pittsburgh Corning* (Nov. 4, 1991)
- Opalenik v. Rhoades* (Nov. 4, 1991)
- United States v. Farley* (Oct. 31, 1991)
- Frater v. INS* (Oct. 31, 1991)
- United States v. McGeary* (Oct. 31, 1991)
- McMillan v. NLRB* (Oct. 31, 1991)
- Lowenschuss v. Resorts Intl Inc.* (Oct. 31, 1991)
- Gatewood v. Secretary HHS* (Oct. 31, 1991)
- Scott v. Strohm* (Oct. 31, 1991)
- Hooper v. Owens* (Oct. 21, 1991)
- Goos v. Commissioner IRS* (Oct. 17, 1991)
- Haskins v. Gebelein* (Oct. 17, 1991)
- United States v. Netelkos* (Oct. 17, 1991)
- Ross v. Philadelphia County* (Oct. 17, 1991)
- Wilson v. Rackmill* (Oct. 17, 1991)
- Hackney v. Sands Hotel & Casino* (Sep. 20, 1991)
- Lewis #AJ-1616 v. Soroko* (Sep. 20, 1991)
- Katz v. Casey* (Sep. 11, 1991)
- Saleem v. 3-M Company* (Sep. 10, 1991)
- United States v. Lewis #03665-068* (Sep. 10, 1991)
- Zilich v. Nickelson* (Sep. 10, 1991)
- United States v. Real Property* (Sep. 10, 1991)
- United States v. Sitek* (Sep. 4, 1991)
- Pan American World v. Midlantic Natl Bank* (Aug. 16, 1991)
- B. Cohen & Sons v. New Plan Realty* (Aug. 14, 1991)
- Schering Corporation v. Private Formulations, Inc.* (Aug. 14, 1991)
- Philadelphia Nat'l Bank v. Rockko* (Aug. 14, 1991)
- Progressive Casualty v. Sui* (Aug. 14, 1991)
- Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co. v. Cameron* (Aug. 13, 1991)
- Maranzini v. Consolidated Rail Corp.* (Aug. 13, 1991)
- Sun Ins. Ofc Ltd v. Neff* (Aug. 13, 1991)
- Crawford v. Beacon Pools & Constr. Co.* (Aug. 12, 1991)
- Bystran v. Convergent Business Systems, Inc.* (Aug. 12, 1991)
- Mack v. Kent County Vocational Technical Sch. Dist.* (Aug. 12, 1991)
- New Breed Moving v. Quality Ind Trucks* (Aug. 12, 1991)

- Nutrition, Inc. v. School Dist. of Penn Hills* (Aug. 12, 1991)
Eidukonis v. SEPTA (Aug. 12, 1991)
Prinski v. Termar Navigation Co. (Aug. 12, 1991)
In re Indenture (Aug. 12, 1991)
Kulicke v. Kulicke & Soffa Ind (Aug. 5, 1991)
Gonzalez v. Attorney General (July 31, 1991)
Smith v. Continental Ins. Corp. (July 26, 1991)
Coombs v. Baldwin (July 24, 1991)
Greene v. Sullivan (July 24, 1991)
Miller v. Yellow Freight (July 23, 1991)
Wright v. Fauver (July 18, 1991)
United States v. Raffensberger (July 18, 1991)
Hornick v. Salvitti (July 17, 1991)
No. 1 Contracting Corp. v. Parsons Panamerican Corp. (July 1, 1991)
Gateway Coal Co. v. Despot (June 27, 1991)
Nealen v. Doverspike (June 27, 1991)
Local Union 97B v. NLRB (June 27, 1991)
NLRB v. 88 Transit Lines Inc. (June 26, 1991)
Walker v. Automation Devices (June 26, 1991)
Kochaha v. Bonnick (June 26, 1991)
United States v. Petergol (June 26, 1991)
Nutmeg Ins. Co. v. Regis Ins. Co. (June 26, 1991)
United States v. Sloss (June 26, 1991)
Greenfield v. United States Parole Commission (June 26, 1991)
United States v. Van Tassel (June 26, 1991)
Smith v. Pittsburgh Bd. of Educ. (June 24, 1991)
United States v. Taylor (June 21, 1991)
D'Alessandro v. VALIC (June 20, 1991)
United States v. Clair (June 19, 1991)
Russell Corp. v. Schimminger (June 19, 1991)
Hodges v. Rafferty (June 18, 1991)
Carlson v. United States Bureau of Prisons (June 18, 1991)
- Good v. Dauphin County Social Services for Children & Youth* (June 11, 1991)
Kettle v. RRRB (June 6, 1991)
Saunders v. Fewell (June 3, 1991)
Mokone v. Attorney Gen. of N.J. (May 31, 1991)
Purvin v. Bergens (May 23, 1991)
DeBari v. Maher Terminals (May 20, 1991)
Babcock v. Bergen County Bd. of Social Services (May 17, 1991)
Showers v. Sullivan (May 17, 1991)
Andrews v. Gov't of Virgin Islands (May 16, 1991)
Mosteller v. Baer (May 9, 1991)
United States v. Creque (May 8, 1991)
Maddage v. Otis Elevator (May 8, 1991)
United States v. Smith (May 8, 1991)
United States v. Navarro (May 7, 1991)
United States v. Recalde (May 7, 1991)
McDonald v. Thomas (May 7, 1991)
United States v. Charles (May 6, 1991)
United States v. Montilla-Davila (May 1, 1991)
Fournier v. Stackler (Apr. 29, 1991)
Biggs v. Virgin Islands Bd. of Land Use Appeals (Apr. 29, 1991)
Morgan v. United States Parole Commission (Apr. 22, 1991)
Tedder v. Schmeiser (Apr. 17, 1991)
David H. v. Palmyra Area School Dist. (Apr. 16, 1991)
Riley v. Sullivan (Apr. 15, 1991)
In re Abdul-Akbar (Apr. 11, 1991)
United States v. Berkery (Apr. 9, 1991)
Streater v. Redman (Apr. 8, 1991)
Zebrowski v. Sullivan (Apr. 8, 1991)
United States v. Taylor (Apr. 2, 1991)
United States v. Banks (Mar. 21, 1991)
Harner v. Moore (Mar. 21, 1991)
United States v. Palmer (Mar. 21, 1991)
Walker v. Pilot Freight (Mar. 21, 1991)
Mar.iafava v. Walt Disney World Co. (Mar. 21, 1991)
Keystone Helicopter v. Aviation Materials (Mar. 20, 1991)

- Lowenschuss v. Home Ins. Co.* (Mar. 20, 1991)
United States v. LaPorta (Mar. 20, 1991)
Intl Union UAW v. Amerace Corp. Inc. (Mar. 19, 1991)
Schor v. Hope (Mar. 19, 1991)
United States v. MacGregor (Mar. 19, 1991)
Max Bayroff Corp. v. OSHRC (Mar. 19, 1991)
Don't Ruin Our Park v. Stone (Mar. 19, 1991)
Bush v. City of Wilmington (Mar. 18, 1991)
Hornberger v. Director, OWCP (Mar. 18, 1991)
Bradley v. Pittsburgh Bd. of Educ. (Mar. 18, 1991)
General Accident v. ITT Gen. Corp. (Mar. 8, 1991)
United States v. Lytle (Mar. 8, 1991)
Colucci v. Revere Smelting & Refining (Mar. 7, 1991)
United States v. Thomas (Mar. 6, 1991)
United States v. Marino (Feb. 28, 1991)
McClellan Realty v. McClellan Realty (Feb. 28, 1991)
Brown v. Miller (Feb. 28, 1991)
Gorman v. Richardson (Feb. 28, 1991)
Cohen v. Bordas (Feb. 27, 1991)
Ryan v. NJ Parole Board (Feb. 20, 1991)
Young v. Koehane (Jan. 31, 1991)
Bond v. Philadelphia Education (Jan. 31, 1991)
Winward v. Wolfson (Jan. 31, 1991)
Fairchilde v. Earnst (Jan. 28, 1991)
Hindorff v. Westinghouse Elec (Jan. 28, 1991)
Martino v. New Hampshire Ins. Co. (Jan. 24, 1991)
United States v. Barnes (Jan. 18, 1991)
Pascarell v. Control Services Inc. (Jan. 18, 1991)
Midiri Models Inc. v. Expressions Modeling (Jan. 18, 1991)
Kirk Bros. Mech. Contr. v. United States Dept of Navy (Jan. 18, 1991)
In re NY City Shoes (Jan. 18, 1991)
Matson v. Bowen (Jan. 17, 1991)
Allegheny Intl Inc. v. Carpenter (Jan. 17, 1991)
United States v. Cope (Jan. 17, 1991)
Funk v. Disciplinary Bd (Jan. 17, 1991)
United States v. Esper (Jan. 17, 1991)
United States v. George (Jan. 17, 1991)
United States v. Harris (Jan. 17, 1991)
United States v. Wright (Jan. 17, 1991)
United States v. Hunt (Jan. 15, 1991)
Zdrale v. Browning Ferris Ind (Jan. 14, 1991)
Lilley v. Commissioner IRS (Jan. 14, 1991)
King v. Zimmerman (Jan. 14, 1991)
Jannetta v. Altoona (Dec. 31, 1990)
Jannetta v. Bell of Pennsylvania (Dec. 31, 1990)
Jannetta v. Burgmeier (Dec. 31, 1990)
Jannetta v. Kowaleski (Dec. 31, 1990)
Nargi & Shaw Mech. v. Carol Management Inc. (Dec. 26, 1990)
Coleman v. Dunbarton Oaks Apts (Dec. 26, 1990)
United States v. Milton (Dec. 26, 1990)
Osborn #AP-8910 v. Patterson (Dec. 26, 1990)
United States v. Sanders (Dec. 21, 1990)
Lerner v. Educational Testing (Dec. 18, 1990)
In re FA Potts & Co. (Dec. 10, 1990)
United States v. Porte (Dec. 7, 1990)
Kosloff v. Secretary, HHS (Dec. 6, 1990)
Davis v. Beard (Dec. 5, 1990)
Dutoit v. Strategic Minerals Corp. (Dec. 5, 1990)
Melnyczenko v. Bodnar (Nov. 26, 1990)
Auger v. Teneyck (Nov. 26, 1990)
Muhammad v. Newark Bd. of Educ. (Nov. 23, 1990)
Slawek v. Boardman & Hamilton (Nov. 20, 1990)
United States v. Snead (Nov. 20, 1990)
Fykes v. Vinnie's Pizzeria (Nov. 20, 1990)
Kelvin #AS-1924 v. Poled (Nov. 16, 1990)
Adams v. Owens (Nov. 14, 1990)
Estate Israel Ramos v. York (Nov. 14, 1990)

- Richards v. Heckler* (Nov. 9, 1990)
True Ass'n Inc. v. Hedstrom Corp. (Nov. 9, 1990)
Wike v. Morgan Drive Away (Nov. 9, 1990)
Associated Business Tel. Sys. Corp. v. Greater Capital Hotel Corp. (Nov. 6, 1990)
Burgess v. Bike Athletic Co. (Oct. 31, 1990)
Ferri v. Kozakiewicz (Oct. 31, 1990)
Thomas v. State of NJ (Oct. 31, 1990)
Marx v. Kelly Appleman (Oct. 22, 1990)
Dollar Bank Fed v. Bernstein Group Inc. (Oct. 19, 1990)
Bradford-White Corp. v. Ernst & Whinney (Oct. 19, 1990)
Harrison v. Beyer (Oct. 17, 1990)
Associated Business Tel. Sys. Corp. v. Greater Capital Hotel Corp. (Oct. 17, 1990)
Pittsburgh National v. National State Bank (Oct. 17, 1990)
- United States v. Pierce* (Oct. 17, 1990)
United States v. Bermudez (Oct. 16, 1990)
Dollar Bank Fed v. Bernstein (Oct. 16, 1990)
State of Delaware v. Cavazos (Oct. 16, 1990)
Davis v. General Motors Corp. (Oct. 16, 1990)
Hartigan v. Insurance NA (Oct. 16, 1990)
Mendel v. Marion (Oct. 16, 1990)
Stefanowicz v. Bowen (Oct. 15, 1990)
Ware v. Frank (Oct. 15, 1990)
Fidelity & Deposit v. Glenn (Oct. 15, 1990)
Lewis v. Grant R. Wright, Inc. (Oct. 15, 1990)
MacCauley v. Wahlig (Oct. 15, 1990)
NLRB v. Rynone Container (Sep. 27, 1990)
Powell v. United States Gypsum Co. (Aug. 13, 1990)

Appendix 4

Question 23.c.

Case Number	Case Name	Reason for Recusal
86-1226	EEOC v. Westinghouse Electric Corp.	no specific recollection of why I recused
88-5616	United States v. Gallagher	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
88-5670	United States v. Carson	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
89-1342	United States v. Hernandez	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
89-5604, 89-5605	United States v. Daniel Touby	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
89-5993	United States v. O'Neal	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-1074	United States v. Lores	no specific recollection of why I recused, but possible reason is U.S. Attorney's Office involvement
90-1267, 90-1268, 90-1305	United States v. Eufrazio	no specific recollection of why I recused, but possible reason is U.S. Attorney's Office involvement
90-1755, 90-1743, 90-1492, 90-1541	United States v. Davis	These cases involved the U.S. Attorney's Office for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania. I chose not to recuse because the U.S. Attorney's Office for the District of New Jersey had no involvement in this matter at any point between March 1987 and July 1990.
90-3638	United States v. Robles	I recused because the defendant was connected with an investigation that occurred during my tenure in the U.S. Attorney's Office.
90-5003	United States v. Bazemore	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5004	United States v. Williams	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5005	United States v. Wilkins	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5053	United States v. Gilliam	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5063	Delta Traffic Serv. v. Mennen Co.	I recused from this case because one of the parties listed me and the U.S. Attorney's Office as counsel.
90-5082	United States v. Ford	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5147	Sassower v. Abrams	Mr. George Sassower involved, on standing recusal list (Mr. Sassower filed various complaints against me and other judges)
90-5186	United States v. McNamara	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5200	United States v. Lemos-Martinez	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5203	United States v. Cicalese	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5245	United States v. Trujillo	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5264	United States v. Delgado	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5292	United States v. Price	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5293	United States v. Johnson	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5294, 90-5295, 90-5481	American Cyanamid Co. v. SC Johnson & Son, Inc.	I recused based on a friendship with one of the attorneys.
90-5361	United States v. Salguero	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5371	Gaito v. United States	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5427, 90-5428	Colbert v. Gardner	no specific recollection of why I recused, but possible reason is U.S. Attorney's Office involvement
90-5438	United States v. Bordon	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list

90-5453	E R Squibb & Son, Inc. v. The Austin Co.	I recused based on a friendship with one of the attorneys.
90-5457	United States v. Barel	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5490	Waldron-Ramsay v. U.S. Dep't of Army	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5517	United States v. Vargas	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5518	United States v. Singh	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5520	United States v. Rodriguez	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5538	Rai v. Marsh	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5544	United States v. Weatherby	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5545	United States v. Torres	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5459	United States v. Newman	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5646	United States v. Ryan	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5660	Juanita Martinez v. Virginia Martinez	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5663	Mack Boring & Parts v. Meeker Sharkey	no specific recollection of why I recused
90-5674	McMeans v. Township of Waterford	I recused because two of the defendants were involved in a case that had been pending during my tenure as U.S. Attorney.
90-5678	Conte v. United States	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5680	United States v. Bressaw	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5683	United States v. Grecco	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5684	United States v. Mazzola	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5685	United States v. Gatto	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5688	United States v. Rendon	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5690	Dole v. Cooper Elec. Supply	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5713	United States v. Khan	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5714	United States v. Rana	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5716	United States v. Lemos-Villada	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5721	Am. Biomaterials v. United States	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5724	Lamasney v. Sec'y HHS	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5726	United States v. Bitzer	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5737	United States v. Garfield Container	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5739	United States v. Gutierrez	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5747	United States v. Garcia	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5753	Hamilton v. United States	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5759	United States v. Marin	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5767	United States v. Cannistraro	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5768	Dukes v. Bowen	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5776	United States v. Canadilla	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5776	Sec'y of Labor v. Int'l Matex Tank	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5777	United States v. Atkins	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5785	Dole v. Cooper Elec. Supply	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5786	Delage v. United States	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5795	United States v. Gatto	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5801	United States v. Henderson	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5811	EEOC v. Roadway Express, Inc.	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5820	United States v. Cannistraro	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list

90-5823	United States v. 92 Buena Vista Ave.	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5836	United States v. Talerico	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5840	United States v. Ortega	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5844	United States v. Vellaro	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5847	Davern v. Sec'y HHS	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5858	United States v. Garfield Container	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5868	United States v. Arroyave	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5869	United States v. Canas	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5878	United States v. Mustacchio	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5879	United States v. Mustacchio	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5880	United States v. Gallego-Zuluaga	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5882	Messer v. U.S. Postal Service	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5895	United States v. Khan	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5902	United States v. Wolf	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5904	Bocra v. United States	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5905	United States v. McCrae	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5907	Salter v. Frank	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5926	United States v. Solae-Payano	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5934	United States v. Lopez	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5937, 90-5939	Borchers v. United States	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5947	United States v. Cicco	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5948	United States v. Tannis	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5951	FTC v. Fax Corp. America, Inc.	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5955	Morgan v. Dep't of Navy	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5958	United States v. Braswell	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5959	United States v. Vargas	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5963	United States v. Ruiz	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5964	Pulizzotto v. United States	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5967	Moss v. United States	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5973	United States v. Karlin	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5974	United States v. Riggi	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5975	United States v. Timpani	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5982	United States v. Delgado	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-5988	Bradley v. E.I. Du Pont De Nemours	Carpenter Bennett & Morrissey involved, on standing recusal list
90-5991	Salter v. Frank	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-6000	Patterson v. Sec'y HHS	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-6009	N. Jersey Sec. Sch. v. U.S. Dep't of Ed.	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-6026	United States v. Morrison	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-6031	United States v. O'Neal	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-6038	Harter v. GAF Corp.	Carpenter Bennett & Morrissey involved, on standing recusal list
90-6041	United States v. Valenciano	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-6049	United States v. Castellano	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
90-6051	Schrob v. Catterson	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list

90-6052	San Filippo v. Bongiovanni	Carpenter Bennett & Morrissey involved, on standing recusal list
91-1123	United States v. Logar	no specific recollection of why I recused, but possible reason is U.S. Attorney's Office involvement
91-1296	United States v. Schwartz	no specific recollection of why I recused, but possible reason is U.S. Attorney's Office involvement
91-1308	United States v. Anderson	no specific recollection of why I recused, but possible reason is U.S. Attorney's Office involvement
91-1328	United States v. Lorenzo	no specific recollection of why I recused, but possible reason is U.S. Attorney's Office involvement
91-1490, 91-1491	Trinsey v. Pennsylvania	no specific recollection of why I recused
91-1598	Sassower v. Sisk	Mr. George Sassower involved, on standing recusal list
91-1608	United States v. Derewal	no specific recollection of why I recused, but possible reason is U.S. Attorney's Office involvement
91-1757	United States v. Peluyera	no specific recollection of why I recused, but possible reason is U.S. Attorney's Office involvement
91-1792	United States v. Pelullo	no specific recollection of why I recused, but possible reason is U.S. Attorney's Office involvement
91-1861	United States v. Mesa	no specific recollection of why I recused, but possible reason is U.S. Attorney's Office involvement
91-1862	United States v. Ul-Haq	no specific recollection of why I recused, but possible reason is U.S. Attorney's Office involvement
91-1864	United States v. Delco Wire Cable Co.	no specific recollection of why I recused, but possible reason is U.S. Attorney's Office involvement
91-1865	United States v. Delco Elec. Corp.	no specific recollection of why I recused, but possible reason is U.S. Attorney's Office involvement
91-3026	Martin v. Del. Law Sch. of Widener Univ., Inc.	On April 11, 1991, I wrote the following memo: AI am recused in cases involving Mr. Sassower but not Mr. Martin.@ Nevertheless, I was recused from this case. It is possible that recusal occurred due to clerical error.
91-3817	United States v. Pena	no specific recollection of why I recused, but possible reason is U.S. Attorney's Office involvement
91-3820	United States v. Thomas	no specific recollection of why I recused, but possible reason is U.S. Attorney's Office involvement
91-5001	United States v. Perko	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5016	United States v. Maldonado	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5019	United States v. Carson	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5025	Harris v. Local 300	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5028	Rainbow Navigation v. United States	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5030	United States v. Gallagher	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5040	United States v. Barber	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5041	Vulcan Pioneers, Inc. v. N.J. Dep't of Civ. Serv.	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5065	United States v. Gatto	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5074	United States v. Kendis	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5079	United States v. Wallace	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5085	Martin v. Townsend	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list

91-5086	United States v. Fisher	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5099	United States v. Sarbello	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5100	United States v. Centurione	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5106	United States v. Green	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5110	United States v. Craparotta	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5111	United States v. Applegate	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5112	United States v. McAvay	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5114	United States v. Muhammad	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5115	United States v. Clark	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5118	Alloway v. EPA	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5121	Davis v. Hayden	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5129	United States v. Napier	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5138	United States v. Gonzalez	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5142	United States v. Martello	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5144	United States v. Pinchuk	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5145	Mescal v. United States	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5155, 91-5188	ICI Service Corp. v. Greene	no specific recollection of why I recused
91-5166	Landano v. U.S. Dep't of Justice	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5166	United States v. Gilsenan	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5167	United States v. Cicalese	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5170	United States v. Mitchell	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5183	United States v. Plumeri	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5191	United States v. Hanley	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5193	United States v. Cardona	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5197	United States v. Kikumura	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5203, 91-5353	Bright v. Rutgers Univ.	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5204	United States v. Gilbert	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5205	Resyn Corp. v. United States	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5210	United States v. Walski	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5212	United States v. Stanik	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5226	United States v. Ray	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5227	United States v. Casper	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5230	Brezac v. Sec'y HHS	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5231	Oliver v. Brady	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5242	United States v. Noordhoek	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5243	United States v. Winters	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5243	Kavity v. United States	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5254	United States v. Zuckerman	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5259	In re Cent. R.R. Co. of N.J.	no specific recollection of why I recused
91-5263	In re Grand Jury	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list

91-5276, 91-5315, 91-5316, 91-5326, 91-5350, 91-5419, 91-5420, 91-5421, 91-5422, 91-5423, 91-5436, 91-5437	Williams v. Sec'y HHS	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5280	United States v. Urina	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5281	United States v. Rothstein	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5285, 91-5478	United States v. Moussa	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5290, 91-5597	Carteret Savings v. OTS	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5302	Smith v. Reid	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5303	United States v. Borchers	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5304	Osadchy v. U.S. Army	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5307	United States v. Williams	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5308	United States v. Biberfeld	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5312	United States v. Ortega	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5313	United States v. Cuevas	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5314	Rubert v. Sec'y HHS	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5324	United States v. Casiano	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5325	United States v. Welt	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5328	United States v. Centurione	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5336, 91-5337	Landano v. Rafferty	no specific recollection of why I recused, but possible reason is some connection to the U.S. Attorney's Office
91-5351	United States v. Vasquez	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5358	United States v. Danzig	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5371	United States v. Glynn	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5372	United States v. Nwakanma	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5373	United States v. Machado	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5382	United States v. Thompson	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5384	Sharif v. DeBellis	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5401, 91-5418	Elysian Fed. Sav. Bank v. First Interregional	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
91-5405, 91-5518, 91-5519	United States v. Coletti	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5407	Mody v. City of Hoboken	no specific recollection of why I recused, but possible reason is some connection to the U.S. Attorney's Office
91-5409	Arab Africa Bank v. Epstein	no specific recollection of why I recused
91-5428	McBride v. Princeton Univ.	I recused based on my activity on Princeton committees.
91-5434	United States v. Saiyad	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list

90-5440, 91-5441	United States v. Local 560 (IBT)	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5450	United States v. Cadavid	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5453	United States v. Kopp	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5455, 91-5494	United States v. Rodriguez	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5456, 91-5771	United States v. Canterino	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5457	Gelin v. Sec'y of the Army	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5464	United States v. Berbessi-Acosta	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5465, 91-5612	United States v. Mayles	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5466	United States v. Schneiderman	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5467	Ingerman v. IRS	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5469	D'Imperio v. United States	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5470, 91-5768	United States v. Contents of Accounts	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5472	United States v. Giraldo	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5473	United States v. Capasso	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5475	NLRB v. Prazier	no specific recollection of why I recused
91-5479	United States v. Marguglio	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5483, 91-5534	United States v. Latham	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5484	United States v. Badaracco	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5487	Lang v. HHS	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5489	United States v. Crapps	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5490	United States v. McCollum	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5493	United States v. Fredericks	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5499	Corbett v. Marsh	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5505	United States v. Harriatt	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5508	United States v. Adeyemi	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5512	Martin v. Knox	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5515	United States v. Hanley	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5525	United States v. Hefferman	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5525	United States v. Cardona	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5529	Slaughter v. Cooksey	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5537	United States v. Horan	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5538	United States v. Chasmer	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5539	United States v. Narvarte	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5561	United States v. Yepes	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5582	United States v. Steinmetz	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5587	United States v. Zaino	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5589	United States v. Uwaezhoke	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5596	Peters v. United States	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5610	United States v. Holguin	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5611	United States v. Abdullah	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5635	United States v. Wilson	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list

91-5655	Detweiler v. DeMartin	no specific recollection of why I recused
91-5656	United States v. Monteiro	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5659	Kosko v. U.S. Parole Comm'n	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5661	Golden v. Marsh	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5665	Rebimbas v. Sec'y HHS	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5676	United States v. Cen-Card Agency CCAC	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5683	United States v. Londono	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5684	United States v. Nunez	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5687	United States v. Lieberman	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5697	United States v. Zuckerman	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5703	United States v. Pollen	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5717	United States v. Squitieri	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5718	United States v. Parrish	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5723	Contreras v. INS	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5751	United States v. Collazo-Martinez	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5752	Matulewicz v. United States	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5754	Harter v. GAF Corp.	Carpenter Bennett & Morrissey involved, on standing recusal list
91-5755	United States v. Charles	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5756	M & G Convoy, Inc. v. Auto. Mech. & Helpers	Carpenter Bennett & Morrissey involved, on standing recusal list
91-5758	United States v. Pontani	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5772	United States v. DelViscovo	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5784	United States v. Sierra	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5788	United States v. Sardinha	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5814	United States v. Hargrove	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5815	United States v. Esposito	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5828	United States v. Barco	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5836	United States v. Khaliq	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5839	Shaw v. Cooksey	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5859	United States v. Gonzalez	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5864	United States v. Victoriano	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5876	Brooks v. Dep't of Law & Pub. Safety	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5900	United States v. Doe	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5901	United States v. Gomez-Salazar	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5902	United States v. Belton	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5903, 91-5920	United States v. Garrett	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5904	United States v. Eisenfleder	no specific recollection of why I recused, but possible reason is U.S. Attorney's Office involvement
91-5916, 91-5951	McDonnell v. United States	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5929	United States v. Sanial	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5935	Comm. Futures Trading v. Am. Metals Exch.	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list

91-5936, 91-5986	Sassower v. Abrams	Mr. George Sassower involved, on standing recusal list
91-5940	United States v. Heffernan	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5943	United States v. Meza	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5949, 91-5950	United States v. Gatto	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5952	United States v. Pontani	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5987	United States v. Garcia	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5989	United States v. Ayars	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5995	United States v. Zuckerman	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-5996	Williams v. Sec'y HHS	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-6002	United States v. Ospina	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-6011	United States v. Huerta	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-6019	Ortiz-Colon v. United States	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-6026	United States v. Bruno	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-6027	United States v. Fousteris	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-6029	Williamson v. United States	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-6031	United States v. Jiovine	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-6035	Bryen v. Becker	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-6042	Wilson v. U.S. Parole Comm'n	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-6058	United States v. Spiropoulos	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
91-6060, 92-5058, 92-5059	United States v. Iafelice	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-1050	United States v. Garth	no specific recollection of why I recused, but possible reason is U.S. Attorney's Office involvement
92-1128	United States v. O'Malley	no specific recollection of why I recused, but possible reason is U.S. Attorney's Office involvement
92-1183	In re Paoli R.R. Yard PCB Litig.	no specific recollection of why I recused, but possible reason is General Electric's involvement
92-1287	United States v. Palmer	no specific recollection of why I recused, but possible reason is U.S. Attorney's Office involvement
92-1430	United States v. Brightful	no specific recollection of why I recused, but possible reason is U.S. Attorney's Office involvement
92-1473	United States v. Stevens	no specific recollection of why I recused, but possible reason is U.S. Attorney's Office involvement
92-1510	United States v. Butler	no specific recollection of why I recused, but possible reason is U.S. Attorney's Office involvement
92-1572	United States v. Diaz	no specific recollection of why I recused, but possible reason is U.S. Attorney's Office involvement
92-1585	United States v. Jacob-Sanchez	no specific recollection of why I recused, but possible reason is U.S. Attorney's Office involvement
92-1624	United States v. Kates	no specific recollection of why I recused, but possible reason is U.S. Attorney's Office involvement
92-1660	Donnelly v. United States	no specific recollection of why I recused, but possible reason is U.S. Attorney's Office involvement

92-1721, 92-2105	United States v. Bachman	no specific recollection of why I recused, but possible reason is U.S. Attorney's Office involvement
92-1748	United States v. Paulino	no specific recollection of why I recused, but possible reason is U.S. Attorney's Office involvement
92-1785, 92-1903	United States v. Jones	no specific recollection of why I recused, but possible reason is U.S. Attorney's Office involvement
92-1797	United States v. Lu	no specific recollection of why I recused, but possible reason is U.S. Attorney's Office involvement
92-1831	United States v. Rivera	no specific recollection of why I recused, but possible reason is U.S. Attorney's Office involvement
92-1862	United States v. Arbelaez	no specific recollection of why I recused, but possible reason is U.S. Attorney's Office involvement
92-1891	United States v. DiFlavis	no specific recollection of why I recused, but possible reason is U.S. Attorney's Office involvement
92-1911	United States v. Brown Univ.	no specific recollection of why I recused, but possible reason is U.S. Attorney's Office involvement
92-1921	Williams v. U.S. Postal Serv.	no specific recollection of why I recused, but possible reason is U.S. Attorney's Office involvement
92-2035	Hammond v. Creative Financial	The Clerk's Office lists this as one that involved my recusal, but the docket sheet does not indicate that I recused, and I have no specific recollection of considering recusal in this case.
92-2069	United States v. Disla	no specific recollection of why I recused, but possible reason is U.S. Attorney's Office involvement
92-2072	United States v. Ford	no specific recollection of why I recused, but possible reason is U.S. Attorney's Office involvement
92-2108	United States v. Siwinski	no specific recollection of why I recused, but possible reason is U.S. Attorney's Office involvement
92-3718	Muris v. Lewis	I recused based on the involvement of Timothy Lewis
92-5000	United States v. Miscio	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5010	United States v. Maldonado	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5019	United States v. Reinhardt	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5023	United States v. Surano	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5025	Colbert v. United States	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5034	United States v. Grasso	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5044	United States v. Yehuda	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5045	United States v. Vasquez-Caro	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5046	United States v. Flores	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5061	Khaliq v. Durkin	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5071	Mutual Benefit Life Ins. Co. v. Zimmerman	I recused based on a friendship with one of the attorneys.
92-5072	MacDaniels v. Sec'y HHS	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5075	United States v. Veale	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5081	Ruiz v. United States	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5082	Ortega v. United States	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5085	Mutual Benefit Life v. Zimmerman	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
92-5087	United States v. Kabba	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5089	United States v. Rivero	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list

92-5090	United States v. Florez	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5091	United States v. Florez	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5092	United States v. Muhammed	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5094	United States v. Surano	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5095	Elshinnawy v. Garrett	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5098	Becker v. Sherwin-Williams	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5099	United States v. Varga	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5102	Smith v. Frank	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5105	United States v. Santtini	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5106	United States v. Santtini	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5107	United States v. Williams	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5110	United States v. McPherson	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5113	Riek v. Wood	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5119	Gonzalez v. United States	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5126	United States v. Abdul-Hamid	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5127	United States v. Atkinson	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5135	United States v. Peterson	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5136	United States v. McCollum	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5141	United States v. Gore	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5142	United States v. Cardounel	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5150	United States v. Spagnoli	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5153	EEOC v. Blue Diamond Growers	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5158	United States v. Riggi	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5182	United States v. Bertoli	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5183	United States v. Khan	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5184	United States v. Vera	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5198	Thomas v. United States	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5199	United States v. Makhoul	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5209	United States v. Zirpoli	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5210	United States v. Taveras	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5214	United States v. Nunez	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5215	United States v. Dellisanti	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5216	United States v. Parlavocchio	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5220	Becker v. Sherwin-Williams	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5226	United States v. Parlavocchio	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5231	Smith v. Eggenberger	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5234	United States v. Giaquinto	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5235	United States v. Assante	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5236	United States v. Harmon	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5237	United States v. Malik	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5244	United States v. Cariffe	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5250	United States v. Maniscalco	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5251	United States v. Cuomo	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5252	United States v. Hall	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5253	United States v. Danzey	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5254	Malfatto v. United States	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5258	Hartford Associates v. United States	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list

92-5259	United States v. Ezeihuaku	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5260	United States v. Wright	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5261	United States v. Payano	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5262	United States v. Nwachia	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5268	United States v. Solis	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5269	United States v. Anthony	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5270	United States v. Aliagha	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5272	United States v. Patel	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5278	United States v. Pollard	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5280	Sansano v. Secretary HHS	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5286	United States v. Giovinazzo	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5292	Peoples v. Secretary HHS	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5295	United States v. Cammareri	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5304	United States v. Mayles	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5312	United States v. Benedetto	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5313	United States v. Hock	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5321	Upper v. US Government	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5323	United States v. Xhudo	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5326	United States v. Barco	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5329	United States v. Ambrutis	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5330	United States v. Calvert	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5332	Adeniji v. FDIC	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5333	Adeniji v. Social Security Admin	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5537	United States v. Vermandere	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5362	United States v. Plaza	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5365	United States v. Lustig	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5373	United States v. Bober	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5374	United States v. Polanco	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5379	United States v. Hill	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5380	United States v. Hill	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5383	United States v. Schonewolf	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5385	United States v. Montecino	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5386	Wall v. United States	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5387	Candeliere v. HUD	The Clerk's Office recused me from this case based on my standing recusal list, but I am uncertain which party or attorney triggered the recusal.
92-5388	Galinkin v. IRS	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5395	Mason v. Secretary HHS	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5400	Cano v. United States	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5402	United States v. Sanchez	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5403	United States v. Sanchez	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5404	United States v. Williams	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5406	United States v. Johnson	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5410	Toussaint v. IRS	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5411	United States v. Kemenash	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5419	United States v. West	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5420	United States v. Matthews	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list

92-5421	United States v. Dickson	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5422	United States v. Cherry	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5423	United States v. Hardy	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5424	Smith v. Postmaster General	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5426	Womack v. United States	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5430	Ind. Hwy Corp v. Danielson	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5437	United States v. Cannistraro	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5442	Marchand v. Plainfield	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5443	United States v. Ortiz	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5448	Walls v. Fed Bureau Prisons	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5448	In re Grand Jury	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5452	United States v. Guerra	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5453	United States v. Saka	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5455	Adeniji v. FDIC	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5457	Guinane v. US Postal Service	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5459	Geter v. United States	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5460	Williams-Moore v. Postmaster General	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5461	United States v. LeCarreaux	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5464	Barlow v. HUD	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5467	Thakkar v. Debevoise	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5475	Martello v. United States	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5486	United States v. Calderon	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5491	Rinier v. United States	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5495	United States v. Walker	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5498	United States v. Charles	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5499	United States v. Poh	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5500	United States v. Tran	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5502	United States v. Londono	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5503	United States v. Hagmaier	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5504	United States v. Hagmaier	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5505	United States v. Roman	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5507	United States v. Console	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5511	United States v. Markoff	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5514	United States v. Cicco	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5515	United States v. Tabbachino	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5518	United States v. Fedor	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5519	United States v. Jordan	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5520	United States v. Loughney	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5521	United States v. Loughney	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5542	United States v. Anthony	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5547	United States v. Dass	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5548	United States v. Jackson	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5549	United States v. Petrucci	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5550	United States v. Ekwegh	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5555	United States v. Curcio	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5560	United States v. Pardo	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list

92-5561	In re Atlantic Bus	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5568	United States v. Keeley	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5569	United States v. Collins	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5570	United States v. Wong	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5571	United States v. Davis	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5575	United States v. Bogusz	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5576	United States v. Caterini	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5585	United States v. Davis	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5588	United States v. Gatskill	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5589	United States v. Londono	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5591	United States v. Keith	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5592	Frontier Pilots v. Texas Air Corp	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
92-5593	United States v. Hollenback	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5595	United States v. O'Rourke	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5600	United States v. Pacheco	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5606	United States v. Tamakloe	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5609	United States v. Jackson	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5612	United States v. Mantilla	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5613	United States v. Natera	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5614	United States v. Rosario	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5615	United States v. Ryan	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5617	United States v. Jones	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5621	United States v. 102 Harcourt Ave	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5625	United States v. Danon	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5626	United States v. Mittenberg	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5627	United States v. Maldonado	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5636	Transtech Ind Inc v. A&Z Septic Clean	Vanguard Ventron Chemical involved, based on standing recusal list
92-5639	United States v. De Grandis	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5643	United States v. Colina	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5644	United States v. Grant	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5654	United States v. Rodriguez	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5656	United States v. Hardy	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5659	United States v. Hutyczyk	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5663	Smith v. Eggenberger	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5664	Canadilla v. United States	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5665	United States v. Barber	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5672	United States v. Brower	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5673	United States v. Nwizuzu	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5674	United States v. Ukpai	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5675	United States v. Williams	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5679	Hammond v. United States	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5683	United States v. Bieregu	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5684	United States v. Sullivan	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5685	United States v. Sanz	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5686	United States v. Seale	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5687	United States v. A Parcel of Land	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list

92-5692	United States v. Zscheigner	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5695	Schoonejongen v. Curtiss Wright Corp	Carpenter Bennett & Morrissey involved, on standing recusal list
92-5700	Lynch v. United States	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5703	United States v. $17,830.00	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5705	United States v. Eighteen Units	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5706	United States v. Acevedo	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5708	United States v. Ortiz-Linares	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5709	Clarke v. United States	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5710	Schoonejonger v. Curtiss Wright Corp	Carpenter Bennett & Morrissey involved, on standing recusal list
92-5711	United States v. Newby	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5712	United States v. Barber	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5713	United States v. Schweitzer	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5714	United States v. Olowe	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5715	Berkeley Fed Sav v. Laurano	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5718	United States v. Pollen	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5726	Peak v. United States	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-7362	Lorenzo v. United States	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-7377	United States v. Netelkos	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-7395, 92-7396, 92-7397, 92-7398, 92-7399, 92-7400, 92-7410, 92-7411, 92-7412, 92-7413, 92-7414, 92-7415, 92-7435, 92-7436, 92-7499, 92-7500	In re Columbia Gas	I recused based on a friendship with one of the attorneys.
93-1015	United States v. Quinones	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-1053	United States v. Williams	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-1068	United States v. Lacastro	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-1126	United States v. Davis	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-1192	United States v. Rienzi	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-1193	Melo v. Hafer	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-1261	United States v. Pellulo	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-1313	United States v. Fugarino	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-1322	United States v. Turcks	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-1329	United States v. Kramm	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-1401	United States v. Chen	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list

93-1411	United States v. Salcedo	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-1444	United States v. Curran	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-1489	United States v. Pyzik	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-1646	United States v. Martinson	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-1681	United States v. Shuster	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-1692	United States v. Soto	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-1802	United States v. Smith	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-1909	United States v. Lopez	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-1941	United States v. Ortiz	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-1966	United States v. Gaskins	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-2052	United States v. Ramos	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-2054	United States v. Alverty	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-2073	United States v. Cope	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-2085	United States v. Ramos	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-2086	United States v. Corrado	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-2147	United States v. Johnson	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5000	United States v. Blair	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5001	United States v. Bethea	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5002	United States v. Perez	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5003	United States v. Sherman	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5004	United States v. Silverman	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5005	United States v. Silverman	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5020	Mitek v. Secretary HHS	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5022	United States v. Mohmoud	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5025	Reo v. United States	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5026	Gonzalez v. Cooksey	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5027	United States v. Scott	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5031	Ferriol v. United States	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5039	United States v. Ahamefule	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5041	United States v. Contorno	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5044	United States v. Gaudenzi	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5046	United States v. McCann	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5047	Benjamin v. Frank	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5049	United States v. Winters	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5055	United States v. Rudnick	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5057	United States v. Mayles	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5059	United States v. Parrish	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5061	State of New Jersey v. Shanklin	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5064	United States v. Cannistraro	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5065	Tillman v. United States	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5067	Bishy v. FBI	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5069	United States v. Seale	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5073	United States v. Young	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5074	United States v. Walton	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list

93-5075	United States v. Scott	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5076	United States v. Cooper	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5077	United States v. Cooper	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5082	Gomez-Salazar v. United States	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5099	United States v. Oliva	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5102	Hammond v. United States	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5104	United States v. Pardo	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5111	State of New Jersey v. Baldwin	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5112	Wynn v. United States	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5113	United States v. Bautista-Ramirez	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5114	United States v. Dietsch	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5115	United States v. Cooper	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5116	United States v. Cooper	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5117	United States v. Hightower	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5127	Mates v. OSHA	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5134	United States v. Palmieri	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5140	Zuckerman v. United States	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5142	United States v. Cooper	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5143	United States v. Cooper	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5156	Kirby v. United States	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5157	Ortiz-Colon v. United States	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5162	Lopez v. United States	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5168	United States v. Ortiz	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5170	United States v. Taylor	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5171	United States v. Ricks	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5172	United States v. Jemal	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5173	Cooper v. United States	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5175	United States v. Payne	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5176	United States v. Rodriguez	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5179	United States v. Lavoie	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5180	United States v. Walsh	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5183	United States v. Freeman	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5188	Edmond v. Commander	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5191	Esposito v. Secretary HHS	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5192	Tucci v. United States Dept Veterans	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5200	United States v. Olu	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5204	United States v. Cohen	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5222	Crapps v. United States	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5228	United States v. Mayles	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5237	United States v. Welbeck	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5238	United States v. Lipari	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5240	United States v. Freeman	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5244	Edmond v. Commander	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5246	United States v. Ortiz	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-9247	United States v. Marin	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5252	United States v. Princeton Gamma Tech	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list

93-5258	United States v. Forsyth	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5261	United States v. Monaco	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5266	United States v. Carrizales	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5267	United States v. Santtini	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5268	United States v. Holquin-Hernandez	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5269	United States v. Van't Slot	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
92-5273	Ospina v. United States	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5276	United States v. Koufougainakis	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5278	United States v. Ramirez	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5287	United States v. Richardson	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5300	United States v. Pica	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5310	Mates v. OSHA	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5311	Merzeau v. US Dept of Justice	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5320	Dorsey v. Secretary HHS	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5325	United States v. Eick	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5236	United States v. $196,601.00	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5327	Londono v. United States	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5329	FDIC v. Bathgate	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5331	United States v. Pardo	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5333	United States v. Murphy	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5334	United States v. Ahmadi	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5335	United States v. Jackson	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5336	Colont v. Dept Veteran Affairs	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5337	United States v. Richmond	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5343	United States v. Appiah	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5344	United States v. Akech	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5345	Watters v. Secretary HHS	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5346	Apostolides v. Cooksey	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5348	Trembley v. Secretary HHS	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5349	Davis v. Brennan	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5351	Chalmers v. Secretary HHS	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5352	United States v. Crudup	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5353	United States v. Onibe	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5354	United States v. Crump	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5357	United States v. Anthony	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5358	United States v. Degortari	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5359	United States v. Hernandez	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5360	United States v. Rodriguez	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5361	United States v. Davis	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5262	United States v. Deak	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5365	Maldonado v. United States	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5366	Armament Eng Company v. US Army Armament	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5369	United States v. Mayles	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5370	United States v. Mayles	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5373	McKnight v. Cooksey	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5374	United States v. Santamaria	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list

93-5375	United States v. Zotos	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5379	United States v. Verpent	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5384	United States v. Jackson	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5390	United States v. Robinson	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5391	Thakkar v. Debevoise	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5392	Smith v. Eggenberger	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5396	United States v. Bryant	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5398	United States v. Staples	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5399	United States v. Menon	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5401	Noble v. United States	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5404	Blue v. Edmiston	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5406	In re East Wind Ind	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5408	United States v. Gaona	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5409	United States v. Rosa	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5414	Instructional Sys v. Computer Curriculum	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
93-5420	United States v. Goldstein	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5421	United States v. Westernman	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5422	United States v. Gilsenan	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5423	United States v. Cantillo	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5424	United States v. Worth	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5428	United States v. Tamayo	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5434	Elshinnawy v. Secretary of Navy	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5435	United States v. Cantillo	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5436	United States v. Damon	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5437	United States v. Tucker	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5438	United States v. Sultan	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5439	United States v. Sheikh	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5440	United States v. Valesquez	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5450	United States v. Berry	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5457	Atkin v. EEOC	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5463	George v. Cooksey	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5466	Gray v. Cooksey	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5467	United States v. Robinson	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5468	United States v. Ragin	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5469	United States v. Rivera	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5470	United States v. Torres	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5471	United States v. Carvajal	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5472	United States v. Bonilla	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5473	United States v. Torres Pelaez	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5474	United States v. Cardona Osorio	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5475	United States v. Ramirez	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5479	United States v. Haywood	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5480	Adams v. Trustees NJ Brewery	Rosemary Alito involved, on standing recusal list
93-5483	United States v. Harper	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5486	United States v. Jones	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5489	United States v. Colvin	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list

93-5490	Instructional Sys v. Computer Curriculum	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
93-5491	United States v. Ludiver	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5492	United States v. White	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5496	Germaine v. Cooksey	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5499	Elliott v. US Parole Comm	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5503	United States v. Bloom	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5507	FDIC v. Bathgate	The Clerk's Office recused me from this case based on my standing recusal list, but I am uncertain which party or attorney triggered the recusal.
93-5508	Mates v. OSHA	The Clerk's Office recused me from this case based on my standing recusal list, but I am uncertain which party or attorney triggered the recusal.
93-5511	United States v. Bertoli	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5512	United States v. Odumosu	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5514	United States v. Shea	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5517	United States v. Heller	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5518	Montecino v. United States	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5519	Gaydos v. Politan	The Clerk's Office recused me from this case based on my standing recusal list, but I am uncertain which party or attorney triggered the recusal.
93-5520	United States v. Cannistraro	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5526	Harris v. Secretary HHS	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5529	United States v. Vastola	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5535	Netelkos v. United States	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5537	Balog v. Secretary HHS	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5538	Dia Navigation Co v. Pomeroy	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5539	United States v. Rochester	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5540	EEOC v. ITT Avionics Div	Rosemary Alito involved, on standing recusal list
93-5545	United States v. Khan	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5548	Atkin v. Kemp	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5549	United States v. Sanns	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5550	United States v. White	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5551	United States v. Bloom	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5555	Gile v. Optical Radiation	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
93-5559	Presbytery of NJ v. Florio	I recused based on my relationship with Robert J. Del Tufo, one of the named parties, with whom I had worked closely in the U.S. Attorney's Office.
93-5564	Schoonejongen v. Curtiss Wright Corp	Carpenter, Bennett & Morrissey involved, on standing recusal list
93-5568	Morgan v. Cooksey	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5569	NJ Dept Env Prot v. Long Island Power	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5572	FDIC v. Bathgate	The Clerk's Office recused me from this case based on my standing recusal list, but I am uncertain which party or attorney triggered the recusal.

93-5573	Gaydos v. Chertoff	The Clerk's Office recused me from this case based on my standing recusal list, but I am uncertain which party or attorney triggered the recusal.
93-5574	United States v. Rivera	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5578	United States v. Raven	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5583	United States v. Colletti	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5592	United States v. Klepacki	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5593	United States v. Mayles	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5594	United States v. Martin	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5597	United States v. Conde	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5598	United States v. Rodriguez	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5599	Nagy v. Secretary HHS	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5609	Atkin v. EEOC	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5610	Al-Qawee v. Cooksey	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5613	NJ Dept Env Prot v. Long Island Power	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5615	United States v. Brooks	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5621	United States v. Earp	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5629	Aliagha v. United States	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5630	Marchand v. Plainfield	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5633	United States v. Marabello	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5635	Instructional Sys v. Computer Curriculum	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
93-5641	United States v. Oduntan	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5653	Gayle Elec Inc v. US Dept Army	The Clerk's Office recused me from this case based on my standing recusal list, but I am uncertain which party or attorney triggered the recusal.
93-5658	Filippo v. Bongiovanni	Carpenter, Bennett & Morrissey involved, on standing recusal list
93-5660	United States v. Wilks	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5661	United States v. Souza	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5662	Manna v. US Justice	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5669	Wallace v. AG	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5677	United States v. Nieves	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5681	One 1986 Mercedes v. One Unknown DEA	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5687	United States v. Carrigan	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5689	Adorno v. Secretary HHS	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5690	AGS Computers Inc v. US Dept Treasury	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5693	United States v. Walker	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5698	Holowinski v. Secretary HHS	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5703	Lightning Lube Inc v. Witco Corporation	no specific recollection of why I recused
93-5710	United States v. Henry	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5718	United States v. Edwards	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5719	United States v. Wexler	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list

93-5722	Instructional Sys v. Computer Curriculum	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
93-5723	United States v. Fasolino	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5730	Leo v. Kerr McGee	I recused based on a friendship with one of the attorneys.
93-5732	United States v. Antar	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5733	United States v. Antar	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5734	United States v. Lombardi	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5735	United States v. Maniscalco	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5736	United States v. Cuomo	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5737	United States v. Tomasino	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5738	United States v. Marrone	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5739	United States v. Marino	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5740	United States v. Paris	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5741	United States v. Cucciniello	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5742	United States v. Contreras	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5744	United States v. Ingram	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5745	United States v. Ingram	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5755	United States v. Melendez	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5762	Rivero v. United States	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5763	United States v. Winters	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5765	United States v. Mayles	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5771	Pub Interest v. Secretary Air Force	The Clerk's Office recused me from this case based on my standing recusal list, but I am uncertain which party or attorney triggered the recusal.
93-5775	Gaydos v. Chertoff	The Clerk's Office recused me from this case based on my standing recusal list, but I am uncertain which party or attorney triggered the recusal.
93-5776	Adorno v. Secretary HHS	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5782	United States v. Becker	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5786	United States v. Srivastava	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-5788	United States v. Yang	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
93-7179	In re Columbia Gas	I recused based on a friendship with one of the attorneys.
93-7304	In re Columbia Gas	I recused based on a friendship with one of the attorneys.
94-1046	United States v. McGovern	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-1092	United States v. Nock	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-1123	Roe v. Operation Rescue	no specific recollection of why I recused
94-1357	United States v. Washington	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-1385	United States v. Bell	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-1462	United States v. Jackson	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-1572	Cohen v. Austin	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-1810	Thompson v. Kramer	The Clerk's Office recused me from this case based on my standing recusal list, but I am uncertain which party or attorney triggered the recusal.
94-3527	Ackerman v. Warnaco Inc	I recused after examining the brief in this case, but I do not recall which party or attorney triggered the recusal.
94-5000	United States v. Miles	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5004	United States v. Lewis	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list

94-5005	United States v. Martinez	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5006	United States v. Antar	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5008	United States v. Tukes	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5009	United States v. Cook	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5018	United States v. Blohm	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5019	United States v. Orozco	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5025	United States v. Srivastava	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5029	Lightning Lube Inc v. Witco Corporation	no specific recollection of why I recused
94-5031	Dreher v. United States	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5032	United States v. Okereke	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5033	United States v. Malcolm	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5034	United States v. Feng	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5041	Chang v. Secretary Transp	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5043	Russo v. Rite Hite Corp	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
94-5048	Instructional Sys v. Computer Curriculum	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
94-5049	Montgomery v. Quinlan	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5050	Amis v. United States	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5054	Byrne v. Halliburton Co.	no specific recollection of why I recused
94-5059	Pub Interest v. Secretary Air Force	The Clerk's Office recused me from this case based on my standing recusal list, but I am uncertain which party or attorney triggered the recusal.
94-5061	United States v. Thamrong	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5062	State of NJ v. Hall	The Clerk's Office recused me from this case based on my standing recusal list, but I am uncertain which party or attorney triggered the recusal.
94-5063	United States v. Lewis	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5065	United States v. Adu	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5066	United States v. Merritt	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5067	United States v. Peterson	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5068	United States v. Roberts	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5072	United States v. Dantzig	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5079	Hypolitus v. United States	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5082	Lahood v. State of NJ	The Clerk's Office recused me from this case based on my standing recusal list, but I am uncertain which party or attorney triggered the recusal.
94-5085	Adorno v. Secretary HHS	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5087	Bailey v. Gallagher	The Clerk's Office recused me from this case based on my standing recusal list, but I am uncertain which party or attorney triggered the recusal.
94-5090	United States v. Bd Ed Piscataway	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5091	CJ Betters Corp v. Housing Camden	The Clerk's Office recused me from this case based on my standing recusal list, but I am uncertain which party or attorney triggered the recusal.
94-5093	United States v. Westby	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5095	United States v. Bieregu	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list

94-5096	Cadavid v. United States	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5097	Gaydos v. Chertoff	The Clerk's Office recused me from this case based on my standing recusal list, but I am uncertain which party or attorney triggered the recusal.
94-5100	Gamble v. Secretary Veterans	The Clerk's Office recused me from this case based on my standing recusal list, but I am uncertain which party or attorney triggered the recusal.
94-5106	United States v. Gorospe	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5107	United States v. Cherry	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5108	United States v. Benvenuto	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5109	United States v. Ojenor	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5119	Moss v. United States	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5120	United States v. Bogos	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5121	United States v. Wright	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5122	United States v. Sassman	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5125	Elshinnawy v. Secretary Navy	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5126	Gonzalez v. Ocean Cty Bd Social	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5134	Reid v. State of NJ	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5139	Zuckerman v. United States	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5146	United States v. Gartenberg	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5147	Martin v. Townsend	The Clerk's Office recused me from this case based on my standing recusal list, but I am uncertain which party or attorney triggered the recusal.
94-5148	Lyden v. IRS	The Clerk's Office recused me from this case based on my standing recusal list, but I am uncertain which party or attorney triggered the recusal.
94-5153	United States v. Baran	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5154	United States v. Baran	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5156	United States v. Thompson	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5167	United States v. Bertoli	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5176	United States v. Torres-Rosario	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5177	United States v. Calderon	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5178	United States v. Nieves	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5179	United States v. Wall	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5181	Waldecker v. Jepsen	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5182	Waldecker v. Jepsen	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5187	United States v. Mayles	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5198	United States v. McFadden	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5204	United States v. Carrara	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5205	United States v. De Lussey	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5206	United States v. De Lussey	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5207	United States v. Lopez	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5210	Tamakloe v. United States	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5219	United States v. Tawdros	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5224	Puentes v. United States	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5228	United States v. Antar	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5230	United States v. Antar	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list

94-5231	United States v. Grungo	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5232	United States v. Frazier	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5235	United States v. Kim	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5249	Scaria v. Sec of the Treasury	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5253	Eichenholtz v. Brennan	I believe I recused because Ronald J. Riccio, then Dean of Seton Hall Law School, was named as a party.
94-5254	Vasporly v. Secretary Army	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5261	United States v. Dalene	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5263	United States v. Koufos	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5264	United States v. Koufos	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5276	Hatco Corp v. WR Grace & Co	Carpenter, Bennett & Morrissey involved, on standing recusal list
94-5284	United States v. Soto	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5285	United States v. Bedoya	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5286	United States v. Brisita	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5287	United States v. Fernandez	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5288	United States v. Carnero	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5291	United States v. Caiola	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5292	United States v. Brown	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5297	United States v. Williams	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5300	United States v. Alers	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5301	United States v. Kruckel	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5302	United States v. Paz	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5309	United States v. Rivera	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5315	United States v. Pollack	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5319	United States v. Miller	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5320	United States v. Arroyo-Angulo	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5321	United States v. Bishop	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5322	Salmon v. Secretary Army	The Clerk's Office recused me from this case based on my standing recusal list, but I am uncertain which party or attorney triggered the recusal.
94-5325	United States v. Chemical Leaman	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5328	Kennedy v. Kaye	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5330	United States v. Zingone	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5332	United States v. Pappas	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5333	United States v. Pappas	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5337	United States v. Castano	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5339	United States v. Austin	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, on standing recusal list
94-5346	Codario v. United States	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney
94-5352	United States v. Bass	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney
94-5377	Kennedy v. Kaye	no specific recollection of why I recused, but possible reason is U.S. Attorney's Office involvement
94-5384	United States v. Hepburn	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney

94-5388	United States v. Thompson	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney
94-5390	United States v. Morelli	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney
94-5419	Am. Centennial Insv. Underwriters Inc	no specific recollection of why I recused
94-5420	Thompson v. Toyota Mtr Corp	Carpenter, Bennett & Morrissey involved, on standing recusal list
94-5435	Thompson v. Toyota Mtr Corp	Carpenter, Bennett & Morrissey involved, on standing recusal list
94-5475	United States v. Perna	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney
94-5481	United States v. Lopez	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney
94-5482	United States v. Taccetta	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney
94-5562	United States v. Lovett	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney
94-5584	United States v. Thor	no specific recollection of why I recused, but possible reason is U.S. Attorney's Office involvement
94-5586	United States v. Lovett	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney
94-5594	United States v. D'Alessio	no specific recollection of why I recused, but possible reason is U.S. Attorney's Office involvement
94-5619	United States v. Kemenash	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney
94-5620	United States v. Hankins	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney
94-5627	SEC v. Antar	The Clerk's Office recused me from this case based on my standing recusal list, but I am uncertain which party or attorney triggered the recusal.
94-5641	Hein v. FDIC	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
94-5661	United States v. Wheeler	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney
94-5674	United States v. Console	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney
94-5675	United States v. Console	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney
94-5682	United States v. Hernandez	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney
94-5691	In re Jason Realty	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
94-5698	Health Maintenance v. Whitman	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
94-5720	Mayles v. United States	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney
94-5753	United States v. Console	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney
94-5772	Mayles v. United States	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney

95-1669	Fiber-Lite Corp v. First Fidelity Bank	no specific recollection of why I recused
95-3362	United States v. Grewal	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney
95-5006	United States v. Contents of Accounts	The Clerk's Office recused me from this case based on my standing recusal list, but I am uncertain which party or attorney triggered the recusal.
95-5009	United States v. Vaccaro	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney
95-5063	Stevens v. United States	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney
95-5133	Jason Realty LP v. First Fidelity Bank	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
95-5181	Hein v. FDIC	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
95-5196	United States v. Bertoli	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney
95-5285	United States v. Caiafa	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney
95-5286	United States v. DeAnnuntis	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney
95-5287	United States v. Atl Science & Tech	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney
95-5320	United States v. Caterini	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney
95-5335	United States v. Spiers	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney
95-5336	United States v. Spiers	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney
95-5408	United States v. Khaliq	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney
95-5501	Atkins v. United States	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney
95-5733	United States v. Local 560	no specific recollection of why I recused, but possible reason is U.S. Attorney's Office involvement
95-5766	United States v. Contents of Accounts	The Clerk's Office recused me from this case based on my standing recusal list, but I am uncertain which party or attorney triggered the recusal.
95-5774	United States v. Berrios	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney
95-5788	United States v. Local 560	no specific recollection of why I recused, but possible reason is U.S. Attorney's Office involvement
95-5814	Shaffer v. United States	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney
95-5862	Tummala v. Merck & Co Inc	Carpenter, Bennett & Morrissey involved, on standing recusal list
95-5871	Spagnoli v. United States	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney
96-5015	United States v. Gilliard	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney

96-5113	United States v. Sarbello	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney
96-5200	Schulz v. US Boxing Assn	Carpenter, Bennett & Morrissey involved, on standing recusal list
96-5212	United States v. Surgent	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney
96-5239	Schulz v. US Boxing Assn	Carpenter, Bennett & Morrissey involved, on standing recusal list
96-5299	Gambino v. Morris	no specific recollection of why I recused, but possible reason is some connection to the U.S. Attorney's Office
96-5321	United States v. Local 560	no specific recollection of why I recused, but possible reason is U.S. Attorney's Office involvement
96-5327	Henderson v. United States	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney
96-5328	Zuckerman v. United States	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney
96-5354	Stewart v. Rutgers	Carpenter, Bennett & Morrissey involved, on standing recusal list
96-5381	Williams v. United States	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney
96-5422	SsangYong USA Inc v. Innovation Group Ltd	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
96-5428	In re Henry Fegeley	no specific recollection of why I recused, but possible reason is some connection to the U.S. Attorney's Office
96-5472	Tokhtameshev v. Am. Natl Can Co	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
96-5478	Rutigliano v. Valley Bus Forms	Carpenter, Bennett & Morrissey involved, on standing recusal list
96-5484	Machado v. United States	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney
96-5485	Markoff v. United States	no specific recollection of why I recused, but possible reason is some connection to the U.S. Attorney's Office
96-5502	United States v. Gonzalez	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney
96-5530	Spagnoli v. United States	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney
96-5538	Failla v. City of Passaic	no specific recollection of why I recused, but possible reason is U.S. Attorney's Office involvement
96-5539	Failla v. City of Passaic	no specific recollection of why I recused, but possible reason is U.S. Attorney's Office involvement
96-5589	United States v. Haddy	The Clerk's Office recused me from this case based on my standing recusal list, but I am uncertain which party or attorney triggered the recusal.
96-5616	Wallace v. United States	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney
96-5667	Hardy v. United States	no specific recollection of why I recused, but possible reason is some connection to the U.S. Attorney's Office
96-5679	In re Oakview	I recused based on a friendship with one of the attorneys.
96-5680	In re Oakview	I recused based on a friendship with one of the attorneys.

96-5707	Waldorf v. Shuta	I recused based on a friendship with one of the attorneys.
96-5731	Mayles v. Lechner	I recused based on a friendship with one or more of the parties.
96-5792	In re Trombadore	no specific recollection of why I recused
96-5793	In re Trombadore	no specific recollection of why I recused
96-5835	Failla v. City of Passaic	no specific recollection of why I recused
96-5846	Seidenberg v. Mutl Life Ins Co	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
97-1204	United States v. Leiss	no specific recollection of why I recused, but possible reason is U.S. Attorney's Office involvement
97-1434	United States v. Allan	no specific recollection of why I recused, but possible reason is U.S. Attorney's Office involvement
97-1435	United States v. Allan	no specific recollection of why I recused, but possible reason is U.S. Attorney's Office involvement
97-1436	United States v. Allan	no specific recollection of why I recused, but possible reason is U.S. Attorney's Office involvement
97-1820	Greenleaf v. Garlock Inc	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
97-1821	Greenleaf v. Garlock Inc	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
97-1903	NJ Economic Dev Auth	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
97-5032	United States v. Stanley	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney
97-5033	United States v. Stanley	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney
97-5177	Feidt v. Owens Corning	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
97-5195	Waldorf v. Shuta	I recused based on a friendship with one of the attorneys.
97-5197	Waldorf v. Shuta	I recused based on a friendship with one of the attorneys.
97-5222	Waldorf v. Shuta	I recused based on a friendship with one of the attorneys.
97-5226	United States v. Cucciniello	no specific recollection of why I recused, but possible reason is U.S. Attorney's Office involvement
97-5236	Conerly v. United States	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney
97-5266	Mennen Company v. Atl Mutl Ins Co	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
97-5303	United States v. Quiles-Gonzalez	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney
97-5513	Zarintash v. United States	no specific recollection of why I recused, but possible reason is U.S. Attorney's Office involvement
97-5514	United States v. Sherman	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney
97-5557	United States v. Pelullo	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney
97-5604	Kikumura v. United States	no specific recollection of why I recused, but possible reason is U.S. Attorney's Office involvement
97-5621	In re Schlam	no specific recollection of why I recused
97-5657	Hartwell v. United States	no specific recollection of why I recused, but possible reason is U.S. Attorney's Office involvement
97-5671	Matteson v. Ryder Sys Inc	Carpenter, Bennett & Morrissey involved, on standing recusal list
97-5678	Steamship Mutual v. Bus Men's Assurance	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list

97-5685	Matteson v. Ryder Sys Inc	Carpenter, Bennett & Morrissey involved, on standing recusal list
97-5699	Yehuda v. United States	no specific recollection of why I recused, but possible reason is U.S. Attorney's Office involvement
97-5735	Chemical Leaman v. Aetna Cslty & Surety	no specific recollection of why I recused
97-5736	Chemical Leaman v. Aetna Cslty & Surety	no specific recollection of why I recused
97-5765	United States v. Zuckerman	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney
97-5779	Nwizuzu v. United States	no specific recollection of why I recused, but possible reason is U.S. Attorney's Office involvement
97-5788	United States v. Plecas	no specific recollection of why I recused, but possible reason is U.S. Attorney's Office involvement
97-5814	Muhammed v. United States	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney
97-5825	Ukpai v. United States	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney
97-8000	Cyber Promotions Inc	no specific recollection of why I recused, but possible reason is U.S. Attorney's Office involvement
97-8134	Voilas v. General Motors Corp	Carpenter, Bennett & Morrissey involved, on standing recusal list
98-1315	Frank Russell Co. v. Wellington Mgt Co	no specific recollection of why I recused
98-1491	Churchill v. Star Entr	Carpenter, Bennett & Morrissey involved, on standing recusal list
98-1632	Churchill v. Star Entr	Carpenter, Bennett & Morrissey involved, on standing recusal list
98-1700	Churchill v. Star Entr	Carpenter, Bennett & Morrissey involved, on standing recusal list
98-1810	NJ Economic Dev Auth	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
98-3266	Klein v. Gen Nutrition Inc	no specific recollection of why I recused
98-5000	United States v. Contents of Accounts	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney
98-5016	In re Pollack	no specific recollection of why I recused
98-5039	Hernandez v. United States	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney
98-5045	Port Auth NY & NJ v. Arcadian Corp	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
98-5073	GAF Corp v. Hartford Accident	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
98-5131	Manna v. United States	The plaintiff in this case was a defendant in a criminal case prosecuted by the U.S. Attorney's Office during my tenure.
98-5133	Ahamefule v. United States	no specific recollection of why I recused, but possible reason is U.S. Attorney's Office involvement
98-5148	United States v. Blackwell	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney
98-5232	United States v. Guagliardo	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney

98-5304	United States v. Britt	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney
98-5390	Nicholas v. Saul Stone & Co LLC	I probably recused because of a friendship with one of the attorneys.
98-6019	Dumarc Shipping Co v. CIT Grp	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
98-6039	McGrath v. PA Holding Ltd	Carpenter, Bennett & Morrissey involved, on standing recusal list
98-6065	Goldstein v. Johnson & Johnson	Carpenter, Bennett & Morrissey involved, on standing recusal list
98-6078	Winters v. United States	no specific recollection of why I recused, but possible reason is U.S. Attorney's Office involvement
98-6082	Markoff v. United States	no specific recollection of why I recused, but possible reason is U.S. Attorney's Office involvement
98-6085	Williams v. United States	no specific recollection of why I recused, but possible reason is U.S. Attorney's Office involvement
98-6123	United States v. Ahamefule	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney
98-6172	Goldstein v. Johnson & Johnson	Carpenter, Bennett & Morrissey involved, on standing recusal list
98-6262	United States v. Nathan	no specific recollection of why I recused, but possible reason is U.S. Attorney's Office involvement
98-6263	United States v. Lander	no specific recollection of why I recused, but possible reason is U.S. Attorney's Office involvement
98-6299	United States v. Electrodyne Sys Corp	no specific recollection of why I recused
98-6320	First Interregional	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
98-6336	Danon v. United States	no specific recollection of why I recused, but possible reason is U.S. Attorney's Office involvement
98-6342	United States v. Cucciniello	no specific recollection of why I recused, but possible reason is U.S. Attorney's Office involvement
98-6377	United States v. Smith	no specific recollection of why I recused, but possible reason is U.S. Attorney's Office involvement
98-6378	United States v. Dandrea	no specific recollection of why I recused, but possible reason is U.S. Attorney's Office involvement
98-6385	United States v. Mateos	no specific recollection of why I recused, but possible reason is U.S. Attorney's Office involvement
98-6408	Hawes v. Johnson & Johnson	Carpenter, Bennett & Morrissey involved, on standing recusal list
98-6489	Rose Art Ind Inc v. Swanson	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
98-6491	Storm v. Young	no specific recollection of why I recused, but possible reason is U.S. Attorney's Office involvement
98-7601	In re Andreas Gal	no specific recollection of why I recused
99-1122	Nickelson v. US	I was a named party to this case.
99-1540	In re Patenaude	The Clerk's Office recused me from this case based on my standing recusal list, but I am uncertain which party or attorney triggered the recusal.
99-1803	Forbes v. Eagleson	General Electric involved, on standing recusal list
99-2062	In re Asbestos Prod	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
99-3227	Koken v. Cologne Reinsurance	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list

99-5051	US v. Helbling	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney
99-5054	US v. Clark	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney
99-5218	US v. Ahamefule	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney
99-5294	US v. Sanin-Rincon	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney
99-5333	US v. Doyle	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney
99-5380	US v. Corsino	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney
99-5397, 99-5398	Guardian Life Ins. Co. v. Weisman	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
99-5403	US v. Morton	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney
99-5412	US v. Clary	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney
99-5439	US v. Boone	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney
99-5447	Velasquez v. AG	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney
99-5485, 99-5555, 00-1822	In re Cendent Corp.	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
99-5569	US v. Swint	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney
99-5660	Sys Documentation v. Digital Equip. Corp.	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
99-5806	Liberty Insulation v. Metrix	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
99-5839	Impounded	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney
99-5851	Kiareldeen v. AG	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney
99-5885	US v. Biberfeld	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney
99-5924	US v. Kern	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney
99-5931	Carpet Grp Intl Corp v. Oriental Rug	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
99-6015	Becton Dickinson v. Wolckenhauer	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney
99-6023	Seidman v. Summit Bancorp	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
99-6081	Abel v. Stark & Stark	The Clerk's Office recused me from this case automatically, but I am uncertain which party or attorney triggered the recusal.
99-6085	Sheiner v. Stark & Stark	The Clerk's Office recused me from this case automatically, but I am uncertain which party or attorney triggered the recusal.

99-6087	Chen v. Stark & Stark	The Clerk's Office recused me from this case automatically, but I am uncertain which party or attorney triggered the recusal.
99-6088	Russo v. Stark & Stark	The Clerk's Office recused me from this case automatically, but I am uncertain which party or attorney triggered the recusal.
00-1000	In re Guglielmo	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
00-1009	In re Mary Collins	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
00-1344	Starita v. NYLCare Health Plans	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
00-1428	Chong v. Dist Dir INS NJ	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney
00-1656	Manley v. Stark & Stark	The Clerk's Office recused me from this case automatically, but I am uncertain which party or attorney triggered the recusal.
00-1778	Kepner-Tregoe v. General Electric,	General Electric involved, on standing recusal list
00-1820, 00-1836, 00-4357, 01-4100, 01-4208	SEC v. Antar	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney
00-1835	NJ Coalition Auto v. Daimler Chrysler	no specific recollection of why I recused, but it is possible that recusal was based on a friendship with one of the attorneys
00-1954	In re Cendant Corp	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
00-2128, 00-2261	In re Asbestos Prod	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
00-2129	Bernhardt v. Westinghouse elec	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
00-2185	In re Cendant Corp	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
00-2322	US v. Winters	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney
00-2772, 00-2932	GEAC v. Computer Sys v. Grace Consul Inc	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
00-3111	Abdulai v. AG	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
00-3615	Strange v. Keiper Recaro	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
00-3627	Net2phone Inc v. Sinclair	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
00-3695	United Phosphorous v. Micro Flo LLC	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
00-3724, 03-4674	Miller Turner v. PNC Bank	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
00-3741	Claude Bamberger v. Rohm and Haas Co.	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
00-4178	US v. Purzycki	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney
00-5000	In re Daniel Tilli	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney
00-5053	Gunter v. Ridgewood Energy	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
00-5174	In re Bamberger	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
00-5200	Coast Auto Grp Ltd v. VW Credit Inc.	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list

00-5209	US v. Torres	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney
00-5259	Hart v. Hart	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
00-5263	Baldassare v. County of Bergen	no specific recollection of why I recused, but it is possible that recusal was based on a friendship with one of the attorneys
00-5283	Ali v. US	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney
01-1062	In re Brennan	Seton Hall involved, on standing recusal list
01-1489	Cunningham v. Becker	The Clerk's Office recused me from this case automatically, probably because the Judicial Council of Third Circuit was a party and I served on the Council.
01-1628	Parangi v. Metro Life Ins. Co.	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
01-1798	Foster v. Crawford Co.	Rosemary Alito involved, on standing recusal list
01-1827	Monga v. Ottenberg	recused as described in part B.(15), above
01-1926	Gaudelli v. Eisner	I was listed as a party in this case.
01-2047	DeVito v. Bd Ed Cty Newark	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
01-2078	Limited Inc. V. Cigna Ins Co	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
01-2207	United States v. Mitwally	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney
01-2321	Pappas v. DePuy Orthopaedics	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
01-2330	Knecht v. Shannon	Kirkpatrick & Lockhart involved, on standing recusal list
01-2468	United States v. Bendolph	Kirkpatrick & Lockhart involved, on standing recusal list
01-2524	Fed Deposit Ins Corp.v. Natl Union Fire Ins	no specific recollection of why I recused
01-2803	United States v. Rohm & Haas Co	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
01-2815, 01-2885	In re Okner Pkwy	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
01-3148	United States v. Brennan	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney
01-3276	Montefusco v. ESPN Inc	Disney involved, on standing recusal list
01-3330	P&M Products Ltd v. Rose Art Ind Inc	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
01-3463	In re Metro Life Ins	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
01-3486	Binney & Smith Inc v. Rose Art Ind Inc	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
01-3656	In re Cendant Corp	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
01-3686	In re Ernst Young	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
01-4019	Total Containment v. Dayco Prod Inc	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
01-4226, 01-4492, 02-1789, 02-3236	Bowers v. Natl Collegiate	Carpenter, Bennett & Morrissey involved, on standing recusal list
01-4348	Lum v. Bank Amer	First Union involved, on standing recusal list
01-8025	In re NE Tech Ser	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
02-1103, 02-1124, 02-1276	Major League Umpires v. Am. League	Disney involved, on standing recusal list

02-1244	In re Wash Depot	The Clerk's Office recused me from this case automatically, probably because the Judicial Council of Third Circuit was a party and I served on the Council.
02-1426	In re Fed Mogul	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
02-1799	M.A. v. Newark Pub Sch	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
02-1902	Gregg v. Natl League Prof	Disney involved, on standing recusal list
02-2057, 03-2346	Caldwell Trkng PRP v. Rexon Tech Corp	I recused because of a friendship with one of the attorneys.
02-2147	Murphy v. Lenox Co	Rosemary Alito involved, on standing recusal list
02-2240	Roberts v. Univ PA	no specific recollection of why I recused
50-0100	Brophy v. Bradley	On April 8, 2003, the Clerk's Office automatically recused me and 15 other judges from this case.
02-2269	United States v. Shaw	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney
02-2497	Video Pipeline Inc v. Buena Vista Home	Disney involved, on standing recusal list
02-2524	North Jersey Media v. AG	NBC involved, on standing recusal list
02-2624	United States v. Otero	Kirkpatrick & Lockhart involved, on standing recusal list
02-2655	Pharmacia Corp v. Alcon Laboratories	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
02-2668	Kosiba v. Merck & Co Inc	Disney involved, on standing recusal list
02-2710, 02-2808, 02-2957	United States v. Pelullo	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney
02-2932	In re Color Tile	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
02-3178, 02-3953	In re ANC Rental	Disney involved, on standing recusal list
02-3285	Bowen v. United States	Kirkpatrick & Lockhart involved, on standing recusal list
02-3389	Zucker v. Westinghouse Elec	no specific recollection of why I recused
02-3391	In re Video Update	General Electric involved, on standing recusal list
02-3555	Barak v. Obioha	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
02-3603, 02-3755, 02-3757, 02-3758	In re Warfarin	Bristol Myers Squibb involved, on standing recusal list
02-3724	In re Metro Life Ins	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
02-3737	Delande v. ING Empl Benefits	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
02-3779	Westport Ins Corp v. Mirsky	General Electric involved, on standing recusal list
02-3892	Thompson v. Gen Elec Co	General Electric involved, on standing recusal list
02-4037	In re Metro Life Ins	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
02-4046	Gucci America v. Daffys	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
02-4122	Verma v. Polaris Software Lab	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
02-4204, 02-4298	JC Penney Life Ins v. Pilosi	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
02-4252	Gouge v. Metro Life Ins Co	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
02-4266	France v. Syngenta	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
02-4270	In re Metro Life Ins	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
02-4297	Wallin v. Metro Life Ins	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
02-4386	In re Cendant Corp	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list

02-4392	NY Giants Football v. Commissioner IRS	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
02-4478, 02-8060	Weisfeld v. Sun Chem Corp	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
03-1081	Arjomand v. Metro Life Ins Co	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
03-1398	Lacava v. Kyler	Kirkpatrick & Lockhart involved, on standing recusal list
03-1436	Mohney v. Forney	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
03-1453	Copher v. Metro Life Ins Co	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
03-1469, 03-1498	Lickman v. Henkel	General Electric involved, on standing recusal list
03-1490	In re Carpet Grp	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
03-1524	Wallin v. Severance Plan Elec	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
03-1669	In re Candant	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
03-1863	Haynes v. Metro Life Ins Co	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
03-2116, 03-2143, 03-2410	Livornese v. Med Protective Co	General Electric involved, on standing recusal list
03-2139	GTE Corp v. Allendale Mutl Ins	General Electric involved, on standing recusal list
03-2288	In re Am. Appliance	General Electric involved, on standing recusal list
03-2364	Holden v. Mechling	Kirkpatrick & Lockhart involved, on standing recusal list
03-2572	SC Johnson & Son Inc v. DowBrands Inc	no specific recollection of why I recused
03-2793	Grispino v. New England Mutl	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
03-2801, 03-3282	Marshall v. Lauriault	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
03-2898	Long v. Wilson	Kirkpatrick & Lockhart involved, on standing recusal list
03-3018	Marran v. Marran	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
03-3101	In re Tower Air Inc	General Electric involved, on standing recusal list
03-3225	United Steelworkers v. Flowserve Corp	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
03-3388	Prometheus Radio v. FCC	NBC involved, on standing recusal list
03-3496	Morrison v. Giuliani	Solomon Smith & Barney involved, on standing recusal list
03-3577	Media General Inc v. FCC	NBC involved, on standing recusal list
03-3578	Natl Assn v. FCC	NBC involved, on standing recusal list
03-3579	Network Affiliated v. FCC	NBC involved, on standing recusal list
03-3580	Fox Entertainment v. FCC	NBC involved, on standing recusal list
03-3581	Viacom Inc v. FCC	NBC involved, on standing recusal list
03-3582	NBC Inc v. FCC	NBC involved, on standing recusal list
03-3651	Sinclair Broadcast v. FCC	NBC involved, on standing recusal list
03-3665	Media Alliance v. FCC	NBC involved, on standing recusal list
03-3675, 03-3950	Paxson Comm Corp v. FCC	NBC involved, on standing recusal list
03-3693	Strickland v. GE Co	General Electric involved, on standing recusal list
03-3695	Schmidt v. Zimmer Inc	Zimmer Holdings involved, on standing recusal list
03-3708	National Council v. FCC	NBC involved, on standing recusal list
03-3755	CA Pub Empl Ret Sys v. Chubb Corp	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list

03-3758, 03-4524	Ford v. Mercer Cty Corr Ctr	Kirkpatrick & Lockhart involved, on standing recusal list
03-3768	In re Morrison	Solomon Smith & Barney involved, on standing recusal list
03-3894	Tribune Co v. FCC	NBC involved, on standing recusal list
03-3909, 03-4368, 03-4369, 03-4370, 04-1749, 04-1880	In re Montgomery	General Electric involved, on standing recusal list
03-3951	Emmis Comm Corp v. FCC	NBC involved, on standing recusal list
03-3979	United States v. Morelli	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney
03-4072	Ctr Digital v. FCC	NBC involved, on standing recusal list
03-4073	Clear Channel Comm v. FCC	NBC involved, on standing recusal list
03-4212	In re Kensington	no specific recollection of why I recused
03-4311	SBC Comm Inc v. FCC	SBC involved, on standing recusal list
03-4371	DiPasquale v. Stein	General Electric involved, on standing recusal list
03-4396	In re Montouri	no specific recollection of why I recused
03-4407	LLB Realty v. Core Lab	Citigroup involved, on standing recusal list
03-4433	Forum Academic v. Secretary Defense	no specific recollection of why I recused
03-4526	In re DK Acquisition	I recused because of a friendship with one of the parties.
03-4557	NJ Dept Env Prot v. Am. Thermoplastics	no specific recollection of why I recused
03-4751	Emory v. Astrazeneca Pharm	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
03-4762	Rowinski v. Salomon Smith Barney	Solomon Smith & Barney involved, on standing recusal list
03-4855	Windward Agcy Inc v. Cologne Life	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
04-1202	Ronson Corp v. Steel Partners II	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
04-1264	West v. IDT Corp	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
04-1277, 04-1300	USX Corp v. Liberty Mutl Ins Co	no specific recollection of why I recused
04-1408	Estate Salek E Beim v. Hirsch	JP Morgan Chase involved, on standing recusal list
04-1418	Tucker v. Bristol Myers Squibb	Bristol Myers Squibb involved, on standing recusal list
04-1474	Avenir Inc v. Hartford Ins Midwest	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
04-1642	Lexington Ins Co v. W PA Hosp	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
04-1711, 04-1712, 04-1734, 04-1748	Anderson v. Airco Inc	Fidelity involved, on standing recusal list
04-1790, 04-2896	Cantor v. Perelman	Disney involved, on standing recusal list
04-1817	Dimensional Comm Inc v. OZ Optics Ltd	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
04-1851, 04-1960, 04-2049	In re Mid-Valley	Kirkpatrick & Lockhart involved, on standing recusal list

04-1853	Galanti v. Goodyear Tire	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
04-2072	Rivera v. Comm PA	Kirkpatrick & Lockhart involved, on standing recusal list
04-2096	EI DuPont de Nemours v. United States	Kirkpatrick & Lockhart involved, on standing recusal list
04-2112	In re Hechinger Inv	General Electric involved, on standing recusal list
04-2237, 04-2558	Fidelity Natl Info v. Sinclair	Fidelity involved, on standing recusal list
04-2247	Panichelli v. General Elec Co	General Electric involved, on standing recusal list
04-2390	Files v. Exxonmobil Pension	Exxon involved, on standing recusal list
04-2420	Ocel v. Metro Life Ins Co	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
04-2480	Dilworth v. Metro Life Ins Co	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
04-2486	Samson v. Superior Asset	Kirkpatrick & Lockhart involved, on standing recusal list
04-2539	Tran v. Metro Life Ins Co	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
04-2581	In re GI Holdings	The Clerk's Office recused me from this case automatically, but I am uncertain which party or attorney triggered the recusal.
04-2628	Cole v. Exxon Mobil Corp	Exxon involved, on standing recusal list
04-2642	McKenna v. Metro Life Ins Co	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
04-2696	Digital Signal Inc v. Voicestream Wireless	Fidelity involved, on standing recusal list
04-2719	Scanlin v. Brown & Co	JP Morgan Chase involved, on standing recusal list
04-2762	Snik v. Verizon Wireless	Vodafone involved, on standing recusal list
04-2829	Sabo v. Metro Life Ins Co	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
04-2896	Cantor v. Perelman	Disney involved, on standing recusal list
04-3143	Solarchick v. Metro Life Ins Co	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
04-3149	In re Strategic Tech	no specific recollection of why I recused
04-3153	Chen v. Rochford	Citicorp involved, on standing recusal list
04-3277	In re Oakwood Homes	JP Morgan Chase involved, on standing recusal list
04-3286	Parker v. Kelchner	Kirkpatrick & Lockhart involved, on standing recusal list
04-3352	In re Cendant Corp	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
04-3408	Cetel v. Kirwan Fin Grp Inc	General Electric involved, on standing recusal list
04-3503	Lusitania Sav Bank v. Progressive Cslty	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
04-3609, 04-3636	In re Congoleum Corp	Exxon involved, on standing recusal list
04-3633	In re Tower Air Inc	General Electric involved, on standing recusal list
04-3716, 04-3755	In re Suprema	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
04-3733, 04-3818	Hooven v. Exxon Mobil Corp	Exxon involved, on standing recusal list
04-3839, 04-3840	27th & Girard Ltd v. McDonalds Corp	McDonalds Corp involved, on standing recusal list
04-3869	L 3 Comm Corp v. Clevenger	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
04-3874	Freedom Card Inc v. JP Morgan Chase & Co	JP Morgan Chase involved, on standing recusal list
04-3876	Chase Manhattan Bank v. Freedom Card Inc	JP Morgan Chase involved, on standing recusal list

04-3882	Empl Ins Wausau v. P H Glatfelter Co	Kirkpatrick & Lockhart involved, on standing recusal list
04-3932	In re Sakhrani	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
04-3936	Morton Intl Inc v. AE Staley Mfg Co	Exxon and General Electric involved, on standing recusal list
04-4080	In re Owens Corning	JP Morgan Chase involved, on standing recusal list
04-4098	Wyckoff v. Metro Life Ins Co	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
04-4099	Gajarawala v. Metro Life Ins Co	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
04-4126	Johnson v. Metro Life Ins Co	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
04-4127	Blount v. Pleasant Ridge Manor	General Electric involved, on standing recusal list
04-4180	Carpet Grp Intl v. Oriental Rug	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
04-4188	Gonda v. Metro Life Ins Co	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
04-4282	Manna v. United States	U.S. Attorney's Office involved, case dated back to my tenure as U.S. Attorney
04-4285	Chase Manhattan Bank v. Freedom Card Inc	JP Morgan Chase involved, on standing recusal list
04-4303	PA Pub Util Comm v. FCC	SBC involved, on standing recusal list
04-4304, 04-4433, 04-8040	Wachtel v. Guardian Life Ins Co	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
04-4334	Peloro v. FBI	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
04-4347	In re Net2000 Comm	General Electric involved, on standing recusal list
04-4351	In re Color Tile	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
04-4355	Cap Funding VI LP v. Chase Manhattan USA	JP Morgan Chase involved, on standing recusal list
04-4387	In re Nutraquest	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
04-4434	McCoy v. Health Net	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
04-4482	In re Coram	Disney and General Electric involved, on standing recusal list
04-4483	In re Official Comm	Disney and General Electric involved, on standing recusal list
04-4596	In re Orpah Barbel	JP Morgan Chase involved, on standing recusal list
04-4598	Kuhnle v. Prudential	Kirkpatrick & Lockhart involved, on standing recusal list
04-4708	Earthlink v. FCC	SBC involved, on standing recusal list
04-4725	MCI Inc v. FCC	SBC involved, on standing recusal list
04-8032	Chase Manhattan Bank v. Iridium Africa Corp	JP Morgan Chase involved, on standing recusal list
05-1193	Perlberger v. Wachovia Bank NA	no specific recollection of why I recused, but possibly because of First Union, which is on standing recusal list
05-1329, 05-1503, 05-1504	Cetel v. Kirwan Fin Grp Inc	General Electric involved, on standing recusal list
05-1379, 05-1380, 05-1381, 05-1382	In re American Pad	Kirkpatrick & Lockhart involved, on standing recusal list
05-1584	Vanguard v. Goade	Vanguard involved, on standing recusal list
05-1610	Hooven v. Exxon Mobil Corp	Exxon involved, on standing recusal list
05-1653	Telecordia Tech Inc v. Telkom SA Ltd	SBC involved, on standing recusal list

05-1736	In re Shemonsky	I recused because this case involved a suit against the Judicial Council of Third Circuit.
05-1786, 05-1787, 05-1788	PA Fedr Brhd v. Norfolk S Corp	Vanguard involved, on standing recusal list
05-1822	Gallenthin Realty v. BP Prod NA Inc	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
05-1881	In re Armstrong	JP Morgan Chase and First Union involved, on standing recusal list
05-1901	Natl Fuel Gas Co v. Equimeter Inc	Kirkpatrick & Lockhart involved, on standing recusal list
05-2033, 05-2034	In re Oakwood Homes	JP Morgan Chase involved, on standing recusal list
05-2130	Admin NJ Spill Comp v. Exxon Mobil Corp	Exxon involved, on standing recusal list
05-2134	Lansing v. Metro Life Ins Co	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
05-2165	Imperial Land Corp v. Lucchino	Kirkpatrick & Lockhart involved, on standing recusal list
05-2341	Gen Elec Cap Corp v. Stone	General Electric involved, on standing recusal list
05-2403	Elliott & Frantz Inc v. Ingersoll Rand	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
05-2489	In re Midwest	Kirkpatrick & Lockhart involved, on standing recusal list
05-2587	Capers v. Smith Barney	Smith Barney involved, on standing recusal list
05-3243, 05-3328	Kintner v. Metro Life Ins Co	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
05-3433	Sampathachar v. Fed Kemper Life	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
05-3495	In re Fed Mogul	Citicorp involved, on standing recusal list
05-3709	Salkovitz v. Pioneer Elec USA Inc	McCarter & English involved, on standing recusal list
05-4034	Sommer v. Vanguard Grp	Vanguard involved, on standing recusal list
05-4602	Gagliardi v. Kratzenberg	General Electric involved, on standing recusal list
05-8002, 05-8004, 05-8005	PA Fedr Brhd v. Norfolk S Corp	Vanguard involved, on standing recusal list

NOMINATION OF SAMUEL A. ALITO, JR., OF
NEW JERSEY, TO BE AN ASSOCIATE JUSTICE
OF THE SUPREME COURT OF THE
UNITED STATES

TUESDAY, JANUARY 10, 2006

U.S. SENATE,
COMMITTEE ON THE JUDICIARY,
Washington, DC.

The Committee met, pursuant to notice, at 9:30 a.m., in room 216, Hart Senate Office Building, Hon. Arlen Specter, Chairman of the Committee, presiding.

Present: Senators Specter, Hatch, Grassley, Kyl, DeWine, Sessions, Graham, Cornyn, Brownback, Coburn, Leahy, Kennedy, Biden, Kohl, Feinstein, Feingold, Schumer, and Durbin.

Chairman SPECTER. The Judiciary Committee will now proceed with the confirmation hearing of Judge Alito for the Supreme Court.

Before beginning the first round of questioning, just a little review as to our procedure. As announced, there will be a 30-minute allocation for each Senator. We intend to work rather late this afternoon, perhaps even into the early evening. I do not know that it is possible to complete the first round of questioning today. That would be a good objective. We will see how it goes.

Judge Alito, you are free to let us know whenever you want to break. We will take a couple of breaks at the midpoint of the morning and the afternoon, but there are 18 of us and only one of you, so when you would like a break, your schedule takes precedence over ours.

Before beginning the opening round, let me yield to my colleague, Senator Leahy, to see if he has some additional comments.

Senator LEAHY. I thank you, Mr. Chairman. I also appreciate the fact we have kept to the clock. I think it has been helpful, and I would hope that Judge Alito would bear with us on that. We will have a lot of questions. I think to take the time to get to them all—you have always been accommodating about that—I think that that requires cooperation on both sides of the dais.

We do have the advantage, Mr. Chairman, that we did not have with Judge Roberts's hearings, that we are not in session and we are not going to be interrupted by votes, and we have the time to do it. I would hope that we do not go into a marathon for both his sake and us older guys' sake. But I do appreciate that you have run this with fairness and even-handedness, and I appreciate that.

Chairman SPECTER. Since there are no older guys involved or gals, we can consider the marathon, but we will keep it within bounds. You can start the clock. I will maintain the clock meticulously, as we have maintained timing as our Judiciary Committee practice.

Judge Alito, you will be faced with many, many questions on many topics. I am going to start today with a woman's right to choose, move to Executive power, and then hopefully within the 30 minutes pick up congressional power.

Starting with a woman's right to choose, Judge Alito, do you accept the legal principles articulated in Griswold v. Connecticut, that the Liberty Clause and the Constitution carries with it the right to privacy?

Judge ALITO. Senator, I do agree that the Constitution protects a right to privacy, and it protects the right to privacy in a number of ways. The Fourth Amendment certainly speaks to the right of privacy. People have a right to privacy in their homes and in their papers, and in their persons. And the standard for whether something is a search is whether there's an invasion of a right to privacy, a legitimate expectation of privacy.

Chairman SPECTER. Well, Griswold dealt with the right to privacy on contraception for married women. Do you agree with that?

Judge ALITO. I agree that Griswold is now I think understood by the Supreme Court as based on the Liberty Clauses of the Due Process Clause of the Fifth Amendment and the 14th Amendment.

Chairman SPECTER. Do you agree also with Eisenstadt which carried forward Griswold to single people?

Judge ALITO. I do agree with the result in Eisenstadt.

Chairman SPECTER. Let me move now directly into Casey v. Planned Parenthood, and picking up the gravamen of Casey as it has applied, Roe on the woman's right to choose, originating from the Privacy Clause with Griswold being its antecedent, and I want to take you through some of the specific language of Casey to see what your views are, and what weight you would ascribe to this rationale as you would view the woman's right to choose. In Casey the joint opinion said, "People have ordered their thinking and lives around Roe. To eliminate the issue of reliance would be detrimental. For two decades of economic and social development people have organized intimate relationships and reliance on the availability of abortion in the event contraception should fail." Pretty earthy language, but that is the Supreme Court's language. The Court went on to say, "The ability of women to participate equally in the economic and social life of the Nation has become facilitated by their ability to control their reproductive lives."

Now that states in specific terms the principle of reliance, which is one of the mainstays, if not the mainstay, on stare decisis precedent to follow tradition. How would you weigh that consideration on the woman's right to choose?

Judge ALITO. Well, I think the doctrine of stare decisis is a very important doctrine. It's a fundamental part of our legal system, and it's the principle that courts in general should follow their past precedents, and it's important for a variety of reasons. It's important because it limits the power of the judiciary. It's important because it protects reliance interest, and it's important because it reflect the view that courts should respect the judgments and the wisdom that are embodied in prior judicial decisions. It's not an inexorable command, but it is a general presumption that courts are going to follow prior precedents, and as you mentioned—

Chairman SPECTER. How do you come to grips with the specifics where the Court, in the joint opinion, spoke of reliance on the availability of abortion in the event contraception should fail, on that specific concept of reliance?

Judge ALITO. Well, reliance is, as you mentioned, Mr. Chairman, one of the important foundations of the doctrine of stare decisis. It is intended to protect reliance interests, and people can rely on judicial decisions in a variety of ways. There can be concrete economic reliance. Government institutions can be built up in reliance on prior decisions. Practices of agencies and Government officials can be molded based on reliance. People can rely on decisions in a variety of ways. In my view—

Chairman SPECTER. Let me move on to another important quotation out of Casey. Quote: “A terrible price would be paid for overruling Casey, for overruling Roe. It would seriously weaken the Court's capacity to exercise the judicial power and to function as the Supreme Court of a Nation dedicated to the rule of law, and to overrule Roe under fire would subvert the Court's legitimacy.”

Do you see the legitimacy of the Court being involved in the precedent of Casey?

Judge ALITO. Well, I think that the Court, and all the courts, the Supreme Court, my court, all the Federal courts, should be insulated from public opinion. They should do what the law requires in all instances. That's why they're not—that's why the members of the judiciary are not elected. We have a basically democratic form of Government, but the judiciary is not elected, and that's the reason, so that they don't do anything under fire. They do what the law requires.

Chairman SPECTER. But do you think there is as fundamental a concern as legitimacy of the Court would be involved if Roe were to be overturned?

Judge ALITO. Mr. Chairman, I think that the legitimacy of the Court would be undermined in any case if the Court made a decision based on its perception of public opinion. It should make its decisions based on the Constitution and the law. It should not be—it should not sway in the wind of public opinion at any time.

Chairman SPECTER. Let me move to just the final quotation that I intend to raise from Casey, and it is, “After nearly 20 years of litigation in Roe's wake, we are satisfied that the immediate question is not the soundness of Roe's resolution of the issue, but the precedential force that must be accorded to its holding.” That separates out the original soundness of Roe, which has been criticized, and then lays emphasis on the precedential value. How would you weigh that consideration were this issue to come before you if confirmed?

Judge ALITO. Well, I agree that in every case in which there is a prior precedent, the first issue is the issue of stare decisis, and the presumption is that the Court will follow its prior precedents. There needs to be a special justification for overruling a prior precedent.

Chairman SPECTER. Let me turn to an analogous situation, and that is Chief Justice Rehnquist's change of heart on the Miranda ruling. In 1974 in the case of Michigan v. Tucker, he was then Justice Rehnquist, wrote an opinion severely limiting Miranda, in effect stating he did not like it. Then in the year 2000 in the case of United States v. Dickerson, Chief Justice Rehnquist wrote an opinion of holding Miranda, and he did that because, "Miranda was embedded in the routine police practices to a point where the warnings have become a part of our National culture."

Now, there has been an analogy made from what Chief Justice Rehnquist said on the Miranda issue to the Roe issue. How would you evaluate the consideration of Roe being embedded in the culture of our society?

Judge ALITO. Well, I think that Chief Justice Rehnquist there was getting at a very important point, and—

Chairman SPECTER. Think he was right?

Judge ALITO. I think he was getting at—he was right in saying that reliance can take many forms. It can take a very specific and concrete form, and there can be reliance in the sense that he was talking about there, and I think what he's talking about there is that a great many people, and in that instance, police departments around the country, over a long period of time, had adapted to the Miranda rule, had internalized it. I think that all the branches of Government had become familiar with it and comfortable with it, and had come to regard it as a good way—after a considerable breaking in period—a good way of dealing with a difficult problem, and the problem was how to deal with interrogations leading to confessions, in terms of—

Chairman SPECTER. Judge Alito, let me move to the dissenting opinion by Justice Harlan in Poe v. Ullman, where he discusses the constitutional concept of liberty and says, "The traditions from which liberty developed, that tradition is a living thing." Would you agree with Justice Harlan that the Constitution embodies the concept of a living thing?

Judge ALITO. I think the Constitution is a living thing in the sense that matters, and that is that it is—it sets up a framework of Government and a protection of fundamental rights that we have lived under very successfully for 200 years, and the genius of it is that it is not terribly specific on certain things. It sets out some things are very specific, but it sets out some general principles, and then leaves it for each generation to apply those to the particular factual situations that come up.

Chairman SPECTER. Would you agree with Cardozo on Palco that it represents the values of a changing society?

Judge ALITO. The liberty component of the Fifth Amendment and the 14th Amendment, which I was talking about earlier, embody the deeply rooted traditions of the country, and it's up to each—those traditions and those rights apply to new factual situations that come up. As times change, new factual situations come up, and the principles have to be applied to those situations. The principles don't change. The Constitution itself doesn't change, but the factual situations change, and as new situations come up, the principles and the rights have to be applied to them.

Chairman SPECTER. Judge Alito, the commentators have characterized Casey as a super precedent. Judge Luttig, in the case of Richmond Medical Center, called the Casey decision super stare decisis. In quoting from Casey, Judge Luttig pointed out, the essential holding of Roe v. Wade should be retained and once again reaffirmed. Then in support of Judge Luttig's conclusion that Casey was super stare decisis, he refers to Stenberg v. Carhart, and quotes the Supreme Court, saying, "We shall not revisit these legal principles." That is a pretty strong statement for the Court to make, that we shall not revisit the principles upon which Roe was founded, and the concept of super stare decisis or super precedent arises as the commentators have characterized it, by a number of different Justices appointed by a number of different judges over a considerable period of time. Do you agree that Casey is a super precedent or a super stare decisis as Judge Luttig said?

Judge ALITO. Well, I personally would not get into categorizing precedents as super precedents or super duper precedents, or any—

Chairman SPECTER. Did you say "super duper?"

[Laughter.]

Judge ALITO. Right.

Chairman SPECTER. Good.

Judge ALITO. Any sort of categorization like that—

Chairman SPECTER. I like that.

[Laughter.]

Judge ALITO [continuing]. Sort of reminds me of the size of laundry detergent in the supermarket.

[Laughter.]

Judge ALITO. I agree with the underlying thought that when a precedent is reaffirmed, that strengthens the precedent, and when the Supreme Court says that we are not—

Chairman SPECTER. How about being reaffirmed 38 times?

Judge ALITO. Well, I think that when a precedent is reaffirmed, each time it's reaffirmed that is a factor that should be taken into account in making the judgment about stare decisis, and when a precedent is reaffirmed on the ground that stare decisis precludes or counsels against reexamination of the merits of the precedent, then I agree that that is a precedent on precedent.

Now, I don't want to leave the impression that stare decisis is an inexorable command because the Supreme Court has said that it is not, but it is a judgment that has to be based, taking into account all of the factors that are relevant and that are set out in the Supreme Court's cases.

Chairman SPECTER. Judge Alito, during the confirmation hearing of Chief Justice Roberts, I displayed a chart. I do not ordinarily like charts, but this one I think has a lot of weight because it lists all 38 cases which have been decided since Roe, where the Supreme Court of the United States had the opportunity to—Senator Hatch is in the picture now.

[Laughter.]

Chairman SPECTER. It is a good photo op for Senator Hatch. Senator Leahy is complaining.

[Laughter.]

Senator LEAHY. Just balance it on Orrin's head.

Senator HATCH. Put that over by Leahy.

Chairman SPECTER. He wants it on his side.

[Laughter.]

Chairman SPECTER. I think the point of it is that there have been so many cases, so many cases, 15 after your statement in 1985 that I am about to come to, and eight after Casey v. Planned Parenthood, which is why it has special significance, and I am not going to press the point about super precedent. I am glad I did not have to mention super duper, that you did. Thank you very much.

Let me come now to the statement you made in 1985, that the Constitution does not provide a basis for a woman's right to an abortion. Do you agree with that statement today, Judge Alito?

Judge ALITO. Well, that was a correct statement of what I thought in 1985 from my vantage point in 1985, and that was as a line attorney in the Department of Justice in the Reagan administration.

Today if the issue were to come before me, if I am fortunate enough to be confirmed and the issue were to come before me, the first question would be the question that we've been discussing, and that's the issue of stare decisis. And if the analysis were to get beyond that point, then I would approach the question with an open mind, and I would listen to the arguments that were made.

Chairman SPECTER. So you would approach it with an open mind notwithstanding your 1985 statement?

Judge ALITO. Absolutely, Senator. That was a statement that I made at a prior period of time when I was performing a different role, and as I said yesterday, when someone becomes a judge, you really have to put aside the things that you did as a lawyer at prior points in your legal career and think about legal issues the way a judge thinks about legal issues.

Chairman SPECTER. Judge Alito, coming to the role you had in the Solicitor General's Office, where you wrote the memorandum in the Thornburgh case, urging restriction and ultimate appeal of Roe, that was in your capacity as an advocate. And I have seen your other statements that the role of an advocate is different from the role of a judge. But when you made the statement that the Constitution did not provide for the right to an abortion, that was in a statement you made where you were looking to get a job, a promotion within the Federal Government. So there is a little difference between the 1985 statement and your advocacy role in the Thornburgh memorandum, is there not?

Judge ALITO. Well, there is, Senator, and what I said was that that was a true expression of my views at the time, the statement in the 1985 appointment form that I filled out. It was a statement that I made at a time when I was a line attorney in the Department of Justice. I'm not saying that I made the statement simply because I was advocating the administration's position, but that was the position that I held at the time, and that was the position of the administration.

Chairman SPECTER. Would you state your views, the difference as you see it between what you did as an advocate in the Solicitor General's Office to what your responsibilities would be, are on the Third Circuit, or what they would be on the Court if confirmed as a judicial capacity?

Judge ALITO. Well, an advocate has the goal of achieving the result that the client wants within the bounds of professional responsibility. That's what an advocate is supposed to do, and that's what I attempted to do during my years as an advocate for the Federal Government. Now, a judge doesn't have a client, as I said yesterday, and a judge doesn't have an agenda, and a judge has to follow the law. An important part of the law in this area, as we look at it in 2006, is the law of stare decisis.

Chairman SPECTER. Judge Alito, you have written some 361 opinions that I would like to have the time to discuss quite a few of them with you, but I am only going to pick up one in the first round, and that is an opinion you wrote in the Elizabeth Blackwell Health Center for Women v. Knoll, and that was a case where there was a challenge between a Pennsylvania statute, which required as a prerequisite to a woman getting Medicaid, that she would have had to have reported a rape or an incest to the police, and second, a requirement that there be a second opinion from a doctor that she needed an abortion to save her life. And that statutory requirement, those two provisions conflicted with a regulation by the Department of Health and Human Services. You were on the Third Circuit, which held that the Pennsylvania statute should be stricken in deference to the rule of the Health and Human Services Department. And Judge Nygaard entered a very forceful dissent saying that this was an interpretive rule and it was inappropriate to have that kind of an interpretive rule by the Department counter-vail a statute.

What was your thinking in that case? Had you been predisposed to take a tough line on a woman's right to choose or on Medicaid support for someone who had been raped, you would have upheld the statute. What was your thinking in that case?

Judge ALITO. Well, what you said is correct, Senator. I cast the deciding vote there to strike down the Pennsylvania statute, and I did it because that's what I thought the law required. I thought the law required that we defer to the interpretation of the Federal statute that had been made by the Department of Health and Human Services. If I had had an agenda to strike down any—I'm sorry, to uphold any regulation of abortion that came up in any case that was presented to me, then I would have voted with Judge Nygaard in that case, and that would have turned the decision the other way.

I've sat on three abortion cases on the Third Circuit. In one of them—that was the Casey case—I voted to uphold regulations of abortion, and in the other two—the Elizabeth Blackwell case and Planned Parenthood v. Farmer—I voted to strike them down. And in each instance, I did it because that's what I thought the law required.

Chairman SPECTER. Judge Alito, I want to turn now to Executive power and to ask you first if you agree with the quotation from Justice Jackson's concurrence in the Youngstown Steel seizure case about the evaluation of Presidential power that I cited yesterday.

Judge ALITO. I do. I think it provides a very useful framework, and it has been used by the Supreme Court in a number of important subsequent cases, in the Dames and Moore, for example, involving the release of the hostages from Iran. And it doesn't answer every question that comes up in this area, but it provides a very useful way of looking at them.

Chairman SPECTER. Do you agree with Justice O'Connor's statement quoted frequently yesterday from Hamdi that, "We have long since made clear that a state of war is not a blank check for the President when it comes to the rights of the Nation's citizens," when she was citing the Youngstown case? Do you agree with that?

Judge ALITO. Absolutely. That's a very important principle. Our Constitution applies in times of peace and in times of war, and it protects the rights of Americans under all circumstances.

Chairman SPECTER. You made a speech at Pepperdine where you said, in commenting about the decision of the Supreme Court in Ex Parte Milligan, that "The Constitution applies even in an extreme emergency." The Government made a "broad and unwise argument" that the Bill of Rights simply doesn't apply during wartime.

Do you stand by that statement?

Judge ALITO. I certainly do, Senator. The Bill of Rights applies at all times, and it's particularly important that we adhere to the Bill of Rights in times of war and in times of national crisis, because that's when there's the greatest temptation to depart from them.

Chairman SPECTER. Steering clear, Judge Alito, of asking you how you would decide a specific case, I think it is very important to find out your jurisprudential approach in interpreting whether the September 14, 2001, congressional resolution authorizing the use of force constituted congressional authorization for the National Security Agency to engage in electronic surveillance where one party to the conversation was in the United States. Let me take just a moment to lay out the factual and legal considerations.

The Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act of 1978 provides it "shall be the exclusive means by which electronic surveillance shall be conducted and the interpretation of domestic wire, oral, and electronic communications may be conducted." The Government contends that the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act clause, "except as authorized by statute, opens the door to interpreting that resolution to authorize the surveillance."

Let me give you a series of questions. I don't like to put more than one on the table at a time, but I think they are necessary in this situation to give the structure as to where I am going.

First, in interpreting whether Congress intended to amend FISA by that resolution, would it be relevant that Attorney General Gonzales said we were advised that "that was not something we could likely get."

Second, if Congress had intended to amend FISA by the resolution, wouldn't Congress have specifically said so, as Congress did in passing the PATRIOT Act, giving the Executive greater flexibility in using roving wiretaps?

Third, in interpreting statutory construction on whether Congress intended to amend FISA by the resolution, what would the relevance be of rules of statutory construction that repeal or change by implication—that changes by—makes the repeal by implication or disfavor, and specific statutory language trumps more general pronouncements? How would you weigh and evaluate the President's war powers under Article II to engage in electronic surveillance with the warrant required by congressional authority under Article I in legislating under the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act? And let me start with the broader principles.

In approaching an issue as to whether the President would have Article II powers, inherent constitutional authority to conduct electronic surveillance without a wiretap, when you have the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act on the books, making that the exclusive means, what factors would you weigh in that format?

Judge ALITO. Well, probably the first consideration would be to evaluate the statutory question, and you outlined some of the factors and the issues that would arise in interpreting the statute, what is meant by the provision of FISA that you quoted regarding FISA—the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act—being the exclusive means for conducting surveillance. And then, depending on how one worked through that statutory question, then I think one might look to Justice Jackson’s framework. And he said that he divided cases in this area into three categories where the President acts with explicit or implicit congressional approval, where the President acts and Congress has not expressed its view on the matter one way or the other, and the final category where the President exercises Executive power and Congress—and that is in the face of an explicit or implicit congressional opposition to it. And depending on how one worked through the statutory issue, then the case might fall into one of those three areas.

But these questions that you pose are obviously very difficult and important and complicated questions that are quite likely to arise in litigation, perhaps before my own court or before the Supreme Court.

Chairman SPECTER. Before pursuing that further—and we will have a second round—I want to broach one other issue with you. My time is almost up. That is, in the memorandum you wrote back on February 5, 1986, about the President’s power to put a signing statement on to influence interpretation of the legislation, you wrote this: “Since the President’s approval is just as important as that of the House or Senate, it seems to follow that the President’s understanding of the bill should be just as important as that of Congress.”

Is that really true when you say the President’s views are as important as Congress’s? The President can express his views by a veto and then gives Congress the option of overriding a veto, which Congress does not have if the President makes a signing declaration and seeks to avoid the terms of the statute. And we have the authority from the Supreme Court that the President cannot impound funds, cannot pick and choose on an appropriation. We have the line item veto case where the President cannot strike a provision even when authorized by Congress.

Well, I have got 10 second left. I guess when my red light goes on, it does not affect you. You can respond. Care to comment?

[Laughter.]

Judge ALITO. I do, Senator. I think the most important part of the memo that you are referring to is a fairly big section that discussed theoretical problems, and it consists of a list of questions, and many of the questions are the questions that you have just raised. In that memo, I said this is an unexplored area, and here are the theoretical questions that—and, of course, they are of more than theoretical importance—that arise in this area.

That memo is labeled a rough first effort at stating the position of the administration. I was writing there on behalf of a working group that was looking into the question of implementing a decision that had already been made by the Attorney General to issue signing statements for the purpose of weighing in on the meaning of statutes. And in this memo—as I said, it was a rough first effort, and the biggest part of it, to my mind, was the statement there are difficult theoretical interpretive questions here and here they are. And had I followed up on it—and I don't believe I had the opportunity to pursue this issue further during my time in the Justice Department—it would have been necessary to explore all those questions.

Chairman SPECTER. Well, my red light went on.

Senator Leahy?

Senator LEAHY. Well, Judge, good morning.

Judge ALITO. Good morning, Senator.

Senator LEAHY. You survived yesterday listening to us. Now we have a chance to listen to you. I will have further questions on the memo that Senator Specter spoke of, but it gets beyond the theoretical. The last few weeks, we have seen it well played out in the press where the President and Senator John McCain negotiated rather publicly an amendment, which passed overwhelmingly in the House and the Senate, outlawing the use of torture by United States officers, yet the President in a signing statement implies that it will not apply to him or to those under his command as commander in chief. Doesn't that get well beyond a theoretical issue there?

Judge ALITO. It is, and I think I said in answering the Chairman that there are theoretical issues but they have considerable practical importance. But the theoretical issues really have to be explored and resolved. I don't believe the Supreme Court has done that up to this point. I have not had occasion in my 15-plus years on the Third Circuit to come to grips with the question of what is the significance of a Presidential signing statement in interpreting a statute.

Senator LEAHY. Let me follow with a related issue. I feel one of the most important functions of the Supreme Court is to stop our Government from intruding into Americans' privacy or our freedom or our personal decisions. In my State of Vermont, we value our privacy very, very much. I think most Americans do automatically, and many times they have to go to the courts to make sure that the Government does not—whatever part of the Government it is, whatever administration it might be—that they do not overreach in going into that privacy.

Three years ago, the Office of Legal Counsel at the Justice Department—and you are familiar with that; you worked there years ago—they issued a legal opinion, which they kept very secret, in which they concluded that the President of the United States had the power to override domestic and international laws outlawing torture. It said the President could override these laws outlawing torture.

They tried to redefine torture, and they asserted, I quote, that the President enjoys “complete authority over the conduct of war,” and they went on further to say that if Congress passed a criminal law prohibiting torture “in a manner that interferes with the President’s direction of such core matters as detention and interrogation of enemy combatants,” that would be unconstitutional. They seemed to say that the President could immunize people from any prosecution if they violated our laws on torture. And that remained the legal basis in this administration until somebody apparently at the Justice Department leaked it to the press and it became public. Once it became public, with the obvious reaction of Republicans, Democrats, everybody saying this is outrageous, it is beyond the pale, the administration withdrew that opinion as its position. The Attorney General even said in his confirmation that this no longer—no longer—represented Bush administration policy.

What is your view—and I ask this because the memo has been withdrawn. It is not going to come before you. What is your view of the legal contention in that memo that the President can override the laws and immunize illegal conduct?

Judge ALITO. Well, I think the first thing that has to be said is what I said yesterday, and that is that no person in this country is above the law, and that includes the President and it includes the Supreme Court. Everybody has to follow the law, and that means the Constitution of the United States and it means the laws that are enacted under the Constitution of the United States.

Now, there are questions that arise concerning Executive powers, and those specific questions have to be resolved, I think, by looking to that framework that Justice Jackson set out that I mentioned earlier.

Senator LEAHY. Well, let’s go into one of those specifics. Do you believe the President has the constitutional authority as commander in chief to override laws enacted by Congress and to immunize people under his command from prosecution if they violate these laws passed by Congress?

Judge ALITO. Well, if we were in—if a question came up of that nature, then I think you’d be in where the President is exercising Executive power in the face of a contrary expression of congressional will through a statute or even an implicit expression of congressional will. You would be in what Justice Jackson called “the twilight zone,” where the President’s power is at its lowest point, and I think you would have to look at the specifics of the situation. These are the gravest sort of constitutional questions that come up, and very often they don’t make their way to the judiciary or they are not resolved by the judiciary. They are resolved by the other branches of the Government.

Senator LEAHY. But, Judge, I am a little bit troubled by this because you suggested, and I completely agreed with what you said, that no one is above the law and no one is beneath the law. You are not above the law, I am not, the President is not. But are you saying that there are situations where the President not only could be above the law passed by Congress, but could immunize others, thus putting them above the law?

I mean, listen to what I am speaking to specifically. We passed a law outlawing certain conduct. The President in his Bybee memo, which has now been withdrawn, was saying that that law won't apply to me or people that I authorize. doesn't that place not only the President but anybody he wants above the law?

Judge ALITO. Senator, as I said, the President has to follow the Constitution and the laws and, in fact, one of the most solemn responsibilities of the President—and it is set out expressly in the Constitution—is that the President is to take care that the laws are faithfully executed, and that means the Constitution, it means statutes, it means treaties, it means all of the laws of the United States.

But what I am saying is that sometimes issues of Executive power arise and they have to be analyzed under the framework that Justice Jackson set out. And you do get cases that are in this twilight zone and it is—they have to be decided when they come up based on the specifics of the situation.

Senator LEAHY. But are you saying that there could be instances where the President could not only ignore the law, but authorize others to ignore the law?

Judge ALITO. Well, Senator, if you are in that situation, you may have a question about the constitutionality of a congressional enactment. You have to know the specifics of—

Senator LEAHY. Let's assume there is not a question of the constitutionality of the enactment. Let's make it an easy one. We pass a law saying it is against the law to murder somebody here in the United States. Could the President authorize somebody, either from an intelligence agency or elsewhere, to go out and murder somebody and escape prosecution or immunize the person from prosecution, absent a Presidential pardon?

Judge ALITO. Neither the President nor anybody else, I think, can authorize someone to—can override a statute that is constitutional. And I think you are in this—when you are in the third category, under Justice Jackson, that is the issue which you are grappling with.

Senator LEAHY. But wouldn't it be constitutional for the Congress to outlaw Americans from using torture?

Judge ALITO. And Congress has done that, and it is certainly an expression of a very deep value of our country.

Senator LEAHY. And if the President were to authorize somebody to torture or say that he would immunize somebody from prosecution for doing that, he wouldn't have that power, would he?

Judge ALITO. Well, Senator, I think the important points are that the President has to follow the Constitution and the laws, and it is up to Congress to exercise its legislative power. But as to specific issues that might come up, I really need to know the specifics. I need to know what was done and why it was done, and hear the arguments on the issue.

Senator LEAHY. Let's go to some specifics. Senator Specter mentioned FISA and your role with FISA, the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act. Certainly, you had to be involved with it, and appropriately so, when you were a U.S. Attorney. This law came in after the abuses of the 1960s and 1970s. We had had President Nixon's enemies list, with the government breaking into doctors' offices and wiretapping innocent Americans, and so on. After that, the Congress in a strong bipartisan effort passed the FISA legislation. We have that court which can handle applications in secret for wiretaps or surveillance, if necessary, for national security.

Now, we have just learned that the President has chosen to ignore the FISA law and the FISA court. He has issued secret orders, and according to the press and the President's own press conference, time after time after time secret orders for domestically spying on American citizens without obtaining a warrant.

Do you believe the President can circumvent the FISA law, and bypass the FISA court to conduct warrantless spying on Americans?

Judge ALITO. The President has to comply with the Fourth Amendment and the President has to comply with the statutes that are passed. This is an issue I was speaking about with Chairman Specter that I think is very likely to result in litigation in the Federal courts. It could be in my court. It certainly could get to the Supreme Court and there may be statutory issues involved—the meaning of the provision of FISA that you mentioned, the meaning certainly of the authorization for the use of military force—and those would have to be resolved.

And in order to resolve them, I would have to know the arguments that are made by the contending parties. On what basis is it claimed that there is a violation? On what basis would the President claim that what occurred fell within the authorization of the authorization for the use of military force? And then if you got beyond that, there could be constitutional questions about the Fourth Amendment, whether it was a violation of the Fourth Amendment, whether it was the valid exercise of Executive power.

Senator LEAHY. But wouldn't the burden be on the Government to prove that it wasn't a violation of the Fourth Amendment if you were spying on Americans without a warrant, especially when you have courts set up—in this case the FISA court, which sets up a very easy procedure to get the warrant? Wouldn't the burden be on the Government in that case?

Judge ALITO. Well, Senator, I think the in first instance the Government would have to come forward with its theory as to why the actions that were taken were lawful. I think that is correct.

Senator LEAHY. Well, let me ask you another one. You are saying this may come before the Third Circuit or could come before the Supreme Court, and I will accept that. But how does somebody even get there? If you are conducting illegal secret spying on a person, how are they even going to know? Where are they going to get the standing to sue?

Judge ALITO. Certainly, if someone is the subject of a search and they claim that the search violates a statute or it violates the Constitution, then they would have standing to sue and they could sue in a Federal court that had jurisdiction.

Senator LEAHY. And I am not asking these as hypothetical questions, Judge. People are getting very concerned about this. We just found out, again not because the Government told us, but because the press found out about it—and thank God that we do have a free press because so much of the stuff that is supposed to be reported to Congress never is, and we first hear about it when it is in the press.

But we found out that the Department of Defense is going around—and this makes me think of COINTELPRO during the Vietnam War—they are going around the country photographing and spying on people who are protesting the war in Iraq. They went, according to the press, and spied on Quakers in Vermont.

Now, I don't know why they spent all that money to do that. If they want to find a Vermonter protesting the war, turn on C-SPAN. I do it on the Senate floor all the time. But I know some of these Quakers. I mean, in the Quaker tradition, they have been protesting war throughout this country's history.

Now, I worry about this culture we are getting, and I just want to make sure since Congress is not going to stand up and say no, and the administration certainly is authorizing this—I want to make sure that the courts are going to say we will respect your privacy, we will respect your Fourth Amendment rights.

You know, if you have somebody who has been spied on, would you agree—and I think you did, but I want to make sure I am correct on this—do you agree that they should have a day in court?

Judge ALITO. Certainly. If someone has been the subject of illegal law enforcement activities, they should have a day in court and that is what the courts are there for, to protect the rights of individuals against the government and to—or anyone else who violates their rights. And they have to be absolutely independent and treat everybody equally.

Senator LEAHY. And those Fourth Amendment rights are pretty significant, are they not?

Judge ALITO. They are very significant.

Senator LEAHY. I think they set us apart from most other countries in the world, to our betterment. And you were a prosecutor; I was a prosecutor. I think we can agree even looking of our past professions that it protects us.

Judge ALITO. I agree, Senator. I tried to follow what the Fourth Amendment required when I was a prosecutor and I regard it as very important.

Senator LEAHY. Well, let me go back to the last time we saw Government excesses like this before FISA. When you worked in the Reagan administration, you argued to the Supreme Court that President Nixon's Attorney General should have absolute immunity for domestic spying without a warrant even in the case of willful misconduct. In your memo you said, "I do not question that the Attorney General should have immunity, but for tactical reasons I would not raise the issue here."

Do you believe today that the Attorney General would be absolutely immune from civil liability for authorizing warrantless wiretaps?

Judge ALITO. No, he would not. That was settled in that case. The Supreme Court held that the Attorney General does not have—

Senator LEAHY. But you did believe so then?

Judge ALITO. Actually, I recommended that that argument not be made. It was made and I think it is important to understand the context of that. First of all—

Senator LEAHY. You did say in the memo, "I do not question that the Attorney General should have this immunity."

Judge ALITO. That is correct, and the background of that, if I could just explain very briefly—

Senator LEAHY. Sure.

Judge ALITO [continuing]. Is that we were—there, we were not just representing the Government; we were representing former Attorney General Mitchell in his individual capacity. He was being sued for damages and we were, in a sense, acting as his private attorney. And this was an argument that he wanted to make. This was an argument that had been made several times previously by the Department of Justice during the Carter administration and then just a couple of years earlier in Harlow v. Fitzgerald in the Reagan administration. And I said I didn't think it was a good idea to make the argument in this case, but I didn't dispute that it was an argument that was there.

Senator LEAHY. You don't have any question that the judiciary has a role to play here and there can be judicial checks on such things?

Judge ALITO. No. Absolutely, it is the job of the judiciary to enforce the Constitution.

Senator LEAHY. Let's go into a couple search cases, and I think we have indicated to you that we would bring these up—Doe v. Groody, Baker v. Monroe Township. Those are unauthorized searches. In Doe, the police officers had a warrant for a man at a certain address. When they arrived, they found his wife and 10-year-old daughter. They were not in the warrant, they posed no threat. But the officers detained them and strip-searched them, the wife and the 10-year-old, the 10-year-old girl.

In Baker, a mother and her three teenage children were detained and searched when they arrived at the home of the mother's adult son. They didn't live there. They were not in the home. They were outside. They didn't pose a threat to the police, but they were ordered at gunpoint to lie on the ground. They were handcuffed, they were taken into the house and they were searched.

In Doe, the strip-search case of the 10-year-old girl, the officers didn't ask for permission to search anybody beyond the man they were looking for. In fact, the magistrate didn't give a search warrant for anybody else. But you went beyond that and you said that they were justified in strip-searching this 10-year-old and the mother. You went beyond the four corners of the search warrant the magistrate gave.

And one of your members of the Third Circuit, Judge Chertoff, who is now the head of Homeland Security and a former prosecutor, criticized your reasoning. He said that it would come dangerously close to displacing the critical role of the independent magistrate.

Do you continue to hold the position you took in your opinion or do you now agree with the majority that they are right and you are wrong?

Judge ALITO. Well, Senator, I haven't had occasion to think that what I said in that case was correct, but let me just explain what was going on there.

Senator LEAHY. Sure.

Judge ALITO. The issue there was whether—the first issue was whether the warrant authorized the search of people who were on the premises and that was the disagreement between me and the majority and it was a rather technical issue about whether the affidavit that was submitted by police officers was properly incorporated into the warrant for the purposes of saying who could be searched.

And I thought that it was, and I thought that it was quite clear that the magistrate had authorized a search for people who were on the premises. That was the point of disagreement. I was not pleased that a young girl was searched in that case and I said so in my opinion. That was an undesirable thing, but the issue wasn't whether there should be some sort of rule of Fourth Amendment law that a minor can never be searched. And I think if we were to—

Senator LEAHY. But we both agree on that, Judge. The only reason I bring up these two cases is it seems in both of them you went beyond the four corners of the search warrant and you settled all issues in a light most favorable—the majority in the opinion didn't, but you did—in a light most favorable to law enforcement. In fact, in Baker, the majority said that.

And I worry about this because I always worry that the courts must be there to protect individuals against an overreaching government. In this case, your position in the minority was that you protected what the majority felt was an overreaching government.

Am I putting too strong an analysis on that?

Judge ALITO. I do think you are, Senator.

Senator LEAHY. OK.

Judge ALITO. I think you need to take into account what was going on here. The police officers prepared an affidavit and they said we have probable cause to believe that this drug dealer hides drugs on people who are on the premises. And therefore, when we search, we want authorization not just to search him, but to search everybody who is found on the premises because we think he hides—we have reason to believe he hides drugs there.

And the magistrate who issued the warrant said that the affidavit was incorporated into the warrant for the purpose of establishing probable cause. And we are supposed to read warrants in a common-sense fashion because they are prepared by police officers for the most part, not by lawyers, and they are often prepared under a lot of time pressure.

And it seemed to me that, reading this in a common-sense fashion, what the magistrate intended to do was to say, yes, you have authorization to do what you ask us to do. But even beyond that, the issue there was whether these police officers could be sued for damages, and they couldn't be sued for damages if a reasonable officer could have believed that that is what the magistrate intended to authorize. And I thought that surely a reasonable officer could view it that way. Now, Judge Chertoff looked at it differently and there are cases where reasonable people disagree, and that is all that was going on.

Senator LEAHY. I know. You look for what a reasonable officer would think—I spent 8 years in law enforcement. I don't know where any reasonable officer under those circumstances would feel they could strip-search a 10-year-old girl.

Let me go into another area, and it is one that touched me in your statement yesterday. You spoke eloquently of your father's experience when he came to this country. The reason it touched me is I was thinking that, when my maternal grandparents emigrated to America, to Vermont, speaking only Italian, coming from Italy to a new country, I know some of the problems they faced—these people speaking this strange language. My mother was a child learning English when she went to school. People asking, "Why don't they speak like us? Why are they different than us"; those were just some of the obstacles they faced.

In my father's case, my paternal grandfather, whom I never knew, named Patrick Leahy, died as a stonecutter in Barre, Vermont. My father was a young teen and had to go to work to support his mother, my grandmother, whom I also never knew. And the signs then were "No Irish Need Apply" or "No Catholics Need Apply." And I think you and I would be in total agreement that we are now at a different world in at least most of our country and that we are better people because we have done away with that.

What we both understand, I think, in our core, I would hope, is what happens if you have either ethnic prejudice or religious prejudice. In my case, my father was a self-taught historian, but he never was able to finish high school. I was the first Leahy to get a college degree, my sister the next one.

So with that in mind, there was something in your background that I was troubled with. That is the Concerned Alumni of Princeton University, CAP. This was a group that received attention because it was put together, but it resisted the admission of women and minorities to Princeton. They were hostile to what they felt were people that did not fit Princeton's traditional mold—women and minorities.

Now, two prominent Princetonians—one, Bill Frist, who is now the Majority Leader of the United States Senate, in a committee, roundly criticized CAP. Bill Bradley, who had joined it and then found out what it was, left it, and roundly criticized it. And yet you, proudly in 1985, well after this criticism, in your job application, proudly wrote that you were a member of it, a member of Concerned Alumni of Princeton University, a conservative alumni group.

Why, in heaven's name, Judge, with your background and what your father faced, why in heaven's name are you proud of being part of CAP?

Judge ALITO. Well, Senator, I have racked my memory about this issue, and I really have no specific recollection of that organization. But since I put it down on that statement, then I certainly must have been a member at that time. But if I had been actively involved in the organization in any way, if I had attended meetings or been actively involved in any way, I would certainly remember that, and I don't.

I have tried to think of what might have caused me to sign up for membership, and if I did, it must have been around that time. And the issue that had rankled me about Princeton for some time was the issue of ROTC. I was in ROTC when I was at Princeton, and the unit was expelled from the campus. And I felt that was very wrong. I had a lot of friends who were against the war in Vietnam, and I respected their opinions, but I didn't think that it was right to oppose the military for that reason. And the issue, although the Army unit was eventually brought back, the Navy and the Air Force units did not come back, and the issue kept coming up. And there were people who were strongly opposed to having any unit on campus, and the attitude seemed to be that the military was a bad institution and that Princeton was too good for the military, and that Princeton would somehow be sullied if people in uniform were walking around the campus, that the courses didn't merit getting credit, that the instructors shouldn't be viewed as part of the faculty. And that was the issue that bothered me about that.

Senator LEAHY. But, Judge, with all due respect, CAP was most noted for the fact that they were worried that too many women and too many minorities were going to Princeton. In 1985, when everybody knew that is what they stood for, when a prominent Republican like Bill Frist and a prominent Democrat like Bill Bradley, both had condemned it, you, in your job application, proudly stated this as one of your credentials.

Now, you strike me as a very cautious and careful person, and I say that with admiration, because a judge should be. But I cannot believe that at 35, when you are applying for a job, that you are going to be anything less than careful in putting together such a job application, and frankly, I do not know why that was a matter of pride for you at that time.

My time is up. We will come back to this. I have other questions.

Judge ALITO. Well, Senator, as you said, from what I now know about the group, it seemed to be dedicated to the idea of bringing back the Princeton that existed at a prior point in time, and as you said, somebody from my background would not have been comfortable in an institution like that, and that certainly was not any part of my thinking in whatever I did in relation to this group.

Senator LEAHY. Or my background either, Judge, or my background either.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Chairman SPECTER. Thank you, Senator Leahy.

Senator HATCH?

Senator HATCH. Welcome, Judge Alito. We appreciate you and the service that you have given, but much has been made about your membership in an organization called the Concerned Alumni of Princeton. Now, you mentioned this organization in your 1985 job application for a position in President Reagan's administration. And you have told us what you felt—you know about your membership in that organization. So is it fair to say that you were not a founding member?

Judge ALITO. I certainly was not a founding member.

Senator HATCH. You were not a board member?

Judge ALITO. I was not a board member.

Senator HATCH. Or, for that matter, you were not even an active member of the organization, to the best of your recollection?

Judge ALITO. I don't believe I did anything that was active in relation to this organization.

Senator HATCH. Now, some have suggested, as my friend from Massachusetts did yesterday, that by your membership in this organization, you are somehow against the rights of women and minorities attending colleges. So let me just ask you directly on the record: Are you against women and minorities attending colleges?

Judge ALITO. Absolutely no, Senator, no.

Senator HATCH. I felt that that would be your answer. I really did.

[Laughter.]

Senator LEAHY. Tough question, Orrin. Tough question.

Senator HATCH. It is a good question, though. It is one that kind of overcomes the implications that you were.

Judge ALITO. Senator, I had never attended a non-coeducational school until I went to Princeton, and after I was there a short time, I realized the benefits of attending a co-educational school.

[Laughter.]

Senator HATCH. Now, I am glad that you mentioned in your opening statement yesterday that a decade earlier, a person like yourself—and by this, I assume you meant someone of Italian ancestry.

Judge ALITO. I do, Senator, and someone not from any sort of exalted economic status.

Senator HATCH. Modest background, son of an immigrant father, and a person who had gone to public school and might not have been fully welcomed sometimes at Princeton at that time. Now, people like me are not even sure of what an eating club is, but it sure as heck does not sound like a cafeteria.

Judge ALITO. No. It's something like a fraternity, except it's just a facility. It's a private facility where students eat. Traditionally, they were selective. They had a process like Vicker and they chose people that they thought fit in with the group.

Senator HATCH. Sure.

Judge ALITO. And I did not choose to belong to an eating club. I belonged to a university facility called Stevenson Hall, which was named after Adlai Stevenson, and it was one of the most co-educational facilities on the campus. It was not selective. It was attractive to me because a lot of faculty members went there for lunch. There was a master who lived on the facility with his family, and it was an opportunity at dinner and lunch to talk to faculty members.

Senator HATCH. Well, much has been written about the just and egalitarian changes that took place at Princeton and other elite institutions in the 1960s, making them more welcoming to persons without an elite background. It has been alleged by some—most prominently, I might add, by a Democratic witness who was withdrawn at the last minute because of some politically embarrassing comments that he made—that your membership in this group demonstrates your desire to maintain some old boys' network to the detriment of women and minorities. Could you comment on that particular suggestion?

Judge ALITO. I certainly had no such desire, and I think that what I did when I was a student at Princeton and my activities since then illustrate that.

As I said, when I was at Princeton, I was a member of this university facility, and it was open to everybody, and it was one of the most co-educational facilities on the campus. And since graduating, I have actually been involved in a way in the admissions process. I was on the Schools Committee for a number of years and interviewed applicants to Princeton, and I think that shows my attitude toward the general way in which the university has been run.

Senator HATCH. Well, ROTC programs are an excellent opportunity for young men and women to attend college and to serve their country through service in the armed forces. Now, there are actually more military officers who were ROTC students than went to West Point, the Naval Academy, or the Air Force Academy. Now, that includes the eminent Colin Powell.

Now, you were a member of the ROTC; is that true?

Judge ALITO. I was, Senator.

Senator HATCH. You were a proud member of the ROTC.

Judge ALITO. I was.

Senator HATCH. Did you enjoy your time in the ROTC and in the Army afterward?

Judge ALITO. I was proud to be a member, and the unit was thrown off the campus after—well, the decision was made shortly after I joined the ROTC, and so I attended the ROTC classes on the campus during my junior year, but during my senior year the unit had been expelled from the campus, and I had to go to Trenton State College occasionally to finish up my ROTC work.

Senator HATCH. I heard a report yesterday that the ROTC building on the Princeton campus was actually firebombed at about the same time that American servicemen of college age were fighting in Vietnam. Is that accurate?

Judge ALITO. That's correct. It was very extensively damaged.

Senator HATCH. Was anybody injured?

Judge ALITO. I don't recall that anybody was injured, but certainly there's a serious risk of injury whenever an arson takes place.

Senator HATCH. Now, Judge Alito, some Senators and left-wing activist groups have focused on one case involving the Vanguard Company, claiming that your consideration of that case amounts to some kind of ethical lapse. Now, I would observe that the universal opinion is that you have unquestioned integrity and a record that is above reproach. I know we will hear from the American Bar Association later this week, but I know their highest rating includes the highest marks for integrity. In fact, I have a copy of their recommendations here.

On the issue of integrity, it says, "The matter of integrity is self-defining. A nominee's character and general reputation in the legal community are investigated, as are his or her industry and diligence. Judge Alito enjoys an excellent reputation for integrity and character, notwithstanding a widespread awareness of the Vanguard and Smith Barney recusal issues. During his personal interview with us, Judge Alito was asked about the recusal matter in detail, and he acknowledged at length that he takes the matter of recusal very seriously and that the cases had 'slipped through' the court's screening process."

I won't read the whole matter, but let me just go toward the end. "Judge Alito explained to the satisfaction of the Standing Committee the special circumstances that resulted in the screen not working or otherwise not being applied in these limited matters"—that is, the screening of cases—"and he further accepted responsibility for the errors. We accept his explanation and do not believe these matters reflect adversely on him. To the contrary, consistent and virtually unanimous comment from those interviewed included 'He has the utmost integrity'; 'he is a straight shooter, very honest, and calls them as he sees them'; 'his reputation is impeccable'; 'you can find no one with better integrity'; 'his integrity and character are of the highest caliber'; 'he is completely forthright and honest'; 'his integrity is absolutely unquestionable'; 'he is a man of great integrity.'"

"On the basis of our interviews with Judge Alito with well over 300 judges, lawyers, and members of the legal community nationwide, all of whom know Judge Alito professionally, the Standing Committee concluded that Judge Alito is an individual of excellent integrity."

Now, the reason I want to go into this is to kind of get rid of this problem that I think is as phony as anything I have ever seen in my time around here. Like I say, this case has been written about or reported on for weeks in bits and pieces so that getting a clear picture of the facts is indeed a challenge, let alone getting a clear picture of the ethical issues involved as well. And I know you have not had a chance to respond to any of it publicly, so I want to give you that chance now.

Now, please take a few minutes and briefly describe the facts of the case, and then I have a few questions on the issues that are raised by the case.

Judge ALITO. Thank you, Senator, and I appreciate the opportunity to address this because a lot has been said about it and very little by me. And I think that once the facts are set out, I think that everybody will realize that in this instance I not only complied with the ethical rules that are binding on Federal judges—and they're very strict—but also that I did what I have tried to do throughout my career as a judge, and that is to go beyond the letter of the ethics rules and to avoid any situation where there might be an ethical question raised.

And this was a case where—this is a case that came up in 2002, 12 years after I took the bench, and I acknowledge that if I had to do it over again, there are things that I would have done differently. And it's not because I violated any ethical standard, but it's because when this case first came before me, I did not focus on the issue of recusal and apply my own personal standard, which is to go beyond what the code of conduct for judges requires.

This was a pro se case, and we take our pro se cases very seriously.

Senator HATCH. By pro se, explain that.

Judge ALITO. It's a case where the plaintiff was not represented by a lawyer. She was representing—she was representing—

Senator HATCH. Paying for her own counsel and represented herself.

Judge ALITO. She represented herself initially, and we take those very seriously. We give those just as much consideration—in fact, more consideration in many respects than we do with the cases without lawyers because we take into account that somebody who’s representing himself or herself can’t be expected to comply with all the legal technicalities.

But for whatever reason, our court system for handling the monitoring of recusals in these pro se cases is different from the system that we use in the cases with lawyers. And maybe that’s because recusal issues don’t come up very often in pro se cases. But, in any event, in a case with a lawyer, before the case is ever sent to us, we receive what are known as clearance sheets, and those are—it’s a stack of papers and it lists all the cases that the clerk’s office is thinking of sending to us. It lists the parties in each case, and it lists the lawyers in each case. And it says, “Do you need to recuse yourself in any of these cases?” And this is the time when the judges and this is the time when I focus on the issue of recusal, and I look at each case. I look at the parties. I look at the lawyers. And I ask myself: Is there a reason why I should not participate in the case?

Now, because this case, the Monga case, was a pro se case, it didn’t come to me with clearance sheets. I just received the briefs, and it had been through our staff attorneys’ office. They take a first look at the pro se cases, and they try to make sure—they try to translate the pro se arguments into the sort of legal arguments that lawyers would make to help the pro se litigants. And they give us a recommended disposition and a draft opinion.

And when this came to me, I just didn’t focus on the issue of recusal, and I sat on the initial appeal in the case. And then after the case was decided, I received a recusal motion. And I was quite concerned because I take my ethical responsibilities very seriously.

So I looked into the question of whether I was required under the code—because I just wanted to see where the law was on this. Was I required under the code of conduct to recuse myself in this case? And it seemed to me that I was not. And a number of legal experts, experts on legal ethics, have now looked into this question, and their conclusion is no, I was not required to recuse.

But I didn’t stand on that because of my own personal policy of going beyond what the code requires, so I did recuse myself. And not only that, I asked that the original decision in the case be vacated, that is, wiped off the books and that the losing party in the case, the appellant, Ms. Monga, be given an entirely new appeal before an entirely new panel. And that was done.

I wanted to make sure that she did not go away from this case with the impression that she had gotten anything less than an absolutely fair hearing. And then beyond that, I realized that the fact that this has slipped through in a pro se case pointed to a bigger problem, and that was the absence of clearance sheets.

So since that time, I have developed my own forms that I use in my own chambers, and for pro se cases now, there is—I have a red sheet of paper printed up, and it is red so nobody misses it. And when a pro se case comes in, it initially goes to my law clerks, and they prepare a clearance sheet for me in that case, and then they do an initial check to see whether they spot any recusal problem.

And if they don't, then there's a space at the bottom where they initial it. And then it comes to me, and there's a space at the bottom for me to initial to make sure that I focus on the recusal problem. And in very bold print at the bottom of the sheet for my secretary, it says, "No vote is to be sent in in this case unless this form is completely filled out."

So there are a number of internal checks now in my own office to make sure that I follow my own policy of going beyond what the code requires.

Senator HATCH. In other words, there was never any possibility of you benefiting financially no matter how that case came out. Is that right?

Judge ALITO. Absolutely no chance.

Senator HATCH. And you actually did recuse yourself when the question was eventually raised, even though you didn't have to.

Judge ALITO. That's correct, Senator.

Senator HATCH. Did you genuinely feel that you were either legally or ethically required to recuse under those circumstances?

Judge ALITO. I did not think the code required—

Senator HATCH. You were just going beyond, which has been your philosophy and—

Judge ALITO. That's right.

Senator HATCH [continuing]. Ethical response, your personal ethical approach to it.

Well, your own conclusion certainly is supported by the independent ethics experts that you mentioned who have recently examined this case. I know one of them is Professor Geoffrey Hazard from the University of Pennsylvania. That name stuck out in particular because I remember when a financial conflict of interest issue arose in connection with the nomination of Supreme Court Justice Stephen Breyer. In 1994, Senator Kennedy and I, we strongly defended the Breyer nomination. I did, too. And during the hearings, Senator Kennedy highlighted a letter from Professor Geoffrey Hazard to answer Justice Breyer's critics.

Well, Professor Hazard has examined this matter, and concluded that you, Judge Alito, handled it, in his words, "quite properly."

Now, Mr. Chairman, I would like to put not only Professor Hazard's letter into the record, but the letter of Steven Lubet, Thomas Morgan, and Professor Ronald Rotunda, all of whom found that you made no ethical mistakes.

Chairman SPECTER. Without objection, all will be made a part of the record.

Senator HATCH. And let me just observe that these are all top ethics experts in our country today, and, you know, I have to say that Rotunda—or Morgan, of the George Washington University Law School, he happens to be the co-author of the Nation's most widely read ethics textbook. Now, he was blunt in his assessment saying that there was simply no basis for suggesting that you did anything improper. So I am glad to put those in the record.

Now, you actually did more than simply recusing yourself in this case. As you have explained, you even set up a special system to make sure that, you know, there never is going to be a question about this. And so you went farther than you were legally or ethically mandated to do.

Judge ALITO. I did, Senator, and that is what I have tried to do throughout my time on the bench.

Senator HATCH. Now, when the new panel of judges looked at this case, how did they rule?

Judge ALITO. They ruled the same way that we had, and we had ruled the same way that the district court did.

Senator HATCH. OK. So let me just clarify this one more time, and you tell me if this accurately describes the situation. You did not believe that you were ethically or legally required to recuse yourself in this case. All the ethics experts agree with you. Yet you recused yourself anyway when the issue was raised. The party raising the issue got an entirely new hearing before a new and different panel of judges, who ruled the same way that you did originally.

Does that about sum it up?

Judge ALITO. That's correct, Senator.

Senator HATCH. Well, I have to say, Judge, that you went above and beyond your ethical duties here, and I think you are to be applauded, not to be criticized, for your rigorous attention to judicial impartiality and integrity.

Now, let me just go into another matter here before I finish here. Some Supreme Court nominees have had legislative experience. The Justice you will replace, Justice O'Connor, served in the Arizona State Senate. Justice Breyer was chief counsel to Senator Kennedy when he chaired this Committee. I have tremendous respect for both of them.

Judge Alito, you have had no legislative experience, and there are those of us who are concerned that your many years of experience in the executive branch may have biased you in favor of Executive power, or at least some feel that way and that that is a possibility.

Yesterday, one of my Democratic colleagues claimed that your instincts are to defer to the Executive, to grant prosecutors whatever power they seek, that sort of thing. I suppose that in 15 years on the appeals court you have participated in what I would estimate at nearly 5,000 cases. You have had many opportunities to review challenges to Executive power. Is that correct?

Judge ALITO. I have, yes.

Senator HATCH. Well, I am thinking of cases such as United States v. Kithcart, where you reversed a criminal conviction because the police lacked probable cause for a search, or Bolden v. Southeastern Pennsylvania Transportation Authority, where you ruled for a former maintenance custodian for a public transportation agency, concluding that the Fourth Amendment barred a suspicionless drug test.

I want to make it clear that simply giving such examples of results on the other side of the ledger does not by itself prove that you are a good judge or a bad judge. Without also talking about the facts and the law in each case, merely tabulating winners and losers does not offer much. But since my colleagues on the other side occasionally have their tally sheets and actually some have even claimed that you may be biased when certain results seem to suit them, could you give me some more examples of cases where you voted against Executive powers?

Judge ALITO. Yes, certainly, Senator. Brinson v. Vaughn is an example of that. That was a habeas case involving a murder conviction, and I concluded and my panel concluded—and I wrote the opinion saying that there had been racial discrimination, or enough to have a hearing on the possibility of racial discrimination in the selection of the jury in that case. And, therefore, we reversed the decision of the district court.

Williams v. Price is another example. There we found—and that was another murder case, and so what is involved here in these cases is really the most important thing that is litigated on the criminal side in the Federal courts. That was a case where the district court had denied a writ of habeas corpus, and we reversed because we found that there had been an error in excluding testimony that showed racial bias on the part of the jurors.

There was another murder case, United States v. Murray. This was a Federal prosecution, and we had to reverse there because we concluded—and I wrote the opinion there—that the prosecutors had introduced evidence—

Senator HATCH. Well, you could go on and on, but my point is that in approximately 5,000 cases, you can find just about anything you want to, to pluck out and say, “Oh, he didn’t do right here,” or “He did right here.” I mean, the fact of the matter is that you, as far as I can see, have always done your utmost to live up to your responsibilities as a Federal court judge and that you have done so throughout your 15 years on the bench, even though members of this illustrious body, the United State Senate, might differ with you on occasion, and others might also. But I don’t know a judge alive who has been on the bench 15 years that does not have cases that some of our illustrious members disagree with. So that is the point I am trying to make.

Let me just shift here for a second. I am interested in exploring the kind of judge you are. As you can see, some of these questions have all been directed toward what kind of a judge you are. But I am interested in what is often referred to as a judicial philosophy, which means how you understand the role that judges play in our system of Government in general and how judges should go about deciding cases in particular.

I would like to explore this by giving you a chance to expand on a few things that you have said or written. In your hearing in April 1990, which my friend Senator Kennedy chaired, he asked you what qualities are most important for an appellate judge. You listed open-mindedness to litigants’ arguments, close attention to the particular facts and law in the case, and trying not to import a judge’s own view of the law that should be applied in the case.

Now, in your statement yesterday, you said that your experience on the appeals court has taught you a lot about, as you put it, “the way in which a judge should go about the work of judging.” What has that experience taught you? How has it shaped the answer you gave before you went on the bench?

Judge ALITO. My general philosophy is that the judiciary has a very important role to play, and in speaking with Senator Leahy, I highlighted some of that. But the judiciary has to protect rights, and it should be vigorous in doing that, and it should be vigorous in enforcing the law and in interpreting the law, in interpreting the law in accordance with what it really means and enforcing the law even if that's unpopular.

But although the judiciary has a very important role to play, it's a limited role. It is not—it should always be asking itself whether it is straying over the bounds, whether it's invading the authority of the legislature, for example, whether it is making policy judgments rather than interpreting the law. And that has to be a constant process of re-examination on the part of the judges. And that's the role that the judiciary should play.

Now, my experience on the bench has really reinforced for me the importance of the appellate process and the judicial process that I described yesterday. And that is the process of really engaging the arguments that are made, reading the briefs, and approaching it with an open mind, always with the possibility of changing your mind based on the arguments and based on the facts of a particular case.

Senator HATCH. Well, another context in which you have discussed your judicial philosophy is the questionnaire that you received from this Committee, which asked for your views on judicial activism. Now, the very first words of your answer were as given here today, that the Constitution sets forth the limited role for the judicial branch.

Now, to hear some of my colleagues describe it yesterday, judges have virtually unlimited power to right all wrongs, protect everyone from everything, and make sure that Government officials everywhere behave themselves.

Now, as an appeals court judge, the decisions of the Supreme Court add to the limitations or constraints you must observe, in my opinion. I am wondering whether you believe this notion of limited judicial power applies also the Supreme Court, and if so, how it applies when there is no higher court than the Supreme Court. Does that mean that the Supreme Court should perhaps be even more cautious, even more self-restrained since there is no appeal from any errors that they might make?

Judge ALITO. I think that's a solemn responsibility that they have. When you know that you are the Court of last resort, you have to make sure that you get it right.

It is not true, in my judgment, that the Supreme Court is free to do anything that it wants. It has to follow the Constitution, and it has to follow the laws. Stare decisis, which I was talking about earlier, is an important limitation on what the Supreme Court does. And although the Supreme Court has the power to overrule a prior precedent, it uses that power sparingly, and rightfully so. It should be limited in what it does.

Senator HATCH. Another place in which you have written about what might be called judicial philosophy is in your opinions—not that you have spent much time opining about such matters in the abstract. Nevertheless, I would like you to expand a little on a few of the things you have written in this regard.

For instance, in New Jersey Payphone Association v. Town of West New York—this was a 2002 case—for example, you wrote the following: “It is well established that, when possible, Federal courts should generally base their decisions on non-constitutional rather than constitutional grounds. The rationale behind the doctrine of avoiding constitutional questions except as a last resort are grounded in fundamental constitutional principles.”

Can you explain those fundamental principles and whether you think the Supreme Court as well as the appeals court should follow this imperative to avoid constitutional decisions?

Judge ALITO. I do. I think that’s a very important principle. As I recall, Justice Brandeis in the Ashwander case was the one who articulated it most eloquently, and it’s, therefore, an important reason because a constitutional decision of the Supreme Court has a permanency that a decision on an issue of statutory interpretation doesn’t have. So if a case is decided on statutory grounds, there’s a possibility of Congress amending the statute to correct the decision if it’s perceived that the decision is incorrect or it’s producing undesirable results.

I think that it’s—my philosophy of the way I approach issues is to try to make sure that I get right what I decide, and that counsels in favor of not trying to do too much, not trying to decide questions that are too broad, not trying to decide questions that don’t have to be decided, and not going to broader grounds for a decision when a narrower ground is available.

Senator HATCH. You have addressed issues such as abortion at different points in your career. You addressed it when you worked for the Solicitor General. You might have addressed it in several cases on the appeals court. It might be tempting to say that if you came to one conclusion while in one role, you will necessarily come to the same conclusion on the issue while in a different role.

Now, I think you have explained it pretty well today, but let me just ask one other question. Could you please explain how judges address issues differently than advocates? And how does the requirement of a case or a controversy or a limitation such as a particular standard of review shape how judges address these issues?

Judge ALITO. The standards of review are very important, and often they are prescribed by Congress. Congress gives us authority, jurisdiction to decide certain questions, but it says that you don’t have the authority to go back and do what the trial—what you would have done if you were the trial judge or if you were the administrative agency; you have a limited authority of review. And I think it’s very important for us to stay within the bounds of the authority that Congress gives us. I think that’s a very important part of our function.

Senator HATCH. Thank you, Judge.

Chairman SPECTER. Thank you, Senator Hatch.

We will now take a 15-minute break and reconvene at 11:20.

[Recess at 11:06 a.m. to 11:20 a.m.]

Chairman SPECTER. We will continue the hearing for Judge Alito on confirmation to the Supreme Court of the United States, and we now turn in sequence to Senator Kennedy. Let us not forget to start the clock.

Senator KENNEDY. Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman.

There was one interesting omission between the exchange of yourself and Senator Hatch on the whole Vanguard issue in question, and that was the promise and pledge that you gave to this Committee when you were up for the Circuit Court. I have it right here. It said: I do not believe that conflicts of interest relating to my financial interests are likely to arise. I would, however, disqualify myself from any cases involving the Vanguard Companies, the brokerage firm of Smith Barney or the First Federal Savings & Loan of Rochester, New York. So you remember that response. That was a pledge and promise to the Committee that you would recuse yourself, was it not?

Judge ALITO. Yes, it was, Senator. And as I said in answering Senator Hatch's question, if I had it to do over again, I would have handled this case differently. There were some oversights—

Senator KENNEDY. I am sure you might have, and we have had a number of different explanations for this. I would like to ask the clerk if they would take down and show the Judge, if you would like to be refreshed, about the number of times the name Vanguard appears on the brief, and the number of times Vanguard appears on the opinion, which I believe you offer. I would ask if I could get a clerk to show those two documents.

Judge ALITO. Senator, I'm familiar with that. I don't really need to see the document. Senator, the name Vanguard certainly appears on the briefs, and it appeared in the draft opinion that was sent to us by the staff attorney's office. I just didn't focus on the issue of recusal when it came up, and that was an oversight on my part, because it didn't give me the opportunity to apply my personal policy in going beyond what the code requires.

Senator KENNEDY. Did the individuals that responded on the ethical issues that were involved in this case, did they know that you had pledged and promised to this Committee that you would recuse yourself?

Judge ALITO. I believe that they did. I believe that some of them at least addressed that specifically—

Senator KENNEDY. Do you know specifically whether they did or not?

Judge ALITO. I believe they addressed it in their letter, so they must have been aware of it.

Senator KENNEDY. They understood that you had promised this Committee that you would recuse yourself? Your testimony now is that those that made a comment upon your ethical behavior knew as a matter of fact that you had pledged to this Committee that you would recuse yourself from the Vanguard cases?

Judge ALITO. Professor Hazard, I know, addressed that directly in his letter. I think Professor Rotunda addressed it in his letter, so, obviously, if the letters addressed the issue, they were aware of what was said on the Senate questionnaire.

Senator KENNEDY. And the final answer—and we will move on—is that you saw the name Vanguard on the briefs, and you, obviously, saw them on the opinion. You are the author of the opinion. But your testimony here now is even though you saw the names on that, it did not come to mind at that moment that you had made the pledge and promise to this Committee that you would recuse yourself?

Judge ALITO. I did not focus on the issue of recusal I think because 12 years had gone by, and the issue of a Vanguard recusal hadn't come up. And one of the reasons why judges tend to invest in mutual funds is because they generally don't present recusal problems, and pro se cases in particular generally don't present recusal problems. And so, no light went off. That's all I can say. I didn't focus on the issue of recusal.

Senator KENNEDY. This is important, when the lights do go on and when the lights do go off, because, actually, the accumulation of value of Vanguard had increased dramatically during this period of time, had it not?

Judge ALITO. It had, Senator, but I had nothing to gain financially by—

Senator KENNEDY. I am not asking you to get on to the questions of gain or loss or whatever. I am just asking about the pledge to the Committee which you had given, and the fact that Vanguard was so obvious, both in the brief and in the opinion which you wrote, and the fact that during this period of time there had been a sizable increase in the total value of Vanguard, and as all of us know, if you are dealing with a case dealing with IBM, you cannot have even a single share in that. The point about all of this is so interested parties that have come before the courts, are going to believe not only in reality, but in appearance that they are going to get a fair shake. And that, you have said, was certainly your desire, and I certainly commend you for at least that desire. But in this case, this was something that we recognize and is extremely important.

Judge, in just the past month, Americans have learned that the President instructed the National Security Agency to spy on them at home, and they have seen an intense public debate over when the FBI can look at their library records, and they have heard the President announce that he has accepted the McCain amendment barring torture. But then just days later, as he signed it into law, the President decided he still could order torture whenever he believed it was necessary. No check, no balance, no independent oversight. So, Judge, we all want to protect our communities from terrorists, but we do not want our children and grandchildren to live in an America that accepts torture and eavesdropping on an American citizen as a way of life. We need an independent and vigilant Supreme Court to keep that from happening, to enforce the constitutional boundaries on Presidential power and blow the whistle when the President goes too far.

Congress passes laws, but this President says that he has the sole power to decide whether or not he has to obey those laws. Is that proper? I do not think so. But we need Justices who can examine this issue objectively, independently and fairly, and that is what our Founders intended and what the American people deserve.

So, Judge, we must know whether you can be a Justice who understands how to strike that proper balance between protecting our liberties and protecting our security, a Justice who will check even the President of the United States when he has gone too far.

Chief Justice Marshall was that kind of Justice when he told President Jefferson that he had exceeded his war-making powers under the Constitution. Justice Jackson was that kind of Justice when he told President Truman that he could not use the Korean War as an excuse to take over the Nation's steel mills. Chief Justice Warren Burger was that kind of Justice when he told President Nixon to turn over the White House tapes. And Justice O'Connor was that kind of Justice when she told President Bush that a state of war is not a blank check for the President when it comes to the rights of the Nation's citizens.

I have serious doubts that you would be that kind of Justice. Your record shows time and again that you have been overly deferential to Executive power, whether exercised by the President, the Attorney General or law enforcement officials. And your record shows that even over the strong objections of other Federal judges, other Federal judges, you bend over backwards to find even the most aggressive exercise of Executive power reasonable. But perhaps most disturbing is the almost total disregard in your record for the impact of these abuses of power on the rights and liberties of individual citizens.

So, Judge Alito, we need to know whether the average citizen can get a fair shake from you when the Government is a party, and whether you will stand up to a President, any President, who ignores the Constitution and uses arguments of national security to expand Executive power at the expense of individual liberty, whether you will ever be able to conclude that the President has gone too far.

Now, in 1985, in your job application to the Justice Department you wrote, "I believe very strongly in the supremacy of the elected branches of Government." Those are your words; am I right?

Judge ALITO. They are, and that's a very inapt phrase, and I—

Senator KENNEDY. Excuse me?

Judge ALITO. It's an inapt phrase, and I certainly didn't mean that literally at the time, and I wouldn't say that today. The branches of Government are equal. They have different responsibilities, but they are all equal, and no branch is supreme to the other branch.

Senator KENNEDY. So you have changed your mind?

Judge ALITO. No, I haven't changed my mind, Senator, but the phrasing there is very misleading and incorrect. I think what I was getting at is the fact that our Constitution gives the judiciary a particular role, and there are instances in which it can override the judgments that are made by Congress and by the Executive, but for the most part our Constitution leaves it to the elected branches of Government to make the policy decisions for our country.

Senator KENNEDY. I want to move on. Mr. Chairman, the clock is off. There are a number of points I want to cover and be timely, so I leave it up to the Chair.

Chairman SPECTER. Senator Kennedy, you are correct. We have a timer over here. We are trying to get the time fixed.

Senator KENNEDY. All right. If I would know when I have 10 minutes left?

Chairman SPECTER. Let us see if we cannot get the clock within the view of Senator Kennedy so he can see it when he is questioning the witness.

Senator KENNEDY. Thank you, Chair.

Chairman SPECTER. And give Senator Kennedy two more minutes.

Senator KENNEDY. There you go.

[Laughter.]

Senator KENNEDY. Be quiet over there, scurrilous dogs.

[Laughter.]

Senator LEAHY. Seniority has privileges.

Senator KENNEDY. Judge, quite frankly, your record shows you still believe in the supremacy of the executive branch, Judge Alito. I believe there is a larger pattern in your writings and speeches and cases that show an excess of almost single-minded deference to the Executive power without showing a balanced consideration to the individual rights of people. So let us discuss some of your opinions.

These cases deal specifically with one form or another of Executive power, the power of authorities intruding in homes, searching people who are not even suspected of committing a crime. Mellott v. Heemer—where the U.S. Marshal Service forcibly evicted a family of dairy farmers from their home and their farm. These farmers had no criminal record, and were suspected of no crime, but after they fell on very hard times, property was sold at a public auction. U.S. Marshals were sent to evict them. Remember, the marshals were sent to carry out a civil action, not a criminal action, a civil action. These farmers had committed no crime. Now, I respect the U.S. Marshals. They have a tough job and they do it with great professionalism. But in this case the marshals entered the house with loaded guns. The family was unarmed, did not resist, but still the marshals pointed loaded guns at their heads, chests and backs. One marshal chambered a cartridge in his gun. Twice they pushed the wife into her chair.

The trial judge held there was enough evidence in this case to have a jury review the facts, hear the testimony and decide whether the marshals used too much force to evict these farmers. That did not sit well with you, Judge Alito. You grabbed the case away from the jury. You would not let them hear the testimony or make up their own mind about whether the marshals had gone too far. No, you simply substituted your judgment for the jury's, and decided that the marshals' conduct was, as a matter of law, objectively reasonable. Judgment for the marshals, no jury of their peers for the farmers.

Why, Judge Alito? Your colleague on the Third Circuit, Judge Rendell, called the marshals' conduct "Gestapo-like", "Gestapo-like". She said that seven marshals terrorized a family and friends, ransacked a home while carrying out an unresisted civil eviction. The trial judge thought the decision should be made by the jury. Why did you not let the jury exercise an independent check on the marshals' actions?

Judge ALITO. There was some additional information regarding these people that was important, and that was that they had threatened other people, as I recall, and there was evidence about the possession of weapons and evidence that they would be dangerous, and that was the basis on which the marshals acted the way they did. This was a case in which they were—the marshals were sued for civil damages, and they asserted what's called the Qualified Immunity Defense, and that means that if a reasonable person could have thought there was a basis for doing what they did, then they are entitled not to be tried. And that's the law. I didn't make up that law.

Senator KENNEDY. No, the—

Chairman SPECTER. Let him finish, Senator Kennedy.

Judge ALITO. That's not a legal standard that I made up, and that was the way I saw the case, and that's the way the other judge, who was in the majority, saw the case. Now, these cases involve difficult line-drawing arguments at times, and I respect Judge Rendell's view of this very much, but reasonable people will view these things differently.

Senator KENNEDY. The issue then was the actions of the marshals, whether it was reasonable. And here you have a judge, Judge Rendell, saying it was Gestapo-like to talk about terrorizing a family and friends, ransacking a home while carrying out an unresisted civil eviction. Aren't juries there to make a judgment and determination whether it was reasonable or not reasonable, and did you not, by your action, take that away because you ruled as a matter of law that their conduct was reasonable?

Judge ALITO. The Supreme Court has told us how we have to handle this issue, and it is for the judiciary to decide in the first place whether a reasonable officer could have thought that what the officer was doing was consistent with the Fourth Amendment, and we have to make that decision. Now, if we decide that there's an issue of fact. If there's a dispute in the testimony about the evidence that the marshals had or about what these individuals were doing at the time when the search was taking place, or what the marshals did, and certainly those factual issues have to be resolved by the jury.

Senator KENNEDY. That is I think certainly the view of Judge Rendell.

Let me move on, if I could, to Doe v. Groody. I know that Senator Leahy has talked about this, and gone over the factual situation about the strip searching of a 10-year-old girl. This case, the police got the warrant to search the house. They found the suspect outside, marched him inside where they encountered wife and 10-year-old. The police took the wife and daughter upstairs, told them to remove their clothing, physically searched them, not as a protective frisk or search for weapons, but in the hopes of finding contraband. And that is when Judge Chertoff, the former Chief Federal Prosecutor for New Jersey, the former head of the Criminal Division in the Justice Department, President Bush's current Secretary of Homeland Security, held that the police went too far. As Judge Chertoff said, a search warrant for a premise does not constitute a license to search everyone inside.

You differed. And you have reviewed with us your reasoning for it, the fact that you felt that the affidavit which had been filed by the police should be included in the search warrant. Judge Chertoff takes strong exception to that, as does the Fourth Amendment. As you mentioned yourself, the affidavit represents the police, the police's view about this situation, but the affidavit—the search warrant is what is approved by the judge. Those are two different items. They come up every time in many, many instances. Why did you feel that under these circumstances, under these circumstances, that that affidavit should be included, the result of which we have the strip searching of a 10-year-old, 10-year-old that will bear the scars of that kind of activity probably for the rest of her life.

The Fourth Amendment is clear, we want to protect the innocent. We want to have a search warrant that is precise so that the police understand it and the person that it is being served to understands it. That was all spelled out in the judge's opinion. But you went further than that. You said, well, in this case we are going to include the affidavit, and as a result of your judgment in this case and the inclusion of the affidavit, we have the kind of conduct against this 10-year-old that she will never forget. Why? Why, Judge Alito?

Judge ALITO. Senator, I wasn't happy that a 10-year-old was searched. Now, there wasn't any claim in this case that the search was carried out in any sort of an abusive fashion. It was carried out by a female officer, and that wasn't the issue in the case. And I don't think that there should be a Fourth Amendment rule. But, of course, it's not up to me to decide that minors can never be searched, because if we had a rule like that, then where would drug dealers hide their drugs? That would lead to greater abuse of minors.

The technical issue in the case was really not whether a warrant can incorporate a search warrant—an affidavit. There's no dispute that a judge or a magistrate issuing a warrant can say that the affidavit is incorporated, and that was done here. The issue was whether—and it was a very technical issue. Was it incorporated only on the issue of probable cause or was it also incorporated on the issue of who would be searched? If the magistrate had said in the warrant, this warrant is incorporated as to the people who may be searched, and then in the affidavit it said, and it did say this very clearly, we want authorization to search anybody who's on the premises, then there would be no problem whatsoever.

The warrant said it was incorporated on the issue of probable cause, and I thought that reading it in a common sense fashion, which is what we're supposed to do, that necessarily meant that the magistrate said there was probable cause to search anybody who's found on the premises and that's what I'm authorizing you to do.

Senator KENNEDY. And that is what Judge Chertoff took strong exception, in a very eloquent statement in talking about the protections and the reasons for the strict interpretation for the warrant. Let me move on.

Judge Alito, your Third Circuit decisions don't exist in a vacuum. I'd like to, Mr. Chairman, at this point, since there have been some questions about whether we are flyspecking these cases, I would like to include in the appropriate place in the record the Knight Ridder studies that concluded that Judge Alito never found a government search unconstitutional; the Yale Law School professors study that found that Judge Alito ruled for the government in almost every case reviewed—this was their conclusion; the Washington Post stories with regard to the cases; and also Professor Cass Sunstein's conclusions that Judge Alito rules against individuals 84 percent of the time.

Chairman SPECTER. In accordance with our practices, if you want them in the record, they will be there, without objection.

Senator KENNEDY. So just looking at your writings and speeches, Judge Alito, you have endorsed the supremacy of the elected branch of government. You have clarified that today. You argued that the Attorney General should have absolute immunity, even for actions that he knows to be unlawful or unconstitutional. You suggested that the Court should give a President's signing statement great deference in determining the meaning and the intent of the law and argued as a matter of your own political and judicial philosophy for an almost all-powerful Presidency. Time and again, even in routine matters involving average Americans, you give enormous, almost total deference to the exercise of governmental power. So I want to ask you about some of the possible abuses of the Executive power and infringement on individual rights that we are facing in the country today.

Judge Alito, just a few weeks ago, by a vote of 90 to nine, the Senate passed a resolution sponsored by Senator John McCain to ban torture, whether it be here at home or abroad, and as a former POW in Vietnam, John McCain knows a thing or two about torture. For a long time, the White House threatened to veto the legislation, and finally, Senator McCain met with the President and convinced him to approve the anti-torture law. Two weeks after that, the President issued a signing statement, no publicity, no press release, no photo op, where he quietly gutted his commitment to enforce the law banning torture. The President stated, in essence, that whatever the law of the land might be, whatever Congress might have written, the Executive branch has the right to authorize torture without fear of judicial review.

Now, I raise this issue with you, Judge, I raise this with you because you were among the early advocates of these so-called Presidential signing statements when you were a Justice Department official. You urged President Reagan to use the signing statements to limit the scope of laws passed by Congress, even though Article I of the Constitution vests all legislative powers in the Congress. You urged the President to adopt what you described as a novel proposal, to issue statements aimed at undermining the Court's use of legislative history as a guide to the meaning of the law. You wrote these words. The President's understanding of the bill should be just as important as that of Congress.

With respect to the statement issued by President Bush reserving his right to order torture, is that what you had in mind when you said or wrote, the President's understanding of the bill should be just as important as that of Congress?

Judge ALITO. When I interpret statutes, and that's something that I do with some frequency on the Court of Appeals, where I start and often where I end is with the text of the statute. And if you do that, I think you eliminate a lot of problems involving legislative history and also with signing statements. So I think that's the first point that I would make.

Now, I don't say I'm never going to look at legislative history, and the role of signing statements in the interpretation of statutes is, I think, a territory that's been unexplored by the Supreme Court and it certainly is not something that I have dealt with as a judge.

This memo was a memo that resulted from a working group meeting that I attended. The Attorney General had already decided that as a matter of policy, the administration, the Reagan administration, would issue signing statements for interpretive purposes and had made an arrangement with the West Publishing Company to have those published. And my task from this meeting was to summarize where the working group was going and where it had been, and I said at the beginning of the meeting that this was a rough—at the beginning of the memo that this was a rough first effort to outline what the administration was planning to do and I was a lawyer for the administration at the time. Then I had a big section of that memo saying, and these are the theoretical problems and some of them are the ones that you mentioned. And that's where I left it, and all of that would need to be explored to go any further.

Senator KENNEDY. Well, Judge Alito, in the same signing statement undermining the McCain anti-torture law, the President referred to his authority to supervise the unitary Executive branch. That's an unfamiliar term to most Americans, but the Wall Street Journal describes it as the foundation of the Bush administration's assertion of power to determine the fate of enemy prisoners, jailing U.S. citizens as enemy combatants without charging them. President Bush has referred to this doctrine at least 110 times, while Ronald Reagan and the first President Bush combined used the term only seven times. President Clinton never used it.

Judge Alito, the Wall Street Journal reports that officials of the Bush administration are concerned that current judges are not buying into its unitary Executive theory, so they are appointing new judges more sympathetic to their Executive power claims. We need to know whether you are one of those judges.

In 2000, in the year 2000, in a speech soon after the election, you referred to the unitary Executive theory as the gospel and affirmed your belief in it. So, Judge Alito, the President is saying he can ignore the ban on torture passed by Congress, that the courts cannot review his conduct. In light of your lengthy record on the issues of Executive power, deferring to the conduct of law enforcement officials even when they are engaged in conduct that your judicial colleagues condemn, Judge Chertoff, Judge Rendell, subscribing to the theory of unitary Executive, which gives the President complete power over the independent agencies, the independent agencies that protect our health and safety, believing that the true independent special prosecutors who investigate Executive wrongdoing are unconstitutional, referring to the supremacy of the elected branches over the judicial branch and arguing that the court should give equal weight to a President's view about the meaning of the laws that Congress has passed, why should we believe that you will act as an independent check on the President when he claims the power to ignore the laws passed by Congress?

Judge ALITO. Well, Senator, let me explain what I understand the idea of the unitary Executive to be, and I think it's—there's been some misunderstanding, at least as to what I understand this concept to mean. I think it's important to draw a distinction between two very different ideas. One is the scope of Executive power, and often Presidents or occasionally Presidents have asserted inherent Executive powers not set out in the Constitution. And we might think of that as how big is this table, the extent of Executive power.

And the second question is when you have a power that is within the prerogative of the Executive, who controls the Executive? And those are separate questions. And the issue of, to my mind, the concept of unitary Executive doesn't have to do with the scope of Executive power. It has to do with who within the Executive branch controls the exercise of Executive power, and the theory is the Constitution says the Executive power is conferred on the President.

Now, the power that I was addressing in that speech was the power to take care that the laws are faithfully executed, not some inherent power but a power that is explicitly set out in the Constitution.

Senator KENNEDY. Would that have any effect or impact on independent agencies?

Judge ALITO. The status of independent agencies, I think, is now settled in the case law. This was addressed in Humphrey's Executor way back in 1935 when the Supreme Court said that the structure of the Federal Trade Commission didn't violate the separation of powers. And then it was revisited and reaffirmed in Wiener v. United States in 1958—

Senator KENNEDY. So your understanding of any unitary Presidency, that they do not therefore have any kind of additional kind of control over the independent agencies that has been agreed to by the Congress and signed into law at—

Judge ALITO. I think that Humphrey's Executor is a well-settled precedent. What the unitary Executive, I think, means now, we would look to Morrison, I think, for the best expression of it, and it is that things cannot be arranged in such a way that interfere with the President's exercise of his power on a functional, taking a functional approach.

Senator KENNEDY. I want to just mention this signing of the understanding of the legislation that we passed banning torture, what the President signed on to. The Executive branch shall construe the Title X in Division A relating to detainees in a matter with the constitutional authority of the President to supervise the unitary Executive branch as the commander in chief, and consistent with the constitutional limitations on judicial power. Therefore, it is the warning that the courts are not going to be able to override the judgments and decisions. That is certainly my understanding of those words, which will assist in achieving the shared objective of the Congress and the President.

That statement there, in terms of what was agreed to by Congress 90-to-9, by John McCain, by President Bush, and then we have this signing document which effectively just undermines all of that, is something that we have to ask ourselves whether this is the way that we understand the way the laws are to be made. It is very clear in the Constitution who makes the laws, and Congress and the Senate makes it. The President signs it, and that is the law. That is the law. These signing statements and recognizing these signing statements and giving these value in order to basically undermine that whole process is a matter of enormous concern.

Thank you.

Chairman SPECTER. Judge Alito, Senator Kennedy had noted that there were substantial gains, as he put it, in the Vanguard stock or the Vanguard asset during the period of time that you held them, but he did not give you an opportunity to answer that. I don't like to interrupt in the midst of a series of questions, but you can respond to that if you care to do so at this time.

Judge ALITO. Mr. Chairman, I had additional holdings in Vanguard during my period of service, but I think that the important point as far as that is concerned is that nobody has claimed that I had anything to gain financially from participating in this case and I certainly did not.

Chairman SPECTER. Senator Grassley?

Senator GRASSLEY. I have a much more positive view of you than has just been expressed.

[Laughter.]

Senator GRASSLEY. I can't be cynical about your judging. In fact, maybe from what I have criticized the Supreme Court in a long period of time, I might feel you are too cautious, too willing to follow precedent.

But I think in regard to Vanguard, the point ought to be made that you did nothing wrong. You didn't violate any law or any ethics rule. And the point is being made that maybe you didn't remember a promise that you had made to this Committee, but let me assure you, don't lose any sleep over that. If Senators kept every word they made to their constituents, there wouldn't be any Senators left. There is always shortness of memory and without ill intent, whether it is on the part of a Senator or whether it is on the part of Judge Alito.

I hope the viewing public is impressed by your intellect and your legal capabilities and your judicial record. Clearly, they are seeing that you have the kind of background and practical experience that it takes to be a Supreme Court Justice. In addition, I think you have demonstrated now after five or six of us asking you questions that you are very candid in answering questions so far and being honest with our Committee.

These nomination hearings that we are holding are, of course, a unique opportunity for all of us, Senators and the public, to explore more in depth how Supreme Court nominees view the roles of justice, how a nominee approaches constitutional interpretation and precedent, as well as a nominee's appreciation of the separate branches of government, and you have been involved in all of those discussions already this morning. It is unfortunate that some extreme liberal groups have attacked your commitment to the law as well as your honesty and integrity, but now you are doing your best, and I think doing a good job, of setting the record straight.

So before I ask you some questions, I want to bring up some of these issues that have been brought up against you, and you don't necessarily have to respond in any way. I just think it is points that ought to be made as I see you. I am only one Senator, but I think I have had a good opportunity to study you and particularly your cases.

I would like to address these ethics charges that we have seen generated by some of the left-wing liberal interest groups and even my colleagues on the other side of the aisle. These allegations are just plain absurd. You are going to see some charts that hopefully will be held up that I am not going to point to, but bring up some of these charges, because I think we want to prove that these allegations are absurd. It is puzzling to me that anyone would actually believe these claims, especially when people who know Judge Alito the best, people who have known him for a long period of time and who have worked closely with him, better than any of our Senators would know you, they all say that you are a man of honor, integrity, and principle. They have no question about that.

The fact is that the ABA looks at issues such as integrity and ethics when it evaluates a judicial nominee and it found you, Judge Alito, to be unanimously well qualified, a rating that Democrats have always claimed to be a gold standard. The ABA didn't find a problem with Judge Alito's record.

Moreover, several leading ethicists from across the political spectrum reviewed these allegations and they all agreed that you, Judge Alito, acted properly and that none of these charges have merit. It says in a letter from George Mason University Law Professor Ronald Rotunda, already referred to by members, and in a letter to Chairman Specter, quote, "Neither Federal statute nor Federal rules nor Model Code of Judicial Conduct of the American Bar Association provide that a judge should disqualify himself in any case involving a mutual fund company," and they give as examples Vanguard, Fidelity, T. Rowe Price, "simply because a judge owns mutual funds that the company manages and holds in trust for a judge," end of quote. So basically, according to law, Judge Alito was not required to recuse himself in the Vanguard case, but he did it anyway.

So let me repeat, five leading ethicists all say Judge Alito did nothing wrong. Professor Thomas Morgan, quote, "In my opinion, Judge Alito's participation in the Vanguard case was in no way improper, nor does it give any reason to doubt that he would fully comply with his ethical responsibilities, if confirmed."

And Professor Steven Lubet and David McGowan wrote, "You do not need to be a fan of Alito's jurisprudence to recognize that he is a man of integrity. Other judges and Justices would do well to follow this example," end of quote.

In addition, no complaint filed against Judge Alito has ever been validated, and to top it off, we have heard glowing statement after glowing statement from folks closest to the Judge, your law clerks, Republicans and Democrats alike, as well as lawyers and judges who practiced before and worked with the Judge on a daily basis. These people know this nominee best and they all say that he is a man of humility, a man of principle, and they don't have any question about the Judge's integrity.

So it is patently unfair that some folks, intent on torpedoing this nomination, are trying to give these allegations weight that they don't deserve. It should be clear to everyone that this is a blatant tactic to tar Judge Alito's honorable and distinguished judicial record, and I hope this puts to rest these outrageous claims that Judge Alito doesn't have the integrity to be a Supreme Court Justice. It is outlandish and should be rejected.

I am now getting to a question that I want to ask you about Executive power. Some of your critics have questioned your ability, and we have just heard it recently, to be independent from the Executive branch. They pointed principally to your work as a lawyer for the Department of Justice 20 years ago, suggesting that you would just rubber-stamp administration policy. I would like to give you an opportunity to address this. So, Judge Alito, do you believe that the Executive branch should have unchecked authority?

Judge ALITO. Absolutely not, Senator.

Senator GRASSLEY. Judge Alito, you do understand that under the doctrine of separation of powers, the Supreme Court has an obligation to make sure that each branch of government does not co-opt authority reserved to the coordinate branch, and do you understand that where constitutionally protected rights are involved, the courts have an important role to play in making sure that the Executive branch does not trample those rights?

Judge ALITO. I certainly do, Senator. Each branch has very important individual responsibilities and they should all perform their responsibilities.

Senator GRASSLEY. So clarify for me. Do you believe that the President of the United States is above the law and the Constitution?

Judge ALITO. Nobody in this country is above the law, and that includes the President.

Senator GRASSLEY. Judge Alito, would you have any difficulty ruling against the Executive branch of the Federal Government if it were to overstep its authority in the Constitution?

Judge ALITO. I would not, Senator. I would judge the cases as they come up and I think that I believe very strongly in the independence of the judiciary. I have been a member of the judiciary now for the past 15-and-a-half years and I understand the role that the judiciary has to play, and one of its most important roles is to stand up and defend the rights of people when they are violated.

Senator GRASSLEY. This first question is very general. It is a new area. I would like to explore in detail what you understand to be the proper role of a judge in a democratic society. So could you generally give me what your views are on this approach?

Judge ALITO. Yes. Our Constitution sets up a system of government that is democratic. So the basic policy decisions are made by people who are elected by the people so that the people can control their own destiny. But the Constitution establishes certain principles that can't be violated by the Executive branch or by the legislative branch. It sets up a structure of government that everybody has to follow and it protects fundamental rights. And it is the job of the judiciary to enforce the provisions of the Constitution and to enforce the laws that are enacted by Congress in accordance with the meaning that Congress attached to those laws, not to try to change the Constitution, not to try to change the laws, but to be vigilant in enforcing the Constitution and in enforcing the laws.

Senator GRASSLEY. What do you think about judges allowing their own political and philosophical views to impact on any jurisprudence? Second, do you believe that there is any room for a judge's own value or personal beliefs when he or she interprets the Constitution?

Judge ALITO. Judges have to be careful not to inject their own views into the interpretation of the Constitution, and for that matter, into the interpretation of statutes. That is not the job that we are given. That is not authority that we are given. Congress has the law-making authority. You have the authority to make the policy decisions and it's the job of the judiciary to carry out the policy decisions that are made by Congress when it's enacting statutes.

Senator GRASSLEY. Further explanation on that point, three subparts. Do you believe that Justices should consider political dimensions of controversial cases? Do you believe that when faced with hard cases, the Supreme Court should look at pleasing the home crowd or splitting the baby? And what is the proper role of the Supreme Court in deciding highly charged cases, meaning, I suppose in most cases, we would be talking about politically charged cases?

Judge ALITO. The Framers of the Constitution made a basic decision when they set up the Federal judiciary the way they set up it, and there's a reason why they gave Federal judges life tenure, and that is so that they will be insulated from all of the things that you mentioned. They will not decide cases based on the way the wind is blowing at a particular time, that at a time of crisis, for example, when people may lose sight of fundamental rights, the judiciary stands up for fundamental rights, that it is not reluctant to stand up for the unpopular and for what the Court termed insular minorities, that the Constitution—that the judiciary enforces the Constitution and the laws in a steadfast way and not in accordance with the way the wind is blowing.

Senator GRASSLEY. Let us look at the Bill of Rights and many other amendments that are often praised in broad, spacious terms. If a judge was so inclined, he or she could expand on the interpretation, use, and effect of many provisions of the Constitution. Do you agree with the school of thought that takes the position that when Congress and the Executive branch are slow or do not act in a particular manner, act at all, let us say, then the Supreme Court would have a license to create solutions based on some of the broad wording contained in the Constitution? Do you think that this is a proper role for the Supreme Court, or do you take the position that judges have a duty to respect constitutional restraints?

Judge ALITO. Judges have to respect constitutional restraints. They have to exercise what's called judicial self-restraint because there aren't very many external checks on the judiciary on a day-to-day basis. So the judiciary has to restrain itself and engage in a constant process of asking itself, is this something that we are supposed to be doing or are we stepping over the line and invading the area that is left to the legislative branch, for example. The judiciary has to engage in that on a constant basis.

Senator GRASSLEY. Well, just suppose that Congress had not even acted in a certain area and there are people that are bringing cases before the court that would give an opportunity to fill in on something that Congress didn't do. What about in—

Judge ALITO. The judiciary is not a law-making body. Congress is the law-making body. Congress has the legislative power and the judiciary has to perform its role and not try to perform the role of Congress or the Executive.

Senator GRASSLEY. I don't know whether you have ever had a case where the Framers—where you are dealing with the problems that the Framers maybe in broad ways in the Constitution couldn't provide for, but how would you apply the words of the Constitution into problems that the Framers could not have foreseen?

Judge ALITO. There are very important provisions of the Constitution that are not cast in specific terms, and I think for good reason. They set out a principle, and then it is up to the judiciary to apply that principle to the facts that arise during different periods in the history of our country.

The example that I like to cite here is the prohibition against unreasonable searches and seizures in the Fourth Amendment. Now, this goes all the way back to the adoption of the Fourth Amendment at the end of the 18th century and most of the types of searches that come up today are things that the Framers never could have anticipated. They couldn't foresee automobiles or telephones or cell phones or the Internet or any of the other means of communication that have prevented new search and seizure issues. But they set out a good principle, and the principle is that searches can't be carried out unless they're reasonable, and generally, there has to be a warrant issued by a neutral and detached magistrate before a search can be carried out.

And so as these new types of searches have arisen and new means of communication have come into practice, the judiciary has applied this principle and the legislative branch has applied the principle in statutes like the wiretapping statute to the new situations that have come up.

Senator GRASSLEY. What factors, if any, and there may not be any, but what factors, if any, are there which can affect a judge's interpretation of the text of the Constitution? Can these factors be determined and applied without involving personal bias of judges?

Judge ALITO. I think they can. There would be no, I think, basis for judges to exercise the power of judicial review if they were doing nothing different from what the legislature does in passing statutes. So judges have to look to objective things, and if it's a question of absolutely first impression, and there aren't that many constitutional issues that arise at this point in our history that are completely issues of first impression, you would look to the text of the Constitution and you would look to anything that would shed light on the way in which the provision would have been understood by people reading it at the time.

You certainly would look to precedent, which is an objective factor, and most of the issues that come up in constitutional law now fall within an area in which there is a rich and often very complex body of doctrine that has worked out. Search and seizure is an example. Most of the issues that arise concerning—freedom of speech is another example. There is a whole body of doctrine dealing with that, and that's objective and you would look to that and you would reason by analogy from the precedents that are in existence.

Senator GRASSLEY. Let me bring up the tension between majority rule and individual freedoms. This involves the tensions between the American ideal of democratic rule and the concept of individual liberties, where neither the majority nor the minority can be fully trusted to define the proper spheres of our democratic authority and liberty. I assume that you agree that there is tension that has to be resolved?

Judge ALITO. There is tension because our system of government is fundamentally a democratic system, as I said. The authority to make the basic policy decisions that affect people's lives, most of them, most of those decisions are to be made by the legislature and by the Executive in carrying out the law. But the judiciary has the responsibility to exercise the power of judicial review. And so if something comes up that violates the Constitution, then it's been established now going all the way back to Marbury v. Madison, if that comes up in a case, it is the duty of the judiciary to say what the law is and to enforce the law in that decision, and if that means saying that something that another branch of government has done is unconstitutional, then that's what the judiciary has to do.

Senator GRASSLEY. How would you go about your duties as a Justice in determining where the right of the silent majority ends and where the right of the individual begins? What principles of constitutional interpretation help you to begin your analysis of whether a particular statute infringes upon some individual right?

Judge ALITO. I would look to the text of the provision. I would look to anything that sheds light on what that would have been understood to mean. I would look to precedent, and as I mentioned a minute ago, I think in most of the areas now where constitutional issues come up with some frequency, there is a body of precedent. That would be—that shapes the decision. That's generally what is going to dictate the outcome in the case, and if it's a new question, then usually the judiciary will see where it fits into the body of precedent and reason by analogy from prior precedents.

Senator GRASSLEY. Some judges and scholars believe that in resolving this dilemma, the court's obligation to the intent of the Constitution are so generalized and remote that judges are free to create a Constitution that they think best fits today's changing society. What do you think of such an approach?

Judge ALITO. Judges don't have the authority to change the Constitution. The whole theory of judicial review that we have, I think is contrary to that notion. The Constitution is an enduring document and the Constitution doesn't change. It does contain some important general principles that have to be applied to new factual situations that come up. But in doing that, the judiciary has to be very careful not to inject its own views into the matter. It has to apply the principles that are in the Constitution to the situations that come before the judiciary.

Senator GRASSLEY. I think you heard in opening comments some of the members of this Committee that they view the courts as a place taking the lead in creating a more just society. Is that a role for the courts, and I don't know whether you want to call this judicial activism, but I would, is it ever justified?

Judge ALITO. Well, I think that if the courts do the job that they are supposed to do, they will produce, we will produce a more just society. I think if you take a position as a Federal judge, you have to have faith that if you do your job, then you will be helping to create a more just society. The Constitution and the constitutional system that we have is designed to produce a just society.

It gives different responsibilities to different people. You could think of a football team or you could think of an orchestra where everybody has a different part to play, and the whole system won't work if people start playing—start performing the role of someone else. Everyone in the system has to perform their role, and I think you have to have faith, and I think it's a well-grounded faith, that if you do that, if the judiciary does what it is supposed to do, the whole system will work toward producing a more just society.

Senator GRASSLEY. I want to go back and expand on a point I referred to as maybe Congress not acting some time and what the Court should do about that. This was a line of questioning that I also asked Chief Justice Roberts when he was before us. At that time, I referred to the confirmation of Justice Souter, and Justice Souter responded to my questions regarding the interpretation of statutory law by speaking about the Court's filling vacuums in law left by Congress. Do you believe that the Supreme Court should fill in vacuums in the law left by Congress, or is this a way for Justices to take an activist role in that they get to decide how to fill in generalities and resolve contradictions in law? If you are confirmed by the Senate, do you believe that your job is to fill in vacuums?

Judge ALITO. Well, I don't know exactly what Justice Souter was referring to when he said that, but just speaking for myself, I think that it is our job to interpret and to enforce the statutes that Congress passes and not to add to those statutes and not to take away from those statutes.

Senator GRASSLEY. Further on judicial restraint, are there any situations where you believe it is appropriate for a Supreme Court Justice to depart from the issue at hand and announce broad sweeping constitutional doctrine, and if you do, could you please describe in detail what those circumstances might be?

Judge ALITO. I think that the judiciary should decide the case—I think judges should decide the case that is before them. I think it's hard enough to do that and get it right. If judges begin to go further and announce—and decide questions that aren't before them, or issue opinions or statements about questions that aren't before them—from my personal experience, what happens when you do that is that you magnify the chances of getting something wrong. When you have an actual concrete case of controversy before you, focus on that. It improves your ability to think through the issue and it focuses your thinking on the issue and it makes for a better decision if you just focus on the matter that is at hand and what you have to decide and not speak more broadly.

If you speak more broadly, I think there is a real chance of saying something that you don't mean to say, or suggesting something that you don't mean to say and deciding questions before they have been fully presented to you, before you have heard all the arguments about this other question that isn't really central to the case that is before you.

Senator GRASSLEY. You might sometime be faced with what people might call a bad law or some unpopular law which nonetheless might be constitutional. Do you believe that—I guess the question should be, what do you believe would be the court's role in that instance? Is the court ever justified in correcting what might be a problem out there, presumably created by a law Congress passed?

Judge ALITO. Courts do not have the authority to repeal statutes or to amend statutes, and so once a court has determined what a statute means, then it's the obligation of the courts to enforce that statute. Now, sometimes when a case of statutory interpretation comes before a court and your first look at the statute seems to produce an absurd result, let's say, or a very unjust result, then I think the judiciary has the obligation to go back and say, well, is this really what the statute means, because the legislature generally is not going to want to produce a result like that. So maybe our first look at this statute has produced an interpretation that's it's an incorrect statute. So I think we have to do that.

And occasionally, a statute will come along or an administrative regulation will come along and the way it's applied in a particular case shows that there's a problem with the statute or the regulation that maybe Congress didn't anticipate or the administrative agency didn't anticipate. And in those instances, while I think it is the obligation of the judiciary to apply the statute that is before the judiciary, I think it is proper for us to say, look, this shows how this statute or this regulation plays out in the real world in this situation and maybe you didn't think about that and maybe that's something that you want to take into account if you're going to revise the statute or issue a new regulation. I think those are proper roles for us.

Senator GRASSLEY. What is your position regarding results-oriented jurisprudence, where the rationale is made secondary to the actual result reached? When, if ever, is results-oriented jurisprudence justified?

Judge ALITO. Results-oriented jurisprudence is never justified because it is not our job to try to produce particular results. We are not policymakers and we shouldn't be implementing any sort of policy agenda or policy preferences that we have.

Senator GRASSLEY. In the past few decades, certain interest groups and legal scholars and even some Members of Congress have tried to convert the Supreme Court from a legal institution into political, social, and cultural ones. Because of this, the Court has morphed in that direction, I believe, becoming a battlefield for warring interest groups who are raising and spending millions of dollars on disinformation campaigns and website blogs. There are even blogs going on all the time about this hearing. Do you think it is because the Supreme Court has injected itself into policy issues better left to the elected branches of government, or has the Supreme Court tried to act as kind of a roving commission, attempting to solve perceived societal problems, or maybe it is none of the above? What do you think can be done to restore the sense of constitutional balance between the Supreme Court and the Executive and legislative branches of government and understanding all are co-equal?

Judge ALITO. I think the branches are co-equal and I think that the judiciary as a whole, including the Supreme Court, must always be mindful of the role that it is supposed to play in our system of government. It has an important role to play, but it's a limited role and it has to do what it is supposed to do vigilantly, but it also has to be equally vigilant about not stepping over the bounds and invading the authority of Congress or invading the authority of the Executive or other government officials whose actions may be challenged. I think the challenge for the judiciary.

Senator GRASSLEY. Thank you, Judge Alito.

Chairman SPECTER. Thank you, Senator Grassley.

Senator Biden?

Senator BIDEN. Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I understand, Judge, I am the only one standing between you and lunch, so I will try to make this painless.

Judge, I would like to say a few very brief things at the outset. I am puzzled, and I suspect you may be puzzled by some of the questions. I don't think anybody thinks you are a man lacking in integrity. I don't think anybody thinks that you are a person who is not independent. I think that what people are wondering about and puzzled about is not whether you lack independence, but whether you independently conclude that the Executive trumps the other two branches. They wonder when you back—granted, it is back in 1985 or 1984 when you wrote, "I do not question the Attorney General should have this immunity, has absolute immunity. But for tactical reasons," et cetera. So people are puzzled, at least some are puzzled, and so I don't want you to read any of this, at least from my perspective, as I have read it so far, that people think that this is a bad guy. What people are puzzled about with the recusal issue was under oath you said, "I will recuse myself on anything relating to"—and then a case comes up. So they are looking for an explanation. So it is not about whether you are profiting or whether you are, you know, all this malarkey about what you broke judicial ethics. It is a simple kind of thing. You know, you under oath said, "I promise if this ever comes up, I will recuse myself," and then you gave an explanation. You know, it slipped, you forgot, it had been years earlier, et cetera.

So don't read it as, you know, this is one of these things where we know you are—the people I have spoken to on your court—and it is my circuit—have a very high regard for you, and I think you are a man of integrity. The question is sometimes some of the things you have said and done at least puzzle me. And I would like to—and one of the things—this is not part of the line of questioning I wanted to ask, but I did ask you when you were kind enough to come to my office about the Concerned Alumni of Princeton. Were you aware of some of the other things they were saying that had nothing to do with ROTC? Because there was a great deal of controversy.

I mean, I can remember—I can remember this. My son was—well, anyway, he ended up going to that other university, the University of Pennsylvania. But I remember, you know, Princeton. I had spoken on campus in the early 1970s. This was a big thing, up at Princeton at the Woodrow Wilson School. And I remember—I didn't remember Bill Frist, but I remember that there was this disavowing, that Bill Bradley, this great basketball star and now U.S. Senator, was, you know, disassociating himself with this outfit, that there was a magazine called Prospect. I remember the magazine. And all I want to ask is: Were you aware of the other things that this outfit was talking about? Were you aware of this controversy going on in 1972?

Judge ALITO. Senator, I don't believe that I was, and when it was mentioned that Senator Bradley had withdrawn from a magazine, that didn't ring any bells for me. I did not recall anything like that.

Senator BIDEN. It was a pretty outrageous group. I mean, I believe you that you were unaware of it, but here I was, University of Delaware graduate, a sitting U.S. Senator. I was aware of it because I was up there on the campus. I mean, it was a big deal. It was a big deal, at least in our area, the Delaware Valley, if you know Princeton, Penn, the schools around there had this kind of—because the big thing was going on at Brown at the time as well.

And, by the way, for the record, I know you know. When you stated in your application that you are a member—you said in 1985, “I am a member”—they had restored ROTC. I mean, ROTC was back on the campus. But, again, this is just by way of, you know, why some of us are puzzled, because if I was aware of it and I didn't even like Princeton.

[Laughter.]

Senator BIDEN. No, I mean, I really didn't like Princeton. I was an Irish Catholic kid who thought it hadn't changed like you concluded it had. I mean, you know, I admit, I have a little—you know, one of my real dilemmas is I have two kids who went to Ivy League schools. I am not sure my Grandfather Finnegan will ever forgive me for allowing that to happen.

But all kidding aside, I was not a big Princeton fan, and so maybe that is why I focused on it and no one else did. But I remember at the time.

The other thing is, Judge, you know, the other thing you should be aware of—and kind of don't take this personally what is going on here—every nominee who comes before us is viewed by all the Senators, left, right, center, Democrat, Republican, at least on two levels, at least in my experience here. One is, the first one, individual qualifications and what their constitutional methodology, their views are, their philosophy. But the other is—and it always occurs—whose spot they are taking and what impact that will have on the Court. Everybody wrote with Roberts after the fact—and a lot of people voted for Roberts that were doubtful. I was doubtful. I voted no. But he was replacing Rehnquist. So Roberts for Rehnquist, you know, what is the worst that can happen, quote-unquote, or the best that can happen?

Now, I am not being facetious. What is the best or worst? If you are conservative, the best that can happen is he is as good as Rehnquist. From the standpoint of someone who is a liberal, the worst that can happen, he is as good as Rehnquist.

So, I mean, but you are replacing—I mean, we can't lose this, and so people understand this. You are replacing someone who has been the fulcrum on an otherwise evenly divided Court. And a woman who most scholars who write about her and in a retrospective about her say this is a woman who viewed things from—the phrase you have used—a real-world perspective. This was a former legislator. This was a former practitioner. This was someone who came to the bench and applied—to her critics, she applied too much common sense. Critics would say that she was too sensitive to the impact on individuals, you know, what would happen to an individual. So her focus on the impact on individuals was sometimes criticized and praised. It is just important you understand, at least for my questioning, that this goes beyond you. It goes to whether or not your taking her seat will alter the constitutional framework of this country by shifting the balance, 5-4, 4-5, one way or another.

And that is the context in which at least I want to ask you my questions after trying to get some clarification or getting some clarification from you on Concerned Princeton—because, again, a lot of this just is puzzling, not able to be answered, just puzzling.

Judge, you and I both know—and clearly one of the hallmarks, at least in my view, of Justice O'Connor's position was she fully understood the real world of discrimination. I mean, she felt it. Graduated No. 2 in her class from Stanford, could not get a job, was offered a job by law firms. Granted, she is a little older than you are, but could not get a job because she was a woman. They offered her a job as a secretary. And so she understood what I think everybody here from both ends of the spectrum here understand, that discrimination has become very sophisticated. It has become very, very sophisticated, very much more subtle than it was when I got here 34 years ago or 50 years ago. And employers don't say anymore, you know, "We don't like blacks in this company," or "We don't want women here." They say things like, "Well, they wouldn't fit in," or, you know, "They tend to be too emotional," or, you know, "a little high-strung." I mean, there are all different ways in which now it has become so much more subtle. And that is why we all, Democrat and Republican, wrote Title VII. We wrote these laws to try to get at what we observed in the real world.

What we observed in the real world is it is real subtle, and so it is harder to make a case of discrimination, even though there is no doubt that it still exists.

And so I would like to talk to you about a couple of anti-discrimination cases. One is the Bray case. In that case, a black woman said she was denied a promotion for a job that she was clearly qualified for—there was no doubt she was qualified—and she said, "I was denied that job because I am a black woman." And it was, as I said, indisputable she was qualified. It was indisputable that the corporation failed to follow their usual internal hiring procedures. And the corporation gave conflicting explanations as to why they reached a decision to hire another woman who they asserted was more qualified than Ms. Bray.

Now, the district court judge said, you know, Ms. Bray had not even made a prima facie case here—or she made a prima facie, but she had not made a sufficient showing to get to a jury, I am finding for the corporation here. And Ms. Bray's attorney appealed, and it went up to the Third Circuit. And you and your colleagues disagreed. Two of your colleagues said, you know, Ms. Bray should have a jury trial here, and you said, no, I don't think she should, and you set out a standard, as best I can understand it. And I want to talk to you about it. And your colleagues said that if they applied your standard in Title VII cases, discrimination cases, that it would effectively, their words, "eviscerate Title VII," because, they went on to say, it "ignores the realities of racial animus." They went on to say that "Racial animus runs so deep in some people that they are incapable of acknowledging that a black woman is qualified for a job.”

But, Judge, you dismissed that assertion. You said that the conflicting statements that the employer made were just loose language, and you expressed your concern about allowing disgruntled employees to impose costs of a trial on employers. And so your colleagues thought you set the bar, I think it is fair to say, pretty high in order to make the case that it should go to a jury.

Can you tell me what the difference is between a business judgment as to who is most qualified—because actually you said this comes down to “subjective business judgment”—and discrimination? You said, “Subjective business judgment should prevail unless the qualifications of the candidate are extremely disproportionate.” What is the difference between that in today’s world and discrimination? I know you want to eliminate discrimination. Explain to me how that test is distinguishable from just plain old discrimination.

Judge ALITO. Well, this case was one of quite a few that we get that are on the line, and I think when you think about the nature of the appellate system, it stands to reason that it is going to work out that way. The really strong cases tend to settle; the really weak cases are either dismissed and not appealed, or they settle for modest amounts. So the ones that are hotly contested on appeal tend to be the ones that are close to the line, whatever the legal standard is.

Now, four Federal judges looked at the facts in this case. One was Judge Maryanne Trump Barry, who was then the district court judge and is now one of my colleagues on the Third Circuit. I was one. And we thought the evidence was not quite sufficient. And then my colleague, Theodore McKee, and Judge Green, a district court judge from Philadelphia, a fine district court judge, sitting by designation, thought that the evidence was sufficient. And I think that division illustrates this was a factual case on which reasonable people would disagree. This was a case in which there was no direct evidence of discrimination, and I could not agree with you more that we can’t stop there. There are subtle forms of discrimination, and the judicial process has to be attentive to the fact that discrimination exists and today a lot of it is driven underground.

But all there was in this case were—all that the plaintiff could point to to show that there were facts from which you could infer discrimination were a very—what looked like a really minor violation of the company’s internal practices. They had a policy under which if somebody was being considered for a promotion, they would interview that person and they would decide we are going to promote or we are not going to promote. And if they decided they were not going to promote, then they were supposed to tell that person, “We’ve decided we’re not going to promote you,” before they go on to interviewing the next person. And in this instance, it appeared that they interviewed Ms. Bray, and they decided they weren’t going to promote her. And then they interviewed the other candidate, Ms. Real, before they told Ms. Bray that they weren’t going to promote her.

There was no—they had nothing to gain by doing that. So it is a fact to be considered—

Senator BIDEN. Judge, I don't mean to interrupt. I want to make sure I understand. I think the reason for that policy is that that is the way people do discriminate. For example, you get somebody in, a woman, a black, a Hispanic, whomever, who is qualified but you don't want to hire them. And if you say, OK, in your own mind, I am going to keep looking until I find someone who is more qualified so that I don't have to hire—I mean, just so we both understand. That is why that rule is there. It is not just a little deal. It is the real world. That is how people work. People don't say anymore, "I am not going to hire that man over there because he is black" or "he is Jewish" or "she is a woman." They don't do that anymore. What they do is they look around and they keep looking until they find someone, aha, I got one here who is a Rhodes scholar, I got one here who is a white male who happened to have experience doing it. That is why they have that rule.

So, again, I am not questioning your commitment to civil rights. What I do wonder about is whether or not you—it is presumptuous of me to say this—whether you fully appreciate how discrimination does work today. That is why the corporation set that rule up: Interview the one inside the company, that was our practice, hire inside, tell them they have the job or not, so that the supervisor, who may not want to work with a black woman, doesn't get a chance to go, "I am going to keep looking. Send me in"—"find me somebody who has some experience somewhere else." That is why they have the rule, right?

Judge ALITO. Well, I think you make a good point, Senator, but in this instance, my recollection is—and, in fact, I am quite sure of this. These were both people who were from the inside. They were both Marriott employees. And I think they were both being considered for the position at the time. So it wasn't an instance in which they interviewed Ms. Bray and then they said, "Well, she is qualified, but we really don't want to hire her. Let's keep looking."

If there had been evidence to that effect, then I would certainly think for the reasons that you've outlined that you could draw a pretty substantial inference of an intent to discriminate from that.

Senator BIDEN. Well, Judge—

Judge ALITO. But nothing like that was presented to us in that case, as I remember it.

Senator BIDEN. Weren't the facts in that case also that there was a Mr. Josten, who had held the very job—he was leaving the job. That is the job being filled. He said, "In my opinion, which I let be known"—excuse me. I beg your pardon. It wasn't Mr. Josten. The person who was giving up the job said, "In my opinion, I let it be known to Mr. Josten"—the guy doing the hiring—"which Mr. Josten was aware of, that Bray was more than qualified to take over my position as Director of Services at Park Ridge. To this day"—this is a quote—"I cannot understand why she was not offered the position." That was in the record. It was in the record that Josten had said in a deposition under oath she is not qualified, when she clearly was qualified.

I mean, I guess what I am curious about is why in a close case like this wouldn't you let the jury decide it? Why did you become essentially the trier of fact? I mean, what was your thinking?

Judge ALITO. Well, my thinking was that the standard we were to apply was could a reasonable jury find that discrimination was proven here. And it was my view and it was the view of the district judge that a reasonable jury couldn't find that. The district judge actually looked at the qualifications of the two candidates and said, "This isn't even close. Ms. Real is much better qualified than Ms. Bray."

Now, I didn't say that and I didn't think that. I thought that they had somewhat different qualifications, and a reasonable person could view it either way. But there just wasn't anything that I saw that a reasonable person could point to as a basis for a reasonable inference of an intent to discriminate.

Senator BIDEN. Well, again, I am puzzled by this, just trying to understand your reasoning, because as you accurately point out, you didn't say the one was more qualified. You said they were equally qualified. And that is what puzzled me. And what really got my attention in the case was you have a collegial court, you know, the Third Circuit. I mean, that is my observation. I don't follow it quite as closely as the man who has appointed about everybody on that court, our Chairman. But I follow it very closely, and I thought it was pretty strong language that the majority of your panel said that your standard would eviscerate the Ninth Amendment. That in Third Circuit language is a pretty strong statement.

Let me move on to another case, if I may, the Sheridan case, another discrimination case. Again, a little puzzling to me. This is a case where you were the only judge in this circumstance out of 11 judges on your circuit who heard the appeal who ruled that a jury trial should have been overruled—a jury verdict should have been overruled. In this case, a woman alleged that she was constructively discharged. For the non-lawyers listening to this, it means she basically was demoted to the point where she was, as a practical matter, forced to quit.

This woman alleged that she was constructively discharged, and she argued that it occurred after she had brought a discrimination claim and where the record showed that her employer said, "I am going to hound you like a dog." It was in the record. "I am going to hound you like a dog for bringing this discrimination claim."

Now, there was more than one issue. One was whether this was vindictive—I forget the proper phrase—or whether or not she should have been promoted. The third was whether she was constructively discharged.

And the jury heard the case and said, "We conclude she was constructively discharged," i.e., she was basically forced out, and she was forced out because she was being discriminated against. And 10 out of 11 of your colleagues reached that same conclusion.

But you said—and this is what I want you to explain to me. You said, "An employer may not wish to disclose his real reasons for taking punitive action against someone or not hiring someone or for his animosity toward someone." And you went on to say, "The reason for the animosity on the part of the employer might be based on sheer personal antipathy," which is OK.

Now, again, this is a matter of real world versus, you know, theoretically. Can you tell me how you can tell the difference when an employer is saying, "Ms. Feinstein, I am not going to hire you because the person seeking the job has a Rhodes scholarship and I like him better, and it turns out they weren't a Rhodes scholar. The real reason is I just don't like your glasses. I don't like the way you look."

I am not being facetious. That is—

[Laughter.]

Senator LEAHY. I like the way you look, Dianne. You look OK.

Senator BIDEN. For the record, I am a fan of the woman from California.

But all kidding aside, I mean, that is how it read to me, that sheer personal antipathy is OK even when the employer's reason for not hiring the person toward whom they showed sheer personal antipathy wasn't true. How do you distinguish that from discrimination, subtle discrimination? That is tough for me.

Judge ALITO. Well, this case concerned an issue that had really divided the courts of appeals at the time when our court addressed it. And the courts of appeals—this gets into a fairly technical question involving a Supreme Court case called the McDonnell Douglas case. But to put it in simple terms, the courts of appeals have divided into three camps on this. There was the pretext-plus camp, which was the one that was the least hospitable to claims by employees. There was the pretext-only camp, which was the camp that was most favorable to employees. And there was the middle camp. And my position was in the middle camp, and when the issue went to the Supreme Court—and it did a couple of years later—in Reeves v. Sanderson Plumbing, Justice O'Connor wrote the opinion for the Supreme Court, and she agreed with my analysis of this legal issue, that in most instances pretext is sufficient. In fact, in the vast majority of instances if the plaintiff can show or could point to enough evidence to show that the reason given by the employer is a pretext, is incorrect, then that is enough to go to the jury. In the vast majority of cases, that is sufficient, but not in every case, and that is what I said in Sheridan and that is what Justice O'Connor said when she wrote the opinion for the Supreme Court in Reeves v. Sanderson Plumbing.

Senator BIDEN. Well, I went back and read Reeves and I looked at O'Connor's statements, and with all due respect you could argue she used the same standard, but it is clear to me she would have reached a different conclusion. She would have been with your ten colleagues.

Here is what she said. She said in the Reeves case that she would not send the case to the jury if, and I am quoting, "One, the record conclusively revealed some other non-discriminatory reason for the employer's decision." I fail to see how the record conclusively showed that, and I doubt whether she would have seen that.

Or, two, continuing to quote, "If the plaintiff created only a weak issue of fact as to whether the employer's reason was untrue and there was abundant uncontroverted evidence that no discrimination had occurred." It seems to me she is much more prepared to give the benefit of the doubt to the employee in that situation and you are much prepared to give the benefit of the doubt to the employer.

I mean, by her own language, I find it hard to figure how she would have reached the same substantive conclusion that you did that a jury trial wasn't appropriate, notwithstanding the fact that I think you make a good point that the test she said was more like the test you said. But the real-world outcome, I think, she would have been—presumptuous of me to say it—I think it would have been 11 to 1 and not 10 to 2 had she been on the court, but who knows?

Judge ALITO. Well, Senator, I think the vote on my court was a reflection of the standard that they applied and they did not apply the Reeves v. Sanderson Plumbing standard. Of course, Reeves hadn't been decided at that point, but they applied the standard that said if the plaintiff can create a fact issue as to whether it was pretextual, then that alone is sufficient. So they didn't get into an evaluation of the sort of evidentiary points that you were mentioning.

Senator BIDEN. Well, they kind of did talk—you would know better than I, Judge. I don't mean to suggest I am correcting you, but as I read the case, they did get into the minutia about—

Judge ALITO. They did.

Senator BIDEN [continuing]. The factual minutia. And in the Reeves case, O'Connor, not that it is—because there are two different cases we are talking about here; we are talking about a similar rule, two different cases. O'Connor reversed the Fifth Circuit decision and here is what she said when she reversed it. She said that she reversed the lower court because, quote, “It proceeded from the assumption that a prime facie case of discrimination combined with sufficient evidence for the trier of fact to disbelieve the defendant's legitimate non-discriminatory reason for its decision is insufficient as a matter of law to sustain a jury finding of intentional discrimination.”

It seems to me that is what you did. In my view, that is what you did—that is the conclusion you reached in the Sheridan case. She overruled in Reeves, as I read it. But at any rate, as someone once said, it is your day job and we do this part-time. We have other things like wars and foreign policy to deal with, so I am not presuming to be as knowledgeable about this as you are.

Let me move on to a third case very quickly—I only have two-and-a-half minutes left—and it is the Casey case, Planned Parenthood. And I don't care what your position is on abortion. This is not about your abortion position. It is about your reasoning here. As a matter of fact, with 2 minutes and 30 seconds, I probably can't get into the case. maybe I should do it in a second round, but I should tell you now I want to talk to you about, again, the real world here and kind of the effects test.

And so for me, Judge, where I am still remaining somewhat puzzled is on whether or not you—whether it is applying the unitary Executive standard and what you mean by that or whether it is the assertions made relative to how to look at discrimination cases, which are difficult, you seem to come down—I am not associating myself with the studies done—I don't know enough to know whether they are correct or not—by Cass Sunstein or others. I don't disagree with them.

But as I have tried diligently to look at your record, you seem to come down more often and give the benefit of the doubt to the outfit against whom discrimination is being alleged. You seem to lean—in close cases, you lean to the state versus the individual. Now, again, a lot of constitutional scholars would argue that is perfectly correct.

All I am suggesting is if I am right—and we will get a chance to do this again—if I am right, that would be a change that will occur, more than subtle, on the bench, on this Court, on a closely divided Court, which would take it in a direction that I am not as comfortable with as others may be.

But at any rate, you have been very gracious. I appreciate you being responsive, and I thank the Chair. And I want to note for maybe the first time in history, Biden is 40 seconds under his time.

[Laughter.]

Chairman SPECTER. Thank you very much, Senator Biden. It is greatly appreciated.

We are going to stay in session for just ten more minutes and call now on Senator KYL.

Senator KYL. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Chairman, let me begin by just asking the witness if you would like to comment again on the unitary Executive. I have this specifically in mind because while I think I understood your explanation of it, Senator Biden just referred to it and I thought maybe it would be useful to draw the distinction that I heard you draw with respect to your discussion of the unitary Executive power, if you could do that, please.

Judge ALITO. Yes, certainly, Senator. As I understand the concept, it is the concept that the President is the head of the Executive branch. The Constitution says that the President is given the Executive power and the idea of the unitary Executive is that the President should be able to control the Executive branch, however big it is or however small it is, whether it is as small as it was when George Washington was President or whether it is as big as it is today or even bigger.

It has to do with control of whatever the Executive is doing. It doesn't have to do with the scope of Executive power. It does not have to do with whether the Executive power that the President is given includes a lot of unnamed powers or what is often called inherent power. So it is the issue—it is the difference between scope and control. And as I understand the idea of the unitary Executive, it goes just to the question of control. It doesn't go to the question of scope.

Senator KYL. Of who eventually has the last say about Executive power, which would be the President?

Judge ALITO. Right.

Senator KYL. OK, thank you. Now, I want to also ask you a question which was asked of Judge Bork in his confirmation hearing, and his answer, as I understand it, was not well accepted by some Members of the Senate, was expressed as one of the reasons for their opposition to him. So it is more than just a mundane question, although it is a simple question.

By accepting the President's nomination, you have obviously expressed a willingness to serve on the U.S. Supreme Court. So my question is why would you want to serve on the U.S. Supreme Court?

Judge ALITO. I think it is an opportunity for me to serve the country using whatever talent I have. I think that the courts have a very important role to play, but it is a limited role. So it is important for them to do a good job of doing what they are supposed to do, but also not to try to do somebody else's job.

And I think that this is an area for—this is a way in which I can make a contribution to the country and to society. I have tried to do that on the court of appeals and I would continue to do that if I am confirmed for the Supreme Court.

Senator KYL. Thank you. Now, let me ask you a question that I also asked now Chief Justice John Roberts, and it is obvious from my question that I do not support the use of foreign law as authority in United States court opinions.

I mentioned to him the 2005 case of Roper v. Simmons, in which the Supreme Court spent perhaps 20 percent of its legal analysis discussing the laws of Great Britain, Saudi Arabia, Yemen, Iran, Nigeria and China. And I reminded the Committee of Justice Breyer's 1999 dissent from denial of cert in Knight v. Florida, in which he relied on the legal opinions of Zimbabwe, India, Jamaica and Canada in arguing that a delay caused by a convicted murderer's repeated appeals, appeals brought by the convict, should be considered cruel and unusual punishment.

I expressed my view that reliance on foreign law is contrary to our constitutional traditions. It undermines democratic self-government and it is utterly impractical, given the diversity of legal viewpoints worldwide. And I would add that it is needlessly disrespectful of the American people, as seen through the widespread public criticism of the trend.

Now, with my cards on the table, I turn to you. What is the proper role, in your view, of foreign law in U.S. Supreme Court decisions, and when, if ever, is citation to or reliance on these foreign laws appropriate?

Judge ALITO. I don't think that foreign law is helpful in interpreting the Constitution. Our Constitution does two basic things. It sets out the structure of our Government and it protects fundamental rights. The structure of our Government is unique to our country, and so I don't think that looking to decisions of supreme courts of other countries or constitutional courts in other countries is very helpful in deciding questions relating to the structure of our Government.

As for the protection of individual rights, I think that we should look to our own Constitution and our own precedents. Our country has been the leader in protecting individual rights. If you look at what the world looked like at the time of the adoption of the Bill of Rights, there were not many that protected human—in fact, I don't think there were any that protected human rights the way our Bill of Rights did.

We have our own law, we have our own traditions, we have our own precedents, and we should look to that in interpreting our Constitution. There are other legal issues that come up in which I think it is legitimate to look to foreign law. For example, if a question comes up concerning the interpretation of a treaty that has been entered into by many countries, I don't see anything wrong with seeing the way the treaty has been interpreted in other countries. I wouldn't say that that is controlling, but it is something that is useful to look to.

In private litigation, it is often the case—I have had cases like this in which the rule of decision is based on foreign law. There may be a contract between parties and the parties will say this contract is to be governed by the laws of New Zealand or wherever. So, of course, there, you have to look to the law of New Zealand or whatever the country is.

So there are situations in litigation that come up in Federal court when it is legitimate to look to foreign law, but I don't think it is helpful in interpreting our Constitution.

Senator KYL. Thank you. Now, let me close with this question. In the Judiciary Committee's questionnaire to you, you were asked about your views of judicial activism, and as part of your answer you said something intriguing to me. You said some of the finest chapters in the history of the Federal courts have been written when Federal judges, despite resistance, have steadfastly enforced remedies for deeply rooted constitutional violations.

How does one determine that a constitutional violation is deeply rooted, and can you elaborate on what you meant by that and when Federal courts should be especially aggressive in their use of equitable powers?

Judge ALITO. Well, what I was referring to were the efforts of Federal judges, lower Federal court judges in the South during the days after the decision in Brown v. Board of Education to try to implement that historic decision, despite enormous public resistance at times. But they—this was an example of the Federal judiciary not swaying in the wind of public opinion. There was a lot of opposition and I am sure that it didn't make them popular.

I have read a number of books concerning the situation in which they found themselves, but on the whole they behaved—they did what a Federal judge is supposed to do, which is that they enforced the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States that, after a long delay, vindicated what the Equal Protection Clause of the 14th Amendment was supposed to mean, which was to guarantee equal rights to people of all races.

Senator KYL. Are there other examples that come to your mind of that same application of power? It seems counter intuitive, but when you think about it, it is absolutely essential for the courts sometimes to buck public opinion and enforce what may be considered unpopular laws.

Judge ALITO. Well, there were some examples cited earlier today when the courts said that the Executive had overstepped the bounds of its authority. The Youngstown Steel case was cited, and that is certainly an example where President Truman thought that it was necessary to seize the steel mills so as not to interfere with the war effort in Korea. But the Supreme Court said that this was an overstepping of the bounds of Executive authority.

There was a reference to United States v. Nixon where the Supreme Court said that the President of the United States had to comply with grand jury subpoena for documents and they stood up for what they understood the law to mean, despite the fact that there must have been great pressure against them in another direction. So when situations like that come up, it is the responsibility of the judiciary to hold fast.

Senator KYL. Mr. Chairman, since there are just about 30 seconds left here, rather than ask another question, let me just close with quoting three sentences from the letter sent by the American Bar Association to you dated January 9. I thought this was especially interesting in view of the subjects that they dealt with—the integrity of the nominee, as well as his abilities and character.

They said, “Fifty years ago, a Supreme Court Justice wrote of the traits of character necessary to serve well on the Supreme Court. He referred to the ability to put one’s passion behind one’s judgment instead of in front of it and to demonstrate what he called dominating humility. It is the belief of the Standing Committee that Judge Samuel Alito possesses those same qualities.”

I think that is quite a testament to your character and your integrity, and I am sure you appreciate the Bar Association reaching that conclusion.

Judge ALITO. Thank you very much, Senator.

Chairman SPECTER. We will now recess until 2:15, at which time Senator Kyl will be recognized for 20 minutes, which is the balance of his 30-minute first round.

Recess until 2:15.

[Whereupon, at 1:04 p.m., a luncheon recess was taken.]

[AFTERNOON SESSION 2:15 p.m.]

Chairman SPECTER. We will turn now to Senator Kyl, who has 20 more minutes on his first round of 30 minutes.

Senator Kyl?

Senator KYL. Thank you, Mr. Chairman. First let me ask unanimous consent to put three items in the record, one of these items related to—actually, two of them relate to the matter of the CAP that we have heard something about. I would like to enter into the record two letters by Democratic attorneys that make clear that Judge Alito has been extremely helpful in advancing the interest of women and minorities. One letter notes that as U.S. Attorney, he put women and minorities in supervisory positions. The other is from the President-elect of the National Bar Association for Women.

And also a Washington Post article from January 9th, in which criminal defense lawyer and Democrat, Alberto Rivas, who served in the U.S. Attorney’s Office when Judge Alito was in charge said, speaking of the judge, “While he opposed numeric hiring quotas, he took steps to diversify an office that had the reputation of something of a white boys’ club.

Mr. Chairman, I hope that this will help address what I think is almost getting to be a—

Chairman SPECTER. Without objection, they will be made a part of the record.

Senator KYL. Thank you. Secondly, there has been some discussion of this Knight-Ridder article that has, to be my understanding, been rather completely discredited, and I ask unanimous consent that the attached document analyzing that article be added to the record.

Chairman SPECTER. Without objection, it will be made a part of the record.

Senator KYL. Before the break, Senator Biden suggested that—at least I understood him to suggest that there was no reason to belong to this organization, CAP, in 1985 because ROTC was safely on campus at that time.

Judge, let me ask you a question. Do you know what year you joined the CAP?

Judge ALITO. I don't know, Senator. I tried to rack my memory about that, but as I said, if I had been active in my membership, I think I certainly would have remembered that, and if I had renewed the membership, I think I would remember that. So my best reconstruction of this is that it probably was sometime around the time when I wrote that statement.

Senator KYL. Long after you were gone from the school.

Judge ALITO. That's correct.

Senator KYL. In that event, Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to include in the record an article from the campus newspaper, the Princeton Packet, dated February 12th, 1985, which expressly explains that ROTC was a core motivation behind the CAP in 1985.

Chairman SPECTER. Without objection, it will be made a part of the record.

Senator KYL. Thank you. Mr. Chairman, I noted with interest a comment that Senator Durbin made in his opening statement because it referred to a good friend and former colleague of ours, Senator Simon, who put forth a pretty good test about courts. He said that the real test is, is the Court restricting freedom or expanding it? I thought about that because it seems to me that so many of these cases about expanding freedom or restricting it are cases that boil down to the eye of the beholder.

I specifically thought about the Ninth Circuit case, because my State is from the Ninth Circuit, outlawing "under God" in the Pledge of Allegiance, saying that that is unconstitutional. I checked, according to the one survey that I had access to, 93 percent of the American people support the right to say "under God" in the Pledge of Allegiance. I know that the plaintiff in the case, Michael Newdow, thought that he was advancing his freedom or his daughter's freedom in successfully getting the Court to strike it down, but it seems to me that the majority of the people are having their freedom restricted in such a case.

And I certainly will not ask you because that case could well come before the Court again. I would not ask you how you would rule on it. But as a general proposition, this matter of restricting freedom, is it not the case that in many situations you have two competing types of freedom or liberty involved and it is a question of interpreting the Constitution rather than specifically setting out to advance one sort of freedom as opposed to another?

Judge ALITO. I think that's exactly right, Senator. Often there are conflicting freedoms and that makes the case difficult.

Senator KYL. Let me ask you too, there was a concern expressed by Senator Biden that the big factor in your nomination in his view was the fact that you would be replacing Justice Sandra O'Connor, and that that might mean that you would change the direction of the Court. That is the concern expressed anyway. As has been famously said, I know Justice O'Connor. I have been a friend of hers for at least 30 years, and I do not think she is any kind of a liberal member of the Court. She might properly be called moderately conservative. I am not sure how she would characterize herself. But I noted that of the 109 Justices to sit on the Supreme Court, nearly half, 46 to be exact, have replaced judges appointed by another political party, so it is not at all uncommon, indeed, it is almost half the situations in which a different party nominates the Justice replacing a sitting Justice, and one might expect, therefore, some difference.

But I checked the record because this had been brought up by Senator Brownback yesterday. I found in the nomination of Justice Ginsburg and the confirmation hearings there, she replaced Justice White, who I think rightly has been called a centrist on the Court, certainly not a liberal, and yet I saw not one expression of concern by any Senator, Democrat or Republican, that Justice Ginsburg might be ruling quite a bit differently than Justice White in decisions in the Court.

So it seems to me that that is not a test that is rightly applied. That is a results-oriented test, exactly the same kind of thing that you have said that judges should not do when they approach cases.

Let me get to a point that Senator Kennedy made. He said that you have been overly deferential to Executive power, and criticized what he called—and I think I have this quotation exactly—“your almost total disregard of the impact of these powers on the rights of individuals.” I would like to know what your response is to that charge and whether you can cite some specific cases that would refute what he said.

Judge ALITO. Certainly, Senator. I have tried to decide every case on its own merits, and sometimes that means siding with the Government, and sometimes it means siding with the party who’s claiming a violation of rights, and I do it on an individual basis. Cases that show that I do that are cases like United States v. Kithcart, which was a case in which an African-American man had been stopped by police officers because he was—because there had been a description of some robbery suspects, and they had been described as—the perpetrator was described as a black man in a black car, and Mr. Kithcart was a black man in a black car. And they thought that was sufficient to stop the car, and I wrote an opinion saying that that was insufficient, and that was basically racial profiling and was not permitted.

Another example is Bolden v. Southeastern Pennsylvania Transportation Authority, which had to do with a drug test, and I found that the test there constituted a search and a seizure and would be a violation absent consent on the part of the party who was searched. There have been a number of criminal cases in which I’ve sided with the person claiming a violation of rights. Carpenter v. Vaughn was a case in which I wrote an opinion reversing a death—I joined an opinion reversing a death penalty. The Bronshtein case was another case that came up fairly recently in which I joined an opinion reversing a death penalty. There have been quite a few cases of this nature, Senator.

Senator KYL. I noted a tax case too, or a case involving tax evasion, Leveto v. Lapina. Do you remember that 2001 case?

Judge ALITO. I do. That was the case in which there was a search of a—I believe it was the office of a veterinarian, and in a way that is a similar case to the Mellott case that I was discussing earlier, although in Mellott I thought that the search was carried out properly. In the Leveto case, on the facts of that case, I thought the search was not carried out properly, that the officers violated the Fourth Amendment in the way they went about carrying out that search. They forced the occupants of these premises to remain on the premises for a very extended period of time while the search was being conducted, and violated their Fourth Amendment rights, and that's what I said in the opinion.

Senator KYL. Do you have an idea of how many cases that have gone to decision that you have participated in on your 15 years as a Circuit Court Judge?

Judge ALITO. I think it's well over 4,000 on the merits.

Senator KYL. I suspect that of those 4,000 cases there might be one or two that I would disagree with your decisions on, maybe even more than that. But the point here is there are numerous cases in which you have found that the Government acted improperly in criminal law context, in warrant context, in discrimination context, in other cases in which you have found either that the Government acted properly, or that at a minimum, Government officials were entitled to some immunity with respect to being privately sued; is that correct?

Judge ALITO. That's correct, Senator.

Senator KYL. Let me also address this question of discrimination, especially racial discrimination. This is a matter that was discussed in some prior questioning. Specifically, in Senator Biden's questions, it dealt with the Sheridan case in which you were the sole dissenter. In the subsequent U.S. Supreme Court case, the Reeves decision, my understanding from your answer is that the Supreme Court addressed the same issue of law that you and your colleagues had disagreed about, and that the U.S. Supreme Court voted unanimously, and in an opinion written by Justice O'Connor, that the test that you used in the Sheridan case was the correct test to use; is that correct?

Judge ALITO. Yes, Senator, that is correct.

Senator KYL. Now, there are some other cases involving employees claiming racial discrimination that I have looked at, and one of the Senators seemed to suggest in a comment that he made that you had never written opinions or decided cases for a black plaintiff. Is that a fair statement?

Judge ALITO. No, it's not accurate.

Senator KYL. Do you recall cases in which you upheld the discrimination claims of racial minorities?

Judge ALITO. There was the case of Goosby v. Johnson & Johnson, and that case could be considered together with the Bray case that I was discussing before the break. Those were both cases in which my colleague, Judge McKee wrote the opinion, and in the Goosby case I agreed with him. It was a similar case, but it was a case where I thought the facts fell on the other side of the line.

There was a case called Smith v. Davis, which was another case where I joined an opinion upholding the claim of an African-American who was claiming racial discrimination. The Robinson case involved claims of race and gender discrimination, as I recall. There are a number of cases in the criminal law context. I just mentioned the Kithcart case. There was the Brinson case. There was Williams v. Price. There have been many cases involving other forms of discrimination, age discrimination, the Showalter case; disability case, the Mondzelewski case; the case of Shapiro v. Lakewood Township. There was Zubi v. AT&T, which was a case involving the statute of limitations for a claim of racial discrimination.

Senator KYL. And you were the lone dissenter in that case, is that correct?

Judge ALITO. I was the dissenter in that case.

Senator KYL. And your position was what?

Judge ALITO. My position was that—the majority’s position was that the claim had to be thrown out because the statute of limitations had been violated, and my position was that the claim should be allowed to go forward because the statute of limitations was longer than the majority had recognized. And that case—that issue later went to the Supreme Court in a case called Jones v. Donnelley and the Supreme Court agreed with my position, that the longer statute of limitations applied.

Senator KYL. I note there is another case involving an African-American woman who claimed that her coworkers had made racial and sexual slurs against her, denied her training opportunities and so on, and you ruled that she was entitled to $124,000 in damages and attorneys’ fees, a case called Reynolds v. USX Corporation. Do you remember that case?

Judge ALITO. That’s right, Senator.

Senator KYL. So the bottom line is there are numerous cases in which you have ruled in favor of minorities, in particular, African-Americans in discrimination situations, and also where you have dissented in a situation which your position was to support the claim of discrimination, and that it would be inaccurate to say that you have not taken that position in the 4,000 plus cases that you have decided; is that correct?

Judge ALITO. That’s certainly correct, Senator.

Senator KYL. There has been a lot of talk about precedent and stare decisis. It is certainly something that we lawyers are familiar with. We regard it as a key principle in deciding cases. There was a case that was mentioned by a couple of my Democratic colleagues that I am sure will be discussed further, but I thought I would give you an opportunity to talk about it because it certainly seemed to me to be a case in which you were very—that you were trying to apply a Supreme Court precedent, the precedent being the Lopez v. United States case, a case, by the way, which I note that is one of those decisions that Justice O’Connor was in the majority, a 5–4 decision, which her position could be characterized as the swing vote.

Now you, in United States v. Rybar, agreed with Justice O’Connor and the way that the law should be applied relative to intrastate possession of a weapon. The Lopez case dealt with a congressional Act that said that weapons should not be possessed near schools. The Court struck that down, saying that that went beyond the Commerce Clause capability of commerce to legislate in matters of interstate commerce. In Rybar, what was the issue? You dissented.

By the way, one of the reasons why this case is interesting to me is because the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals, again, which is my circuit, has subsequently ruled—and this is not a conservative court in most people’s estimation—recently agreed with your dissent in a case called U.S. v. Stewart, a 2003 case, in which the Court overturned the defendant’s conviction under the very same statute, holding that the law exceeded Congress’s commerce powers.

It seems to me that it would be hard to argue that your position is per se unreasonable, but could you describe it in your own words?

Judge ALITO. My position in Rybar was really a very modest position, and it did not go to the question of whether Congress can regulate the possession of machine guns. In fact, I explained in the opinion that it would be easy for Congress to do that in a couple of ways that differed from the way in which it was done in Rybar.

The statute in Rybar was very similar to the statute that was at issue in Lopez. In fact, I think they are the only two Federal firearm statutes that have been cast in that mold. They simply prohibited the possession of firearms without either congressional findings concerning the effect of the activity on interstate commerce, or a jurisdictional element. And I knew from my experience as a Federal prosecutor that most of the Federal firearms statutes have a jurisdictional element right in the statute. What that means is that when the prosecutor presents the case in court, the statute that is used most frequently is the statute that makes it a crime for someone who’s been convicted of a felony to possess a firearm.

And in that case, when the prosecutor presents the case in court, the prosecutor has to show that the defendant has been convicted of a felony, and that the firearm in question had some connection with interstate commerce.

Under Supreme Court precedent, a case called Scarborough, all that’s necessary is to show that the firearm, at some point in its history, passed an interstate or foreign commerce, was manufactured in one State and then later turned up in another State, or manufactured in a foreign country and brought to the United States.

From my experience, this was never a practical problem, and this was how all the Federal firearms statutes had been framed. But for whatever reasons, the statute in Lopez and the statute in Rybar were lacking that jurisdictional element. So an easy way in would Congress could regulate the possession of a machine gun would be to insert a jurisdictional element. And as I pointed out, as I just pointed out, in my experience as the U.S. Attorney in New Jersey, that was never a practical problem.

The Supreme Court in Lopez said that there were three reasons why there was a problem with the statute there, and that case had been decided just the year before. And it was my obligation as a lower-court judge to follow it. The first was that it involved what the Court characterized as the noncommercial activity, and that was the possession of a firearm. And, of course, that was exactly the same activity that was at issue in Rybar. The second was the absence of a jurisdictional element, and there was no jurisdictional element in either statute. And the third was the absence of a congressional finding connecting the activity that was being regulated with interstate commerce. And I pointed out in my opinion that I would have viewed the Rybar case very differently if there had been a congressional finding, or if the Justice Department, in presenting its argument to us, had been able to point to anything that showed that there was a substantial effect on interstate commerce, which is what the Supreme Court says is required.

Senator KYL. So this is one of those situations in which, if the result was not what was intended, you were willing to point out in your decision what Congress could relatively easily have done to get the result that it appeared that Congress wanted to achieve?

Judge ALITO. That's exactly correct.

Senator KYL. Thank you.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Chairman SPECTER. Thank you very much, Senator Kyl.

Senator KOHL?

Senator KOHL. Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman.

Judge Alito, we heard a lot of discussion yesterday about the proper role of the judge in our system. Some said that a judge should favor neither the "big guy or the little guy, but simply apply the law and not make the law." Based on what you said yesterday, I believe that you would agree generally with this characterization.

However, to me it is not quite so simple. Just as no two umpires call the same game exactly, no two judges see a case in exactly the same way. Laws and the Constitution are often ambiguous and capable of many interpretations. Those interpretations are the result of judges with different judicial philosophies. Some judges have a more liberal judicial philosophy, while others are more conservative, and we are here trying to figure out what your judicial philosophy is. That is probably the principal point of this hearing.

If the law were so simple, we would not have as many 5-4 decisions. It seems to me that many of the most fundamental protections of civil rights and civil liberties that we take for granted today, things such as school integration, the principle of one person/one vote, the principle that the accused have a right to a lawyer in criminal cases, and the right of contraception, just to name a few, have come when judges have been willing to look beyond rigid legal doctrines that prevailed at the times of those rulings. The neutral approach, that of the judge just applying the law, is very often inadequate to ensure social progress, right historic wrongs, and protect civil liberties so essential to our democracy.

So isn't it true, Judge Alito, that a neutral judge would never have reached these conclusions? In fact, for decades, courts did not reach these conclusions. So would you agree that these cases were rightly decided, No. 1, and required, No. 2, that judges apply a more expansive, imaginative view of the Constitution?

Judge ALITO. I think that the Constitution contains both some very specific provisions, and there the job of understanding what the provision means and applying it to new factual situations that come up is relatively easy. The Constitution sets age limits, for example, for people who want to hold various Federal offices, and there can't be much debate about what that means or how it applies. But it also contains some broad principles—no unreasonable searches and seizures, the guarantee that nobody will be deprived of life, liberty, or property without due process of law, equal protection of the laws. And in those instances, it is the job of the judiciary to try to understand the principle and apply it to the new situations that come before the judiciary.

I think the judiciary has to do that in a neutral fashion. I think judges have to be wary about substituting their own preferences, their own policy judgments for those that are in the Constitution. They have to identify the principle that is to be applied under these broader provisions of the Constitution and apply it, but I don't see that as being the same thing as the judge's injecting his or her policy views or preferences or ideas about the direction in which the society should be moving into the decisionmaking process.

Senator KOHL. These decisions to which I just referred push society into new directions, and they came about, didn't they, as a result of the Supreme Court's willingness to look at the Constitution in perhaps a different way, in a new way, and take a new approach and a new avenue, which is not entirely consistent with a neutral judge simply applying the law. The law is the law. It is not hard to find that out. As you somewhat suggested, if you are an umpire, a ball is a ball, a strike is a strike. I am suggesting that it is—and I think I would like to hope you would agree. It is somewhat, if not a lot more complex and sophisticated. If it weren't true, we could have a lot of views here today.

I think you are unique in many ways, and part of that is your complexity, your sophistication, your ability to look at the Constitution and, if necessary, see new meanings that weren't seen there before. Isn't that true?

Judge ALITO. Well, Senator, I would never say that it is an easy process. There are some easy cases, but there are a lot of very difficult cases. And once you have identified the principle, the job of applying it to particular cases is often not easy at all. But what the judge has to do is make sure that the judge is being true to the principle that is expressed in the Constitution and not to the judge's principle, not to some idea that the judge has. And sometimes this results in ground-breaking decisions. Sometimes that is because new issues come up. Sometimes it is because the principle that is embodied in a constitutional provision has long been neglected.

That was certainly true with respect to the Equal Protection Clause. There was a long period between Plessy v. Ferguson and Brown v. Board of Education when the true meaning of the Equal Protection Clause was not recognized in the decisions of the Supreme Court, and when Brown was finally decided, that was not an instance of the Court changing the meaning of the Equal Protection Clause. It was an instance of the Court righting an incorrect interpretation that had prevailed for a long period of time.

Senator KOHL. Judge Alito, one of the ways you get at a person's judicial philosophy is to look at the people whom they admire. In an interview that you gave in 1988, you were asked about your thoughts about Judge Robert Bork's nomination, and you said, and I quote, "Judge Bork was one of the most outstanding nominees of this century."

Many Americans do not share Judge Bork's narrow views about the Constitution, views that would undermine many of the rights that we now take for granted, Judge Alito. Judge Bork thought that Americans had no constitutional right to use contraception, saying, and I quote, "The right to procreate is not guaranteed explicitly or implicitly by the Constitution."

Judge Bork thought minorities had no constitutional right to have their votes counted equally, saying that in guaranteeing one man/one vote, the Court "stepped beyond its boundaries as an original matter."

In 1981, Judge Bork called Roe v. Wade "an unconstitutional decision, serious and wholly unjustifiable usurpation of State legislative authority."

In addition, he had an unreasonably broad view of Executive power, claiming that a law requiring the President to obtain an order from a court before conducting surveillance in the United States and against U.S. citizens for foreign intelligence purposes was "a thoroughly bad idea, and almost certainly unconstitutional."

Can we assume from your admiration of Judge Bork that you agree with some of these statements or at least that you support some of these beliefs if you were sitting on the Supreme Court? Frankly, it is curious to me that someone like yourself would consider someone with his views to be "one of the most outstanding nominees of this century."

Judge ALITO. Senator, when I made that statement in 1988, I was an appointee in the Reagan administration, and Judge Bork had been a nominee of the administration, and I had been a supporter of the nomination. And I don't think the statement goes beyond that.

There are issues with respect to which I probably agree with Judge Bork, and there are a number of issues on which I disagree with him. And most of the things that you just mentioned are points on which I would disagree with him. I expressed my view about Griswold earlier this morning. On the issue of reapportionment, as I sit here today in 2006—and I think that is what is most relevant—I think that the principle of one person/one vote is a fundamental part of our constitutional law. And I think it would be—I don't see any reason why it should be re-examined, and I don't know that anybody is asking for that to be done. Every legislative district in the country and every congressional district in the country has been reapportioned, has been redistricted numerous times in reliance on the principle of one person/one vote. And the old ways of organizing State legislatures have long been forgotten. So I think that is very well settled now in the constitutional law of our country.

Under the Fourth Amendment, I have no question about the decision in United States v. United States District Court, which held—and I think that is what you were referring to, which held that a warrant is required for domestic security surveillance, and that was the decision that led to the enactment of the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act.

Senator KOHL. Of course. I was only referring to or trying to refer to your quote with respect to him and the positions he held, which I suggested were at variance with the positions I thought you held, which you are affirming here in your answer. So that the quote you are pointing out was something you made as an employee of the Reagan administration?

Judge ALITO. I was, and that was in—I saw that quoted in the paper yesterday. I think that was in 19—

Senator KOHL. Not necessarily expressing your own real views?

Judge ALITO. I was a supporter of the nominee of the administration, and he was the nominee of the administration. He was and is an accomplished scholar. He had contributed a great deal to constitutional debate with his writings. But I don't agree with him on a number of issues, and I mentioned—you hit some of the issues on which I would definitely disagree with him.

Senator KOHL. Very good.

Judge Alito, in a document appended to your job applications, you also wrote that, "I disagree strenuously with the usurpation by the judiciary of decisionmaking authority that should be exercised by branches of Government responsible to the electorate." The statement is especially troubling given that elsewhere in this application you wrote, "I developed a deep interest in constitutional law motivated in large part by disagreement with Warren Court decisions, particularly in the areas of criminal procedure, Establishment Clause, and reapportionment."

Judge Alito, what Warren Court cases were you specifically talking about—Miranda, one person/one vote, any of the privacy decisions? What in particular were you talking about?

Judge ALITO. Well, Senator, I am happy to address that. The statement was made in that 1985 form, and, of course, that was written 20 years ago. And in the form, what I was doing was sort of outlining the development of my thinking about constitutional law, and I went so far as to go back to my college days, which were before, of course, I had even attended law school, much less practiced law or served as a judge.

I mentioned some of the leading areas that were covered by decisions of the Warren Court, and the decisions of the Warren Court really stimulated my interest in constitutional law. And I mentioned a book that had been published the time, Alexander Bickel's book "The Supreme Court and the Idea of Progress," which was probably the first book about what you might call constitutional theory that I had read. And he was someone who I think most people would describe as a liberal, but he was a critic of the Warren Court for a number of reasons. And he was a great proponent of judicial self-restraint, and that was the main point that I took from my pre-law school study of the Warren Court.

I spoke a bit about the reapportionment decisions. I don't believe that I—in fact, I am quite sure I never was opposed to the one person/one vote concept. I do recall quite clearly that my father's work at the time working for the New Jersey Legislature and working on reapportionment had brought to my attention the question of just how far that principle of one person/one vote had to be taken in drawing legislative districts.

The New Jersey Legislature and many other legislatures at the time were trying to redraw their districts in accordance with Reynolds v. Sims, which set out the one person/one vote principle. But it wasn't clear how exactly equal the districts had to be in population. And in some of the late Warren Court decisions, the Court seemed to suggest—did say so for congressional districts that they had to be almost exactly equal in population. And this idea, if applied to the legislatures and to the New Jersey legislative plan, would have wiped the plan out because there were population deviations which, although not very large, were much larger than the Court had said they were going to tolerate in the case of congressional districts. And I do remember that quite specifically.

Professor Bickel made the argument that the Court had taken the one person/one vote principle too far, and I know my father had said that although he thought it was a good idea, the idea of trying to get the districts to be exactly equal in population at the expense of looking at other factors, such as the shape of the district and respecting county lines or municipal lines, was a bad idea.

Senator KOHL. Judge Alito, you stated in that same job application that one element of the conservative philosophy that you believe “very strongly” was the “legitimacy of a government role in protecting traditional values.” What traditional values were you referring to? And who decides what is a “traditional value”?

Judge ALITO. Well, again, I’m trying to remember what I thought about that 20 years ago, and I’m trying to reconstruct it.

I think a traditional value that I probably had in mind was the ability to live in peace and safety in your neighborhood, and that was a big issue during the time of the Warren Court, and it was still a big issue in 1985 when I wrote that statement because that was a time of very high crime rates. I think that is a traditional value.

I think the ability of people to raise a family and raise their children in accordance with their own beliefs is a traditional value. I think the ability to raise a family, raise children in a way that they are not only subjected to—they are spared physical threats but also psychological threats that can come from elements in the atmosphere is a traditional value. I think that the ability to practice your own conscience is a traditional value.

That is the best I can reconstruct it now, thinking back to 1985.

Senator KOHL. Very good. Judge Alito, in Casey you argued that the requirement that a woman notify her husband did not impose an undue burden upon a woman. You reasoned in part that the number of married women who would seek an abortion without notifying their husbands would be rather small. In other words, only some women would be affected. The majority in that case disagreed with you and stated, “Whether the adversely affected group is but a small fraction of the universe, a pregnant woman desiring an abortion seems to us irrelevant to the issue.”

This disagreement begs the question. Is a constitutional right any less of a right if only one person suffers a violation? Or should greater value be placed on that right if a larger number of people had that right violated?

Judge ALITO. Trying to apply the undue burden test at that time to the provisions of the Pennsylvania statute that were before the court in Casey was extremely difficult, and I can really remember wrestling with the problem and I took it very seriously and I mentioned that in my opinion and it presented some really difficult issues. Part of the problem was that the law just was not very clear at that time.

The undue burden standard had been articulated by Justice O'Connor in several of her own opinions and there were just a few hints in those opinions about what she meant by it. But what she said was that an undue burden consisted of an absolute obstacle or an extreme burden. Those may not be exact quotes, but they're pretty close. And she did say that it was insufficient to show simply that a regulation of abortion would inhibit some women from going forward and having an abortion. Those were the—that was the information that was available in her opinions to try to understand what this test meant.

And so then the question became, how do you apply that to the numerous provisions of the Pennsylvania statute that were before us, and it was a difficult task. The plaintiffs argued that all the provisions constituted an undue burden, and when the case went to the Supreme Court, Justice Stevens agreed with that. He said they all were an undue burden. Things like a 24-hour waiting period, that was an undue burden because it would inhibit some women from having an abortion. An informed consent provision, Justice Stevens thought and plaintiffs argued that would be an undue burden.

The majority on my panel and the joint opinion on the Supreme Court found that most of the provisions of the statute did not amount to an undue burden, the 24-hour waiting period, the informed consent provision, and all of them. We disagreed on only one, and that was the provision regarding spousal notification with a safety valve provision there that no sort of notification was needed if the woman thought that providing the notification would present a threat of physical injury to her. And I wrestled with that issue, but based on the information that I had from Justice O'Connor's opinions, it seemed to me that this was not what she had in mind. Now, that turned out not to be a correct prediction about how she herself would apply the undue burden standard to that statutory provision, but that was the best I could do under the circumstances.

Senator KOHL. Judge Alito, in your 1985 job application memo again, you identified reapportionment as one of the three issued decided by the Warren Court with which you disagreed. You even stated that your disagreement was so strong that it was one of the reasons that you became a lawyer. The Supreme Court's Warren Court decisions on this topic, of course, stood for the fundamental principle of one person/one vote, meaning as a matter of constitutional law that each person's vote must count equally and each electoral district must have the same population.

These decisions were more than 20 years old by the time of your 1985 job application and these decisions stand for a fundamental principle of democracy. By 1985, virtually no serious scholar or constitutional lawyer could be found to disagree with the principle that each person's vote should count equally. So what was your disagreement with the Warren Court's decisions on this issue, Judge Alito, in 1985? Isn't one person/one vote a basic principle of democracy? Wasn't it in 1985?

Judge ALITO. Senator, I don't believe that I disagreed with the principle of one person/one vote in 1985. I was talking about how I got interested in constitutional law back in college and I was certainly stimulated at that time by my consideration of the issue of one person/one vote. But the issue that troubled me toward the end of the Warren Court, and this was during the time when I was in college, was the question of how far this principle went when it came to drawing legislative districts. Did they have to be almost exactly equal in population in accordance with the last census, or were larger population variations permitted?

In a case called Kirkpatrick v. Preisler and another one called Wells v. Rockefeller that were decided around 1969, which was right at the end of Chief Justice Warren's tenure on the Supreme Court, the Court held that in the case of congressional districts, they had to be almost exactly equal in population, and as I said, my father was deeply involved in this. When the issue came up again in the context of congressional districting in Carcher v. Daggett, which was around 1985, that was the case where he had been an expert witness and the Court struck down the New Jersey congressional districting plan even though the population variations were under 1 percent. Now, the Court also later said that when you're talking about legislative districts, considerably larger deviations are allowed and you can take into account municipal lines and county lines and things of that nature.

But as of the time when I was in college, as in the time of the two cases that I mentioned, it seemed likely—a lot of people thought, and certainly I as a college student thought that the rule was going to be the same for congressional districts as it was for legislative districts and that seemed to say that the districts would have to be almost exactly equal in population based on the last census.

Now, a problem with that is that while the census is very accurate, it's not perfect and it doesn't stay accurate throughout the 10-year period from census to census. People move around. The population grows. The population diminishes in certain areas. So it didn't seem to make a whole lot of sense, let's say in the middle of a decade, to insist on absolute population equality based on the last previous census when everybody knew that the census figures had changed, and in doing that, in insisting on practically equal population districts, districts of almost exactly equal population, you disregard municipal lines, you disregard county lines. People don't know which district they're going to be voting in. You introduce the possibility of other factors figuring into the districting plan.

Senator KOHL. OK. Family and Medical Leave Act, Judge Alito. In my view, one of the most important pieces of social legislation enacted in the last two decades was the Family and Medical Leave Act in 1993. Among other things, it gives employees the right to take up to 12 weeks of unpaid leave to care for a newborn child or an ill parent or a spouse. The statute also gives an employee the right to sue his or her employer for damages if the employer violates the employee's rights under this law.

I was disturbed to learn that in the Chittister case, Judge Alito, your ruling denied a State employee the ability to sue his employer for money damages. Your reasoning was directly repudiated by the 2003 Supreme Court decision of Nevada Department of Human Resources v. Hibbs. In that case, the Supreme Court, in a decision written by Chief Justice Rehnquist, held that the Family and Medical Leave Act was congruent and proportional to Congress's interest in preventing discrimination based on gender, and therefore States could be sued for money damages under the law.

So we are concerned that your view shows a lack of understanding of the problems of ordinary working Americans and the right of women to be free of discrimination in the workplace. Isn't it true that under your view, potentially millions of working Americans would not get the protections that they rely on under the Family and Medical Leave Act? Judge Alito?

Judge ALITO. Well, Senator, I'm happy to address that because I think there's been some confusion about what the issue was in Chittister and how it relates to the Supreme Court's decision in Nevada v. Hibbs, and they're actually two entirely different provisions of the Family and Medical Leave Act.

The provision that was at issue in my case was not the one in Hibbs and at last count, seven circuits had decided that issue, the issue that was before my court in Chittister, exactly the same way we did. I counted up the number of Court of Appeals judges who endorsed that position and it's over 20. I think it's 22. And they include some of the most distinguished Court of Appeals judges in the country and judges who have been appointed by Presidents of both parties.

The issue in Hibbs had to do with a provision of the Family and Medical Leave Act that requires employers to provide employees with a certain amount of leave for the purpose of taking care of another family member. The provision—and that was the one that the Supreme Court addressed in the Hibbs case. The provision in the Chittister case is a provision that requires employers to give employees a certain amount of leave for personal illness. The standard that has to be applied here is the one the Supreme Court has set out, and it's a controversial standard, but as a lower court judge, it's the one I had to apply, and that was whether what was done was congruent and proportional to constitutional violations.

What the Court said in Hibbs was that there was a record of constitutional violations, and remember, here we're talking about the provision that has to do with leave to take care of another person, and what they said was that there were many instances in which employers, State employers, had plans that provided more leave for that purpose for women than for men and the reason was because of the stereotype that if somebody in the family got sick, it would be the woman, not a man, who would have to take off from work to take care of that person.

But the provision that was at issue in Chittister had to do with leave for one's own personal illness and there was no record that employers give—and a man was subjected to this, and there was no record that State employers, or for that matter any other employers, had plans that provided more sick leave for men than for women or that any stereotypes were involved in the situation. And so that was why I concluded, and the unanimous panel that I sat on concluded, and all of these seven other circuits concluded that that provision did not satisfy the standard that the Supreme Court had established.

Senator KOHL. A last question. Judge Alito, I understand that you're reluctant to comment on cases that you would likely have coming before you in the future, but I'd like to ask you a question about a case that the Supreme Court certainly will never see again, the 2000 Presidential election contest between President Bush and Vice President Gore. Many commentators see the Bush v. Gore decision as an example of judicial activism, an example of the judiciary improperly injecting itself into a political dispute. Indeed, it appears to many of us who have looked at your record that Bush v. Gore seems contrary to so many of the principles that you stand for, that the President has said you stand for when making your nomination in talking about judicial restraint, not legislating from the bench and, of course, respecting the rights of the States.

So, Judge Alito, I'd like to ask you, was the Supreme Court correct to take this case in the first place?

Judge ALITO. Well, Senator, I think you're probably right and I hope you're right that that sort of issue doesn't come before the Supreme Court again. Some of the—the Equal Protection ground that the majority relied on in Bush v. Gore does involve principles that could come up in future elections and in future cases.

But as to that particular case, my answer has to be, I really don't know. I have not had the opportunity—I have not studied it in the way I would study a case that comes before me as a judge and I would have to go through the whole judicial process—

Senator KOHL. That was a huge, huge case and I would like to hope, and I would bet, that you thought about it an awful lot because you are who you are. And I would like for you to give an opinion from the convictions of your heart, as a person who's very restrained with respect to judicial activism, this being a case of extreme judicial activism. Were they correct in taking this case, in your opinion?

Judge ALITO. Well, there's the issue of whether they should have taken it and the issue of how it should be decided, and Senator, my honest answer is I have not studied it in the way I would study the issue if it were to come before me as a judge and that would require putting out of my mind any personal thoughts that I had on the matter and thinking about the—listening to all the arguments and reading the briefs and thinking about it in the way that I do when I decide legal issues that are before me as a judge. That's the only—that's the best answer I can give you to that question. It was obviously a very important and difficult and controversial case, and in a situation like that, the obligation of a judge all the more is to be restrained and not to—is to go through the judicial decisionmaking process, and only at the end of that reach a conclusion about the issue.

Senator KOHL. Thank you, Judge. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Chairman SPECTER. Thank you, Senator Kohl.

Senator DeWine?

Senator DEWINE. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Judge, you have almost turned the corner here, so that's the good news. The bad news is, this is just the first round.

[Laughter.]

Senator DEWINE. Let me respond, if I could, Judge, to three things that I've heard so far during these hearings that have, frankly, disturbed me. First, I am bothered by what I consider to be distortions of your record, really in an effort to make you look like something that you are not.

I just read a very interesting article by Stuart Taylor from the National Journal about this issue, and I would like, Mr. Chairman, to make this a part of the record, this article, if I could.

Chairman SPECTER. Without objection.

Senator DEWINE. Mr. Taylor describes the opinions of a, quote, "right-wing jurist." This judge has consistently ruled against minorities, striking down affirmative action programs, making it harder for victims of race and gender discrimination to vindicate their rights.

Chairman SPECTER. Senator DeWine, your unanimous consent request is granted.

Senator DEWINE. Thank you, sir. This judge has struck down a Federal law to protect kids from guns, ruled that State and local governments cannot be sued under the Fair Labor Standards Act, leaving 4.7 million workers without a remedy in court. This judge has immunized the President from suit, even when he illegally wiretaps political opponents. This judge approved a police officer's fatal shooting in the back of an unarmed 15-year-old African-American boy. Finally, this judge has called abortion, and I quote, "morally repugnant" and declared Roe v. Wade to be on, quote, "on a collision course with itself."

Based on such a record, no right-thinking Democrat could ever support such a judge. But as Taylor tells us, this judge is none other than Sandra Day O'Connor, the same Sandra Day O'Connor who has been praised for the past few days as a model of moderation.

Judge, the point Mr. Taylor made is clear. You can distort and misrepresent anyone's record, and that, I believe, unfortunately, is what some of your opponents are doing to you. It is unfair, it is inaccurate, and it is just flat-out wrong.

Second, I would like to respond to the allegation that you have not written an opinion in favor of plaintiff alleging race discrimination on the job. You did a very good job a moment ago when Senator Kyl was talking to you in describing some of these cases. I think the facts of these cases are what is particularly interesting. In Reynolds v. USX Corporation, you ruled that an African-American woman whose coworkers and supervisors regularly made racial and sexual slurs against her and denied her training opportunities was, in fact, entitled to $124,000 in damages and in attorney fees.

In Zubi v. AT&T Corporation, you dissented. You dissented, arguing against a stringent limitations period which prevented a civil rights plaintiff from filing a claim, and your position was vindicated. You were vindicated by the United States Supreme Court unanimously a few years later.

In Smith v. Davis, you disagreed with the district court, which had dismissed an African-American employee's claim of discrimination. Instead, you found that there was evidence to support a finding that the employer's stated reasons for firing the plaintiff were not genuine.

In Goosby v. Johnson & Johnson, you ruled that the plaintiff, an African-American woman, was entitled to a trial under claims of employment discrimination because you found that there was evidence that the employer was treating white male employees differently than it was treating the plaintiff. There are more cases, as you have testified to, but I think we make the point.

We would all be better off and this process, Mr. Chairman, would be better off and would be more instructive if we could evaluate your nomination, Judge, based on your full and complete record.

Finally, let me add my two cents on this Vanguard issue. I am going to take it from a little different perspective than has been done so far. To me, this is really a non-issue. In the so-called Vanguard lawsuit, two people were in a financial dispute. The plaintiff sued to force the defendant to turn over $170,000 held by him in some Vanguard accounts. The defendant went to court to prevent Vanguard from turning over the money.

Now, while Vanguard was technically part of the suit and was technically a defendant, it wasn't really a defendant in any sense of the term that would be used by the public or understood by the public. It was not accused of any wrongdoing, it didn't stand to lose anything.

Really, the only question was whether Vanguard would transfer some of the funds it held for one person over to another. It was simply being asked, who do I pay the money to, who do I give the money to. That is all Vanguard was being asked to do, so nothing in the classic sense of being a defendant. Nothing about this case could realistically have affected Vanguard as a company, let alone affected your mutual fund. It is a joke, it is ridiculous, it is absurd, and everybody on this panel knows that.

Now, for the sake of the process, I hope we can put these issues behind us. This hearing is really our opportunity to fully and fairly evaluate your qualifications for the High Court and to get some idea about how you think as a judge, how you process things, what kind of a judge you will be on the United States Supreme Court.

Now, let me turn to the substance. Judge Alito, I want to turn to an issue that is very important to me. In a number of recent cases, the Supreme Court of this country has restricted congressional power in a way that I think is not required by the Constitution.

In my opening statement, I mentioned the Supreme Court's decision in Board of Trustees v. Garrett, a five-to-four decision. To me, that case is the best example of this recent trend, and it is not a good trend, in my opinion.

Garrett involved a woman who claimed that she had been discriminated against because she was disabled. She was employed by the State of Alabama and she sued the State under the Americans with Disabilities Act. The Supreme Court threw out the suit, however, holding that Congress lacked the power to make the State subject to suit.

Now, Judge, as I see it, the problem with Garrett is that the Court ignored findings made by Congress. While we were considering the ADA, we held 13 hearings and even set up a task force that held hearings in every State in the Union, attended by more than 30,000 individuals. Based on these hearings, we found hundreds of examples, hundreds of examples of people with disabilities being discriminated against by the States in employment decisions.

Further, we found that, and I quote, “Two-thirds of all disabled Americans between the ages of 16 and 64 were not working at all, even though a large majority of them were capable of doing so.” And, finally, we found that this discrimination flowed from, and I quote, “stereotypic assumptions about people with disabilities,” as well as, and I quote, “purposeful unequal treatment,” end of quote. Sadly, however, in Garrett the Court said that this was just not enough. In fact, it held that we had not pointed to any evidence that the States discriminated in employment decisions against people with disabilities.

Judge Alito, from a review of your decisions, it appears to me that you tended to defer in close cases to the decisions of those individuals closest to the problem at hand. I applaud you for taking that approach.

Now, let me ask you, in your opinion, what role should a judge play when reviewing congressional fact-finding, and how can you assure us that you will show appropriate deference to the role of Congress as the representatives of the people in this democracy when we pass important legislation?

Judge ALITO. I think that the judiciary should have great respect for findings of fact that are made by Congress. And in the Rybar decision that I was discussing earlier, although it is controversial and it involved an application of the Lopez decision, I stated that that decision would have been very different from—that case would have been very different for me if Congress had made findings, and that is because of two things.

I am fully aware of the fact that the members of the judiciary are not the only officers in the United States who take an oath to support and defend the Constitution of the United States. Members of Congress take an oath to support the Constitution and officers of the Executive branch take an oath to support the Constitution, and I presume that they go about their work in good faith.

The second point—and this goes directly to the issue of findings—is that the judiciary is not equipped at all to make findings about what is going on in the real world, not this sort of legislative findings. And Congress, of course, is in the best position to do that. You have constituents. Members of Congress hear from their constituents. Congress can have hearings and examine complex social issues, receive statistical data, hear testimony from experts, analyze that and synthesize that and reduce that to findings. And when Congress makes findings on questions that have a bearing on the constitutionality of legislation, I think they are entitled to great respect.

Senator DEWINE. Well, Judge, I appreciate your response. We can't ask you, obviously, to decide any particular case, but what we are trying to do today is get a general idea of how you approach cases. And we have, as I said, looked at your previous cases. We have a good idea from that, but I appreciate this exchange.

Let me followup with this. Garrett is the law of the land today. Nonetheless, let me ask you whether, after Garrett, Congress might still have a way to protect the disabled. Rather than focus on the problem caused by Garrett, let me focus on the solution. To me, even after Garrett, Congress still has the power to protect the disabled under the Spending Clause of the Constitution. I would like to explore maybe that with you, if I could. Let me give you an example of how this might work.

You, of course, are very familiar with South Dakota v. Dole. In that case, Congress had wanted to establish a national drinking age of 21. As you know, we, of course, don't have the power to require that under our Constitution. Therefore, Congress used its power under the Spending Clause. We said to the States, if you don't establish a 21-year-old drinking age, you will lose 5 percent of your Federal highway dollars.

This left the States with a choice: adopt a 21-year-old drinking age or lose 5 percent of their Federal money. When presented with such a choice, the States kept the money and changed their drinking age to 21. It seems to me that Congress might be able to use this same approach to require the States to waive their immunity from suit under statutes like the ADA.

Judge, based on your experience, could you give me your understanding of what Congress can do and what it can't do under its Spending Clause power, maybe just go back and look at some recent cases and give me a little—

Judge ALITO. Yes, certainly, Senator. Well, I think you have pointed to the leading case in this area, and that is South Dakota v. Dole. South Dakota v. Dole recognizes that Congress has broad powers under the Spending Clause, and that when Congress provides money to the States, Congress can attach conditions to that money, to the receipt of the money, provided that certain standards are met.

One thing that has to be done under the Supreme Court's cases is that there has to be a clear statement that the conditions are attached to the receipt of the money. And the Supreme Court views this like a contract, so that the parties need to have—the party receiving the notice has to have clear and fair notice about what it is agreeing to by taking the money. And then beyond that, the condition—if that is satisfied, then the condition has to be germane to the purposes of the funds.

And in South Dakota v. Dole, the Court found that the drinking age and the 55-mile-an-hour speed limit were germane to the purpose of the expenditures, and these, I believe, were Federal highway funds. So those are the standards that would be applied to any future legislation under the current precedents if the future legislation invokes Congress's broad power under the Spending Clause.

Senator DEWINE. That is helpful. Thank you, Judge.

During the confirmation hearing of Chief Justice Roberts, Chairman Specter showed us a chart stating that the Supreme Court had the opportunity to overrule Roe v. Wade in 38 cases. Because of this, the Chairman suggested that Roe was not only super precedent, but super duper precedent. The Chairman has made the same argument at the hearing today. In fact, he brought the chart out again today.

Now, Judge, just to show you that not all members of this panel are like-minded, I want to tell you that I disagree. To me, Roe is not super precedent. I believe Roe is a precedent, but I don't believe it is super duper precedent or super precedent.

First, although the Court has applied Roe in 38 cases, it has not directly taken up the issue of whether to overrule Roe in every one of those cases. In fact, out of those 38 cases, I have only found 4 in which the Court directly addressed the status of Roe as binding precedent.

In Webster, the Court asked whether Roe should be reaffirmed, but ultimately avoided the issue. In three cases—City of Akron, Thornburgh and Casey—the Court did reaffirm Roe. But the last of these, Casey, did so in a way that hardly left Roe on firm footing. In fact, Casey altered Roe by eliminating the strict scrutiny standard of review and replacing it with a lesser undue burden test. The result has been that many restrictions on abortion have been upheld.

Second, just because Roe has been applied and reaffirmed does not make it a special form of precedent. Many other cases have been applied for decades before eventually being overruled. For example, Plessy v. Ferguson, the case establishing the principle of separate but equal, was upheld for nearly 60 years before it was overruled, and certainly discredited today.

Lochner v. New York, a case that greatly limited the power of the States to protect children and workers, was consistently applied for more than 30 years before it was overruled. And Swift v. Tyson, a case establishing the doctrine of Federal common law, was a bedrock principle of American law repeatedly applied and upheld for nearly 100 years before it too was struck down. Thus, the mere fact that Roe has been upheld for more than 30 years does not mean that it is entitled to special deference.

Third, from the start, Roe has been criticized by lawyers, scholars and judges, whether Democrats or Republicans and, to date, it does remain controversial.

Fourth, much has happened over the last 30 years to undermine the soundness of Roe. Senator Brownback has mentioned how the facts of Roe have changed. We now know that the plaintiff in Roe based her case on false statements and that she wants the case overturned. We also know much about the life of babies in utero that we did not know 30 years ago.

We even know something about the internal deliberations of the Justices who decided Roe. In an internal Supreme Court memo, Justice Harry Blackmun, the author of Roe, acknowledged that the trimester framework established in his opinion was, and I quote, "arbitrary." And Justice Lewis Powell said that he could not find a right to an abortion within the Constitution and decided instead to rely on his gut.

Finally, whatever the term "super precedent" means, I do not think that it describes Roe. In an article by William Landis and Richard Posner, super precedent was defined this way. It is a, and I quote, "precedent that is so effective in defining the requirements of the law that it prevents legal decisions arising in the first place, or if they do arise, induces them to be settled without litigation," end of quote. In other words, super precedent is precedent that is so firmly entrenched in our legal system that people simply don't question it.

Marbury v. Madison, the case establishing the power of judicial review, is super precedent. It is so well settled that litigants do not challenge it in court. In fact, it is one of the fundamental assumptions upon which our constitutional system is built. Roe is hardly Marbury. Is Roe Supreme Court precedent? Certainly, but in my view it is not super duper precedent or even super precedent. It is precedent, nothing more.

Judge, I want to turn now to another topic, to an issue that several Federal judges in Ohio have brought up to me during our conversations. As you know, the Supreme Court currently decides about 75 cases a term. This number is down dramatically from where it was just a generation ago. In 1976, for example, the Court decided almost 400 cases on the merits, more than five times what it does today.

This incredible shrinking Supreme Court docket has been the focus of much attention over the past few years, a lot of discussion. One result of the Court deciding fewer and fewer cases is that more and more circuit splits are left unresolved, which is what I want to talk to you about.

As we all know, a circuit split occurs when two or more Federal Courts of Appeals disagree on an issue of Federal law. As of late, circuit splits have become so pervasive that the Seton Hall Law School came out last year with a new Law Review dedicated exclusively to that issue. There is also a website written by a law professor at the University of Richmond, solely committed to identifying new circuit splits. Hardly a week passes when at least one does not emerge.

To me, these pervasive and unaddressed circuit splits create three problems: one, organizations that transact business across State lines, get caught in the cross-hairs of the his confusion, being subject to one interpretation of Federal law in California and a different one in the State of Ohio; second, Federal judges are placed in a difficult situation trying to figure out what the law requires. In fact, a number of Federal judges in Ohio have talked to me, as I said, about this; and finally, circuit splits undermine the goal of having uniformity in our Federal law.

Let me just ask what is your opinion about this issue? In your experience has the Supreme Court's shrinking docket caused problems for businesses, lower court judges, individuals? Is there a problem with the number of unresolved circuit splits? And if the Court takes more cases, do you think that will solve the problem?

Judge ALITO. Well, that's a difficult issue for me to address from my current position as a judge of a court of appeals because the Supreme Court is my boss, and I am reluctant to suggest that I think they should be doubling their workload.

[Laughter.]

Senator DEWINE. Oh, go ahead.

[Laughter.]

Judge ALITO. That's not the sort of—or even increasing it at all. That's not the sort of thing that subordinates generally do regarding superiors. But circuit splits are certainly undesirable, and I think everybody recognizes that, and that's one of the grounds for granting certiorari. I know that when Justice White was on the Court he regularly would dissent from denial of certiorari in cases where there was a circuit split because he felt strongly that circuit splits should be resolved by the Supreme Court.

I have friends, former colleagues from prior times in my career, who are appellate attorneys who specialize in cases before the Supreme Court and in appellate litigation generally, and occasionally I hear them complain about unresolved circuit splits that are difficult for their clients. So I'm aware of their complaints.

I haven't personally kept track of the number of circuit splits that exist, but certainly they are undesirable thing, and it is a ground for granting certiorari, and I think one of the jobs that the Supreme Court has is to iron out circuit splits. There can be disagreements about whether there really is a circuit split, obviously, in a particular case, and there can be differences of opinion about the timing for resolving circuit splits. Sometimes the Supreme Court thinks it's advisable to wait and see how an issue plays out in a number of circuits before the Supreme Court decides to take on the issue, and that may improve their ability to resolve the issue when the case generally—when the case eventually comes before them.

Senator DEWINE. Judge, let me suggest that I think it is a problem and I think the Supreme Court needs to deal with it. Chief Justice Roberts indicated that he thought the Court could take on more, and I would suggest that they could. I appreciate your comments.

Judge Alito, let me ask you about Congress's power to protect our children from the proliferation of pornography on the Internet. This is an important issue. I raised it at the last hearing. It is one that I think is very troubling. Congress has tried several times to protect our children from being exposed to pornography on the Internet. In 1996, we passed the Communications Decency Act, but the Supreme Court struck it down, citing the First Amendment. A few years later we passed the Child Online Protection Act. Again, the Court struck it down.

What bothers me about these cases is they fail to account for something that to me seems relatively simple. At the core of the First Amendment is the protection of political speech, but it seems to me that pornography is altogether different. Unlike political speech, pornography has very little value if it has any value at all. It does not communicate a message other than one that degrades women. It does not contribute to the public debate, and actually causes harm to the victims who take part in making it, and those who use it.

There are, of course, a number of cases that seem to recognize that pornography is of lesser value speech. In Young v. American Mini Theaters the Court upheld zoning regulations on adult theaters. In doing so, Justice Stevens had this to say, and I quote, "Even though we recognize that the First Amendment will not tolerate the total suppression of erotic materials that have some arguably artistic value, it is manifest that society's interest in protecting this type of expression is of a wholly different and lesser magnitude than the interest and untrammelled political debate."

Let me ask you, Judge, what is your thinking on this subject? Is pornography lesser value speech, as Justice Stevens has seemed to suggest, and are there, or should there be, different levels of speech under the First Amendment?

Judge ALITO. I think that the problem of protecting children from pornography on the Internet illustrates the fact that although the task of the judiciary is to apply principles that are in the Constitution and not make up its own principles, to apply those to different factual situations when the world changes, and in particular, in the First Amendment context, when means of communication changes. The job of applying the principles that have been worked out—and I think in this area worked out with a great deal of effort over a period of time—in the pre-Internet world, applying those to the world of the Internet is a really difficult problem, and I understand it. Congress has been struggling with it, and I know the judiciary has been struggling with it.

The law, of course, as you know, constitutional law draws a distinction between obscenity, which has no First Amendment protection but is subject to a very strict definition, and pornography, which is not obscenity but is sexually related materials, with respect to minors, the Supreme Court has said that it's permissible for a State to regulate the sale of pornography to minors, has greater authority there. I think that's the Ginsburg case. It has greater authority there than it does with respect to the distribution of pornography to adults.

Now, in the pre-Internet world, the job of preventing minors from purchasing pornography was a lot simpler. If they wanted to get it, I guess they would have to go to a store or some place and buy it. But on the Internet, of course, it's readily available from any computer terminal, and a lot of minors today are a lot more sophisticated in the use of computers than their parents, so the ability of parents to monitor what they're doing and supervise what they're doing is greatly impaired by this difference in computer aptitude. I can't say much more about the question than that. It is a difficult question. I think that there needs to be additional effort in this area, probably by all branches of Government so that the law fully takes into account the differences regarding communication over the Internet and access to materials over the Internet by minors.

Senator DEWINE. Judge, I have one last question. If confirmed to the Supreme Court, only part of your job will be hearing arguments and issuing opinions. An equally important part of the job will involve deciding which cases to hear in the first place. Each year the Supreme Court receives approximately 8,000 petitions for cert., cert. petitions, as they are called. These are petitions by a party to a lawsuit asking the Court to hear its case. Out of these 8,000 annual requests, the Court decides to hear only about 75 to 80. For many years individual Justices would review each cert. petition and cast a vote on whether to hear the case. Today, however, eight of the Justices are part of what is called the cert. pool. Here is how it works. All petitions are put into a pool. A single law clerk then picks up a petition, writes a memo recommending for or against hearing the case. That memo is then circulated to the eight Justices in the cert. pool who use it to cast their vote on whether to hear the case. Justice Stevens is the only one who does not participate in this pool. Instead he has his staff prepare a memo on each case with a recommendation tailored to his own thinking on an issue. It would seem to me that the cert. pool greatly limits the exchange of ideas among members of the Court.

I wonder if you could tell me how you would intend to proceed, if you are going to use the pool or if you are going to do what Justice Stevens does, or if you have thought about it.

Judge ALITO. I have—I'm aware of the issue, but I have not thought past what might happen with these confirmation proceedings. So it's not the kind of issue that I have really thought through in my mind. If I'm fortunate enough to be confirmed, I think I would assess the situation at that time and talk to the Supreme Court Justices and see what their views are, the reasons why they're proceeding in one way or another.

I know from my perspective as a lower court judge, that there is a constant conflict between the obligation that we have to deal with a very heavy caseload and the need for the judge, as opposed to a law clerk or a staff employee of the Court to deal with the cases. We cannot delegate our judicial responsibility, but we do need to call on—we need to find ways, and we do find ways, of using—of obtaining assistance from clerks and staff, employees, so that we can deal with the large caseload that we have.

Senator DEWINE. Thank you, Judge.

Chairman SPECTER. Thank you, Senator DeWine.

Senator Feinstein?

Senator FEINSTEIN. Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman.

Good afternoon, Judge. Because Sandra Day O'Connor was the fifth vote on both Lopez and Morrison, I think I would like to start with the Commerce Clause, and your views of federalism. Do you agree with the direction the Supreme Court took in Lopez?

Judge ALITO. Well, Senator that really relates to the next case in the Lopez-Morrison line of cases that might come before the Supreme Court, and so I don't know how I can address that question without knowing what that case is, and of course, my resolution of it would—

Senator FEINSTEIN. I was just asking you about Lopez, but—

Judge ALITO. Well, Lopez is—

Senator FEINSTEIN [continuing]. If you do not want to answer, that is OK.

Judge ALITO. Lopez is a precedent of the Court, and it's been followed in Morrison, and then it has to be considered within connection with the Supreme Court's decision in Raich, and I think that all three of those have to be taken into account together. I don't think there's any question at this point in our history that Congress's power under the Commerce Clause is quite broad, and I think that reflects a number of things, including the way in which our economy and our society has developed, and all of the foreign and intrastate activity that takes place, we do still have a Federal system of Government, and I think most people believe that that is the system that's set up by our Constitution.

Senator FEINSTEIN. Having said that, I pulled the Rybar case and read it over the noon break. Let me just see if we agree on the facts, and stop me if you think I am misquoting or misstating anything. The Rybar case essentially took place the year after Lopez. It involved Mr. Rybar, who was a federally licensed gun dealer who went to a gun show in Pennsylvania and bought a Chinese type 54, 7.62-millimeter submachine gun one day, sold it to Mr. Baublitz, went back the next day and sold him a military M-3, 45 caliber submachine gun. The grand jury indicted him on two counts of unlawful possession of a machine gun in violation of the law, and two counts of unlawful transfer of an unregistered firearm. He changed his plea, pled guilty to two counts. I think he pled conditionally guilty to two counts.

When the case came before you, and I read with great interest your dissenting opinion, you said, and I quote, “If Lopez, which happened the year before, does not govern this case, then it may well be a precedent that’s strictly limited to its own peculiar circumstances, but our responsibility is to apply Supreme Court precedent. That responsibility, it seems to me, requires us to invalidate the statutory provision at issue here in its present form.”

And then you went on to say that the present form “might be sustainable in its current form if Congress made findings that the purely intrastate possession of machine guns has a substantial effect on interstate commerce, or if Congress or the Executive assembled empirical evidence documenting such a link. If, as the Government and the majority boldly insist, the purely intrastate possession of machine guns has such an effect, these steps are not too much to demand to protect our system of constitutional federalism.”

So if I understand this, you essentially said that you wanted to follow precedent, newly established law in this area, and you left a little hedge that if the Congress did make findings in that law, then that might be a different situation. If Congress did make findings, would you have agreed that that statute would have been constitutional?

Judge ALITO. Well, what I said in the opinion and what I will reiterate this afternoon is that it would have been a very different case for me. I don’t think I can express an opinion on how I would have decided a hypothetical case.

Senator FEINSTEIN. It is not hypothetical. I am just asking you if there were findings, as you said, you might have sustained the law—

Judge ALITO. And I read it like that. I think it would have been—

Senator FEINSTEIN. I am just asking you, would you have sustained the law for findings—

Judge ALITO. I don’t think that I can give you a definitive answer to the question because that involves a case that’s different from the case that came before me. But I repeat what I said there, it would have been a very different matter if Congress had made findings. I have the greatest respect for findings. This is an area where Congress has the expertise and where Congress has the opportunity to assemble facts and to assess the facts. We on the appellate judiciary don’t have that opportunity. So if Congress had made findings—and I didn’t insist on findings. If the Executive branch, which was defending the statute, had pointed to testimony at hearings—and that’s been done in other Commerce Clause cases—or statements by responsible Government officials with expertise in the area of firearms control, or any other evidence that substantiated this, it would have been a very different case for me, and of course, if there had been a jurisdictional element, then I think it's perfectly clear under the precedents that it would have been constitutional.

Senator FEINSTEIN. I accept that with one exception. I think most people know that guns, particularly machine guns, do affect interstate commerce, and there is generally no question about that. With one look at the gun trace, even before Mr. Rybar had the gun, the likelihood was that it came across State lines, particularly the Chinese model. So I think that is a difficult extrapolation for me to understand, but that is not necessarily dispositive.

Let me go on. At the conclusion of your dissent, you wrote that, "Even today, the normative case for federalism remains strong." Now, federalism is often used to describe the strengthening of State powers at the expense of the Federal Government. What exactly did you mean by that statement?

Judge ALITO. I meant that there are activities that—and I think there is general agreement on this, and it goes beyond what the Constitution requires into areas of policy that I think Congress respects. I think there is general agreement that there are some activities that have traditionally been handled by the States and by local governments. Those are areas in which they have taken the lead because the view has been that they are in the best position to deal with that. And that was the issue that was directly addressed by Justice Kennedy's concurrence in Lopez. He relied in large part on the fact that—he put heavy reliance on the fact that what was involved in Lopez was a law relating to schools. And although the Federal Government certainly has a role in education, traditionally that has been regarded as something that is primarily to be handled at the State and local level.

Senator FEINSTEIN. OK. Now, you cited a law review article by a professor named Stephen Calabrese. In that article, he argues that Lopez was a revolution that shattered forever the notion that after 50 years of Commerce Clause precedent, we could never go back to the days of limited national power. Do you agree with that?

Judge ALITO. I agree that Lopez was a startling development for a lot of people. When I was in law school, I think the traditional wisdom was that the commerce power reached everything, that there was no limit to the power, that nothing could ever exceed the power. And Lopez and the Lopez line of cases have not made huge inroads on that principle, but it was the first time in a long time that a statute had been held to exceed Congress's commerce power. So to that extent, yes, it was a revolution, but how big of a one—

Senator FEINSTEIN. See, I would say not yet has it made that kind of a dent, and that is why your nomination is so important, because you could be a decisive vote in this area.

Do you believe that the Supreme Court's Commerce Clause decisions in the 50 years preceding Lopez are settled law?

Judge ALITO. I think that—I'd have to talk about individual cases, but I do think most of those are—the ones that come to my mind I think are well-settled precedents.

Senator FEINSTEIN. OK. Now, unlike the machine gun law in Rybar, the Family and Medical Leave Act in Chittister did include congressional findings of fact, as the Supreme Court confirmed, and yet you authored the majority opinion to invalidate the law.

Judge ALITO. Well, in Chittister—

Senator FEINSTEIN. Do you see a contradiction in that?

Judge ALITO. I don't, Senator. I don't believe that there were congressional findings in Chittister that went to the issue in Chittister.

Senator FEINSTEIN. OK. That is good. Now, let me ask you some questions. Is it enough for Congress to provide findings of fact in a statute, or do the findings of fact need to be deemed sufficient by a court?

Judge ALITO. Well, what the Supreme Court has said is that findings of fact are very helpful when they are provided. And the Court will certainly treat them with respect. But they are neither—they are not necessarily definitive, and they also are not necessary. Congress doesn't have to make findings. It is helpful when it does it, and under the Supreme Court's cases, the findings are not necessarily definitive. That is what the Supreme Court has said about this.

Senator FEINSTEIN. Yes, but you struck down Rybar. Essentially, you said it would have a much better chance with you if it had findings of fact. And this was a case where prior laws had major findings of fact with respect to machine guns. I mean, this wasn't a new thing.

Judge ALITO. Senator, I looked very carefully at all of the materials that were cited by the other judges in Rybar and that were provided by the Government. And the things that were cited from the legislative history of the prior statutes did not, in my view, go to the issue in Rybar. All of those prior statutes were statutes that had jurisdictional elements in them. All that I was looking for was some evidence that the possession of a machine gun—not the transfer of a machine gun or the sale of a machine gun, but the mere possession had a substantial effect on interstate commerce. That is what I understood the Supreme Court precedent to require. And it is not a very heavy burden to show that something has a substantial effect on interstate commerce, but that is what I understood the Supreme Court precedent to require and that is what I was looking for.

Senator FEINSTEIN. OK. Let's move to the issue of a woman's right to choose and Roe. This morning, Senator Specter talked about how Casey reaffirmed the original soundness of Roe and then put emphasis on precedent. And he then asked, "How would you weigh that consideration were this issue to come before you, if confirmed?" And in response, you said, and I would like to quote, "Well, I agree that in every case in which there is prior precedent, the first issue is the issue of stare decisis, and the presumption is that the Court will follow its prior precedents. There needs to be a special justification for overruling a prior precedent."

Can you give us a few examples of a special justification, not including Brown v. Board of Education, which you think would qualify?

Judge ALITO. There are a number of factors that figure in the application of stare decisis in particular cases. There are factors that weigh in favor of stare decisis, and there are factors that weigh against stare decisis. Factors that weigh in favor of stare decisis are things like what the initial vote was on the case, the length of time that the case has been on the book, whether it has been reaffirmed, whether it has been reaffirmed on stare decisis grounds, whether there has been reliance, the nature and the extent of the reliance, whether the precedent has proven to be workable. Those are all factors that have to be considered on an individual basis.

Senator FEINSTEIN. But I am asking you what the special justification would be, that you mentioned this morning, to overcome precedence and reliance?

Judge ALITO. Well, I think what needs to be done is a consideration of all of the factors that are relevant. This is not a mathematical formula. It would be a lot easier for everybody if it were. But it is not. The Supreme Court has said that this is a question that calls for the exercise of judgment. They have said there has to be a special justification for overruling a precedent. There is a presumption that precedents will be followed. But it is not—the rule of stare decisis is not an inexorable command, and I don't think anybody would want a rule in the area of constitutional law that pointed in that—that said that a constitutional decision, once handed down, can never be overruled.

So it's a matter of weighing all of the—taking into account all of the factors and seeing whether there is a strong case based on all the relevant—

Senator FEINSTEIN. My question was a different one, respectfully.

Judge ALITO. I am sorry, Senator.

Senator FEINSTEIN. It was, can you give me a few examples of what you think would qualify as a special justification for overruling prior precedent? And the reason I ask you this is in our private conversation, you said to me that you did not think there had been any case you could think of that had been more tested than Roe.

Judge ALITO. Well, Roe has—sorry.

Senator FEINSTEIN. What special circumstance would there be which would overcome this kind—whether you call it super precedent or super duper or anything, but this kind of protracted testing over a 33-year period of time?

Judge ALITO. Senator, I'm sorry if I didn't understand your question previously. One situation in which there is a special justification for overruling a precedent is if the rule has proven to be unworkable. An example where the Supreme Court thought that a rule had proven to be unworkable is provided by National League of Cities and San Antonio Transit Authority v. Garcia. National League of Cities asked whether something was traditionally a sovereign function. And that resulted in a whole series of cases in the lower courts, a large number of cases in the lower courts, and a number of cases in the Supreme Court in which the courts had to decide whether something was on one side of this line or not, and it proved in the view of the Supreme Court to be a very difficult standard to work with. And, finally, in Garcia, they said this is unworkable, and we are going to overrule National League of Cities, and we are going to leave it to Congress to deal with the federalism issue that is presented here. This is an example of the Supreme Court saying there is a federalism concern here, but it is one that Congress rather than the Court would have to deal with.

Sometimes changes in the situation in the real world can call for the overruling of a precedent. An example of that is provided by Katz v. United States, which I was talking about this morning in relation to wiretapping. The old rule under Olmstead was that in order for there to be a search, you had to look to property law. You had to see whether there was an invasion of a property interest. And then with the development of electronic communications and electronic surveillance, wiretapping or other forms of electronic surveillance, which is what was involved in Katz, the Supreme Court said this isn't a sensible way to apply the Fourth Amendment principle under the conditions of the modern world, and they said famously that the Fourth Amendment protects people, not places. So they shifted—they found the doctrinal underpinnings of the old Olmstead rule to be undermined by developments in the society, and they shifted the focus from property law to whether somebody had an expectation of privacy.

So those are examples.

Senator FEINSTEIN. Well, and you did say that you believe the Constitution provides a right of privacy.

Judge ALITO. I did say that. The 14th Amendment protects liberty. The Fifth Amendment protects liberty. And I think it is well accepted that this has a substantive component, and that that component includes aspects of privacy that have constitutional protection.

Senator FEINSTEIN. Let me ask you about your dissent in Casey. You reasoned that most women seeking abortions are either unmarried or would tell their husbands and, therefore, few would be harmed if spousal notification was required. Justice O'Connor, on the other hand, ruled, and I quote, "The proper focus of constitutional inquiry is the group for whom the law is a restriction, not the group for whom the law is irrelevant."

Why did you propose a different approach than Justice O'Connor?

Judge ALITO. Well, I mentioned the fact in my opinion that this provision applied only to married women, but I don't think that was really the focus of what I was getting at. I think—and I agree with her that you look at the group that's affected, not the group that's unaffected, and the standard that she had—so that would be women who fell within this provision of the Pennsylvania law. And the standard that she had articulated in the earlier cases was, as I described it a couple of minutes ago, that an undue burden in her view had to be an absolute obstacle or an extreme obstacle, and it could not be simply something that inhibited some women. The "some women" phrase was her phrase, not my phrase.

Senator FEINSTEIN. Now, I am going to ask you about one other quote that some of my colleagues may disagree with what Justice O'Connor said, but she said it, and that is, "The State may not give to a man the kind of dominion and control over his wife that parents exercise over their children." Do you agree with that?

Judge ALITO. I never equated the situation of an adult woman who fell within the notification provision of the Pennsylvania statute with the situation of a minor who was required to provide notice. There is an analogy, and the earlier case that Justice O'Connor had decided, the Hodgson case, was a minor notification statute. But I think I made it quite clear in my opinion that this was nothing more than an analogy and that there was no close—these situations were very distinct, and I was aware of that, and I think I pointed that out.

Senator FEINSTEIN. Let me move on, if I might. One of the core principles of Roe is that a woman's health must be protected. In Casey, Justice O'Connor specifically wrote that after viability, the State may, if it chooses, regulate and even proscribe abortion, except where it is necessary in appropriate medical judgment for the preservation of the life of the mother. This requirement to protect a woman's health was also reaffirmed in Stenberg v. Carhart, where it was said the Court rejects Nebraska's contention that there is no need for health exception.

Do you agree, if the statute restricts access to abortion, that it must protect the health of the mother in order for it to be constitutional?

Judge ALITO. Well, I think that the case law is very clear about protecting the life and the health of the mother is the compelling interest throughout pregnancy. I think that's very clear in the case law.

Senator FEINSTEIN. Thank you. I appreciate that.

In 1985, at the time you wrote the strategy memo on Thornburgh, the Court had already held in Roe, Akron, and eventually 30 other cases, that a woman had a constitutional right to choose whether to continue a pregnancy. In addition, in your memo, you specifically wrote that in the Akron case, the Supreme Court reaffirmed Roe. However, despite this, your memo outlined a strategy to eventually overturn Roe.

My question is a little different from what you discussed somewhat yesterday. What was your view of precedent at the time you wrote that memo?

Judge ALITO. Well, I think there are two things that I should say in response to that. The first is that I did not advocate in the memo that an argument be made that Roe be overruled, and therefore, the whole issue, had the Government proceeded with the argument that I recommended, the issue of stare decisis wouldn't have been presented and so there wasn't any occasion for me to talk about stare decisis in the memo and I did not talk about it. I think there's a mention of it in a footnote. So I didn't address it and there wasn't an occasion to address it.

The second thing I would say is that stare decisis is a concern for the judiciary much more than it is for an advocate. An advocate is trying to achieve a result, and so an advocate is—for an advocate, stare decisis can be either a great benefit if it is in your favor or an obstacle to get over. But it isn't the kind of issue that needs to be grappled with in the way in which a court has to grapple with stare decisis.

Senator FEINSTEIN. OK. In Casey, you wrote about the harms caused by spousal notification to the practical effect that the law will not amount to an undue burden unless the effect is greater than the burden imposed on minors. Just to go back to that, is this what you meant?

Judge ALITO. Well, Senator, I don't—I do not equate the situation of a married woman with the situation of a minor—

Senator FEINSTEIN. I know you keep saying that, but I keep going back to the words and they seem to say something else.

Judge ALITO. Well, I think if you look at the words, I actually said that I don't equate these two situations. I was mindful of the fact that they are very different situations. But often, the law proceeds on the basis—legal reasoning is based on analogy, and so if you take a situation that's quite different and yet has some relationship to a situation that comes up later, you can draw some analogies while still recognizing that the two situations are very different.

If you're talking about the potential for abuse, that certainly is something that can come up in either of these two contexts and it's a tragedy in either context. If a single minor is abused as a result of notification, that's a tragedy. If a single adult woman is abused as a result of notification, it's a tragedy.

But what I think I'm getting at there is that this is what we had. This is what I had. This was the information that I had to work with to try to understand what this provision meant. And so you work with what you've got and that's what I had and I was trying to see to what degree the prior situation was relevant and to what degree it wasn't relevant to the issue that was before me.

Senator FEINSTEIN. I'd like to quickly just switch subjects for a moment just to clarify something you said this morning, and this has to do with electronic surveillance of Americans. As you know, in 1978, the Congress, after a lot of introspection, passed a bill called the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act, which we call FISA, which essentially set up the parameters for all electronic surveillance within the United States. It's very specific, if you read it. There is a great concern right now because of what's been happening with respect to electronic surveillance, quite possibly involving Americans as well as foreigners.

You said something interesting this morning. You said, generally, there has to be a warrant issued by a neutral and detached magistrate before a search can be carried out. Now, with respect to the FISA law, Senator Birch Bayh, the Chairman of the Intelligence Committee at the time, spells out in the Committee Report that this covers all surveillance in the United States. And then President Carter, when he signed the law, said this covers all surveillance within the United States. So there is a burgeoning question as to whether the President now has the authority to wiretap Americans without going to the FISA court.

When you said, generally, there has to be a warrant, what that said to me was you were providing for an exception. Is that correct? Are you providing for an exception?

Judge ALITO. I think that what I was addressing when I said that was what the Fourth Amendment means, the general principle that is set out in the Fourth Amendment, and the case law under the Fourth Amendment says that a warrant is generally required, but there are well-recognized situations in which a search can be carried out without a warrant. Exigent circumstances is a situation that comes immediately to mind if—

Senator FEINSTEIN. Well, let me stop you here. Do you recognize Justice Jackson's comment in the 1952 steel case where he set up that tripartite framework—

Judge ALITO. I do—

Senator FEINSTEIN [continuing]. Of Presidential authority and when it is at its weakest is when Congress has legislated? And in 1978, Congress did legislate and covered the horizon, so to speak?

Judge ALITO. Yes, Senator, I recognize that and I think that's a very useful framework for addressing issues of Executive power. Now, there is a question about what the meaning of what Congress did, and that would be a statutory question. What is the meaning of the provision of FISA in question, and maybe there's no substantial argument about what was meant there, but maybe there would be an issue about what was meant there, and certainly there could be an issue about the meaning of the authorization on the use of military force. How far was that intended to go?

And so the statutory question, I think, would—that certainly would be an issue that could come up in this situation and probably you would need to—I think you would have to resolve the statutory question before you could figure out which of the three categories that Justice Jackson set out the case fell into.

Senator FEINSTEIN. Thank you. I've run out of time. I'll continue this next session. Thank you.

Judge ALITO. Thank you, Senator.

Chairman SPECTER. Thank you, Senator Feinstein.

Senator SESSIONS?

Senator SESSIONS. Thank you, Mr. Chairman. We've got a good hearing, I believe. A lot of exchanges have occurred. I will agree with Senator Biden. I can't remember a nominee being this forthcoming. You have gone into more detail about questions that may come up before you without going too far, in my opinion, than we have seen before. You have been very open and I have been very impressed with your analytical spirit and your ability to handle these cases.

We need an aggressive hearing. I agree with those who say that questions need to be propounded to the nominee because this is the only chance that, politically, that we will have, that you will ultimately be on the bench for life, unaccountable to the political process. So it is good to ask questions.

My concern is similar to that of Senator DeWine, that many of the accusations and allegations are unfounded or distortions are really not fair, and some of the things that have been said about you are not correct. If they were correct, you would not receive the overwhelming support of your colleagues and have that admiration so totally as you do.

Judge Alito, we talk about the role of a judge and how you handle cases that come before you. You were asked, what is your opinion on Lopez, and you said, well, I haven't studied that case precisely, or at least the background of it. I didn't sit on it. Would you explain to us, as an appellate judge, as you do today, but also even more so as a Supreme Court Justice, how cases come to you and what you should do before you make a decision or express an opinion on the ultimate outcome of a case, why you should be careful and what this great legal system that we have arranges for before a judge makes that final decision?

Judge ALITO. Well, certainly, Senator. We have an adversary system and that means that both sides get the opportunity to present their arguments, and we have established judicial procedures and they are time consuming and they are burdensome and maybe some people would say that some of them are old fashioned. But I think they work well and they are designed to make sure that there's the vigorous presentation of both sides of the issue that is presented in the case at hand, not some abstract issue that might be addressed in a law review article or a broad issue that might be addressed in a piece of legislation, but an actual concrete case, a dispute between real parties that comes before the court. Both sides have the opportunity to present the arguments that they think have a bearing on that case. The judges get the opportunity to read the briefs, and then in—

Senator SESSIONS. Can I interrupt you there? And you are talking about the appellate court.

Judge ALITO. That's correct.

Senator SESSIONS. There has been a trial with jurors and witnesses and trial judges and those kinds of things that has already occurred. It is now on appeal. No witnesses are being called, but the transcript is available and one side or the other is alleging that they weren't treated fairly, is that correct?

Judge ALITO. That's correct.

Senator SESSIONS. So you decide whether or not a fair trial occurred. Continue now with the process and how you ultimately come to make a decision.

Judge ALITO. Well, we receive briefs and the briefs are well thought out by the attorneys and it provides, if the case is well briefed, a strong presentation of the positions on both sides of the question, and if it's an issue of great public importance, there may be other people who file briefs, so called friends of the court. On the Supreme Court now these days, they get a lot of those on both sides of many of the big issues that come before them. So that ensures that they have a strong presentation of all the arguments that can be made on both sides of the issue, both sides of the case.

The first step in the process would be to read all of those and then there would be an oral argument. At that point, the Justices of the Supreme Court or the judges of my court—

Senator SESSIONS. Now, oral argument means the lawyers for each party come and orally argue the case before the court, is that correct?

Judge ALITO. That's right, and—

Senator SESSIONS. Now, you should not have made up your mind even at that point, should you?

Judge ALITO. You shouldn't. I think very often, I come into an oral argument with a tentative idea about how the case should be decided. I've thought through the issue as much as I can, but my mind is open to the possibility that something will happen during the oral argument or later in my discussion with the other judges that might change my mind.

So we have the oral argument and the lawyers will make their presentation. In that situation, I have the opportunity to ask questions, unlike today. That's a better situation to be in, but it gives me a chance to explore the issues in the case that are troubling to me and I can pose hypotheticals to the lawyers and try to explore how far their arguments go.

And after we have the argument, the judges get together in what's known as the conference. That's a private meeting when just the judges are present. And we each discuss the case, and very often one of my colleagues will say something that makes me think about the case differently than I did going into the conference. But at the end of the conference, if we've all voted, then we exchange our views and we come to a conclusion about how a case should be decided.

And it's only at the end of that process that we actually have a vote on the decision, and then somebody is given the job of writing an opinion and sometimes things even change during the opinion writing process. There have been numerous cases in which I've had the opinion and I've been given the job of writing an opinion to affirm and in the process of—or the reverse, and in the process of writing the opinion, I see that the position that I had previously was wrong. I changed my mind. And then I will write to the other members of the panel and I will say, I have thought this through and this is what I discovered and now I think we should do the opposite of what we agreed, and sometimes they'll agree with me and sometimes they won't.

So it's a long process and it's only at the end of that whole process that I think a judge is in the position, when the opinion is actually going to be issued, the judge is in the position to say, now I've done everything I can with this and this is how I analyze the issue.

Senator SESSIONS. And you said in your opening statement that one of the habits that a good judge should develop is the habit of delaying reaching conclusions until everything has been considered, and I suppose that's why you would be somewhat reluctant to express an opinion on Lopez or Bush v. Gore or some of these other great decisions, because you would know before you rendered such an important decision in a case like that that you've given it the most thorough analysis and you've read all the briefs and considered all the arguments of the parties involved, is that correct?

Judge ALITO. That's an important part of the legal process. If anybody has sat on a jury, they've probably been instructed by the judge not to reach any conclusions about the case until they've heard all the evidence, not to reach premature conclusions, and judges have the same obligation. Now, it doesn't mean you don't think about things. You do think about them, but you don't reach your final conclusion until you've gone through this entire process.

Senator SESSIONS. You said earlier that no person in this country, no matter how high or powerful, is above the law, and no person is beneath the law. Can you assure us that you have the courage and the determination to rule according to your best and highest judgment of the value of the case, regardless of whether or not the person who appointed you or the Congress who confirmed you or any other political pressures that may fall upon you?

Judge ALITO. I can, Senator. I would do that to the best of my ability. That is what I've tried to do on the court of appeals, and if I'm confirmed, that's what I would do on the Supreme Court.

Senator SESSIONS. I believe you will. That is your reputation. That is what other lawyers say about you. That is what professionals who know you conclude. I think it is an important commitment that you have made to us.

You know, we have arguments about a number of cases and the Rybar case has come up a good bit. It involves the machine gun. I was a United States Attorney, as you were, and I prosecuted machine gun cases for years. The Supreme Court said, on Section 922, there is no jurisdictional element. Now, historically, criminal statutes of Federal law have jurisdictional elements. The most common statutes historically that were prosecuted were interstate transportation of stolen motor vehicles. It is not a stolen motor vehicle, it is the interstate transportation that makes it a Federal crime, or the interstate transportation of a stolen property, or kidnapping. Kidnapping within a State is not a Federal crime, it is only kidnapping that goes interstate.

So I guess I would ask you to explain for those who may be listening today what this historical procedure is that requires a jurisdictional element of an interstate nexus for the Federal Government to be able to prosecute a crime in some State or county in America.

Judge ALITO. Yes, Senator. Certainly. Well, let me start with the Constitution. The Constitution gives the legislative branch certain powers, and they're enumerated in the Constitution. One of those powers is the power to regulate interstate and foreign commerce, and a great deal of legislation that Congress passed during the 20th century was regulation that was based on its power to regulate interstate and foreign commerce, and many of the criminal statutes that Congress has passed, the Federal criminal statutes, are based on Congress's power to regulate interstate and foreign commerce.

So it's necessary for each of these statutes to fall within this power to regulate interstate and foreign commerce, and one of the ways of ensuring that each exercise of this power falls within Congress's authority under the Commerce Clause is to require that the jurisdictional element be proven in the case. In the case of firearms, as I mentioned earlier, the Supreme Court has said it's enough to show that the firearm at some point in its history traveled in interstate and foreign commerce, and my experience as a U.S. Attorney and before that as an Assistant U.S. Attorney was that this is not a difficult burden for prosecutors to meet. I can't recall a case during the time I was U.S. Attorney where anybody expressed the slightest problem with satisfying this. So this is a very simple way of satisfying the interstate commerce element in the case of firearms offenses.

Senator SESSIONS. I couldn't agree more, and that is what all the traditional firearms laws call for and that is how we proved every case that I prosecuted. I approved it once because it said, "Made in Italy" on the gun. But you prove that the gun has been transported in interstate commerce and that is an element that gives the Federal jurisdiction. As I understand your opinion, you said if the Congress had simply put that in the statute as an element of the offense, then it would have met constitutional muster.

So I guess I would say to my colleagues on the other side and others, maybe we ought to check this law out and write a piece of legislation that puts in the jurisdictional element like all the other historic criminal offenses have and we get this thing done instead of fussing about it. I feel strongly about that.

But when you don't make it a jurisdictional element, then it is not a matter of proof, is that not right, Judge Alito, and therefore, the defendant does not have all the elements of the case proven beyond a reasonable doubt to the jury that here is the case? That is why it is important.

Judge ALITO. That is correct.

Senator SESSIONS. We talked about a lot of these cases. I would just generally like to express my disagreement with those who criticize the Garrett case. It did involve the University of Alabama. I believe that the Attorney General of Alabama was correct to assert that the plaintiff could sue, could get back wages, could get their job back, but under the Sovereign Immunity Doctrine that protects States from lawsuits, that under the way that statute was passed, they could not get money damages against the State of Alabama. I think that was the core issue in it.

I also would like to join with Senator DeWine in his very cogent analysis of precedent and super precedent. I think that was insightful for us and would like to be on the record as joining with that.

Judge Alito, back 20 years ago, you wrote a memorandum to Solicitor General Charles Fried, who was a law professor, I guess, before he became Solicitor General and went back to Harvard and is there now, a brilliant legal mind. He was the Solicitor General. You worked for him. You submitted a memorandum on a Pennsylvania case, a case that came out of Pennsylvania, and it seemed to me to be a preliminary analysis of that issue and the question of whether or not that case should be—whether the Department of Justice should intervene in that case and file a friend of the court brief. Was it a preliminary overview of the issue and not the final brief or final summary of argument for the appeal?

Judge ALITO. And that's the Thornburgh case that you're referring to, Senator.

Senator SESSIONS. Thornburgh.

Judge ALITO. Yes. It wasn't a brief. It was a memorandum about whether the government should file a brief as a friend of the court.

Senator SESSIONS. And you pointed out a number of points in that decision that was being questioned that I thought were—the court had overreached and gone too far. A number of them are quite erroneous, it appeared to me, and you analyzed that very carefully. But before you concluded your argument, you suggested, and not suggested, you stated that you did not think a frontal assault on Roe v. Wade would be appropriate, is that correct?

Judge ALITO. Yes, that's correct.

Senator SESSIONS. And was it not the position of President Reagan and the Attorney General of the United States at that time that Roe v. Wade was wrongfully decided and they would seek the opportunity at some point to seek the overruling of it?

Judge ALITO. That was the express position of President Reagan himself. He had spoken on the issue and he had written on the issue.

Senator SESSIONS. So your opinion to the Solicitor General as a young staff attorney in the Solicitor General's office was, in some ways, contrary to that of the President of the United States?

Judge ALITO. Well, I was doing what I thought my job was as an advocate, which was to outline the litigation strategy that would be in the best interests of my client, given what my client was interested in, and it seemed to me that the strategy that I recommended was the best strategy to be followed.

Senator SESSIONS. And did they follow your suggestions?

Judge ALITO. No, they did not. They argued that Roe v. Wade should be overruled and the Supreme Court rejected that—

Senator SESSIONS. They, in fact, carried out a frontal assault and it was not approved by the Court. So I think that, to me, plus your other decision in which you ruled that Health and Human Services funds could be utilized to fund an abortion for those who qualified was a closed question, that case was, I thought. There was a dissent in it, but you ruled in favor of the pro-choice, the pro-abortion side of that case even though a dissent argued that it was in error, is that correct?

Judge ALITO. That is correct. That's what I thought the law required. I thought we were required to defer to the Department of Health and Human Services's interpretation of the statute and so that's how I voted. And if I'd been out to implement some sort of agenda to strike down—to uphold any abortion regulation that came along, then I would not have voted the way I did in that Elizabeth Blackwell case.

Senator SESSIONS. Back in your memorandum in 1985 on the question of abortion, one of the provisions of the Pennsylvania law that was struck down by the court of appeals simply said that there must be a humane and sanitary disposal of aborted fetuses, and you thought that was unwise and you pointed out that there's a Federal statute already on the books that mandates the humane disposal of excess wild free-roaming horses and burros, did you not?

Judge ALITO. Yes, that's correct. That was the statute.

Senator SESSIONS. So this idea that every time a court rules on a pro-abortion opinion, that they're always correct, I think is not true. I think the court has been awfully arrogant and dismissive of the States' rights and legitimate concerns in some of these questions that we're dealing with.

Judge Alito, you know the salary that a Federal judge makes, is that right?

Judge ALITO. I do, all too well.

[Laughter.]

Senator SESSIONS. You know what it would be on the Supreme Court?

Judge ALITO. I actually don't know exactly, no.

Senator SESSIONS. It's a little more, I think, not much. Do you think you can live on that?

Judge ALITO. I can. I've lived on a Federal judge's salary up to this point.

Senator SESSIONS. You've been accused of favoring an all-powerful Executive a couple of times in this Committee. Can the President cut your pay?

Judge ALITO. No, he can't do that. That's in—the Constitution says that, fortunately. Well, nobody can. The President certainly can't and Congress can't, either.

[Laughter.]

Senator SESSIONS. Have a sigh of relief there. They can increase it, though, right?

Judge ALITO. They can, yes.

[Laughter.]

Senator SESSIONS. Well, we have a tight budget. Senators and Congressmen feel, sometimes privately they will tell you they think they need to be paid more, but we are paid pretty generously, in my view, and maybe we need to set some examples about financial management. Maybe we would like to do more, but it is difficult.

But I raise that point because a Supreme Court can declare null and void a legislative enactment by the Congress, can it not, if it violates the Constitution—

Judge ALITO. Yes. Yes, it can.

Senator SESSIONS [continuing]. In their opinion?

Judge ALITO. Yes.

Senator SESSIONS. Does anybody review the Supreme Court's review?

Judge ALITO. No. No.

Senator SESSIONS. And Congress can cut off money for any program they want to. In fact, the Anti-Deficiency Act says it is a crime for any agency of government to spend money that has not been appropriated by Congress. Is that a reviewable Act by anyone, for Congress not to fund a program or agency of the U.S. Government?

Judge ALITO. No, I don't think that's reviewable.

Senator SESSIONS. And aren't there things that the Executive branch can do that are not reviewable?

Judge ALITO. There are certainly some things that are not reviewable. Vetoes are not reviewable. Pardons are not reviewable.

Senator SESSIONS. So the mere allegation that an act of the President is unreviewable may not be as disastrous as it sounds or as bad as it sounds, because certain branches are given certain powers.

Judge ALITO. That's correct.

Senator SESSIONS. I would like to talk a little bit about this question of activism, and I want to be frank about it. Some of our liberal colleagues have correctly made the point that conservatives can be activists, too. And if you take the definition of activism as an action by a judge who allows their personal, political, or social or moral values to override their commitment to the law, do you believe that a judge who is conservative can be an activist just as easily as one who is liberal?

Judge ALITO. Yes, I do. I don't think that activism has anything to do with being a liberal or being a conservative. It has to do with not following the proper judicial role. It has to do with a judge's substituting his or her own views for what the Constitution means and for what the laws mean.

Senator SESSIONS. Now, if a statute passed by Congress plainly violates the Constitution, is it an activist decision if the Court strikes it down, in your opinion?

Judge ALITO. No, I think that's been settled since Marbury v. Madison back at the beginning of the 19th century, that when a case is presented to the Supreme Court and there is a question raised about the constitutionality of a statute and the Court concludes that the statute is unconstitutional, it's the obligation of the Court to follow the Constitution and not the statute.

Senator SESSIONS. Well, if you take the definition of activism I think that Senator Hatch and others have used that indicates, as we just discussed, that it is departing from the faithful application of the law, I think you can have liberal and conservative activists. But I would just say to you the mere striking down of a statute that is unconstitutional is not activism, not if you are faithful to the Constitution and to the laws of the land.

And I would say this: I believe on our side of the aisle, the deep concern that we have about judicial activism is a legitimate one. We believe that there has been a liberal social agenda being promoted too often by the courts that is foreign to our history and contrary to the wishes of the American people. I believe your philosophy is not one to enforce a conservative activism. I believe your philosophy is simply to follow the law and let the political branches debate these issues and decide them through the proper political process.

Is that fair to say?

Judge ALITO. That's exactly correct. The judiciary should do what it is supposed to do, but it has to have respect for the political process. And our constitutional system sets up a Government under which most of the decisions, the policy decisions, the things that affect people in their daily lives—the spending of money, taxing, decisions about foreign policy, and many other areas—are to be made by the political branches of the Government, and the judiciary's role is confined to enforcing the Constitution and enforcing the laws and not going beyond that.

Senator SESSIONS. As you analyze how to interpret the Constitution of the United States or a statute passed by the U.S. Congress, do you believe that authoritative insight can be obtained by reading the opinions of the European Union?

Judge ALITO. I don't. I don't think that it's very helpful—in fact, I don't think it is helpful to look at the decisions of foreign courts for the interpretation of our Constitution. I think we can do very well with our own Constitution and our own judicial precedents and our own traditions. And I don't say that with disrespect to the other countries. But I don't think that there are insights to be provided on issues of American constitutional law by examining the decisions of foreign courts.

I think that it's very interesting from a political science perspective to see what they've done, and I've personally been interested in this over the years. And I think it's flattering to us that so many other countries have followed our judicial traditions. But on issues of interpretation of our Constitution, I don't think that that's useful.

Senator SESSIONS. Judge Alito, this is a big deal in our country today. Millions of Americans believe that the Court is losing discipline, that it is not remaining faithful to the Constitution. And, in fact, I share many of those views. A lot of people do.

Do you think that if a court, in fact, is not faithful to the law but allows personal or political or social views to influence their decisions, that this could in the long run endanger public respect for law and even undermine the great heritage of the rule of law that we have in this country?

Judge ALITO. I think that everybody who holds a public office under the Constitution has a solemn responsibility to follow the Constitution and the laws that define the role that that person, that officer is supposed to play. And I think that the continued success of our constitutional system and public respect for the constitutional system are dependent on people who have the public trust doing that, making a really strong effort to follow the provisions of the Constitution and other laws that define the role that they are supposed to play.

Senator SESSIONS. I would like to just once more touch on this Groody case in which there was a search of a young girl. A warrant was issued, was it not, by a Federal magistrate? Was it a Federal magistrate?

Judge ALITO. It was a State magistrate.

Senator SESSIONS. A State magistrate. And the police officers go to the State magistrate, and they get a warrant, and the magistrate says that the affidavit is made a part of the search warrant. And the officers take it, and in their search warrant, they made affidavit that the individuals in this house known for distributing drugs often had drugs on their persons. And they then went and executed the warrant after going to the court and getting approval. And they find people on the premises, and there were two females, and a female officer took the two females into an upstairs bedroom and did a quick search by asking them to pull down their outer garments—not all their garments—pull up their blouse, and determined they had no contraband or weapons on them. And that was that. And the case came before you, years later, I suppose, on a lawsuit against the police officers. And that is what you were ruling on, were you not?

Judge ALITO. That's right, whether they were liable for money damages. And under the law, if they had a reasonable belief that they were authorized by the warrant to search people who were found on the premises, then they should not be liable for civil damages. The warrant had been—the warrant had incorporated the affidavit for purposes of establishing probable cause, and the officers had said in the affidavit that there is probable cause to believe that people on the premises may have drugs on their possession, and the magistrate judge had accepted that by incorporating the affidavit for purposes of probable cause. And under those circumstances, I thought that at a minimum it was reasonable for the officers to believe that the judicial officer, the magistrate, had said that they were to do exactly what they did.

Senator SESSIONS. I agree.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Chairman SPECTER. Thank you, Senator Sessions. Thank you, Judge Alito.

At this point we will take a break until 5 minutes to 5.

[Recess 4:39 p.m. to 4:55 p.m.]

Chairman SPECTER. We now turn to Senator Feingold for 30 minutes.

Senator FEINGOLD. Judge, thank you for all your patience today and throughout this process.

Judge ALITO. Thank you, Senator.

Senator FEINGOLD. There has already been a lot of discussion of this topic today, but I would like to be sure I understand your opinion about whether the President, as Commander in Chief, can ignore or disobey an express prohibition that Congress has passed. The Torture Statute is one example, but, obviously, I could imagine a variety of others as well, as I am sure you could.

So here is the question: what are the limits, if any, on the President's power to do what he thinks is necessary to protect national security regardless of what laws Congress passes?

Judge ALITO. Well, when you say regardless of what laws Congress passes, I think that puts us in that third category that Justice Jackson outlined, the twilight zone, where according to Justice Jackson, the President has whatever constitutional powers he has under—he possesses under Article II, minus what is taken away by whatever Congress has done, by an implicit expression of opposition or the enactment of a statute. And to go beyond that point, I think we need to know the specifics of the case. We need to know the constitutional power that the President—the type of Executive power the President is asserting and the situation in which it's being asserted, and exactly what Congress has done.

Senator FEINGOLD. Then let us take a more concrete example. Does the President, in your opinion, have the authority, acting as Commander in Chief, to authorize warrantless searches of Americans' homes and wiretaps of their conversations in violation of the criminal and Foreign Intelligence Surveillance statutes of this country?

Judge ALITO. That's the issue that's been framed by the developments that have been in the news over the past few weeks, and as I understand the situation, it can involve statutory questions, the interpretation of FISA, and the provision of FISA that says that no wiretapping may be done except as authorized by FISA or otherwise authorized by law, and the meaning of the authorization for the use of military force, and then constitutional questions. And those would be—those are issues, as I said this morning, that may well result in litigation. They could come before me on the Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit. They certainly could come before the Supreme Court. And before—those are weighty issues involving two of the most important considerations that can arise in constitutional law, the protection of a country and the protection of people's fundamental rights, and I would have to know the specifics and the arguments that were made.

Senator FEINGOLD. They are indeed important questions, and that is why it is so important for me to try to figure out where you would be heading on this kind of an issue, and in fact, the question I just asked you was not something I formulated right now. It is the question that I asked word for word of the Attorney General of the United States at his confirmation hearing in January 2005. He answered as follows: "Senator, the August 30th memo—that's the memo that we sometimes refer to as the torture memo—has been withdrawn. It has been rejected, including that section regarding the Commander in Chief authority to ignore the criminal statutes. So it's been rejected by the Executive branch. I categorically reject it. And in addition to that, as I've said repeatedly today, this administration does not engage in torture and will not condone torture. And so what you're really discussing is a hypothetical situation," was the end of his quotation.

Well, we now know, of course, that it was not a hypothetical situation at all, and when the Attorney General said he categorically rejected the torture memo, including the section regarding the Commander in Chief's authority to ignore criminal statutes, he was also not being straight with this Committee. So I would like you to try to answer this question. Can the President violate or direct or authorize others to violate the criminal laws of the United States?

Judge ALITO. The President has the obligation, under Article II of the Constitution, to take care that the laws are faithfully executed. And the laws mean, first and foremost, the Constitution of the United States. That applies to everybody. It applies to the President. And the President, no less than anybody else, has to abide by the Constitution. And it also means that the President must take care that the statutes of the United States that are consistent with the Constitution are complied with, and the President has an obligation to follow those statutes as well.

Those are the important general principles, and the application of them in a particular case depends on the facts of the case and the arguments, and a judge needs to know the arguments that are being made on both sides before reaching a conclusion about the result. Those are the overriding considerations.

Senator FEINGOLD. I take that answer—and, obviously, you may not be able to comment on it because of the possibility of it coming before you—I take that to be a pretty serious answer in terms of the President's responsibilities to uphold and make sure that the laws are followed, including the criminal laws of the United States. So given the fact that this interpretation of the FISA law may well come before you at some point, I take it, as you have indicated, that would not only be an initial part of your analysis, but an awfully important analysis of whether the President has the power to override these criminal statutes. I certainly want to say for the record I do not believe the President has the ability to do that in this case, and in fact, I think, it would be almost impossible to interpret the FISA law in any other way than it clearly states, that it is the exclusive authority with regard to wiretapping outside of the criminal law.

You said earlier today, Judge, in response to Senator Leahy, that these types of gravely important constitutional questions very often do not end up being resolved by the judiciary, but rather by the other two branches. So what is the proper role of the judiciary in resolving a dispute over the President's power to disobey an express statutory prohibition?

Judge ALITO. Well, the judiciary has the responsibility to decide cases and controversies that are presented to the judiciary, and that means that there has to be a concrete dispute between parties, and the parties have to have standing under the Constitution, and there's a whole doctrine that's called the Political Question Doctrine, but it's a very misleading term for people who are not lawyers. It doesn't mean that a dispute has something to do with politics or anything like that, it means that the dispute—in the sense in which people usually use the term “politics”—it means that it’s a kind of dispute that the Supreme Court has outlined as being not a proper dispute to be resolved by the judiciary, involving a constitutional issue that should be resolved often between the branches of Government.

And I was talking earlier about some things that the President does that are not reviewable, vetoes, pardons, et cetera. There are things that Congress does that are not reviewable, impeachment, et cetera. In Baker v. Carr, Justice Brennan’s opinion outlined a whole list of factors that inform the analysis of whether something is a justiciable dispute, and sometimes these disputes between the branches of Government are held by the Supreme Court to fall into that category of being disputes that can’t properly be resolved by the courts.

Senator FEINGOLD. Do you expect that this matter of the warrantless searches is likely to be resolved with regard to the initial political question doctrine, or do you think it would be likely to be resolved on the merits with regard to the statute and the Constitution?

Judge ALITO. I don’t think I could answer that without providing sort of an advisory opinion about something that could well come up. If this does come up in litigation, then the courts have an obligation to decide whether it’s a justiciable dispute.

The Political Question Doctrine, this doctrine of issues that are not justiciable, often involves conflicts between the branches of the Government, and when a person is asserting the person’s individual rights are violated, that is the type of case that is often resolved, I mean typically resolved by the judiciary.

Senator FEINGOLD. Judge, are we not going to be in kind of a tough spot if we find out the Supreme Court cannot help us figure out whether the FISA law is an exclusive authority or not? Is that not going to be hard to resolve between the Executive and the Congress?

Judge ALITO. Well, Senator, when I was—when I referred—when I said in reference to Senator Leahy’s question that often disputes between the two branches are resolved without resorting to the courts, I don’t think I was referring specifically to this issue, and if I gave that impression, that was a false impression.

I think I was—what I meant to say, and what I hope that I did say, was that separation powers disputes in general sometimes fall within this doctrine.

Senator FEINGOLD. You noted a few times today that the questions of the President’s power in the wiretapping area and other areas will likely come before the courts, including the Supreme Court. You just did that. As I understand it, you have prepared for these hearings over the past few months with a variety of practice sessions. Some have called them moot courts or murder boards. Was the question of the President’s power in time of war to take action contrary to a Federal statute ever raised in any way during any of the practice sessions for these hearings?

Judge ALITO. I have had practice sessions on a great variety of subjects, and I don’t know whether that specific issue was brought up. It may have been. But what I can tell you—

Senator FEINGOLD. You do not recall whether this issue or the question of—

Judge ALITO. Well, exactly—no, the issue of FISA certainly has been something that I have studied, and FISA is not something that has come before me as a judge.

Senator FEINGOLD. But you do not recall whether or not this was covered in the practice session?

Judge ALITO. No, no. The specific question that you raised about the conflict between the President's authority to say that a statute enacted by Congress should not be followed, but the general area of wiretapping and foreign intelligence surveillance wiretapping—

Senator FEINGOLD. And in fact, the recent events that have led to this dispute—

Judge ALITO. And the recent—

Senator FEINGOLD [continuing]. And the possibility—

Judge ALITO. And the recent events.

Senator FEINGOLD [continuing]. That it may come before you, right, Judge?

Judge ALITO. That's correct, but—

Senator FEINGOLD. OK. Who was present at these practice sessions where these questions were discussed, and who gave you feedback or suggestions or made any comment whatsoever on the answers you gave?

Judge ALITO. Nobody at these sessions or at any of the sessions that I had has ever told me what to say in response to any question, and—

Senator FEINGOLD. I just asked—were there no comments or—

Judge ALITO. The comments that I've received—

Senator FEINGOLD. No advice?

Chairman SPECTER. Let him answer the question, Senator Feingold.

Judge ALITO. The advice that I've received has gone generally to familiarizing me with the format of this hearing, which is very different from the format of legal proceedings in which I have participated either as a judge or previously when I was arguing a legal issue as a lawyer. But nobody has told me what to say. Everything that I have said is an expression of my own ideas.

Senator FEINGOLD. And I do not question that. Judge, I asked you though whether anybody gave you any feedback or suggestions or made any comment whatsoever on the answers you gave in the practice session?

Judge ALITO. In general, yes, they've given me feedback, mostly about the form of the question—the form of the answers.

Senator FEINGOLD. Have you received any other advice or suggestions, directly or indirectly, from anyone in the administration on how you should answer these questions?

Judge ALITO. Not as to the substance of the question, no, Senator.

Senator FEINGOLD. Only as to the style?

Judge ALITO. That's correct, as to the format, not as to the—not as to what I should say I think about any of these questions, absolutely not. I've been a judge for 15 years, and I've made up my own mind during all that time, and—

Senator FEINGOLD. And again, I am not suggesting that. I am asking whether or not—

Judge ALITO. No, I just want to make that clear.

Senator FEINGOLD [continuing]. Somebody talked about the possible legal bases that the President might assert with regard to the ability to do this wiretapping outside of the FISA statute. Was that kind of a discussion held?

Judge ALITO. Nobody actually told me the bases that the President was asserting. I found the letter that was released last week or the week before by an Assistant Attorney General, setting out arguments relating to this, on the Internet myself, and printed it out, and I studied it to get some idea of some of the issues that might be involved here. And I looked at some other materials that legal scholars have put out on this issue, but nobody in the administration actually has briefed me on what the administration's position is with respect to this issue.

Senator FEINGOLD. Does it strike you as being inappropriate for members of the Department of Justice or the White House staff, who are currently defending the President's actions and the NSA domestic spying program, to be giving you advice on how you might handle questions about that topic in the hearing?

Judge ALITO. It would be very inappropriate for them to tell me what I should say, and I wouldn't have been receptive to that sort of advice, and I did not receive that kind of advice.

Senator FEINGOLD. Thank you, Judge. I want to come back to Mitchell v. Forsythe, in which you participated in the Solicitor General's Office. As we have already heard, that case considered the Government's argument that President Nixon's Attorney General, John Mitchell, should be granted absolute immunity for authorizing warrantless wiretaps, and you signed the Government's brief, making that argument. The Supreme Court rejected the claim of absolute immunity, noting that the Attorney General, acting in the inherently secretive national security context, has few built-in restraints. Justice White, writing for the Court in Mitchell, said, "The danger that high Federal officials will disregard constitutional rights in their zeal to protect national security is sufficiently real to counsel against affording such officials an absolute immunity."

Now, that statement still has a lot of relevance today, does it not?

Judge ALITO. Yes, it does. Absolute immunity is quite restricted under our legal system, but there are some high-ranking officials in all three branches of the Government, who do have absolute immunity just from civil damages, not from criminal liability or from impeachment, or removal from office, but for—or for injunctive relief, they can be ordered to comply with the Constitution, but as far as civil damages are concerned.

Senator FEINGOLD. But when you were at the Solicitor General's Office you wrote this memo about the case, saying, "I do not question the Attorney General should have this immunity for authorizing warrantless wiretap." Why did you not question the Attorney General's absolute immunity?

Judge ALITO. First of all, because it was the position that our client, whom we represented in an individual capacity, and it was his money that was at stake here, wanted to make. So we had an obligation that was somewhat akin to the obligation of a private attorney representing a client.

Second, it was an argument to which the Department was committed. It has been made in Kissinger v. Halperin in the Carter administration. It was repeated in Harlow v. Fitzgerald in the Reagan administration. In Harlow v. Fitzgerald, the Supreme Court, while rejecting the idea that cabinet officers in general should have absolute immunity from civil damages, had said something like, and I'm not going to be able to provide an exact quote, but something like, but the situation could well be different for people who are involved in sensitive national security matters or foreign matters.

Senator FEINGOLD. But you said in your memo that, quote, "I do not question the Attorney General's absolute immunity." You did not say it is, quote, "it is the position of our office," or as you were just saying, this administration has argued this in the past. You, in effect, injected yourself into the statement. Clearly, you were expressing your personal opinion on this legal issue, were you not?

Judge ALITO. Senator, I actually don't think I was expressing a personal opinion. I was saying that in my capacity as the writer of this memo who was recommending that the argument not be made, even though it was one that our client wanted to have made, I wasn't disputing the general argument to which the Department was committed. But I thought that we should take a different approach, that we should just argue the issue of appealability. But that was not the approach that was taken.

Senator FEINGOLD. Let us go on to the Solicitor General's brief in the Mitchell case, which you signed. That brief argues strongly for the need for absolute immunity, arguing that it is far more important to give the Attorney General as much latitude as possible in the national security context than to, as the brief puts it, quote, "defer the occasional malevolent official," from violating the law. Now, I find this statement particularly troubling today in light of the current administration's warrantless wiretapping in the name of national security. Do you agree with that statement in the brief, that broad deference is warranted even if some Attorneys General may abuse their power?

Judge ALITO. I think the issue of the scope of the immunity that the Attorney General has is now settled by Mitchell v. Forsythe. That is the law. It was considered—the argument was considered by the Supreme Court and they decided the question.

Judges have absolute immunity for their judicial decisions. Members of Congress and their staff have absolute immunity for things that they do that are integral to the legislative process. The President has absolute immunity from civil damages for the President's official acts. But absolute immunity is used very sparingly because of just the considerations that you're referring to. But the consideration on the other side is that people who are involved in lots of things that make other people angry—judges deciding cases, Members of Congress passing legislation, Presidents doing all sorts of things—would otherwise be subjected to the threat of so many political reprisals that they would be driven from office. It's a policy judgment that our law has made that some people should have absolute immunity, but it's used very sparingly.

Senator FEINGOLD. I find your comments interesting because, of course, the argument is often fairly made that after 9/11, we have to recognize the important role that our Executive plays in protecting the American people. But I would also argue that it is a particularly compelling time to make sure there isn't undue deference, given the types of powers that the Executive may seek to use in trying to fight this threat.

In your class notes from a seminar you gave at Pepperdine Law School on "Civil Liberties in Times of Emergency," you repeatedly raised the question of whether the judiciary has the capability to review certain types of determinations made by the Executive branch in national security cases in particularly factual issues, and we have recently seen an example of a court evidently expressing its frustration at a national security case when the facts presented to it by the Executive, which it had accepted, apparently did not hold up. Of course, I am talking about the Fourth Circuit's serious concern it hadn't been told that Jose Padilla needed to be held militarily as an enemy combatant because he had plotted to use a dirty bomb in the United States, and then finding out that three-and-a-half years later, the Justice Department wanted to transfer him to law enforcement authorities to stand trial for entirely different and much less serious crimes. In Padilla, the Fourth Circuit was originally willing to defer to the Executive's assertion that it needed to hold Padilla militarily. It was quite upset, and justifiably, I think, to find out that it might not have deserved such deference.

I am not going to ask you about that case because I know that case is coming before the Supreme Court, but I do want you to say something about the role of the judiciary in evaluating the facts presented to it in national security cases by the Executive branch. How does a court decide whether to rely on the facts presented to it by the Executive in a national security case?

Judge ALITO. What I was doing in that talk at Pepperdine was framing that question, and it's a lot easier to frame the question and to ask students to think about it and give me their reactions than it is to answer it. We've had examples of instances in which the judiciary in the past has had to confront this issue of reviewing factual presentations of the Executive in times of national crisis and there have been instances in which the judiciary has accepted—and I'm thinking of the Japanese internment cases, has accepted, which were one of the great constitutional tragedies that our country has experienced—has accepted factual presentations by the political—by the Executive branch that turned out not to be true, and from my reading of what went on, were not believed to be true by some high-ranking Executive officials at the time.

But there is the problem of judicial fact finding, which I was talking about earlier, and the context of things that may be taking place on the battlefield, for example, or things that are taking place in wartime probably are more difficult for the judiciary to evaluate than other factual questions. So that's the dilemma and I can't say that I can provide a clear answer to it.

Senator FEINGOLD. I do appreciate your referencing the Korematsu case and the problem there and how this is going to become an even more serious issue.

I want to switch to something else, the matter of the Vanguard case and the recusal. This has been characterized today as a non-issue. One Senator said it is a joke, it is ridiculous. Another one said it is an absurd, just plain absurd. And another, the same Senator said it was a blatant tactic to torpedo your nomination.

Well, Judge, I was the Senator that asked Judge Roberts very searching questions about whether or not he should have recused himself in the Hamdi case. I am sure he didn't enjoy it. I didn't particularly enjoy asking the questions, but in the end, I voted for him.

So let me just say to my colleagues, I reject this idea that when we come here to do our job of examining a nominee, that asking questions about an ethical issue is somehow a political game or an attempt to torpedo a nomination. You know, this idea of insulating yourselves and insulating the nominee before we even ask questions about a subject really is not conducive to the kind of process that this Chairman and this Ranking Member have made possible on the first nomination and this one, as well. So I think this is our job and I ask you these questions in this spirit. I might add, although my time is limited, that when you hear the actual facts of it, whatever conclusions we draw, it is certainly not a trivial matter. It is something that I think we ought to cover.

So let me begin by following up on Senator Kennedy's question regarding the promise you made to the Committee. In 1990, in your Senate questionnaire at the time of your nomination to the Third Circuit, you were asked how you would handle potential conflicts of interest. You told the Committee that you did not believe conflicts of interest relating to your financial interests were likely to arise. Nevertheless, you wrote, quote, "I would, however, disqualify myself from any cases involving the Vanguard Companies, the brokerage firm Smith Barney, or the First Federal Savings and Loan of Rochester, New York." You also wrote that you would disqualify yourself from any case involving your sister's law firm and from any case in which you participated or that was under your supervision in the United States Attorney's Office. Now, whether or not such recusals were required under the Federal recusal law, your statement to the Committee was clear, unambiguous, and not time limited. Now, I think for that reason alone, it is more than legitimate to ask some questions in front of this Committee about this.

This morning, Senator Hatch read from a letter from the ABA, apparently received yesterday, although we did not see it until today. That letter talked about what you told the ABA when you asked about Vanguard and the other ethics issues. You also answered a number of questions from Senator Hatch about the case.

But your responses to both the ABA, as far as we can tell from the letter, and Senator Hatch did not say anything at all about your promise to this Committee. Instead, you responded by saying that you didn't notice the recusal issue because you did not get so-called clearance sheets in this case because it was a pro se case and that you didn't, quote, "focus" on the issue of recusal. You also didn't mention something that the clerk of your court told us in a letter, that all judges have standing recusal lists that all cases—all cases—both pro se cases and cases where the parties are represented by counsel are checked against before they are sent to judges.

So my first question is this. After you were sworn in as judge, did you notify the court of your commitments to the Senate and request that the Vanguard Companies, Smith Barney, and First Federal Savings and Loan be included on your standing list of parties whose involvement in a case would require your recusal?

Judge ALITO. Senator, I don't have a copy of the initial computer list, so I can't answer that question. At some point, Vanguard—the computer lists that are available from, I think, 1992 and 1993 do not have Vanguard on it and I don't know why that is so—

Senator FEINGOLD. So you don't recall whether you notified them or not?

Judge ALITO. I do not know.

Senator FEINGOLD. Judge, we know you notified the court in 1990 that the U.S. Attorney's Office and your sister's law firm should be on your standing recusal list because you recused yourself from a number of such cases in the first several years you were on the bench. And we also finally received additional documents just yesterday from the court. These documents show that the Vanguard Companies and the other financial entities you listed in 1990 were not on your standing recusal list, which you approved in 1993, 1994, 1995, or 1996. Do you remember removing them from your standing recusal list, or is it fair to assume—or is it your belief that they were never put on your recusal list?

Judge ALITO. Senator, I don't know. I don't know whether I—whether they were removed. I don't think I ever told the clerk's office, take them off. It may be that at some point, I submitted a new list and they were not on the list. I do think it's important to keep in mind that this list is just an aid for the judge. This is not a comprehensive list of everything that will cause a judge to recuse himself.

Senator FEINGOLD. I understand. I just want to get the facts down. So to be clear on the facts, there is no evidence that you requested that Vanguard appear on your standing recusal list before 2003 when you informed the clerk that Vanguard and apparently also Smith Barney should be added, and you don't have any independent recollection of adding them to the list before then, either—

Judge ALITO. That's correct.

Senator FEINGOLD [continuing]. Isn't it?

Judge ALITO. That's correct.

Senator FEINGOLD. Now, you explained to the ABA that the problem in these cases was that the conflict screen system was not working in these cases and you told Senator Kennedy and Senator Hatch this morning that there were some oversights in this case, and you wrote in a November 10 letter to Senator Specter, due to an oversight, it did not occur to you that Vanguard's status might call for your recusal. But it seems that the problem was not that the screening program was not working or that there was a computer glitch, as you and the White House originally suggested, but either that Vanguard was not on your recusal list and you didn't remember your promise, or that you did not recognize that Vanguard was a party in the case. Isn't that a fair characterization?

Judge ALITO. Well, there was an oversight and the oversight was on my part in not focusing on the issue of recusal when I first received the case.

Senator FEINGOLD. So there wasn't—so the problem really—you can admit now, can't you, that this was not a computer glitch or a failure of the screening system. You are really saying something very different at this point.

Judge ALITO. I am not saying something different as to the screening system. The screening system was exactly what I described this morning, and I described that to the ABA, involving—

Senator FEINGOLD. But you don't think it was a computer glitch anymore, do you?

Judge ALITO. It was not a complete computer glitch, and if I could just explain, the origin of that was that when I was down here shortly after the President announced his intention to nominate me, I started to be—I started to receive questions about this Vanguard issue and I was receiving information from our clerk's office, and that based on the information that I received, it was my impression that there had been a computer glitch and that was the origin of that statement and that information that constitutional—

Senator FEINGOLD. Let me ask you this in my last few seconds. When you wrote to Judge Scirica indicating that you would recuse yourself from the Monga v. Ottenburg case, why did you feel the need to argue that you weren't, in fact, required to do so? Why not just admit you made a mistake, agree to recuse, and move on? Why didn't you just do that when the issue was raised here instead of coming up with these different explanations that in some cases, I think, have become unconvincing?

Judge ALITO. Well, Senator, when the recusal motion came in, I was disturbed by it and I wanted to see what the Code of Conduct exactly required in this context. Twelve years had gone by and no Vanguard case had come up and I hadn't had an occasion to look at this issue. And when I looked at it, it—the recusal motion was very harsh and it accused me of unethical conduct and I took it seriously and I wanted to see what the Code required, and I researched it and it was my conclusion that I was not required by the Code to recuse, but then I went on and said, but I still don't want to participate in this case and I would like to have the initial decision vacated and make sure that Ms. Maharaj had an entirely new appeal, and that's what I asked for and that's what was done.

Senator FEINGOLD. Thank you, Judge.

Senator HATCH. Mr. Chairman?

Chairman SPECTER. Senator Hatch?

Senator HATCH. On this particular issue, could I take just 2 minutes out of my next round?

Chairman SPECTER. If you want to comment, you may, and Senator Feingold can have an opportunity to respond.

Senator HATCH. Sure. On your form that you filled out, the question was, explain how you will resolve any potential conflict of interest, including the procedure you will follow in determining these areas of concern. Identify the categories of litigation and financial arrangements that are likely to present potential conflicts of interest during your initial service in the position to which you have been nominated. Now, this case arose 12 years later, didn't it?

Judge ALITO. Yes, it did, Senator.

Senator HATCH. That is hardly your initial service. To be held to that type of a standard, especially in a case that every ethics professor I know of says you didn't do anything wrong in, seems to me is going a little bit beyond the pale here and it is overblown. Frankly, I think you have got to read the whole thing. You are a good lawyer and you have agreed to do it, but it was during your initial service. Now, I guess you could interpret initial service to be a year or two or 3 years, but 12 years? I don't think so.

Senator FEINGOLD. Mr. Chairman?

Chairman SPECTER. Senator Feingold, do you care to—

Senator FEINGOLD. Yes. I mean, the fact is the nominee continues to have the holdings in Vanguard. They have appreciated in value. The time hasn't changed that. I think the Judge here was at least trying to suggest there might have been some mistake made here and instead we are getting sort of after-the-fact justifications that put some kind of a time limit on the promise he made to this Committee, and there was no time limit on the promise that was made to the Committee.

Senator HATCH. I still have 30 seconds left. Judge, No. 1, you have researched it and you didn't have to recuse yourself. You concluded that?

Judge ALITO. Yes, I did.

Senator HATCH. No. 2, these ethics professors have concluded that, right?

Judge ALITO. That is right.

Senator HATCH. No. 3, you have tried to comport with the highest standards of ethics during your whole 15 years on the bench, right?

Judge ALITO. I have tried to do that and to go beyond what—

Senator HATCH. No. 4, I believe we will have judges from that court who will say that you have.

Chairman SPECTER. Senator Feingold?

Senator FEINGOLD. Mr. Chairman, I am curious if this isn't a situation where he felt the need to recuse himself why he wouldn't have put Vanguard on the list as something he should recuse himself from—

Senator HATCH. Because he was mistaken, that is why.

Chairman SPECTER. We are going to move on now. I think that this slight exchange is permissible as an exception to our general rules. It livens up the afternoon.

[Laughter.]

Senator HATCH. I want my 2 minutes back.

Chairman SPECTER. Anything at about 5:30 in the afternoon is welcome.

[Laughter.]

Chairman SPECTER. Senator Graham?

Senator GRAHAM. That was an interesting exchange. I guess there is no rule against beating a dead horse or we would all have quit a long time ago, so—

[Laughter.]

Senator GRAHAM [continuing]. So in the next 30 minutes, I am going to ask you the same questions you have been asked for a whole day, and I hope you will understand if any of us come before a court and we can't remember Abramoff, you will tend to believe us.

[Laughter.]

Senator GRAHAM. Now I know why they give you a lifetime appointment for doing this. I was skeptical before, but I think once is enough in a lifetime.

For what it is worth, I think you have done a great job. You have been very forthcoming. You have seldom used—I may have to decide that you have answered a lot of questions and I particularly enjoyed Senator Feingold's questions about Executive power and I will pick up on that.

No. 1, from a personal point of view, do you believe the attacks on 9/11 against our Nation were a crime or an act of war?

Judge ALITO. That is a hard question to answer and—

Senator GRAHAM. Good.

Judge ALITO. That is a way of buying 30 seconds while I think about the answer. Senator, I think that what I think personally about this is really not something that would be—that would inform anything that I would have to do as a judge.

Senator GRAHAM. Well, Judge, I guess I disagree because I think we are at war and the law of armed conflict in a wartime environment is different than dealing with domestic criminal enterprises. Do you agree with that?

Judge ALITO. It certainly is.

Senator GRAHAM. We have laws on the books that protect us, the Fourth Amendment included, from our own law enforcement agencies coming against our own citizens. But we also have laws on the books during a time of war to protect our country from being infiltrated by foreign powers and bodies who wish to do harm to us. That is a totally different legal concept. Is that correct?

Judge ALITO. I am reluctant to get into this because I think that things like act of war can well have particular legal meanings in particular contexts and, you know, under the Constitution.

Senator GRAHAM. Do you doubt that our Nation has been in an armed conflict with terrorist organizations since 9/11, that we have been in an undeclared state of war?

Judge ALITO. In a lay sense, certainly we have been in a conflict with terrorist organizations. I am just concerned that in the law all these phrases can have particular meanings that are defined by the cases.

Senator GRAHAM. That is very important, and let's have a continuing legal education seminar here about the law of armed conflict in the Hamdi case. The Hamdi case is precedent. Is that correct? It is a decision of the Supreme Court.

Judge ALITO. It certainly is, yes.

Senator GRAHAM. And it tells us at least two to three things. No. 1, it tells us something that I find reassuring that the Bill of Rights, the Constitution, survive even in a time of war.

Judge ALITO. That is certainly true.

Senator GRAHAM. So there is a holding in that case that I want to associate myself with, and I think Senator Feingold does, that even during a time of war when your values are threatened by an enemy who does not adhere to those values, they will not be threatened by your Government unless there is a good reason. Do you agree with that?

Judge ALITO. Senator, I agree that the Constitution was meant to deal with all of the contingencies that our country was going to face. And I think the Framers hoped that we would not get involved in many wars, but they were students of history and I am sure they realized that there would be wars. They provided for war powers for the President and for Congress, and the structure is meant to apply both in peace and in war.

Senator GRAHAM. And you said in your previous testimony that no political figure in this country is above the law, even in a time of war.

Judge ALITO. That is correct.

Senator GRAHAM. There is another aspect of the Hamdi case that no one has picked up upon, but I will read to you. "In light of these principles, it is of no moment that the authorization to use military force does not use specific language of detention, because detention to prevent a combatant's return to the battle field is a fundamental incident of waging war. In permitting the use of necessary and appropriate force, Congress has clearly and unmistakably authorized detention in the narrow circumstances considered here, and those circumstances were a person alleged by the Executive branch to be an enemy combatant."

And one of the principles we found from the Hamdi case is that because we are, in my opinion, at war and Congress has authorized the President to use force against our enemies, the Executive branch, according to the Hamdi case, inherent to his power of being Commander in Chief, can detain people who have been caught on the battle field.

Does that make sense to you? Do you agree that is the principle of the Hamdi case?

Judge ALITO. That is the principle of the Hamdi case.

Senator GRAHAM. And it makes perfect sense because if we catch someone in Afghanistan or Iraq or any other place in the world who is committing acts of violence against our troops or our forces, or we catch people here in the United States who have infiltrated our country for the purpose of sabotaging our Nation, there is no requirement in the law to catch and release these people, is there?

Judge ALITO. Well, Hamdi speaks to the situation of an individual who was caught on the battlefield.

Senator GRAHAM. In the history of our Nation, when we captured German and Japanese prisoners, was there ever a legal requirement anybody advanced that after a specific period of time you have to let them go?

Judge ALITO. It is my understanding that the prisoners of war who were taken in World War II were held until the conflict was over.

Senator GRAHAM. It would be an absurd conclusion for a court or anyone else to tell the executive branch that if you caught somebody legitimately engaged in hostile activities against the United States that you have to let them go and go back and fight us again. That makes no sense, does it?

Judge ALITO. Well, I explained what my understanding is about how this matter of holding prisoners was handled in prior wars.

This issue was addressed in Hamdi, in what was discussed in Hamdi in the context of—

Senator GRAHAM. In the Padilla case, they held an American citizen who was engaged in hostile activities against the United States allegedly as an enemy combatant and the Fourth Circuit said the President, during a time of hostility, has the ability to do that.

Do you agree that that is a part of our jurisprudence?

Judge ALITO. That was the holding in Padilla.

Senator GRAHAM. Yes.

Judge ALITO. Yes, that was the holding of the lower court in— of Padilla, yes.

Senator GRAHAM. Now, the point I am trying to make is that when you are engaged in hostilities, there are some things that we assume the President will do. If we don't kill the enemy, we capture the enemy. The President, as the Commander in Chief, will make sure they don't go back to the battle.

No. 2, if we catch someone and there is a question to their status, whether or not you are prisoner of war under the Geneva Conventions, are you an enemy combatant, who traditionally in our constitutional democracy determines whether or not—the status of a person engaged in hostilities?

Judge ALITO. Well, Padilla—I am sorry—Hamdi said that a person who is being detained, an unlawful person who is asserted to be an unlawful combatant and who is being detained, has the right—has due process rights. And the issue of the type of tribunal—and they explained to some degree how that would be handled, but the identity of the particular tribunal that would be required to adjudicate that was not an issue that was decided in Hamdi or any of the other cases.

Senator GRAHAM. Can you show me an example in American jurisprudence where the question of status, whether a person was a lawful combatant or an unlawful combatant, was decided by a court and not the military?

Judge ALITO. I can't think of an example. I can't say that I am able to survey the whole history of this issue, but I can't think of one.

Senator GRAHAM. Can you show me a case in American jurisprudence where an enemy prisoner held by our military was allowed to bring a lawsuit against our own military regarding their detention?

Judge ALITO. I am not aware of such a case.

Senator GRAHAM. Is there a constitutional right for a foreign non-citizen enemy prisoner to have access to our courts to sue regarding their condition of confinement under our Constitution?

Judge ALITO. Well, I am not aware of a precedent that addresses the issue.

Senator GRAHAM. Do you know of any case where an enemy prisoner of war brought a habeas petition in World War II objecting to their confinement to our Federal judiciary?

Judge ALITO. There may have been a lower court case. I am trying to remember the exact status of the individual and it was—

Senator GRAHAM. Well, let me help you. There were two cases. One of them involved six saboteurs, the In Re Quirin—

Judge ALITO. Quirin case, yes.

Senator GRAHAM. Would you agree with me that that case stood for the proposition that in a time of war or declared hostilities, an illegal combatant, even though they may be an American citizen—the proper forum for them to be tried in is a military tribunal and they are not entitled to a jury trial as an American citizen in a non-wartime environment?

Judge ALITO. Well, those were a number of German saboteurs who landed by submarine in the United States and they were taken into custody and they were tried before a military tribunal and the case went up to the Supreme Court. The Supreme Court sustained their being tried before a military tribunal. At least one of them claimed to be an American citizen, and most of them—I think all but one or two actually were executed.

Senator GRAHAM. And our Supreme Court said that is the proper forum during a wartime environment to try people who are engaged in illegal combat activities against our country. Is that correct?

Judge ALITO. Well, they sustained what was done under the circumstances that I described.

Senator GRAHAM. Well, that would be a precedent, then, wouldn't it?

Judge ALITO. It is the precedent, yes.

Senator GRAHAM. OK. There was a case involving six German soldiers captured in Japan and transferred to Germany, and they brought a habeas petition to be released in the Eisen—I can't remember the—

Judge ALITO. Eisentrager.

Senator GRAHAM. Well, you know it. Tell me what the court decided there.

Judge ALITO. Well, they were—as I recall, they were Germans who were found in China assisting the Japanese—

Senator GRAHAM. China and not Japan. You are right.

Judge ALITO [continuing]. Assisting the Japanese after the termination of the war with Germany, and they were unsuccessful in their habeas petition. And that was interpreted prior to the Supreme Court's decisions a couple of years ago to mean that there was a lack of habeas jurisdiction over them because they were being held in territory that was not U.S. territory.

Senator GRAHAM. For those who are watching who are not lawyers, generally speaking in all of the wars that we have been involved in, we don't let the people trying to kill us sue us, right? And we're not going to let them go at an arbitrary time period if we think they are still dangerous because we don't want to go have to shoot at them again or let them shoot at us again.

Is that a good summary of the law of armed conflict?

Judge ALITO. The precedent—I don't know whether I would put it quite that broadly, Senator.

[Laughter.]

Judge ALITO. The precedent that you—Johnson v. Eisentrager, of course, has been substantially modified, if not overruled. Ex Parte Quirin, of course, is still a precedent. There was a lower court precedent involving someone who fought with the Italian Army and I can't remember the exact name of it, and that was the case that I thought you were referring to when you first framed the question. But those are the precedents in the area.

Then if you go back to the Civil War, there is Ex Parte Milligan and a few others. Now, in Hamdi—

Senator GRAHAM. We don't have to go back that far.

Judge ALITO. Well, in this area, I think it is actually instructive to do it. But in Hamdi, the Court addressed this question of how long the detention should take place and they said—because they were responding to the argument that this situation is not like the wars of the past which had a more or less fixed—it was not anticipated that they would go on for a generation and they said we will get to that if it develops that way.

Senator GRAHAM. Who is better able to determine if an enemy combatant, properly held, has ongoing intelligence value to our country? Is it the military or a judge?

Judge ALITO. On intelligence matters, I would think that is an area where the judiciary doesn't have expertise. But we do get into this issue I was discussing with Senator Feingold about the degree to which—the balance between the judiciary's performing its function in cases involving individual rights and its desire not to intrude into areas where it lacks expertise particularly in times of war and national crisis.

Senator GRAHAM. So having said that, if we have a decision to make as a country when to let someone go who is an enemy combatant, I guess we have got two choices: we can have court cases, or we can allow the military to make a determination if that person still presents a threat to the United States, and whether or not that person has an intelligence value by further confinement.

Do you feel the courts possess the capabilities and the competence to make those two decisions better than the military?

Judge ALITO. The courts do not have expertise in foreign affairs or in military affairs, and they certainly should recognize that. And that is one powerful consideration in addressing legal issues that may come up in this context. But there is the other powerful consideration that it is the responsibility of the courts to protect individual rights in cases that are properly before the Court, cases where they have jurisdiction in one way or another, cases that are fit for judicial resolution.

Senator GRAHAM. I totally understand that, but our courts have not by tradition gotten involved in running military jails during time of war. I can't think of one time where a prisoner of war housed in the United States during World War II, a German Nazi or a Japanese prisoner was able to go and sue our own troops about their confinement. I think there is a reason there is none of those cases. It would lead to chaos.

Now, when it comes to treating detainees and how to treat them, I think the Congress has a big, big role to play, and I think that the courts have a big role to play. Are you familiar with the Geneva Convention?

Judge ALITO. I have some familiarity with it.

Senator GRAHAM. Do you believe it has been good for our country to be a signatory to that convention?

Judge ALITO. I think it has, but it's not really my area of authority. That's Congress's area of authority.

Senator GRAHAM. Well, just as an American citizen, are you proud of the fact that your country has signed up to the Geneva Convention and that we have laid out a system of how we treat people who fall into our hands and how we will engage in war?

Judge ALITO. I think the Geneva Convention—and I'm not an expert on the Geneva Conventions, but I think they express some very deep values of the American people, and we have been a signatory of them for some time, and I think that—

Senator GRAHAM. Now, let's go back to the legal application of the Geneva Convention. If someone was captured by an American force and detained, either at home or abroad, would the Geneva Convention give that detainee a private cause of action against the U.S. Government?

Judge ALITO. Well, that's an issue, I believe, in the Hamdan case, which is an actual case that's before the Supreme Court. It goes to the question of whether a treaty is self-executing or not. Some treaties are self-executing.

Senator GRAHAM. Has there ever been an occasion in all the wars we have fought where the Geneva Convention was involved whether the courts treated the Geneva Convention as a private cause of action to bring a lawsuit against our own troops?

Judge ALITO. I'm not familiar with such a case, but I can't say whether there might be some case or not.

Senator GRAHAM. Now, when it comes to what authority the Executive has during a time of war, we know the Supreme Court has said it is implicit from the force resolution that you can detain people captured on the battlefield. Hamdi stands for that proposition. Is that correct?

Judge ALITO. That's what was involved in Hamdi.

Senator GRAHAM. The problem that Senator Feingold has and I have and some of the rest of us have is does that force resolution—does it have the legal effect of creating the exception to the FISA court? And I know that may come before you, but let's talk about generally how the law works.

You say that the President has to follow every statute on the books unless the statute allows an exception for the President. Is that a fair statement? Just being President, you cannot set aside the law.

Judge ALITO. The President has to follow the law, and that means the Constitution and the laws that are enacted consistent with the Constitution.

Senator GRAHAM. There is a statute that we have on the books against torture. Are you familiar with that statute?

Judge ALITO. The Convention Against Torture, well, the statutes implementing the Convention Against Torture.

Senator GRAHAM. And the statute provides the death penalty for somebody who violates the conventions as a possible punishment.

Judge ALITO. That's right. If death results, the death penalty is available.

Senator GRAHAM. So this idea that Senator McCain somehow banned torture is not quite right. The Convention on Torture and the statute that we have implementing that convention were on the books long before this year. Is that correct?

Judge ALITO. Yes, they were.

Senator GRAHAM. Do you believe that any President, because we are at war, could say, “The statute on torture gets in the way of my ability to defend the United States, therefore, I don’t have to comply with it”?

Judge ALITO. The President has to comply with the Constitution and the laws of the United States that are enacted consistent with the Constitution. That is the principle. The President is not above the Constitution and the laws.

Now, there are issues about the interpretation of the laws and the interpretation of the Constitution, but—

Senator GRAHAM. Are you a strict constructionist?

Judge ALITO. I think it depends on what you mean by that phrase, and if you—

Senator GRAHAM. Well, let’s forget that. We will never get to the end of that.

[Laughter.]

Senator GRAHAM. Have you heard the term used?

Judge ALITO. I have heard the term used.

Senator GRAHAM. Is it fair to say that when it is used by politicians, people like me, we are trying to tell the public we want a judge who looks at things very narrowly, that does not make a bunch of stuff up? Is that a fair understanding of what a strict constructionist may be in the political world?

Judge ALITO. Well, if a strict constructionist is a judge who doesn’t make things up, then I’m a strict constructionist.

Senator GRAHAM. There you go.

[Laughter.]

Judge ALITO. I agree with that, Senator.

Senator GRAHAM. Now, if there is a force resolution that Congress passes to allow any President to engage in military activity against someone trying to do us harm, and the force resolution says the President is authorized to use all necessary and appropriate force against those nations, organizations, or persons he determines planned, authorized, committed, or aided the terrorist attacks on September 11, 2001, or just make it generic, if someone argued that that declaration by Congress was a blanket exemption to the warrant requirement under FISA, would that be a product of strict constructionist legal reasoning?

Judge ALITO. I think that a strict constructionist, as you understand it, would engage in a certain process in evaluating that question, and a strict constructionist, a person who interprets the law—and that’s how I would put it. A person who interprets the law would look at the language of the authorization for the use of military force and legislative history that was informative, maybe past practices—were there prior enactments that are analogous to that? What was the understanding of those? And a host of other considerations that might go into the interpretive process.

Senator GRAHAM. I guess what I am saying, Judge, is I can understand when the Court ruled that the President has it within his authority to detain people on the battlefield under this force resolution, that makes sense. I understand why the President believes he has the ability to surveil the enemy at a time of war. And the idea that our President or this administration took the law in their own hands and ignored precedent of other Presidents or case law and just tried to make a power grab I don't agree with. But this is really not about you, so you don't have to listen. I am talking to other people right now.

[Laughter.]

Senator GRAHAM. The point I am trying to make is what Justice Jackson made, that when it comes to issues like this, when we surveil our enemy and we cross our own borders and we have information about our own people, we need, in my opinion, Judge, to have the President at the strongest. And that would be when Congress through collaboration with the President comes up with a method of dealing with that situation, and that it could be very dangerous in the long run if we overinterpret war resolutions, because I have got a problem with that. And I believe that if we don't watch it and we overinterpret these resolutions, we will have a chilling effect for the next President. The next President who wants to use force to protect us in a justifiable manner may be less likely to get that resolution approved if we go too far.

And, Judge, you are likely to rule on these issues, and my hope is before you rule that we all sit down between the Executive and the legislative and we talk about this. Because as you said before, our Nation, not only our legal system, is strongest when we work together. Executive power, the Constitution allows the President to nominate judges. If Congress tried to change that by statute and say that we would like to pick the judges, what would happen, hypothetically?

Judge ALITO. I have a certain self-interest in the answer to that question.

Senator GRAHAM. I thought you might.

[Laughter.]

Judge ALITO. I think that—

Senator GRAHAM. Clearly—clearly—the statute would fall to the Constitution. A veto is not reviewable by courts because that is basically a political decision. Under the Constitution, what is the vote requirement to get confirmed to the Supreme Court?

Judge ALITO. It is a majority.

Senator GRAHAM. Hypothetically speaking, what if the Senate passed a statute or had a rule that said you cannot get a vote to be on the Supreme Court unless you get 60 votes? How does that sit with you?

Judge ALITO. Speaking in my personal capacity or in my judicial capacity?

[Laughter.]

Senator GRAHAM. Your judicial capacity.

Judge ALITO. Senator, I just don't think I should answer questions like—constitutional questions like that. I need to know—

Senator GRAHAM. What if the Senate said during an impeachment that we don't want a two-thirds vote of the Senate, we want a majority vote, would the Senate's action fall to the Constitution?

Judge ALITO. Well, when—there are certain questions that seem perfectly clear, and I guess there is no harm in answering—

Senator GRAHAM. Is there any doubt in your mind the Constitution requires a majority vote to be on the Supreme Court or any other Federal judicial office?

Judge ALITO. You know what? I remember this phrase from law school—

Senator GRAHAM. Is that a super duper precedent?

Judge ALITO. I think it's what we call in law school "the slippery slope," and if you start answering the easy questions, you're going to be sliding down the ski run and into the hard questions, and that's what—

Senator GRAHAM. Well, then—

Judge ALITO.—I'm not too happy to do.

Senator GRAHAM. That is what I tried to get you to do, and I am glad you didn't do it.

The bottom line to this exercise is you have got a job, I have got a job, and what disturbs me a bit is that we are beginning to hold the lawyer responsible for the client. And in my remaining time here, what damage could be done to the legal profession or the judiciary if people in my profession start holding your client's position against the advocate?

Judge ALITO. Well, I think it has been traditionally recognized that lawyers have an obligation to their clients. That's how our legal system works. Some lawyers have private clients. Some lawyers work for Government agencies, and the lawyer-client relationship there is not exactly the same. But, still, there is a lawyer-client relationship. And I think our whole system is based on the idea that justice is best served—

Senator GRAHAM. If you were an Attorney General representing a State that passed a ban on partial-birth abortion, would it be fair to that Attorney General if they came before this Committee to hold that against them if you disagreed with them on the subject matter?

Judge ALITO. I think that Attorneys General—I can speak to the issue of the Attorney General of the United States because I know there's a statute and there's an understanding about what the Attorney General of the United States will do when an Act of Congress is called into question, and the obligation of the Attorney General is to defend the constitutionality of the Act of Congress unless no reasonable—

Senator GRAHAM. A lawyer's obligation is to defend their client's interest. Is that an accurate statement of what a lawyer is supposed to do?

Judge ALITO. It certainly is, yes.

Senator GRAHAM. No matter whether that client is popular or not or the position is popular or not. Is that correct?

Judge ALITO. Consistent with ethical obligations and professional responsibility, yes, indeed.

Senator GRAHAM. What has this process been like for you and your family? And in a short period of time, could you tell us how to improve it?

Judge ALITO. Well, it's been a combination of—at times it's been a thrill and at times it's been extremely disorienting. I spent the last 15 years as a judge on the court of appeals, and you probably could not think of a more cloistered existence than a judge on the court of appeals. Most of the time nobody other than the parties pays attention to what we do. When an article is written in the paper about one of our decisions, it's "a Federal appeals court in Philadelphia” or in whatever city. And this has been a strange process for me. I made some reference to that yesterday, but I understand the reason for it. And I am reluctant in my current capacity as a nominee to offer any suggestions about the process. I think that’s—you’re carrying out your responsibility. I spoke about the fact that different people under the Constitution have different obligations, and you have the advice and consent function, Congress, the Senate does. And I think it’s for the Senate to decide what it should do in this area.

Chairman SPECTER. Thank you, Senator Graham.

Senator SCHUMER?

Senator SCHUMER. Thank you, Senator Specter. And I want to thank you, Judge Alito. It has been a long day.

Judge Alito, in 1985 you wrote that the Constitution—these are your words—does not protect a right to an abortion. And you said to Senator Specter a long time ago, I think it was about 9:30 this morning, 9:45, that those words accurately reflected your view at the time.

Now let me ask you, do they accurately reflect your view today? Do you stand by that statement? Do you disavow it? Do you embrace it? It is OK if you distance yourself from it and it is fine if you embrace it. We just want to know your view.

Judge ALITO. Senator, it was an accurate statement of my views at the time. That was in 1985, and I made it from my vantage point as an attorney in the Solicitor General’s Office, but it was an expression of what I thought at that time. If the issue were to come before me as a judge, if I am confirmed and if this issue were to come up, the first question that would have to be addressed is the question of stare decisis, which I have discussed earlier, and it’s a very important doctrine and that was the starting point and the ending point of the joint opinion in Casey. And then if I were to get beyond that, if a court were to get beyond the issue of stare decisis, then I would have to go through the whole judicial decision-making process before reaching a conclusion.

Senator SCHUMER. But sir, I am not asking you about stare decisis. I am not asking you about cases. I am asking you about this, the United States Constitution. As far as I know, it is the same as it was in 1985 with the exception of the 27th Amendment, which has nothing to do with what we are talking about. Regardless of case law, in 1985, you stated—you stated it proudly, unequivocally, without exception—that the Constitution does not protect a right to an abortion. Do you believe that now?

Judge ALITO. Senator—

Senator SCHUMER. I am not asking about case law. I am not asking about stare decisis. I am asking your view about this document and whether what you stated in 1985 you believe today, you have changed your view, you have distanced your view. You can give me a direct answer. It doesn’t matter right now which way you answer, but I think it is important that you answer that question.

Judge ALITO. The answer to the question is that I would address that issue in accordance with the judicial process as I understand it and as I have practiced it. That is the only way I can answer that question.

Senator SCHUMER. Sir, I am not asking for the process. Obviously, you would use a judicial mindframe. You have been a judge for 15 years. I am asking you, you stated what you believed the Constitution contained. You didn't say the Constitution as interpreted by this or that. You didn't say the Constitution with this exception or that exception. It was a statement you made directly. You made it proudly. You said you are particularly proud of that personal belief that you had. Do you still believe it?

Judge ALITO. And Senator, I would make up my mind on that question if I got to it, if I got past the issue of stare decisis, after going through the whole process that I have described. I would need to know the case that was before me and I would have to consider the arguments, and they might be different arguments from the arguments that were available in 1985—

Senator SCHUMER. But sir, I am not asking you about case law. Now, maybe you read a case and it changed your view of the Constitution. I am asking you, and not about the process you would use. I am asking you about your view of the Constitution, because as we all know, and we are going to talk about stare decisis in a few minutes, that if somebody believes, a judge, especially a Supreme Court Justice, that something is unconstitutional, even though stare decisis is on the books, governs the way you are and there is precedent on the books for decades, it is still important to know your view of what the Constitution contains.

And let me just say, a few hours ago, in the same memo, I can't remember who asked the question, but you said you backed off one of the statements you had written. You said it was inapt, which taught me something. I didn't know that there was a word that was inapt, but you said that it was inapt to have written that the elected branches are supreme. So you discussed that, your view on that issue, without reference to case law because there was no reference to case law when you wrote it. There was no reference to case law when you wrote this.

Can you tell us your view, just one more time, your view about the Constitution not protecting the right to an abortion, which you have talked about before and you said you personally proudly held that view. Can you?

Judge ALITO. The question about the supremacy—the statement about the supremacy of the elected branches of government went to my understanding of the constitutional structure of our country, and so certainly that's a subject that it is proper for me to talk about. But the only way—you are asking me how I would decide an issue—

Senator SCHUMER. No, I am not. I am asking you what you believe is in the Constitution.

Judge ALITO. You are asking me my view of a question that—

Senator SCHUMER. I am not asking about a question. I am asking about the Constitution, in all due respect, and something you wrote about before—

Judge ALITO. The Constitution contains the Due Process Clause of the Fifth Amendment and the 14th Amendment. It provides protection for liberty. It provides substantive protection. And the Supreme Court has told us what the standard is for determining whether something falls within the scope of the protection—

Senator SCHUMER. Does the Constitution protect the right to free speech?

Judge ALITO. Certainly, it does. That is in the First Amendment.

Senator SCHUMER. So why can't you answer the question of does the Constitution protect the right to an abortion the same way, without talking about stare decisis, without talking about cases, et cetera?

Judge ALITO. Because answering the question of whether the Constitution provides a right to free speech is simply responding to whether there is language in the First Amendment that says that the freedom of speech and freedom of the press can't be abridged. Asking about the issue of abortion has to do with the interpretation of certain provisions of the Constitution.

Senator SCHUMER. Well, OK. I know you are not going to answer the question. I didn't expect really that you would, although I think it would be important that you would. I think it is part of your obligation to us that you do, particularly that you stated it once before. So any idea that you are approaching this totally fresh without any inclination or bias goes by the wayside.

But I do have to tell you, Judge, your refusal, I find troubling. It is sort of as if I asked a friend of mine 20 years ago, if a friend of mine 20 years ago said to me, he said, "You know, I really can't stand my mother-in-law," and a few weeks ago I saw him and I said, "Do you still hate your mother-in-law?" He said, "Well, I'm now married to her daughter for 21 years, not 1 year." I said, "No, no, no. Do you still hate your mother-in-law?" And he said, "Mmm, I can't really comment." What do you think I would think?

Judge ALITO. Senator, I think—

Senator SCHUMER. Let me just move on. You have a very nice mother-in-law. I see her right here and she seems like a very nice person.

[Laughter.]

Senator SCHUMER. OK.

Judge ALITO. I have not changed my opinion of my mother-in-law. That's a question—

Senator SCHUMER. I am glad you haven't. She seems nice.

Judge ALITO.—I can answer that question.

Senator SCHUMER. Let me go now to stare decisis, because what you have said is you start out with stare decisis, although I think a lot of people would argue you start out with the Constitution upon which stare decisis is built. OK. Now, you have tried to reassure us that stare decisis means a great deal to you. You point out that prior Supreme Court precedents like Roe will stand because of the principle. While you are on the Third Circuit, of course, you can't overrule precedents of the Supreme Court, but when you are on the Supreme Court, you have a little bit more flexibility.

I just want to ask you this. Stare decisis is not an immutable principle, right? You have said that before in reference to Senator Feinstein. When Chief Justice Roberts was here, he said it was discretionary. So it is not immutable, is that right? You have told us it is not an inexorable command. It doesn't require you to follow the precedent.

Judge ALITO. It is a strong principle—

Senator SCHUMER. Correct.

Judge ALITO [continuing]. And in general, courts follow precedents. They need a special—the Supreme Court needs a special justification for overruling a prior case.

Senator SCHUMER. But they have found them, and I think you went over this. I can't recall if it was Senator Kohl or Senator Feinstein, but you went through some cases. In recent years, the Court has overruled various cases in a rather short amount of time. You mentioned, I think it was, National League of Cities about fair labor standards and it was overruled just 9 years later by Garcia. Stanford v. Kentucky was overruled by Roper v. Simmons. Bowers v. Hardwick was overruled by Lawrence v. Texas. And, of course, Brown v. Board was overruled by Plessy. So the bottom line, I mean, we can go through this—

Senator HATCH. Plessy was overruled by Brown.

Senator SCHUMER. I mean, Plessy was overruled by Brown. I apologize.

So the only point I am making is that despite stare decisis, it doesn't mean a Supreme Court Justice who strongly believes in stare decisis won't ever overrule a case, is that correct? You can give me a yes or no on that. It is pretty easy.

Judge ALITO. Yes.

Senator SCHUMER. Of course. OK. So now let us try this another way. Here is a quote: "Stare decisis provides continuity to our system. It provides predictability, and in our process of case-by-case decisionmaking, I think it is a very important and critical concept." The statement sounds reasonable to me. It sounds to me like it is something you said to Senator Specter and others, right?

Judge ALITO. I agree with the statement.

Senator SCHUMER. Yes. Let me show you who said that statement. It was Justice Thomas. Justice Thomas came before us and stated that, and yet when he got on the Supreme Court, he voted to overrule, or expressed a desire to overrule, a whole lot of cases, including some very important ones on the Court. Here are some quotes. "Casey must be overruled." "Buckley v. Valeo should be overruled." "Bacchus," just last year, "should be overruled." And as you can see, it is a very large number of cases, and these aren't all of them. In fact, Justice Thomas said that a 1789 unanimous case by the Supreme Court, Calder v. Bull, which no one talked about for centuries, should be overruled. So what do you think of Justice Thomas's theory of stare decisis and how he applies it?

Judge ALITO. Well, Senator, I have explained my understanding of the doctrine of stare decisis and it is important to me. I think it is an important part of our legal system. It is—

Senator SCHUMER. How about what Justice Thomas—what do you think of what he is doing?

Judge ALITO. Well, I don't think I should comment on all of those cases.

Senator SCHUMER. OK. Let me just say this. You may not want to comment, but his fellow Justice, Justice Scalia, did. Here is what Justice Scalia said about Justice Thomas and stare decisis, and remember what he said when he was sitting in the same chair you are sitting in. He pledged fealty to stare decisis.

Justice Scalia said, Justice Thomas, quote, "doesn't believe in stare decisis, period. If a constitutional line of authority is wrong, he would say, let us get it right.” Then Justice Scalia said, “I wouldn’t,” speaking of himself, “I wouldn’t do that.” And it is particularly relevant, because if you believe something is not in the Constitution, at least the way Justice Thomas talks about stare decisis, he would let the Constitution overrule it and stare decisis would go by the wayside, and I am not saying Justice Thomas was disingenuous with the Committee when he was here. I am just saying that stare decisis is something of an elastic concept that different judges apply in different ways.

So let me go to another one here. I think I have covered everything I want to do with Justice Thomas. Here is another quote. “There is a need for stability and continuity in the law. There is a need for predictability in legal doctrine and it is important that the law not be considered as shifting every time the personnel of the Supreme Court changes.” That again sounds reasonable to me, quite a lot like what you said. You don’t have any dispute with that statement, do you?

Judge ALITO. No, I don’t.

Senator SCHUMER. OK. Well, let us see who said that one. It was Robert Bork when he came before this Committee to be nominated. Now, here is what Judge Bork wrote in the National Review Online just a few weeks ago. He wrote, quote, “Overturning Roe v. Wade should be the sine qua non of a respectable jurisprudence. Many Justices have made the point that what controls is the Constitution itself, not what the Court has said about it in the past.” And even before his hearing, by the way, he sort of cut back on what he said at the hearing, I guess. It may have been in a different context, but here is a quote that he said a year, I think, before he came before us. He said, “I don’t think that in the field of constitutional law precedent is all that important.” He said, in effect, that a Justice’s view of the Constitution trumps stare decisis. That is not an unrespectable view. It is probably not the majority view of Justices, but it is there.

So, for example, it was his view, similar to Justice Thomas, that the Constitution does not protect a right to—that if the Constitution does not protect the right to an abortion, as you wrote in 1985, but we are not talking about how you feel today, it would be overruled. It should be overruled despite stare decisis. And one of the things I am concerned about here is that what you wrote, and I think Senator Kohl went over it a little bit, is what you wrote about Judge Bork in 1988. And by the way, this was not when you were working for someone or applying for a job. As I understand it, you were the U.S. Attorney in New Jersey, well ensconced, a very good U.S. Attorney, and it was with some New Jersey news outlet. I saw the cite, but I didn’t know what it was. You said that, about Justice Bork, “I think he was one of the most outstanding nominees of this century. He’s a man of unequalled ability,” and here’s the key point, “understanding of constitutional history, and then someone who has thought deeply throughout his entire life.”

Now, first, one of the most outstanding of the 20th century with Oliver Wendell Holmes and Benjamin Cardozo, and people you have expressed admiration for, Frankfurter, and Brennan and Harlan, I find it disconcerting that you would say that he is a great nominee of the 20th century in his understanding of constitutional law, and yet he so abjectly rejects stare decisis.

Judge ALITO. Well, I certainly was not aware of what he had said about stare decisis when I made those comments. I have explained those comments. They were made when I was an appointee of President Reagan, and Judge Bork was President Reagan's—

Senator SCHUMER. Excuse me. You were not working in the White House. You were a U.S. Attorney prosecuting cases. There was no obligation for you to say what you said, right?

Judge ALITO. No, but I had been in the Department of Justice at the time of—Senator SCHUMER. I know, but it was a voluntary interview with some New Jersey news outlet, is that correct?

Judge ALITO. And I was asked a question about Judge Bork, and I had been in the Department at the time of his nomination, and I was an appointee of President Reagan, and I was a supporter of the nomination.

Senator SCHUMER. Let's go to the next line of questioning here, but again, the point being judges, Justices, overrule cases despite stare decisis, particularly when they think the Constitution dictates otherwise. And now I want to turn to your own record in the Third Circuit, something you mentioned yesterday and today. When you have been on the Third Circuit, of course, you had to follow Supreme Court precedent, and you professed a whole lot of times your desire to do that, and I am not disputing that here. But it is also true that when you were on the Third Circuit, a more apt analogy in terms of stare decisis would be about Third Circuit precedents, because if you should get on the Supreme Court, stare decisis will apply to Supreme Court decisions the way stare decisis to a Third Circuit Judge applies to Third Circuit decisions. That is pretty fair, right?

Judge ALITO. Yes, and I've tried to follow Third Circuit precedents while I've been—

Senator SCHUMER. Although you have dissented more than most of your fellow judges, but we will leave that aside. What I want to show here is how many times, when you were on the Third Circuit, your fellow judges on the Third Circuit—who I am sure have high respect for you. I know a lot of them are coming here in a few days, and I think that is nice, I do not have any problem with that.

[Laughter.]

Senator SCHUMER. Well, there has been some criticism about it, not by me.

I just want to show you what they have said when it comes to their view of your respect for Third Circuit precedent, stare decisis, as relevant as we can find it to you. So I am going to read a few. There are a whole bunch. But in Dia v. Ashcroft—they are all on this chart I guess. There are too many so the print is not large enough for most people to see. I wish there were fewer. In Dia v. Ashcroft the majority of your court said that your opinion “guts the statutory standard and ignores our precedent.” In LePages, Inc. v. 3M your opinion was criticized as “being contrary to our precedent and that of the Supreme Court.” In RNS Services v. Secretary of Labor you again dissented, and the majority again argued that, “Your dissent overlooks our holding in the instant case and prior cases.” In Riley v. Taylor, the en banc majority argued that your view ignored case after case relied by the majority, and “accords little weight to those authorities.” In Texas Eastern Transmission Corp., a panel criticized your opinion because, “It does not comport with our reading of the relevant case law.” In Bray v. Marriott Hotels, the majority noted that binding circuit precedent made your analysis improper in a discrimination case.

And the list goes on and on. I do not have to—but other cases that are mentioned here, United Artists v. Warrington, Beauty Time v. VU Skin Systems. Here is a final one, Rappa v. New Castle County, Judge Garth, the man I think you clerked for and is regarded as a mentor to you, wrote that your majority opinion was “unprecedented” in its “disregard of established principles of stare decisis.” “Nothing,” Judge Garth wrote, “in the jurisprudence of the Supreme Court or in ours suggests that a three-judge panel of a court of appeals is free to substitute its own judgment for that of a four-justice plurality opinion, let alone that of the entire court.”

So those are just some of the cases in which your own colleagues said you did not follow stare decisis. Now, there may have been good reason. I am not—you are much more expert on these cases than I am. There may have been good reason for you to do it, but I think it shows something, and that is, you, if we have to project as to what kind of a Supreme Court Justice you will be, are not going to be as reluctant as some to overturn precedent even by the rules of stare decisis. And so you wonder if you are as willing as you are to depart from precedent on the Third Circuit, what is going to happen if you should get on the Supreme Court? Your response because I mentioned a whole lot of cases here.

Judge ALITO. You did, Senator, and I think that you need to examine each of the cases to see whether what I did was justified. Let me just take one that struck me when you read from it, and that was the United Artists case. What I said there was that a Supreme Court decision that had come up, that had been handed down after the most recent Third Circuit decision relating to the issue, superseded what our court had said. So I was following an aspect of stare decisis there. I was following what we call horizontal—I’m sorry—vertical stare decisis following the Supreme Court, and I don’t think there’s any dispute that when the Supreme Court hands down a decision that’s in conflict with one of our earlier cases, we have to follow the Supreme Court.

Senator SCHUMER. Yes, but there is no question that in that situation, Judge Cowen said your opinion was, “wrong to revisit an issue that has already been decided and failed to give respect and deference to the circuit’s well-established jurisprudence employing the improper motive test in the substantive due process land use context. It is rather complicated, but he is sure saying you did not follow, in his view, you did not follow court precedent.

Judge ALITO. And, Senator, there was this body of Third Circuit precedent, and then—and it said that it’s proper for a Federal court to get involved in a zoning dispute, which is traditionally a local matter, if there is simply an improper motive, whatever that might be. And in the—after that the Supreme Court, in an opinion by Justice Souter, emphasized that the test under substantive due process in an area like this, an area that the other judge in the ma-majority and I thought was like this, is whether what was done shocks the conscience.

And so you have a Supreme Court decision intervening, and in that situation I thought it was our obligation—and I wrote the majority opinion there—to follow what the Supreme Court had said.

Senator SCHUMER. But my only point being here is one judge's view of what stare decisis requires, and another judge's view of what stare decisis requires, are not always the same. The concept has some degree of elasticity, and when, in reference to questions by people, you say, well, how do you feel about this case—and particularly Roe, which has been where we started off here—"I believe in stare decisis," it means that you are going to take precedent into account, but it certainly does not necessarily mean where you would come out.

Let me tell you where I conclude where you would come out, just sort of summarizing this argument. First, again, greatly disturbing I think to many Americans would be that you will not distance yourself from your 1985 view that the Constitution does not protect a right to a woman's right to choose, that that view has not changed, that you have refused to say, unlike you did in another part of that 1985 memo, that you think it is wrong now, which would lead one to think that you probably believe in it.

Second, you have told us you respect precedent and stare decisis, but we have seen that the stated respect for stare decisis hardly determines whether a Supreme Court Justice will vote to uphold precedents, not because when they come here they are being disingenuous with us. I do not think that at all. But because the concept is somewhat elastic, because it does not guarantee that you will uphold precedent, and particularly does not guarantee it when the Constitution conflicts with stare decisis, with the precedents of the Court.

And finally, to top it off, we have seen that your Third Circuit record can hardly provide a great deal of comfort in this area either, that many of your fellow judges criticized you for ignoring, abandoning, or overruling precedent.

Taken together these pieces are very disturbing to me. Your blanket 1985 statement, not distanced from, that the Constitution does not protect the right to an abortion; the fact that respect for precedent and stability does not prevent overruling of a past decision; and your own record of reversing or ignoring precedent on the Third Circuit lead to one inevitable conclusion.

We can only conclude that if the question came before you, it is very likely that you would vote to overrule Roe v. Wade.

I yield back my time.

Judge ALITO. Well, Senator, could I just respond to that—

Senator SCHUMER. Please, the time is yours.

Judge ALITO [continuing]. To that question. My Third Circuit record, in looking at abortion cases, provides the best indication of my belief that it is my obligation to follow the law in this area and in all other areas. If I had had an agenda to uphold any abortion regulation that came along, I would not have voted as I did in my Third Circuit cases.

Now, I've testified here today about what I think about stare decisis. I do think it's a very important legal doctrine, and I've explained the factors that figure into it. It would be the first question that I would consider if an issue like this came before me.

Senator SCHUMER. Let me just say though, you have ruled on certain cases. Many of them were on technicalities. And in all of them as a Third Circuit Judge, you were bound by Supreme Court precedent. You never, in the Third Circuit, were squarely presented with the question that I asked, which is a decisive question, which is whether the Constitution protects a woman's right to choose. You were never asked in the court, you were never asked to overturn Roe v. Wade. And even if you were in the Third Circuit, you could not, because you were bound by the precedent of the Court. I do not think your Third Circuit rulings are dispositive on what you would do should you become a U.S. Supreme Court Justice.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Judge ALITO. If the matter were to come up before me on the Supreme Court, I would consider the issue of stare decisis, and if the case got beyond that, I would go through that entire judicial decisionmaking process that I described. That's not a formality to me. That is the way in which I think a judge or a Justice has to address legal issues, and I think that is very important, and I don't know a way to answer a question about how I would decide a constitutional question that might come up in the future, other than to say I would go through that whole process.

I don't agree with the idea that the Constitution always trumps stare decisis—

Senator SCHUMER. Does not always, but sometimes—

Chairman SPECTER. Let him finish his answer, Senator Schumer.

Senator SCHUMER. I am sorry.

Judge ALITO. I don't agree with the theory that the Constitution always trumps stare decisis. There would be no need for the—there would be no room for the doctrine of stare decisis in constitutional law if that were the case.

Senator SCHUMER. But, sir, it can trump stare decisis, does not always, but can. Is that correct?

Judge ALITO. It certainly can, and I think that is a good thing because otherwise, Plessy v. Ferguson would still be on the books.

Senator SCHUMER. Thank you.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Chairman SPECTER. Thank you, Senator Schumer.

Senator Cornyn?

Senator CORNYN. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Judge Alito, are you familiar with the question that lawyers sometimes pose to demonstrate how unfair a question can be: "When did you stop beating your wife?"

Judge ALITO. I am familiar with that question.

Senator CORNYN. And I suppose the reason why—

[Laughter.]

Senator CORNYN. Since someone was picking on your mother-in-law, I thought we would inject your wife into this. But the point is this: it is an unfair question because it implies, regardless of what your response has been, that at one time you did, when, in fact, you have not.

And I just want to explore, to start with, Senator Schumer's questions about what is written in this Constitution about abortion. Does the word abortion appear anywhere in the Constitution?

Judge ALITO. No. The word that appears in the Constitution is "liberty."

Senator CORNYN. And outside of, let's say, the Fourth Amendment, perhaps, does a right to privacy appear, explicitly stated, in the Constitution?

Judge ALITO. There is no express reference to privacy in the Constitution, but it is protected by the Fourth Amendment and in certain circumstances by the First Amendment and in certain circumstances by the Fifth and the 14th Amendments.

Senator CORNYN. And the reason it is protected is because the Supreme Court has so interpreted the Constitution. Isn't that correct, sir?

Judge ALITO. That is correct. It is a question of interpretation rather than simply looking at what is in the text of the document.

Senator CORNYN. So to ask you whether the right to free speech, which is explicitly protected under the First Amendment of the Constitution—to ask you whether that is in there and then just ask you in the same question, or at least same series of questions, whether the right to abortion on demand is in the Constitution, one is explicitly stated in the First Amendment; the other is the product of Court interpretation. Isn't that accurate, sir?

Judge ALITO. Yes, that is my view of it.

Senator CORNYN. And to be more specific, it is what the courts have called penumbral rights. In other words, Griswold, I believe it was, talked about this being the penumbra of the emanations from stated rights in the Constitution. Can you clarify that for us so we can get it right?

Judge ALITO. Yes. Griswold talked about emanations and penumbras, and Griswold has later been understood by the Supreme Court as being based on the protection of liberty under the Fifth Amendment and the 14th Amendment.

Senator CORNYN. Well, I was particularly troubled by the exchange of questions and answers because the suggestion is that you have somehow been unresponsive. And as I said in my opening statement, I do think that there are those who have already decided to vote against your nomination and are looking for some reason to do so. And I think one of the reasons that they may claim is that you have been nonresponsive. But I thought it was telling that Senator Schumer said he didn't expect you to answer that question.

I would like to refer back to Senator Biden's comments where he praised you at the close of his remarks. He said, "I appreciate you for being responsive."

I agree with him. I cannot remember a nominee being this forthcoming. I appreciate that you have answered nearly every question put to you. Thank you for being so responsive. And indeed, according to one count, you have answered more than 250 questions thus far today.

So I think in all fairness, the question is not a fair one to ask you whether the right to an abortion is written in this document. The fact is, and the reason why you apply the doctrine of stare de- cisis is because you recognize the precedential effect, the authoritative effect of the Supreme Court's interpretation of this document as the law of the land, do you not, sir?

Judge ALITO. That is correct.

Senator CORNYN. And you mentioned Plessy v. Ferguson. I think it was Daniel Patrick Moynihan, a Democrat Senator from Senator Schumer's State, who said if it weren't for the ability of the courts to go back and revisit these decisions, how would you ever correct a mistake? And I think the fact is that you have mentioned one of the instances where, thank goodness, the Court has gone back and revisited a terrible decision which has been a scar on our country and our jurisprudence, Plessy v. Ferguson.

And if the Court, in Brown v. Board of Education, had felt prohibited from revisiting that mistake, then we would still be living under that scar and I think we can all agree that that would be a terrible thing. And thank goodness, we have a Supreme Court that has had the courage to go back, in accordance with the principles of stare decisis, and revisit terribly wrong decisions and to correct them and to bring us where we are today.

You know, it must be strange to have people listen to the questions and answers here because on one hand, you will hear rather complimentary comments. On the other hand, even Senators who are still at least for the record undecided—I hate to think what it would be like if they had actually determined to vote against you already—making rather strong critical statements.

But it means a lot to me to know that the people who know you best, the people who have worked with you on the Third Circuit Court of Appeals, are very complimentary. I happen to believe that we ought to look to the people that know you best as being in the best position to judge your character, your integrity, your competence, and not this caricature that happens during these confirmation proceedings by the attack dogs, the interest groups who pay a lot of money, spend a lot of time trying to tear down that reputation for integrity and competence that you have worked so hard to build during your lifetime.

But I was struck—and we will hear more about the judges who have served with you on the Third Circuit—but I was struck by a quote that I read from your former colleague, the late Judge Leon Higginbotham.

Who is Judge Higginbotham, by the way, or who was he?

Judge ALITO. Well, he was the former Chief Judge of the Third Circuit and he was a Federal judge for many years and greatly respected.

Senator CORNYN. Well, this is what the Harvard Journal of African-American Public Policy—how it described him, in part. They said, "Higginbotham was appointed to the Federal circuit bench by President Jimmy Carter in 1977. Higginbotham is also former president of the Philadelphia Chapter of the NAACP."

And would it be fair to say that you and Judge Higginbotham, while you served together, you tended to look at the Constitution differently? In other words, could he fairly be described as a liberal?

Judge ALITO. I think probably most people would describe him that way. I thought we got along very well, and we generally agreed. There were cases in which we disagreed and cases in which I dissented from an opinion that he wrote. And I think there were cases in which he dissented from opinions that I wrote.

Senator CORNYN. Well, I wonder if you are aware of one thing that he was quoted as having said. This is out of the Los Angeles Times, comments he made about you to Judge Timothy Lewis, quoted in the Los Angeles Times, “Sam Alito is my favorite judge to sit with on the court. He is a wonderful judge and a terrific human being. Sam Alito is my kind of conservative. He is intellectually honest, he doesn’t have an agenda, he is not an ideologue.”

Were you aware that Judge Higginbotham had said that about you?

Judge ALITO. No, I wasn’t. I was not.

Senator CORNYN. Well, I am pleased to tell you he did say it, according to the Los Angeles Times, and I think it is a high compliment that someone who would have perhaps such a divergent view and perhaps different political beliefs than you would say those sorts of things about you and your record on the Third Circuit Court of Appeals.

Now, I have some charts, too, like Senator Schumer. I like my charts better than his, but we will let others be the judge. But I want to ask you a little bit about Justice Sandra Day O’Connor. You had some very high compliments about her yesterday. Senator Kyl, her fellow Arizonan, said some wonderful things about her, and I am confident that all of those accolades are well deserved. Some have called her the model Supreme Court Justice, and that is high praise, it really is.

And I would like to submit for my colleagues’ consideration that if Sandra Day O’Connor was in the mainstream, then Sam Alito is, too, and this is why. For example, Justice O’Connor and Judge Sam Alito both set limits on Congress’s commerce power. Sandra Day O’Connor and Sam Alito both struck down affirmative action policies that had strict numerical quotas, and both—this ought to be a shocker to some based on what we have heard here today—both Justice Sandra Day O’Connor and Judge Sam Alito have criticized Roe v. Wade.

In fact, this is pretty astonishing to me. According to the Harvard Law Review, over the last decade Justice O’Connor agreed more often with Chief Justice Rehnquist, 80 percent of the time, than with any other Justice. And let’s go through these individually.

First of all we talk about whether it can be a Federal crime to possess a machine gun that doesn’t implicate trafficking or some aspect of interstate commerce. But, you know, all we have to do is go back to a little bit of the history we all learn in high school to remember the Articles of Confederation and the fact that the States were all-powerful. The national Government was crippled because it really had no power and was subject to the unanimous vote of the states before it could do things that were very important.

And so then in Philadelphia, the delegates there wrote, and ultimately ratified, a Federal Constitution. But you already alluded to this earlier. This Constitution takes into account that not only will the national Government have certain powers, but there will also be some powers still reserved to the States.

It is a fact, is it not, sir, that when we talk about federalism, really what we are talking about is the fact that our Federal Government, our national Government is one of enumerated powers that are set out in the Constitution and all powers that are not enumerated or necessary and proper to the execution of those enumerated powers as a general rule are reserved to the states?

Judge ALITO. Yes, that is the structure of the Constitution. The Federal Government has certain—has enumerated powers. Some of them are broad, but those are the powers the Federal Government has and the theory—and the structure is that everything else was reserved for the States.

Senator CORNYN. And so when someone suggests that you are taking a crabbed or cramped or unorthodox view toward congressional power because you say that it is not clear from the statute or the crime with which an individual is charged that interstate commerce is implicated, aren't you enforcing that original understanding of what powers were expressly or otherwise delegated to the Federal Government and what powers were reserved to the States?

Judge ALITO. Well, that is what Lopez, as I understand it, tried to do. It said that although the commerce power is broad, it is not all-encompassing. It involves the regulation of interstate and foreign commerce, and this statute that we have in Lopez goes beyond that. And my case, the Rybar case, seems to me to be as close to the situation in Lopez as any case that I was aware of.

Senator CORNYN. Well, I know my constituents back in Texas, and I suspect people all across the country would be glad to know that you don't believe that all wisdom and all power is centered in Washington, D.C., but that under our Federal system the State and Federal governments are partners, and that enforcing this structure that is a product of our history and a product of our Constitution is an important thing for judges to do.

But it is interesting because if Sandra Day O'Connor was in the mainstream on the interpretation of the Commerce Clause, then so is Judge Sam Alito. As a matter of fact, I believe in Rybar you said the question before the court is whether Lopez is a constitutional freak, or words to that effect, because as you pointed out, it was a little bit of a shock to everyone's system to see the Supreme Court was actually serious about recognizing the authority of the States and that there are limits to congressional power. But Lopez reestablished or perhaps restated that understanding.

Judge O'Connor joined the majority in the Lopez decision, did she not, sir?

Judge ALITO. Yes, she did.

Senator CORNYN. And so she shared at least to that extent your conviction that there is some limit to congressional power and that there was some point beyond which Congress's authority could not reach unless it was made clear that it was pursuant to one of the powers enumerated under the Constitution. Did I say that roughly correctly?

Judge ALITO. I agree with that she said that Congress's power under the Commerce Clause is not all-encompassing. And my job as a court of appeals judge is not to say that a decision of the Supreme Court should be limited to its facts; in other words, not applied as a precedent in any other comparable situation that comes along. My job is to take those precedents seriously and that is what I tried to do.

Senator CORNYN. So when Justice O'Connor held in Lopez that Congress could not prohibit the possession of handguns near schools because mere possession is not commerce, you were doing your very best to stick to that precedent established by the U.S. Supreme Court when you wrote your opinion in Rybar. Is that correct?

Judge ALITO. That's correct. In Lopez, the Supreme Court said that possession of a firearm, mere possession is not a commercial activity, and the interstate commerce—the Commerce Clause authorizes the regulation of interstate commerce, and the activity involved in Rybar was the possession of a firearm. So it followed that if it was a noncommercial activity in Lopez, it must be a noncommercial activity in Rybar. That's how I saw it.

Senator CORNYN. And you didn't say the State couldn't criminalize possession of a machine gun, did you?

Judge ALITO. No. The State could, and I think a great majority of States, if not—the great majority certainly have legislation of that nature.

Senator CORNYN. And you pointed out here that if the Congress had been a little more careful in showing the basis upon which mere possession could affect interstate commerce, that that would be a different case, and perhaps the outcome might have been different in Rybar.

Judge ALITO. Yes, that was a strong point that I made in the dissent, that if Congress had made findings, it would have been a very different case for me.

Senator CORNYN. You know, the interesting thing to me about Rybar as well, you have been accused of always ruling for the big guy or the government. But in Rybar you decided for the person accused of illegally possessing the machine gun.

Judge ALITO. Well, that's correct. He was a criminal defendant.

Senator CORNYN. You didn't rule for the government?

Judge ALITO. No, I did not. I thought the government had not come forward with evidence to support the position that they were arguing.

Senator CORNYN. Well, there is another question about affirmative action cases. We have alluded a little bit to that. And Justice Sandra Day O'Connor, the model Supreme Court Justice who is clearly in the mainstream, you and Justice O'Connor both agreed to strike down affirmative action policies which set numerical quotas which resulted in reverse discrimination. She did in Wygant v. Jackson Board of Education in 1986. You did in Taxman v. Board of Education in 1996. Would you agree with that, sir?

Judge ALITO. I would. Taxman was a case that our court considered en banc, that is, all the judges were sitting, and I sit on a very moderate court that is certainly not unreceptive to the concept of affirmative action in general. But the vote in that case was 8–4. It wasn't a close vote. And I joined the opinion that was written by my late colleague, Judge Mansmann, holding that that particular affirmative action plan was in violation of Title VII.

Senator CORNYN. Let's talk again about Roe v. Wade. Now, this is going to be a shocker for some people based upon what has gone on before, because it has been suggested that but for Sandra Day O'Connor, Roe v. Wade may be overruled; that this is really what lies in the balance here during your confirmation proceedings. But the fact is that Justice Sandra Day O'Connor, the model Supreme Court Justice, wrote in The City of Akron v. Akron Center for Reproductive Health, "The trimester three-stage approach adopted by the Court in Roe cannot be supported as a legitimate or useful framework." Roe, she said, "is clearly on a collision course with itself."

And in the memorandum for which you have been disparaged many a time when you were in the Solicitor General's office, you recommended, "Don't mount a frontal attack on Roe v. Wade but instead use the opportunity to nudge the Court toward the principles in Justice O'Connor's Akron dissent."

So when you had an opportunity to urge the reversal of Roe v. Wade, even as a lawyer for the administration, you urged a more cautious approach and one consistent with Justice O'Connor's opinion at the time. Isn't that correct, sir?

Judge ALITO. Yes, Justice O'Connor's opinion in Akron, which was the last previous big Supreme Court decision at that time, was one of the things that influenced me in the memo that I wrote in Thornburgh. She analyzed Roe, and I was quite persuaded by the points that she made in the Akron decision. And the general approach—the arguments that I was recommending that the Government make in the Thornburgh case were along the lines of the undue burden standard I think that was later—that she later adopted. I was arguing that the particular provisions should be challenged on their own terms. One of the provisions was an informed consent provision that was virtually identical to the informed consent provision that later came up in Casey, and in Casey it was upheld.

Senator CORNYN. Well, let's talk about Casey. That was a 1992 decision by the U.S. Supreme Court. Isn't that correct, sir?

Judge ALITO. Yes.

Senator CORNYN. And in Casey, Justice Kennedy, Justice Souter, and Justice O'Connor, the model Supreme Court Justice, essentially scuttled the principal argument in favor of the right to abortion based on this trimester approach, which Justice O'Connor criticized and which has also been criticized by people like Justice Ginsburg, former counsel to the American Civil Liberties Union, who now serves on the Court; Laurence Tribe, a well-known liberal legal scholar at Harvard. The fact is Roe v. Wade, the writing itself, the justification for the decision has been widely criticized by legal scholars all across the spectrum, has it not, sir?

Judge ALITO. It certainly had been at the time of the 1985 memo, and although I wasn't recommending that the Government get into that issue, I mentioned in the memo some of the authors who had criticized Roe's reasoning.

Senator CORNYN. Well, and in 1992, the only thing that really survived in Roe v. Wade, which was written 33 years ago, was the essential holding—I guess you could call it that—and there have been some quotes about the importance of reliance interests in terms of observing—giving it the benefits of stare decisis or precedent. But essentially the whole legal scheme or basis upon which abortion was protected was changed to an undue burden standard. Isn't that right, sir?

Judge ALITO. In Casey, the Supreme Court moved away from the trimester approach, and they adopted the undue burden standard, which had been set out in some earlier opinions by Justice O'Connor and the joint opinion in Casey made it clear that that was now the governing standard under Supreme Court law.

Senator CORNYN. But the plurality opinion—Justice O'Connor, Justice Kennedy, Justice Souter—did not say you can have abortion without limitation. It did recognize the right of the States to pass laws which regulate abortion as long as it did not create an undue burden on a woman's right to have an abortion, according to that decision. Isn't that roughly what the plurality said?

Judge ALITO. Yes, that's what they held.

Senator CORNYN. Let's get the other chart.

My point is that if on at least three counts, on the basis of does Congress's commerce power, limitations on congressional authority in the affirmative action area, and in terms of criticizing the basis upon which Roe v. Wade was decided 33 years ago, you and Justice O'Connor bear a lot of similarities. I would just ask that if Justice O'Connor is a model Supreme Court Justice and, therefore, by definition is not outside the mainstream, then it strikes me that Sam Alito is not outside the mainstream, either.

Another thing you have been criticized for is your unlimited view of Presidential power, that is the way it has been phrased, the suggestion that somehow you are always going to defer to the President and the Executive branch when the legislative branch and the Executive branch vie for authority, whether it is in the intelligence gathering area, the National Security Agency and this electronic eavesdropping, which is really an early warning system to try to identify terrorists so we can protect ourselves against another 9/11, or other acts of Presidential power.

Senator Graham talked a little bit about the Hamdi decision, where the U.S. Supreme Court interpreted the use of force authorization that was issued by Congress after the 9/11 attack authorizing the President to use necessary force to defeat the Taliban and al Qaeda, the supposed perpetrators of the 9/11 attacks. The question came up in Hamdi whether that included an authorization by Congress to detain terrorists without charging them with a crime. My understanding is in that case that the Supreme Court, it was fractured, but the plurality opinion that Justice O'Connor wrote said that that authorization of use of force was a congressional Act which trumped the statutory limitation that Congress had previously passed about detaining American citizens without charging them with a crime. Did I get that roughly correct?

Judge ALITO. Yes, that's exactly correct. Eighteen U.S.C. 4001, which is called the anti-detention statute, says that nobody may be detained without authorization, and in Hamdi, Justice O'Connor's opinion concluded that the authorization for the use of military force constituted statutory authorization to detain a person who had been taken prisoner as an unlawful combatant in Afghanistan.

Senator CORNYN. Well, I appreciate you pointing out that one of the other important statements in Hamdi was that people who are detained have certain due process rights and that the President cannot exercise his powers as Commander in Chief without judicial review or without anyone else looking at it, including a court or military tribunal under appropriate circumstances. But the fact is, Justice O'Connor took a view of Presidential power there that some might consider to be rather broad, the power to detain an American citizen who is a suspected terrorist without actually charging them with a crime for the reasons that Senator Graham stated, that if that person who was actually captured in Afghanistan and brought to Guantanamo Bay, if they were released, then they likely would return to the battlefield and plot and plan and execute lethal attacks on American citizens.

Interestingly, people like to characterize judges as conservative or liberal. One interesting thing to me about that is Justice Scalia, who you have been likened to, actually dissented and held that it was unconstitutional for the President to detain these individuals without charging them with some crime, like treason or something else, isn't that correct, sir?

Judge ALITO. Yes, that's correct. This is a case where Justice O'Connor's view of the scope of Executive power was broader, considerably broader, than Justice Scalia's. Justice Scalia's position was that unless habeas corpus is suspended, and there are only limited circumstances in which that can take place, then there would have to be a criminal trial.

Senator CORNYN. Judge Scalito, my—Alito, excuse me. After talking about Judge Scalia—you know what I was thinking in the back of my mind, a nickname that you have acquired sometimes, and I apologize.

But the fact is that people try to characterize judges as being somewhere on the political spectrum or making results-oriented decisions based on some ideology. But the fact is, and I will just ask you if you agree with this, whether good judges who try to apply the law to cases and facts that come before them on an individual basis without regard to who wins and who loses, their decisions could be characterized as liberal, conservative, and anywhere in between. Has that been your experience?

Judge ALITO. I think that is correct, Senator. I think that all these labels when you are trying to describe how judges behave, how they do their work, have their limitations and different people use them in different ways.

Senator CORNYN. Thank you very much.

Chairman SPECTER. Well, thank you very much, Senator Cornyn, for that round of questions. When Senator Cornyn misstates even one word, with his competency, you know it is getting late.

[Laughter.]

Chairman SPECTER. Thank you, Judge Alito, for your—we can all agree, there may be some areas of controversy among the 18 of us, but I think we can all agree about your stamina and your poise and your good humor and even some subtle humor.

Your family has shown the same kind of stamina. The crowd has pretty well emptied out, but the Alitos are all still here and they have provided not only support but occasion for a comment or two. I noticed a big smile on your wife's face when you were asked if you stopped beating your wife.

[Laughter.]

Judge ALITO. I wasn't asked whether she had stopped beating me.

[Laughter.]

Chairman SPECTER. Now that is some of that subtle humor that your profiles talk about. We would like to see a little more of it, Judge. Perhaps if we went 11 hours instead of 10 hours, we would get to that.

Senator LEAHY. Oh, please don't.

[Laughter.]

Chairman SPECTER. I have been vastly—

Senator LEAHY. I will certify that he is very, very funny. Just don't do the other two hours.

[Laughter.]

Chairman SPECTER. That raises the question as to what else you will certify to, Senator Leahy.

Senator LEAHY. That is enough for today.

[Laughter.]

Chairman SPECTER. I want to make one comment, which I have been pondering as to whether I ought to make it, but there is a story which is inapplicable to you, Judge Alito, so I think I can make it. The question is always raised, who is behind a successful man, and the answer is a surprised mother-in-law.

[Laughter.]

Chairman SPECTER. But you have negated that infrequently told story.

So I want to thank you for your testimony today and I want to thank my colleagues for what we are proceeding to do here in accordance with our commitment to have a full, fair, and dignified hearing. I think we are on the way. These proceedings are being very broadly covered. You can't pick up the front page of any newspaper in America without seeing your smiling face, Judge. In an era where the media is filled with criticism about the Congress, I think it is a good day for the U.S. Congress to have these proceedings because people have been watching them and they see long hours and they see seriousness and they see important issues and they see the kind of dignity which we have had here today. I thank my colleagues and I thank you, Judge Alito.

We will resume this hearing tomorrow morning at 9:30.

[Whereupon, at 7:03 p.m., the Committee was adjourned, to reconvene on Wednesday, January 11, 2006, at 9:30 a.m.]

NOMINATION OF SAMUEL A. ALITO, JR., OF NEW JERSEY, TO BE AN ASSOCIATE JUSTICE OF THE SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 11, 2006

U.S. SENATE,
COMMITTEE ON THE JUDICIARY,
Washington, DC.

The Committee met, pursuant to notice, at 9:30 a.m., in room 216, Hart Senate Office Building, Hon. Arlen Specter, Chairman of the Committee, presiding.

Present: Senators Specter, Hatch, Grassley, Kyl, DeWine, Sessions, Graham, Cornyn, Brownback, Coburn, Leahy, Kennedy, Biden, Kohl, Feinstein, Feingold, Schumer, and Durbin.

Chairman SPECTER. The Judiciary Committee will now proceed with the confirmation hearing for Judge Alito for the Supreme Court of the United States.

Welcome back, Judge Alito.

We have three members who have not had their first round of questioning of 30 minutes, and we will proceed there, and then we will have a second round of questioning for 20 minutes each. I expect we will need to work a long day today. It is my hope that we might finish the questioning of Judge Alito. That might be overly optimistic, but we will see how things go.

Senator Durbin, you are recognized for 30 minutes.

Senator DURBIN. Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman.

Senator LEAHY. Before we start the clock on Senator Durbin, if I might say on the questions, one, I admire the stamina both of the nominee and his family, but a number of us have been troubled by what we see as inconsistencies in some of the answers, and we are going to want to go into those in some depth, on the issue of one person/one vote, Vanguard recusal, unitary theory of Government, CAP and so on.

I want to clear up in my mind and in the minds of many over here what we see as inconsistencies. I know many have announced up here exactly how they are going to vote before they even ask questions. I am one of the one who likes to make up my mind after asking the questions, so there will be a number more.

Chairman SPECTER. Thank you, Senator Leahy. I appreciate the comment. There are many issues. Judge Alito has responded for about 7½ hours so far, and we are going to have another hour and a half on opening statements, and then with each Senator having 20 minutes on a second round, six more hours. So we will see if he has covered the waterfront, and this will be a full and fair hearing. We will give every opportunity to ask the questions.

Senator LEAHY. Mr. Chairman, with you as Chairman, I know it will be a full and fair hearing, and that is one thing that every single Democrat on this side is aware of.

Chairman SPECTER. I think that is very important for the nominee, for the Committee and for the country, and we will do that. The adjunct to full, fair is dignified, and I think so far we are on track.

OK, Senator Durbin, keep us on track. Senator Durbin is recognized. We will start the clock at 30 minutes.

Senator DURBIN. Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman.

Judge Alito, thank you for coming for the second day and not quite the end of the first round. I thank your family for their patience, listening to all of our questions, and I hope that at the end of the day we will feel that we have really added something to the process of choosing a person to serve in a lifetime appointment to the highest Court in our land.

I listened to you carefully yesterday address an issue which is very important to me, the Griswold case, because I think that it is a starting point for me when it comes to appointments to the Supreme Court. If I had any doubt in my mind that a Supreme Court nominee recognized the basic right of privacy of American citizens as articulated in Griswold, I could not support the nominee. And I listened as you explained that you supported that right of privacy and that you found the Griswold decision grounded in the Fifth Amendment as well as the 14th Amendment.

I would ask you at this point—you obviously support Brown v. Board of Education, do you, and the finding of the Court in that?

Judge ALITO. Certainly, Senator.

Senator DURBIN. Do you believe that the Constitution protects the right of children in America to be educated in schools that are not segregated?

Judge ALITO. Absolutely, Senator. That was one of the greatest, if not the single greatest thing that the Supreme Court of the United States has ever done.

Senator DURBIN. As you read that Supreme Court decision, that historic decision, they find the basis for that decision was the Equal Protection Clause of our Constitution.

Judge ALITO. Yes, they did, and that was, I think—of course, we fought a Civil War to get the 14th Amendment and to adopt the constitutional principle of equality for people of all races.

Senator DURBIN. The reason I ask you about those two cases is that neither of those cases referred to explicit language in the Constitution. Those cases were based on concepts of equality and liberty within our Constitution, and the Griswold case took that concept of liberty and said it means privacy, though the word is not in our Constitution, and the Brown v. Board of Education case took the concept of equality, equal protection, and said, that means public education will not be segregated. I raise that because I listened carefully as Senator Schumer asked you yesterday about Roe v. Wade, and I could not understand your conclusion. You conceded the fact that we have free speech because it is explicit in our Constitution, a protected constitutional right, and yet, when Senator

Schumer asked you repeatedly, “Do you find that Roe v. Wade established and recognized a constitutional protection for a woman to make this most private decision,” you would not answer. You would not give a direct answer. On two Supreme Court cases, Griswold and Brown now, you have said, just as we started this hearing, that you believe there is a constitutional basis for this protection and for this right, and yet when it came to Roe v. Wade you would not.

Most of us are troubled by this 1985 memo. You said yesterday you would have an open mind when it came to this issue. I am sorry to report that your memo seeking a job in the Reagan administration does not evidence an open mind. It evidences a mind that, sadly, is closed in some areas. Yesterday when you were asked about one man/one vote, you clarified it, said those were my views then, they are not my views now. When Senator Kohl asked you about the power and authority of elected branches as opposed to others, no, you said, I want to clarify that is not my view now.

And yet, when we have tried to press you on this critical statement that you made in that application, a statement which was made by you that said the Constitution does not protect the right to an abortion, you have been unwilling to distance yourself and to say that you disagree with that. I think this is critically important, because as far as I am concerned, Judge Alito, we have to rely on the Supreme Court to protect our rights and freedoms, especially our right to privacy. For you to say that you are for Griswold, you accept the constitutional basis for Griswold, but you cannot bring yourself to say there is a constitutional basis for the right of a woman’s privacy when she is making a tragic, painful decision about continuing a pregnancy that may risk her health or her life, I am troubled by that.

Why can you say unequivocally that you find constitutional support for Griswold, unequivocally you find constitutional support for Brown, but cannot bring yourself to say that you find constitutional support for a woman’s right to choose?

Judge ALITO. Brown v. Board of Education, as you pointed out, is based on the Equal Protection Clause of the 14th Amendment, and the 14th Amendment, of course, was adopted and ratified after the Civil War. It talks about equality. It talks about equal protection of the law, and the principle that was finally recognized in Brown v. Board of Education, after nearly a century of misapplication of the 14th Amendment, is that denying people the opportunity, people of a particular race the opportunity to attend schools, or for that matter, to make use of other public facilities that are open to people of a different race, denies them equality. They’re not treated the same way. An African-American is not treated the same way as a white person when they’re treated that way, so they’re denied equality, and that is based squarely on the language of the Equal Protection Clause and on the principle, the principle that was—the magnificent principle that emerged from this great struggle that is embodied in the Equal Protection Clause.

Griswold concerned the marital right to privacy, and when the decision was handed down, it was written by Justice Douglas, and he based that on his theories of—his theory of emanations and pe-numbras from various constitutional provisions, the Ninth Amendment and the Fourth Amendment, and a variety of others, but it has been understood in later cases as based on the Due Process Clause of the 14th Amendment, which says that no person shall be denied due process—shall be denied liberty without due process of law. And that’s my understanding of it.

And the issue that was involved in Griswold, the possession of contraceptives by married people, is not an issue that is likely to come before the courts again. It’s not likely to come before the Third Circuit, it’s not likely to come before the Supreme Court, so I feel an ability to comment, a greater ability to comment on that than I do on an issue that is involved in litigation.

And what I have said about Roe is that if the issue were to come before me if I am confirmed, and I’m on the Supreme Court, and the issue comes up, the first step in the analysis for me would be the issue of stare decisis, and that would be very important. The things that I said in the 1985 memo were a true expression of my views at the time from my vantage point as an attorney in the Solicitor General’s Office, but that was 20 years ago, and a great deal has happened in the case law since then. Thornburgh was decided, and then Webster and then Casey and a number of other decisions. So the stare decisis analysis would have to take account of that entire line of case law.

And then if I got beyond that, I would approach the question—and of course in Casey, that was the beginning and the ending point of the analysis in the joint opinion. If I were to get beyond that, I would approach that question the way I approach every legal issue that I approach as a judge, and that is to approach it with an open mind, and to go through the whole judicial process which is designed—and I believe strongly in it—to achieve good results, to achieve good decisionmaking.

Senator DURBIN. This is what troubles me, that you do not see Roe as a natural extension of Griswold, that you do not see the privacy rights of Griswold ended by the decision in Roe, that you decided to create categories of cases that have been decided by the Court that you will concede have constitutional protection, but you have left in question the future of Roe v. Wade.

Yesterday, Senator Specter asked you, as he asked John Roberts before you, a series of questions about whether or not you accept the concept that this is somehow a precedent that we can rely on, that is embedded in our experience, that if it were changed it would call into question the legitimacy of the Court, and time and time again he brought you to the edge, hoping that you would agree, and rarely if ever did you acknowledge that you would agree. You made the most general statement that you believe reliance was part of stare decisis.

But let me just ask you this. John Roberts said that Roe v. Wade is the settled law of the land. Do you believe it is the settled law of the land?

Judge ALITO. Roe v. Wade is an important precedent of the Supreme Court. It was decided in 1973, so it has been on the books for a long time. It has been challenged on a number of occasions, and I discussed those yesterday, and the Supreme Court has reaffirmed the decision, sometimes on the merits, sometimes in Casey based on stare decisis, and I think that when a decision is challenged and it is reaffirmed that strengthens its value as stare decisis for at least two reasons. First of all, the more often a decision is reaffirmed, the more people tend to rely on it, and second, I think stare decisis reflects the view that there is wisdom embedded in decisions that have been made by prior Justices who take the same oath and are scholars and are conscientious, and when they examine a question and they reach a conclusion, I think that's entitled to considerable respect, and of course, the more times that happens, the more respect the decision is entitled to, and that's my view of that. So it is a very important precedent that—

Senator DURBIN. Is it the settled law of the land?

Judge ALITO. It is a—if settled means that it can't be re-examined, then that's one thing. If settled means that it is a precedent that is entitled to respect as stare decisis, and all of the factors that I've mentioned come into play, including the reaffirmation and all of that, then it is a precedent that is protected, entitled to respect under the doctrine of stare decisis in that way.

Senator DURBIN. How do you see it?

Judge ALITO. I have explained, Senator, as best I can how I see it. It is a precedent that has now been on the books for several decades. It has been challenged. It has been reaffirmed, but it is an issue that is involved in litigation now at all levels. There is an abortion case before the Supreme Court this term. There are abortion cases in the lower courts. I've sat on three of them on the Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit. I'm sure there are others in other courts of appeals, or working their way toward the courts of appeals right now, so it's an issue that is involved in a considerable amount of litigation that is going on.

Senator DURBIN. I would say, Judge Alito, this is a painful issue for most of us. It is a difficult issue for most of us. The act of abortion itself is many times a hard decision, a sad decision, a tragic decision. I believe that for 30 years we have tried to strike a balance in this country to say it is a legal procedure, but it should be discouraged. It should be legal but rare, and we should try to find ways to reduce the incidence of abortion. But as I listen to the way that you have answered this question this morning and yesterday, and the fact that you have refused to refute that statement in the 1985 job application, I am concerned. I am concerned that many people will leave this hearing with a question as to whether or not you could be the deciding vote that would eliminate the legality of abortion, that would make it illegal in this country, would criminalize the conduct of women who are seeking to terminate pregnancies for fear of their lives and the conduct of doctors who help them. That is very troubling, particularly because you have stated that you are committed to this right of privacy.

If I could move to another issue that came up yesterday, I did not understand your answer to one question and I want to clarify it. This so-called Concerned Alumni of Princeton. You noted in your application for a job with the Department of Justice you belonged to two organizations, the Federalist Society and the Concerned Alumni of Princeton. I will not get into Federalist Society, because every time I say those words they go into a rage that I am somehow guilty of McCarthy-like tactics, asking who are these people in the Federalist Society? I will not touch it.

Let me just go to the Concerned Alumni of Princeton. I did not understand your answer. Your answer said something about ROTC being discontinued at Princeton University. I know you were involved in ROTC. I am told that by the time you filled out this application, ROTC had been restored. I do not believe you were suggesting that bringing more women and minorities to Princeton would somehow jeopardize the future of ROTC. I do not know that that is the case.

But there is a woman named Diane Weeks, who was a colleague of yours in the New Jersey U.S. Attorney's Office, and she said that she was troubled by your membership in this group. She said you had a first-rate legal mind, but here is what she went on to say. "When I saw Concerned Alumni of Princeton on that 1985 job application, I was flabbergasted," she said. "I was totally stunned. I couldn't believe it. CAP made it clear to women like me that we were not wanted on campus, and he is touting his membership in this group in 1985, 13 years after he graduated? He's not a young man by this point," she said, "and I don't buy for a second that he was doing it just to get a job. Membership in CAP gives a good sense of what someone's personal beliefs are. I'm very troubled by this, and if I were in the Senate, I would want some answers."

I don't think explaining discontinuing ROTC at Princeton is an answer. What is your answer? Why did you include this controversial organization as one of your qualifications for being part of the Reagan administration? As you said, with your background, with your immigrant background and the fact that Princeton had just started allowing people of your background as students, how could you identify with a group that would discriminate against women and minorities?

Judge ALITO. Well, Diane Weeks was an Assistant U.S. Attorney in the U.S. Attorney's Office in New Jersey, and somebody that I hired, and one of many women whom I hired when I was U.S. Attorney, and I think that illustrates my attitude toward equality for women.

I've said what I can say about what I can recall about this group, Senator, which is virtually nothing. I put it down on the '85 form as a group in which I was a member. I didn't say I was anything more than a member. And since I put it down, I'm sure that I was a member at the time, but I'm also sure—and I have racked my memory on this—that if I had participated in the group in any active way, if I had attended meetings or done anything else substantial in connection with this group, I would remember it, and if I had renewed my membership, for example, over a period of years, I'm sure I would remember that. So that's the best I can reconstruct as to what happened with this group.

I mentioned, in wracking my memory about this, I said, what would it have been, what could it have been about the administration of Princeton that would have caused me to sign up to be a member of this group around the time of this application? And I don't have a specific recollection, but I do know that the issue of ROTC has bothered me for a long period of time. The expulsion of the units at the time when I was a student there, struck me as a very bad thing for Princeton to do.

Senator DURBIN. Do women and minorities have anything to do with that?

Judge ALITO. No, and I did not join this group, I'm quite confident, because of any attitude toward women or minorities. What has bothered me about—what bothered me about the Princeton administration over a period of time was the treatment of ROTC, and after the unit was brought back, I know there's been a continuing controversy over a period of years about whether it would be kept on campus, whether in any way this was demeaning to the university to have an ROTC unit on campus, whether students who were enrolled in ROTC could receive credit for the courses, whether the members of—whether the ROTC instructors could be considered in any way a part of the faculty. All of this bothered me, and it is my recollection that it continued over a period of time.

Senator DURBIN. Let me ask you, if I might, to reflect on a couple other things. You are a Bruce Springsteen fan?

Judge ALITO. I am to some degree, yes.

Senator DURBIN. I guess most people in New Jersey would be, they should be.

Judge ALITO. There was the movement sometime ago—we don't have an official State song, and there was a movement to make "Born to Run" our official State song, but it didn't quite make it.

Senator DURBIN. We will stick with Lincoln in Illinois, but I can understand your commitment to Bruce Springsteen. They once asked him, "How do you come up with the songs that you write and the characters that are in them?" And he said, "I have a familiarity with the crushing hand of fate." It is a great line.

I want to ask you about the crushing hand of fate in several of your decisions. Riley v. Taylor. This case involved the murder conviction of an African-American defendant, and the question was raised as to whether he had a fair trial, and the people who argued in his defense said that when we take a look at the various people who were involved in these jury pools in the murder cases here, we find that the local prosecutors had eliminated all the African-Americans in four murder trials that had taken place during the year that led up to his trial. And they raised the question in his case whether there had been a conscious effort to eliminate African-American jurors in this case involving an African-American defendant.

And you dismissed the statistical evidence of these all-white juries, and you made a statement that said the significance of an all-white jury was as relevant as the fact that five of the past six Presidents of the United States have been left-handed.

That is a troubling analogy, and I am not the only one troubled. Your colleagues on the Third Circuit were troubled as well. Here is what they said: "The dissent"—your dissent—"has overlooked the obvious fact that there is no provision in the Constitution that protects persons from discrimination based on whether they are right-handed or left-handed. To suggest any comparability to striking of jurors based on their race is to minimize the history of discrimination against prospective black jurors and black defendants."

Why did you use that analogy that apparently is so inappropriate?

Judge ALITO. Well, the analogy went to the issue of statistics and the use and misuse of statistics and the fact that statistics can be quite misleading. Statistics are very powerful, but statistics can also be very misleading, and that's what that was referring to. There's a whole—I mean, statistics is a branch of mathematics, and there are ways to analyze statistics so that you draw sound conclusions from them and avoid erroneous conclusions from them. Sometimes when you see a pattern, it's the result of a cause, and sometimes when you see something that looks like it might be a pattern, it's the result of chance.

Riley was a very, very difficult case, and I can tell you I struggled over that case because the issue of racial discrimination in the criminal justice system is an issue of enormous importance. Obviously, it's very important for the defendant. It's important for the society so that everybody knows that everyone in this country is treated equally regardless of race. And it's important for law enforcement, because I know from years as a prosecutor that nothing is a greater poison for law enforcement than even the slightest hint of unfairness.

The issue of racial discrimination in the jury had to be viewed by our court and by me under the habeas corpus statute that Congress passed, and that gave us an important role to play, but a very limited role. The Pennsylvania—and what the habeas corpus statute is that if the State courts have decided a question on the merits and they've applied the correct legal standard, the correct constitutional standard, we can't authorize a granting of a writ of habeas corpus unless they were unreasonable. It's not enough for us to say, "We don't agree with it." We have to say, "You were unreasonable."

Now, I think seven members of the Pennsylvania judiciary—well, I think there were more. There was the judge who heard the State habeas case and the Pennsylvania Supreme Court, and the Pennsylvania Supreme Court, as I recall, was unanimous on the issue that there hadn't been racial discrimination in the selection of the jury in the case.

Then the case came up to us, and the issue was whether the State courts were unreasonable in finding that the particular peremptory challenges at issue in this case were not based on race. And it was a tough question, but I didn't see how we could overturn what they had done under the habeas standard. Now—

Senator DURBIN. I would just say, Judge, in many of these tough questions as I read through your cases, you end up ruling in favor of established institutions and against individuals. Let me tell you another one, Pirolli v. World Flavors. Remember this case? A mentally retarded individual, Kenneth Pirolli, physically harassed at his workplace, subjected to a hostile, abusive work environment, and sexually assaulted by his coworkers. According to his deposition testimony, he said they attempted to rape him.

I could read to you what is in that record here, but it is so graphic and it tells in such detail the sexual assault that he was subjected to that I am not going to read it into the record. But I bet you remember it.

And when it came to whether or not he should have a trial, as to whether he was entitled to bring his case before a jury, you said no, stand by the summary judgment, don't take this to a jury. You dissented from the majority position here. And the reason you dissented was, I think, significant. It wasn't about Kenneth Pirolli or the merits of his case. It was about the conduct and efforts of his lawyer.

You noted the fact that his lawyer had not adequately provided citations in his brief to places in the record describing the harassment. So you held Kenneth Pirolli responsible for the fact that his lawyer didn't do a good job—at least in your view—and denied him his day in court. How do you explain that crushing hand of fate on this man who was a victim of sexual harassment?

Judge ALITO. Well, Senator, the district court thought that the defendant in that case was entitled to summary—was entitled to summary judgment, and so I think that says something about the facts of the case and whether it was a particularly strong case.

There's a very important principle involved in the appellate practice, and I think it goes with the idea of judicial self-restraint. It is that certain things are to be decided at certain levels in the court system, and that requires that parties raise issues in the trial court; and that if they do not raise the issue in the trial court, then absent some extraordinary circumstances, they shouldn't be able to raise the issue on appeal. And that was the principle there.

Now, this was not a criminal case. In a criminal case, there's a constitutional right to counsel, and so a person can claim ineffective assistance of counsel. And we treat that issue differently in criminal cases than we do in civil cases.

Senator DURBIN. I would just say that you are arguing on the merits of the district court decision. Your statement in dissent criticized his lawyer for the brief that they presented to your court. That seems to me to be an unfair treatment of a man who I think deserved a day in court.

Let me ask you about another group looking for a day in court, the RNS Services v. Secretary of Labor case that I referred to in my opening statement. It is a timely case. It is about mine safety. You know what happened in West Virginia a few days ago and yesterday in the State of Kentucky where there are serious questions being raised about whether there is adequate mine safety. And in this case, there was a question as to whether or not the Federal and State mine safety provisions applied to a company in a certain activity. And you concluded they did not apply. You concluded that you would narrowly construe the statute passed by Congress, and in construing it in that way, that the requirements of inspecting this mine location would not be subject to Federal law.

Again, you dissented and you ruled on the side of the company, on the side of the established institution, against the coal miners and against the workers in this circumstance. It is a recurring pattern. The crushing hand of fate here seems to always come down against the workers and the consumers and in favor of these established institutions and corporations.

How would you explain the fact that you would so narrowly construe a statute when you knew that the lives and safety of coal miners were at stake?

Judge ALITO. The facility that was involved in that case was not a mine as a lay person would think of a mine. It wasn't an underground facility. It wasn't like the facility in West Virginia where the terrible accident occurred a few days ago. It was basically a pile of coal that was being loaded onto trucks to be transported to another place. The definition of a mine under the Federal law is very broad, and it's not limited to what ordinary people would think of as a mine. And there was an argument that this facility, which, as I said, as I recall, was basically a big pile of coal on top of the ground and coal was being hauled away to a cogeneration facility. Is that a mine? An ordinary person would look at that and say that's not a mine, that's a pile of coal.

But the issue in the case was the kind of technical issue of interpretation that we get all the time, and the question was is this a mine in the sense of the law, and I thought it was not a mine in the sense of the law.

Now, that conclusion, I don't believe, would mean that this facility would be spared safety regulation at either the Federal or local level. It's been a long time since I worked on that case, but I would imagine that if the facility is not governed by the Federal mining laws, it would be covered by OSHA, by the Occupational Safety and Health Administration, and perhaps by State law. So the issue would not be whether this facility would be allowed, which was not a mine in the ordinary sense, would be allowed to operate in an unsafe fashion. It was which body of laws and regulations would govern the facility.

Senator DURBIN. Judge, I would say that your opinion did not prevail. The two other judges, both Reagan appointees, who saw this case on the side of the workers, understood that the wording of the law is as follows: "Congress declares that the first priority and concern of all in the coal or other mining industry must be the safety and health of its most precious resource—the miner." And instead of taking the obvious interpretation that these were people working in the mining industry, even if they were outside of the underground mine and the danger that it presents, you drew this statute as narrowly as you could—construed it as narrowly as you could to take the company position here that the Federal Mine Safety and Health Administration did not have jurisdiction.

I find this as a recurring pattern, and it raises a question in my mind whether the average person, the dispossessed person, the poor person who finally had their day in court and may make it all the way through the process to the Supreme Court, are going to be subject to the crushing hand of fate when it comes to your decisions. They have been many times at the Third Circuit, and that is a concern which I will continue when we have further questions in the next round.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Chairman SPECTER. Do you care to respond, Judge Alito?

Judge ALITO. Yes, could I just say a couple of words? That case was a case of statutory interpretation and applying the statute, and that's how I thought it came out. There have been many other cases that I have worked on on the court of appeals where I have come out in favor of the small person who was challenging a big institution, and I could mention a number of them.

Let me just mention Shore v. Regional High School because I think it has some relation to the Pirolli case, which you mentioned. This was a case in which a high school student had been bullied unmercifully by other students in his school because of their perception of his sexual orientation. He had been bullied to the point of attempting to commit suicide, and his parents wanted to enroll him at an adjacent public high school, and the school board said, no, you can't do that. And I wrote an opinion upholding their right to have him placed in a safe school in an adjacent municipality.

That is just one example, but all of these cases involve what judges are supposed to do, which is to take the law and apply it to the particular facts of the case that is before them.

Chairman SPECTER. Thank you very much, Judge Alito.

Senator Brownback?

Senator BROWNBACK. Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman.

Good morning, Judge Alito, Mrs. Alito, family members. Good to have you here.

I have got a number of areas I would like to ask you questions about, and I am hopeful we can get through them and maybe reduce the need of time in a second round, which would probably be pleasing to your ears.

I want to first go at this area, because it seems to keep coming up, that I think is really not applicable and not reflective of your record that you always take the side of the big institution and against the little guy, as you just stated. But then I want to get into a number of areas of constitutional law, some of which you have written on, religious freedom type cases, takings cases. I would like to get into some of these areas.

But I want to enter into the record, Mr. Chairman, a letter from a former law clerk of yours, David Walk, dated January 6, 2006. David worked with you in the New Jersey U.S. Attorney's Office. I don't know if you remember David or not.

Judge ALITO. I do. He was a fine—

Chairman SPECTER. Without objection, it will be made a part of the record.

Senator BROWNBACK. Thank you.

He is a lifelong Democrat, former member of the ACLU, and talks about how fair you were to everybody's rights. But then he cites the case of Franklin Igbonwa. This was a Nigerian set to be deported for drug dealing who had testified against other Nigerian drug dealers and was fearful of being deported, that he would be killed once back in Nigeria. The other two judges said his case—he shouldn't be believed on the face of it, and you said he should and that the trial court should have given more deference to this Nigerian to be deported. This was somebody that David Walk represented. Talk about a little guy in a case, and that is one that is cited in this particular record and letter that I would hope my colleague from Illinois could take a chance at, because it is a legitimate point of view. And saying, well, it looks like you always take one side or the other, here is where another side was taken.

And then here is a letter from another individual who worked with you, Cathy Fleming, lifelong Democrat, president-elect, National Women's Bar Association, gives an unqualified endorsement of you. She says, "By providing my credentials as an outspoken women's rights advocate and liberal-minded criminal defense attorney, I hope you will appreciate the significance of my unqualified and enthusiastic recommendation of Sam Alito for the Supreme Court."

I think one can kind of look in the past and try to say, well, OK, there is this problem, there is that, but then when people that know you well put their names to letters saying differently, I think that's also something we should consider, and I would ask that that letter be put into the record as well.

Chairman SPECTER. Without objection, it will be made a part of the record.

Senator BROWNBACK. Thank you.

Judge Alito, the Supreme Court has gotten a number of things wrong at times, too. That would be correct, and the answer when the Court gets things wrong is to overturn the case. That is the way it works. Isn't that correct?

Judge ALITO. Well, when the Court gets something wrong and there's a prior precedent, then you have to analyze the doctrine of stare decisis. It is an important doctrine, and I have said a lot about it, but—

Senator BROWNBACK. Wait, let me just ask you, was Plessy wrong, Plessy v. Ferguson?

Judge ALITO. Plessy was certainly wrong.

Senator BROWNBACK. OK, and you have gone through this. Brown v. Board of Education, which is in my hometown of Topeka, Kansas. I was there last year at the dedication of the schoolhouse. Fifty years ago, that overturned Plessy. Plessy had stood on the books since 1896. I don't know if you knew the number. And I have got a chart up here. It was depended upon by a number of people for a long period of time. You have got it sitting on the books for 60 years, twice the length of time of Roe v. Wade. You have got these number of cases that considered Plessy and upheld Plessy to the dependency. And yet Brown comes along, 1950s case, poor little girl has to walk by the all-white school to go to the black school in Topeka, Kansas. And the Court looks at this and they say unanimously that is just not right.

Now, stare decisis would say in the Brown case you should uphold Plessy. Is that correct?

Judge ALITO. It certainly would be a factor that you would consider in determining whether to overrule it.

Senator BROWNBACK. But obviously—

Judge ALITO. A doctrine that you would consider.

Senator BROWNBACK. Obviously, Brown over turned it, and thank goodness it did. Correct?

Judge ALITO. Certainly.

Senator BROWNBACK. It overturned all these super duper precedents that had been depended upon in this case because the Court got it wrong in Plessy. Is that correct?

Judge ALITO. The Court certainly got it wrong in Plessy, and it got it spectacularly wrong in Plessy, and it took a long time for that erroneous decision to be overruled.

One of things I think that people should have understood is that separate facilities, even if they were absolutely equal in every respect, even if they were identical, could never give people equal treatment under the law.

Senator BROWNBACK. They don't.

Judge ALITO. I think they should have recognized that. But one of the things that was illustrated in those cases—and Sweatt v. Painter, the last one on the list brought that out—was that, in fact, the facilities, the supposedly equal facilities were never equal, and the continuing series of litigation that was brought by the NAACP to challenge racial discrimination illustrated—if the illustration was needed, the litigation illustrated that, in fact, the facilities that were supposedly equal were not equal. And that was an important factor, I think, in leading to the decision in Brown v. Board of Education.

Senator BROWNBACK. I want to give you another number, and that is, in over 200 other cases, the Court has revisited and revised earlier judgments. In other words, in some portion or in all of the cases, the Court got it wrong in some 200 cases. And thank goodness the Court is willing to review various cases.

I want to give you an example of a couple, though, that the Court hasn't reviewed yet that I think are spectacularly wrong. The 1927 case of Buck v. Bell, I don't know if you are familiar with that case. The Court examined a Virginia statute that permitted the sterilization of the mentally impaired. Carrie Buck, a patient at the so-called Virginia State Colony for Epileptics and Feeble Minded, was scheduled to be sterilized after doctors alleged she was a genetic threat to the population due to her diminished mental capacity. Buck's guardian challenged the decision to have Carrie sterilized all the way to the Supreme Court, but in an 8–1 decision, the Court found that it was in the State's interest to have her sterilized.

The majority opinion written by Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes said, "We have seen more than once that the public welfare may call upon the best citizens for their lives. It would be strange if it could not call upon those who already sap the strength of the State for these lesser sacrifices, often not felt to be such by those concerned, in order to prevent our being swamped with incompetence."

Clearly, some precedents are undeserving of respect because they are repugnant to the Constitution. Isn't Plessy repugnant to the Constitution?

Judge ALITO. It certainly was repugnant to the Equal Protection Clause.

Senator BROWNBACK. And the vision of human dignity, isn't Buck and those sort of statements by Oliver Wendell Holmes repugnant to the Constitution?

Judge ALITO. I think they are repugnant to the traditions of our country. I don't think there is any question about that.

Senator BROWNBACK. I will give you another case, the Korematsu v. United States case, a 1944 case. World War II broke out following Japanese attacks on Pearl Harbor. Feelings spread that Japanese-Americans, both naturalized and those born in the United States, might not be loyal to the United States and should be removed from the West Coast. So great was the fear that even the esteemed writer Walter Lippmann stated that, "Nobody's constitutional rights include the right to reside and do business on a battlefield. There is plenty of room elsewhere for him to exercise his rights.”

President Roosevelt signed an Executive order removing them. Korematsu contested the constitutionality, Fred Korematsu did, of his internment. In Korematsu v. the United States, the Supreme Court held that military necessity justified the internment program and that Fred Korematsu had no protection against relocation under the Constitution.

Of course, that was later overturned—excuse me, that was never overturned. In 1948, Congress enacted the Japanese American Evacuation Claims Act to provide some monetary compensation. In 1980, Congress again revisited the case. In 1988, Congress passed legislation apologizing for the internment and awarded each survivor $20,000. In 1999, Fred Korematsu was awarded the Presidential Medal of Freedom, the highest civilian honor that anyone can receive. Justice has not been done because Korematsu remains on the books. It is still on the books.

Roe v. Wade. You have had every question on that, but I want to point out its difficulty. My colleagues on the other side look at this as completely settled law, but let’s see what the legal experts say about how settled it is.

Laurence Tribe, who will be here to testify, I believe, probably against you in a little bit. Let’s see what he says, a professor of law at Harvard: “One of the most curious things about Roe is that, behind its own verbal smokescreen, the substantive judgment on which it rests is nowhere to be found.” Settled law? Super duper precedents? Laurence Tribe has some questions about it.

Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg: “Roe, I believe, would have been more acceptable as a judicial decision if it had not gone beyond a ruling on the extreme statute before the Court. Heavy-handed judicial intervention was difficult to justify and appears to have provoked, not resolved, conflict.” Provoked, not resolved, conflict—one of your potential colleagues says.

Edward Lazarus, former clerk to Chief Justice Harry Blackmun, who wrote Roe: “As a matter of constitutional interpretation and judicial method, Roe borders on the indefensible. I say this as someone utterly committed to the right to choose, as someone who believes such a right was grounded elsewhere in the Constitution, instead of where Roe placed it, and as someone who loved Roe’s author like a grandfather.” Settled law? Edward Lazarus has some questions about it being settled.

Let’s look at John Hart Ely, former Dean of Stanford Law School, excellent law school in the country, one of the top law schools in the country: Roe v. Wade “is not constitutional law and gives almost no sense of an obligation to try to be. What is frightening about Roe is that this super-protected right is not inferable from the language of the Constitution, the Framers’ thinking respecting the specific problem in issue, any general value derivable from the provisions they included, or the Nation’s governmental structure.” John Hart Ely. Do you think he thinks Roe is settled law? Not constitutional and gives no sense of an obligation to try to be.

Alan Dershowitz, professor of law, Harvard Law School, one of the top law schools in the country. It is not Princeton, but... Roe v. Wade and Bush v. Gore “represent opposite sides of the same currency of judicial activism in areas more appropriately left to the political process. Judges have no special competency, qualifications, or mandate to decide between equally compelling moral claims, as in the abortion controversy. Clear governing constitutional principles are not present in either case.” Settled law? Super duper precedents?

I think there are places where the Court gets it wrong, and hopefully they will continue to be willing to revisit it.

Now I want to look at a couple of areas of law in addition to this. Your view of the Constitution—and yesterday you hit at this, I thought, on some of the edges, but I just want to get your thoughts of how you view the Constitution, how you would review it. There are these different schools of thought on this of strict constructionist, living document, originalist, and there are several others that float around out there. How do you generally look at the Constitution? And I am aware yesterday you were saying that some provisions are very clear and some are not, and you seem to apply a different set of viewpoints on those of the Constitution. Could you articulate your view of how you look and interpret the Constitution?

Judge ALITO. First of all, Senator, I think the Constitution means something, and I don’t think it means whatever I might want it to mean or whatever any other member of the judiciary might want it to mean. It has its own meaning, and it is the job of a judge, the job of a Supreme Court Justice, to interpret the Constitution, not distort the Constitution, not add to the Constitution or subtract from the Constitution.

In interpreting the Constitution, I think we should proceed in the way we proceed in interpreting other important legal authorities. In interpreting statutes, for example, I think we should look to the text of the Constitution and we should look to the meaning that someone would have taken from the text of the Constitution at the time of its adoption. But I think we have to recognize that the Constitution is very different from statutes in some important respects. Statutes are often very detailed, and they generally don’t exist without revision for very long periods of time. The Constitution was adopted to endure throughout the history of our country, and considering how long our country has existed, it’s been amended relatively few times. And the magic of that, I think, is that it sets out a basic structure for our Government and protects fundamental rights. But on a number of very important issues, I think the Framers recognized that times would change, new questions would come up, and so they didn’t purport to adopt a detailed code, for example, governing searches and seizures. That was the example I gave yesterday, and I will come back to it. They could have set out a detailed code of search and seizure. They didn’t do that. They said that the people are protected against unreasonable searches and seizures, and they left it for the courts—and, of course, the legislative body can supplement this—to apply that principle to the new situations that come up.

Now, when that is done, that doesn’t amount to an amendment of the Constitution or a changing of the Constitution. It amounts to—it involves the application of a constitutional principle to the situation at hand.

Senator BROWNBACK. Let me go to a specific area you have written quite a bit about, and that is on religious liberties and free exercise. And I have looked at these cases, and this is going to be an active area of law in front of the Supreme Court. It has been for the last 40 years.

You wrote the case of ACLU v. Schundler, a Third Circuit case, considered—it is an ACLU challenge to religious displays erected by Jersey City on the Plaza of City Hall. Jersey City for decades had had holiday displays of a menorah and Christmas tree. Litigation resulted in permanent pulling of this. The city came back and said, OK, if that is not good enough, we will put a nativity scene, a menorah, a Christmas tree, Frosty the Snowman, Santa Claus, Kwanzaa symbols, and signs explaining the display. So, OK, if two is not enough, we will add more into it, and they were again challenged by the ACLU. The district court found no constitutional violation.

A panel of the Third Circuit, not including you, reversed that decision. The panel found no basis for the demystification approach, as they put it, and expressed skepticism as to constitutional display.

On remand, the district court held that there was a constitutional violation. The city appealed. You sat on the panel that heard that appeal. In a 2–1 decision, you upheld the constitutionality of the modified display.

In your decision, you specifically cited Justice O'Connor and two particular issues regarding excessive entanglement with religious institutions and Government endorsement or disapproval of religion. Because Justice O'Connor used these factors to uphold similar displays in prior cases, you applied them to your upholding in that case. That is a correct interpretation. Is that correct, Judge Alito?

Judge ALITO. Yes, it is, Senator.

Senator BROWNBACK. Because these are coming up so much in front of the Court, are these types of displays, you feel, generally constitutionally permissible?

Judge ALITO. Well, this is an area in which the Supreme Court has handed down several decisions, and like a lot of the—like a number of the issues that the Court has addressed under the Establishment Clause, it has drawn some fairly fine lines. The first case involving a display of this nature was the Pawtucket, Rhode Island, display that was involved in Lynch v. Donnelly, and it was a display that was similar to the display in Jersey City. It included both religious and secular symbols. And they found that that was not a violation.

Senator BROWNBACK. I want to jump in here because I have got several ways I want to. When I read your opinions, what I hear you to write is you would rather have a robust public square than a naked public square, that you think there is room for these sorts of displays in the public square.

Judge ALITO. Well, that was exactly what Jersey City had decided in that case, and Jersey City said: We are one of the most religiously diverse, ethnically diverse, racially diverse communities you will find anywhere in the country. This is right across the New York harbor from the Statue of Liberty and from Ellis Island, and it is still an entry point for a lot of people coming into the country.

And so they had—over the course of the year, at the appropriate time, they had a Christmas display, they had a display of a menorah—on that particular year, Hanukkah was early in the month of December, so the display, the menorah was up at a different point. They had a display—they had celebrations for Muslim festivals, for Hindu festivals, for Buddhist festivals, for Latino festivals, for festivals concerning the many ethnic groups in the community. And their view was that this is the way we should show that all of these groups are valuable parts of our community and express our embracing of them. And this display, they said, reflected that philosophy and applying the precedents that the Supreme Court had provided in this area, the Pawtucket case and a later case involving a display in Pittsburgh, Judge Rendell and I, who were the judges in the majority on that case, said this is constitutional, this is consistent with the Establishment Clause.

Senator BROWNBACK. Well, and that is what—as we have had this 40 years of cases, I really hope we can have a public square that celebrates and not that it has got to be completely naked to views, and I appreciate that.

You wrote in a free exercise case, C.H. v. Olivia, a case in which a child sued through his parents for violation of his free speech and free exercise rights, when his school removed and repositioned a poster he had made of a religious figure that was important to him. It was a picture of Jesus. The poster was part of an assignment which students were instructed to show something for which they were thankful. The district court granted judgment on the pleadings in favor of the defendant, the school district. The Third Circuit affirmed. You dissented in that opinion. Can you elaborate on your reasoning in that particular opinion? Do you remember the case?

Judge ALITO. Yes, Senator, I do. Justice O'Connor pointed out something that's very critical in this area. She said there is a big difference between Government speech endorsing religion and private religious speech, and this case—and private religious speech can't be discriminated against. It has to be treated equally with secular speech. And in this case, this involved a student who—and there were two incidents. One involved reading. The students in the class were told that if they could read at a certain level, they would have—their reward would be to be able to read their favorite story to the class. And this student satisfied those requirements, and the student wanted to read a very simplified version of the story of Jacob and Esau to the class. And the teacher said, "No, you can't read that to the class. You can read that privately to me off in a corner."

And then Thanksgiving was coming along, and the students were told, "Draw a picture of something that you're thankful for," and I guess the teacher expected they were going to draw pictures of football games and turkeys and things like that. But this student drew a picture of Jesus and said, "That's what I'm thankful for." And the teacher put all the other pictures up in the hall, but would not put this student's picture up in the hall because of its religious content.

And that, we found, was a violation of this principle that you have to treat religious speech equally with secular speech. If you ask a student to say something about a topic, what are you thankful for, and the student says something that fits within the topic that the student was asked to talk about, then you can't discriminate against one kind of speech or another.

Senator BROWNBACK. I thought it was a very interesting stance, and I think appropriate, that you took, and I wanted to—obviously very active areas of the law that we have.

I want to look at the issue of checks and balances on the Federal court. It is a very active area here in Congress as a lot of people across the country and certainly Members of Congress have grown the feeling that we can rule however—we can do whatever we want to here, but wait until the Court decides, that it is the Court that have moved beyond judicial restraint. I asked this of John Roberts, and I asked what is—the checks and balances on Congress are obvious, the President can veto a bill, a court can declare something unconstitutional, checks and balances executive branch are clear, they can be challenged, their actions, in the court, the court can say the President can't do that, we cannot appropriate the money from here. We have got checks and balances, and people are well known. Any high school government student would know that.

Checks and balances on the Court. When I talked with John Roberts about this, he said basically the only check and balance is judicial restraint. It is what the Court restrains itself in. And yet you have within the Constitution a provision that is there that I asked him about that I want to ask you about. Article III, Section 2 goes, "In all cases"—excuse me. "In all the other cases before mentioned, the Supreme Court shall have appellate jurisdiction, both as to law and fact," and then it goes on with this interesting Exceptions Clause, "with such exceptions, and under such regulations as the Congress shall make." The last phrase known as the Exceptions Clause.

What do you believe is Congress's power to define the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court under the Exceptions Clause?

Judge ALITO. Well, the Exceptions Clause obviously gives Congress the authority to define the appellate jurisdiction of the Supreme Court, and it can provide for various avenues by which cases get to the Supreme Court, and that has changed over the years.

There's been a controversy, never resolved, about the exact scope of the authority. It came up in Ex Parte McCordle in the post-Civil War era, and it has been raised by—it has been discussed by scholars in subsequent years, and there are several schools of thought in the question about whether it would be consistent with the Constitution for Congress to eliminate jurisdiction in the Supreme Court over a particular type of case, that's an unresolved issue that the scholars have addressed, and some argue that that falls within the Exceptions Clause, and some argue that it would be inconsistent with other provisions of the Constitution.

Senator BROWNBACK. What I see taking place in this country, as the Court gets more and more involved in tough political issues, is you are going to be pressing other bodies then to say, "Look, we believe these decisions should be here. We believe the issues on the competing interests of an abortion, the mother and the child, should be decided by legislative bodies," but the Court said no. Issue of marriage is coming through the court system right now. As the Court keeps getting involved in these areas, I think you are going to see these sorts of constitutional issues being explored more and more.

Marriage case I want to take you to because that is making its way through the Federal Court. Forty-five of our 50 States have deemed marriage being between the union of a man and a woman. The State of Nebraska passes a State constitutional amendment, 70 percent of the people voting for it, saying that marriage is the union of a man and a woman. Yet a Federal judge in that case threw out the State constitutional amendment on novel constitutional grounds, and it is now making its way up through the system. The Congress has passed the Defense of Marriage Act, DOMA, passed overwhelmingly, signed into law by President Clinton, basically did two things. First establishes for purposes of Federal law marriage would be defined as the union of a man and a woman, and second, it would provide that no State would be forced to recognize a marriage entered into in another State. A number of legal scholars believe that this second part violates the Full Faith and Credit Clause of the Constitution.

Judge Alito, this case is coming forward, and will probably be resolved in the Federal courts if it is not resolved by the Congress through constitutional amendment. What is your understanding of the meaning of the Full Faith and Credit Clause, and does this apply to the institution of marriage which has been traditionally an issue and an area left up to the States?

Judge ALITO. Well, several constitutional doctrines seem to be implicated by the matters that you discussed. The Full Faith and Credit Clause in general means that one State must honor judgments that are issued by a court of another State, and it's an important part of the process. It is an important part of the Federal system, so that we don't have worrying decisions in different States. It is not my—I have not had cases involving this, but there are—the doctrine has a certain, has certain boundaries to it. There are exceptions, and it covers certain areas and doesn't cover other areas, and a challenge to the Defense of Marriage Act under the Full Faith and Credit Clause would call into question the precise scope of the doctrine.

And I believe that scholars have expressed differing views about how it would apply in that situation, and that's an issue that may well come up within the Federal courts, almost certain to do so.

Senator BROWNBACK. Yes. And I know you cannot express on it. One last thing I would like to get into just very briefly is the Takings Clause in the Kelo case that was in a neighboring circuit to yours, Kelo v. City of New London, where private property was taken by a private—another private group—private property was taken by a public group and given to another private group. Judge O'Connor wrote eloquently in her dissent, "Nothing is to prevent the State from replacing any Motel 6 with the Ritz Carlton, or any home with a shopping mall, or any farm with a factory now."

I just conclude by putting that in front of you, saying that this is one that people have relied upon for a long time, that you could not take private property to another private individual for public use, and I hope that is one that the Court will end up reviewing at some point in time.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Chairman SPECTER. Thank you, Senator Brownback.
Senator COBURN?

Chairman SPECTER. Thank you, Mr. Chairman. Good morning, long day.

I would like to put a few things into the record if I may. One is just a list of cases where Judge Alito ruled for the little guy. There has been a lot made, and here is a list of nine cases with specifics where he in fact—one of these I think he mentioned, but not the others. And I would like unanimous consent to—

Chairman SPECTER. Without objection, they will be made a part of the record.

Senator COBURN. Actually, there are 15 cases.

I also want to go back and quote from somebody who was a member of CAP, and this is a Judge Napolitano. He is a commentator on one of the news shows. I would like his statements put into the record from yesterday, where he clarified what CAP was about, and clarified the interest of ROTC at Princeton, and the fact that that was one of the leading reasons that that organization was formed, so I would like for those to be admitted as well.

As you know, I am not an attorney. Sometimes it is very disadvantageous on this panel, but at times it is advantageous. I have this little thing that I have to depend on, and I kind of read it for what it says. As you talk about stare decisis—is that mentioned anywhere in here?

Judge ALITO. It is not expressly mentioned in the Constitution.

Senator COBURN. It is actually a procedure of common English law, correct?

Judge ALITO. That's its origin, yes.

Senator COBURN. That is its origin, and we use that as a tool for working with the Constitution. Can you recall the number of times that precedents have been reversed by the Supreme Court?

Judge ALITO. I don't know the exact figure, Senator.

Senator COBURN. I think it is around 170 some times, affecting some 225 cases, I believe. That is close. That may not be exactly accurate. So, in fact, it is a tool used to help us with the law, but our Founders did not say you have to use stare decisis in this, did they?

Judge ALITO. No, they didn't. They conferred the judicial power on the judiciary, and I think that contemplated that the Federal judiciary would be permitted to proceed with—in accordance with fundamental judicial procedures as they had been known—

Senator COBURN. At the time.

Judge ALITO. At the time.

Senator COBURN. And Article III, section 2 really delineates the scope for the courts in this country, and what it says is, "All cases in law and equity arising under this Constitution, the laws of the United States and treaties made, or which shall be made under their authority." So that really gives us the scope under Article III, section 2. I was interested when Senator Kyl asked you yesterday about foreign law. That is something extremely disturbing to a lot of Americans, that many on the Supreme Court today will reference or pick and choose the foreign law that they want to use to help them make a decision to interpret our Constitution, where in fact, the oath of office mentions no foreign law. Matter of fact it says the obligation is to use the United States law, the Constitution and the treaties, and that is exactly what Article III, section 2 says. So there is no reference at all to foreign law in terms of your obligations or your responsibility, and matter of fact, the absence of it would say that maybe this ought to be what we use, and the codified law of the Congress and the treaties rather than foreign law.

The question I have for you—and I could not get Judge Roberts to answer it because of the conflict that might occur afterwards, but I have the feeling that the vast majority of Americans do not think it is proper for the Supreme Court to use foreign law. I personally believe that that is an indication of not good behavior by a Justice, whether it be a Justice at an appellate division, or a magistrate, or a Supreme Court Justice. I just wondered if you had any comments on that comment.

Judge ALITO. Well, I don't think that we should look to foreign law to interpret our own Constitution. I agree with you that the laws of the United States consist of the Constitution and treaties and laws, and I would add regulations that are promulgated in accordance with law. And I don't think that it's appropriate or useful to look to foreign law in interpreting the provisions of our Constitution. I think the Framers would be stunned by the idea that the Bill of Rights is to be interpreted by taking a poll of the countries of the world. The purpose of the Bill of Rights was to give Americans rights that were recognized practically nowhere else in the world at the time. The Framers did not want Americans to have the rights of people in France or the rights of people in Russia, or any of the other countries on the continent of Europe at the time. They wanted them to have the rights of Americans, and I think we should interpret our Constitution—we should interpret our Constitution. I don't think it's appropriate to look to foreign law.

I also don't think that it's—I think that it presents a host of practical problems that have been pointed out. You have to decide which countries you are going to survey, and then it is often difficult to understand exactly what you are to make of foreign court decisions. All countries don't set up their court systems the same way. Foreign courts may have greater authority than the courts of the United States. They may be given a policymaking role, and therefore, it would be more appropriate for them to weigh in on policy issues. When our Constitution was being debated, there was a serious proposal to have members of the judiciary sit on a council of revision, where they would have a policymaking role before legislation was passed, and other countries can set up their judiciary in that way. So you'd have to understand the jurisdiction and the authority of the foreign courts.

And then sometimes it's misleading to look to just one narrow provision of foreign law without considering the larger body of law in which it's located. That can be—if you focus too narrowly on that, you may distort the big picture, so for those reasons, I just don't think that's a useful thing to do.

Senator COBURN. It actually undermines democracy because you get a pick and choose, and the people of this country do not get a pick and choose that law, as people from a different country. So it actually is a violation of the Constitution, and to me, I very strongly and adamantly feel that it violates the good behavior, which is mentioned as part of the qualifications and the maintenance of that position.

I am sorry Senator Durbin left. I wanted to razz him a little bit. You have taken quite a bit of criticism on what things that you have written and said in 1985, but I want to put forward, for 45 years Senator Durbin was adamantly pro-life, and he wrote multiple, multiple letters expressing that up until 1989. He is a very strong advocate for the abortion stance and a free right to choose, but I think it is important that the American people—if he has the ability to change his mind on something, something he wrote in 1989, certainly you have the ability to say something was ineptly put. This is just Senator Durbin, I am teasing him a little bit, but I think it is important that people recognize people can change their mind. I continue to believe the Supreme Court's decision in Roe v. Wade should be reversed. There are other Members that are adamantly pro-abortion, pro the destruction of human life today that have changed their mind, changed their position. So it is hard to be critical of you and on something you had written in 1985, when many of us have backtracked on things that we have said through the years. So I think it puts a little bit of perspective into where we are going.

I want to spend just a minute, if I can, yesterday during Senator Feinstein's questioning there was some discussion about the Health Exception to any regulations pertaining to abortion. And on January 22nd, when Roe was decided, the Court also decided Doe v. Bolton, and in that case the Court ruled that a woman's right to abortion cannot be limited by the State if abortion was sought for reasons of maternal health. As a practicing physician, I agree with that. I have actually performed abortions on women who were going to die if they did not have an abortion, so the choice was somebody alive versus losing both.

The Court defined health as all factors, physical, emotional, psychological, familial, and a woman's age relevant to the well-being of the patient. This exception effectively expanded the right to abortion for any reason through all the entire pregnancy. Since that time, States have been trying to find ways to effectively regulate abortion without intruding on this health exception, but it has proven nearly impossible. The absence of knowledge is something that Roe v. Wade, which I believe was wrongly decided, has hurt us immensely in this country, and the absence of informed consent on abortion has hurt us immensely.

Mr. Chairman, I would like to enter into the record a study published, a 35-year longitudinal study, which was just released this January from New Zealand, that followed women, 600 women for 35 years from the time of the abortion, that studied the ill health effects of—

Chairman SPECTER. Without objection, it will be made a part of the record.

Senator COBURN. I would also like to enter into the record a Breast Cancer Institute study and analysis of a Lancet 3/25/04 article, and also the testimony of Dr. Elizabeth Shadigian, University of Michigan, Clinical Associate Professor, Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology, as to the complications.

Chairman SPECTER. All of those documents, without objection, will be made a part of the record.

Senator COBURN. It is amazing what we do not know, and as I explained in my opening statement, once we go down a path, the complications associated—the rulings that you make have major impact. I understand the questions that you cannot answer on things that are going to come before us, and I cannot pretend to know what is in your heart about those issues. But what I do know is you were pretty aggressively approached on positions in terms of Justice O'Connor and Executive power. There seemed to be a blinding contradiction during some of your questions that were presented by my colleagues yesterday that raised concerns that you are too close to the Executive and too supportive of Executive power. They wanted to be sure that you respect the role of the judiciary and are free from the influences of the political branches. However, they then argue that you should have the same ideology of Justice O'Connor to maintain the balance on the Court. I have trouble figuring out how they can have it both ways. That is an inherently political desire.

Is there anything in the Constitution, this little document, that says what the ideology ought to be of one Supreme Court Justice replacing another one?

Judge ALITO. The Supreme Court simply gives the President the authority to nominate Justices of the Supreme Court and other Federal judges, and gives Congress the advice and consent responsibility, and doesn't go further than that.

Senator COBURN. And the President, by being elected, the only person in this country who is elected by the whole country, is given that honor and that privilege as well as that responsibility, and then we have the responsibility to advise and consent to that; is that correct?

Judge ALITO. That's correct.

Senator COBURN. But nowhere in the Constitution, nor by precedent—matter of fact, the precedents are just exactly the opposite of that—is it stated that somebody has to have the same philosophy as somebody that is coming off the Court.

Judge ALITO. I think that every Supreme Court Justice is an individual, and I think every nominee is an individual, and no nominee can ever be a duplicate of someone who retires, and particularly when someone retires after such a distinguished career and such a historic career as Justice O'Connor. Nobody can be expected as a nominee to fit that mold.

Senator COBURN. So the fact that you have to fit the Sandra Day O'Connor mold is really a misapplication of—there is no precedent that would say that.

Judge ALITO. The only—if I'm confirmed, I'll be myself. I'll be the same person that I was on the Court of Appeals. That's the only thing that I can say in answer to that.

Senator COBURN. Let me repeat some facts that one of my colleagues mentioned yesterday. Of the 109 Justices to sit on the Supreme Court, nearly half have replaced Justices appointed by another political party. President Clinton replaced Justice White, who dissented on Roe v. Wade, with Justice Ginsburg, who argued for a right to abortion. Justice Ginsburg was, I think, three votes against her in the Senate when she was approached, and she took it completely opposite, but she was well qualified. She had integrity, and she was voted onto the Court even though many people knew that her philosophy was very different from theirs; is that true?

Judge ALITO. She was—the vote was 90 something to a small number. I know that, yes.

Senator COBURN. A lot of times in these hearings, you do not get a chance to say, why would you want to be a Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States? Why would you want that responsibility? Why do you want to go through this process to be able to achieve that position? Can you tell the American people why?

Judge ALITO. I think it's a chance to make a contribution. I think it's a chance to use whatever talent I have in the most productive way that I can think of. There are a lot of things that I can't do and a lot of things that I couldn't do very well if I was given the assignment of doing them, but I've spent most of my career as an appellate attorney. Well, I spent most of my career before becoming a judge as an appellate attorney and now I've spent 15 years as an appellate judge and I think this is what I do best. I think this gives me an opportunity to make a contribution to the country and to the society, because the Supreme Court has a very important role to play and it's important that it do the things that it's supposed to do well and I would do my very best to further that.

And it is also important for the Supreme Court, and for that matter, all of the Federal courts, to exercise restraint. As you were referring to earlier, that has turned out to be the principal check on the way the judiciary does its work on a day-to-day basis. The judiciary is not checked in its day-to-day work in the same way as the Congress and the President. The Congress can pass a law or pass a bill and the President can veto it. One House can pass a bill, the other House may not go along. The President has to propose legislation to Congress if the President wants legislation. Congress can pass laws that the President doesn't like. There are checks and balances that are worked out in the ordinary processes of government.

But when it comes to the judiciary in deciding constitutional cases, the judiciary is checked on a daily basis primarily by its own discipline, its own self-restraint. And so it's important for—the judiciary has these twin responsibilities that are in intention at times, doing what it is supposed to do and doing those things well and vigorously and courageously, if it comes to that, but at the same time, constantly monitoring its own activities and asking, are we doing what we are supposed to be doing as judges? Are we functioning as judges, or are we stepping over the line? Are we turning ourselves into legislators? Are we turning ourselves into members of the executive branch or administrators? And the judiciary has to maintain its independence. That's of critical importance, and that's an important part of the role and that also has to be informed by this sense of self-restraint.

Senator COBURN. Thank you. During Judge Roberts's hearing, Senator Feinstein tried to get him to talk and speak out of his heart and I thought it was a great question so that the American people can see your heart. This booklet is designed to protect the weak, to give equality to those who might not be able to do it themselves, to protect the frail, to make sure that there is equal justice under the law. You know, I think at times during these hearings you have been unfairly criticized or characterized as that you don't care about the less fortunate. You don't care about the little guy. You don't care about the weak or the innocent. Can you comment just about Sam Alito and what he cares about and let us see a little bit of your heart and what is important to you and why?

Judge ALITO. Senator, I tried to—in my opening statement, I tried to provide a little picture of who I am as a human being and how my background and my experiences have shaped me and brought me to this point. I don't come from an affluent background or a privileged background. My parents were both quite poor when they were growing up. I know about their experiences, and I didn't experience those things. I don't take credit for anything that they did or anything that they overcame, but I think that children learn a lot from their parents and they learn from what the parents say, but I think they learn a lot more from what the parents do and from what they take from the stories of their parents' lives.

And that's why I went into that in my opening statement, because when a case comes before me involving, let's say, someone who is an immigrant, and we get an awful lot of immigration cases and naturalization cases, I can't help but think of my own ancestors because it wasn't that long ago when they were in that position. And so it's my job to apply the law. It's not my job to change the law or to bend the law to achieve any results, but I have to, when I look at those cases, I have to say to myself, and I do say to myself, this could be your grandfather. This could be your grandmother. They were not citizens at one time and they were people who came to this country.

When I have cases involving children, I can't help but think of my own children and think about my children being treated in the way the children may be treated in the case that's before me. And that goes down the line. When I get a case about discrimination, I have to think about people in my own family who suffered discrimination because of their ethnic background or because of religion or because of gender, and I do take that into account. When I have a case involving someone who's been subjected to discrimination because of disability, I have to think of people who I've known and admired very greatly who had disabilities and I've watched them struggle to overcome the barriers that society puts up, often just because it doesn't think of what it's doing, the barriers that it puts up to them.

So those are some of the experiences that have shaped me as a person.

Senator COBURN. Thank you. Mr. Chairman, I think I will yield back the balance of my time at this time and if I have additional questions, I will get them in the next round.

Chairman SPECTER. Thank you very much, Senator Coburn.

We will now proceed to the second round of questioning, with each Senator having 20 minutes, and we will take 20 minutes more and then we will take a break.

Is it appropriate for the Court to declare Acts of Congress unconstitutional because of our, quote, "method of reasoning"? Does the Court have some superior insights on a method of reasoning? Is it appropriate for the Court to declare Acts of Congress unconstitutional, functioning as a taskmaster to make sure that Congress does its homework? There have been a series of decisions which have seriously undercut congressional power where, in my opinion, the Court has usurped the authority of Congress, and this moves into the often-criticized range of congressional legislation—judicial legislation and derogation of the congressional power.

We are seeking, Judge Alito, to have an appropriate equilibrium in our system and the beauty of the American system is that no one has too much power. We call it separation of power. Although not specifically mentioned in the Constitution, we call it checks and balances. We have looked into the issue of tremendous importance. Regrettably, we haven't plumbed it, only scratched the surface, but our time is limited on the authority of the President under War Powers Article II contrasted with Congress's authority to legislate for privacy under the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act, and I want to move into two other analogous areas, Congress versus the Court and the Court versus Congress, as Congress has taken away the jurisdiction of the Court, notably very recently by stripping habeas corpus jurisdiction on detainees.

When the Congress legislated to protect women against violence, the Congress did so with a very expansive record. It wasn't like Lopez, which was a revolution where the Court upset 60 years of congressional power under the Commerce Act, but in the case of U.S. v. Morrison involving the legislation to protect women against violence, there was a record which included gender bias from task forces in 21 States, five separate reports. Notwithstanding a quote, "mountain of evidence," as noted by four dissenters, the Court declared the Act unconstitutional because of our method of reasoning.

Now, you are a judge. You may be a Supreme Court Justice. Is there something we are missing? Do you judges have some method of reasoning which is superior to the method of reasoning of the Congress?

Judge ALITO. I think the branches of government are equal and everybody, all the officers in all the branches of government take an oath to the same Constitution—

Chairman SPECTER. Equality on method of reasoning?

Judge ALITO. I would never suggest that judges have superior reasoning power than does Congress. I think what the Court was getting at when it made that statement in Morrison, and yesterday, I looked at something that I had written and said that was not well phrased, I think that what the Court was getting at there in Morrison was that it was applying a certain standard, a certain legal standard as to whether something substantially affected commerce, and I think that is what they were getting at, but—

Chairman SPECTER. It is hard to figure out what they were getting at. We do know what they said. They said our method of reasoning was defective. But I take it from your statement you wouldn't subscribe to overturning congressional Acts because of our method of reasoning?

Judge ALITO. I think that Congress's ability to reason is fully equal to that of the judiciary and I think Congress—

Chairman SPECTER. And you think that even after appearing here for a day and a half?

[Laughter.]

Judge ALITO. I have always thought that and nothing has changed my mind about that.

Senator HATCH. I am starting to worry about you.

[Laughter.]

Chairman SPECTER. That is on Senator Hatch's time.

[Laughter.]

Chairman SPECTER. Let me take up the Americans with Disabilities Act on two decisions within a couple of years of each other, one where the Supreme Court declared unconstitutional the Americans with Disabilities Act because it applied to employment, upholding the Act as it applied to access to facilities. Justice Scalia had a ringing dissent when the Court imposed the standard of congruence and proportionality, a very difficult standard which you wrestled with in the family leave case.

The congruent and proportional standard came to the Court in the Boerne case in 1997, so it is very recent origin and it has all the earmarks of having been pulled out of the thin air. Justice Scalia said that it was a thinly veiled invitation to judicial arbitrariness and policy-driven decisionmaking. Justice Scalia criticized the majority opinion for functioning as a taskmaster to see to it that Congress had done its homework. Here again, there was a voluminous record, 13 congressional hearings. Thirty-thousand people were surveyed.

Do you think, Judge Alito, that a test like congruence and proportionality is fair notice to the Congress on what we can do by way of legislation? Here, we are dealing—and it is maybe worth just a little explanation. When Congress legislates on constitutional issues under Article V of the 14th Amendment, the Court then makes a comparison to State immunity under the 11th Amendment. But do you think that is a fair test as to what we are to try to figure out what the Supreme Court is later going to say is congruent and proportionate?

Judge ALITO. Well, like many tests in the law, it is not a mathematical or a scientific formula that can produce a particular result with certainty as it is applied to particular situations. It addresses—

Chairman SPECTER. How about just fair notice? Never mind mathematical certainty.

Judge ALITO. It addresses a difficult problem the Court has grappled with over the years and that is the scope of Congress's authority under Section V of the 15th Amendment—of the 14th Amendment to pass legislation enforcing the provisions of the 14th Amendment, and one argument that has been made which would represent a very narrow interpretation of congressional power, and this is basically the argument that Justice Scalia—the position that Justice Scalia took in the dissent that you mentioned, is that Congress' authority doesn't extend any further than remedying actual violations of the 14th Amendment, that there is no—Congress doesn't have additional authority to enact prophylactic measures outside of the area of race, which Justice Scalia would treat differently and recognize broader authority because of the historical origin of the 14th Amendment.

Chairman SPECTER. Judge Alito, what is wrong with the test of Maryland v. Wirtz and Gonzales v. Raich, because you take a look at power under the Commerce Clause and to be applicable to our legislation under the Americans with Disabilities Act? That test is where the Court has gone into some length to say what you have gone into repeatedly, that judges have no expertise. It is up to the Congress to have hearings. It is up to the Congress to find facts. It is up to the Congress to find out what goes on in the real world.

In Wirtz in 1968 and reaffirmed recently in Gonzales v. Raich after Morrison, after Lopez, quote, “where we find the legislators have a rational basis for finding a chosen regulatory scheme necessary for the protection of commerce,” could apply as well to disability, “our investigation is at an end.” What is wrong with that? Would you subscribe to that test over the proportionate and congruence test?

Judge ALITO. There are a number of tests that have been used and proposed over the years in this area and this is the subject, I think, of continuing litigation in the Supreme Court. There is the Maryland v. Wirtz approach and then the City of Boerne approach, and you mentioned that the City of Boerne is a relatively recent decision and it’s been followed by a number of subsequent decisions—

Chairman SPECTER. Where did it come from? Where did the Boerne test on proportionate and congruence come from if not thin air?

Judge ALITO. Well, I think it was an effort by the majority in that case to identify a standard that would not strictly limit congressional power to remedying established violations of the 14th Amendment without going—while still, in their view, retaining the necessary remedial connection to Section V of the 14th Amendment. It is an approach that they have used in a number of cases and the cases have not come out—sometimes the results in the cases have not been predictable.

You mentioned the contrast between the two decisions under the Americans with Disabilities Act. I think Nevada v. Hibbs was a decision that some people—that surprised some people based on the Court’s prior precedents. So there is, I think, still some ferment in this area and I am sure it is a question that’s going to be—that will come up in future cases.

Chairman SPECTER. Well, we are speaking not only to you, Judge Alito, but to the Court. The Court watches these proceedings and I think they ought to know what the Congress thinks about making us schoolchildren per challenging our method of reasoning. We are considering legislation which would give Congress standing to go into the Supreme Court to uphold our cases. Right now, the Solicitor General does that, but he is in the executive branch. We don’t want to derogate the Solicitor General in your presence, Judge Alito, but the thinking that we have had was to speak about the decisions, the Court’s decisions on the floor in the Senate, nobody pays attention to that. Maybe we would try to come in as amicus. Why do that? We have the power to grant standing. We can grant standing to ourselves and come into Court and fight to uphold constitutionality.

Let me move at this point to the recent legislation which takes away the jurisdiction of the Federal bench to hear habeas corpus decisions. It is in the context of the detainees.

Justice O'Connor in Hamdi laid out the law in flat terms. All agree that absent suspension, the Writ of Habeas Corpus remains available to every individual detained within the United States, every individual, not just citizens. And then she spells out the way you suspend the writ, and you do it only by rebellion or invasion. Then this recent legislation says the District Columbia Court of Appeals shall have the exclusive jurisdiction to determine the validity of any final decision by the Combatant Status Review Tribunal. If it means what it says, and judges like to look to the statute as opposed to going to congressional intent, if it means what it says, that there is exclusive jurisdiction, there is no jurisdiction of the Supreme Court.

This may come before the Court, but what factors would you consider to be relevant in making the analysis as to again maintaining equilibrium between the Court and the Congress of our authority to take away Federal court jurisdiction on this important item?

Judge ALITO. In the area of habeas corpus, there are a number of important principles that have to be considered in reviewing any legislation that is argued to—that someone contends has altered habeas jurisdiction. The first is that the Court said in a case called INS v. Cyr that if there is an attempt to—that habeas jurisdiction can't be taken away unless it's clear in the statute that that's what was intended. Habeas jurisdiction is not to be repealed by implication. That's one important principle.

And then in Felker v. Turpin, which involved the Anti-Terrorism and Effective Death Penalty Act of 1996, Congress—I'm sorry, the Supreme Court considered arguments about whether provisions of that legislation which restructured Federal habeas review violated the Constitution and they found that there wasn't a violation because the essentials of the writ were preserved. And so if other legislation is challenged, it would have to be reviewed under standards like that.

Chairman SPECTER. Judge Alito, I want to move now to a subject on efforts to have television in the Supreme Court of the United States, a subject very near and dear to my heart. I have been pushing it for a long time. I am personally convinced that it is going to come some day. I am not sure whether it will come during my tenure in the Senate, more likely to come during the tenure of Chief Justice Roberts in the Supreme Court, or your tenure, if confirmed.

The Supreme Court said in the Richmond Television case that, quote, "the rights of a public trial belong not just to the accused, but to the public and the press, as well. Such openness has long been recognized as an indispensable attribute in the Anglo-Saxon trial." There are many other lines of authority, but only a few moments left to set the stage here, but the Supreme Court has the final word.

We can talk about the President's war power under Article II and the congressional authority under the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act, but the Court makes the decision. We can talk about taking away habeas corpus jurisdiction, but the Court decides whether we can do it or not. We can talk about the insult of declaring Acts of Congress unconstitutional because of our method of reasoning, but the Court can do that. And the Court has made these decisions on all the important subjects. The Court decided who would be President of the United States in Bush v. Gore. The Court decides who lives on a woman's right to choose, who dies on the right to die, on the death penalty, on every critical decision.

The Congress has the authority to do many things on the administrative level, such as we set the starting date for the Court, the first Monday in October. We set what is a quorum for the Court, six members. Congress sets the size of the Court, the effort made by President Roosevelt to increase the number from nine to 15. We put provisions in on speedy trial, time limits on habeas corpus matters.

In recent times, some of those who have objected to televising the Court have been on television quite a bit themselves. When Justice Scalia and Justice Breyer come on TV, it is a pretty good show. There is not much surfing when that happens, like surfing when my turn comes to question.

[Laughter.]

Chairman SPECTER. But this proceeding on confirmation of Supreme Court Justices has attracted a lot of attention. As I said to you yesterday, I am tired of picking up the front page everywhere and seeing your picture on it. Fred Hume was on Fox News talking about going to a Redskins game in 1991 when Justice Thomas was being confirmed and how he had his earsets on to listen to the proceedings. I think Senator Leahy was questioning Professor Hill at that particular time.

But how about it? Why shouldn't the Supreme Court be open to the public with television?

Judge ALITO. Well, I had the opportunity to deal with this issue actually in relation to my own court a number of years ago. All the courts of appeals were given the authority to allow their oral arguments to be televised if they wanted and we had a debate within our court about whether we would, or whether we should allow television cameras in our courtroom and I argued that we should do it. I thought that it would be a useful—

Chairman SPECTER. You have taken a position on this issue?

Judge ALITO. Well, I did, and this is one of the matters on which I ended up in dissent in my court.

[Laughter.]

Judge ALITO. I think the majority was fearful that our Nielsen numbers would be in the negatives.

Chairman SPECTER. Could you promise the same result?

[Laughter.]

Chairman SPECTER. Could you promise the same result, if confirmed, to be a dissenter for the Court to allow TV?

Senator GRASSLEY. Be careful how you answer.

Chairman SPECTER. Be careful how you answer everything, as you have been.

Judge ALITO. The issue is a little bit different on the Supreme Court and it would be presumptuous for me to talk about it right now, particularly since I think at least one of the Justices has said that a television camera would make its way into the Supreme Court courtroom over his dead body, so I wouldn't want to comment on it.

Chairman SPECTER. Justice Souter. But quite a few of his colleagues have been on television.

Let me ask you this, Judge Alito. I know what the answer will be, with 7 seconds left. Will you keep an open mind?

Judge ALITO. I will keep an open mind despite the position I took on the Third Circuit.

[Laughter.]

Chairman SPECTER. Thank you, Judge Alito.

We will now take a 15-minute break and we will reconvene at 11:35.

[Recess 11:18 a.m. to 11:35 a.m.]

Chairman SPECTER. The hearing will resume. Turning to the distinguished ranking member, Senator Leahy, for 20 minutes.

Senator LEAHY. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Judge Alito, welcome back. If the past is any prologue, you probably do not have more than another day or so of this to go through. I am concerned. I want to just state this right out, concerned that you may be retreating from part of your record. I think that some of the answers that—I have expressed this concern, mentioned to the Chairman I am concerned that some of your answers were inconsistent with past statements. All of us want to know your legal and constitutional philosophy.

So let's go back to the questions that I was asking yesterday about checking Presidential power, and we spoke about Justice Jackson's opinion in Youngstown. Justice Jackson, as you know, is a hero of mine, and I point often to the Youngstown case. But when Congress acts to strain the President's power, as we did with the anti-torture statutes and the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act, I believe the President's power then is at its lowest ebb. You seemed to be saying yesterday that fell into the second category of Jackson, the twilight zone. Actually, I believe you were mistaken on that. Justice Jackson spoke of the twilight zone area, or as he said, zone of twilight, where Congress had not acted.

So let us go to the landmark decision in Hamdi, and Justice O'Connor's decision. The issue there was whether due process required that a U.S. citizen, should have a meaningful chance to challenge the factual basis for his detention by the Government.

Now, Justice O'Connor wrote that the President does not have a blank check even in time of war. Yesterday you told Senator Specter that you agreed with Justice O'Connor's general statement. A very different view was in the dissent. Justice Thomas would have upheld the extreme claims with the all powerful and essentially unchecked President. He argued the Government's powers could not be balanced away by the Court, and there is no occasion to balance a competing interest. Which one is right, Justice O'Connor or Justice Thomas? They are quite a bit different.

Judge ALITO. Justice O'Connor wrote the opinion of the Court. The first question that she addressed in Hamdi was whether it was lawful to detain Hamdi, and it was a statutory question, and it was a question whether—it was whether he was being detained in violation of what is often referred to as the anti-detention statute, which was passed to prevent a repetition of the Japanese internment that occurred during World War II, and she concluded that the authorization for the use of military force constituted authorization for detention. And then she went on to the issue of the constitutional procedures that would have to be followed before someone could be detained, and she looked to standard procedural due process law in this area, and identified some of the requirements that would have to be followed before someone could be detained.

And now issues have arisen about the identity of the tribunal that is to make a determination about detaining people who are taken into custody during the war on terrorism, and that's one of the issues that's working its way through the court system.

Senator LEAHY. No, I am not talking about things working their way through, but just on Hamdi, which has already been decided. Would you say that Justice O'Connor basically applied the Jackson test, not the twilight zone test, but the test of where the President's power is at its lowest ebb?

Judge ALITO. In addressing the statutory question I don't think she had any need to get into Justice Jackson's framework as well.

Senator LEAHY. Would you say it would be consistent with what Justice Jackson said?

Judge ALITO. I think it certainly is consistent with what Justice Jackson said.

Senator LEAHY. Which decision do you personally agree with, hers or the dissent by Justice Thomas?

Judge ALITO. I think that the war powers are divided between the executive branch and Congress. I think that's a starting point to look at in this area. The President is the Commander in Chief, and he has authority in the area of foreign affairs, and is recognized in Supreme Court decisions as the sole organ of the country in conducting foreign affairs.

Senator LEAHY. But you are not going to say which of the two decisions you agree with.

Judge ALITO. Well, I'm trying to explain my understanding of the division of authority in this area, and I think that it's divided between the executive and the Congress. I certainly don't think that the President has a blank check in time of war. He does have the responsibility as the Commander in Chief, which is an awesome responsibility.

Senator LEAHY. And we all understand that and appreciate that. I understood, listening to Chief Justice Roberts, when he was here sitting where you are, that he felt that Justice O'Connor's decision most clearly tracked the Jackson standards in Youngstown.

But I want to get more into this unitary Executive theory because I really had questions listening to you yesterday. You have said as recently as five years ago, that you believe the unitary Executive theory best captures the constitutional role of Presidential power. You were a sitting judge when you said that. And do you still adhere to that constitutional view that you were expressing 5 years ago?

Judge ALITO. I think that the considerations that inform the theory of the unitary Executive are still important in determining, in deciding separation of powers issues that arise in this area. Of course, when questions come up involving the power of removal, which was the particular power that I was talking about in the talk that you're referring to, those are now governed by a line of precedents from Myers going through Humphrey's Executor and Wiener and Morrison, where the Court held 8–1 that the removal restrictions that were placed on an independent counsel under the Independent Counsel Act did not violate separation of powers principles. So those would be applied. Those would be the governing precedents on the question of removal, but my point in the talk was that the considerations that underlie this theory are relevant, should inform decisionmaking in the area going beyond the narrow question of removal.

Senator LEAHY. But in the past you criticized Morrison. Are you saying now that you are comfortable with Morrison, that you accept it?

Judge ALITO. Morrison is a settled—is a precedent of the Court. It was an 8–1 decision. It's entitled to respect under stare decisis. It concerns the Independent Counsel Act, which no longer is in force.

Senator LEAHY. So do you hold today that the Independent Counsel statute was beyond the congressional authority to authorize—to enact?

Judge ALITO. No. I don't think that was ever my position.

Senator LEAHY. All right. Under the theory of unitary Executive that you have espoused, what weight and relevance should the Supreme Court give to a Presidential signing statement? I ask that because these are real issues. I mean we passed the McCain-Warner, et al. statute against torture, when the President did a separate signing statement. After he signed it into law, he did not veto it. He had the right and, of course, the ability to veto it. He did not veto it. He signed it into law, and then he wrote a sidebar, a signing statement basically saying that it will not apply to him or those acting under his order if he does not want it to.

Under the unitary Executive theory, one could argue that he has an absolute right to ignore a law that Congress has written. What kind of weight do you think should be given to signing statements?

Judge ALITO. I don't see any connection between the concept of a unitary Executive and the weight that should be given to signing statements in interpreting statutes. I view those as entirely separate questions. The question of the unitary Executive, as I was explaining yesterday, does not concern the scope of Executive powers. It concerns who controls whatever power the Executive has. You could have an Executive with very narrow powers and still have a unitary Executive. So those are entirely different questions.

The scope of Executive power gets into the question of inherent Executive power.

Senator LEAHY. Let's go into that a little bit because back in the days when I was a prosecutor, I mean I was very shocked what happened in the Saturday Night Massacre. A President orders certain things to be done. The Attorney General says, no, I won't do it. Fires him. The Deputy Attorney General, said, "OK, you do it," and Deputy Attorney General would not, saying it violated the law. Fires him. They keep on going down to finally find one person, a person you have praised, Robert Bork, who says, "Fine, I'll fire him. I'll do what the President says."

You have criticized Congress for allowing these independent agencies to refine and apply policies passed by Congress. You said that insofar as the President is the Chief Executive, he should follow their policies, not Congress.

So let's take one, for example, the Federal Election Commission, independent agency. They make policies. Suppose the President, whoever was the President, did not like the fact they were investigating somebody who had contributed to him. Could he order them to stop that investigation?

Judge ALITO. Senator, I don't think I have ever said that—I don't think I've ever challenged the constitutionality of independent agencies. My understanding—

Senator LEAHY. No, but you have said—my understanding is that you chastised Congress for giving so much power to them when the power should be in the President or in the Executive.

Judge ALITO. Senator, I don't think I've ever said that either. I said that I thought that there was merit to the theory of the unitary Executive, and I tried to explain how I thought that should play out in the post-Morrison world, accepting Morrison as the Supreme Court's latest decision in a resounding 8–1 decision on the issue of removal. How should the issue of—how should the concept of the unitary Executive play out in the post-Morrison world?

On the issue of removal, my understanding of where the law stands now is that Myers established that there are certain officers of the executive branch whom the President has the authority to remove as he sees fit. There are—and there are those—

Senator LEAHY. Of course, he could fire his whole cabinet today if he wanted to. We all accept that.

Judge ALITO. Well, that was the issue that was presented by the Tenure in Office Act that led to the impeachment of the first President Johnson, and in Myers, Chief Justice Taft, although the Act of that controversy was long past, Chief Justice Taft opined that the Tenure in Office Act had been unconstitutional.

Senator LEAHY. But let us not go off the subject of these independent agencies that we have set up. Use as an example the FEC, the Federal Election Commission. Could the President, if he did not like somebody they were investigating, a contributor or something, could he order them to stop?

Judge ALITO. What Morrison says is that Congress can place restrictions on the removal of inferior officers, provided that those removal restrictions don't interfere with the President's exercise of Executive authority. So they adopted a functional approach, and that was the Court's latest word on this question. They looked back to Humphrey's Executor, and Wiener, which had talked about categories, and they—categories of quasi-judicial and quasi-legislative officers, and they reformulated this as a functional approach, and that's the approach that would now be applied.

Senator LEAHY. Do you believe the President has the power to curtail investigations, for example, by the Department of Justice?

Judge ALITO. I don't think—

Senator LEAHY. The Department of Justice is under him.

Judge ALITO. I don't think the President is above the law, and the President is the head of the executive branch, and I've explained my understanding of the removal restrictions that can and cannot be placed on officers of the executive branch.

Senator LEAHY. But could he order them to stop an investigation?

Judge ALITO. Well, you'd have to look at the facts of the case and the particular officer that we're talking about.

Senator LEAHY. Could he order the FBI to conduct surveillance in a way not authorized by statute?

Judge ALITO. The President is subject to constitutional restrictions, and he cannot lawfully direct the FBI or anybody in the Justice Department or anybody else in the executive branch to do anything that violates the Constitution.

Senator LEAHY. Could he—I am speaking now of statute—could he order our intelligence agencies to do something that was specifically prohibited by statute?

Judge ALITO. My answer to that is the same thing. He has to follow the Constitution and the laws of the United States. He has to take care that the laws are faithfully executed. If a statute is unconstitutional, then the President—then the Constitution would trump the statute. But if a statute is not unconstitutional then the statute is binding on the President and everyone else.

Senator LEAHY. Does the President have unlimited power just to declare a statute, especially if it is a statute that he had signed into law, to then declare it unconstitutional or say he is not going to follow it?

Judge ALITO. If the matter is later challenged in court, of course, the President isn't going to have the last word on that question, that's for sure. And the courts would exercise absolutely independent judgment on that question. It's emphatically the duty of the courts to say what the law is when constitutional questions are raised in cases that come before the courts.

Senator LEAHY. That is an answer I agree with. Thank you. In other areas, SEC, can he order them to stop an investigation if it is somebody he does not want investigated?

Judge ALITO. Well, the independent agencies are governed by Humphrey's Executor and cases that follow that, and there have been restrictions placed on the removal of commissioners of the independent agencies, and they have been sustained by the Supreme Court. That's where the Supreme Court precedent on the issue stands.

Senator LEAHY. Is that settled law?

Judge ALITO. It is a line of precedent that culminated, I would say—there have been a few additional cases relating to this, the Edmond case and the Freitag case, but I would look to Morrison, which was an 8–1 decision involving a subject of considerable public controversy, the removal of an independent counsel, removal of restrictions on that independent counsel.

Senator LEAHY. I am still having some difficulty with statements you have made about the unitary Executive and how you would apply it. You said yesterday, in answer to a question I asked, that when people's rights are violated, they should have their day in court. The courts are there to protect the rights of individuals. I do not think anybody in this room would disagree with that. It is the practice we look at in PIRG v. Magnesium Electron. You concluded the Congress did not have the constitutional authority to authorize citizens to bring a suit against polluters under the Clean Water Act, whether the people had justiciable claims or not, there were a number of people downstream from Magnesium Electron. They said the water had been polluted. They brought a suit. You threw it out. Judge Lewis dissented, said it should have gone back to the lower court on the question of facts.

I will give you a two-part question. One, why did you send that case back to the lower court? And do you accept Laidlaw as being settled law?

Judge ALITO. Well, Magnesium Electron presented the question of whether we had a case or controversy under Article III, and that's the fundamental limit on our jurisdiction. The Supreme Court has said that we do not have a case or controversy before us if we do not have a party that has constitutional standing which requires injury in fact. And the issue was whether the plaintiffs in that case had established injury in fact. There was a plant that was discharging certain things into a creek, which eventually emptied into the Delaware River, and the plaintiffs in the case alleged that they enjoyed the Delaware River in a variety of ways. They ate fish from the river. They drank water from the river. They walked along the river.

But there was no—there was nothing in the evidence—and Judge Lewis agreed on this. Judge Roth wrote the opinion and I agreed with Judge Roth, and Judge Lewis agreed with us on this point, there was nothing in the record.

Senator LEAHY. But didn't Judge Lewis agree with you on the legal point, but he suggested sending it back to the lower court to determine whether there were facts to give standing? I mean, we all agree you can't be in a case if you don't have standing, but didn't Judge Lewis say, send it back to the lower court so they can determine on the facts whether there might be standing?

Judge ALITO. The evidence that was before us did not show that there was any standing on the part of the plaintiffs. There was no evidence of harm to the Delaware River in any way from the discharges and that was the basis of Judge Roth's opinion which with I agreed. As I recall, Judge Lewis's point was that the case should go back to the district court so that the plaintiffs could have an opportunity to present additional evidence. But as I recall, they were not even arguing before us that they had additional evidence. They were not arguing before us, as I recall, that we have additional evidence and we'd like the opportunity to go back to the district court to present it. That's my recollection of the matter.

Senator LEAHY. And the other part of my question is Laidlaw, is it settled law?

Judge ALITO. Well, Laidlaw is a precedent on the Supreme Court and my answer to the question there is the same. It's entitled to the respect of stare decisis.

Chairman SPECTER. Thank you, Senator Leahy.

Senator HATCH?

Senator HATCH. Judge Alito, I just want to clarify a few matters. In his questioning this morning, Senator Durbin from Illinois I think apparently misstated what Chief Justice Roberts said during his confirmation hearing. Senator Durbin claimed that now the Chief Justice said that Roe was the settled law of the land. In fact, that exchange that Senator Durbin referred to was made during the confirmation process for Judge Roberts to the Circuit Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia, where he would have to admit that that would be settled law for him in that court. It is beyond question that for a circuit court nominee, the Supreme Court's pronouncements on specific questions are binding precedents and will be the settled law of the land.

Moreover, contrary to the distinguished Senator from Illinois's suggestion, then-Judge Roberts's testimony in his recent confirmation hearing, and Judge, your testimony today and yesterday, you have both been entirely consistent in this particular matter. I just wanted to clarify that because there is a difference between a nominee for the circuit court of appeals saying that something is settled law that he or she has to be bound by than by somebody who is a nominee for the Supreme Court, and that is just a matter of clarification that I would like to make at this time.

Now, yesterday, you were asked, I think, some 340 questions by 15 Senators and you are getting a bunch today. I am told that you felt that you had to decline to answer only about 5 percent of them. That is even lower than previous Supreme Court nominees, by far in most cases. This hearing has hopefully provided an opportunity for you to address our concerns and answer some of the criticisms from members of this Committee. But, of course, there is always a battle waged outside of this Committee room by the special interest groups, who are also making charges and launching really unfair attacks on you. Now, these attacks typically go directly across the airwaves or the Internet with hardly a chance to even catch them, let alone address them or rebut them or correct them. So I want to give you a chance to respond to some of these attacks by some of these left-wing groups, many of which are certainly less than responsible and, in my view, pretty reprehensible in what they do in these matters.

One group says in a press release that in the Chittister case and at other times in your career on the bench, you go out of your way to rule against workers. This group claims what it calls your views and biases are strong evidence that you would, in their words, quote, "rarely rule in favor of those seeking justice in the courts." I think that is a good example of how misleading some of these groups can actually be, where they are looking only for results in certain cases rather than upholding of the law itself in those particular cases. In that particular case, they are apparently willing to ignore two things about the cases they discuss. They ignore the facts, they ignore the law, and that is all, just the facts and the law. But they also ignore what you have written and they ignore what you have said here today.

How about that criticism, Judge? In Chittister, did you go out of your way to rule against workers? What were the facts and the law in the case and why did you think that they required the result that you finally upheld in that case?

Judge ALITO. I felt the result was dictated by Supreme Court precedent, and I wasn't the only one who thought that. That was a unanimous decision of our panel. Judge McKee and, I believe, Judge Fulham from the District Court in Philadelphia were on that panel. They all agreed, and it is my recollection that seven other courts of appeals have decided the case the same way. More than 20 court of appeals—that issue the same way. More than 20 court of appeals judges, including judges appointed by all recent Presidents, have reached that decision.

I think when you look at the law and the facts of the case, it becomes clear why there is so much unanimity on the question. Whether one likes the test or not, the test that we in the lower courts have to apply in this area is the congruence and proportionality test from City of Boerne, and therefore, what we had to do was to see whether there was a record of discrimination relating to the particular provision that was at issue in Chittister, which had to do with leave for personal illness. So there would have to be some evidence that State employers had given more leave for personal illness to men than women, or more leave for personal illness to women than men, and there was no evidence whatsoever on this issue. That's why all of these courts of appeals reached the conclusion that they did in Chittister.

Senator HATCH. When somebody takes an unfair crack at me, I can come back at them as a Member of the U.S. Senate. But because you are a judge and not a politician, you really don't have the opportunity, really, to address fully these misrepresentations of your views, and there have been plenty of them in this process that you have had to undergo. So I wanted to give you some opportunity here.

For example, one liberal group sent an e-mail around just yesterday that claimed you were not responsive to a question about whether the President can immunize executive branch officials who directly violate the law. Now, is it an accurate representation of your views to suggest that you argued that executive branch officials should be fully immunized for their violations of the law?

Judge ALITO. No, it is not a correct expression of my views. The President, like everybody else, has to follow the Constitution and the laws. He has to follow the Constitution at all times and he has to follow all the laws that are enacted consistent with the Constitution. That's clear.

Now, on the Mitchell v. Forsythe case, which they may be referring to, that was simply—I was simply saying that a certain argument relating to immunity from civil damages was an argument that had been made before and it was an argument that was being requested by our client in the case who was being sued in his individual capacity, and I recommended that we not make the argument, but I said, I don't dispute this argument, and that's all that was involved there.

Senator HATCH. Let me just say this. I want to allow you to respond to a tactic that has been used by several of our colleagues here in these hearings. They observed results in some past cases and then they expressed concerns that entire groups or categories of litigants might not be able to get a fair shake by you in the court. One of them yesterday wondered whether the average citizen, quote, "can get a fair shake from you when the government is a party." Another did the same thing this morning. It is one thing to express disagreement with your decisions, and, of course, as I said before, to look only at results and ignore the facts and the law is fundamentally misguided and it is a misleading way of evaluating judicial decisions.

But let us be clear what is being floated around here with this type of tactic. Those who say, because you ruled this way in the past, litigants cannot get a fair shake in the future, are saying, Judge, that you are biased, that you prejudge these cases, that you are less than fair and impartial, something that virtually everybody who knows you, including all of the people who testified before the American Bar Association, say is false, that you prejudge these cases, you are less than fair and impartial. That is a very serious charge, even if it is cloaked in suggestions and innuendo.

Judge, you previously mentioned your oath of office, an oath before God to do equal justice to everyone without regard to who the parties are. How do you react to this suggestion that the way you have ruled in the past shows or even suggests that you are biased and that entire categories of litigants may not get a fair shake before you?

Judge ALITO. Well, I reject that. I believe very strongly in treating everybody who comes before me absolutely equal. I take that oath very seriously and I have tried to do my very best to abide by that during my 15 years on the bench.

Now, I don't think a judge should be keeping a scorecard about how many times the judge votes for one category of litigant versus another in particular types of cases. That would be wrong. We are supposed to do justice on an individual basis in the cases that come before us. But I think that if anybody looks at the categories of—looks at the cases that I have voted on in any of the categories of cases that have been cited, they will see that there are decisions on both sides. In every type of employment discrimination case, for example, there are decisions on both sides.

Senator HATCH. Most employment discrimination cases really are decided at the lower level.

Judge ALITO. Most of them are, yes.

Senator HATCH. And when they get up to your level, it is generally decided on technical or procedural bases. Am I wrong in that?

Judge ALITO. No, that is correct, Senator.

Senator HATCH. And sometimes you have to uphold the law, even though you may be uncomfortable with the law yourself.

Judge ALITO. We have to decide the cases on the facts that are in the record and the law that applies.

Senator HATCH. That is right. Let me just ask you about a few of your cases, because it is easy to cherry-pick these cases and find a sentence here you don't like and a sentence there you don't like and criticize you in the process as though you are not being fair when, in fact, everybody who knows you knows your impeccable reputation for fairness, dignity, decency, honor, and capacity, and that is why you got the highest rating from the American Bar Association and deserve it, and you twice got that, and I know how tough they can be.

But let me just give you a couple of illustrations. Zubi v. AT&T. You were the lone dissenter in that case. What did you dissent from?

Judge ALITO. I dissented from a majority decision that held that Mr. Zubi, who was claiming racial discrimination, would not have his day in court because of the statutory—

Senator HATCH. You would have given him his day in court, right—

Judge ALITO. I would have, yes—

Senator HATCH [continuing]. If it had been up to you?

Judge ALITO. Yes.

Senator HATCH. All right. How about U.S. v. Kithcart? I don't expect you to remember all these cases, and if you don't, just raise your hand and I will try and recite them, but this was a Fourth Amendment case. You held that the Fourth Amendment does not allow police to target drivers because of the color of their skin, is that right?

Judge ALITO. That is right. That was essentially a case of racial profiling and I wrote an opinion holding that that was a violation of the Fourth Amendment.

Senator HATCH. And that was even after a police officer received a report that two black men in a black sportscar had committed three robberies, and she pulled over the first black man in a black sportscar, or the first black sportscar she saw. But you ruled for the defendant and against racial profiling in that case.

Judge ALITO. That's correct, Senator.

Senator HATCH. OK. In Thomas v. Commissioner of Social Security, just to mention a few of these cases to show that you are going to do what is right, regardless. Sometimes in these employment cases and even other cases, when they get up on appeal, they are fairly technical in nature and you have got to do what is right under the law. But in Thomas v. Commissioner of Social Security—do you recall that case?

Judge ALITO. I do, yes.

Senator HATCH. What did you do there?

Judge ALITO. Well, that was a case where I think that the Supreme Court thought that my opinion had gone too far in favor of the little guy who was involved there. That was a—

Senator HATCH. This was a woman with disabilities, right?

Judge ALITO. That's right, a woman who was trying to get—

Senator HATCH. And she sought Social Security benefits.

Judge ALITO.—Social Security disability benefits, and in order to be eligible for those, she had to be unable to perform any job that existed in substantial numbers in the national economy.

Senator HATCH. She had a job as an elevator operator, if I recall.

Judge ALITO. That's right. As the case was presented to us, the only job that she could perform was her past job, which was as an elevator operator, and what I said was that you can't deny somebody Social Security benefits because the person is able to do a job that no longer exists in any substantial numbers in the national economy. You can't deny benefits based on a hypothetical job. It has to be based on a real job. And the Supreme Court didn't see it that way, but it seems to me that the way we ruled was consistent with what I thought—

Senator HATCH. So in other words, you stood up for the person seeking rights here. The Supreme Court overruled you.

Judge ALITO. That's right.

Senator HATCH. Oh my goodness. In the landmark case of, how do you pronounce it, Fatin v. INS?

Judge ALITO. "Fatten," I think.

Senator HATCH. This involved an Iranian woman—Iranian women who refused to conform to their government's gender-specific laws and social norms, whether or not they should be granted asylum in America. How did you rule in that case?

Judge ALITO. I think that was one of the first cases in the Federal courts to hold that requiring a woman to be returned to a country where she would have to wear a veil and conform to other practices like that would amount to persecution if that was deeply offensive to her and that subjecting a woman to persecution in Iran or any other country to which she would be returned based on feminism would be persecution on the basis of political opinion.

Senator HATCH. I have got another nine or ten cases and perhaps even more than I could go through, but the point is that whenever they deserve to win, they win, regardless of whether they are rich or poor, whether they are powerful or not. You basically upheld the law in these cases, is that correct?

Judge ALITO. That is what I've tried to do.

Senator HATCH. And where you have been in dissent, you have tried to do it to the best of your ability.

Judge ALITO. That's right, Senator.

Senator HATCH. OK. Let me just mention one other thing. This business of Vanguard, when you signed that back in 1990, 12 years before the matter for which you are being criticized, not by anybody who has any ethical, professorial, or other knowledge, not by the American Bar Association, not by the vast majority of lawyers who look at these matters, that particular statement said, will you during your, quote, "initial service." It seems to me those are important words. You haven't tried to hide behind that. You have just honestly explained that, basically, you made a mistake, which really wasn't a mistake according to all the ethics people and according to the American Bar Association. And now, instead of the original accusation and the original implication, you are being accused of not being forthcoming because of that original statement on your application form, to the Committee questionnaire.

But the fact of the matter is that, quote, "initial service" doesn't mean 12 years away, does it, when there is no chance in the world that you had ever received any monetary benefit from Vanguard?

Judge ALITO. Well, I don't think initial service means 12 years away—

Senator HATCH. Neither do I and neither does anybody who cares about justice and about what is right in this matter. So to blow that out of proportion like your adversaries have done is really pretty offensive. I could go on and on and be stronger on that, but the fact of the matter is, I just wanted to make that statement. "Initial service," unquote, is pretty clear.

Let me just say that, sometimes, I just can't make sense out of what some of your critics are saying. On the one hand, they want to portray you as some sort of a robotic patsy for big government who does not think for himself. Yesterday, one of my Democratic colleagues even suggested that the Bush administration was trying to manipulate you to give responses favorable to them in this hearing. Now, you quite rightly said, and I think you were fairly restrained about saying it, that you have been a judge for 15 years and are quite capable of thinking for yourself.

On the other hand, then your critics then turn it around and attack you for supposedly dissenting too much, as if you should actually stop doing all that thinking for yourself and just fall in line with the majority in all of your cases.

Now, Judge, I know that appeals court judges—that the appeals courts themselves are collegial bodies, but how do you view dissenting from your colleagues? How do you decide when to do it? How do you know how often you dissent in your court, or do you know how often you dissent in your court and whether it is out of step with your colleagues? Could you give us some answers there?

Judge ALITO. Yes. I think that it is important for a multi-member court to issue a judgment and to speak clearly to the lower courts and the parties. And so when I've been in a position where taking an independent position would result in the absence of a judgment. I had gone out of my way to make sure that there was a judgment, that there was a majority opinion. An example of that is the Rappa case where we were really divided three ways, and my position was close to Judge Becker's opinion, and Judge Becker had the opinion-writing assignment, and I issued an opinion saying, "I don't completely agree with the way Judge Becker analyzed this issue. I would analyze it differently. But I'm joining his opinion so that there is a majority opinion, so that there is a clear statement of the law for the guidance of the parties." I think that's the first principle.

Second is that judges should be respectful of each other's views, and I don't have any—I have tried never to write a dissenting opinion or respond in a majority opinion to a dissenting opinion in a way that was not completely respectful of the views of the other members of the court.

It's useful to dissent if there's a chance that the case may go en banc, and that's happened in a number of cases where I've dissented. It's useful to dissent if there is a chance that the case may go to the Supreme Court and so that the Supreme Court will have the benefit of a different expression of views, and there have been cases—

Senator HATCH. Well, would it surprise you to know that you have dissented only 79 times in nearly 5,000 cases in which you have participated? That comes to about 1.6 percent, which is considerably lower than most others who have been on the appellate courts. And I would observe that the Washington Post concluded in an editorial that your dissenting opinions "are the work of a serious and scholarly judge whose arguments deserve respect." I certainly agree wholeheartedly with that assessment.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Chairman SPECTER. Thank you, Senator Hatch.

Senator Kennedy?

Senator KENNEDY. Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman.

Judge Alito, I hadn't planned to get into Vanguard on this particular round, but I chaired those hearings when you were promoted to the circuit court, and I was also the one that filed those questions which you responded to. And you responded under oath when you promised the Committee that you would recuse yourself on Vanguard issues.

Now I am just hearing from you that you believe that that pledge was somehow conditioned. Unlike my friend—and he is my friend—from Iowa that says, well, a pledge is just a pledge, it is like any political pledge around here. It is a political promise and doesn't carry much weight.

That is not my opinion, and I don't think it is the opinion of most of the Members of this body. You made a pledge to the Senate, effectively to the American people, that you were going to recuse yourself. Now you say, well, it was just for an initial time, and I think 12 years is more than I really had in mind, or you just qualified your answer.

How long, when you made that pledge and that promise to the Committee, how long did you intend to keep it?

Judge ALITO. Well, Senator—

Senator KENNEDY. And when that time was up, did you ever imagine that you might get back to the Committee and say, "I believe my time is up on Vanguard"?

Judge ALITO. Well, Senator, the statement that I—the nature of the question that I was responding to did not figure in the way the Monga case was handled, and I thought I made that clear yesterday. I was following throughout my time on the bench the practice of going beyond the code, and had I focused on this issue when the matter came before me, I would have recused myself at that time, as I later did.

But in answer to Senator Hatch's question, looking at that question today and looking at the answer, the question was: What do you intend to do during your initial period of service? And I think that that's what the answer has to be read as responding to. But just to be clear, that was not—I'm not saying that that's why this played out the way it did. I'm just saying that's how I think the question and the answer—that's how I think the question and any response to the answer by any nominee needs to be interpreted.

Senator KENNEDY. Well, if there is someone that can just understand what you just told us, I would be interested in it, because I don't.

Senator HATCH. Well, I will be glad to explain it.

Senator KENNEDY. Well, if—Mr. Chairman.

[Laughter.]

Senator KENNEDY. You in response to Senator Hatch did not believe you were bound by the promise because you said in your mind you felt that it was just for the initial period of it. That is another issue, because initially it was meant to include the investments that you had at that particular time. You might have those investments and then discard an investment and, therefore, no longer have a conflict. That is what—as the asker of the question had intended. But you have added another wrinkle to it. You have just indicated that when you made a pledge to the Committee that you were going to recuse yourself, that you thought that at some time you were going to be released. And I would just like to know how long that was going to be. Was that going to be 2 years? Was it going to be 3 years? Was it going to be 5 years? When did you feel that you were going to be released if that—

Judge ALITO. Well, Senator, I—

Senator KENNEDY [continuing]. If we followed your interpretation?

Judge ALITO. Senator, I did not rely on that time limitation in relation to what I did in the Monga case, and I hope I have made that clear. If I didn't in my previous answer, I do want to make it clear. I did not rely on that in my handling of the Monga case.

Looking at the question now, where it says "initial period of service," I would say that 12 years late is not the initial period of service. But that was not—

Senator KENNEDY. When did it stop, then? When did you think that your pledge to the Committee halted, after how many years? Six months?

Judge ALITO. Well, Senator, I don't—

Senator KENNEDY. What did you intend at the time that you made the pledge? What was in your mind at that time? I am not interested in what is in your mind at this time, but what was in your mind at that time.

Judge ALITO. I can't specifically recall what was in my mind at that time, but I'll tell you what I'm pretty sure I had in mind. I was not a judge, and I was being considered for a judicial position. And what I was trying to express was basically the policy that I followed during all my years on the bench, which is to bend over backwards to make sure that I didn't do anything that came close to violating the code of conduct or give anybody the impression that I was doing anything that was improper.

Senator KENNEDY. The last question on this is: How long, then, when you made the promise under oath to the Committee that you were going to recuse yourself—and you understand that now to be—in your own interpretation just to be the initial time—how long did you think that that pledge and promise lasted?

Judge ALITO. Senator, as I said—

Senator KENNEDY. That is my question.

Judge ALITO. And, Senator, as I said, I can't tell you 15 years later exactly what I thought when I read that question. It refers to the initial period of service, and looking at it now, it doesn't seem to me that 12 years later is the initial period of service.

Senator KENNEDY. Well, my question to you, which I guess I'm not going to get an answer to, is: When did it? Is 10 years—how about 3 years, is that—

Judge ALITO. Well, I don't know exactly what the time limitation would be, but 12 years does seem to me not to be the initial period.

Senator KENNEDY. We will come back. I just want to mention, in fairness to my friend and colleague—both my friends, Senator Hatch and Senator Durbin, in Senator Hatch's quoting of Senator Durbin that you responded on the question of the Roe v. Wade in the—when you were in the circuit court, I have here the record that said—of the hearings of Roberts, and the question was asked by Senator Specter to Judge Roberts during the time of his consideration for the Supreme Court. So I want that to be—Senator Durbin can clarify the record, but I wanted that to be clarified so that there wasn't a confusion about it.

Now, in the time that I have, Judge Alito, I listened carefully to responses that you gave to Senator Leahy about the CAP organization at Princeton. And I listened to other responses that you gave to our colleagues, and again to Senator Durbin earlier today. But I have just some questions on this to at least try to finalize, at least in my mind, and it might be useful in the Committee's mind as well.

You had indicated in your 1985 job application that you were a member of the Federalist Society for Law and Public Policy and a regular participant at its luncheon and a member of the Concerned Alumni of Princeton University, a conservative alumni group. And you said yesterday that you racked your memory about the issue and really had no specific recollection of the organization. Is that correct?

Judge ALITO. I have no specific recollection of joining the organization.

Senator KENNEDY. And you also said yesterday and today to Senator Durbin that you very likely joined CAP because of your concern over the ROTC program being kicked off campus. Is that correct?

Judge ALITO. Well, what I said specifically was that I racked my memory as to why I might have joined, and the issue that had bothered me for a period of time as an undergraduate and in the 1980s, around the time of this—when I made this statement, was the issue of ROTC. This was the issue about the administration of Princeton that bothered me. I had a high regard for Princeton in many respects in general and had participated in a lot of their activities. But this issue bothered me a great deal at various times. That's what I said.

Senator KENNEDY. And, finally, you said yesterday that you very likely joined CAP around 1985 just before you were applying to the high-level job in the Justice Department under President Ronald Reagan. I think that is correct.

Judge ALITO. Senator, what I specifically said, as I recall, is that if I had done anything substantial in relation to this group, including renewing my membership, I would remember that. And I do not remember that.

Senator KENNEDY. So I want to ask a few things that I hope can clear this up. You have no memory of being a member. You graduated from Princeton in 1972, the same year CAP was founded. You call CAP a conservative alumni group.

It also published a publication called Prospect, which includes articles by CAP members about the policies that the organization promoted. You are familiar with that?

Judge ALITO. I don't recall seeing the magazine. I might—

Senator KENNEDY. But you know that they had a magazine?

Judge ALITO. I have been—I have learned of that in recent weeks.

Senator KENNEDY. So a 1983 Prospect essay titled "In Defense of Elitism" stated, "People nowadays just don't seem to know their place. Everywhere one turns, blacks and Hispanics are demanding jobs simply because they're black and Hispanic. The physically handicapped are trying to gain equal representation in professional sports, and homosexuals are demanding that Government vouchsafe them the right to bear children."

Did you read that, that article?

Senator FEINSTEIN. Finish the last line.

Senator KENNEDY. Finish the last line. “And homosexuals are”—

Senator FEINSTEIN. “And now here come women.”

Senator KENNEDY. If the Senator would let me just—

Senator FEINSTEIN. Yes, I—

[Laughter.]

Senator KENNEDY. Can I get 2 more minutes from my friend? Just to continue along—I apologize, Judge. Did you read this article?

Judge ALITO. I feel confident that I didn’t. If that—I am not familiar with the article, and I don’t have a context in which those things were said. But they are antithetical to—

Senator KENNEDY. Well, could you think of any context that they could be—

Judge ALITO. It’s hard to imagine. If that’s what anybody was endorsing, I disagree with all of that. I would never endorse it. I never have endorsed it. Had I thought that that’s what this organization stood for, I would never associate myself with it in any way.

Senator KENNEDY. The June 1984 edition of Prospect magazine contains a short article on AIDS. I know that we have come a long way since then in our understanding of the disease, but even for that time, the insensitivity of statements in this article are breathtaking. It announces that a team of doctors has found that the AIDS virus in Rhesus monkeys was similar to the virus occurring in human beings. And the article then goes on with this terrible statement: “Now the scientist must find humans—or, rather, homosexuals to submit themselves to experimental treatment. Perhaps Princeton’s Gay Alliance may want to hold an election.”

You didn’t read that article?

Judge ALITO. I feel confident that I didn’t, Senator, because I would not have anything to do with statements of that nature.

Senator KENNEDY. In 1973, a year after you graduated, and during your first year at Yale Law School, former Senator Bill Bradley very publicly disassociated himself with CAP because of its right-wing views and unsupported allegations about the university. His letter of resignation was published in the Prospect, garnered much attention on campus and among the alumni.

Were you aware at the time of that, at the time that you listed the organization in your application?

Judge ALITO. I don’t think I was aware of that until recent weeks when I was informed of it.

Senator KENNEDY. And in 1974, an alumni panel including now-Senator Frist unanimously concluded that CAP had presented a distorted, narrow, hostile view of the university. Were you aware of that at the time of the job application?

Judge ALITO. I was not aware of it until very recently.

Senator KENNEDY. In 1980, the New York Times article about the coeducation of Princeton, CAP is described as an organization against the admittance of women. In 1980, you were working as an Assistant U.S. Attorney in Trenton, New Jersey. Did you read the New York Times? Did you see this article?

Judge ALITO. I don’t believe that I saw the article.

Senator KENNEDY. And did you read a letter from CAP mailed in 1984—this is the year before you put CAP on your application—to every living alumni—to every living alumni, so I assume you received it—which declared Princeton is no longer the university you knew it to be. As evidence, among other reasons, it cited the fact that admission rates for African-Americans and Hispanics were on the rise while those of alumni children were falling, and Princeton's president, at the time, had urged the then-all-male eating clubs to admit females.

And in December 1984, President William Bowen responded by sending his own letter. This is the president of Princeton—he responded by sending his own letter to all of the alumni in which he called CAP's letter callous and outrageous. This letter was the subject of a January 1985 Wall Street Journal editorial, congratulating President Bowen for engaging his critics in a free and open debate. This would be right about the time that you told Senator Kyl you probably joined the organization. Did you receive the Bowen letter or did you read the Wall Street Journal, which was pretty familiar reading for certainly a lot of people that were in the Reagan administration?

Judge ALITO. Senator, I testified to everything that I can recall relating to this and I do not recall knowing any of these things about the organization, and many of the things that you've mentioned are things that I have always stood against. In your description of the letter that prompted President Bowen's letter, there is talk about returning the Princeton that used to be. There is talk about eating clubs, about all-male eating clubs. There is talk about the admission of alumni children. There is opposition to opening up the admissions process.

None of that is something that I would identify with. I was not the son of an alumnus. I was not a member of an eating club. I was not a member of an eating facility that was selective. I was not a member of an all-male eating facility and I would not have identified with any of that. If I had received any information at any point regarding any of the matters that you have referred to in relation to this organization, I would never have had anything to do with it.

Senator KENNEDY. Do you think that these are conservative views?

Judge ALITO. Senator, whatever I knew about this organization in 1985, I identified as conservative. I don't identify those views as conservative. What I do recall as an issue that bothered me in relation to the Princeton administration as an undergraduate and continuing into the 1980s was their treatment of the ROTC unit and their general attitude toward the military, which they did not treat with the respect that I thought was deserving. The idea that it was beneath Princeton to have an ROTC unit on campus was an offensive idea to me.

Senator KENNEDY. Just moving on, you mentioned—and I only have a few minutes left—you joined CAP because of your concern about keeping ROTC on campus. Now, ROTC was a fairly contentious issue on Princeton's campus in the early 1970s. The program was slated to be terminated in 1970, when you were an undergraduate. By 1973, 1 year after you graduated, ROTC had returned to campus and was no longer a source of debate. And from what I can tell, by 1985, it was basically a dead issue. In fact, my staff reviewed the editions of Prospect from 1983 to 1985 and could find only one mention of ROTC, and it appears in a 1985 issue released for homecoming that year that says, "ROTC is Popular Once Again." Here is the Prospect, 1985, "ROTC is Popular Once Again." This is just about the time that you were submitting this organization in your job application.

Judge ALITO. Senator—I'm sorry.

Senator KENNEDY. Briefly, please.

Judge ALITO. It's my recollection that this was a continuing source of controversy. There were people on the campus, members of the faculty, as I recall, who wanted the unit removed from the campus. There was certainly controversy about whether students could get credit for courses, which I believe was a military requirement for the maintenance of the unit. There was controversy, as I recall, about the status of the instructors, whether they could be given any kind of a status in relation to the faculty. I don't know the exact dates, but it's my recollection that this was a continuing source of controversy.

Senator KENNEDY. Mr. Chairman, my time is running out. I had wanted to just wind up on a few more brief questions on this. But I have to say that Judge Alito, that his explanations about his membership in this sort of radical group and why you listed it on your job application are extremely troubling. In fact, I don't think that they add up.

Last month, I sent a letter to Senator Specter asking a number of questions about your membership in CAP and I asked Senator Specter to make a formal Committee request for the documents in the possession of the Library of Congress as part of the William Rusher papers. Mr. Rusher was the publisher of the National Review, was an active founder and leader of CAP. Do you have any hesitation or reason for us not to look at those documents?

Judge ALITO. They're not my documents, Senator, and I have no—

Senator KENNEDY. Do you think they would be helpful to us?

Judge ALITO [continuing]. Opinion about it whatsoever.

Senator KENNEDY. Do you think they would be helpful?

Judge ALITO. Senator, I don't believe I had any active involvement with this group.

Senator KENNEDY. Well—

Judge ALITO. I have racked my memory and I can't recall anything, and if I had been involved actively in any way in the group, I'm sure that I would remember that.

Senator KENNEDY. Mr. Chairman, if I could have your attention, I think we ought to vote on issuing a subpoena to the custodian of those CAP records. I want to do that at an appropriate time. I move that the Committee go into executive session for the purpose of voting on the issuance of the subpoena of those records.

Chairman SPECTER. We will consider that, Senator Kennedy. There are many, many requests which are coming to me from many quarters. Quite candidly, I view the request, if it is really a matter of importance, you and I see each other all the time. You have never mentioned it to me. I do not ascribe a great deal of weight. We actually didn't get a letter, but—

Senator KENNEDY. You did get a letter, are you saying?

Chairman SPECTER. Well, now wait a minute. You don't know what I got. I am about to—

Senator KENNEDY. Of course, I do, Senator, since I sent it.

Chairman SPECTER. Well, the sender—

Senator KENNEDY. I have got it right here.

Chairman SPECTER [continuing]. Doesn't necessarily know what the recipient gets, Senator Kennedy.

Senator KENNEDY. I have got it right here.

Chairman SPECTER. You are not in the position to say what I received. If you will bear with me for just one minute—

Senator KENNEDY. But I am in a position to say what I sent to you on December 22, so I renew my—

Chairman SPECTER. You are in a position to tell me what you sent.

Senator KENNEDY. I renew my request, Senator, and if I am going to be denied, then I would appeal the decision of the Chair. I think we are entitled to this information. It deals with the fundamental issues of equality and discrimination. This nominee has indicated he has no objection to us seeing these issues. We have gone over the questions and we are entitled to get that kind of information. And if you are going to rule it out of order, I want to have a vote on that here on our Committee.

Chairman SPECTER. Well, don't be premature, Senator Kennedy. I am not about to make a ruling on this state of the record. I hope you won't mind if I consider it, and I hope you won't mind if I give you the specifics that there was no letter which I received. I take umbrage at your telling me what I received. I don't mind your telling me what you mailed. But there is a big difference between what is mailed and what is received and you know that.

We are going to move on now. Senator Grassley?

Senator KENNEDY. Mr. Chairman, I would appeal the ruling of the Chair on this. I want—

Chairman SPECTER. There has been no ruling of the Chair, Senator Kennedy.

Senator KENNEDY. But my request is that we go into executive session for the sole purpose of voting on a subpoena for these records that are held over at the Library of Congress, for that purpose and that purpose only, and if I am going to be denied that, I would want to give notice to the Chair that you are going to have it again and again and again and we are going to have votes of this Committee again and again and again until we have a resolution. I think that—

Chairman SPECTER. Well, Senator Kennedy, I am not concerned about your threats to have votes again, again, and again, and I am the Chairman of this Committee and I have heard your request and I will consider it, and I am not going to have you run this Committee and decide when we are going to go into executive session.

We are in the middle of a round of hearings. This is the first time you have personally called it to my attention and this is the first time that I have focused on it and I will consider it in due course.

Now, we will move to Senator Grassley for 20 minutes.

Senator GRASSLEY. We have gone over this same ground many times. I suppose, maybe to some extent, both sides are guilty of that. We have an old saying in the Midwest about if a horse is dead, quit beating it, and I think several horses have been beaten to death, particularly on the other side, and you have been very consistent in your answers and I thank you. I think that that speaks to the intellectual honesty of your positions.

It is kind of like we are in the fourth quarter of a football game and you are the quarterback and your team is way ahead here in the fourth quarter. Opponents are very desperate, trying to sack you, and aren't doing a very good job of it. They haven't hit you all day now for 2 days. You are going to keep getting these last-minute "Hail Marys" thrown at you, so just bear with us.

I want to compliment you, first of all, before I ask some questions, and I just did to some extent about the consistency of your testimony, but I think it has been good. I think under very difficult circumstances, you have handled yourself very well, being responsive, forthright, thoughtful. I sense in you a person that is very sincere, and obviously, I don't know you except this appearance here and the small period of time we spent in my office. It seems like you have modesty. That is a breath of fresh air, demonstrating a command of and very much a respect for the law and the Constitution, of course.

This is all stuff that we ought to be looking for in the tradition of Alexander Hamilton saying the role of the Senate is to make sure that only competent people get on the Court and that political hacks don't get on the Court. You are surely no political hack and you are very competent, and that has been demonstrated with your fair and open-minded approach to your being a judicial person.

It is too bad that we are getting this misconstruing of your record or the answers, the claim that you have not written a single opinion on the merits in favor of a person of color alleging race discrimination on the job in your 15 years on the bench. I have looked at a lot of opinions you have given and it is just not true. Your record shows that you ruled in favor of minorities making allegations of racial discrimination in employment, not once but in a number of cases.

The claim that you acted unethically in the Vanguard case just is not true. You did nothing improper and actually went beyond the rule to ensure compliance. The claim that you would support an unchecked Executive is just not true. Your record shows that you have repeatedly ruled against the government and that you have told us no one, including the President, is above the law.

The claim that you have ruled the vast majority of the time against the claims of individual citizens in favor of the government and large corporations is just not true. The reality, as I see it, is that you have found in favor of the little guy in numerous cases, but because of who was right and who was wrong, not just because you have got a bias one way or the other. Your critics are, I think, grasping at any straw to tarnish your record, and that is unfortunate.

Judge Alito, in your opening statement, you said, and I hope I quote you accurately, no person in this country, no matter how high or powerful, is above the law, and no person in this country is beneath the law. You didn't go into detail about what you meant. I think it is quite clear, above the law, but give us that diverse opinion, above the law versus beneath the law.

Judge ALITO. Every person has equal rights under the law in this country, and that involves people who have no money—that includes people who have no money. That includes people who do not hold any higher or prestigious position. It includes people who are citizens and people who are not citizens. Everybody is entitled to be treated equally under the law, and I think that's one of the greatest things about our country and about our legal system.

Senator GRASSLEY. You have been criticized for being hostile to voting rights based upon a statement that you wrote 20 years ago when you were applying for a job with the Justice Department during the Reagan years. In fact, yesterday, some of my colleagues repeated that assertion, but it is apparent to me that it is off the mark.

Specifically, in your 1985 statement, you wrote that you became interested in constitutional law and went to law school in part because you had some disagreements over Warren Court decisions, including some regarding reapportionment. Of course, that is understandable because the Warren Court had handed down very many decisions on reapportionment and they had been criticized as unworkable and that, in fact, the Supreme Court backed away from some. So there was disagreement, there was debate over those issues at that time, probably a lot less today but still recently there is going to be a case going to the Court.

Some have questioned your 1985 statement regarding electoral reapportionment, that is how districts are drawn. They have suggested that you are hostile to the principle of one person/one vote. Clarify for me. Nowhere in your 1985 statement did I find that you wrote that you ever disagreed with the principle of one person/one vote, did you?

Judge ALITO. I never disagreed with that principle, Senator. What I disagreed with when I was in college was the application of the principle in some of the—the elaboration of the principle in some of the late Warren Court decisions, and this grew out of my father's work with the New Jersey legislature. He had been the Secretary to the State Constitutional Convention in 1966, which redrew the provisions of the State Constitution relating to the composition of the legislature in an effort to bring it into compliance with the one person/one vote standard.

These provisions, however, because they tried to respect county and municipal lines, as I recall, resulted in population deviations of under 10 percent, but those deviations were much higher than the ones that the Supreme Court said in the late decisions that I'm talking about would be tolerated regarding congressional districts. There was a belief that that principle would be applied across the board, both to congressional districts and to legislative districts, and that would have wiped out the plan that had been adopted. And I was quite familiar with all of this, and it seemed to me an instance of taking a good principle, which is one person/one vote, and taking it to extremes, requiring that districts be exactly equal in population, which did not seem to me to be a sensible idea.

Senator GRASSLEY. Isn't it true that the words "one person/one vote" weren't even in your statement?

Judge ALITO. Those words are not in my statement.

Senator GRASSLEY. Just to make—go ahead.

Judge ALITO. Just to add, Senator, that this issue of how nearly exact the districts had to be was an issue that was working its way to the Supreme Court or maybe it had actually been there—I've forgotten the exact chronology—at the time of the 1985 statement in Karcher v. Daggett, which involved the New Jersey Congressional districting plan.

Senator GRASSLEY. Well, just to make sure that there is no lingering confusion then, let me ask you straight out: Do you believe in the principle of one person/one vote?

Judge ALITO. I do. I think it's a fundamental part of our constitutional law.

Senator GRASSLEY. I find it curious that the same people who are questioning your integrity are either asserting or implying that you took a position against the principle of one man or one person/one vote when it is demonstrably false that you ever did.

Further, on another point, some have suggested that you are hostile to women and minorities. Obviously, I don't think that is the case. I think you have demonstrated that sincerity in just very recent statements today.

Now, in the Washington Post article, Alberto Rivas, a criminal defense lawyer and a Democrat, said you "took steps to diversify an office"—this is when you were U.S. Attorney. You "took steps to diversify an office that had a reputation as something of a white boys' club." Rivas said that when you hired him at the U.S. Attorney's Office in New Jersey, he was the only Latino lawyer in the office, and by the time you left that office, Rivas said there were four Latino lawyers as well as African-American lawyers. Your commitment also included advancing women attorneys and promoting them into senior positions during your tenure as U.S. Attorney. And I understand that when you started in that office, only two of the 15 divisional leadership attorneys, chiefs or deputy chiefs, or attorneys in charge were women, and 2 years later you had more than doubled that number, and 5 of the 17 divisional leadership attorneys were women.

Now, on the Federal bench, you have hired many women and minorities to serve as law clerks, and you had a discussion with Senator Brownback earlier mentioning some very complimentary things that Cathy Fleming, your former deputy chief and acting chief of the Special Prosecutions Unit in the New Jersey office, and David Walk, a former lawyer in that office, had to say about you and your treatment of women and minorities. They both, being lifelong Democrats, vouched in those statements for your qualities as a judge and your respect for individual rights.

And, Mr. Chairman, if these letters—and they may have already been put in the record, but if they aren't in the record, I would like to have those put in the record.

Chairman SPECTER. Without objection, they will be made a part of the record.

Senator GRASSLEY. Several of your dissents have been referred to today, or in the last 2 days, and so I wanted to comment on this suggestion that you are way out of the mainstream because you have written a lot of dissenting opinions. I don't find that you have written so many as a percentage of your total thing, but whatever reason you did it, you did it with good reason.

But judges disagree all the time, and that is to be expected, and obviously there is nothing wrong with that. And, in fact, the Supreme Court has agreed with your dissents on several occasions, I recall from reading a synopsis of your opinions, and the reality is, as I see it, you don't disagree with majority opinions more frequently than most Federal appeals judges do in similar cases. And of more than 4,800 cases—and that we got from the Washington Post. But of more than 4,800 cases that you decided during your tenure on the Third Circuit, you dissented only in 79 cases, which would be only 1.6 percent of all those cases.

So, you know, I don't think that there is anything very extraordinary about the number of dissents or the dissents, and particularly when the Supreme Court has agreed with your opinion in reversing the Third Circuit.

I would like to go to the issue of some historical basis for our constitutional law. The role of historical precedent in constitutional laws I find very interesting. For example, qui tam lawsuits have been a feature of Anglo-American law since the Middle Ages and have been a common feature of Federal statutory law even since the 1st Congress. Yet their constitutionality has never been clearly adjudicated by the Supreme Court.

What role does longstanding, historical practice play in assessing the constitutionality of a Government act or practice?

Judge ALITO. Well, it can be very relevant in many instances. One place where this has come up is when a statute was passed by the 1st Congress—and this has happened on a number of occasions. The 1st Congress, which was responsible for the Bill of Rights, passed a number of statutes relating to provisions of the Bill of Rights, and the Supreme Court has often looked to those and said this is the same Congress that proposed the Bill of Rights, and they did this in enacting a statute, so that gives us a good indication of what they had in mind. And when there has been a legal practice that has existed for—that predated the Constitution, then that certainly is relevant in considering its constitutionality.

Senator GRASSLEY. I would like to have you think about legislative history and how you might use it or how often you might use it, or even how often—maybe if you got a rough quantifiable answer, how often you might use it. The Supreme Court, I think, has quite often stated legislative history of a particular bill would be critical in their interpretation of it. What is your position with respect to legislative history? How important is it to you? And how have you utilized history in interpreting statutes?

Judge ALITO. I have often looked to legislative history in the cases that I've written concerning statutory interpretation. And I think if anybody looks at those opinions, they will see that.

When I interpret a statute, I do begin with the text of the statute. I think that certainly is the clearest indication of what Congress as a whole had in mind in passing the statute. And sometimes the language of the statute is dispositive and it is really—the decision can be made based on the language of the statute itself.

But when there is an ambiguity in the statute, I think it is entirely legitimate to look to legislative history, and as I said, I have often done that. I think it needs to be done with caution. Just because one Member of Congress said something on the floor, obviously that doesn't necessarily reflect the view of the majority who voted for the legislation. So it has to be done carefully and I think with a realistic evaluation of the legislative process, but I'm not one of the judges who thinks that you should never look to legislative history. I think it has its place.

Senator GRASSLEY. Are you familiar with the legal arguments that some opponents of the False Claims Act have made to the effect that its qui tam provisions are unconstitutional under Articles II and III? And if you are, do you have any opinion on those arguments that are used without prejudicing any review of it you might give?

Judge ALITO. Well, the issue hasn't come up before me. I have a little bit of familiarity with the arguments. And I don't think I—I think that all I can say on the question is that the qui tam statute is of historical origin, as you pointed out, and we have seen what it has produced in terms of tangible results in the cases that have been brought under the statute in recent years. And should an issue relating to its constitutionality come before me, either on the Third Circuit or the Supreme Court, then I would have to follow that whole judicial process that I've described and evaluate the arguments and certainly study the question much more thoroughly than I have done up to this point.

Senator GRASSLEY. You may have just answered this question, but I would like to get it explicitly on the record. Have you ever written or spoken publicly about the issue of the constitutionality of qui tam or any other provision of the False Claims Act, and if so, the circumstances and the context?

Judge ALITO. I'm quite sure I've never written or spoken about its constitutionality.

Senator GRASSLEY. Do you feel that you have any bias against the False Claims Act or Whistle-Blower Protection Act that would impact the ability of you to fairly decide cases involving those issues?

Judge ALITO. I certainly don't, Senator.

Senator GRASSLEY. I would like to ask you about the opinion you authored in Mystic. As author of the legislation that we call the False Claims Act, it has returned billions of dollars to the Federal Government and has become a very effective tool in combating fraud against the American taxpayers. So I follow court cases on this as much as I can.

The False Claims Act contains a provision that jurisdictionally bars lawsuits based on public disclosure, including such things as administrative reports and investigations. The purpose of this provision is to prevent an individual who has read about a description of a fraud in a newspaper report, public document, or Government report from simply taking that material and using it as a basis for a case.

In Mystic, the qui tam relater had made a FOIA request and utilized some of the documents he received in response to FOIA in filing that qui tam case. In your opinion, you determined that the qui tam relater had based his False Claims Act lawsuit on public disclosure made in an administrative report or investigation. To come to that conclusion, you had to equate that the qui tam relater, who was acting on behalf of the Government, as the public. But I think it is clear that Congress did not equate such qui tam relaters with the public when it wrote the public disclosure bar provision. That is because if Congress had done so, then everything qui tam relaters know is known to the public, which doesn't make any sense.

So because my time has run out, I don't want to go on with a question, but do you see what I am getting at? Could you react to that?

Judge ALITO. I do, and I understand that's a very strong argument. I remember that I found that a very difficult issue to deal with, and I spent a lot of time on it, and my view of the matter elicited a strong and a very persuasive, I think, dissent by one of my colleagues. So it is a tough issue, and if that were to come up again, I would have to really reconsider it.

Senator GRASSLEY. Just in your last sentence, you gave pretty much the same answer that Judge Roberts did. He had dissented in a case, too, and it kind of worries me when we get two of you on the Court that may be unfamiliar with congressional intent on false claims.

Thank you very much.

Chairman SPECTER. Thank you, Senator Grassley.

That will be all. We will recess until 2 o'clock.

Senator KENNEDY. Mr. Chairman?

Chairman SPECTER. Yes, Senator Kennedy?

Senator KENNEDY. Just as a quick matter of personal privilege, I would like to include in the record the response from your staff to this letter that I wrote to you on the 22nd and also my staff response to your staff's response to the letter, include them in the record.

Chairman SPECTER. Like all requests, unanimous consent for the record, they are granted.

Senator DURBIN. Mr. Chairman? Mr. Chairman?

Chairman SPECTER. Senator Durbin?

Senator DURBIN. Mr. Chairman, I—

Chairman SPECTER. I just want it known that we are now into the lunch hour, but go ahead, Senator Durbin.

Senator DURBIN. Mr. Chairman, I sent you a note and you were kind enough to come and speak to me about it. I would just ask for 2 minutes time to respond to comments made by members of the Committee mentioning my name after I asked questions this morning. You have asked if I would wait until Senator Coburn returned to the Committee, and in deference to the respect to my colleague, I will do that.

Senator LEAHY. Could I also, Mr. Chairman, on this—

Chairman SPECTER. Well, I appreciate it very much, waiting for Senator Coburn. I think it is a good practice, when comments are made about other members, to do it while they are here or to ask their joinder. And that is why if you have something to say to Senator Coburn, I want him here; otherwise, he will have something to say and you are not here.

Senator LEAHY. In fact—

Senator DURBIN. He did already, Mr. Chairman.

Chairman SPECTER. Now Senator Leahy is recognized into the lunch hour.

Senator LEAHY. Into the lunch hour. Mr. Chairman, if I might, I came very close to objecting when Senator Coburn was speaking and referring to Senator Durbin. Senator Coburn is a new—he is a valued member of the Committee, of course but new, and I wanted to say that I have been here for 30 years. I have always made it a point, if I am going to raise something, to get word to the other party. I think it is a good way of doing it, and you have been totally fair in that.

I would urge Senators, if they are going to start quoting each other, that maybe we have “quote time” or something like that. Senator Durbin is absolutely right in wanting to be able to respond to what was said.

Chairman SPECTER. Well, I think that we might agree on best practice, but when you deal with Senators, my view is to give Senators great latitude as to what they want to undertake to do. And if Senator Coburn wants to make a comment without Senator Durbin here, I think that is going to be his call, although my preference would be to the contrary. But when Senator Durbin wants time to respond, I immediately sent word to him he would have the time that he requested. And then I sent for Senator Coburn. And Senator Coburn is in a meeting that he couldn't leave, but we will get the two of you together fairly promptly.

Senator DURBIN. Thank you.

Chairman SPECTER. Lunchtime.

[Whereupon, at 1:05 p.m., the Committee was adjourned, to reconvene at 2 p.m., this same day.]

[AFTERNOON SESSION]

Chairman SPECTER. The Committee will resume, and it is now Senator Biden's turn for his second round for 20 minutes.

Senator Biden?

Senator BIDEN. Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman.

Judge, good to see you. As I said to you—we happened to run into each other in the hallway coming in—what I would like to do, if I may, is go back and revisit two areas that you were questioned on yesterday, and a little bit maybe today. I do not recall actually. I think it was yesterday. One is the Casey case and I want to make sure I understand because I am still a little bit puzzled by your reasoning, but let me start off and make it clear.

From my perspective, the abortion is a different—I am trying to figure out how you arrived at interpreting a Supreme Court Justice's standard that was being applied, and how it came out differently than others. Yesterday you said when I think it was Senator Kohl asked you, that you agreed with Justice O'Connor, “that you look at the group that's affected, not the group that's unaffected.” But when you wrote your dissent, you said, and I quote, “It seems safe to assume that some percentage, despite an initial inclination not to tell their husbands, would notify their husbands without suffering substantial ill effects, acknowledging some would suffer substantial ill effects.”

Can you rationalize yesterday’s statement and your dissent for me? Explain it to me.

Judge ALITO. Well, I think what you look at is the group that is required to notify. You don’t look at the group that’s not required to notify, so unmarried women are not examined here because the notification requirement obviously does not apply to them.

Then my understanding of Justice O’Connor’s standard, which was the “more than some woman” standard, let me put it that way, although she didn’t put it quite that strongly. She said that it is insufficient that some women are inhibited from having an abortion as a result of the requirement. So you look at the people who are affected by—who are within the scope of the provision, and then you would see how many of the people within the scope of the provision would be inhibited from having an abortion as a result of what was involved. You don’t look at people who aren’t regulated at all, and you don’t just look at the people who would be inhibited because both of those would not be the right thing to look at.

So in the case of—let’s take the case of the informed consent requirement. You’d look at everybody who was required to receive the information that was within the informed consent provision, and then you would ask how many of the people, how many of the women who were regulated by this, would be inhibited from having an abortion as a result of the requirement. That was my understanding and that is my understanding of what she was talking about.

Senator BIDEN. You referenced in your dissent in Casey the Thornburgh case. What was the issue in Thornburgh?

Judge ALITO. Thornburgh concerned—

Senator BIDEN. Excuse me. That prompted her to come up with the statement that you referenced, which was that it does not have to affect everyone?

Judge ALITO. Well, she was setting out her understanding of what the standard was, of the Undue Burden Standard. Now, in Thornburgh there were several provisions of a previous version of the Pennsylvania statute at issue. There was an informed consent provision, as I recall. There was a provision relating to health insurance. There was a provision relating to notification of a minor’s parents. There were a number of provisions involved. And my recollection is that when she made the statement, she was talking about the Undue Burden Standard itself. It was an explanation of what she meant by the Undue Burden Standard.

Senator BIDEN. As I went back and read it, my understanding was—and I will not, in the interest of time, read her entire two paragraphs here—but the part of Casey which she found to be a particular problem as being declared unconstitutional by her colleagues was where a doctor, an obstetrician would have to read to a woman certain verbiage that would explain the pros and cons about an abortion, or at least downsides of an abortion. And she said the State has an interest in promoting life, and so even though some women might be offended by that, it was still OK, it was still constitutional.

That language is the language that the discussion about even though some women would be affected, you transposed, in good conscience, to a case where notification to a husband was required. And one of the things that I had some difficulty with is whether or not there really were comparable issues here. In one case it was about whether or not a woman would fear for her life, for example, an exception was given, if she informed her husband. Another case, it was not about that that O'Connor was referring to, she was referring to about whether or not it put an undue burden on a woman to be told, "By the way, this can happen when you have an abortion, and this is the state the fetus is, et cetera." And that is the part that kind of disturbs me, or that perplexes me anyway, about the real world here.

Senator Specter references the Violence Against Women Act. We did a lot of work on that. There is overwhelming evidence that there are women who would be fearful of going home and telling their husbands they are going to have an abortion, not fearful physically, fearful that the husband had all the economic power and said, "I am divorcing you and I am taking the kids and having a custody battle, and you don't have the money to hire a lawyer."

Are they comparable ill effects? That is, that kind of ill effect on a woman that if she tells her husband, he is going to sue for divorce and seek custody of the children, knowing that he has all the economic horsepower and she has no ability to go out and hire a significant lawyer? Is that comparable to the doctor saying, "By the way, if you have an abortion, here is what happens?"

Judge ALITO. No. The informed consent provision presented an easier—easier isn't even the right word—a less difficult question than the spousal notification provision. I don't think there's any question about that. They both involved the same standard, which was the Undue Burden Standard. And therefore, I thought—and I still think that's what's said in reference to one provision is relevant in determining what the standard was.

The big issue, when this case was before us, was whether the standard was undue burden or not. It's funny how cases look different after they've progressed through the Supreme Court than they do when they're first presented to the court of appeals. That was the most hotly contested argument before us. Had there been any change in the Supreme Court's case law—and the plaintiffs argued strenuously that there had not—but our panel, after some effort, determined under the Marks standard for determining what the holding of a case is when there's no majority opinion, that the standard was the Undue Burden Standard. And there just wasn't a lot to go on. I think I said that yesterday. I looked for whatever guidance I could find.

Senator BIDEN. Again, I am not questioning the sincerity of your search. Again, it gets down to the thing that keeps coming up with me, is not that you do not care about the little guy and all of that, that your reading of statutory language, Supreme Court precedent, the Constitution, seems to me to not reflect some of the genuine real-life differences that exist. The idea that you acknowledged that some women would suffer ill effects, substantial ill effects from informing their husbands, but because it was only a small percentage that met the Undue Burden test, that did not meet the Undue Burden test, it seems to me—

Anyway, the majority disagreed with you, and I happen to disagree with you because I guess maybe it is because we have been so exposed to how so many women are within their relationships can suffer significant consequences for challenging a position that their husband does not want to accept, whether it has to do with abortion or what school their child goes to, and it is pretty consequential. But that is my problem with how you arrived at your reasoning—or your reasoning how you arrived at your conclusion.

Let me move on to another area in the interest of time here. Yesterday there was discussion about the Family and Medical Leave Act, and you correctly stated there were two distinct parts of the Act, and the Hibbs case dealt with one, and Chittister dealt with another. Can you explain that again for me?

Judge ALITO. Yes. Hibbs concerned a provision that required employers to give employees leave to be out of work to take care of a family member. And there was a record that employers, State employers had given more leave for this purpose to women than they had to men, and that was based on the stereotype that when somebody in the family gets sick and somebody has to leave work to take care of the family member, it's the woman and not the man, and it reinforced the stereotype, of course, because having such a policy would encourage, would put pressure on women to leave for this purpose, as opposed to the man. If there was a woman and a man in the family, and somebody had to leave work to take care of a sick family member, and you have a plan like this, this is going to pressure the woman to do that. So the Hibbs court found that that was a sufficient record of gender discrimination to justify the passage of legislation under Section 5 of the 14th Amendment.

Chittister concerned a provision that related to leave for personal illness, and there's no reason to think that men or women get sick more often one than the other, or what was to the point, that State employers had given men more sick time than women, or women more sick time than men. And so with that record, it was the conclusion of my court, and I believe seven other circuits, that this was a different issue. These cases were decided before and after Hibbs and that could not be justified if you accept the Congruence and Proportionality Standard.

Senator BIDEN. On the Congruence and Proportionality Standard, we in the Congress thought we were speaking to that because were you aware or your colleagues—speak for yourself, actually, you cannot speak for them—that one in four people taking sick leave under the Act are women for pregnancy-related disabilities? That we, when we wrote the law, we said explicitly that working women, we wanted the bill to protect working women from the dangers that pregnancy-based distinctions could be extended to limit their employment opportunities. I mean the practical world is that a fair number of women who are pregnant are told in the last—and I yield to my doctor at the end of the dais on the other side—but it is not unusual for a woman to be told that she needs to, the last month of pregnancy or 2 months of pregnancy, have bed rest. And if that counts against her 12 weeks, employers—we did establish there is a record where employers say, “Hey, look, man, we are going to give men and women the same leave, notwithstanding the fact that women in fact in many circumstances—and one in four of them are pregnancy-related—need more time because of the pregnancy.” I mean was that discussed by you guys or women?

Judge ALITO. I’m quite certain it never was. I would have made a reference to it in the opinion if that had been mentioned. I am not aware of that coming up in the other circuit opinions on the issue. We are, to a degree—we can’t know everything about the real world, and we’re dependent on the arguments that are presented to us to a degree. I don’t believe that argument was ever presented.

Senator BIDEN. Congress expressly stated that the purpose of the Act was, quote, “to minimize the potential for employment discrimination by ensuring generally that leave is available for eligible medical reasons, including maternity-related disability.” That is why the decision confuses me. I think all you probably have to do is turn to your wife and say, “Hey, the real world, when you are pregnant does that sometime inhibit the amount of time you are required to be away from your job?” Fortunately, most women, like my wife and my daughter-in-law, work up to the time, but a lot cannot.

Let me suggest also, as I said to you in the hallway, I want to kind of set the record straight on Princeton. One of the reasons why I am perplexed and many of us are perplexed by your answers regarding the CAP, the organization, is that it does not fit with your background. As we both said in the hallway, I read your opening statement again, where you said that “a generation earlier I think that somebody from my background probably would not have felt fully comfortable at a college like Princeton.” And I pointed out to you I am about 10 years older than you, that is how I felt. That was what I was referencing yesterday about my, you know, Irish-Catholic kid from Claymont.

And the thing that surprises, or at least puzzles, me is that it was kind of, I thought, it was a pretty widely known debate that in the Ivies, the one sort of last holdout, fighting to not admit as many women and fighting not to admit as many minorities, was Princeton. There was a whole battle over it, as you heard referenced in terms of the Wall Street Journal and mailings to alumni.

And I noticed someone in the press. I want to be able to wear the hat given to me by pointing out that the reason I can wear this hat proudly today after being on campus as much as I have at Princeton is today, 28.7 percent of Princeton’s undergraduate population is minority, and today, the class of 2005, 47 percent—47 percent—are women. So that is what that battle was all about, a lot of us thought. I would be proud if my daughter were at Princeton Graduate School instead of Penn now, although I am very proud she is at Penn, but that is what this debate was about, Judge, and that is why it still confuses me.

I am going to ask you a straightforward question and I hope it doesn’t offend you. Did, when you listed CAP, was part of your rationale for listing it in an application you thought that would appeal to the outfit you were applying to, the people looking at your resume?

Judge ALITO. Well, Senator, as I said, I don't have a recollection of having anything to do with CAP, so all I can say is that I put it down on the '85 form and therefore I must have been a member at around that time, and that's—I can't—

Senator BIDEN. I am not even suggesting about whether you were or were not remembering. Was part of the reason—I am looking for a reason. I am looking to be able to say—because you don't impress me as someone, especially from your background, that would want to keep Princeton as—I won't go back and read the quotes—keep Princeton as, you know, imagine my father's 50th reunion, having 40 percent women, isn't that awful. You don't impress me as belonging to that club.

Judge ALITO. Well, I wasn't.

Senator BIDEN. So the only explanation I can think of—and you are not. You are a very informed guy. I mean, you are sitting up there in North Jersey as a U.S. Attorney. As I said, it is in the Wall Street Journal. It is a debate going on. You are getting letters. The only thing I could figure is you figured that a relatively conservative Reagan administration Justice Department would say, hey, maybe that is the kind of guy I want. I can't understand why else you would put it down. But if that is not the reason, if you just listed the outfits you belong to, that still perplexes me, but anyway—

Judge ALITO. Well, Senator, I wasn't a member of that club as you refer to it. By the time I entered Princeton, there were many minorities in my class. The practice of not including minorities had ended, and my class was not coeducational when we were admitted, and as I said yesterday, I had never previously attended a non-coeducational school—

Senator BIDEN. You had about 300 women, if I am guessing right, when you got admitted, roughly. When were you admitted?

Judge ALITO. I was admitted in 1968. It was not coeducational. It went coeducational while I was there—

Senator BIDEN. In 1971, 1970–71, there were 300 women. Now, there are 2,100 in that same class.

Anyway, I thank you very much, Judge. I yield the floor.

Chairman SPECTER. Thank you very much, Senator Biden.

We now have both Senator Durbin and Senator Coburn present. Senator Durbin, you have asked for 2 minutes as a matter of personal privilege.

Senator DURBIN. Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman, and I will make it brief.

Chairman SPECTER. You have 2 minutes.

Senator DURBIN. In a courtroom and in a Committee room, it is not unusual to try to rehabilitate a witness. When hard questions are asked, people come back with information. Mr. Gillespie and his team are down there providing information, as are others. It is perfectly acceptable. We would do the same thing if the shoe were on the other foot.

Two personal references to me were made after I left the room, and I apologize for leaving the Committee room. One related to the fact that I had earlier been in the pro-life position in my political life, and it is true. I made reference to this in my opening statement. I have stood for election more than 12 times in the House and the Senate, general and primary, stating my position as pro-choice, so the voters of Illinois know that.

I had asked Judge Alito whether his position had changed from 1985. That was the nature of my questions to you this morning. I don't consider that to be a shortcoming if you would concede it changed, although at this point, you have not made that concession. Abraham Lincoln was once accused of changing his position on an issue and he said, I would rather be right some of the time than wrong all of the time, and so I don't think changing your mind is necessarily condemnation.

The second point I would like to make specifically is my reference to settled law. Roe v. Wade is settled law, and I am sorry that Senator Hatch is not here at the moment, but I would like to read into the record exactly what was said on September 13, 2005, before this Committee when Senator Specter said, Judge Roberts—

Chairman SPECTER. Does this involve Senator Hatch, Senator Durbin?

Senator DURBIN. It does. Senator Hatch raised the question that I had said—

[Laughter.]

Senator DURBIN [continuing]. That this position—

Chairman SPECTER. Shouldn't we have Senator Hatch here?

Senator DURBIN. If you want to wait, I will wait.

Chairman SPECTER. Yes, I would like to wait until Senator Hatch arrives. That way, we may be able to conclude this not in 2 minutes, but in less than 2 hours.

I have made inquiries on the Ruser issue over the lunch hour, and I have some things to say about it, but I am not going to say them until Senator Kennedy arrives—

[Laughter.]

Chairman SPECTER. —so I have asked staff to inform Senator Kennedy that I await his arrival.

In the meantime, if it pleases this august body, we will proceed with the hearing. Senator Kyl?

Senator KYL. Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I do want to tie some loose ends up and one of them makes reference to something Senator Kennedy read. Would it be OK if I proceed with that? I think it would be fine. This has to do with this last matter that Senator Biden was also discussing and that is the Princeton alumni group.

Just to make sure that the key facts are understood here, you believe you joined, Judge Alito, around 1985 because of a concerned threat to ROTC at Princeton University, is that correct?

Judge ALITO. Well, Senator, I don't recall joining, but I do remember that that was the issue relating to the administration that was bothering me for a period of time, including that period.

Senator KYL. And just for the record, Mr. Chairman, I would ask unanimous consent to insert a quotation from the Princeton packet. I will just quote it here. Prospect editor Denise DeSouza added that CAP is concerned about the formation of a third-world center, a campaign to eliminate the Army ROTC program, and what it perceives as the decline of Princeton athletics.

Chairman SPECTER. Without objection, it will be made a part of the record.

Senator KYL. Second, on this matter, and I refer to this as the very scurrilous material read by Senator Kennedy, I suspect we would all agree was scurrilous material, had you ever heard of any of that material that he read a while ago before today?

Judge ALITO. No, Senator.

Senator KYL. I believe you said you vehemently disagreed with it, is that correct?

Judge ALITO. I do. I deplore those things.

Senator KYL. And would disavow it?

Judge ALITO. I disavow it. I would never associate myself with those things.

Senator KYL. Did you know that such things had been published by the PAC when you were a member of it, or when you joined it?

Judge ALITO. Absolutely not. I would never be a member of an organization that took those positions.

Senator KYL. OK. And also, Mr. Chairman, unanimous consent for the record to contain the disclaimer which the editors of the Prospect include in the magazine. It reads, "The appearance of an article in Prospect does not necessarily represent an endorsement of the author's beliefs by the Concerned Alumni of Princeton."

Chairman SPECTER. Without objection, it, too, will be made a part of the record.

Senator KYL. OK. Now let us return to your 15 years as a judge and how matters might come before you in the U.S. Supreme Court. I just wanted to also refer to something that I put in the record yesterday. It is a very difficult thing to look at 4,000 cases and conclude that, when you have ruled on both sides of issues depending upon different fact situations, as we have talked about before, that you necessarily favor one side or the other. One of the areas of concern was in the area of discrimination. I just want to read one sentence of what I inserted in the record yesterday regarding employment discrimination and see if you have any other comment on it.

A 2003 study of employment discrimination claims in Federal court found that Federal appeals court judges sided with employment discrimination plaintiffs in only 13 percent of the cases. Judge Alito's record of four out of 18, or 22 percent, is actually more favorable to plaintiffs. Do you know that to be incorrect or do you have any other comment on it?

Judge ALITO. I don't know—I'm not familiar with the statistics. The way the appeals system is set up, the types of—I think that's what results in the statistics that you mentioned, the low rate of success for plaintiffs, because these cases are generally cases in which summary judgment has been granted for the defendant. If the district court denies summary judgment for the defendant, then the case will go to trial and very often is settled, or there's a trial and then there's no appeal after the trial. So the cases that we get, most of the cases that we get are cases that have been looked at by a conscientious district judge and found not to be cases that should go to trial and I think that's what produces those statistics.

Senator KYL. And that's an interesting lesson, I think, for all of us, to be able to explain why certain cases come to courts and why they would be more on one side than the other. It is an important lesson, I think, both for lawyers and non-lawyers to appreciate that kind of dynamic, because otherwise, if you just look at raw statistics and don't know the background, you could come to different conclusions. So I appreciate that.

In another area, it is apparent to me that you are simply not going to be able to satisfy some of my colleagues because you will not absolutely commit to rule the way that they want to on a couple of key issues, for example, on the issue of abortion. You have repeatedly confirmed the significance in the role of precedent, in this case, Roe v. Wade. You also noted situations in which, as a Third Circuit Court judge, you adhered to the Roe v. Wade precedent.

But you have declined to announce your constitutional view of Roe today, despite repeated attempts by some of my colleagues to get you to do it in these hearings. Implied in your answer is the point that to do that here would commit you to a particular result, something you cannot ethically do. Are there cases regarding abortion that you believe may come before the U.S. Supreme Court?

Judge ALITO. There certainly are cases that may come before the Supreme Court. There is a case involving abortion before the Court this term, and they come up with some regularity. Many of them involve the application of Roe. Most of them involve the application of Roe or the application of other precedents that build on Roe. But it is entirely possible that a case involving Roe itself could come up at some point in the future.

Senator KYL. Now, I said in my opening statement that I would defend your right to decline to say in advance how you would rule on matters that could come before you, but kind of along the same lines that you did a moment ago, perhaps you could tell us the reason for the rule, in other words, to elaborate on the damage that would be done if judges indicate in advance how they might rule on cases. What is the reason for that rule?

Judge ALITO. In my mind, the most important reason is that to do that would undermine the entire judicial decisionmaking process. We have a process for deciding legal issues and it is critically important that we stick to that process, and that means that when an issue comes before us, the briefs are not a formality. The arguments of the attorneys are not a formality. We should read those very carefully and we should study the issue and we should study all the authorities that are cited to us and carefully consider all of the arguments that are presented to us, both in the briefs and in the attorneys' oral presentation, and then go into the conference and discuss the case among the members of the court, and we shouldn't decide legal questions without questions that are going to—not just abstract questions as if we were in a constitutional law seminar, but cases that are going to have an impact on the real world. We shouldn't decide those questions even in our own minds without going through that whole process.

If we announce—if a judge or a judicial nominee announced before even reading the briefs or getting the case or hearing the argument what he or she thought about the ultimate legal issue, all of that would be rendered meaningless and people would lose all their respect for the judicial system, and with justification, because that is not the way in which members of the judiciary are supposed to go about the work of deciding cases.

Senator KYL. I have talked about this image we have of Lady Justice, the blind figure with the scales of justice in her hand, and try to describe why she has the blindfold across her eyes. I just marvel at our judicial system, and having represented clients in court for 20 years myself, how we in America are willing to literally put our lives sometimes, certainly our freedom and our fortune, in the hands of a person, one judge frequently, sometimes a jury, sometimes not, sometimes more than one judge, but frequently a judge. How would people possibly have the trust to put everything they own, or their own freedom, in the hands of a person if we as a country hadn't established over 200 years of adhering to this rule of law, this notion that justice is blind, that the facts of your case and the law will decide whether you win or lose and nothing else?

It is a remarkable phenomenon, if you stop to think about it, and not all countries do that, and even countries that have judicial systems, I don't think one can have near the confidence in that we do here in the United States. So it is a critical, critical principle that plays itself out in courtrooms around this country every day and it is something that I think we have to fight to preserve as much as we possibly can, and I appreciate your explanation of that.

Just a couple of final things and I am going to be able to yield back some of my time. I just can't resist pointing out one little irony here and it has to do with the precedent that I spoke of before, Roe v. Wade, that is so important to several members of this Committee. It was written by a Justice who himself was, at least in some cases, willing to throw off precedent. Do you remember who wrote the opinion in Roe v. Wade?

Judge ALITO. It was Justice Blackman.

Senator KYL. Justice Blackman, and in, one might say, an infamous 1994 dissent from a denial of cert in the case of Collins v. Collins, Justice Blackman wrote that he would refuse to follow all Supreme Court precedent on the death penalty, which has been ruled constitutional by the Court, of course, by saying that he would, and I quote, "no longer tinker with the machinery of death," end of quote. I suspect that is not the way to deal with precedent. If you have a comment on it, fine, but again, I just think it ironic that the decision perhaps most in focus here was authored by a judge who himself was quite willing to throw off precedent, I would argue in a rather cavalier way, in a situation in which he didn't like it.

Let me just close by putting something in the record and making a comment. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to insert the following statement in the record, but I would like to read it because it is a statement of the Majority Leader of the Senate, Bill Frist.

Chairman SPECTER. Without objection, it will be made a part of the record.

Senator KYL. And let me briefly read it. "As a Princeton alumnus, I had concerns about CAP, but I have no concerns about Judge Alito's credibility, integrity, and his commitment to protecting the equal rights of all Americans. Judge Alito has condemned discrimination, and his record of more than 15 years demonstrates his commitment to equal rights for women and minorities.

“Old documents of a now-defunct organization will not tell us more than Alito’s statements and record already have. Further, the views that the Democrats attribute to Alito through CAP were the views expressed by an individual member in a magazine, who was not speaking for the organization and certainly not for Judge Alito. This is another transparent attempt by Democrats to wage an unfair smear campaign against an exceptionally qualified nominee.”

Mr. Chairman, I read that not to attribute the views to any member of this committee, but I think it is important that the reputation of this fine jurist be based upon his actions as a jurist for over 15 years, as I said in my opening statement—longer than any other justice of the U.S. Supreme Court, except for one, 70 years ago, on a circuit court of appeals—with a record of over 4,000 decisions and an ample opportunity to know what kind of a person he is, what kind of a judge he has been, and, I would argue, what kind of a judge that he would make.

I do not believe that his answers to questions have been inconsistent or unforthcoming. I believe that, as a matter of fact, Judge, you have been very forthcoming in your answers to questions, including getting right up to the edge on a lot of matters that arguably could come before the Court. But you did not try to dodge or duck those questions at all. In fact, let me just read for the record two or three statements relating to your performance here at this hearing, if I could, please.

Well, Senator Biden isn’t here, so I won’t read what he has said. But it is on the chart. And I appreciate what he said, by the way.

Jill Zuckman, who writes for the Chicago Tribune: “Judge Alito has gone farther and I think that has given a lot more substance to these hearings, said Specter—meaning our distinguished chairman, Arlen Specter.”

And then, Dana Milbank, writing in the Washington Post: “Unlike John G. Roberts, Jr., who made frequent attempts to soften his views and dodge many of the questions, Alito took almost every question.”

I am not going to subscribe to the first part of that last quotation with respect to Judge Roberts, but I think it is true that you have taken the questions, you have answered them to the best of your ability, and you have only stopped short when not to do so would be to commit to a decision in a case that you are not ethically permitted to do and that would do injustice to the rule of law and the parties that might come before the Court.

So I want to commend you for being so forthcoming, for answering our questions, and for testifying in a very thoughtful, and as has been apparent to everybody, without any notes or materials or referring to any other people here, with great knowledge about both the matters on which you have worked and the law generally.

Thank you, Judge.

Judge ALITO. Thank you, Senator.

Chairman SPECTER. Thank you very much, Senator Kyl.

Senator KOHL.

Senator KOHL. Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman.

Judge Alito, after the first day of questions, it seems very clear that you believe there are certain bedrock principles in American constitutional law, principles like the right of one man, one vote in redistricting, the right of children not to have to go to schools unless they are integrated schools, the right for people to have privacy in making decisions about contraception, and other rights.

Even though these are cases where the principles are raised and their application is debated on the margins or even more fundamentally, I believe you have said and you are willing to say that you will not question the underlying principle involved on these issues. And I commend you for that. We are assured, and I believe, that you clearly do stand by those principles.

And yet, when you are asked about Roe v. Wade and the following case of Casey, cases that say the Government should not place an undue burden on a woman's right to choose, when we ask about principles of that sort, you are unwilling to make the same statement of support.

Now, I understand that there will be cases where plaintiffs argue on the margins about Roe and Casey, where there are efforts to narrow or broaden these principles, just as there are cases that narrow or broaden the principles of one man, one vote or the issue enunciated in Brown v. Board of Education or Griswold. But you are willing to stand by those other legal principles and yet you are not taking the same position with regard to the principles embodied in Roe and Casey.

Could you explain that, please?

Judge ALITO. Senator, I think it's important to draw a distinction between issues that could realistically come up before the courts and issues that are very much, that are still very much in play—which is to say, the subject of litigation in the courts. And I felt comfortable about commenting on one person, one vote and, of course, Brown v. Board of Education because those are not issues that are any longer the subject of litigation in our country, not the fundamental principles that are embodied in those decisions. And the Griswold case, likewise, concerns an issue that is not realistically likely to come before the courts.

Roe, on the other hand, involves an issue that is involved in a considerable amount of litigation before the courts, and so that's where I feel that I must draw the line, because on issues that could realistically come up, it would be improper for me to express a view and I would not reach a conclusion regarding any issue like that before going through the whole judicial process that I described.

Senator KOHL. I think there is strength to what you say, but I also believe it is not inaccurate to say that these other issues on the margins, just as Roe on the margins, are still coming up and may yet come up before the Court. And I still feel that while you are prepared to take a position on these other issues which is almost bottom-line, clearly bottom-line, you are not prepared to take that same position—which you could, if you wished; you could take that position if you wished. And I think what that does suggest is that what you are saying is that it is possible, if a case comes before you, that you would take a look at the principles underlying Roe and Casey and see them in a way that would overturn Roe and Casey.

Now, you may say, well, obviously the answer is yes. But I just want to get that clarified for the record.

Judge ALITO. Well, what I would do if a case like that were to come before me, and if I'm confirmed, is to follow the two-step process that I've talked about, which is first to consider the issue of stare decisis. And there's been a considerable body of case law now on this issue going back to Roe and, in particular over the last 20 years, and in the Casey opinion, that was where the joint opinion began and the joint opinion ended. And then only if I got beyond that issue would I consider the underlying issue. And that's what I would do if the issue were to come up. And I don't believe that it would be appropriate and it wouldn't even be realistic for me to go further than that.

Senator KOHL. That is correct. And in your mind, you are not prepared to say that the principle embodied in Roe v. Wade and the principle embodied in Casey is clearly established law that is not subject, to your mind, to review. You are not prepared—I mean, that is not your position, which I think you have said. But I think, at least for me, a clarification of that would be of some importance.

Judge ALITO. Well, in light of the current state of litigation relating to the issue of abortion—and as I said, there's an abortion case before the Supreme Court this term and there are undoubtedly abortion cases before the lower Federal courts; I know there are—I don't believe that it's appropriate for me to go further than that in relation to that issue.

Senator KOHL. All right.

Judge Alito, the President nominated you for the Supreme Court because of your record as a person and as a judge. Groups and individuals, particularly on the right, quickly endorsed you soon after your nomination because they feel comfortable with your record as you have established it over several decades now, where you have come from, and where you are on the issues that are important to them. We also assume that you yourself are very proud of your record, as you should be. As a man of principle and conviction, which we believe you are, you worked on issues throughout your career as a Justice Department attorney that you believed in, that you cared about, that mattered to you. And I am certain you would say that if you didn't believe in these things, you would not have gone to work for that particular Justice Department under that particular administration.

And yet yesterday during the hearing, you seemed to walk away from a lot of your record. For example, when asked about an interview where you supported Judge Bork, calling him "one of the most outstanding nominees of this century," you answered that you were just supporting the administration's position, that that wasn't your position. And even then, you distanced yourself from a number of his views, after having said that he was one of the most outstanding nominees of this century. You are a man of conviction; I am sure you are. And you are not just a mouthpiece for people. You never have been and you never will be—which is to your credit.

When asked about the strong position you took opposing a woman's right to choose in your job application, you said that only reflected how you felt then and did not suggest anything of what you believe now. What you felt then you felt as a full-grown man, and you are saying that is not necessarily how you feel now.

When asked about your membership in a radical organization at Princeton, a group that you cited with pride on your job application, you said that you could not remember anything about the group at all.

When asked about the citation on your job application where you refer to the importance of traditional values, and what you meant by traditional values, then you answered, somewhat incomprehensibly, when you said that you were protecting children from “psychological threats that come from elements in the atmosphere is a traditional value.”

I also asked you about your statement on your job application that you disagreed with the Warren Court’s rulings on reapportionment, rulings that stand for the basic principle of one person, one vote. Indeed, you said your disagreement was so strong that it contributed to your decision to pursue a legal career. Yesterday you stated that you in fact did not disagree with the principle of one person, one vote—not then, not now.

So, Judge, this is the only time that the people of this country are going to have an opportunity to get a sense of who you are, what you believe in, what you stand for, who you are as a person. I think you would say that the American people have the absolute right to know that, without condition, without any political considerations, that the most important part of this hearing is that the American people get a chance, through our questions and your answers, to know who you really are. I would like to hope that you would say the job isn’t worth it if we can’t do that and do that well. And I believe you believe that.

So I would like to ask you how you bring into a sense of harmony some of these things that you have done and said throughout your career which have brought you to this situation in which you are now, a person being nominated to serve on the Supreme Court, and some of the positions which you have taken in the last few days which, in effect, distance you from some of the very things that you have done and stood for over a career that bring you to where you are today.

Judge ALITO. Senator, you mentioned a number of things and I’ve tried to jot them down so that I could cover at least the major things that you mentioned.

You mentioned—and I guess I’ll take these in reverse order of chronology—you mentioned the statement in the 1985 statement relating to reapportionment. And I’ve tried to explain what I had in mind. The statement in the ’85 statement talked about what I thought about reapportionment when I was in college. And the reason why I mentioned that—why would I mention what I thought about constitutional law in college before I’d even been to law school?

What I was attempting to do was to explain the development of my thinking about the role of the judiciary and about constitutional law and, in particular my development of my strong belief in judicial self-restraint. And the first place in which I saw a theoretical explanation of that doctrine, which I found persuasive at the time, was Alexander’s Bickel’s book, “The Supreme Court and the Idea of Progress,” which came out during the time when I was in college. I think it was the first book about constitutional theory, so to speak, that I had read. And he addressed the issue of one person, one vote, and that linked up in my mind with the experiences of my father in working on the reapportionment of the New Jersey legislature.

And at the time when I was in college, there was an issue that was very much a live issue at the time as to what one person, one vote meant. Did it mean that you took this principle of one person, one vote and applied it with blinding literalness so that every district was exactly equal in population, or very close to that, with a population deviation of under 1 percent, or could other factors that people thought were legitimate factors to be considered in drawing districts, such as respecting county lines and municipal lines; was it permissible to take those into account? That's what I know I was thinking about reapportionment back in my college days.

I referred in the statement to traditional values, and I said yesterday at this point in 2006, I can't say for sure exactly what was on my mind in 1985, when I made reference to traditional values. But I tried to describe some of the things that I probably thought were traditional—thought of as traditional values, and I listed a number of them. One—and a lot of them had to do with the ability of people to live and raise a family in the sort of neighborhood where I grew up. And I gave a little description of that earlier.

So it would include things like being able to live in peace and safety. I think that's a traditional value, and that was very much at stake when I was in college in the late '60s and early '70s and in 1985, because these were eras of high crime. And a lot of the work that I had done up to 1985 as an assistant U.S. attorney and working on criminal cases in the Solicitor General's Office seemed to me to be involved with this issue of protecting people from the threat of crime.

I think I mentioned the ability to raise children the way you want, to instill your values, not to have them subject to certain external threats. And these were—you know, I've tried to think of why would these have been at issue in the mid-80s. And they were at issue because of things like some of the things I was referring to earlier today about children being able to, and students being able to express their religious views at school in a nondiscriminatory way, so that religious speech was not discriminated against. And that was very much at issue in the '80s. Congress passed the Equal Access Act at about that time to embody that principle.

So those were some of the things that came to my mind as traditional values.

The 1985 statement in reference to abortion, I have not distanced myself from it. I have said that that was a correct expression of what I thought in 1985 when I wrote it. It was written in 1985, and that was 20 years ago. And there's been a lot of case law in the intervening years. There was Thornburgh and there was Webster and Casey, all of which involved direct challenges to Roe, and there were other cases applying Roe.

So that's what I had in mind with respect to the matters that you've covered.

Senator KOHL. Last question. When we met privately, I asked you what sort of Supreme Court Justice you would make and your answer was fair when you said if you want to know what sort of justice I would make, look at the sort of judge that I have been.

Last week, the Washington Post did exactly that in an analysis of your record as a Third Circuit judge for the past 15 years. They analyzed 221 cases that you sat on and in which the court's decision was divided. I recognize that in every case there is a difference and that it must be decided on its facts. Nonetheless, this data reveals patterns and tendencies in your decisions, among other things, as you may have recollected from the Post article.

It was found that in civil rights cases you sided against three out of every four people who claimed to have been victims of discrimination. This was a significantly greater rate than other judges in a national sample of cases. Of 33 criminal cases the newspaper analyzed, you sided with the criminal defendant only three times. This was a very much lower rate than the national sample. In immigration cases, the Post also found that you sided with immigrants who were trying to win asylum or block deportation only in one out of eight cases analyzed. This was much less than most judges in the national sample.

Now, the Washington Post was not the only one to perform an analysis of your record. Noted constitutional law professor Cass Sunstein, for example, found that, "When there is a conflict between institutions and individual rights, Judge Alito's dissenting opinions argue against individual rights 84 percent of the time."

So what can we glean from these analyses of Judge Alito and what might they indicate with respect to your posture on cases should you become a Justice of the Supreme Court?

Judge ALITO. On the discrimination cases, Senator, I think that the statistic that Senator Kyl just cited speaks directly to that, a comparison of the number of times in which people claiming discrimination prevailed in the cases won my vote compared to the average for circuit judges in general. And I think that those statistics—that my statistics and the statistics for circuit judges in general have to be viewed against the background of—have to be viewed with a recognition of the way in which these discrimination cases come up through the court system. Most of them are cases in which the person claiming the violation lost in the district court, and that means that a district court judge—and they are not always right, but most of the time they are right. And they are conscientious people, and they apply the same law that we do. They found that these were not meritorious cases. And so if you start out with a group of cases that have already been found to be not meritorious, it stands to reason that probably not a very high percentage of them will ultimately be found to be meritorious.

On the immigration cases, I take very seriously—and I don't know what the statistics are in this area, but I can tell you this, that I take very seriously the scope of review that I am supposed to perform as an appellate judge. And that is usually dictated by Congress, and in the area of immigration, Congress has spoken clearly. And as to factual decisions that are made by an immigration judge, what Congress has told us is you are not to disturb those unless no reasonable fact finder could have reached the conclusion that the immigration judge did. And I very often see a record where I think it's doubtful. I say to myself, "I might have decided this differently if I were the immigration judge.” But I wasn’t there. I didn’t see the witnesses testify personally. And Congress has told me what my role is there. My role is not to substitute my judgment for that of the immigration judge. My job is to say, Could a reasonable person have reached the conclusion that the immigration judge did? And if I find that a reasonable person could have reached that conclusion, then it’s my job to deny the petition for review. And that’s what I do in those instances.

Senator KOHL. I appreciate that. I would just comment again that your siding with immigrants who were trying to win asylum or block deportation, you sided only in one out of eight cases that they analyzed, and this was much less than most judges in a national sample who are about evenly divided in their decisions on these issues. This was what their analysis indicated.

So, you know, for whatever it is worth, you were one out of eight; in the national sample of judges, it was about 50 percent. I only bring that up for your comment.

I thank you very much, Judge Alito, and, Mr. Chairman, I thank you.

Chairman SPECTER. Thank you, Senator Kohl.

We have made some inquiries about the issue which Senator Kennedy has raised about the Concerned Alumni of Princeton. As to the letter, I am advised by my chief of staff, Michael O’Neill, that he first saw a computer letter and that he believes later a letter was delivered to the Judiciary Committee headquarters, apparently near Christmas, perhaps on Christmas Eve, and our custom is to log letters in, and the letter was never logged in. But I repeat and confirm that I have never seen this letter until I saw a computer printout of it about an hour ago.

Mr. O’Neill did talk to me about it over the break between Christmas and New Year’s. I traveled to Iraq. That is the first time on the Judiciary Committee schedule I could find a few days to get away, and Mr. O’Neill reminds me that we talked about it on the phone, and I thought the matter was unmeritorious, not worthy of the time of the Committee, based on all that I knew about it. A very brief conversation.

We get so many requests and there are so many items that are largely staff-driven—not that staff-driven matters aren’t important, but if something is of significance, you customarily expect a member to tell you about it.

Senator Kennedy and I frequent the gym at the same time and talk all the time, and he never mentioned it to me, nor did he take it to the Ranking Member.

I make it a point that Senator Leahy’s calls are the first ones I return, and I have a fair number, but I return all calls from Members very, very promptly. And had this matter been presented to me, I would have given it more attention than I did on that telephone call that I have referred to.

So much for matters which are not quite as relevant as what I am about to come to. The New York Times published a story about this on November 26th, and my chief of staff, William Reynolds, talked to David Kirkpatrick, who said he had gone through all of the records. And as the story in the public domain stated, these are the records that the Library of Congress, the Rusher records, those records and others at the med. library at Princeton give no indication that Judge Alito was among the group's major donors. He was not an active leader of the group, and two of his classmates who were involved and Mr. Rusher said they did not remember his playing a role.

Well, the obvious thing to do is to call Mr. Rusher, which Mr. O'Neill did over the lunch hour, and Mr. Rusher said he would be glad to have us look at his record, and that he had received a request from Congressional Research Service, but it was from an unnamed requester, and he declined. But he said had he received a request from Senator Kennedy or some member of this Committee, he would have made the records available. So in Senator Kennedy's absence, I asked a staffer to tell him that we had moved ahead, but I didn't want to waste any time, and Mr. O'Neill has contacted Senator Kennedy's staffers, and they are en route or at the Library of Congress to look at these records so that we can confirm what the New York Times' David Kirkpatrick has had to say.

I am just a little puzzled at the issue being raised in this manner. We talk all the time, and I am just a little surprised that Senator Kennedy hadn't talked to Senator Leahy or hadn't talked to me before he made a request for access to the Rusher records, talks about a subpoena, talks about a ruling of the Chair, talks about overruling the Chair. Just a little puzzled. But the substantive matters are being attended to. And I share Senator Kennedy's concern that we have all the facts. All the facts. All the facts. And this is a lifetime appointment. It is a matter of tremendous importance, and I wouldn't want to find on some occasion that something comes to light which would bear on this nomination that we could have found out had we been more vigilant.

Senator Kennedy?

Senator KENNEDY. Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I welcome the fact that we are going to have the access to those records. The fact remains I didn't anticipate—I thought that since this was a major issue on the 1985 application of the nominee for a new job, this membership with the Federalist Society and the CAP organization, I thought as a matter of routine that we would have access to those records. And it was a letter to you, as we would do, and would followup with the staff, which is the usual procedure here. I regret I have not been down in the gym since before Christmas so I have missed you down there.

But the important fact is we are going to get that information. I think that is what is extremely important. And, quite frankly, if we had been able to get what I think were more responsive answers by the nominee during the course of the exchange today, I don't think it would have even been necessary. But I don't think you would be able to look through the transcript on the exchanges that we had with the nominee and not feel that we have an important responsibility to followup.

So I am grateful that we will have that chance to followup, and I look forward to the further considerations and evaluation of the material and further considerations of the hearing.

Chairman SPECTER. Enough said.

Senator Leahy, you have a unanimous consent request?

Senator LEAHY. Yes, Mr. Chairman. As I had understood, we will be going back to another round, so if I have misunderstood, you will correct me. But as I understood Judge Alito, he saw no connection between his unified Executive theory and the use of Presidential signing statements. In fact, the Wall Street Journal reported the President has cited the unitary Executive 103 times in Presidential signing statements. So I would like to put that article and some articles from the Post that are relevant in the record. In fact, in the defense bill, the McCain torture amendment, he specifically employed a signing statement mentioning the unitary Executive, and I would like to make that part of the record.

Chairman SPECTER. Without objection, those documents will be made a part of the record.

Senator DeWine, 20 minutes.

Senator DEWINE. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Judge, yesterday you and I discussed the concerns that I have about the Supreme Court's willingness to strike down law passed by this Congress and by State legislators. This lack of what I consider to be appropriate deference by the Court endangers our ability to protect the rights of our citizens.

One of the groups that I am most concerned about in that context is people with disabilities. Congress has passed a number of laws to assure that people with disabilities have equal access and equal opportunities. I think it is critically important that we make sure that those with disabilities have these opportunities to participate fully in our society in every way possible.

As you know, Judge, the Americans with Disabilities Act was a landmark piece of legislation passed by this Congress in our ongoing efforts to assure that people with disabilities are treated fairly. The 1999 case of Olmstead v. L.C. was an important Supreme Court case interpreting this law. As you know, Olmstead held that Title II of the ADA requires States to serve individuals with disabilities in community settings whenever possible, instead of segregating them while providing them with care.

Olmstead was decided after the case of Helen L. v. DiDario, a case which, of course, you are familiar with, a Third Circuit case, that reached essentially the same conclusion. Although you were not on the Helen L. panel, you along with four other judges voted to rehear the case en banc.

So let me ask you, Judge, if you could, to discuss with us your reasoning behind voting to rehear the Helen L. case. I would like to ask you, did that vote to rehear the case mean that you thought that the Helen L. case was decided incorrectly or that you opposed the later holding in Olmstead? Let me also ask you, now that Olmstead has been decided, do your reasons for voting to rehear the Helen L. case still apply? And do you have any concerns with the Supreme Court's holding in Olmstead that would cause you to question the validity of that particular decision?

Judge ALITO. I certainly don't have any concerns about the decision in Olmstead. I would have to look at my own file in the Helen L. case—and I doubt that there is any file in the case at this point—to try and see if there's anything in there to indicate specifically why I voted for rehearing in the case. And perhaps if—but I can say this: that I read the decision again, and one important part of the opinion in the case attempts to distinguish an earlier Third Circuit case that seemed to be somewhat closely related—closely related to the issue that was at hand. And I noted there were five votes for rehearing in the case, and that’s quite unusual. It’s unusual for there to be that many votes for rehearing.

Most of the time—I would say most of the time when we vote for rehearing, the reason is because we think that there may be an inconsistency in our court case law, and that doesn’t necessarily mean that we think that the decision we’re voting to rehear was incorrect. Quite often, we think the decision that we are voting to reconsider is correct, but that it is inconsistent with a prior case that needs to be overruled, and we are very scrupulous about following our own precedents, not ignoring them. So if we have a precedent out there and it seems to us to be wrong and the issue comes up in a later case, then our mechanism is to vote to rehear.

That happens very often, and my guess, based on what I can tell just from reading the opinion and looking at the votes for rehearing and the judges who voted for rehearing, is that could have been what was going on.

Senator DEWINE. I appreciate your answer, Judge.

As the Chair of this Committee’s Subcommittee on Antitrust, I have seen that it is often very hard to draw the line between anti-competitive conduct and, frankly, just good old-fashioned competition. Let me give you an example that Senator Kohl and I have done a great deal of work on, and, frankly, Senator Kohl has really taken a lead on. Many hospitals buy their supplies through group purchasing organizations, known as GPOs. These organizations purchase products for a large number of hospitals at one time, which decreases prices, but also gives them extraordinary power over which products get used and which ones don’t get used. Often, GPOs reach deals with major suppliers to buy items in bundles; in other words, buy a number of different products from those suppliers in order to get discounts on all the products. It saves money, but it also means that smaller companies, which many only offer one of these products, have really a hard time competing with the large discounts being offered. The result is that smaller companies have difficulty getting into the market even if their one specific product may be better or it may even be cheaper.

Judge, you had a case that dealt with bundling like this. It was the 3M v. LePage case. In that case, 3M, which sells Scotch tape, was selling it as part of a bundle with other products. The result was that LePage, which was offering a cheaper competing tape, was having a hard time getting stores to sell its tape because if the stores then did, they would have to give up the chance to save money on all the other 3M products that they carried. The majority ruled against 3M, but you dissented. I wonder if you could please explain your reasoning behind that dissent and explain what type of bundle discounts you think would violate the antitrust laws.

Judge ALITO. Well, let me preface what I’m going to say by saying that I’m not an antitrust expert and so I plod my way through these antitrust issues when they come up. But this was a tough one and it was a monopolization case and it required an examination of all the factors that were relevant to a determination of whether 3M was engaging in monopolization.

3M was selling the product, as I recall, it was selling these products—it was not selling them below its cost. It was selling them above its cost, but 3M was—because of its scale or because it was more efficient, was able to produce its product more cheaply. I remember looking at the authorities that had discussed this and the writing of leading antitrust experts on bundling issues and that factor, taken together with the other factors in the case, persuaded Judge Greenberg and I, and we were the majority on the case at the panel level, that there wasn't sufficient evidence of monopolization here. And then when the case went en banc, the court as a whole came out the other way.

But my understanding of the state of the scholarship on this issue right now and on the way economists view the issue is that I believe that, or many of them who believe that this is—a situation like this is not—does not involve monopolization. This is not a way in which a company like that can engage in a predatory practice over a period of time. But there is uncertainty, really, about how the monopolization standard applies to issues of bundling. So I think it's quite up in the air, and should it come up again, I think it merits reexamination.

Senator DEWINE. Thank you, Judge. Judge, you have heard a lot of discussion and many of us have said that we don't like it when judges legislate from the bench. For judges to properly perform their function, obviously, it is crucial that they attempt to put their own policy preferences aside in the cases before them. But it seems to me that this is a lot easier said than done.

Our Constitution is not a dictionary. It contains a number of very broad, undefined phrases. Let me give you some examples. The Fourth Amendment prohibits unreasonable searches and seizures. The 14th Amendment says that the State shall not deprive any person of liberty without due process of law. The Eighth Amendment prohibits cruel and unusual punishments. I am sure you could supply a lot more examples than I am.

When confronted with such broad phrases, like “unreasonable” or “liberty,” “cruel and unusual,” how do you know whether you are making policy or merely interpreting the Constitution itself? What tools will you use as a Supreme Court Justice to ensure that your personal views do not play a role in your decisionmaking?

Judge ALITO. In all the areas that you mentioned, there is now a considerable body of case law, and that is a real limitation on the exercise of judicial power. That is one of the important reasons for the doctrine of stare decisis. In the 78th Federalist Paper, when Alexander Hamilton was responding to the people who were worried about this power of judicial review, who thought that it would give the judiciary too much power, he specifically cited the fact that members of the judiciary would be bound up by precedent and this would restrain them. This would keep them from injecting their own views into the decisionmaking process.

Under the Fourth Amendment, there is an enormous body of case law now and there are many types of searches that are—it's established in case law that a warrant is required. There are types of searches where it's established now that the activity can be conducted with reasonable suspicion, a Terry stop, for example, other types of searches require probable cause. And there are many specialized types of searches, administrative searches, roadblocks constructed for certain purposes, border searches, and so forth.

Under the Due Process Clause of the Fifth Amendment and the 14th Amendment, there is a great body of case law on procedural due process and most of the due process issues involve procedural due process, what sort of process is required. There is a standard for cases involving the substantive component of that.

Under the Eighth Amendment, since the Supreme Court in Gregg v. Georgia ruled that the death penalty is permissible under certain circumstances, there is a very large body and a complex body of case law within which a judge would work in deciding cases in that field.

Senator DEWINE. Judge, let me turn to an area that I talked with Judge Roberts about, and that is free speech in the public square. To me, there is perhaps no right in our Constitution that is really as important as freedom of speech. The heart of the First Amendment is the idea that people have a right to speak their mind but also be heard on matters of public concern. Traditionally, our citizens have expressed their opinion on public issues by turning to the public square. They do it in parks, streets, sidewalks, anywhere that people gather. It is as old as the country—older than our country.

Lately, however, I believe that we are seeing a disturbing trend. In many cases, governments have sought to restrict speech in the public arena, sometimes with success, sometimes without. Let me give you some examples. In one recent case, a Wisconsin woman was kicked off a city bus when she tried to distribute a book containing Bible stories to individuals sitting next to her. In many towns and cities across the country, individuals are prohibited from placing political signs on their own property. They are told what size they can put out. They are told the times they can put it out, the dates they can put it out, et cetera. In many public places, individuals have been forced to hold up signs of protest and been confined to “free speech zones,” far away from the event that they wish to protest. These individuals are doing nothing more, many times, than just standing their with their sign.

These sorts of restrictions concern me because they limit the ability of individuals not only to speak, but also to be heard in public places, people who want to talk about politics, religion, or any other matter of public concern. I think we need to be careful as a society before we limit what people can say and where they can say it.

Let me ask you, how do you approach challenges to government restrictions on the ability of individuals to speak and be heard in public places, and what, Judge, factors do you consider when deciding which restrictions on speech in the public square are proper under the First Amendment and which ones are not?

Judge ALITO. I think that freedom of speech and freedom of the press and all the freedoms set out in the First Amendment are matters of the utmost importance. Freedom of speech is not only important for its own said, but it is vital to the preservation of our form of government, and I think that if anybody reviews that opinions that I’ve written in the area of freedom of expression and other First Amendment—

Senator DEWINE. I have looked at some of them, at least—

Judge ALITO. —they will see that I strongly support those rights.

The issue of speech in particular places is a daunting issue. The Supreme Court has addressed it by developing the forum doctrine, and they have identified what they call a public forum, which would be something like a public street, where people's ability to speak is at the maximum. At the other extreme, there is a private forum. My chambers would be a private forum. A Senator's office would be a private forum. Someone would not have a right to come in from the street and speak in a place like that. And then there are what they call limited public forums or dedicated public forums or fora, places where people can speak freely, but only at particular times on particular subjects, a place that is dedicated to free speech but only on a particular subject, for example. That is the way they analyze it.

Now, some people would say that there are developments in society that have resulted in the shrinking of public fora that make it more difficult for people to express themselves. I know that I'm not up to date on New Jersey case law under the New Jersey Constitution, but it's my belief that our State has read this—has a different forum doctrine in things like shopping centers. Malls that are privately owned are considered to be public fora under a New Jersey State law. I think some other States view it that way and that's a competing way of looking at this problem.

An important principle where I have dealt with this in my cases, as I can recall, is the issue of freedom of speech in a limited public forum, and even in a limited public forum, what government cannot do is engage in viewpoint discrimination. If the government opens up a particular forum for discussion of a particular subject, it can't say, but we're not going to allow—we're only going to allow people who express this viewpoint and not another viewpoint. Viewpoint discrimination really goes to the heart of what the First Amendment is intended to prohibit, so that even in a limited public forum where people are restricted with respect to what—the subject that they can talk about, government can't impose a viewpoint discrimination.

Senator DEWINE. It just seems to me, Judge, that we could talk about this issue all day, and we're not going to, obviously, but that there is a shrinking public forum and the opportunities many times are going away. I guess you could make the other argument that because of modern technology, there are other opportunities with the Internet, et cetera, that they are opening up for people to communicate and to make their point well known. But a lot of the places that people historically have talked and made their point well known are shrinking. You talked about the malls, which certainly in most States are totally off limits to any kind of display of that kind of debate.

Let me turn to commercial speech, if I could. Under current law, commercial speech is protected by the First Amendment, but it has never had the same level of protection as other forms of speech, such as political speech. The difference in treatment has puzzled a number of commentators and judges. In reviewing your cases, I noted that you are certainly familiar with the issue of commercial speech. In the Pitt News case, for instance, you struck down a Pennsylvania statute that barred paid alcohol advertisements in newspapers affiliated with colleges and universities.

Let me ask you, Judge, based on your experience with this and other cases, what is your view about the distinction between commercial speech and noncommercial speech and is there a common sense difference between these two types of speeches and have you found that case law supports any distinction? How, if confirmed, will you approach the so-called commercial speech claims under the First Amendment?

Judge ALITO. Well, there's a debate about how much protection commercial speech should have. There are those who argue that the distinction between commercial speech and noncommercial speech should be eliminated. The Supreme Court views commercial speech differently, and while it is strict about any limitation regarding accurate information about prices, it limits—it permits greater restriction of commercial speech under current case law than it does with respect to other types of speech. The theory, as I understand it, is that commercial speech is more durable. At least, that's part of the theory. In other words, there's such a great incentive for people who are selling things to engage in advertising and other forms of commercial speech that it's less likely to be driven out than speech on other issues where the financing may not be as extensive.

In the Pitt News case, what I had to apply was the question of whether there was sufficient tailoring. There was a compelling interest for what was done there, which was to restrict advertising about alcohol in a publication that was affiliated with an educational institution. But based on the facts there, it just did not seem to be tailored at all. This was a newspaper that I think 75 percent of the people who received it, and it's connected with the University of Pittsburgh, were people over the drinking age, and maybe even more to the point, this publication was distributed free on campus in newspaper boxes next to a number of others that contained commercial publications and they both advertised establishments and events in the area of the university and the others were full of information about alcoholic beverages and those were free, too.

So while the problem of underage drinking and abusive drinking on college campuses is a very serious issue, and the Pennsylvania legislature recognized that and we certainly didn't question that, I mean, it is an issue of critical importance, it seemed quite unrealistic to think that this regulation, which only applied to the Pitt News and not to these other publications, was tailored sufficiently.

Senator DEWINE. I thank you, Judge. That is an interesting set of facts. I thank you, sir.

Chairman SPECTER. Thank you, Senator DeWine.

Senator FEINSTEIN?

Senator FEINSTEIN. Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman.

I want to try one more time. First of all, let me just say this. Senator Durbin said that Justice Roberts retired the trophy on performance. If that is true, you have retired it on equanimity. I really think you are to be congratulated.

This is in this morning's Washington Post, "Alito Says He Will Keep an Open Mind." But what concerns me, and obviously this is on Roe, is that despite 38 tests, despite 33 years, despite the support of a majority of America, you also said yesterday that precedent is not an inexorable command, and those are the words that Justice Rehnquist used arguing for the overturning of Roe.

My question is, did you mean it that way?

Judge ALITO. The statement that precedent is not an inexorable command is a statement that has been in the Supreme Court case law for a long period of time, and sitting here I can't remember what the origin of it is, but I would bet that it's been—it certainly has been used in cases in which the Court has invoked the doctrine of stare decisis and refused to go ahead and overrule.

Senator FEINSTEIN. I always believe everything I read in the Washington Post.

[Laughter.]

Judge ALITO. Well, that is an important principle, and I—not the principle of believing everything in the Washington Post, but the principle that stare decisis is not an inexorable command, because then we would be stuck with decisions like Plessy, and they couldn't be overruled except through a constitutional amendment.

But when an issue is one that could realistically come up, the people who would be making the arguments on both sides of the issue have a right to have a judiciary of people with open minds, and that means people who haven't announced in advance what they think about the issue, and more importantly, people who are not going to reach a conclusion in the—not going to reach a conclusion until they have gone through the judicial process. And it's not a facade, it's a—it's not a meaningless exercise. It's a very important one.

Senator FEINSTEIN. Let me try this. I would like to read a line of questions that Senator Specter asked now Chief Justice Roberts, and then I would like to ask this question: how do you disagree with this? Here is the question.

Specter: Judge Roberts, in your confirmation hearing for the Circuit Court, your testimony read to this effect, and it has been widely quoted. "Roe is the settled law of the land." Do you mean settled for you, settled only for your capacity as a circuit judge or settled beyond that?

Roberts: Well, beyond that. It's settled as a precedent of the Court, entitled the respect under principles of stare decisis, and those principles applied in the Casey case explain when cases should be revisited and when they should not, and it is settled as a precedent of the Court, yes.

Specter: You went on to say then, "It's a little more than settled. It was reaffirmed in the face of a challenge, that it should be overruled in the Casey decision, so it has added precedential value."

Roberts: I think the initial question for the judge confronting an issue in this area, you don't go straight to Roe decision. You begin with Casey, which modified the Roe framework and reaffirmed its central holding.

Specter says: And you went on to say accordingly, "It's the settled law of the land," using the term settled again. And then your final statement as to this quotation, "There is nothing in my personal views that would prevent me from fully and faithfully applying the precedent as well as Casey."

Where do you differ, since Justice Roberts made that statement in a confirmation hearing. He not only got confirmed, he is the Chief Justice. It seems to me appropriate for you to comment on it and say where you might differ with it.

Judge ALITO. Well, the statement covers a lot of ground, and let me try to remember the major points. I certainly agree with the point—

Senator FEINSTEIN. I can give it to you if you would like? Would that be helpful?

Judge ALITO. Certainly, I would be happy to look at it.

Senator FEINSTEIN. Would someone take it down to him? Show him the place.

[Pause.]

Judge ALITO. Well, Senator, I certainly agree with the point that the Chief Justice made about separating any personal views he has from anything that he would do as a member of the Supreme Court. I emphatically agree with that. That's the essence of what a judge has to do. I certainly agree that Roe and Casey and all of the other decisions in this line are precedents of the Supreme Court, and they are entitled to respect under the doctrine of stare decisis to the extent that some of the earlier decisions have been modified, and obviously, the most recent ones are the relevant provisions of the Supreme Court.

I have agreed, I think, numerous times during these hearings that when a decision is reaffirmed, that strengthens its value as stare decisis. I agree that when the Supreme Court entertains a challenge to a prior decision and says, "We're not getting to re-examination of the merits of the issue, we think stare decisis counsel against our going to that point," then that is a precedent on precedent. That seems to me to be entirely logical, and we have a long line of precedents now relating to this issue.

I have said I think—I have said that stare decisis is a very important legal doctrine, and that there is a general presumption that decisions of the Court will not be overruled. There needs to be a special justification for doing it, but it is not an inexorable command.

Senator FEINSTEIN. But you do not agree that it is well settled in the Court?

Judge ALITO. I think that depends on what one means by the terms "well settled."

Senator FEINSTEIN. I actually agree with you, because others have said that, and then gone out and voted to overthrow it, so it is like saying, "I have no quarrel with that."

Judge ALITO. Let me just say this. As a judge on the court of appeals or if I'm confirmed as a Justice on the Supreme Court, it would be wrong for me to say to anybody who might be bringing any case before my court, "If you bring your case before my court, I'm not even going to listen to you. I've made up my mind on this issue. I'm not going to read your brief. I'm not going to listen to your argument. I'm not going to discuss the issue with my colleagues. Go away, I've made up my mind."

That's the antithesis of what the courts are supposed to do, and if that's what settled means, then I think that's not what judges are supposed to do. We are—

Senator FEINSTEIN. Let me interrupt you for a moment if I may. You were willing to give your view on one man/one vote, and yet there are four cases pending in the court right now on one man/one vote, and that is where I have a hard time. The cases are Lulac v. Perry, Travis County v. Perry, Jackson v. Perry, and GI Form of Texas v. Perry. That is where I have a hard time. If you are willing to say that you believe one man/one vote is well settled, and you agree with it, I have a hard time understanding how you separate out Roe. I understand why. If you say one thing, you upset my friends and colleagues on that side, if you say the other you upset those of us on this side. But the people are entitled to know.

Judge ALITO. I don't think it's appropriate for me to speak about issues that could realistically come up, and my view about Brown v. Board of Education, for example, which was one of the cases that was cited in connection with this issue about where someone in my position should draw the line, seems to me to embody a principle that is now not subject to challenge, not realistically subject to being challenged, not within the legitimate scope of constitutional debate any longer that there should be segregated racial—facilities that are segregated on the basis of race, and that's where I've tried to draw the line. If an issue involves something that is in litigation, then I think it's not appropriate for me to go further than to say that I would be—I would be very respectful of the doctrine of stare decisis, and I would not reach a decision on the underlying issue, if one were to get to it, without going through the whole decision-making process.

Senator FEINSTEIN. OK. I will let you off the hook on that one.

One of the reasons that some of us are so concerned about the Commerce Clause is because we see major law being overturned if the Rehnquist Court continues its march. Let me give you some examples concerning the environment, and these are cases that will be before you, so I do not expect you to comment on the case, but to understand them.

The Clean Water Act was passed in 1972, and it included a provision permitting citizens or citizen groups to bring lawsuits for violation of the Act. In Public Interest Research Group of New Jersey v. Magnesium Electron, a citizen's environmental group sued a chemical manufacturer under the Clean Water Act for polluting a river used by members of the group. The trial court found that the defendant committed 150 Clean Water Act violations. On appeal, you are the decisive vote in a 2–1 decision, overturning the trial court's decision, even though it was undisputed that the defendant committed the 150 violations of the Clean Water Act.

Your decision, as I understand it, was based upon your conclusion that the environmental group did not have standing to sue under the Clean Water Act, because even though members of the environmental group had stopped using the river due to the pollution, they did not prove any injury to the environment. The decision, if broadly applied, would have gutted the citizen lawsuit provision of the Clean Water Act.

Now, 3 years later in Friends of the Earth v. Laidlaw, the Supreme Court, in a 7–2 decision, rejected this reasoning, and held that a citizen only needed to show that he or she was harmed by the Clean Water Act violation, and did not need to prove a broader injury to the environment.

So you see where the concern comes with respect to overthrowing something on a technicality that can have enormous implications. Do you agree with the Supreme Court's decision in Friends of the Earth v. Laidlaw?

Judge ALITO. Well, it's a precedent of the Court, and I have respect for it, and as you mentioned—and it's governed by stare decisis, and as you mentioned, it was decided after the decision of my court in the Magnesium Electron case. And I haven't gone back and thought about the question of whether Laidlaw creates doubt about the soundness of the decision in Magnesium Electron. If it does, then it does, and if the issue were to come up again before the Third Circuit, for example, and I sat on the issue, then I would follow Supreme Court precedent if I concluded that it was in conflict with the decision of the prior court of appeals decision.

We have—our jurisdiction, under the Constitution, is limited to cases and controversies, and the Supreme Court has said that means you have to have a plaintiff who has suffered injury in fact. And although there was a disagreement on the panel about the procedure we should use going forward, everybody on the panel agreed—Judge Roth and I who were in the majority, and Judge Lewis who dissented on a procedural point that I'll get to—that the plaintiffs in that case had not even alleged personal injury. They alleged that they enjoyed the Delaware River in a variety of ways. As I recall, they walked along the canal path, they ate fish from the river, they drank water from the river, but there was no evidence that the discharges into a creek some distance upstream from the river had had any effect whatsoever on the river, and therefore, there was nothing to support a claim that they were personally injured by the discharges of this plant.

Now, there would presumably be other people who could take legal action against the plant for its violations of the law, and nobody would condone that, but our obligation under Article III is to confine ourselves to cases within our constitutional jurisdiction.

Senator FEINSTEIN. Of course you are going to have two cases challenging the application of the Clean Water Act to nonnavigable waters under the Commerce Clause, and as you probably know, we have lost 90 percent of the wetlands in the United States. This is a very big deal. I mean there are many of us that would hate to see wetlands be made virtually impossible because it is very difficult to prove when something becomes navigable, as opposed to nonnavigable, which is kind of the question that is before the Court. I only say that because if this march to restrict Congress continues, you could strike down the Endangered Species Act, you could strike down the Clean Water Act, you could strike down the Clean Air Act, and I think that would be catastrophic for the United States.

If I can, let me just switch to another topic. A year ago all of us became very concerned and involved and some horrified with the Terri Schiavo case, and as I recall the case, the local courts held that her life support could be turned off. The State Supreme Court held the same thing. And then there was an effort—and I think a Federal district court held it—to bring it up to the Supreme Court.

What do you believe the role of the Federal courts should be in the arena of end-of-life decisions?

Judge ALITO. Well, there's a constitutional issue, certainly, at the bottom of that and there are issues of jurisdiction. There are statutory issues and Congress specifies the jurisdiction of the lower courts and so Congress can give us a role in decisions of this nature or Congress can keep the Federal courts out of it and leave it to the State courts where, for the most part, issues in this area have been adjudicated. But if there is a Federal constitutional right involved, then someone may have jurisdiction—then, of course, the Federal courts have traditionally been a forum for the adjudication of Federal constitutional rights.

The underlying statutory—I'm sorry, the constitutional issue is the one that the Supreme Court addressed in the Cruzan case and in the case of Washington v. Glucksburg, and this is obviously one of the most sensitive issues that comes up in our legal system and involves something that a lot of people have had to face and a lot more people are going to have to face decisions involving the end of life, and with the advances in medical technology, this is going to be a very tough issue for an awful lot of people.

In Cruzan, the Court proceeded on—they said, we assume that there is a constitutional right to refuse medical treatment that a person doesn't want, and there certainly has long been a common law right to refuse medical treatment that a person doesn't want. If somebody gives you medical treatment and you say, "I don't want it," and they perform an operation on you or do something like that, that's a battery under the common law and you can be sued, and the Supreme Court assumed that that was a fundamental right under due process but said that there wasn't a violation of the right under the circumstances in Cruzan, where the State of Missouri had imposed certain restrictions—regulations that had to be complied with before a person who was comatose could be taken off life support.

And then in Washington v. Glucksburg, they addressed the issue of whether there was a constitutional right to assisted suicide and they concluded that there was not, that there were—and they applied the standard to be applied under the Due Process Clause or its substantive component, whether a right is firmly rooted in the traditions of our country and implicit in the concept of ordered liberty, but there were some concurring opinions that recognized that these were issues that were on the cutting edge of medical technology, let me put it that way, or they were issues on which more empirical evidence might become relevant in the future.

Senator FEINSTEIN. Thank you very much. I notice I just have 40 seconds left. Will we have another round, Mr. Chairman?

Chairman SPECTER. Well, that is something that—let us talk about. I would very much like to finish today. As I said earlier, that may be an ambitious schedule, but let us talk about it.

Senator FEINSTEIN. Thank you.

Chairman SPECTER. Senator Sessions?

Senator SESSIONS. Thank you, Chairman Specter.

Judge Alito, I want to thank you for your patience and good spirits and your thoroughness in answering questions. You have been very forthcoming. I think very few people could disagree that on case after case that you have been asked about, you have gone as far as you legitimately should go to express your understanding of the law and what is important there.

I know your entire record has been examined extensively. You think about it, the FBI does a background check. They found out every place you lived and talked to your neighbors and checked your criminal history. The Department of Justice has a big inquiry that they do before they submit your nomination to the President, or the President submits your nomination to the Senate. The American Bar Association has interviewed 300 of your colleagues before they made their recommendation that you are well qualified in a unanimous vote. The Senate has its questionnaire. Outside groups look at it and create studies and data. They read everything you have written to find things that they might be unhappy with. So I think, all in all, you are coming through this with very little mud upon you, for which I congratulate you. I think it is something that you can be proud of. Most of us on this side of the aisle would not like to have our record scrutinized in the way yours has been.

I know some of us have made mistakes in our statements already in the hearing, we have to admit. I will admit that I was one of them. I first said that you were ranked No. 4 in being the most independent judge out of 900 judges in the country. As I see the numbers more clearly, you were No. 4 out of 98 appellate judges examined in that system, but that still shows that you are an independent, nonideological judge, willing to—one of the factors they used was whether or not you always agreed with nominees of your party, and so I think that speaks well for your record and that is why you have gained such a broad respect from your colleagues.

I just wanted to briefly mention some of these studies that go into your background. People have looked at it, incredibly, to the most minute detail. You were asked earlier about saying that you only rule one out of eight times for immigrants seeking asylum, but looking at the asylum cases nationwide, most of those are the government's position is affirmed. It has already been decided by a lower court or administrative body. You are simply reviewing their decision.

But in immigrant asylum cases nationwide, the court of appeals generally ruled for the asylum-seeker 11 percent of the time. During your record on the bench, you ruled for asylum-seekers 18 percent of the time. In your published opinions, the average court of appeals judge in America ruled for immigrants 8 percent of the time. In your published opinions, you ruled for them 19 percent of the time.

I think this not only shows that the charges against you there are not well placed, it shows just how carefully your record is being examined by people as you move through the system.

Another example, civil rights. I think your critics have cherry-picked from some of your 4,800 cases that you have ruled on. In your opinions on civil rights, your panel was unanimous 90 percent of the time, and when you sat on a panel where both the other judges were Democratic appointees, your decision was unanimous 100 percent of the time. So I think that speaks well for your overall record on civil rights. It certainly would indicate that you are not hostile to a legitimate civil rights complaint.

You were asked about one environmental case by Senator Feinstein, and you ruled on that case based on standing. That is an important issue in the legal system, don't you agree?

Judge ALITO. It is—

Senator SESSIONS. It is a well recognized principle.

Judge ALITO. It is a constitutional principle.

Senator SESSIONS. It does not have to do with whether you were for or against the environmental issue in question, but simply whether the person bringing the suit was a legitimate person to bring that suit.

Judge ALITO. That's right, and it doesn't have anything to do with Congress's power to regulate the environment under the Commerce Clause. That's a separate question. Congress—it's totally separate. One has to do with the scope of congressional power. The other has to do with who can bring the suit.

Senator SESSIONS. And with regard to environmental cases, you have rendered, according to one of these studies, you have authored six environmental opinions. You sided with the environmental regulatory body in five of those six opinions. Indeed, Professor Cass Sunstein, who has served as an advisor to the Democratic members of this Committee on changing the ground rules of confirmation, which was really a precursor to the commencement of a filibuster, Professor Cass Sunstein said this about you. Quote, "This is a judge who, if the text is pro-environment, he is very likely to follow it. This is not someone who, like some judges, has a kind of probusiness orientation in his approach to the law." I think that is also a statement that you can take pride in.

I would offer for the record, Mr. Chairman, another article by Stuart Taylor of the National Journal, Monday, December 12, in which he, in a very effective way, dismisses much of the complaints that have been made against Judge Alito—

Chairman SPECTER. Without objection, that will be made part of the record.

Senator SESSIONS. He says the systematic—this is his quote. "The systematic slanting, conscious or unconscious, of this and many other news reports have helped fuel a disingenuous campaign by liberal groups and Senators to caricature Alito as a conservative ideologue. In fact, this is a judge who, while surely too conservative for the taste of liberal ideologues, is widely admired by liberals, moderates, and conservatives who know him well as a fair-minded, committed to apolitical judging and wedded to no ideological agenda other than restraint in the exercise of judicial power," close quote. I would offer that for the record.

Also, with regard to your challenges on Vanguard, on matters that have impacted your integrity, I would like to quote from the American Bar Association's interview questionnaires that they did on you among those who know you well. This is what they put in their conclusion. "Conclusion: We accept his explanation and do not believe these matters reflect adversely on him," talking about those conflict allegations. They go on to say, "To the contrary, consistent and virtually unanimous comments from those interviewed include he has utmost integrity, he is a straight-shooter, very honest and calls them as he sees them." These are quotes from different lawyers and judges. "His reputation is impeccable. You could find no one with better integrity. His integrity and character are of the highest caliber. He is completely forthright and honest. His integrity is absolutely unquestionable. He is a man of great integrity.” And then they conclude, “On the basis of our interviews with Judge Alito and with well over 300 judges and lawyers and members of the legal community nationwide, all of whom know Judge Alito professionally, the Standing Committee concluded that Judge Alito is an individual of excellent integrity.” So congratulations on that finding.

Judge Alito, many important decisions of the Supreme Court in recent years touch on the deepest values of the American people. They deal with things like Kelo and the property that they own, matters of faith and morality, decency and pornography. Do you have a sense of where the American people are with regard to these issues? Can you indicate to us that you have any appreciation for the legitimacy of some of those concerns?

Judge ALITO. Well, I do, Senator, and I—

Senator SESSIONS. Regardless of the technical laws it involves, but just that fundamental policy.

Judge ALITO. I think I have an appreciation of people’s concerns. Certainly with respect to Kelo, which is a recent decision and I can’t comment on how I would rule on any matter concerning that, and it involves the power to take property for public use through eminent domain, I certainly understand that what occurred in that case, which, as I understand it, was the taking of the homes of people of modest means for the purpose of building a large commercial facility that would be—that was thought by the city to be beneficial to the economic welfare of the city, but this is an enormous blow to the people whose homes are being taken. People live in homes and they have a sentimental attachment to them. They have memories that are attached to the homes. They can remember what happened in particular rooms. The neighborhood means something to them, the neighbors mean something to them. The things in the home mean something to them. And taking their home away and giving them money in return, even if they get fair market value for the home, is still an enormous loss for people. So I certainly can appreciate what they feel in that respect.

Senator SESSIONS. Well, let’s talk about that a little bit. Because this is a matter of real power and it is a matter that the Congress gets drawn into sometimes whether we want to be drawn into it or not. We have discussed Roe v. Wade, people remain concerned about that. The polling numbers continue to drift against that decision. We talk about the district court opinion I believe Senator Brownback raised, a Federal court, on marriage, on redefining the traditional statutory definition on marriage contained in States and in State constitutions around the country. In Kelo, it is pretty clear to me that the Court just changed the meaning of the words. The Constitution said you could take property for public use; the Court felt that was too restrictive, basically, and a majority just changed it to say you could take property for a public purpose, which could include some private redevelopment on the area, in their minds.

See, that is not founded in the Constitution. That is an overreach, in my opinion. On the Pledge of Allegiance case, the Newdow case, the Ninth Circuit, which includes approximately 20 percent of the people in the United States, ruled that the Pledge of Allegiance was unconstitutional. The Supreme Court sort of side-stepped the fundamental issue and said that there was not standing on behalf of Mr. Newdow, and sent that back to a lower court. He now got him some plaintiffs that apparently have standing. He has taken it to the district court in California, and he has won that case. They have concluded that the Ninth Circuit law remains in effect so that 20 percent of the population of the United States, really, are not able, if you follow that opinion, to render the Pledge of Allegiance. Yet we have chaplains and In God We Trust in the Senate chamber and those kind of issues.

So I don't believe that that is founded in the Constitution. I think the American people do not. And they are asking some real questions of us. So I guess I won't try to get you drawn into those.

But I want to do this. The doctrine of judicial review, Marbury v. Madison. You already indicated Hamilton didn't favor that. But the Court found it. But it is not expressly stated in the Constitution, is it?

Judge ALITO. No, it's not.

Senator SESSIONS. And it definitely shifts the balance of power between the branches because the Court now has the power to, by a stroke of its pen, five of its nine members, to strike down any law they say violates the Constitution. That is true, is it not?

Judge ALITO. Well, they decide constitutional questions, and the doctrine has been established since Marbury v. Madison, that's right.

Senator SESSIONS. Well, but there are explicit powers given to the Congress. And Senator Coburn raised some of those. Article III, Section 2 has these words: "In all the other Cases before mentioned,"—this is the Constitution's grant of power to the courts—"the supreme Court shall have appellate Jurisdiction, both as to Law and Fact, with such Exceptions, and under such Regulations as the Congress shall make."

Now, those words are in the Constitution, are they not?

Judge ALITO. Yes, they are.

Senator SESSIONS. And as you said, if the words are expected to have some meaning, you would give them some meaning, at least, would you not?

Judge ALITO. I think that's undisputed, that they have a meaning.

Senator SESSIONS. So Congress has some power here. We have not exercised that power, certainly in recent years. In Ex Parte McCordle, the Supreme Court in 1869 agreed that, though the judicial power is conferred by the Constitution, it is conferred under such exceptions as Congress shall make. Then there is the Impeachment power—the Senator mentioned that. And then the establishment of lower courts. Article III, Section 1 says, "The judicial Power of the United States, shall be vested in one supreme Court, and in such inferior Courts as Congress may from time to time establish." That indicates that Congress can establish or disestablish courts, does it not?

Judge ALITO. I think it's undisputed that the so-called inferior courts—and I don't particularly like the term as a judge of the court of appeals—but the so-called inferior courts are totally the creation of Congress.

Senator SESSIONS. Now I would just ask you to comment on this thought. Chief Justice Roberts, in his hearings—and I asked him some questions similar to this—indicated that he was concerned about activism by the Court, overreaching by the Court, and he felt that this overreaching had the—created a danger that it could undermine respect for law in our country. Do you share that view?

Judge ALITO. I agree that overreaching by the courts can undermine respect for law. Our authority is based on the belief that what we are doing is different from what Congress is doing. Because otherwise, why would people tolerate our functioning? Nobody elects us. And we have a system of Government that is fundamentally democratic. It's based on the sovereignty of the people. So how do you explain an unelected branch of Government making decisions?

So all of our authority is based on the idea, which was expressed in Marbury v. Madison, that the Constitution is law. It's not conceptually different from statutory law. And our job is to interpret the Constitution—it has a meaning—and apply it to the situations that come up.

Senator SESSIONS. Well, right now there is a strong feeling that I share that the Court on some very important issues that people care deeply about is exceeding its authority. They are calling on me and members of—and those of us in Congress to do something about it. I get a lot of letters saying withdraw jurisdiction, why aren't you supporting legislation to do that? And Congress, I think, has shown restraint.

But I hope that when you become a member of this august body, the Supreme Court—and I believe you will—that you will take those concerns with you and share with the members of the Court that their views on policy issues are of no greater value than mine, frankly—at least in my opinion they are not—and that the Congress has been showing some restraint here. But we really want the Court to be more modest and to draw back from some of its intervention in policy issues that are causing much angst around the country.

If you want to comment on that. Otherwise, Mr. Chairman, I would yield my time.

Judge ALITO. Well, Senator, I think your policy views are much more legitimate than the policy views of the judiciary because Members of Congress are elected for the purpose of formulating and implementing public policy. And members of the judiciary are appointed for the purpose of interpreting and applying the law.

Senator SESSIONS. Thank you very much.

Chairman SPECTER. Thank you, Senator Sessions.

We will now stand in recess until 4:20.

[Recess 4:04 p.m. to 4:20 p.m.]

Chairman SPECTER. The hearing will resume.

We will turn to Senator Feingold for 20 minutes.

Senator FEINGOLD. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Good afternoon, Judge. I hope, if nothing else, you associate me with breaks in the proceedings, because it seems to happen every time my questions are up.

Judge, yesterday I asked you about your preparation for these hearings over the past few months with a variety of practice sessions. You confirmed that you had had these sessions and that a great variety of subjects came up in them, and that is fine. I know this is not an easy process, and I would certainly expect you to prepare in this way.

What I want to ask now, though, is simply if you can provide a list of all the people who participated in any of those practice sessions, and I would request that the folks here sitting behind you in back of the Department of Justice help you put that list together this evening and get it to us tomorrow morning so that we have time to ask about it during tomorrow's session, if necessary. Can you do that for me, Judge?

Judge ALITO. I certainly have no objection to that.

Senator FEINGOLD. Thank you very much. Now I want to get into a subject that really requires some attention here and hasn't had much attention given the important role that it plays in the job of a Supreme Court Justice, and that is the issue of capital punishment or the death penalty.

Judge Alito, the idea that defendants are entitled to effective legal representation is a fundamental part of our criminal justice system. In fact, of course, it is enshrined in the Sixth Amendment's guarantee that the accused have "the assistance of counsel for his defense." Nowhere is this guarantee obviously more important than in cases where the defendant's life is on the line. In a death penalty case you decided in 2004 called Rompilla v. Horn, you rejected the defendant's argument that his attorneys had failed to do an adequate investigation to prepare for his sentencing hearing. As a result, key mitigating evidence about his horrible childhood was never presented to the sentencing jury, which ultimately sentenced him to death.

As you know, the Supreme Court reversed your decision, ruling that the defense attorney's failure to even review evidence they knew the prosecution was going to introduce at sentencing violated the Sixth Amendment. This case was one of several Supreme Court cases in recent years to express particular concern—particular concern about the adequacy of indigent representation and the fairness of the capital sentencing process.

In fact, in several recent decisions, including Rompilla, the Court has overturned death sentences because defense attorneys did not do adequate investigations to turn up potential mitigating evidence and because jury instructions did not clearly allow jurors to consider any and all possible mitigating evidence. And Justice O'Connor, whom you have been nominated to replace, has, of course, often been the author or the deciding vote in these cases.

Judge, what are your views on these issues? Is the Court's recent emphasis on the importance of fully developing and considering mitigating evidence in capital sentencing proceedings headed in the right direction?

Judge ALITO. It is vitally important that all criminal defendants receive effective representation, and I could not agree with you more strongly that this is of the utmost importance in death penalty cases where so much is at stake.

In the Rompilla case that you mentioned, we had to apply the standard of review that is set out in the habeas corpus statute as revised by Congress. And where there has been a determination on the merits by the State courts on an issue like whether a defendant received effective representation within the meaning of the Sixth Amendment and where the State courts have applied the correct legal standard, we are not allowed to disturb their decision unless what they did was unreasonable.

Senator FEINGOLD. Well, let me ask you then, because you are obviously pointing out the fact that you approached the Rompilla case as an appellate court judge bound by prior Supreme Court precedent, and yet you found that no constitutional violation had occurred. And I believe when we discussed this case in my office, you indicated you still think your decision was correct.

So the question now is: Would your approach have been any different as a Supreme Court Justice? What about your decision on the outcome of the case?

Judge ALITO. Well, my decision, I spoke directly to the issue in the Rompilla case as I saw it when it came before me. And my evaluation of the performance of the attorneys in that case was fully set out in the opinion that I wrote. They were—one of them was a very experienced criminal defense attorney. He was the head of the public defender's office, and there was no dispute whatsoever that this was an attorney of competence and experience and great dedication to the defendant in this case, and that attorney was assisted by another attorney in the office, and together they were extremely dedicated to this case.

Now, a number of judges took a look at this. All of the Pennsylvania judiciary, with the possible exception of one justice—I can't remember clearly whether there was one justice who disagreed—thought that there had been effective representation provided in this case.

Senator FEINGOLD. This really isn't about the difference between being on the court of appeals and the Supreme Court. You apparently, based on what you know, would have ruled the same way had you been on the Supreme Court.

Judge ALITO. Well, my evaluation of the facts of the case would be the same. Now, if a case came—

Senator FEINGOLD. In other words, that there was not a violation of the Sixth Amendment.

Judge ALITO. Well, I should add, however, that if a case came up in the future, the Supreme Court's decision in that case is a precedent that I would have to deal with. And they—

Senator FEINGOLD. Fair enough.

Judge ALITO [continuing]. Expressed a view as to how the standard applies to the facts of the case. It was a 5–4 decision. But it would be a precedent that I would follow.

Senator FEINGOLD. Well, now let's go back to my original question, which is, Do you think the Supreme Court has been heading in the right direction in these cases?

Judge ALITO. Well, I think that the Supreme Court is correct in viewing this as a very important part of the criminal justice system, and in particular, a very important part of the representation of clients in Eighth Amendment cases.

Senator FEINGOLD. Isn't the Court doing more than that? The Court is moving in the direction of giving greater recognition and ruling on the inadequacy of counsel in this case.

Judge ALITO. And I think it's entirely appropriate that there be a searching review in every case as to whether a defendant in any criminal case, but in particular, of course, in a capital case, has received the representation that the defendant is entitled to under the Sixth Amendment.

Senator FEINGOLD. Do you think your replacing Justice O'Connor will change the direction of the Court in this regard?

Judge ALITO. I would approach these cases under the law that the Supreme Court has established in this area, with the recognition that I have attempted to explain of how important I believe this right is in all cases and in death cases in particular. When the Supreme Court reviews a case that has come up through the Federal system, in a habeas proceeding, then the Supreme Court, just like my court, should apply the standards that are set out in the habeas corpus statute.

Senator FEINGOLD. Let's go to a different one. Wiggins v. Smith is a Supreme Court case decided in 2003 also addressing inadequate mitigation investigation. In that case, Justice O'Connor, writing for the majority, found trial counsel ineffective for failing to conduct an adequate investigation into possible mitigating evidence that could be presented at sentencing. Had the attorney done adequate investigation, he would have found abundant evidence of childhood physical and sexual abuse as well as diminished mental capacity. Do you think that case was right decided?

Judge ALITO. Well, I discussed Wiggins in Rompilla, and I thought that it was distinguishable. Wiggins, as described, as I recall it, was a case where the attorney had reason—the attorney simply didn't conduct an investigation without any sound strategic reason for not investigating a particular matter.

Senator FEINGOLD. So you have no sense that that was wrongly decided?

Judge ALITO. I have no sense that that was wrong. I thought it was different from the Rompilla case.

Senator FEINGOLD. According to two independent studies, your record in death penalty cases has been more anti-capital defendant even than most Republican-appointed judges. In fact, in every disputed capital case that you heard, that is, cases in which a panel of three judges did not all agree, you would have ruled against the defendant. How do you explain this seeming tendency to favor the Government in capital cases?

Judge ALITO. I have only sat on a handful of capital cases, and in some of them I voted to uphold the death penalty, and in a number of them I voted to strike down the death penalty. In Carpenter v. Vaughn, I voted to strike down the death penalty. In the most recent death penalty case I sat on, the Bronshstein case, I voted to strike down the death penalty because of the procedure that was followed at the penalty phase in that case. In the Cruz case, I was part of a panel that vacated a decision of the district court rejecting the claim of a habeas petitioner. There have been other cases where I voted to uphold the death penalty.

Senator FEINGOLD. Justice Stevens recently gave a speech at the American Bar Association in which he raised a number of serious concerns about the administration of the death penalty. He pointed to aspects of capital proceedings that he believes unfairly tilt the balance in favor of the prosecution both at the trial and sentencing stages. Specifically, he raised concerns about the jury selection process, arguing that jurors are questioned so extensively about the death penalty that they might assume their role is primarily to decide this sentence for a presumptively guilty defendant.

He also argued that a representation of indigent defendants remains an issue that has not been adequately addressed, and he noted that elected State judges may have a “subtle bias” in favor of death because they have to face re-election.

Now, I know all of us on this Committee have the greatest respect for State court judges, but we all can understand the pressures of a re-election campaign. So what are your views on the potential of these three issues—the jury selection, the inadequate representation, and an elected judiciary—to skew a capital prosecution against the defendant? And do you share these concerns that Justice Stevens outlined?

Judge ALITO. I certainly share a concern that there should be a fair procedure for the selection of jurors. That certainly is a concern. The issue of the election of judges at the State level or the appointment of judges at the State level is a matter for State legislatures to decide, and within my circuit, we have three States. In New Jersey and in Delaware, the State judiciary is appointed; in Pennsylvania, the State judiciary is elected. And I’ve had the opportunity to view the work of all three of the Supreme Courts in those States, and I think they all are of a very high quality. I think the elected judges in Pennsylvania do a conscientious effort to carry out their responsibilities, and I think—I have a high regard for the judiciary in all of those States.

So based on the experience of—on my experience, I think you can have highly competent and certainly conscientious State judges who are appointed and the same sort of judges who are elected. And, of course, we do have habeas corpus and it is an important—it’s important to make sure that constitutional rights are respected, and the scope of the review that we conduct under habeas is up to Congress. Congress reformulated the standards in the AEDPA, in the Antiterrorism and Effective Death Penalty Act of 1996, limiting our review, and it’s our obligation to conduct the kind of review that Congress has indicated we should be conducting.

Senator FEINGOLD. Well, Judge, it sounds like you perhaps have a lesser level of concern about some of these matters than Justice Stevens. The only thing I would note is that one of the most striking things about the history of Justices that have gone to the Court sometimes who are pro-death penalty, an amazing number have come to the conclusion that this is the one area where, once they get there, they realize that these problems are much more severe than they might have thought before they became Supreme Court Justices, and I, should you be confirmed, look forward to how you react to these issues after you’ve become a Supreme Court Justice, should you do so.

In the past few years, the Supreme Court has limited the application of the death penalty based on the Eighth Amendment's ban on cruel and unusual punishment. In Atkins v. Virginia, the Court ruled that mentally retarded inmates cannot be executed, and in Roper v. Simmons, it held that individuals who were minors when they committed capital crimes cannot be executed as punishment for their actions.

Do you agree with these decisions?

Judge ALITO. Those decisions applied the standard that the Supreme Court formulated sometime earlier in determining whether the imposition of the death penalty on particular categories of defendants would violate the Eighth Amendment, and they looked to evolving standards of decency. And that is a line of precedent in the Supreme Court, and those are precedents of the Supreme Court, and they're entitled to the respect of stare decisis.

Senator FEINGOLD. Can you just tell me what your general approach to the Eighth Amendment would be in the context of the death penalty?

Judge ALITO. My approach would be to work within the body of precedent that we have. As I mentioned earlier, the Supreme Court has devoted a lot of attention to this issue since 1976 when it held that the death penalty is permissible, provided that adequate procedures are implemented by the States so that the decision about who receives the death penalty and who does not is not arbitrary and capricious, so that there is a rationality to the selection process. And the rules in this area are quite complex, but I would work within the body of precedent that is available.

Senator FEINGOLD. Let me go to a topic that we have talked about before. We had a good discussion of the recusal issue in the Vanguard case yesterday, and I hadn't intended to ask more about it. But your discussions with Senator Kennedy and Senator Hatch today make further questioning a little bit necessary.

Senator Hatch noted that the Committee's questionnaire asked about financial conflicts of interest during the period of your initial service as a judge. Now, the reason for wording the question like that, of course, is that nominees have no way of knowing when they are up for confirmation whether they will have the same investments 5, 10, 25 years later. The Committee obviously can't ask for a comprehensive list of possible future financial conflicts. So, for example, if you have stock in Microsoft and you list that as a financial conflict on your questionnaire, you still have to recuse yourself from a Microsoft case 15 years later if you still have the stock. Isn't that right?

Judge ALITO. If you're required to recuse yourself if you have stock in Microsoft, even one share, you must recuse yourself.

Senator FEINGOLD. You still have to recuse yourself even if it is 15 years later, right?

Judge ALITO. Certainly that's true.

Senator FEINGOLD. So the question in the Senate questionnaire about financial investments is not time-limited based on the question being about initial service on the court, is it?

Judge ALITO. Well, I want to be clear on my answer respecting this as it bears on the Monga case, the Vanguard case, because that's what we're discussing.

The wording of the Senate questionnaire was not the reason for the way I settled the case, and I've tried—

Senator FEINGOLD. I just want to know if you have any question in your mind why the question is phrased that way on the questionnaire.

Judge ALITO. Reading the question, it does seem to me that “initial period of service” is a temporal limitation.

Senator FEINGOLD. I want to be sure we don't leave the impression from these hearings that people don't have an obligation to recuse themselves from a financial conflict just because of the passage of time. You have already indicated if that financial conflict continues, that is an indefinite and permanent restriction until that financial holding is gone. Isn't that—

Judge ALITO. Absolutely, and that's under the Code of Judicial Conduct, Canon 3(C)(3) I think it is. If you have a financial interest, you must recuse yourself, and that's, of course, a continuing obligation.

Senator FEINGOLD. It is not temporal?

Judge ALITO. The obligation to comply with the code of conduct for Federal judges applies to every Federal judge for as long as they serve.

Senator FEINGOLD. And that is why I have to say that I am a bit frustrated that people are trying to obscure what I think was pretty clear testimony by you yesterday by bringing up this period of initial service issue. In response to Senator Kennedy, you made it clear again that your failure to recuse in the Vanguard case had nothing to do with the suggestion that your promise was time-limited. But I want to get this on the record again, and hopefully this will lay any confusion to rest. This idea that your promise to the Committee was somehow limited to your initial service on the court, that was not the reason you failed to recuse yourself from the case in 2002, was it?

Judge ALITO. It was not the reason in 2002. I do think reading the question, it has a temporal limitation. If that wasn't the intent, I think people could read it—certainly when you say “initial period of service,” people will read that to mean—

Senator FEINGOLD. This has nothing to do with why you didn't recuse yourself.

Judge ALITO. It did not have to do with what I did in the Monga case.

Senator FEINGOLD. And it is not as if you noticed that Vanguard was a party, remembered your promise to the Committee, and then made a specific decision not to recuse because the promise had expired?

Judge ALITO. No, it was not that at all.

Senator FEINGOLD. And you finally added Vanguard to your standing recusal list in December 2003 and it is on your list today. Isn't that right?

Judge ALITO. It is on my list today.

Senator FEINGOLD. Do you plan to recuse yourself from Vanguard cases that come before the Supreme Court if you are confirmed for as long as you keep your Vanguard mutual funds?

Judge ALITO. Well, if I am confirmed, I will very strictly comply with the ethical obligations that apply to Supreme Court Justices.

Supreme Court recusals are a bit different from recusals in the court of appeals, and so the obligation to sit when you are not recused is one that has to be considered very seriously by somebody on the Supreme Court or, I would think, on a State supreme court, for example.

Senator FEINGOLD. Is there any question, if you still have holdings in Vanguard and a case comes before the Supreme Court that you should recuse yourself?

Judge ALITO. Well, under the Code of Judicial Conduct, I don't believe that I am required to recuse myself in Vanguard cases. And I would strictly comply with the ethical obligations that apply to a Supreme Court Justice.

Senator FEINGOLD. You are not going to make a promise here that you are not going to rule on Vanguard cases while you have holdings in Vanguard when you are on the Supreme Court?

Judge ALITO. Well, what I want to say about recusals on the Supreme Court is that the decisionmaking process on the Supreme Court, or any court with a fixed membership, a fixed number of jurists who sit on each case, recusal in that situation creates—affects the decisionmaking process because instead of having 9 Justices, you have 8, you have the potential for a tie.

On the court of appeals, that is a much less significant consideration because we always sit in panels of three, we have many judges on our court and many cases, so if I don't sit on a case involving Vanguard, it just means somebody else will sit on the case involving Vanguard, it will still be decided by a three-judge panel.

Senator FEINGOLD. I would add on that point that that may be true, but it is also true that the Supreme Court is the last stop, and if somebody does not recuse himself, there is really no remedy, and that is why it is so important that somebody would recuse himself.

Judge ALITO. It is very important for somebody on the Supreme Court to fulfill strictly the obligation not to sit when the person should not sit, but it's also important for—given the matters that I just discussed—for a Justice to sit if the Justice is not required to recuse.

Senator FEINGOLD. Judge, my time is up.

Mr. Chairman, we do not yet have the communication from Judge Alito to the clerk on December 10th, 2003 that caused Vanguard to be added to his standing recusal list, and whether that was an e-mail or a form that Judge Alito filled out or something else, we have requested it, so I am just asking for the assistance of the Chairman in getting that document so we can complete the record.

Chairman SPECTER. Senator Feingold, we will take a look at it and see what the facts are.

Senator FEINGOLD. Thank you.

Chairman SPECTER. Thank you, Senator Feingold.

Senator GRAHAM?

Senator GRAHAM. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Judge Alito, maybe we could continue with the Vanguard issues just for a moment, and I know you have been asked every conceivable combination of questions, but Senator Feingold is very sincere about ethics in Government. He practices what he preaches, and he has been one of the leaders trying to make this place operate better. My impression of you is that you are a good model for judges in terms of ethical conduct based on what everybody says who knows you. I do not claim to be a close associate of yours, but the ABA has looked at this and said that it did not reflect poorly on you. Three hundred lawyers and judges who know you have said that you are just really sort of what we want in a judge, and maybe that is not enough, but that is a pretty good start. I do not think you could get 300 people to say that about me or some of us, but.

The question I have, the criminal prosecutor or lawyer in me has this question to ask: why would you make a conscious decision not to recuse yourself? Why would Judge Alito sit down in the corner of a room and say, "I think I've got a conflict, but I'm just going to let it go and hear the case anyway?" I am baffled as to why you would make a conscious decision in this situation not to recuse yourself. Do you have an explanation?

Judge ALITO. There's no reason why I would make such a conscious decision. I had nothing whatsoever to gain by participating in this case, and nobody has suggested that I did. This case involved some thousands of dollars. Vanguard manages billions of dollars of funds. The idea that the outcome of this case could have some effect on the mutual funds that I hold is beyond preposterous, and I don't understand anybody to have suggested anything like that.

Senator GRAHAM. I have been asking myself that question quietly, what is in it for this guy? Why would he bring all of this grief upon himself consciously? Is it to intentionally break a promise to the Senate so you would go through hell for 3 days? I do not think so. So I am going to accept your word, like the ABA, and I am going to move on, and I do not know if anybody else will.

Now, your days at Princeton, the more I know about Princeton, it is an interesting place.

[Laughter.]

Senator GRAHAM. What is an eating society?

Judge ALITO. It's a—the eating clubs are privately owned facilities where upperclassmen join for the purpose of taking their meals. The first 2 years, when I was there—the situation is now a bit more diversified as far as eating is concerned—but when I was there, and traditionally, the freshmen and sophomores ate in university dining halls, and then as juniors and seniors they had to find other places to eat, and these were private facilities.

Senator GRAHAM. What is a selective eating society?

Judge ALITO. It's one where you apply to be a member like a fraternity, and you go through a process that is somewhat similar to that, and they select you if they like you.

Senator GRAHAM. Were you a member of a selective eating society?

Judge ALITO. No, I was not.

Senator GRAHAM. Did people not like you, or—

[Laughter.]

Senator GRAHAM [continuing]. You just did not apply?

Judge ALITO. I didn't apply.

Senator GRAHAM. Let me tell you who did apply. Donald Rumsfeld was a member of a selective eating society at Princeton, and that is an interesting comment I thought. Woodrow Wilson, Jim Leach, good friend of mine over in the House. Mitch Daniels, the Governor of Indiana, was a member of a nonselective eating society. Senator Claiborne Pell was a member of nonselective eating societies. And other Princeton alumni who are Members of Congress could not verify their participation or lack thereof in eating clubs, including Senator Sarbanes, Bond, Frist and Representative Marshall, and I promise you, I will get to the bottom of that before this is all done.

[Laughter.]

Senator GRAHAM. This organization that was mentioned very prominently earlier in the day, did you ever write an article for this organization?

Judge ALITO. No, I did not.

Senator GRAHAM. Some quotes were shown from people who did write for this organization that you disavowed. Do you remember that exchange?

Judge ALITO. I disavow them. I deplore them. I—they represent things that I have always stood against, and I can't express too strongly.

Senator GRAHAM. If you do not mind, the suspicious nature that I have is that you may be saying that because you want to get on the Supreme Court, that you are disavowing this now because it does not look good. Really, what I would look at to believe you or not—I am going to be very honest with you—is how have you lived your life? Are you really a closet bigot?

Judge ALITO. I'm not any kind of a bigot. I'm not—

Senator GRAHAM. No, sir, you are not. And you know why I believe that? Not because you just said it, but that is a good enough reason because you seem to be a decent, honorable man. I have reams of quotes from people who have worked with you, African-American judges—I have lost my quotes, I do not know where they are—but glowing quotes about who you are, the way you have lived your life, law clerks, men and women, black and white, your colleagues who say that “Sam Alito, whether I agree with him or not, is a really good man.”

And do you know why I believe you when you say that you disavow those quotes? Because of the way you have lived your life and the way you and your wife are raising your children. Let me tell you this, guilt by association is going to drive good men and women away from wanting to sit where you are sitting. And we are going to go through this ourselves as Congressmen and Senators. People are going to take the fact that we got a campaign donation from somebody who is found out to be a little different than we thought they were, and our political opponents are going to say, “Aha, I got you.” And we are going to say, “Wait a minute. I didn't know that. I didn't take the money for that reason.” You know what? I am going to believe these Senators and Congressmen for the most part because that is the way we do our business. We meet people here every day. We have photos taken with people, and sometimes you wish you did not have your photo taken. But that does not mean that you are a bad person because of that association.

Judge Alito, I am sorry that you have had to go through this. I am sorry that your family has had to sit here and listen to this.

Let's talk about another time not so long ago, and another judge, and some of her writings, and see if the Senate is changing for the better or for the worse. Justice Ginsburg, who I need to go have a cup of coffee with because I constantly bring her up, and I do not dislike the lady, I admire her. But let's put it bluntly, under today's environment from a conservative's point of view, she would have a very hard time, because Justice Ginsburg was the General Counsel for the ACLU from 1973 to 1980, and if you want me to tar somebody by their association, I can put up some pretty wild cases from my point of view where she was involved. But you know what? I respect her because her job as an attorney for the ACLU is to represent the most unpopular causes. As far as I can tell, during her time with the ACLU, she was honest, she was ethical, and she fought for the most unpopular causes, and for that, I respect her.

But you put some things down on an application about your view of the law in Roe v. Wade, and it is taking an unbelievable effort on your part, I think, to convince people that when I was a lawyer I did this, when I applied for a job I was doing this, and as a judge I will do this.

Here is what Justice Ginsburg said in an article she wrote titled "Some Thoughts on Autonomy and Equality in Relationship to Roe v. Wade." "The conflict, however, is not simply one between a fetus's interest and a woman's interest, narrowly conceived. Nor is the overriding issue State versus private control of a woman's body for a span of 9 months. Also in the balance is a woman's autonomous charge of her full life's course, her ability to stand in relation to man, society and the State as an independent self-sustaining equal citizen."

She wrote further, "As long as the Government paid for childbirth, the argument proceeded, public funding could not be denied for abortion, often a safer and always a far less expensive course short and long term. By paying for childbirth but not abortion, the Government increased spending and intruded upon or steered a choice. Roe had ranked as a woman's fundamental right. The public funding of abortion decisions appear"—denying a requirement of public funding appear "incongruous following so soon after the intrepid 1973 ruling. The Court did not adequately explain why the fundamental choice principle and trimester approach embraced in Roe did not bar the sovereign, at least at the previability stage of pregnancy, from taking sides and being required to provide funding for the abortions of poor women."

If that writing does not suggest an allegiance to Roe, if that writing does not suggest from her point of view as the author of that article, not only is Roe an important constitutional right, the Government ought to pay for abortions in certain circumstances. If she were here today, and a Democrat President had nominated her, and we take on the role that our colleagues are playing against you, not only would she not have gotten 96 votes, I think she would have been for a very rough experience. And what has changed?

Justice Ginsburg openly expressed a legal theory about Roe v. Wade. My question to you, if I am arguing a case that would alter Roe v. Wade, would I have the ability, because of her prior writings, to ask her to recuse herself based on those writings alone?

Judge ALITO. I don't think you would, Senator. I think it's established that prior writings of a member of the judiciary do not require the recusal of that member of the judiciary.

Senator GRAHAM. I think you are absolutely right, Judge. Let me tell you what she said at the hearing when it was her time to sit where you are sitting. "You asked me about my thinking on equal protection versus individual autonomy. My answer is that both are implicated. The decision whether or not to bear a child is central to a woman's life, to her well-being and dignity. It is a decision that she must make for herself. When Government controls that decision for her, she is being treated as less than a fully adult human responsible for her own choices."

A sentiment that I think our pro-choice colleagues share, a sentiment that I disagree with because I think the decision does affect humanity, and that is the unborn child. I do not question her religion. I do not question her patriotism. She gave an answer that was very honest and was very direct, and pro-life Republicans and pro-life Democrats never thought about disqualifying her. She did not go through what you went through. Pro-life Republicans and pro-life Democrats set her comment aside and judged her based on her whole record and believed she was worthy to sit on the Supreme Court, and she got 96 votes.

And what you have said in your writings about the other side of the issue pales in comparison to what she said before she came to this body.

I don't know how many votes you are going to get. You are going to get confirmed, and it is not going to be 96. Judge Roberts got 78, and I am afraid to say that you are probably going to get less.

To my colleagues, I know abortion is important. It is important to me, it is important to you. I know it is an important central concept in our jurisprudence. But we can't build a judiciary around that one issue. We can't make judges pledge allegiance to one case. We can't expect them to do things that would destroy their independence. You can vote yes, you vote no. You can use any reason you would like. I just beg my colleagues, let us not go down a road that the country can't sustain and the judiciary will not be able to tolerate.

People set aside her writing, set aside her candid statement and gave her the benefit of the doubt that she would apply the law when her time came. She replaced Justice White. We knew that that vote was going to change. I don't think any Republican had any doubt that if there was a Roe v. Wade issue, she would vote differently than Justice White, but you never know.

The one thing I can tell the public about you and John Roberts is that you are first-round NFL draft picks, but I don't know what you are going to do ten or 20 years from now because I think you are men of great integrity, and I may be very well disappointed in some of your legal reasoning, but I will never be disappointed in you if you do your job as you see it fit.

The last thing I am going to read—do you know Cathy Fleming?

Judge ALITO. I do. She was an attorney, a supervisor in the U.S. Attorney's Office in New Jersey.

Senator GRAHAM. Did you ask her to write a letter on your behalf?

Judge ALITO. I did not, no.

Senator GRAHAM. “Judge Alito did not ask me to write this letter. I volunteered.”

[Laughter.]

Senator GRAHAM. I am glad you said that, by the way.

[Laughter.]

Senator GRAHAM. “I am a lifelong Democrat. I am the president-elect of the National Women’s Bar Association. I chair the corporate integrity and the white collar crime group at a national law firm. I do not speak on behalf of either my law firm or the Women’s Bar Association. I speak for myself only. But by providing my credentials as an outspoken women’s rights advocate and liberal-minded criminal defense attorney, I hope you will appreciate the significance of my unqualified and enthusiastic recommendation of Sam Alito for the Supreme Court. Sam possesses the best qualities for judges. He is thoughtful. He is brilliant. He is measured. He is serious. And he is conscious of the awesome responsibility imposed by his position. I cannot think of a better quality for a Supreme Court Justice. It is my fervent hope that politics will not prevent this extraordinary capable candidate from serving as an Associate Justice on the U.S. Supreme Court.”

I share her hope. Thank you. I yield back my time.

Chairman SPECTER. Thank you, Senator Graham.

Senator Schumer?

Senator SCHUMER. Thank you, Mr. Chairman. Thank you, Judge Alito.

First, I want to go over some of the things you said yesterday. Judge Alito, you testified yesterday that you would keep an open mind, isn’t that right?

Judge ALITO. I did and I do.

Senator SCHUMER. Now, are you aware of any nominee in the history of the Republic who has come before the Senate and testified he would keep a closed mind?

Judge ALITO. I am not aware of that, but I can only speak for myself. I will keep an open mind on all issues.

Senator SCHUMER. You also testified yesterday that no one, not even the President, is above the law, right?

Judge ALITO. That’s certainly true.

Senator SCHUMER. Yes. And are you aware of any nominee in the history of this Republic of whatever political philosophy, judicial philosophy, or denomination who has come before the Senate—party denomination—and testified that, actually, there are a few people who are above the law?

Judge ALITO. I am not aware of a nominee like that, Senator.

Senator SCHUMER. And you also testified that the Court should have respect for the Congress, isn’t that right?

Judge ALITO. Yes.

Senator SCHUMER. Do you know of any nominees who came before the Senate and said, “The heck with you guys. I don’t have any respect for the Congress.”

Judge ALITO. Senator, I can only speak for myself, and those are true expressions of what I think.

Senator SCHUMER. I know that, but all I want to say is—and I don’t doubt your sincerity in saying them, but this morning’s newspapers were filled with headlines to the effect you would keep an open mind. I don't find that really to be news, nor do I find it very helpful in figuring out what kind of Justice you would be.

My friends on the other side of the aisle have repeatedly said you have answered over 200 questions. Now it is probably 300. But a response is not an answer, and you have responded to more than 300 questions, but in all due respect, you haven't answered enough of them. So again, I think we ought to make clear that at least to many of us here, we haven't gotten the answers to questions, yes or no, on some important issues.

With that, I would like to return to Roe, something that we discussed yesterday at some length. You did say yesterday that you would keep an open mind. You said, first, you would look at stare decisis and then you would keep an open mind after going through stare decisis. But when I asked you questions about your prior statements to see if you would keep an open mind so I could make a determination, so the American people could make a determination, you really didn't answer the question.

Now, we have heard pledges about having an open mind before. I want to read you one. It is another hearing, someone who sat in your chair. "I have no agenda, Senator. I have tried here as well as in my other endeavors as a judge to remain impartial, to remain open-minded, and I am open-minded on this particular issue." I will bet you can guess who that nominee was, Clarence Thomas on the issue of the Constitution and the right to choose, the very issue I have asked you about, when he sat in that chair 15 years ago.

So someone pledging an open mind doesn't tell us very much, because I think there were a lot of people on this Committee who were surprised—I wasn't there—were surprised by how Justice Thomas ruled based on his testimony. He didn't tell them enough.

Now, yesterday, as you know, I asked you whether you believe today that the Constitution protects the right to an abortion, given that in 1985 you flatly said that it doesn't, and you didn't answer that question. Then I asked you whether the Constitution protects the right to free speech, and you said yes. Then I asked, how could you answer one and not the other, and your answer as to why you could discuss one and not the other was essentially that the words "free speech" appear in the Constitution, but that, and this is your words, "the issue of abortion has to do with the interpretation of certain provisions in the Constitution, the 14th Amendment."

Now, Judge Alito, the words "one person/one vote" are not in the Constitution. You know that. And yet you said yesterday, and I think you repeated today to Senator Kohl and maybe Senator Feinstein, as well, but what you said yesterday was, quote, "I think that one person/one vote is very well settled now in the constitutional law of our country." So you were able to answer on the basis of something as to whether it is settled, not being in the—the words are not in the Constitution.

But you were queried by a few of my colleagues and you had a different explanation. Now, you said you can answer on the other issues because it is settled law. It is not going to come before the Court. So let us go over settled law a little bit.

In case after case, you have been telling us—you have been comfortable telling us that certain cases are settled, and yet you won't use that word with respect to Roe. You have done it in a host of other cases and issues. I will read a few. “So I think that one person/one vote is very well settled now in the constitutional law of our history,” in response to Senator Kohl. “The status of independent agencies, I think, is settled in the case law.” That was in response to Senator Leahy. “But I do think that most of those Commerce Clause cases in the years proceeding Lopez, the ones that come to mind, I think, are well-settled precedents,” in reference to Senator Feinstein. “I think the scope of immunity that the attorney has is now settled by Mitchell v. Forsythe and that’s the law.”

So can you answer the question? Is Roe settled or not? It is less of a concern which way you answer. I would just like you to answer the question. You can say, Roe is not settled. Roe can absolutely be reexamined. I think a lot of people think that is the answer you want to give, but it is controversial and you may not want to give it because it is controversial, even though some of these other issues will come before the Court. Commerce Clause cases will come before the Court. Certain types of one man/one vote cases will come before the Court. Certain types of administrative agencies will come before the Court.

So why is it only when it comes to Roe you can’t tell us whether it is settled, whether it is not settled, or how it is settled, and you can pick any formulation you want. Other judges have commented on Roe being settled. Lindsey Graham pointed out—he is not here, but Ruth Bader Ginsburg talked about her view and she still got a lot of votes on the other side of the aisle. The same might happen to you.

So the question, Judge Alito—
[Laughter.]

Senator SCHUMER. The question, Judge Alito, is why won’t you talk to us about Roe in terms of whether it is settled or not when you will about so many other issues, even issues that would come before the Court?

Judge ALITO. The line that I have tried to draw, and I’ve tried to be as forthcoming as I can with the Committee. I’ve tried to provide as many answers as I could, and obviously, I’m speaking here extemporaneously in response to questions. The line that I have tried to draw is between issues that I don’t think realistically will come before the Court, and on those, I feel more freedom to respond. One person/one vote is an example of that—

Senator SCHUMER. What about Commerce—sorry to interrupt, but we have limited time. What about Commerce Clause? Raich came to the court a couple of years ago. Raich has roots all the way back in Wickard v. Filburn. You talked about Commerce Clause cases being settled.

Judge ALITO. Well, it depends on which Commerce Clause cases you’re talking about. Certainly, the initial Commerce Clause cases that moved away from the pre-New Deal understanding of the Commerce Clause have been on the books for a long time. Maybe I have been more forthcoming than I should have been in some areas, and if that’s the case in providing these extemporaneous answers, I can be faulted for that. But the line that I have to draw, and I think every nominee, including Justice Ginsburg, has drawn, is to say that when it comes to something that realistically could come before the Court, they can't answer about how they would decide that question. That would be a disservice to the judicial process.

Senator SCHUMER. I understand your view. I just think there are some inconsistencies there. I would argue you ought to err on the side of being more forthcoming. This is the last chance we and the American people will have to make a decision before a lifetime appointment.

But I want to move on to another issue also related to Roe. Now, you did say that in 1985, you believed that the Constitution did not protect the right to an abortion, and at that time, you were a mature legal mind. You were 35. You were already a Federal prosecutor. You were serving in the Solicitor General's Office. You had a pretty good understanding of the Constitution. You had argued cases related to Roe before the Supreme Court, I think, 12 times by 1985. So you were a well-seasoned, mature, established legal mind at that time, is that fair to say?

Judge ALITO. Well, Senator, most of what you said is certainly correct, but I had not argued any case involving Roe before the Supreme Court.

Senator SCHUMER. I see. You had argued 12 cases before the Supreme Court?

Judge ALITO. Yes, that's correct.

Senator SCHUMER. Sorry. Now, let me ask you this. When you wrote that statement, you did not, as we discussed yesterday, when you wrote that the Constitution does not protect the right to an abortion, you had no exceptions. So that would mean, at least in 1985, your view then, there would be no constitutional protection for a woman to terminate her pregnancy even if the termination was needed to preserve her future ability to have children, right?

Judge ALITO. Well, Senator, it was a general statement. It didn't go into—it didn't—

Senator SCHUMER. But it had no exceptions. You could make that—

Judge ALITO. It was one sentence and it certainly didn't represent—there was no attempt—

Senator SCHUMER. You didn't write any exception for that situation, correct? It just said, the Constitution does not protect. It was without exception. And yesterday, you didn't argue with me when I mentioned that, without exception.

Judge ALITO. I don't recall you using the word, "without exception."

Senator SCHUMER. I think I did.

Judge ALITO. Senator, it's one—well, I'm not disputing that—

Senator SCHUMER. OK. So if you believe—

Judge ALITO. Could I just answer that question?

Senator SCHUMER. Yes, please.

Judge ALITO. It's one sentence and it certainly is not an attempt to set out a comprehensive view of the subject.

Senator SCHUMER. No, I understand that, but it was a very strong statement. It didn't talk about any exceptions at all, and the way I read that statement, even if a woman was raped by her father, she would have no constitutional protection to have an abortion and terminate that pregnancy. If you believe the Constitution protects no right to an abortion, that would follow, wouldn't it?

Judge ALITO. I think the statement speaks for itself, and it's one sentence and it's not an effort to set out a comprehensive—

Senator SCHUMER. Well, knowing these examples, do you still refuse to distance yourself in any way from a broad, unqualified statement without exception that the Constitution does not protect the right to an abortion, no ands, ifs, or buts is my words, but—

Judge ALITO. What I actually said was that I was proud of my participation in the Thornburgh case in which the government made the argument that it made in the Thornburgh case—

Senator SCHUMER. Right, but you said in the previous sentence of that statement that you personally held those views.

Judge ALITO. That's correct, but what I was talking about there was the Thornburgh case and nothing more than the Thornburgh case.

Senator SCHUMER. I understand, but you haven't rethought the position at all, even knowing these extreme cases and the hardship that it might cause—

Judge ALITO. What you've pointed out is exactly why, if the issue were to come up and one were to get beyond stare decisis, the whole judicial decisionmaking process would have to be gone through. You'd have to know—

Senator SCHUMER. You didn't think that through in 1985?

Judge ALITO. I was not involved in—

Senator SCHUMER. When you wrote the statement. When you wrote that statement.

Judge ALITO. And when I wrote this statement, what I was saying was that I was proud of what I had done in relation to the Thornburgh case, which was to write the memo that the Committee is aware of, which did not argue that Roe should be overruled. It did not argue that the Government should argue that Roe should be overruled, but that the decision should be challenged on other grounds that were quite similar—

Senator SCHUMER. I understand what you wrote, but you also—we can bring the statement up here, but I don't want to go over the thing of yesterday. I would just ask you to think of all the consequences of a broad statement, even from 1985, that the Constitution does not protect the right to an abortion. There is not an exception of health to the mother, not an exception of rape or incest, not an exception of any of these others. I didn't see any of those in your job application.

But I want to conclude on one—

Judge ALITO. Senator, it was one—

Senator SCHUMER. Go ahead, please.

Judge ALITO. It was one sentence, and I think what you're saying highlights the importance of not addressing this until the judicial process takes place where all of this complexity would be taken into account.

Senator SCHUMER. In all due respect, sir, I think it highlights the importance of and obligation to discuss it, particularly in light of a strong statement before, but we will have to differ on that.

I want to go back to the CAP issue in conclusion, because some of the statements just don't add up and I just want to try to figure this out a little better. You graduated from Princeton in 1972. I am just going to state, to save us a little time, a series of facts here. You filled out the application to apply for the job in the Reagan administration in 1985, where you mention membership in that group. Now, is it fair to say you joined sometime around 1972?

Judge ALITO. I think that's very unlikely.

Senator SCHUMER. Unlikely?

Judge ALITO. Very unlikely.

Senator SCHUMER. When do you—you have no idea when you joined?

Judge ALITO. I don't, but if I had done anything substantial in relation to this, including renewing membership or being a member over a lengthy period of time, I feel confident that I would remember that.

Senator SCHUMER. OK. So you don't remember renewing membership, writing out a check at a certain time, getting a magazine, this Prospect magazine, once a month, once a quarter, once a year? You have no recollection of any of that?

Judge ALITO. I don't.

Senator SCHUMER. OK. Well, here is what the—and let me just ask you one other question. I take it in 1985 you were a member of a whole lot of different groups. I mean, you were a member of the Bar Association. You might have been your neighborhood guy, I respect that, maybe a neighborhood association in New Jersey where you lived, maybe other Princeton alumni organizations. In your 1990 application, there are a bunch of other organizations you list as being members of. So you were a member of a whole lot of groups.

Judge ALITO. I was a member of some other groups, not a whole lot—

Senator SCHUMER. Yes, OK, a bunch. More than two?

Judge ALITO. Some other groups, yes.

Senator SCHUMER. OK. Here is what I don't understand. I think here is what a lot of people don't understand. You are a member of other groups. You hardly have any recollection of this organization. And yet, somehow in 1985, you put it on your application. Why did you? Why did you list that particular organization on your application when you have such vague recollection of it? Why didn't you put the National Bar Association—I mean, the American Bar Association or one of the other groups that you were a member of? It wasn't a long list where you were trying to list—you somehow plucked this group, which you now say you have almost no recollection about, and put it on the application, and this group, as we have heard, is controversial. Just try to give us some understanding of your state of mind in 1985, why that group, with its tawdry history even public then, although you said, in all fairness, you didn't know about it, but why that group? Why was it plucked out and put on the application?

Judge ALITO. Well, I deplore all of those statements that were shown on the chart.

Senator SCHUMER. Understood.

Judge ALITO. I would never associate myself with those statements—

Senator SCHUMER. What made you pick that group? I understand. I am not trying to—

Judge ALITO. I think you have to look at the question that I was responding to and the form that I was filling out. I was applying for a position in the Reagan administration, and my answers were truthful statements, but what I was trying to outline were the things that were relevant to obtaining a political position. I mentioned some very minor political contributions. I didn't mention contributions to charitable organizations, and that's not because the contributions to charitable organizations were unimportant. It's just that—

Senator SCHUMER. Can you reach back, because it is an important issue now—it has become one—and try to figure out your state of mind then and what made you pick this organization. What did you—I mean, I see why you picked the Federalist Society. That is obvious. Why did you pick this one?

Judge ALITO. Well, Senator, since I don't remember this organization, I can't answer your question specifically, but I think that the answer to the question lies in the nature of the form that I was filling out and the things that I put. I think the illustration of the political contributions goes right to the point. Why did I mention small political contributions and not charitable contributions?

Senator SCHUMER. Can I ask you—

Judge ALITO. It wasn't that the charitable contributions were less important. It was that they were not as relevant to obtaining a political position.

Senator SCHUMER. Why didn't you put it on your application in 1990? It wasn't there.

Judge ALITO. I didn't remember it.

Senator SCHUMER. But you remembered it from 1972, or whenever you joined, to 1985, formed in 1972. Why I think you probably joined earlier is because of what you said about ROTC, which is a much bigger issue in its early history than its later history. And you remember that. You remember it up until 1985, and then by 1990, you had forgotten it.

Let me just say, I am glad—this is by way of explanation. That is why Senator Kennedy made his request. I am glad, Senator Specter, that you have acceded to it. I think there are unanswered questions here that we really have an obligation to answer, and maybe the documents we get will give us some of those answers. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Judge ALITO. Senator, I have—

Senator SCHUMER. Please.

Judge ALITO. I have told the Committee everything that I can about this organization, and the most important thing I want to tell the Committee is that I have no association with those comments that were made, even if they were made in letters to the editor or in articles that simply represented the views of the authors of those articles. They are not my views now. They never were my views. They represent things that I deplore. I have always deplored any form of racial discrimination or bigotry. I was never opposed to the admission of women to Princeton. After I had been there for a few months, I realized the difference between the non-coeducational atmosphere that was there and the coeducational atmosphere that I had had throughout my prior schooling. When it came time for me to join an eating facility, I chose one that was one of the most coeducational facilities on the campus.

Senator SCHUMER. I just can't figure out why you put this group on here.

Chairman SPECTER. Senator Schumer, your time is up, Senator Schumer.

Senator Cornyn?

Senator CORNYN. Judge Alito, let me tell you how desperate your opponents are to defeat your nomination. Late last Wednesday—or, excuse me, last Thursday, a name of a witness was listed relative to this whole issue of Concerned Alumni of Princeton that included the name of a man named Stephen Dujak. Is that name familiar to you?

Judge ALITO. Not other than from seeing the witness list.

Senator CORNYN. Well, by the end of the day on Friday, his name was gone from the witness list of those witnesses intended to be called by the other party. As it turned out, it was revealed that in April of 2003, that he had authored an op-ed piece for the Los Angeles Times entitled, "Animals Suffer a Perpetual Holocaust," and in that article, he wrote this. He said, "Like the victims of the Holocaust, animals are rounded up, trucked hundreds of miles to the kill floor, and slaughtered. Comparisons to the Holocaust are not only appropriate but inescapable, because whether we wish to admit it or not, cows, chickens, pigs, and turkeys are capable of feeling loneliness, fear, pain, joy, and affection as we are. To those who defend the modern-day Holocaust on animals by saying that animals are slaughtered for food to give us sustenance, I ask if the victims of the Holocaust had been eaten, would that have justified the abuse and murder? Did the fact that lamp shades, soaps, and other useful products were made from their bodies excuse the Holocaust? No. Pain is pain."

Judge Alito, I read that to point out to you the desperation of your opponents. This was to be a principal witness who was going to come in and say why your membership in Concerned Alumni of Princeton was a terrible thing. But the fact is that I think they have stumbled by their overreaching by demonstrating the desperation that they feel and how few ways they have to criticize your testimony, your career, your integrity, and who you are as a person based upon the facts and I think it speaks volumes.

It is clear to me, at least, that part of the reasonings or the rationale given for a "no" vote against you by some on this Committee and perhaps on the floor of the Senate will be that you have not been responsive to questions. We have a chart here that I think is instructive. This is as of 3 p.m. on day two. We couldn't get any more current than that. But as this indicates, so far in this hearing, 441 questions have been asked and 431 have been answered, or 98 percent. Justice Ginsburg, and we have heard a lot about her and what she would answer and would not answer and what her philosophy was, her beliefs, before she was confirmed by the Senate with only three votes against, she had 384 questions asked and she answered 307 of those for an 80 percent answer rate.

You know, listening to the back and forth about whether you have been responsive to questions reminds me of a saying that I heard recently: "I can answer the question, but I can't understand it for you."

In other words, I think you have done, to the best of your ability and to the limits of your ethical responsibility, tried to be responsive to the questions here. Obviously, no one can make that decision but the Senators who will ultimately vote on that. But certainly the public and the world, people all across this great country who may be listening to this hearing and will be judging for themselves both the fairness of the proceeding and your responsiveness to the questions, I believe that they will conclude that not only have you been responsive but that you have been very forthright in answering the questions that have been asked of you, but that, like Justice Ginsburg and others before her, you believe that it is important to maintain the independence of the judiciary, that you are not willing to make the judiciary subservient to the Senate or the Congress in order to get a vote for confirmation. And I applaud you for that.

You know, yesterday I made a mistake. I know Senator Sessions confessed a mistake and, as it turned out, I went over and talked to Senator Biden because I had quoted him and it turned out I didn't quite quote him accurately. But I told him we have corrected the record to make sure it reflected his words, because it is important to me to make sure that we are accurate and we are clear.

But yesterday I made a mistake and referred to you as Judge Scalito. And I was embarrassed by that, and I asked your—begged your pardon for that. For those that may not be in on the joke, the idea is, the argument by some is somehow you are a clone of Judge Scalia. Well, I have found for myself everything we have heard, everything I have come to learn about you is that you are a clone of no one, that you are an individual who is particularly gifted and talented and experienced and someone who has been, notwithstanding the abuse that you suffer during the confirmation process, willing to offer yourself for public service in a very important role, and that is as a member of the United States Supreme Court.

But yesterday my colleague from New York put up some quotes. Now, it was late in the day and I think most of the press had gone—and maybe that is a good thing. People had gotten tired, but you had to still sit here and listen to the questions and respond to those. But he put up a quote, which was relatively innocuous on its face, and it asked about things like do you believe that continuity in the law is important. And you said yes and it seems unarguable to me. But then he said, well, that was a quote from Clarence Thomas. And I suppose that was going to attribute to you all of the baggage that those on the left feel that Justice Thomas carries and all of the views that he has espoused and all of his performance on the bench.

Later, he asked whether you agreed with another quote, and here again it was a sort of black-letter law, good-government quote. And you agreed that, yes, you agreed with that quote. And he said, Ah-ha, Judge Bork said that. Meaning somehow that you were carrying whatever baggage people on the left feel that Judge Bork carries and you somehow embrace or subscribe to everything he believes.

I want to give you an opportunity, Judge Alito, to tell us whether you feel like you are a clone of Judge Scalia, Judge Thomas, Judge Bork, or whether you believe that you are your own man, you come to your own conclusions based on careful study and your experience in the law. Would you comment on that for me, please?

Judge ALITO. Yes, Senator. I am who I am and I'm my own person. And I'm not like any other Justice on the Supreme Court now or anybody else who served on the Supreme Court in the past. I don't think any jurist is a duplicate of any other jurist. I think that the Committee and anybody who's interested in the sort of judge I am can get a very clear picture of that by looking at my record on the court of appeals. And I've been on the court of appeals for 15 years and have sat on over 4,000 cases. And most of the cases that come to the court of appeals never go any further. We're the last stop in 99 percent of the cases, probably higher than that. And we know that when we're deciding those cases.

And I think if anybody reads the opinions that I've written and the opinions that I've joined, they can see exactly the sort of jurist that I am. They will find some opinions I'm sure that they will disagree with. But if they look at the whole set of opinions that I've written or joined, they can get a very clear picture of me. I'm not like anybody else. I don't claim to have the abilities of some of the distinguished members of the Supreme Court now or in the past. I have my—whatever abilities that I have. But they are my own.

Senator CORNYN. Let me tell you what Cass Sunstein has said about you. You may be familiar with the op-ed piece that was written in the Akron Beacon Journal on November 3, 2005. This is—of course, you know Professor Sunstein from the University of Chicago, a brilliant and liberal legal scholar. But he concludes in this op-ed—and this is how he describes you based upon his review of your life's work as a judge.

He said, "Alito sits on a liberal court"—and this is an analysis of your dissents. "Alito sits on a liberal court, so his dissents can be from relatively liberal rulings. None of Alito's opinions is reckless or irresponsible or especially far-reaching. His disagreement is unfailingly respectful. His dissents are lawyerly rather than bombastic. He does not berate his colleagues. Alito does not place political ideology at the forefront. He doesn't claim an ambitious or controversial theory of interpretation. He avoids abstraction. He's not endorsed the view associated with Justices Antonin Scalia and Clarence Thomas that the Constitution should be interpreted to fit with the original understanding of those who ratified it. Several of his opinions insist on careful attention to governing legal text, but that approach is perfectly legitimate, to say the least."

Judge Alito, I think it is important for people listening to understand that you are indeed your own man and that you do the very best job that you can with the skills and the talents that God has given you, and that you are willing to serve, and we ought to applaud you for that. And it is really, to me, demeaning to suggest some sort of guilt by association or that you must be a clone of some other judge or someone who outside groups hold up to disrespect and ridicule.

So I hope that, as I say, those listening, both in the Senate and outside, will make up their mind about you based upon the evidence that we have heard and that is available and not based on those sort of specious comparisons.

Now, let me ask—you know, believing as I do that you have been responsive, and expecting as I do that those who vote against you will claim that you have been nonresponsive notwithstanding the chart I showed you and your willingness to respond to the questions, you know, Senator Schumer—who is an enormously talented and very bright lawyer in his own right—was pressing you on whether Roe v. Wade is settled. And, I've really tried to analyze for myself, when is it that judges and nominees are willing to go out on a limb, so to speak, and say, yes, that's settled law or to talk more expansively about an issue; and when is it that they feel less comfortable, less free, more constrained by their ethical obligations or their desire to preserve the independence of the judiciary?

And what I have concluded—and I would like to get your reaction to this—is the more settled, to use the word Senator Schumer has, the more accepted in the society, in our culture, the more free nominees feel to talk about it; but the more a nominee feels like this is an issue that not only is going to come back, it is going to come back soon—as a matter of fact, it may be on the Court's docket now—the less free, the more bound by your ethical obligations you feel, the more you feel it is important to preserve your independence as a judge.

And we have mentioned a couple of them—Brown v. Board of Education, which expresses a commitment to equal justice under the law that all Americans embrace, virtually speaking. You have felt free to express a view on that case, have you not, sir?

Judge ALITO. I have. The line I've tried to draw is whether something realistically could come up in litigation before the court of appeals or before the Supreme Court. And I—

Senator CORNYN. Does that mean that you don't expect Brown v. Board of Education to be attacked, or someone to come before the Court and ask that it be overruled?

Judge ALITO. I don't. There's no realistic possibility of that, so I felt freer to talk about something like that.

Senator CORNYN. But you do believe, and I think with good cause, that there will be continuous attempts to address the abortion issue because of its divisive nature and because Americans are so divided on that issue, or at least some aspect of the issue. To what extent, for example, can the Congress pass laws which ban the barbaric practice of partial birth abortion, to what extent can Congress or the States pass laws that provide for minors to seek—requiring them to seek parental—or provide their parents notice, with an appropriate judicial bypass for those who are abused or neglected or abandoned by their parents? That is an issue that is at the forefront of America's consciousness and really, I think, sort of the subtext under which a lot of the wars over judicial nominations are fought. Would you agree with that, more or less?

Judge ALITO. It's an issue that is in litigation now, and I think you can look at the course of litigation over the past 20 years and you can see a number of cases—and of course this has been highlighted—in which the Supreme Court has been asked to overrule Roe and it has repeatedly refused to do that. But there's nothing—there's no comparable pattern, for example, with respect to Brown v. Board of Education or one person, one vote.

Senator CORNYN. Well, in the closing two and a half minutes that I have, I mentioned the Cass Sunstein op-ed, which, from my reading, even though I am sure you and Professor Sunstein don't see eye-to-eye on all legal issues, he seems to be highly complimentary of you, is the way I interpreted those two paragraphs I read out of the op-ed piece.

Now, a national newspaper, the Washington Post, on January 1st—that is the Washington Post, not National Review—did an analysis of your voting record on the Third Circuit. They found that in virtually every type of case, whether labor, employment—your record was no different than the average Republican-appointed judge. And to me, that is sort of the—said another way, that means that you are within the conservative mainstream in terms of your judicial philosophy.

Now, I know that you and other legal scholars have some trouble with this approach by political scientists to try to survey your opinions and categorize them and say, well, this is who you are, because you don't decide cases that way, do you? You decide individual cases based upon the legal arguments, the merits, and the facts. Isn't that correct, sir?

Judge ALITO. That's right, and it would be a bad thing if judges started keeping these scorecards and said, oh, I've ruled a certain number of times in favor of one side; when the next case comes up, I'd better rule on the other side. That's exactly what we don't want judges to do.

Senator CORNYN. You anticipated my next question, and that would be if somehow it disqualifies you because of how political scientists have somehow ranked your sympathy with certain types of cases, how often you have ruled in favor of one type of litigant and another—as opposed to an individual case-by-case decisionmaking process contemplated by the Constitution—I doubt it will be long before prospective nominees to the Federal judiciary will be keeping that kind of chart. And when litigants come into court, they are going to be tempted to look at that and say, well, I've ruled for too many plaintiffs, I'd better rule for a defendant this time. Or, no, I've shown too much sympathy for civil rights plaintiffs, I'd better rule for the government this time. Which would totally skew your responsibility as a Federal judge, in my view.

Judge Alito, my time has run out. Thank you for your response to my questions.

Judge ALITO. Thank you, Senator.

Chairman SPECTER. Thank you, Senator Cornyn.

We will take now another break for 15 minutes.

I have had requests from two Senators on the Democratic side for a third round. We have three more Senators to question on the 20-minute round—

Senator LEAHY. We have several more than the two.

Chairman SPECTER. Well, Senator Leahy, that is what I would like to ascertain so that we can figure out the schedule for the balance of the evening. We have 1 hour more for three Senators at 20 minutes; I want to figure out what we are going to do the rest of the evening. I want to figure out when we are going to bring on the outside witnesses who are available tomorrow. So if there are other requests, I would like to have them.

But now we will stand in recess until 5:55.

[Recess 5:40 p.m. to 5:55 p.m.]

Chairman SPECTER. We will proceed now to the last three Senators who have not had a second round of 20 minutes—Senator Durbin, Senator Brownback and Senator Coburn.

As I had mentioned before, I have had requests from two Senators for a third round. Senator Leahy advises that there are others and I would like the specifications. Senator Biden is prepared to proceed—has requested 20 minutes and is prepared to proceed. Senator Feinstein has requested 10 minutes and she has a doctor's appointment, so she won't be able to be here this evening, and we will accommodate her on that.

But I would like to know who else wants time so we can plan what we are going to do for the balance of the evening and hereafter. I have had requests on my side of the aisle as to whether we are having a Friday session and I have had a request as to whether we are having a Saturday session. And I told both of those requestors to stand by. And I do piecework, so I am here for the duration.

Senator Leahy.

Senator LEAHY. Mr. Chairman, I have been told that each one of the people on this side want another round. I know I want to look at the transcript this evening and I will have a few more questions. Obviously, you can do what you want. Judge Alito has shown that he has the stamina of Hercules. I am not sure that all the rest of us do. Senator Coats is hanging in there, but he is able to bail out now and then.

I would suggest you finish with the Senators who are here tonight. That would get us out of here around seven or a little later; come back in the morning. This is very similar to what we did with Chief Justice Roberts. Come back in the morning, and I have a feeling that whatever rounds it takes, we would probably wrap it up in relatively expeditious order.

But then we wouldn't be looking like we are trying to ram this through. It is a lifetime appointment, after all. We get it done. I think most of the outside witnesses have been told that they were going to testify on Friday, anyway, in all likelihood. That is my suggestion.

Chairman SPECTER. Well, that is not true. There are people who can't be here on Friday among the outside witnesses who were looking at Thursday.

Senator LEAHY. Well, who knows? We will probably be wrapped up in time so that we can leave here sometime Thursday.

Chairman SPECTER. Well, Senator Leahy—

Senator LEAHY. It is up to you.

Chairman SPECTER [continuing]. The only way we will know what is going to happen—I want to know who wants more time so I can see what is going to go on tomorrow, if we are going to go beyond Senator Feinstein tomorrow. We had this exact same situation with Chief Justice Roberts and we worked on into Wednesday evening and then we got an understanding as to what we were going to do on Thursday.

Senator LEAHY. Well, we are into Wednesday evening now already, so I mean we have done—

Chairman SPECTER. Well, why don't we proceed with our few witnesses so as not to spend any more time, and if I could have the advice from you—

Senator LEAHY. Sure.

Chairman SPECTER.—Senator Leahy, and from Senator Kennedy. Senator Durbin has 20 minutes. He probably has more time than he needs.

Senator LEAHY. I have yet to find a situation in this Committee, Mr. Chairman, when you and I haven't been able to work things out because you have always been eminently fair.

Chairman SPECTER. OK. Well, to put all the cards on the table, the only compelling force, if there such a thing as a compelling force for Senators, is to figure out how to avoid working this evening by telling me what you want to do tomorrow. That is a fairly simple formula.

Senator LEAHY. Who was the Leader, Mr. Chairman, who once said moving the Senate around was like transporting bull frogs in a wheel barrow?

Chairman SPECTER. Senator Baker, who is author of the "herding cats."

Senator Durbin, you are recognized for 20 minutes.

Senator DURBIN. Thank you very much. And, Judge Alito, if I am not mistaken, this is how we started the day. I think we are now into about eight-and-a-half hours, which means we are both on overtime by any measurable workplace standard in America. Thank you for your endurance, and to your family as well. I know it is a stressful and tough situation.

Let me say at the outset I asked you a question earlier today about settled law and John Roberts's statement before the Committee. I have spoken to one of your corner men over here, Ed Gillespie, and he and I have a difference of opinion about what it says in the record. I commend to my colleagues the record itself, September 13, 2005, page 145, and I stand by my earlier statement. Enough said about that.

I want to ask you about two substantive issues. We are not going to go to Princeton or any other place. The unitary Executive: the reason it is important is that there are some people even on the Supreme Court who believe the unitary Executive theory—and I don't know if it is always associated with the Federalist Society, but sometimes associated with the Federalist Society and their members—but the unitary Executive theory gives a President extraordinary power. And under that theory, some argue that a President, particularly in a wartime situation, can ignore and violate laws as Commander in Chief—critically important and timely as we debate eavesdropping and the like.

You have made it clear that when you spoke to the Federalist Society in 2000, you were not talking about scope of the President's power, but you were talking instead as to whether or not he would have control over the executive branch. I hope I am characterizing your statement correctly.

Judge ALITO. That is exactly correct, and I think in the speech I said there is a debate about the scope of what is meant by the Executive power, but there isn't any debate that the President has the power to take care that the laws are faithfully executed, and that was the scope of the power that I was discussing.

Senator DURBIN. So my question to you is this: What about those who do argue the unitary Executive scope theory? Do you agree with their analysis, do you disagree? Would you be joining Justice Thomas, in particular, in his dissent in Hamdi—in arguing that in this situation a President has more power than the law expressly gives him?

Judge ALITO. I don't think that the unitary Executive has anything to do with that. Let me just say that at the outset. I think that—and if other people use that term to mean the scope of Executive power, that certainly isn't the way that I understand—

Senator DURBIN. That is not your point of view?

Judge ALITO. That is not my point of view.

Senator DURBIN. You don't accept that point of view?

Judge ALITO. No. I think—

Senator DURBIN. If an argument is made that that is how they are going to expand the power of the President, as you testify today, that is not your position or your feeling? Say it in your own words.

Judge ALITO. It is not my—the unitary—when I talk about the unitary Executive, I am talking about the President's control over the Executive branch, no matter how big or how small, no matter how much power it has or how little power it has.

To me, the issue of the scope of Executive power is an entirely different question and it goes to what can you read into simply the term "Executive." That is part of it and, of course, there are some other powers that are given to the President in Article II, the commander in chief power, for example. And there can be a debate, of course, about the scope of that power, but that doesn't have to do with the unitary Executive.

Senator DURBIN. So when Hamdi draws that line and Justice O'Connor makes that statement about no blank check for a President in times of war when it comes to the rights of American citizens, and there is a dissent from Justice Thomas, who argues unitary Executive, scope of powers, more power to the President, you are coming down on the majority side and not on the Thomas side of that argument. Is that fair to say?

Judge ALITO. Well, I am not coming down—I don't recall that Justice Thomas uses the term "unitary Executive" in his dissent. It doesn't stick out in my mind that he did. If he did, he is using it there in a sense that is different from the sense in which I was using the term.

Senator DURBIN. Fair enough. Let me move to another area. I hate to return to that infamous 1985 memo, but there is one element of it we have really not asked you about, and that is your reference to the Establishment Clause. So instead of going into that memo, let me just try to explore with you for a moment your feelings about religion in our diverse society and under the Constitution. You have heard some questions from the other side about it from Senator Brownback, Senator Cornyn and others, and I would like to try to get into this a little bit.

There seems to be a debate within the Court between two standards for judging conduct as to whether it is constitutional in relation to freedom of exercise of religion, as well as establishment. And the two theories, if I can describe them quickly, are the Lemon theory which has three tests that the Burger Court came out with in 1971 and the new coercion theory.

Are you familiar with both of those theories?

Judge ALITO. I am, and there is actually a third theory, the endorsement test.

Senator DURBIN. Where do you come down? Do you subscribe to any one of those as an accurate analysis of what the Founding Fathers meant under the Establishment Clause?

Judge ALITO. I don't think the Court has settled on any single theory that it applies in every case. There are cases in which it finds the Lemon theory, the Lemon test, which now has two parts, whether the statute has—whether whatever is at issue has a secular purpose and whether the primary effect is to advance or inhibit religion. There are instances in which it applies that. It tends to apply that in cases involving funding.

There is the endorsement test, and it applies that in certain cases. Typically, it applies those in cases involving things like the displaying of symbols that may have religious—that have religious significance. So it itself has not found a single test that it applies in all of these cases.

Senator DURBIN. Well, where are you? If the Court is divided, and it appears it is, where do you come down? I mean, do you—please tell me.

Judge ALITO. Well, I don't have a—I do not myself have a grand, unified theory of the Establishment Clause. As a lower court judge, of course, my job has been to apply those precedents, and this is an area in which I think the Court has been—you can just see by the number of cases that it has decided it has been attempting to find the best way of expressing its view of what the Establishment Clause requires.

I certainly agree that it embodies a very important principle and one that has been instrumental in allowing us to live together successfully as probably the most religiously diverse country in the world, and maybe in the history of the world. And it's a very important principle, but I myself do not have a grand, unified theory of this.

Senator DURBIN. Let me ask you a few starting points. The question was asked of John Roberts about his personal religious and moral belief. And I would ask you in the most open-ended fashion. We all come to our roles in life with life experience and with values. When you are calculating and making a decision, if you were on the Supreme Court, tell me what role your personal religious or moral beliefs will play in that decision process.

Judge ALITO. Well, my personal religious beliefs are important to me in my private life. They are an important part of the way I was raised and they have been important to Martha and me in raising our children. But my obligation as a judge is to interpret and apply the Constitution and the laws of the United States, and not my personal religious beliefs or any personal moral beliefs that I have, and there is nothing about my religious beliefs that interferes with my doing that. I have a particular role to play as a judge and that does not involve imposing any religious views that I have or moral views that I have on the rest of the country.

Senator DURBIN. That is virtually the same answer given by Justice Roberts and I think from my point of view that is the right answer. It is the same challenge many of us face on this side of the table with decisions that we face.

Now, I asked Judge Roberts the following: Does the Free Exercise Clause, in addition to the Establishment Clause, protect the right of a person to be respected in America if they have no religious beliefs, the non-believers?

Judge ALITO. Yes, it does. It is freedom to worship and not worship, as you choose, and compelling somebody to worship would be a clear violation of the religion clauses of the First Amendment.

Senator DURBIN. Let me go to a specific case, the Black Horse Pike Regional Board of Education case, in which you were involved. And it is an interesting case and I hope this fact pattern that I describe to you is correct.

The school board policy allowed the seniors at this school to vote on having a graduation prayer, and the decision, it was suggested, was whether that was coercing students who didn't agree with that religious prayer or had no religious belief.

What is your feeling, or what was your feeling at that time when it came to that decision?

Judge ALITO. Well, that was the case that followed Lee v. Weisman and preceded the Santa Fe case, which dealt with a prayer before a football game. Lee v. Weisman involved a situation in which the principal—and that was the most directly relevant and a rather recent precedent at the time of the Black Horse Pike case.

In Lee v. Weisman, the principal of a middle school, as I recall, decided that there would be an invocation at the middle school graduation, and selected a member of the clergy, a local rabbi, to deliver the prayer and specified the nature of the prayer that would be appropriate for the circumstances. And the Supreme Court held that that was a violation of the Establishment Clause.

The case that we considered in the Black Horse Pike case involved a situation in which the high school left it up to the students through an election to decide whether there would be a prayer at the high school graduation and left it up to them to select the person who would conduct the prayer, the student who would lead them in the prayer, if that was—if they decided by a vote to do that.

And so our job at that point was to decide whether this fell on one side or the other of a line that I referred to earlier which Justice O'Connor very helpfully—the distinction that she drew between government religious speech, which is not allowed, and private religious speech which is protected. The government itself cannot speak on religious matters, but the government also can't discriminate against private religious speech. And we had here a situation—

Senator DURBIN. That goes back to the Oliva case where the student comes up with the drawing of Jesus, and that is a voluntary, personal and private expression, as you have described it.

Judge ALITO. That is correct, and the Supreme Court has recognized this in any number of cases. In the Rosenberger case and the Good News Club case and the Lamb's Chapel case, they have drawn this distinction.

So here we had a situation involving an election by the students to pick somebody to lead them in prayer, and which side of the line did it fall on? Well, it wasn't individual student speech, but it was collective student speech by way of an election. And that was what we had to decide, which side of this line it fell on. And Judge Mansmann, who wrote the opinion that I joined in that case, explained why we thought it fell on the side of the line of individual student speech.

Senator DURBIN. Let me ask you about that. Let me explore for a second. You are dealing with a school board policy. A school board is a government agency. They have set up the policy, so it is not coming entirely from a voluntary personal situation, like the Oliva case. And you know that the majority is going to rule in the decision on whether there will be a prayer and what the substance of the prayer will be.

How, then, could you respect the rights of the minority, including people with different religious beliefs and non-believers, if you leave it up to a majority vote?

Judge ALITO. Well, that is why—that factor is why it was a case that didn't—there could be debate about which side of this line it fell on. Now, I think there also was a disclaimer that was distributed at the time of the graduation explaining to anybody who was in attendance that the prayer was not endorsed—if there was a prayer, it wasn't endorsed by the school board, and that this was a decision of the students.

There are factors there that fall on one side of the line. There are factors there that point to the case being put on one side of that line, factors that point to putting the case on the other side of the line. And Judge Mansmann's opinion explained why she thought, and I agree, that it would fall on the private student speech side of the line. But it was a question that was debatable.

And then the Sante Fe case came along later. It didn't involved exactly the same situation, but it involved a related situation, and that is now the Supreme Court's expression of its opinion in the form of a precedent on the application to—the application of this test that I have been talking about, a situation like this.

Senator DURBIN. As you have described it, this is not an easy call. There are circumstances on both sides, and yet in your dissent you use the phrase referring to the majority as "hostility toward religion." It seems to me that you could make a case that I am not hostile toward religion, but trying to be sensitive to the rights of all to believe or not to believe in America and come down on the opposite side of the case.

Were you overstating your position in using that phrase "hostility toward religion" in describing the majority?

Judge ALITO. That was—it was Judge Mansmann's opinion, in which I joined, and I don't remember the phrase "hostility to religion." Obviously, it must be in there. I certainly don't think that she meant to suggest that those who were objecting to this were proceeding in bad faith, or even that they were hostile to religion.

I think what she—I can't speak for her and I don't recall the specific language, but looking at it now, the way I would put it was that she probably thought that this was not giving as much room for private religious speech as should be given.

Senator DURBIN. I couldn't tell you what in the heck I ever wrote in law school about anything, but in the second year in law school you wrote a paper, I take it, some research, which you had to tell us about here relative to the issue of religion, and then in the 1985 memo raised the question about the Warren Court on the Establishment Clause.

What was it that the Warren Court decided on the Establishment Clause that troubled you, if you remember?

Judge ALITO. Well, I actually think that the student note from the Yale Law Journal is an illustration of the sort of thing that has interested me and troubled me about the jurisprudence in this area for a long time.

In the law school note, I talked about two—what are called the release time cases. It was the McCullum case and Zorach v. Clausen, both of which were decided just before Chief Justice Warren took his seat. And they involved situations that were quite similar. There was a distinction between the two programs, but they were quite similar and the Court reached contrary conclusions.

And unfortunately this has been a repeating—a recurring pattern in the Establishment Clause jurisprudence, cases that turn on extremely fine distinctions. The Supreme Court held in Board of Education v. Allen, if I am remembering the correct case, at the end of the Warren Court that it was permissible for a school board to supply secular books to schools that are related to a religious—that are religiously oriented. And then later in another case—I think it was Wolman—they said but you can't—but that doesn't apply to other instructional material, other secular instructional material.

And this has been the thing about the Establishment Clause that has bothered me, the absence of just what your initial question was pointing to, some sort of theory that draws distinctions that don't turn on these very fine lines.

Senator DURBIN. Tell me about the Establishment Clause in a more contemporary context if you can. You talked about the case of the Warren Court in providing secular books to religious schools, which I find no problem with. I think that is acceptable from my point of view, for whatever that is worth.

But what about the concept and theory of financial support from a government agency to a school that is a religious school where the money is used for the purpose of teaching religion or proselytizing?

Judge ALITO. Well, I think the Court's precedents have been very clear on that that the money—that a government body cannot supply money to a school for the purpose of conducting religious education. And I don't recall any—I don't recall a suggestion in dissenting opinions—maybe there is one that I am not recalling here that says that that would be permissible.

Senator DURBIN. I am running out of time, but it would go back to my first question. I think under the coercion test, there is some argument among some on the Court and others that not applying

Lemon but using this new coercion test may give them more leeway when it comes to this kind of financial support and vouchers, but I don't want to presume that.

And I thank you for your responses to these questions.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Chairman SPECTER. Thank you, Senator Durbin.

Senator Brownback.

Senator BROWNBACk. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

We started off this morning and we will end today. I want to thank you for all the questions you have answered. You have answered the questions that I have had, and I have heard much of the rest of the discussion. I think we have covered many of these points so many multiple times. We have just overdone it on some of these.

So, Mr. Chairman, I am satisfied with the questions that he has answered. I will be supporting your nomination in front of the Committee and on the floor. I think you are an outstanding nominee, and I have appreciated your thoughts that you have put forward here. I think if approved—and I hope you are, and I think you will be approved by the full Senate—you are going to serve as an outstanding Justice on the U.S. Supreme Court. And I will be supporting you here in the Committee and on the floor, and with that, Mr. Chairman, I would yield back my time.

Chairman SPECTER. Senator Brownback, thank you. Thank you for 19 minutes and 6 seconds.

[Laughter.]

Chairman SPECTER. Senator Coburn?

Senator COBURN. Well, Mr. Chairman, I will give you some time back, but it won't be quite that much. Thank you.

I have a couple of charts I want to show just to clarify the record. I want to again make sure everybody knows that in 1985, there is a quote in the Princeton Packet, the campaign to eliminate the Army ROTC program and what was perceived as the decline of Princeton athletics, it was also known that this CAP program was soliciting through mail membership and support. There also was a disclaimer in this that I want to make sure is in the record as well, and it says, "The appearance of an article in Prospect does not necessarily represent an endorsement of the author's belief by the Concerned Alumni of Princeton. CAP has never taken a formal stand on coeducation at Princeton or elsewhere."

And I liken that to—I am a member of the American Medical Association, but I will tell you, I don't agree with everything that is written in JAMA. As a matter of fact, I take great, great umbrage at some of the things that are written there and some of the ideas that are put forward that aren't done well, that go counter to good medicine, but that doesn't mean I endorse—because I am a member of the American Medical Association, because I am a member of JAMA, it doesn't mean that I endorse everything that that organization or that magazine might put out.

And so I think Senator Graham had it right. You know, this idea of association with anything means that you take it all, whether, in fact, that is the truth or not, and that is not good work on this Committee, and it is not truthful, and it is not intellectually honest.

I want to spend just a few minutes going back. You had mentioned earlier about one of the things the Court didn't do is they can't take necessarily all the technology or all the science and how it applies to things, and that things, in fact, might change. And I mentioned earlier this morning in our questions about the Stenberg case and the Doe v. Bolton and this concept of health, and that one of the things as a practicing physician who has delivered 4,000 babies, who also had a grandmother who came into this world as a result of rape—so I have a special view on the consequences of rape—this concept of health, I am interested in your thought on it, because one of the things I think about it is the health of the woman when? At the time or later? Because of what we do know about the consequences of Roe v. Wade and the actual act of abortion and the impact that that has on a woman's health.

For example, you are twice as likely to commit suicide if you have had an abortion. Now a study, a longitudinal study shows that. Twice as likely to have alcohol or drug dependency if you have had an abortion. About 60 percent more likely to have a pre-term delivery.

So as the Court looks at that and also looks at the fact—this health question, then also looks at health and then also looks at viability—when I was in medical school it was unusual for a pre-term infant at 28, 29, 30 weeks to survive. And we routinely see infants at 24 weeks that survive. As a matter of fact, I have a nephew 24-, 25-week delivery. The only deficit he has is he is blind in one eye. He weighed 1 pound 2 ounces when he was born.

And so technology means something, and so the fact that we are not going to commit to give a blanket answer—and I am convinced that the only way you will get certain votes off this Committee and out of the Senate is if you were to write a blood oath that there is nothing that could interrupt any type of abortion on demand at any time.

So my question to you is: How is it that the courts should—any court should take into consideration these questions about technology and science and how they impact the law? And the other thing I would add to that—and I mentioned it in my opening statement—is we consider somebody alive when they have a heartbeat and brain wave. And we consider them dead when they don't have those things. And how is it that the court can't look at that science and say we have a heartbeat and a brain wave, we know when viability is now outside of the womb, should those factors play in the decision of the court, or just we just blanket stare decisis and say Roe and Casey, it is all settled, and we are not going to look at the science? Should that play a role?

Judge ALITO. Well, Senator, I guess I would answer that by saying that you would have to—you would look at the factors that are relevant under the stare decisis analysis and ask the role of the sort of data that you have outlined, ask how that would be involved in the factors that go into the stare decisis analysis. And then if you get past that to the second step, of course, you would ask the same question whether—what bearing that information has on the resolution of the question at that step.

Just speaking in general, not talking about abortion at all, in general, in deciding any legal issue, I think courts should be receptive to any information that has a bearing on the decisions that they are making. There is no such thing in general as bad knowledge, and I think that is relevant to the decisionmaking process that judges go through. They should be receptive to information that is relevant, that the parties want to bring to their attention, and then decide how it figures in the application of the legal standards that they are applying in the particular case.

Senator COBURN. Let me ask you another question, and I want you to be careful how you answer this because I think at some time this probably will come before you, and I am not trying to get you pinned down. If I am driving a car today and I hit a pregnant woman who has a 36-, 37-week fetus, and the woman survives and the fetus dies, I can be held accountable for the death of that fetus. And by law, we value that as a life—unborn but a life.

If I am the pregnant woman and say I want to terminate that fetus at 37 weeks, there is nothing in this country today that keeps me from doing that, even though on one side of the law we say it is a life.

How did we get there to where it is not a life or it is a life? Tell me, somebody logically explain that to the American people that how if I kill it, it was a life, but if I choose to take it voluntarily, it is not a life. Can anybody logically explain how we got there and what the consequences going down the road are going to be for us as a Nation when we have laws that send two completely different signals about the same individual?

Judge ALITO. Well, let me try to just explain my understanding of where the law rests on those two questions. The first is a question of tort law, or maybe it is a question of—well, it is a question of tort law, and decisions are made by State legislatures. Maybe in some instances it comes about through the development of common law through the State courts regarding the scope of State tort law and protection—a tort can be created that applies in the situation of the auto accident you mentioned or a legislature may choose to structure the tort law differently. But that has been a decision that has been left for the State legislatures to decide, and they have taken a variety of approaches in doing that, I believe.

The second, of course, is the issue of Roe and the cases that follow after it, and those are based on an interpretation of the Fifth Amendment and the 14th Amendment of the Constitution, and they are not the result of decisions—of legislative decisions made at the State level or at the Federal level.

Senator COBURN. Can you rationalize any way the logical explanation of how that could be, though? I mean, if you had somebody that wasn't from this world and they came in and they said, oh, yeah, if you kill it, it was alive, but if you choose to—if you accidentally kill it, it was alive, if you choose to kill, it wasn't? Can you come to—I mean, I am having trouble getting my mind around that concept that there is any logic there. I just wondered if you were.

Judge ALITO. Well, the answer is that the tort situation has been left for its development under State law, and States have taken a variety of approaches expressing the values that the legislature believes should be embodied in the tort law. And in the abortion context, of course, States have laws regulating abortion, and they're free to enact whatever statutes they want on this subject as long as they comply with the Constitution. But we have decisions of the Supreme Court that establish constitutional requirements in the area. I think that's the explanation. The decisions are made by different bodies.

Senator COBURN. Just one other comment. For the American public to know there are 1.3 million abortions in the U.S. each year. This is from the Alan Guttmacher Institute. And it is very interesting for us to know the purpose that people—why people have an abortion, why women choose to terminate their unborn children: 21 percent say they can't afford a baby; 21 percent say they don't want the responsibility; 16 percent say the baby could change their lives; 12 percent have problems with the relationship or want to avoid single parenthood; 11 percent are not mature enough or don't want to have more children; 3 percent have a possible fetal health problem, of which two-thirds are Down syndrome or spina bifida; 1 percent resulted from rape or incest; 1 percent, the husband or the partner doesn't want them to have a baby; and 1 percent is they didn't want anybody else to know somebody had sex with them. And of that, 48 percent of the women who have an abortion in this country have already had one previously. So, in fact, our country, through the auspices of an activist court, in my opinion, has moved to use abortion not as a health issue, but as a convenience issue. And we have done great damage because we have a schizophrenic policy.

My hope, Judge, is that science and technology and recognition of life on some parameter ought to be applied, and my hope is, as they get to the court, that we have common sense. And it doesn't have to be my way. You know, it could be Senator Schumer's or Senator Durbin's view. You know, the fact is there is a legitimate disagreement about rape and incest and medical malformations and all these other things, but we need in this country to have the confidence in the Supreme Court restored, and I think it has taken a hit just like this institution has taken a hit, because it is making decisions that are not based on fact and good law. It is making decisions like we have made decisions, based on expediency. And my hope is, is that you will be confirmed. I think you have great character and great integrity, and integrity I think is the No. 1 issue, not your legal mind, your heart and your soul, and how you view honesty and straightforwardness, and that the result will be that we will see some leadership that will put science and fact, and combine it with the law, and restore the confidence in the Supreme Court.

I asked Judge Roberts, I asked, "Why do you think we have lost it, some of the confidence of the Court?" And he said, "Because we've gotten into areas of policy and not law." And I tend to agree with him, and it is my hope that you would agree with that as well.

I yield back the balance of my time.

Chairman SPECTER. Thank you very much, Senator Coburn.

We are trying to figure out what the schedule is going to be for the balance of the evening, and for the balance of the week. We now have Senator Biden, who has requested 20 minutes, and Senator Feinstein 10, and Senator Durbin 10, all of which will be done tomorrow. Anybody who wants a fourth round? I want to do the third rounds tonight so that we can move ahead promptly tomorrow.

Senator LEAHY. Mr. Chairman, I think that if we want to do this we should remember the judge and his family have been sitting here all day. He has been answering questions. He has shown more equanimity than most of us would. You sat here through the whole thing. I sat here through most of it, but Senators can come and go. He cannot. He has had to sit through all of it. His family has had to sit through all of it, and that has to be a strain. I do not think most teenage sons would show that much attention on these things.

I would suggest that we would probably have far better questions if we can go back and go over the transcript. I know what I want to do, I want to go over some of it—I am not going to have an awful lot of questions, but I would like to go back to three or four places from my notes that I have some questions. I want to read the transcript so when I ask the question, in fairness to the judge, it is about what is specifically in the transcript.

This is the same thing we did with Chief Justice Roberts. We came back on that last day, as I recall, and I think we wrapped up around 1, 1:30 in the afternoon.

Chairman SPECTER. No. We wrapped up about 11 o'clock, a little before.

Senator LEAHY. Oh, did we?

Chairman SPECTER. A little before 11.

Senator LEAHY. When you are having so much fun time goes by so quickly.

Chairman SPECTER. We do not have word from Senator Kohl or Senator Feingold. Suppose we put the maximum of 25 minutes on the next round for tomorrow, and suppose we start at 9 o'clock? That means the only people that have to be here are Senator Leahy and myself at 9.

Senator LEAHY. I will be here at 9. I am here usually a lot earlier than that.

Chairman SPECTER. Senator Schumer just on the auctioneer said yes?

Senator LEAHY. That is OK. I will go along with it. And understand though, and I would assume—you have always been fair—if we run into some extraordinary problem, somebody may need a few more minutes.

Chairman SPECTER. Anybody who satisfies your extraordinary problem test will get more time. Make it your test.

Senator LEAHY. Thank you very much.

Chairman SPECTER. Without objection, so ordered.

Judge Alito, you have shown remarkable stamina, and you have shown, in my opinion, remarkable patience. I think it is unwise for any Senator, including the Chairman, to do too much commenting about anybody else's questioning, but you have been patient. And people may not like your answers, but they are your answers. We have precedent for that. Nobody has even said they are misleading. They have said they just do not like them. But you have been consistent, and very patient in stating your position, even though you have been called upon to state it repetitively, and repetitively, and repetitively. So I think it is well within the ambit of fairness to say that you have been patient, and you have shown real stamina, as has Mrs. Alito, and as has your loyal family.

So that we will proceed at 9 o'clock tomorrow, and we will have 20 minutes for Senator Biden, 10 minutes for Senator Feinstein, 10 minutes for Senator Durbin, and my expectation is we will not have a great deal of time for Senator Kohl. I am not sure about Senator Feingold. And that anybody else will be limited to 25 minutes on the final round, subject to the Leahy exceptional circumstance standard.

Recess.

[Whereupon, at 6:37 p.m., the Committee was adjourned, to reconvene on Thursday, January 12, 2006, at 9 a.m.]

NOMINATION OF SAMUEL A. ALITO, JR., OF
NEW JERSEY, TO BE AN ASSOCIATE JUSTICE
OF THE SUPREME COURT OF THE
UNITED STATES

THURSDAY, JANUARY 12, 2006

U.S. SENATE,
COMMITTEE ON THE JUDICIARY,
Washington, D.C.

The Committee met, pursuant to notice, at 9 a.m., in room 216, Hart Senate Office Building, Hon. Arlen Specter, Chairman of the Committee, presiding.

Present: Senators Specter, Hatch, Grassley, Kyl, DeWine, Sessions, Graham, Cornyn, Brownback, Coburn, Leahy, Kennedy, Biden, Kohl, Feinstein, Feingold, Schumer, and Durbin.

Chairman SPECTER. The hearing will resume on the confirmation proceedings for Judge Samuel Alito to the Supreme Court of the United States.

Good morning, Judge. Saw your family in the hallway as we were coming down. Everybody appears to be bright and rested and ready.

Judge ALITO. Thank you, Senator.

Chairman SPECTER. The Committee staff, accompanied by representatives of Senator Kennedy, went through the Rusher files yesterday, finishing up their work, I am advised, at about 2 a.m. this morning, and provided me with a memorandum that the Committee staff reviewed more than four boxes of documents from the personal files of William Rusher concerning CAP. Judge Alito's name never appeared in any document. His name was not mentioned in any of the letters to or from the founder, William Rusher. His name was not mentioned in any of the letters to or from CAP's long-term executive director, T. Harding Jones. His name does not appear anywhere in the dozens of letters to CAP or from CAP. The files contained canceled checks for subscriptions to CAP's magazine, Prospect, but none from Judge Alito. The files contained dozens of articles including investigative expos written at the height of the organization's prominence, but Samuel Alito's name is nowhere to be found in any of them.

The Rusher files contained lists of the board of directors, the advisory board, and the contributors to both CAP and Prospect Magazine, but none of these lists contains Samuel Alito's name. The files contain minutes and attendance records from CAP meetings in 1983 and 1984, just before Samuel Alito listed the organization on his job application, but Samuel Alito did not attend any of those meetings, at least according to those records. He was not even mentioned in the minutes. The files contained dozens of issues of CAP's magazines, but none of the articles was written by, quoted or mentioned Samuel Alito. CAP founder, William Rusher, said, "I have no recollection of Samuel Alito at all. He certainly was not very heavily involved in CAP if at all."

Before turning to Senator Leahy for his allotted time, I would yield to him if he has any opening comments he chooses to make.

Senator LEAHY. Mr. Chairman, as we know, this will be the last opportunity for the American people to learn what Judge Samuel Alito thinks about the fundamental constitutional rights, whether he is going to serve to protect their liberty, their privacy from Government intrusion. I think it is even more critical today because of the efforts to expand Presidential—

Chairman SPECTER. Excuse me, Senator. Do you want to start on your 25—

Senator LEAHY. Oh. I thought you were asking me—

Chairman SPECTER. Opening comments, sure, yes. We are not going to start your time clock until you tell us.

Senator LEAHY. Just a short opening comment.

Chairman SPECTER. Fine.

Senator LEAHY. I know the judge probably feels like he has been here and doing nothing but being on a hot seat, but we are talking about a lifetime appointment, and it is the most powerful court in the land. It is at a time when we see this effort to expand Presidential powers such as illegal wiretaps on Americans, the President using a signing statement to create exemptions from laws prohibiting torture. These are all important things. The Supreme Court is our ultimate guardian, has to be our ultimate guardian, and we need to know whether Samuel Alito is willing to be that kind of guardian.

I am still troubled by some of the questions. Mr. Chairman, I know you are going to be asking questions, and I will wait to ask mine after that, of course.

Chairman SPECTER. I am going to reserve my time at this juncture, and turn to Senator Leahy for time up to 25 minutes.

Senator LEAHY. Thank you.

In his confirmation hearing last September, we went through hours and hours, days and days for Judge Roberts, now Chief Justice. I asked him if the Constitution permits the execution of an innocent person. He said if they have been falsely convicted and they are innocent, they should not be in prison, let alone executed. I think we all agree with that. But I pushed further because my question was whether the Constitution permits the execution of an innocent person, if you know that they are innocent. He said, "I would think not."

Judge, do you agree with Chief Justice Roberts?

Judge ALITO. I agree that it is one of the most fundamental rights protected by our Constitution, that no one may be convicted of an offense unless they are proven to be guilty beyond a reasonable doubt, and further than that, the Supreme Court's decisions since 1976 dealing with the Eighth Amendment, have attempted to create a whole set of procedural safeguards to make sure that the death penalty is not imposed arbitrarily or capriciously, and this whole framework is designed to prevent exactly that, to prevent the conviction of an innocent person, and to prevent the imposition of capital punishment on someone who is innocent, or on someone who is guilty of the offense but it not deserving to have that penalty imposed on the person.

Senator LEAHY. Judge, as we know, we saw the cases in Illinois of people a few days away from execution, they have been sentenced to death; they have been convicted; they had their trial, gone to trial; jury came back; apparently appropriate procedure followed on sentencing; they are now sentenced to death. A few days before somebody comes forward at the very last minute because of DNA evidence and says, "Whoops, we've got the wrong person." And then they are let loose. We are finding it in Virginia, and now in other cases it appears that there is a possibility a number of innocent people were executed.

What if you had a case, they have gone through the whole thing, they have been convicted; the judge has followed all of the appropriate sentencing; the jury came back—did everything following the law. And now they are up for execution. Evidence comes up, say DNA evidence, or a confession of somebody else. Would it be unconstitutional then to execute that person?

Judge ALITO. Well, Senator, it is unconstitutional to execute someone who has not been proven guilty beyond a reasonable doubt. Now, depending—

Senator LEAHY. They may have been found guilty beyond a reasonable doubt. What I am saying is that a lot of these people were on death row and then had to be commuted at the last moment, when a few days before the execution they found, whoops, we have the wrong guy.

Judge ALITO. Well, that's the ultimate tragedy that could possibly occur in our criminal justice system, and we should do everything we can to prevent that from ever occurring, and I have not had a case during my time on the court of appeals—I've had only a handful of capital punishment cases where there was a suggestion that that was a possibility.

If the evidence develops at the last minute, then I think—and if this is a—it would depend to some degree on—the procedures would depend on—would be different depending on whether the person had been convicted in State court or in Federal court. The first procedural step in either instance would be to file a petition with the trial court. It would be—if it were in State court, it would be a State collateral relief petition, and those are handled differently depending on the State. And then a file of—I'm sorry. You could go to the State court or you could file a second habeas petition, attempt to file a second habeas petition in Federal court, and follow the procedures that are set out in habeas corpus statute.

Senator LEAHY. I understand all of the steps. Like you, I was a prosecutor, even though we do not have the death sentence in Vermont, we do have real life imprisonment, and I remember those. But you agree though with Chief Justice Roberts that the Constitution does not countenance the execution of an innocent person?

Judge ALITO. The Constitution is designed to prevent that.

Senator LEAHY. The reason I ask this, this is something that was originally raised, as I recall, in the Judiciary Committee by Chairman Specter, the Rule of Four. Are you familiar with that procedure on the Supreme Court? In other words, it takes five Justices to stay an execution, but four to hear one of these cases, so usually if there has been four that have agreed it should be stayed, somebody will make the fifth just as a matter of courtesy. That has not been followed that much recently. Chairman Specter has called it a bizarre and unacceptable outcome to not provide the fifth vote. He once introduced legislation to codify the Rule of Four.

If you were one of the Justices and you are there—and these things always seem to happen, everybody is scattered all over the place—four of your fellow justices have said that they would hold. What would you do? They voted to stay the execution. They are asking you to be the fifth vote.

Judge ALITO. I had not heard of this rule until the hearings for Chief Justice Roberts, but it seems to me to be a very sensible procedure because I think we all want to avoid the tragedy of having an innocent person executed or having anyone executed whose constitutional rights have been violated.

Senator LEAHY. I raise it, as I did with then-Judge Roberts here, because some things you will remember from this hearing, some things you will probably try to forget from this hearing, both you and your family, but I hope this one, at least this idea stays in your mind.

About a decade ago in Washington v. Glucksberg, the Supreme Court declined to find that terminally ill patients had a generalized constitutional right to a physician's aid in dying, preferring the matter be left to the States. The Court noted: "Throughout the Nation, Americans are engaged in an earnest and profound debate about the morality, legality and practicality of physician-assisted suicide." Chief Justice Rehnquist wrote, "The Court's holding permits the debate to continue as it should in a democratic society." I remember reading that. I found it very practical, aside from the legal things, a very practical response.

Last spring, we witnessed a fierce legal battle over the medical treatment of Terri Schiavo. She was in a persistent vegetative state for more than a decade, and ultimately after she died, the autopsy showed that. But we found politicians rushing to the cameras, engaged in extraordinary measures to override what the State courts determined be her own wishes, State courts who had heard countless cases on this. Suddenly this became the thing politicians all over the place rushing for it. The power of the Federal Government was wielded by some to determine, in my view, deeply personal choices. The President even came back to Washington in the middle of one of his vacations to sign special legislation on this. Do you agree with the idea advanced in the Cruzan case that the wishes of an unconscious patient, to the degree they can be known, should govern decisions regarding life-sustaining therapies?

Let us assume that the wishes are clearly known. Should they be followed?

Judge ALITO. Well, the Cruzan case proceeded assumed for the sake of argument, which is something that judges often do, that there is a constitutional right to say—that each of us has a constitutional right to say, “I don’t want medical treatment.” And the Cruzan decision recognized that this was a right that everybody had at common law. At common law, if someone is subjected to a medical procedure that the person doesn’t want, that’s a battery and it’s a tort, and the person can sue for it. It is illegal. The Court did not—

Senator LEAHY. One of those cases where we got something from that foreign law, in this case English common law; is that correct?

Judge ALITO. Well, that’s correct, and I think that our whole legal system is an outgrowth of English common law.

Senator LEAHY. That popped in to my mind because I was thinking of some of the people talking about paying attention to foreign law. Most of our law is based on foreign law. But go ahead, common law.

Judge ALITO. Most of our common law is an outgrowth of English common law, and I think it helps to understand that background often in analyzing issues that come up.

Senator LEAHY. But you agree with Cruzan? I am thinking if somebody has a “do not resuscitate” order, do you agree with that?

Judge ALITO. That’s a fundamental principle of common law, and Cruzan assumed for the sake of argument that that would be a fundamental constitutional right, but that is a right that people have had under our legal system for a long time, to make that decision for themselves.

Senator LEAHY. My wife is a nurse and she was working on the medical-surgical floor, and she would mention about people with these DNR, do not resuscitate. Would you agree that a patient would have a right—for example, if you have a living will, you have a right to designate somebody who can speak for you in a case of terrible injury or unconsciousness, speak for you on a do not resuscitate, or do not use heroic measures and all the rest, do you agree with that?

Judge ALITO. Yes, Senator. That’s, I think, an extension of the traditional right that I was talking about that existed under common law, and it’s been developed by State legislatures, and in some instances by State courts, to deal with the living will situation and with advances in—which I think is in large measure a response to advances in medical technology which create new issues in this area.

Senator LEAHY. We have three separate and co-equal branches of Government, as the Constitution says. We have these checks and balances, and most of us feel that the Congress is going to carry out that check and balance. They have to carry out real oversight and make sure the Government is accountable to the American people. If you do not do that, corruption and incompetence sets in. We have given a lot of powers to our Government in the fight against terrorism and others, and the check and balances to make sure there is oversight. Do you believe in the general principle of the Congress having major oversight powers?

Judge ALITO. I don’t think there’s any question about that.

Senator LEAHY. Let me go to this, and I was thinking of this as we were talking about the Schiavo case. I do not want you to have to get involved in what many found was kind of a sorry exercise when people are already suffering enough, a sorry exercise by the Congress, so I will not talk about the House committees' unbelievable subpoena to Terri Schiavo. But let me ask you this: could the Judiciary Committee issue a subpoena for a defendant on death row in a State prison, if we believed he was about to be executed and thought he was innocent?

Judge ALITO. Could the subpoena—could this Committee issue a subpoena—

Senator LEAHY. And enforce it?

Judge ALITO. To have the defendant come and testify before the Committee?

Senator LEAHY. Yes. Say it is an hour before execution, for example, to make it even a tougher case.

Judge ALITO. It's not a question that I ever thought of. Sitting here I can't think of an objection to it, but I would have to—I would have to hear whatever arguments there were to be made.

Senator LEAHY. This may seem to be bouncing around here a little bit. I am trying to go over again in my own mind, after looking at the transcript last night, some of the things we were saying. You were in a discussion with a number of Senators about views of the court, or how the American people view courts, and how basically in a democracy courts have to have the respect of people if they are going to be able to carry out their orders. Brown is probably one of the key examples there where the Chief Justice worked 2½ years until he got a unanimous Court decision.

Justice O'Connor gave a speech decrying the present climate of antipathy between the judiciary and some Members of Congress, and I have spoken with her and others—and the late Chief Justice—about this. She expressed concern about efforts to limit Federal court jurisdiction in areas that some Members of Congress think the Federal courts should not be involved. We have seen a number of efforts to strip the Federal courts of jurisdiction when some Members of Congress felt they disagreed with them.

Now, I thought some of these issues were settled by Marbury when Chief Justice Marshall said, "It is emphatically the province and duty of the judicial department to say what the law is."

Now, the court-stripping bills are not without precedent. Recent efforts have failed. I recall one where three Senators finally talked it down until it ran out of time. I was one of the three. Senator Lowell Weicker of Connecticut was one of the other three. On the way out, the third one put his arm around us and said, "I think we are the only true conservatives in this Senate." We both said, "Thank you, Barry Goldwater. We appreciate you joining us in this." I took it as a great compliment.

Now, imagine that in the early 1950s Congress enacted a law that purported to strip all Federal courts, including the Supreme Court, of jurisdiction to hear cases and appeals involving the segregation of public schools. Would such a law have been constitutional?

Judge ALITO. Well, there's a debate among scholars about the extent of the authority of Congress to structure the appellate jurisdiction of the Supreme Court, and there are those who say that Congress has the authority to eliminate appellate jurisdiction by topic, and there are those who say that if—and they rely on the language of Article III. And there are those who say that to take away jurisdiction over a category of cases such as that would be a violation of another constitutional provision, in that instance a violation perhaps of the Equal Protection Clause.

And there is this debate that it has not—that it is not something—

Senator LEAHY. Have you taken part in that debate?

Judge ALITO. Pardon me?

Senator LEAHY. Have you taken a position in that debate?

Judge ALITO. I have not taken part in that, and I have read—

Senator LEAHY. Would you like to?

Judge ALITO. Not at this time.

[Laughter.]

Senator LEAHY. I don't know why that surprises me.

Judge ALITO. The case law is not definitive on this question. According to the scholars, Ex Parte McCordle is a case that can be interpreted in a number of different ways.

Senator LEAHY. You know, we had many in the Congress at that time, had they thought that Brown v. Board of Education was about to come down the way it did, probably would have made efforts to strip the authority of the Supreme Court to hear it. And I am afraid that as we find some of these efforts where the courts become a very convenient whipping boy to people looking for votes or whatever, that that might happen again. And I would suggest you think long and hard on it.

Let me ask you this, and it probably invites more effort to find out. On more than one occasion, the House of Representatives has included a provision in an appropriations bill—and we all agree that the Congress has the power of the purse—but in an appropriations bill saying that none of the funds can be spent enforcing a particular court decision, pick something that they feel is unpopular at the moment, so they say no money can be spent to enforce it.

Let us say the Court has ruled basically on a constitutional issue saying this shall be enforced; the Congress says, no, we won't allow money to be spent. Does that violate the Constitution?

Judge ALITO. Well, that's also a provocative constitutional question. I can't recall an instance where that has been done with respect to a constitutional decision. Perhaps it has been. I do recall back during the 1980s that it was done with respect to an issue of antitrust. And I would assume that if there wasn't—well, obviously if there isn't a constitutional question raised by that limitation on the expenditure of funds, and if you're talking about a non-constitutional question, maybe there is no constitutional issue raised, there wouldn't be an obstacle to Congress's doing that.

With respect to a constitutional question, that's a provocative constitutional issue that—I don't know the answer to it, and I cannot think of precedent on that point. I don't believe there is any.

Senator LEAHY. Let's take a nonconstitutional—I want to make sure I understand your answer. Decisions come down of whatever nature. You mentioned antitrust. Whatever it is comes down from the Court, and it is going to require some enforcement. And the Congress says, no, we are not going to put the money in there. Can the Congress do that?

Judge ALITO. Well, I'd have to know the facts of the case and hear the arguments on both sides of it. Unless there was a constitutional objection, then that falls within one of the most important powers of the Congress, the expenditure of funds Congress exercises. The Framers wanted Congress to have the control of the purse because Congress is the branch that is closest to the people. And I would think that—and Congress obviously has great latitude in this area.

I don't know what constitutional objections would be raised to doing that with respect to a nonconstitutional question, but I'd have to understand exactly what was—

Senator LEAHY. Well, it is something to keep in mind because it may happen. You know, if we can grandstand, if Congress can grandstand the way it did on the Schiavo case, you have to wonder what else may come down.

One of the advantages or disadvantages of being here for a long time, I have actually been here for the hearings on every member of the Supreme Court, including that of former Chief Justice Rehnquist. And Senator Specter and I have served here together a long time. And I went back to one of his questions. He asked then-Justice Rehnquist whether Congress can strip the Supreme Court of jurisdiction over First Amendment cases involving freedom of speech, press, or religion. And I think the Chairman remembers this. He can be a rather tenacious questioner, as I know from some of my weekend phone calls from him. But he kept pushing then-Justice Rehnquist until he finally got an answer. In the end, then-Justice Rehnquist gave his view. He said the Congress could not remove the Court's jurisdiction over First Amendment cases.

So let me ask the same question that Senator Specter asked in 1986. Does Congress have the authority to say the Supreme Court does not have jurisdiction over First Amendment issues of freedom of speech, press, and religion?

Judge ALITO. Well, I would give the same answer to that that I gave to the more general question you asked a few minutes ago about taking away the Supreme Court's appellate jurisdiction over a topic of cases. It's not a question that I have obviously had to deal with in my capacity as a judge or something that I have written about or studied in any sort of a focused way. My understanding of the writing on the question is that there's a division of thought among leading constitutional scholars on the issue, and there are some who argue that Congress has plenary authority to define the appellate jurisdiction of the Supreme Court, and there are others who argue that if Congress takes away the authority of the Supreme Court to hear a particular type of case, that there could be a violation of another constitutional provisions, and in that instance it would be the First Amendment. And as a matter of constitutional law, I don't feel I can go further than that. I have—

Senator LEAHY. But, Judge, this is somewhat similar to the initial answers given by then-Justice Rehnquist. But he ultimately came down and said in that hearing that Congress could not remove the Court's jurisdiction over First Amendment cases.

Are you telling me that—and I just wanted to make sure I fully understand your answer—you are not willing to go to the extent then-Justice Rehnquist did at his hearing?

Judge ALITO. I gave a speech a while ago addressing this question from a practical standpoint or touching on it from a practical standpoint, and I said that I thought that doing something like this would be an awkward and undesirable way of proceeding because it would lead to a lack of uniformity in decisions. If jurisdiction is taken away from the Supreme Court but jurisdiction remains in the courts of appeals, then conflicts in the circuit would develop—conflicts in the circuits would develop and you'd have conflicting decisions potentially in different parts—governing in different parts of the country and no way to resolve the issue. And if the jurisdiction was taken away from the Federal courts in general, then you would potentially have conflicting State court decisions. So the First Amendment, or whatever constitutional provision was at issue, would mean something different potentially in Vermont than it did in New Hampshire or in some other State.

So there are undesirable practical consequences of proceeding in that way. I'm—

Senator LEAHY. Your answer would be the same, I assume, if I was asking the question about the Fourth or the Fifth or the Sixth Amendment, basically the same?

Judge ALITO. It would be, Senator. I have just not studied this issue in enough depth to be able to give an answer. I would have to study it in depth and probably hear it in the context of a case. What I do know is that there is a division of authority among leading constitutional scholars, and I would not want to hazard an answer to the question here without going into the question with a lot—studying the question in considerably greater depth than I have.

Senator LEAHY. This will be my last, and I appreciate the courtesy of the Chairman, who, I might say, has run this hearing with total fairness, as he always does. I may have some followup questions in writing, but this will be last chance to ask you anything.

Under your theory of the unitary Executive, are citizen suit provisions, such as those in our environmental laws, allowing citizens to act basically as private attorneys general and sue polluters, are they constitutional?

Judge ALITO. I don't see a connection between the unitary Executive theory and that issue, and I think Congress has the authority to create a private cause of action for anyone that Congress chooses to create such a cause of action for, subject only to whatever limitations are imposed by the Constitution. But we often grapple with the issue of whether Congress intended to create a private cause of action for a particular class of plaintiffs. That's a difficult issue that comes up with some frequency in Federal litigation. But where Congress speaks directly to the question and says that people with—and defined the category of cases, the category of plaintiffs who can bring a suit, a citizen suit, or whatever it is, then that's definitive, of course, subject only to whatever limitations the Constitution imposes.

Senator LEAHY. Judge, that is an answer—the substance of what you said is something obviously I would like, but I am still troubled by it because in November 2000, right after the Presidential election, you came and spoke to a meeting of the Annual Federalist Society Lawyers Convention about the powers of the President. And when you discussed your theory of the unitary Executive, you criticized the Supreme Court's upholding the independent counsel statute, among other things. Is your answer today different than what you were saying then?

Judge ALITO. What I said in that speech was that the Congress—I'm sorry, the Constitution confers the Executive power on the President, and when we are dealing with something that is within the President's Executive power, without getting into the scope of Executive power, and there I was focusing on the President's duty to take care that the laws are faithfully executed. That's explicitly set out in the Constitution, so there can't be any debate about whether or not the President has that power.

When we're dealing with something that is within the scope of the President's Executive power, the President should have the authority to control the executive branch, and the latest expression of the Supreme Court on that issue at the time was the Morrison decision, and the Morrison decision formulated the governing standard in what I would call functional terms. And it said that Congress has the ability to—has the authority to place restrictions on the President's ability to remove inferior executive officers, provided that in doing so Congress does not take away the President's authority to control the executive branch. And I was talking about the importance of maintaining the principle that the President is the head of the executive branch and should control the executive branch.

Senator LEAHY. But you did at that time criticize the Supreme Court's upholding the independent counsel statute, did you not?

Judge ALITO. I said that it was inconsistent with what you could call the pure theory of the unitary Executive. But at the time, of course, Morrison had been decided, and it was a resounding 8–1 decision, and it is a very important precedent of the Court.

Senator LEAHY. If you had been there, it might have been 7–2? Is that what you are suggesting?

Judge ALITO. Well, if it comes up before me, if I am confirmed, then Morrison is a strong expression of the view of the Supreme Court on the question, and an 8–1 precedent on an issue that was important and controversial at the time when it came up before the Court, and it was very clear and, as I said, a resounding decision by the Supreme Court on the question.

Senator LEAHY. Well, I do not want to intrude on other Senators' time, and I may do a followup question with you. Thank you for your answers. We have obviously agreed on some things and disagreed on others. I appreciate you taking the time to answer.

Mr. Chairman, I appreciate your time.

Chairman SPECTER. I am going to use just a little of my reserved time to comment on what Senator Leahy raised about the issue with Chief Justice Rehnquist on his statement that you could not take away the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court of the United States on First Amendment issues. That was as interesting a dialog as I have had in my tenure here, and I have had a few, and it arose in a curious context.

I had asked the Chief Justice about the question and he refused to answer. And overnight, the staff had found an article written by a young Arizona lawyer named William H. Rehnquist in 1958, which was published in the Harvard Law Record, not the Harvard Law Review but the Harvard Law Record. And in that article, lawyer Rehnquist said that the Senate Judiciary Committee was derelict in its duty in questioning Justice Whittaker at his confirmation hearing in not asking pointed questions about due process or equal protection.

When my turn came, I came back to then-Justice Rehnquist and said, how about it? Are you that William H. Rehnquist. He admitted he was, didn't have much choice. And I said, well, how about this article? And he emphatically said, "I was wrong."

[Laughter.]

Chairman SPECTER. But that provided—

Senator HATCH. He was under oath.

Chairman SPECTER. That provided an opening, and I proceeded to continue the line of questioning. Finally, he allowed as to how Congress couldn't take away the Court's power over the First Amendment.

It seems to me patently clear that Congress cannot take away the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court on constitutional issues. It cannot do it. That is the principal function of the Supreme Court of the United States, is to interpret the Constitution. And if the Congress could take away that authority, the Court's authority would be vacuous.

But then, as you might expect, I asked him about the Fourth Amendment, search and seizure, and Fifth Amendment, privilege against self-incrimination, went right down the line. He refused to answer every question. And I said, well, why will you answer questions on the First Amendment and not on the rest of them? He wouldn't answer that, either.

[Laughter.]

Chairman SPECTER. Chief Justice Rehnquist was confirmed 65 to 33, which confirmed an observation which I have made from time to time, Judge Alito, that nominees answer just about as many questions as they think they have to to be confirmed. He may turn out to be a notable exception, but I think that is a valid generalization. It also confirmed my experience that nominees remember these proceedings and nominees are influenced by these proceedings in very subtle ways.

We don't extract promises, but when Senator Leahy very adroitly asks you about the rule of four on granting cert, four Justices say the cert is granted but it takes five to stay an execution in a capital case, how ridiculous can you be? Senator Leahy wondered if you would remember that. Well, I predict you will, if confirmed, remember that. In fact, I predict you will remember it even if you are not confirmed.

But to this day, Justices' comments to me about questions they had here—every time I see Justice Souter, he says he still hasn't made up his mind on whether Korea was a war or not. And the other Justices—I won't go into any more detail.

I am going to reserve the balance of my 20 minutes and 54 seconds. Senator Hatch?

Senator HATCH. I will reserve my 25 minutes.

Chairman SPECTER. Senator Kennedy, you are recognized for 25 minutes.

Senator KENNEDY. Thank you. Good morning.

Judge ALITO. Good morning, Senator.

Senator KENNEDY. Just to initially follow-up on the last area of questioning by Senator Leahy about a unitary Executive, I have asked you questions about this earlier in the week. My colleagues have. I am not going to get back into the speech that you gave at the Federalist Society. Well, I will mention just the one part of it that is of concern.

“If the administrative agencies are in the Federal Government, which they certainly are, they have to be in one of those branches, legislative, executive, judicial, and the logical candidate is the executive branch. The President has the power and the duty to supervise the way in which the—to which subordinate executive branch officials exercise the President’s power, carrying Federal law into execution.”

So we asked you about that power and that authority and you responded, as I think you just repeated here, that the Humphrey’s case was the dominant case on this issue. Am I roughly correct? I am trying to get through some material. Is it—

Judge ALITO. Yes. It was the leading case that was followed up by the Morrison case.

Senator KENNEDY. Followed up by the Morrison case as the controlling case on these administrative agencies. But what you haven’t mentioned to date is your dissent from the Morrison case. We have been trying to gain your view about the unitary Executive. Most people believe we have an executive, legislative, and judicial branch—and now we have this unitary Executive which many people don’t really understand and it sounds a little bizarre. You have indicated support for it. You have commented back and forth about it. You have indicated the controlling cases that establish the administrative agencies. You refer to the Morrison case as guiding the authority.

But then in your comments about Morrison, you then proceed to outline a legal strategy for getting around Morrison. This is what you said. “Perhaps the Morrison decision can be read in a way that heeds if not the constitutional text that I mention, at least the objective for setting up a unitary Executive. That could lead to a fairly strong degree of Presidential control over the workings of the administrative agencies in the area of policymaking.”

Our question in this hearing is what is your view of the unitary Executive. You have responded to a number of our people, but we are interested in your view and your comments on the Morrison case, which you say is controlling, but we want to know your view and it includes these words—“that could lead to a fairly strong degree of Presidential control over the workings of the administrative agencies in the area of policymaking.” Now, that would alter and change the balance between the Congress and the President in a very dramatic and significant way, would it not?

Judge ALITO. I don’t think that it would, Senator. The administrative agencies—the term “administrative agencies” is a broad term and it includes the Federal Reserve—it includes agencies that are not regarded as so-called independent agencies. It includes agencies that are within—that are squarely within the executive branch under anybody’s understanding of the term, agencies where they are headed by a Presidential appointee whose term of office is at the pleasure of the President, and that’s principally what I’m talking about there, the ability of the President to control the structure of the executive branch, not agencies—the term “administrative agencies” is not synonymous with agencies like the FTC, which was involved in the Humphrey’s Executor case, where the agency is headed by a commission and the commissioners are appointed by the President for a term of office and there are conditions placed on the removal of the commissioners.

Senator KENNEDY. The point, Judge, the answer you gave both to my colleagues Senator Leahy, Durbin, and to me, and the quote, “the concept of a unitary Executive does not have to do with the scope of Executive power” really was not accurate. You are admitting now that it has to do with the administrative agencies and this would have a dramatic and important reconsideration of the balance between the Executive and the Congress. I haven’t got the time to go through, but we are talking about the Federal Reserve, Consumer Product Safety, the Federal Trade Commission, a number of the agencies that would be directly considered and that have very, very important independent strategy.

Judge ALITO. Senator, as to the agencies that are headed by commissions, the members of which are appointed for terms, and there are limitations placed on removal, the precedents—the leading precedent is Humphrey’s Executor and that is reinforced, and I would say very dramatically reinforced, by the decision in Morrison, which did not involve such an agency. It involved an officer who was carrying out what I think everyone would agree is a core function of the executive branch, which is the enforcement of the law, taking care that the laws are faithfully executed, and yet—

Senator KENNEDY. But the point here is that you take exception to Morrison. You are very clear. We are interested in your views. We understand Humphrey’s and Morrison are the guiding laws, but we talked about stare decisis and other precedents. But you have a different view with regards to the role of the Executive now, an enhanced role, what they call the unitary Executive, and that has to do, as well, with the balance between the Executive and the Congress in a very important way in terms of these administrative agencies.

I haven’t got the time to go all the way through, but we did have some discussion about those agencies and how it would alter the balance of authority and power between the Congress and the Executive. That is very important. It is enormously interesting. We have had Professor Calabresi from Harvard University spell this out in great detail, and I know you have separated yourself a bit from his thinking, to the extent that he would go in terms of administrative agencies. The point is, there would be a different relationship if your view was the dominant view in the Supreme Court between the Executive and the Congress and that is really the point.

Judge ALITO. But Senator Kennedy, what I have tried to say is that I regard this as a line of precedent that is very well developed and I have no quarrel with it and it culminates in Morrison, in which the Supreme Court said that even as to an inferior officer who is carrying out the core Executive function of taking care that the laws are faithfully executed, it is permissible for Congress to place restrictions on the ability of the President to remove such an officer, provided that in doing so, there is no interference with the President's authority, and they found no interference with that authority there. That is an expression of the Supreme Court's view on an issue where the claim for—where the claim that there should be no removal restrictions imposed is far stronger than it is with respect to an independent agency like the one involved in Humphrey's Executor.

Senator KENNEDY. The point is that you differed with Morrison and outlined a different kind of a strategy. I want to move on.

I want to come back just briefly again to the Vanguard issue, where I continue to be troubled and puzzled by your answers to me and others. Now, just to get back to the starting point, in your sworn statement to the Committee when you were nominated to the circuit court in 1990, on page 15 of that statement, you wrote this about your recusal practices. "I do not believe that conflicts of interest relating to my financial interests are likely to arise. I would, however, disqualify myself from any cases involving the Vanguard Companies." So according to your sworn promise, you were going to recuse yourself from cases involving the Vanguard Companies, is that correct?

Judge ALITO. I said I would disqualify myself from any cases involving the Vanguard Companies.

Senator KENNEDY. All right. You also said you would recuse yourself from any case involving your sister's firm—

Judge ALITO. That's correct.

Senator KENNEDY.—and cases in which you were involved in the U.S. Attorney's Office, is that correct?

Judge ALITO. Yes, that's correct.

Senator KENNEDY. And there has been some discussion as to whether that commitment covered only the initial period of your judgeship, and I am not going to go into that. I am not going into that.

I just want to know about the steps you took to meet your commitment to the Committee even in the initial years. On Tuesday, you told Senator Feingold that you had no recollection of whether you put Vanguard on your recusal list when you were first appointed to the bench in 1990. Is that still right?

Judge ALITO. That's correct. I don't have the initial list that was submitted to the clerk's office and I think I clarified in response to Senator Feingold's question that that is a list for—that is a list that is used by the clerk's office to make the first cut on recusal issues, but it is not by any means the last word.

Senator KENNEDY. OK. And in 1990, you owned $80,000 of Vanguard funds, is that right? And over the years, it grew to hundreds of thousands, is that correct?

Judge ALITO. It grew, yes.

Senator KENNEDY. So you were getting reports from Vanguard now either monthly or quarterly or annually, were you not, reporting—

Judge ALITO. Yes, I was.

Senator KENNEDY. All during this period of time?

Judge ALITO. Yes.

Senator KENNEDY. Do you know whether Vanguard was on your recusal list in 1991?

Judge ALITO. I don't know what was on my—the list that was with the clerk's office prior to the time when the system was computerized. I have seen recently, and I believe you have copies of the lists that were on the computer, and those lists do not include Vanguard. There is no question about that.

Senator KENNEDY. We received your standing recusal list from the Third Circuit earlier this week. It is dated January 28, 1993, and Vanguard is not on it. You have your sister's law firm on it. You have your cases from the U.S. Attorney's Office on it, but not Vanguard, your largest investment. Here are the recusal lists for 1994, 1995, 1996, and Vanguard is not on any of them, either. Do you have any reason to disagree with the report from the Clerk of the Court?

Judge ALITO. I don't, Senator. I don't know whether—I have no comment on the list. That's the list that they had and I don't know exactly how that list came about, but that's the list they have.

Senator KENNEDY. What does it say at the top of the 1/28/93 list under the date? As I understand, it says "no changes."

Judge ALITO. As of 1/28/93, no changes. That's correct.

Senator KENNEDY. So this was 1993, so there were no changes in that from 1992, and you have listed probably eight or nine different items on there, have you not?

Judge ALITO. There are eight items listed.

Senator KENNEDY. OK. So you have got eight items on there. Vanguard isn't on it, and it says no changes from the previous year. So I assume that means the 1992 list was the same, so that you did not have Vanguard on the 1992 list, either. Do you remember whether you ever placed Vanguard on your recusal list at any time between the time you were sworn in and January 1993?

Judge ALITO. As I said, I don't have a copy of lists that predate this. In fact, I didn't have a copy of these lists and I don't know, obviously, I can't recall what was on the earlier lists.

Senator KENNEDY. Well, in 1994, you removed the U.S. Attorney's Office from your recusal list, is that right?

Judge ALITO. Yes.

Senator KENNEDY. So you did revisit the recusal list at that time.

Judge ALITO. I notified the clerk's office to take the U.S. Attorney's Office off the list. I actually think I have a copy of the letter that I sent there. I don't believe that I looked at the list and crossed it off the list. I sent them a letter and I outlined—I say, it has now been 4 years. This was an instance—another instance of my going beyond what I had to do. I recused myself from everything from the office, not just things that were there while I was in office. But after the passage of 4 years, I thought that the cases that I had had any possible connection with had washed out and so I sent a letter, and I have a copy of the letter, saying, take it off this list but notify the U.S. Attorney's Office and the public defender's offices that they should notify the clerk's office if any case comes up in which they have any reason to believe that any aspect of the case was in the U.S. Attorney's Office while I was there.

Senator KENNEDY. Well, I just mention, one of the things you had to do was put Vanguard on the list, was it not, because you gave the assurances to the Committee, sworn testimony, that you were going to recuse yourself. That was one of the things—

Judge ALITO. Senator, if it was not on the initial list, then that would be an oversight on my part. I said in answering the question to the Senate, I don't believe conflicts of interest are likely to arise. They really rarely do arise with respect to mutual funds. That's one of the main reasons why judges and other people who have to worry about conflicts invest in mutual funds, and no Vanguard case came before me—no case involving Vanguard came before me for 12 years.

Senator KENNEDY. The point is, judges—as I understand and is their responsibility—take the whole issue on recusal extremely seriously and review those lists very, very carefully. Given the assurances and the pledge and the promise under oath to the Committee. Now we find out that it is not on your list, and over the period of these last weeks, we have heard so many explanations, Judge. This is what confuses us.

We hear first of all that it is a computer glitch. Then we hear, well, it doesn't really apply because it is an initial service list, so Vanguard really wasn't in it because I didn't make the decisions on it until after I had been in 12 years. I made the pledge to the Committee. I don't know how good that pledge was, or how many years it was good, but that initial pledge—initial service meant I didn't have to do it. And then we heard the excuse of, well, it was a pro se case, and we had different computers. That was what was mentioned in my office. It is a pro se case. We have different computers. There are different computers in the clerk's office than exist in the law firms here in Washington from all over the country. I could never quite understand it because a pro se—obviously talking about individuals—you would think that that might even have a higher kind of a requirement.

But the facts are that you never put that Vanguard on your recusal list, and all of these papers were in your control. And that, I think, is a matter of concern to the—it should be to all of us.

Judge ALITO. Senator, could I just say a brief comment on that? Senator KENNEDY. Yes.

Judge ALITO. I have tried to be as forthcoming in explaining what happened here as I possibly could be, and I am one of those judges that you described who take recusals very, very seriously. And I served for 15-and-a-half years. I sat on the merits on well over 4,000 cases.

In addition to that, let me just mention the statistics for a recent year, and I think these are typical of my entire period of service. During the last calendar year, I received over 500 petitions for rehearing; most of those are in cases I didn't sit on initially; over 400 motions. Most of those are in cases I didn't hear on the merits, and many of those are just as important as appeals on the merits because they involve things like whether someone is going to be removed to a country where the person claims that they will be subjected to persecution, or they are applications by habeas petitioners for permission to proceed with—to take an appeal in a habeas case. And if we don't issue the certificate of appealability, that is the end of the matter for that petitioner, who may be serving a very lengthy sentence or a life sentence.

So we are talking about well over a thousand cases a year. Now—and this is over a course of 15 years. This Monga case is one case and I have said there was an oversight on my part in not focusing on my personal practice when the issue came before me. And when the recusal issue was brought to my attention, I did everything that I could to make sure that nobody could come away from this with the impression that Ms. Maharaj got anything other than an absolutely fair appeal.

But I have tried to explain the whole thing. I have not given conflicting answers, but I have been asked a number of different questions and there are a number of steps that were involved in what took place. The fact that it was a pro se case doesn't—I mentioned that not because pro se cases are any less important than any other category of cases. They are very important, but it is the fact that our court uses a different system for pro se cases. We don't have these clearance sheets, and that is when I have typically focused on the issue of recusal.

Senator KENNEDY. Well, I thank you, Judge. I think if we had in the beginning—we all make mistakes and I have certainly made more than my share. But if we had a statement on this, I think we could have cleared this all up in the very beginning if it was just said it was a mistake, it wasn't on the list, it should have been on the list, as we are saying now. We would never have had to get all this or go through this.

But we have had a series of explanations—the light not going off when I looked over the Vanguard case, the computer glitches, the changes of the computers, I wasn't told by my clerks. We had all of those statements, and so this was what troubled many of us on the Committee about getting straight answers on an issue which is of great importance.

Mr. Chairman, I will use the remainder of my time with a brief comment. I want to thank our Chairman for the fair and dignified way that he has conducted the hearing. I thank our ranking member, Senator Leahy, for his usual courtesies, as well. And I thank Judge Alito for your willingness to serve, and thanks to your family for being here and for the support they have given throughout these hearings.

These stakes are very high, and that was reflected in the variety of questions posed over the past 3 days. We started these hearings seeking answers. We have come with even more questions about Judge Alito's commitment to fairness and equality for all.

Unitary Executive: We discussed Judge Alito's expansive views on Presidential authority. He distanced himself from the theory of the so-called unitary Executive, one that promotes extremely expanded Executive power. He gave the Committee platitudes about Supreme Court precedent and the Constitution, but his comments before this Committee run away from his statements of the past, some as recently as 5 years ago, that embrace this very radical, and I believe bizarre theory.

Professor Stephen Calabresi, one of the originators of the unitary Executive theory, says that the impact on this Nation is vast and dramatic. It obliterates the independence of agencies that protect the public, such as the Consumer Products Safety Commission, the Elections Commission, Securities and Exchange Commission, and much more.

It makes no sense to describe the effects of this bizarre theory in any other terms. That is how its founders brazenly described it. Somehow, Judge Alito expects us to buy his unique and lonely portrayal of this radical theory as something less than it is.

On the Concerned Alumni of Princeton, much has been made of the wide interest in Judge Alito's interest in this organization and its frankly bigoted views. I was pleased that Judge Alito distanced himself from its repulsive anti-woman, anti-black, anti-disability, anti-gay pronouncements—views that were especially pronounced at the time that Judge Alito believes he joined.

But we still do not have a clear answer to why Judge Alito joined this reprehensible group in the first place. We still do not know why he believed that membership in the group would enhance his job application in the Reagan Justice Department. We still don't know why he chose this organization among so many others organizations that he likely belonged to, but somehow can't remember why.

In Vanguard, some of our Republican colleagues find it shocking that we would even question Judge Alito about his failure to recuse himself from Vanguard cases. But the real shock is that Judge Alito failed to meet his sworn promise to this Committee more seriously. He says it was an oversight that he corrected 12 years after he made that promise.

But now we know from his own testimony and records that he apparently never put Vanguard on the recusal list, even immediately after his promise to this Committee. He has failed to give us any plausible explanation. The bottom line is that he just didn't think his commitment to the Committee and to the U.S. Senate was important enough to honor.

On the 1985 job application, in my office Judge Alito tried to distance himself from the ideological views and legal opinions expressed in the 1985 job application to the Reagan Justice Department. He brushed it off as just a job application. Now, he has tried before the Committee to distance himself from the stunning statement that the White House and Congress somehow are superior to the Supreme Court, the keeper of our liberties.

He didn't back away one inch from his view that a woman's right to make her own reproductive decisions is not protected under the Constitution. He didn't back away from his criticism of the principle of one person/one vote.

On the cases he decided, in case after case we see legal contortions and inconsistent reasoning to bend over backward to help the powerful. He may cite instances to think that he helped the little guy, but the record is clear that the average person has a hard time getting a fair shake in Judge Alito's courtroom.

We are not expecting judges to produce particular results in their decisions, but we do expect fairness for understanding the real-world impact of their decisions. Frankly, it would be more comforting if Judge Alito gave individuals the same benefit of the doubt in his courtroom that he is asking from this Committee on Vanguard, CAP, the unitary Executive, and women's privacy.

Now, the debate over the nomination continues. In the end, this debate really is about the path of progress and the kind of America we hope to become. America is noblest when it is just to all of its citizens in equal measure. America is freest when the rights and liberties of all are respected. America is strongest when all can share fairly in its prosperity. And we need a Court that will hold us true to these guiding principles today and into the future.

Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman.

Chairman SPECTER. Thank you, Senator Kennedy.

Senator Hatch has stated his wish to reclaim at this point some of his reserved time.

Senator Hatch.

Senator HATCH. I don't intend to be very long, but I really believe that bringing up Vanguard or the Princeton matter goes beyond the pale at this point in this hearing, and let me just make this case.

Some of your critics, Judge, have focused a lot of attention on the actions over the Vanguard matter, and I think most people who think, think this is really a case of much ado about nothing. Certainly, no law required you to recuse yourself in that case. As a matter, the law, helped put together by one of the leading Democrat ethicists and professors of law, reads as follows: "financial interest means ownership of a legal or equitable interest, however small, or a relationship as director, adviser or other active participant in the affairs of a party, except that ownership in a mutual or common investment fund that holds securities is not a 'financial interest' in such securities unless the judge participates in the management of the fund."

Now, you did not participate in the management of the fund, right?

Judge ALITO. No, I certainly did not.

Senator HATCH. OK. That is what the law says. So what is this big case that is being made? It must be that since you signed, among dozens of pages, the Committee form that says in the initial service you agreed to recuse yourself in the Vanguard matter, and then you made a mistake later, 12 years later, which you rectified—in other words, you lived up to your word in every sense of that term, whether or not you considered the initial service or not.

But anybody who looks at it would have to say, my gosh, that doesn't mean 12 years from now. But you even ignored that and said I recognize that I made a mistake. I recused myself even when I didn't have to recuse myself and did everything I could to live up to my word, which you did. In other words, you lived up to your word.

That is a fair interpretation, isn't it?

Judge ALITO. It is, Senator. I said in the—even if you read the answer as setting out a promise that would exist—that would be binding on me for the entire term of my judicial service, I did disqualify myself in the only Vanguard case that ever came before me.

Senator HATCH. And so to imply somehow or other that you were dishonest because you lived up to your word in the end, I think is a little bit beyond the pale.

The ABA reviewed this matter and found that you have an excellent record for integrity. You earned for the second time the highest American Bar Association rating of well qualified.

Now, I put in the record yesterday letters from several ethics professors who have examined this issue and found nothing improper. They agree that you lived up to your word and you didn't have to, nor will you have to in the future. That is what that law says in 28 U.S. Code Section 455(d)(4)(i). That is what it says.

Now, I might add that included a letter from Professor Geoffrey Hazard. Back when Justice Breyer was up for confirmation and questions were raised about the propriety of him hearing a case in which some argued falsely, I think, that he had a financial interest, my friend from Massachusetts, Senator Kennedy, favorably cited a letter from Professor Hazard that was favorable to Justice Breyer. And by the way, I am not going to judge the two cases, but it was every bit as much a case as this weak thing that has been brought against you.

Now, you know, what is going on here is nothing but an attempt to make a big deal about nothing, a small thing, and I think it is being done with a bit of old bait-and-switch, if you ask my opinion. I might add that when Judge Breyer—what happened there in the case of Breyer is I reviewed, I investigated it, and when the facts showed that he did no wrong, as they show you have done no wrong, I came out of the blocks and defended him. And I am glad I did because he, like you, is an honest man. Neither Justice Breyer nor you have gone into public service to make money. That is pretty apparent.

Now, to have this like you have done something wrong because you made a mistake and then you rectified it—my gosh, how many times do we have to beat that old, dead horse?

With regard to other thing, I have my own opinion as to why that is repeatedly brought up, when you have adequately explained that you didn't remember much about it, or anything at all. Now, we find that the Rusher memoranda contained no reference to you. He never heard of you before now. And it makes you wonder, why are they bringing that up? Well, I have got my opinions on that and I think my opinions are right.

The fact of the matter is you have been straightforward here. You have honestly answered the questions. You have answered more questions than almost any Supreme Court nominee in my 29 years in the Senate and I don't think you have been fairly treated. And it makes everybody wonder, why would anybody want to do these jobs?

I know law review graduates who make more than the Chief Justice this year, new graduates from law school. So it is apparent you are going into this because you love your country, you want to serve it. And you have done it well for 15 years, and anybody who knows you knows that. And I know you. So I think it is just wrong to keep bringing these phony issues up. And you have to ask, well, why are they doing it because they are so phony?

That is all I care to say. I will reserve the balance of my time.

Chairman SPECTER. Thank you, Senator Hatch. Your 18 minutes and 9 seconds will be reserved.

Senator HATCH. Thank you.

Chairman SPECTER. Senator Biden has asked for 20 minutes. We are going to be a little more flexible with this final round because I see light at the end of the tunnel, quite frankly. I see our conclusion of these hearings probably not tonight, but tomorrow, not too late. We have started all the sessions exactly on time and we have held to the time limits up until now, which I think we have to do if we want to do if we want ahead. If you once start to slip on when you start or the timing, it just gets out of hand, but at this juncture on a final round we have a little more flexibility. I see the light at the end of the tunnel.

Senator Biden, you are recognized for up to 20 minutes, as you have requested, and if you go a little more, my gavel will stay put.

Senator BIDEN. Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I will try not to.

Judge, I heard the Chairman. I happened to be doing something on Darfur and I was in the conference room and I heard the Chairman say that—which I agree, he and I have talked about this—nominees tend to answer as many questions as they think they have to in order to get confirmed. I would say that that has been the case with all nominees basically since Judge Bork.

I would also add another, I think, truism that has developed is they tend to answer controversial questions in direct proportion to how much they think the public is likely to agree with them. It all goes to kind of a central point here, is what is the public entitled to know about what you think, or what anyone thinks, before they go on the Court. I realize there is this dynamic tension between your independence as a nominee, would you be an independent Justice, and answering questions.

But having said that, let me go to an area that I hope you will engage me in and it goes to Executive power. I have had the dubious distinction because of my role in the Judiciary Committee and on the Foreign Relations Committee in the last three or four times forces have been used by a President to be the guy in charge of, at least on my side of the aisle, drafting or negotiating the drafting of the authority to use force, whether it was President Clinton, before that, President Bush, and even before that, the discussion back on Lebanon with President Reagan, et cetera. So it is something I have dealt with a lot. It doesn't mean I am right about it, but I have thought a lot about it.

Now, there is a school of thought that is emerging within the administration that is making not illegitimate an intellectually thought out claim that the power of the Executive in times of war exceed that of what I would argue a majority of the constitutional scholarship has suggested. The fellow, who is a very bright guy, who is referred to as the architect of the President's memorandum on the ability of Presidents to conduct military operations against terrorists and nations supporting them is Professor Yoo. He has written a book called, "The Power of War and Peace," and he makes some claims that are relatively new among the constitutional scholars in his book and he urges, and he had urged when he was at the administration, the President had these authorities.

For example, he says that the framing generation well understood that declarations of war were obsolete. He goes on to say, given this context, it is clear that Congress's power to declare war does not constrain a President's independent and plenary right and constitutional authority over the use of force. And he goes on and he argues, as you well know this argument, I mean, not from your court, just as an informed, intelligent man, there is a great debate now of whether the administration's internal position is correct, and that is the President has the authority to go to war absent congressional authorization. It was a claim made by Bush I and then dropped. Bush I dropped that the only reason the "declare war" provision is in the Constitution is to give the President the authority to go to war if the President didn't want to. That was the claim made. A similar claim is made here.

So I want to ask you a question. Do you think the President has the authority to invade Iran tomorrow without getting permission from the people, from the United States Congress, absent him being able to show there is an immediate threat to our national security?

Judge ALITO. Well, that is a question that I don't think is settled by—the whole issue of the extent of the President's authority to authorize the use of military force without congressional approval has been the subject of a lot of debate. The Constitution divides the powers relating to making war between the President and the Congress. It gives Congress the power to declare war, and obviously, that means something. It gives Congress the power of the purse, and obviously military operations can't be carried out for any length of time without congressional appropriations. Congress is given the power to raise and support an army, to maintain a navy, to make the rules for governing the land and the naval forces. The President has the power of the Commander in Chief. I think there has been general agreement, and the Prize cases support the authority of the President to take military action on his own in the case of an emergency, when there is not time for Congress to react—

Senator BIDEN. Is that the deciding question, that the Congress does not have the time to act?

Judge ALITO. Well, the Prize cases, I think, go—are read to go as far as to say that in that limited circumstance, the President can act without congressional approval. A lot of scholars say that what is important as far as congressional approval is not the form, it is not whether it is a formal declaration of war or not, it is whether there is authorization in one form or another. The War Powers Resolution was obviously an expression of the view on the part of Congress—

Senator BIDEN. If I can interrupt, Judge, since I am not going to have much time, the War Powers Resolution is a legislative Act. I don't want to get into that. I am talking about the war clause. The administration argues and Yoo argues that, quote, "I do not think the President is constitutionally required to get legislative authorization for launching military hostilities." That is a pretty central question. That means the President, if that interpretation is taken, the President could invade—and maybe there is good reason to—invade Iraq—I mean, invade Syria tomorrow, or invade Iran tomorrow without any consultation with the U.S. Congress. That is a pretty big deal. Up to now, Fisher and Hencken and most of the scholarship here has said, no, no, no, the President's authority falls into the zone where he needs it for emergency purposes, where he doesn't have time to consult with the Congress.

But you seem to be agreeing with the interpretation of the President—Professor Yoo that says, no, the President has the authority if he thinks it is necessary to move from a state of peace to a state of war without any congressional authorization. Am I—

Judge ALITO. I hope I am not giving you that impression, Senator—

Senator BIDEN. Oh, OK. Maybe you can clarify.

Judge ALITO.—because I didn't mean to. I didn't mean to say that. I have not read Professor Yoo's book or anything that he or anyone else has written setting out the theory that you described. I have been trying to describe what I understand the authorities to say in this area.

Generally, when this issue has come up, or variations of this issue have come up in relation to a number of recent wars—there were a number of efforts to raise issues relating to this in relation to the war in Vietnam. There was an effort to raise it in relation to our military operations in the former Yugoslavia. In most of those instances, they didn't—most of those instances were the cases were dismissed by the lower courts under the so-called political question doctrine—

Senator BIDEN. As you and I know, that is a different issue. The political question doctrine is a different issue than whether or not you think that—I am asking you as a citizen whether you think that, as the administration is arguing—for example, it argues that the case is made, and I am quoting, that “the Constitution permits the President to violate international law when he is engaged in war.” It just states that, flatly, that is what the memorandum of the Justice Department states flatly. The President has that sole authority. He argues that the Congress could have that authority, as well, just violate international law. He goes on to argue, as does the memorandum argue, this is this administration's position, so that is why it is relevant. It says that the President may use his Commander in Chief and Executive power to use military force to protect a nation subject only to the congressional appropriations. That means that the argument the administration is making is the only authority that Congress has is to cut off funds.

Let us say we didn't want the President to invade Iran. The administration argues, we could pass a resolution saying, “You have no authority to invade Iran.” and the President could say and the next day invade Iran. Our only recourse would be to cut off appropriations. But as you know, there is no way to cut off specific appropriations. You would have to cut off appropriations for the entire military, which means it is a totally useless tool for the Congress in today's world. You can't say, well, I am going to cut off only the money for the oil that allows the steaming of the ships to get from the East Coast to the Mediterranean Sea and/or to the Persian Gulf.

So it is really kind of important whether or not you think the President does not need the authority of the U.S. Congress to wage a war where there is not an imminent threat against the United States, and that is my question.

Judge ALITO. And Senator, if I am confirmed and if this comes before me, or perhaps it could come before me on the court of appeals, the first issue would be the political question doctrine that I have described. But if we were to get beyond that, what I can tell you is that I don't have—I have not studied these authorities and it is not my practice to just express an opinion on a constitutional question, including particularly one that is as momentous as this. I set out my understanding of what the Congress—what the Constitution does in allocating powers relating to war between the Executive and Congress and what some of the leading authorities have said on this question. But beyond that—and I haven't read Professor Yoo's book or anything that he has written on this issue—I would have to study the question.

Senator BIDEN. Thank you. Let me move to something you have spoken about, stare decisis. I know it has been raised a number of times. That is basically following precedent. As a circuit court of appeals judge, in layman's language, what does that mean, as a circuit court of appeals judge, what does it mean, you are required to adhere to stare decisis?

Judge ALITO. We are required to follow decisions of the Supreme Court, to start out with, because it's a superior court. We are—when we sit as a panel, it is our practice, and I think it's the practice of all the courts of appeals, that one panel can't overrule a decision of another panel, so it means that when we sit en banc, it is a doctrine that counsels adherence to prior precedent.

Senator BIDEN. But you are allowed, like you did in ACLU v. Schundler, you concluded, which I think you had a right to do, that the precedent of your circuit was incorrect and you ruled the other way. I mean, I think you have the right to do that—

Judge ALITO. We can't do that at the panel level. We can't say a prior panel decision is incorrect.

Senator BIDEN. But you can when you sit en banc—

Judge ALITO. Oh, when we sit en banc—

Senator BIDEN.—when all the justices are there.

Judge ALITO. That's correct.

Senator BIDEN. OK. Now, how about when a Supreme Court Justice, a Supreme Court Justice is not required, is he or she, to follow the precedent of the Supreme Court? Stare decisis doesn't apply there, does it? It may be practice, but as a practical matter, most scholars say you are required as a Supreme Court Justice to adhere to precedent, is it?

Judge ALITO. Well, stare decisis certainly applies. Stare decisis takes different forms. There is what some people call horizontal stare decisis, which means a lower court has to follow the higher court—I am sorry, vertical stare decisis. And then are various forms of horizontal stare decisis, which means a court either must or should follow its own prior precedents. And on the Supreme Court, of course, when we are talking about whether the Supreme Court is going to follow a prior Supreme Court precedent, that is horizontal. There, it isn't an absolute requirement to follow a prior precedent—

Senator BIDEN. It is not an absolute—

Judge ALITO. It is not an absolute requirement, but it is the presumption that the Court will follow its prior precedents—

Senator BIDEN. No, I understand that, but no one would argue that if you or any other Justice clearly broke from the precedent of a Supreme Court decision, that you are in any way violating your ethical responsibility as a judge. You are entitled to do that, not that you would, but you are entitled to do that and no one would question that as a matter of right, is that not correct?

Judge ALITO. Well, I think people would question it if you disregarded the factors that go into the stare decisis analysis. If you said, I don't believe in—you know, I am not absolutely required to follow prior Supreme Court precedent and I regard every question as a completely open question—

Senator BIDEN. Well, I doubt—with all due respect, the way it would likely take the form is a Justice would say, “I disagree with the line of cases that say that.” you know, “a President needs congressional authority.” or that a—whatever the line of cases are. They are not likely to say, “I disregard stare decisis.” It is like what Scalia said in the abortion issue. He said, we should just look at this head-on. Roe v. Wade is wrongly decided. We should just say so. And he is entitled to do that, and if he had a majority—I am not suggesting what you would do on that—he is entitled to do that and that wouldn't be a violation of any written or unwritten code that relates to a Supreme Court Justice's conduct, would it?

Judge ALITO. Different Justices and different judges have different views about stare decisis, but my view is that you need a special justification for overruling a prior precedent and that reliance and reaffirmation are among the factors that are important. But I have also said it is not an inexorable command. In the area of constitutional law, there has to be the ability to revisit a case like Plessy v. Ferguson. I don't think anybody would want a system of stare decisis that made that impossible.

Senator BIDEN. My time is almost gone. I have a few minutes left. I would like to try to get quickly to another area here, if I may, that you have been questioned on, this whole notion of unitary Executive and the questions referencing Morrison and the dissent of Scalia, et cetera.

As I reach and teach the dissent of Scalia, he—and I won't take the time, in the interest of time, to read his exact language—he has a very scathing and intellectually justifiable, many would argue, criticism of the test employed by the majority in that case as to determine whether separation of powers has been breached. He argues there are very bright lines, that there can be no sharing of any of the power. If it is an Executive power, it is an Executive power and it is Executive power. He would argue that the alphabet agencies, the FDA, the FCC, the EPA, they are really not constitutionally permissible because the FDA makes a legislative judgment, it makes a judicial judgment, and it imposes fines and penalties, so therefore it does all three things and is sort of the bastard child.

But the majority of the Justices say that as long as the power one branch is using does not unduly trench upon the power of the other branch, or it does not substantially affect its ability to carry out its powers, then that is permissible. Which school of thought do you fall into?

Judge ALITO. Different issues are presented in different factual situations—

Senator BIDEN. That is why I didn't give you a specific issue.

Judge ALITO. Well, I think you need a specific issue in order to answer it. For example—

Senator BIDEN. OK, the FDA. Is it constitutional, the Food and Drug Administration?

Judge ALITO. I don't know that there are—I don't know whether there are statutory restrictions on the removal of the FDA Commissioner.

Senator BIDEN. No, but there are. The FDA does exercise judicial power. It makes judgments. You, Drug Company A, violated the law—

Judge ALITO. And I don't know any constitutional objection to that.

Senator BIDEN. Well, Scalia.

Judge ALITO. I don't know that he would have a constitutional objection to that. My understanding is that he would not have a constitutional objection to their doing that, but I could be mistaken, and I wouldn't want to prejudge any constitutional question that might be presented to me. But I am not aware of a constitutional—if there isn't any limitation on removal, then there obviously isn't a removal issue there. As to the agencies where there are restrictions on the removal of commissioners who are appointed for a term, that issue was dealt with within Humphrey's Executor and Wiener and in Morrison, and Morrison was eight-to-one and the other cases would be sort of a fortior from Morrison.

Senator BIDEN. My time is up, and hopefully, someone will pursue this unitary Executive issue about private suits, because I think what you explained was a little inconsistent, or I don't understand it, but I will let someone else do that. Thank you very much.

Chairman SPECTER. Thank you very much, Senator Biden.

Senator Grassley has asked that his time be reserved. Senator Grassley has other duties which he had to attend to. He was here earlier and will be back. He is also Chairman of the Finance Committee.

Just a word. When Senators come and go, everybody has many committees and many constituents and many visitors and many callers. So when they are not here, you can conclude they are otherwise engaged, and Senator Grassley is now. But his time is reserved.

Senator Kohl has asked for 20 minutes. Senator Kohl, we will set the clock at 20 minutes for you, and as I said earlier, we have some flexibility here.

Senator KOHL. I thank you very much, Mr. Chairman.

Judge Alito, elected officials make decisions on issues every day as we try to best represent the people of our States. And if our constituents do not think that the choices that we make reflect their opinions, then every few years they have an opportunity to vote for someone else.

As you know, that is not the case with the courts. Once confirmed, Federal judges have lifetime tenure and are virtually unaccountable. And that lifetime tenure can result in a judge or in a court that is removed from the thoughts and opinions of most Americans. As public opinion changes on an issue, the court may cease to reflect the views of the country.

If the courts take positions contrary to what most Americans think about an issue or decide a case, a very important case, in a way that is clearly out of the mainstream of American thought, what can be done about it? And do you think that the courts need to consider public opinion when deciding cases?

Judge ALITO. I think that the courts were structured the way they are so that they would not decide their cases based on public opinion. If the Framers had wanted the Federal courts to follow public opinion, then they would have made Federal judges elected officials, as they are in—as State judges are in many States. They gave them lifetime tenure because they thought there was a critical difference between deciding cases under the Constitution and the laws and responding to public opinion.

Now, they gave the courts limited authority because they wanted most of the decisions that affect people's daily lives to be made by the branches of Government that are directly responsible to the people, so that the people can control their own destiny. The Framers' theory was that sovereignty lay with the people and the Government was legitimate only insofar as it responded to the people. And that's why Congress is structured the way it is; that's why the Presidency is structured the way it is. But the courts were viewed—courts are not a democratic institution, and they were structured the way they are because they saw a difference between the judicial function and the other functions that are performed by the branches of the Federal Government.

Senator KOHL. Well, and yet the courts, particularly the Rehnquist Court has struck down more laws than any court in recent memory. In response to your comment about the legislatures as being involved in the daily lives of people, and the rate that they have been striking down laws during the Rehnquist Court was 6 times faster than during the first 200 years of our Republic. So how do we deal with the fact that while the legislature in your opinion is supposed to represent the daily lives of people, the courts, particularly the Supreme Court in recent years has been striking down the laws of the legislature more often than ever before?

Judge ALITO. Acts of Congress are presumptively constitutional, and I don't think that's just—that saying that is just words. I think that means something. Members of Congress take an oath to support the Constitution, and I think that the presumption of constitutionality means a lot. And I think that judgments that are reached by the legislative branch in the form of findings of fact, for example, are entitled to great respect because of the structure of our Government, the fact that the basic policy decisions are supposed to be made by the legislative branch and carried out by the executive branch, and also for the practical reason or the functional reason that Congress is in a better position to evaluate conditions in our country and conditions in our society and to make findings and to determine what's appropriate to deal with the social and economic problems that we face.

So I would certainly approach the question of determining whether an Act of Congress is constitutional with a heavy presumption in favor of the constitutionality of what Congress has done.

Now, ultimately Marbury v. Madison decided the question that when a case or controversy comes before the Supreme Court and the constitutionality of an Act of Congress is challenged, it is the duty of the Court to decide the question. Unless we were going to back to 1819, then that's the practice that the Federal courts have to follow. But they should always do that with an appreciation of their limited role and the role that the legislature is supposed to play.

Senator KOHL. All right. Well, as a followup to that, would you comment on term limits for Federal judges or age limits for Federal judges? As you know, if a judge so wishes, he or she can serve forever. Do you think that is a good thing in our society? Should judges be term-limited? Should judges at least be age-limited? Or should they serve just as long as they wish?

Judge ALITO. Well, those are issues that are decided by the Constitution. The Framers said that Federal judges have life tenure, so without amending the Constitution, I don't think you could have judges serve for a term of years or impose an age limitation on Federal judges?

Senator KOHL. Well, what is your opinion?

Judge ALITO. I'm not really sure. I understand the arguments in favor of doing both of those things, and State courts do that, and although I said yesterday I didn't think we should look to foreign law in interpreting our Constitution, I don't see a problem in looking to the practices of foreign countries in the way they organize their constitutional courts. And I believe that many of them do have term limitations on the length of service of a member of the highest court and other members of the judiciary.

So there are arguments on both sides of the question. If you had a short term of years, you would have a judiciary that was like an elected judiciary, and you would have the advantages and the disadvantages of that kind of structure. But there are arguments on both sides of the question, and it is for other people to decide, not for a member of the judiciary.

Senator KOHL. Right. We are asking you—you know, I appreciate that and I appreciate your thoughtfulness, but, again, this is the only time—today may be the last time that we ever have a chance as a Nation to talk to you. So you have thought on it. I mean, I can't believe you don't have a thought. You know, we are not going to amend the Constitution tomorrow based on your thought that you express today. But what is your thought? Do you think it is a good thing for judges to serve unaccountably forever, with no age limits, no term limit? Or do you think it might be the best thing for our society, for judges after a reasonably long period of time, if you so wish, or at a certain age, to phase themselves out?

Judge ALITO. If I had been a delegate to the Constitutional Convention in Philadelphia in 1787—which is a little hard for me to imagine, but if I had been there, and knowing the way things work out, I guess I would narrow the range of possibilities down to—the range of options that I would consider down to either life tenure or a long term of years so that the judiciary would be insulated from being swayed by popular opinion during a particular period as to the constitutional questions that come before them, and as between those I'm not sure which I would choose.

If the judiciary is going to exercise the power of judicial review in enforcing constitutional rights, then I would think that one of those two options would be the best. But I wasn't in Philadelphia in 1787, so I had no say on that question.

Senator KOHL. Judge, at the end of its term last year, in a 5-4 decision the Supreme Court ruled in Kelo v. City of New London that it was constitutional for local government to seize private property for private economic development. Many people are alarmed about the consequences of this ruling because, in the words of Justice O'Connor, under the logic of the Kelo case, "nothing is to prevent the State from replacing any Motel 6 with a Ritz Carlton, any home with a shopping mall, or any farm with a factory."

So what is your view of the Kelo decision, Judge Alito?

Judge ALITO. Well, what I can say is that it's a precedent of the Court, and it built on the Midkiff decision which had been handed down a number of years earlier. I know that it touches some very sensitive nerves. When someone's home is being taken away using the power of eminent domain, that is a blow to a lot of people. Even if they're going to get compensated at fair market value for their home, the home often means more to people than just dollars and cents. It's a place that often involves a lot of emotion. They have emotional attachments to it. They've lived in it a long time. They're familiar with the neighborhood. They want to be with the neighbors. They want to stay in the same area. They may have emotional attachments to things in the home.

So it is a tremendous blow, and I suppose that when—I would imagine that when someone's home is being taken away, a modest home, for the purpose of building a very expensive commercial structure, that is particularly galling. But Kelo was a decision of the Court, and I've discussed my view about stare decisis, and should that issue come up again, then obviously the stare decisis factors would have to be, you know, considered as the first—the stare decisis question would have to be the first question addressed, and the factors that I've discussed would have to be weighed.

Senator KOHL. Well, your comment is on the one hand and on the other hand, and I do appreciate that. But I would ask you if you would venture an opinion more precisely. Specifically, do you agree in general with Justice O'Connor's dissent?

Judge ALITO. Well, Senator, I don't think I can answer that beyond what I have said. If the issue were to come before me if I'm confirmed, then I would first have to consider whether there's any reason for not following Kelo, which is a precedent of the Supreme Court and grew out of the earlier precedent that I discussed, that I mentioned.

Now, I'm not suggesting which way I would decide that question of stare decisis, but that is the way our legal system works, that decisions are presumptively to be followed, and I would have to address that question. And if I got beyond it, I would have to go through the whole judicial process that is set up so that questions of constitutional law and other questions are decided in the best way, and reading the briefs, listening to the arguments, participating in the conference, and only that reaching a decision on the merits of it.

Senator KOHL. All right. As a followup, Judge Alito, if confirmed, you will be replacing Justice O'Connor, who is a Justice who will be remembered by history as one of the most influential justices of the 20th century. She is also, as you know, a much beloved person. How would you be different from her, Judge Alito? How do you think Justice O'Connor ought to be remembered, Judge Alito? And how are you like or not like Justice O'Connor as a judge?

Judge ALITO. She certainly will be remembered for many reasons, and I think with great admiration by—I think she is held in great admiration by the American people at this time, and I think that when people look back, they will have great admiration for her work. She obviously was a pioneering figure and was an inspiration for many people who want to pursue legal careers, and other careers.

She has been a very dedicated Justice and has been known for her meticulous devotion to the facts of the particular cases that come before her and her belief that each case needs to be decided on its complex facts, and that's something that is an important part of our judicial process.

I would try to emulate her dedication and her integrity, and her dedication to the case-by-case process of adjudication, which is what I think the Supreme Court and the other Federal courts should carry out. I think that's one—that is a central feature of best traditions of our judicial system.

Senator KOHL. She was seen as someone who in a general way was at the center of the Court. You never had an idea whether she might look a little left or a little right, but she was seen as the center of the Court, which, as you know, is central to your nomination. And you have said you have great respect for her. You have said you respect her as a Justice who did look at the facts, made judgments based on those facts, which I think is what you would say about yourself, an umpire calling balls and strikes pretty much as they see them.

Do you see yourself as a Justice, if you are confirmed, who in many ways will fill the same role as Justice O'Connor has filled?

Judge ALITO. I think that anybody who is appointed to any judicial position has to be himself or herself, and I don't think that anybody can try to replace the person, can duplicate the approach of the person that that person is replacing. We all have to proceed in accordance with our own abilities and our own outlook, so I don't think that—I think we all have to be who we are. But I think we can emulate the great jurists of the past, which is not to say that we can equal them, but we can look at what they've done and see the things that they've done very well, try to approach what they've done in various areas. And I think that I certainly would try to emulate Justice O'Connor in the ways that I've described. I wouldn't flatter myself to say that I could equal her in any of those ways, but I would certainly try to emulate the way in which she has gone about the conscientious and dedicated and dignified way in which she's gone about the performance of her judicial duties.

Senator KOHL. You may have answered this question already, but as I said, she was at the center of the Court, at least viewed as a person at the center of the Court, and served a very useful purpose in that respect. Is it, in your opinion, like that you might turn out in a general way to be that kind of a Justice?

Judge ALITO. I can only answer that really by saying what I think I've said before, which is that I'd be the same sort of Justice on the Supreme Court that I've been a judge—as I've been a judge on the court of appeals. I am my own person with whatever abilities I have and whatever limitations I have, and I think if anybody looks at my record on the court of appeals, they can get an idea about the way I approach the work of being a judge, and that is what I would try to do on the Supreme Court. And I don't think I can do anything other than that, and that's what I think I should do, and that's what I would do if I am confirmed.

Senator KOHL. Judge Alito, I thank you very much.

Mr. Chairman, I thank you very much.

Chairman SPECTER. Thank you, Senator Kohl.

We will take our break now and resume at 10 minutes after 11.
[Recess 10:55 a.m. to 11:10 a.m.]

Chairman SPECTER. Welcome back, Judge Alito. A thought just crossed my mind that this is the only time when you walk into a room that everybody does not stand up.

Judge ALITO. That happens to me all the time at home, Senator.
[Laughter.]

Chairman SPECTER. I am not saying when you come home, Judge Alito. The reception for a judge or a Senator or even the Chief Justice is very different at home than when he walks into a room and a bailiff shouts "All rise." Just crossed my mind that we were not all standing up. As Chief Justice Roberts said, this is a discussion among equals, that is, until you are confirmed, if confirmed.

Senator KYL?

Senator KYL. Mr. Chairman, I will reserve my questions for now, thank you.

Chairman SPECTER. Senator Kyl is reserving his time. Senator Feinstein is about to join us, coming in, so we will await her arrival, which should be imminently.

[Pause.]

Chairman SPECTER. I think Senator Feinstein is going to be a few moments more, so let us turn to Senator Feingold.

Senator FEINGOLD. Mr. Chairman, if that is your wish. I certainly defer to Senator Feinstein if she wants to reclaim her time when she comes, but I will get started if you want.

Chairman SPECTER. Let us wait another minute or two for her. She is not in the back room and she is not in the corridor, but let us wait another minute or two for her.

[Pause.]

Chairman SPECTER. Senator Feinstein, you have made another dramatic entrance. We were all assembled for the Committee action on Chief Justice Roberts when you were on the floor from your position on the Appropriations Committee, managing a bill and 17 of us were there.

Senator FEINSTEIN. Not quite, but I thank you for the excuse.

Chairman SPECTER. And you walked in with drama as today. You have asked for up to 10 minutes, Senator Feinstein. We will set the clock at 10 minutes. I have indicated we have some flexibility. We see the light at the end of the tunnel.

Senator FEINSTEIN. I may take 20 if that is all right with you, Mr. Chairman.

Chairman SPECTER. We will reset the clock at 20, Senator Feinstein.

Senator FEINSTEIN. Thank you.

Good morning, Judge Alito.

Judge ALITO. Good morning.

Senator FEINSTEIN. I want to begin a conversation, hopefully. Let me try to set the precedent for it because others have discussed this as well. You said, and I think everybody agrees, that nobody is above the law, and nobody is beneath the law, and you made comment about the balance of powers, that all branches of Government are equal. There are three of us on this Committee, Senator Hatch, Senator DeWine and myself, that also serve on the Intelligence Committee, and Intelligence has the duty to provide the oversight for the 15 different agencies that relate to America's intelligence activities. So this question of Presidential authority at a time of crisis, not necessarily a full declaration of war, state to state, but a time of crisis becomes very prescient right now. And I wanted to talk to you a little bit about the President's plenary authorities as Commander in Chief, plenary meaning unrestrained and unrestrainable, his plenary authorities to defend the United States, and whether it is true that no law passed by Congress binds him if he determines that it interferes with his Commander in Chief role.

Now, we have explicit powers, as you have said, under the Constitution, and in section 8 we have the explicit power to raise and support armies, to provide and maintain a Navy, to make rules for the Government, and regulation of the land and naval forces, and the National Security Administration, known as the NSA, is within the Department of Defense. It is headed by a general. So it would seem to me that there is an explicit power for the Congress to be able to pass the rules that govern the procedures of the National Security Administration.

Now, again to the Jackson test. When the President's power is the least is when the Congress has legislated, and this is where the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act, known as FISA, comes in. FISA is very explicit, and let me read a part of it to you. "Procedures in this chapter and the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act, known as FISA, shall be the exclusive means by which electronic surveillance, as defined in section 101 of such Act, and the interception of domestic wire and oral communications may be conducted." It does provide—you used the word "general." It does provide two exigent circumstances: one, following a declaration of war, the President has 15 days in which he can wiretap; the second exigent circumstance is an emergency provision that if he needs emergency authority, the Attorney General can authorize it, provided they go to the FISA Court within 72 hours.

I was concerned—there are two questions in this one statement. The first question is: if we have explicit authority under the Constitution to pass a law, and we pass that law, is the President bound by that law, or does his plenary authority supersede that law?

Judge ALITO. The President, like everybody else, is bound by statutes that are enacted by Congress unless the statutes are unconstitutional, because the Constitution takes precedence over a statute. But in general, of course, the President and everybody else, is bound by a statute. There's no question about that whatsoever. And the President is explicitly given the obligation, under Article II, to take care that the laws are faithfully executed. So he is given the responsibility of making sure that the laws are carried out.

Senator FEINSTEIN. Let me press you on unconstitutional, and a very few of us on this Committee are not lawyers. I am one of them, so let me just speak in common everyday terms. There are two resolutions that were passed, one authorizing the use of military force involving Iraq, and one involving use of terrorism. Never was there any indication that domestic wiretapping of Americans was involved in anything that was done. As a matter of fact, the former minority leader just wrote an Op-Ed piece, in which he said he was approached by the administration shortly before the second resolution was passed, and asked to add certain words that essentially—added the words “deter and preempt any future acts of terrorism or aggression against the United States.” and he refused to do it.

Mr. Chairman, if I could place this statement in to record. Since we are going to be having hearings on what has happened, I think this is an appropriate bit of legislative history. I would like to place it in the record.

Chairman SPECTER. Thank you, Senator Feinstein. It will be made a part of the record without objection.

Senator FEINSTEIN. Thank you.

So bottom line, two resolutions passed, no consideration by the Congress or any member that I know of, no legislative history to indicate that we included in these authorizations, authorization to wiretap Americans. The question then comes, I guess, does the plenary power of the President supersede this?

Judge ALITO. I think there are two questions. Maybe there are more than two questions, but there are at least two questions. The first question, to my mind, is a question of statutory interpretation, what is the scope of the authorization of the use of military force? I don't know whether that will turn out to be an easy question or whether it will turn out to be a difficult question, but it is a question of statutory interpretation like any other. Of course, there's a great deal at stake, and maybe a lot more at stake than is involved in a lot of issues of statutory interpretation. But if I were required to decide that, I would approach it in essentially the same way I approach any other question of statutory interpretation, what does the word of the law—what does the law say? Are there terms in there that carry a special meaning because of the subject matter that's being dealt with? And I think legislative history can be appropriately consulted. And I would have to decide that in the context of the whole process of deciding legal questions, as I said, like any other issue of statutory interpretation.

Once a decision was reached on the issue of statutory interpretation, it might be necessary to go further, depending on, I guess, the answer to that question.

I would also say in connection with this that we have a little bit of guidance as to the interpretation of the authorization of the use of military force in the Hamdi case, where the Court interpreted that enactment, and determined that the detention of an individual who was captured on the battlefield in Afghanistan fell within the scope of that, and they relied there, I think, on customary practices in the conduct of warfare in determining what fell within the scope of the authorization.

Senator FEINSTEIN. Let me stop you right here, because now—that is right, because detention is a necessary following of an authorization of military force. So detention is logical. When you have a specific statute that covers all electronic surveillance, the question comes, is that statute nullified, and does it necessarily follow that the wiretapping of Americans without—and I am not saying there is not a reason to do this. What I am saying is that we set up a legal procedure by which you do it, and we set two exigent circumstances to excuse a President from having to do it, therefore, doesn't that law prevail?

Judge ALITO. Well, as I said, I think the threshold question is interpreting the scope of that, and it might turn out to be an open and shut argument, it might turn out to be a very complicated argument. I wouldn't presume to issue—to voice an opinion on the question here, in particular because I haven't studied it in the depth that I would have to study it before reaching a judicial decision on the matter. Then depending on how that issue was resolved, it might be necessary to go on to the constitutional question, and I think you've exactly outlined where that would fall under Justice Jackson's method of analyzing these questions. This would be in the category in which—well, if it was determined that there wasn't statutory authorization, then—

Senator FEINSTEIN. There was.

Judge ALITO. Well, if it was determined that there was—

Senator FEINSTEIN. No statutory authorization to wiretap, right.

Judge ALITO. If it was determined that there was statutory authorization, then I don't know what the constitutional would—

Senator FEINSTEIN. But if there was not?

Judge ALITO. There would still potentially be—there might be a constitutional issue. Let me stop there. There would be a Fourth Amendment issue, obviously. If you went beyond—if you determined that there wasn't statutory authorization, then as far as whether—then as far as the issue of Presidential power is concerned, you would be in Justice Jackson's scheme in the category where the President—you would have to determine, if this is the argument that's made, whether the President's power, inherent powers, the powers given to the President under Article II, are sufficient, even taking away congressional authorization, the area where the President is asserting a power to do something in the face of explicit, an explicit congressional determination to the contrary.

Senator FEINSTEIN. Now, in my lay mind, the way I interpret that—and correct me if I am wrong—is that you essentially have a conflict, and that it has not been decided whether one trumps the other.

Judge ALITO. I think that's close to the point that I was trying to make. The way Justice Jackson described it was that you have whatever Executive power the President has, minus what Congress has taken away by enacting the statute.

Senator FEINSTEIN. Even though you have a statutory prohibition, even a criminal prohibition?

Judge ALITO. Well, I'm not suggesting how the determination would come out. I think it's—that it is implicit in the way Justice Jackson outlined this that Presidential—well, he said it expressly—Presidential power is at its lowest in this situation, where the President is claiming the authority to do something that Congress has prohibited.

Senator FEINSTEIN. Enough of that. Let me move on.

In W.R. Grace v. the EPA, a chemical company released large amounts of ammonia into the local aquifer in Lansing, Michigan. Under the Safe Drinking Water Act, the EPA ordered the chemical company to clean up the discharge to reduce the concentration of ammonia to a level that wouldn't threaten the health of the community. The chemical company challenged this EPA decision. You cast, as I understand it, the decisive vote to overrule the EPA, permitting the company to leave more ammonia in the aquifer, despite the EPA's determination that this level of ammonia would continue to endanger the water supply.

In her dissent, Judge Mansmann urged deference to the EPA in matters of science, noting that, "The high degree of deference we are to accord the EPA is a cornerstone to the EPA's power enshrined in the Safe Drinking Water Act to protect the public health, the environment and public water supplies from the pernicious effects of toxic wastes."

Do you agree with the dissent that a reviewing court must generally be at its most deferential when reviewing factual determinations within an agency's special area of expertise?

Judge ALITO. I do agree with that. I don't think there is any question about that.

Senator FEINSTEIN. Do you believe that where an agency is taking action to protect the health of citizens, additional deference should be given?

Judge ALITO. I think that deference is owed to the expertise of administrative agencies. That is an important part of administrative law, and when you are dealing with an agency like the EPA, you would defer to their area of expertise. I think that is correct.

Senator FEINSTEIN. Should the EPA be accorded the same deference as other governmental agencies?

Judge ALITO. I don't think—I don't see why it should not. It is the expert on environmental questions and where the APA—I am sorry, the EPA—for example, if the EPA issues regulations interpreting a statutory provision and it is given broad authority under the environmental laws frequently to implement choices that are reflected in the legislation, then I think that it is entitled to a broad measure of deference under the Chevron decision. If it issues rules, then any reasonable interpretation of the rules—I am sorry—of the statute is entitled to deference from the courts.

Senator FEINSTEIN. OK. Let me go way back, and I recognize that time has gone by and I recognize you were in a different position, but these questions are really aimed to point out the importance of the Commerce Clause to us.

In 1986, Congress passed the Truth in Mileage Act to prevent odometer fraud. As deputy at the Office of Legal Counsel, you recommended that President Reagan veto the bill because you believed it violated the principles of federalism. In a draft statement for the President, you wrote “It is the States and not the Federal Government that are charged with protecting the health, safety and welfare of their citizens.” That is a quote. President Reagan did sign the Truth in Mileage Act.

Does it remain your opinion that it is the States, not the Federal Government, that are charged with protecting the health, safety and welfare of Americans?

Judge ALITO. Both the Federal Government and the States have responsibilities in those areas. Historically, the primary responsibility with respect to that, to those concerns, has been with the States. But with the expansion of Federal regulatory programs, the Federal Government has taken on broader and broader responsibilities in those areas and now has very substantial responsibilities in all of those areas under regulatory schemes that have been in place for a long time and I don’t believe are being challenged on constitutional grounds at this time.

If I could just say a word about that memo, which I read for the first time in 20 years recently, as I—it is a brief statement and as I read it, it is based—what it is primarily expressing is not an interpretation of the scope of the Federal Government’s—of Congress’s constitutional authority, but a recommendation based on the federalism policies of the Reagan administration.

The Reagan administration had a policy of implementing its view of federalism concerns through policymaking decisions. In other words, its policy was to go further in respecting what it viewed as the Federalist system—as our Federal system of Government and the Constitution required to go further as a policy matter. And as I read that brief statement, that is what was being expressed there.

Senator FEINSTEIN. So if I understand that, quickly, what you are saying is this was written as staff in an administration to follow a policy. But are you also saying as a judge this would not necessarily be a position that you would hold in any case?

Judge ALITO. Well, as a judge, I would have no authority and certainly would not try to implement any policy ideas about federalism. Congress can implement policy ideas about federalism. The Garcia case, in fact, is based on the view that the primary—and this is what the Supreme Court said there, that the primary way in which the federalism concerns that were expressed in National League of Cities was to be implemented in the future was through policy decisions made by Congress.

They said the States are represented in Congress through the membership in the Senate, and protection of the prerogatives of the States should be left to policy decisions made by Congress, or decisions made by Congress in implementing its view of how the system of federalism should work.

And an Executive—a President can take a similar approach. A President can say although the Constitution allows the authority of the Federal Government to go this far, as a policy matter I don't want to go along with legislation that goes up to the limits of what the Constitution allows; as a policy matter, I want to stop short of that. And as I read this memo, that is what we were saying there.

Senator FEINSTEIN. Thank you very much. Thanks, Mr. Chairman.

Chairman SPECTER. Thank you, Senator Feinstein.

Senator Grassley has stated his interest in reclaiming some of his reserved time.

Senator Grassley.

Senator GRASSLEY. A small part of it, number one, to make a point that I hope would put a lot of my colleagues who have raised questions about some theory you might have about this or that—whatever political science theories you might have about the executive branch of Government, I don't worry about that, and I would hope my colleagues wouldn't worry about that because you could have a hundred theories and they could be all crazy.

But is it not right that you are a person that is bound by the Constitution to only hear cases and controversies that come before the Supreme Court? And so, you know, whatever comes before you, you are responsible for deciding it within the constitutional of case and controversy.

And, second, it seems to me that you are a person that has got the judicial temperament, as you said so many times, that you are going to keep your own personal views out of it. And it seems to me that you are person that has indicated to us that you are going to look at a case within the four corners of the law and the facts that apply to that case, and nothing more.

So any theories you might have about—what was it called, unitary Executive or something? What has that got to do with your deciding a case?

Judge ALITO. Senator, you are exactly right. If cases involving this area of constitutional law come before me, I will look to the precedents of the Supreme Court. And that is what I think I have been trying to emphasize, and there are governing precedents in this area. There is Humphrey's Executor and Wiener, and most recently Morrison, which was an eight-to-one decision.

Senator GRASSLEY. Then the other thing I would take an opportunity to just tell you something and not want any response, but that is on the False Claims Act. This Act was originally passed in 1862 because Lincoln didn't have enough people to prosecute fraud by military people against the Government. So he empowered individuals to do that under qui tam.

And then in 1942, I think it was, the law was gutted by taking out the qui tam provisions, probably because of World War II and the necessity of getting the job of military construction done. And then in the 1980s, we found a heck of a lot of military fraudulent use of taxpayers' money. We held a lot of hearings on that. It came that there wasn't enough being done by the Justice Department to take care of it.

We saw the Justice Department making a lot of global settlements; you know, some company that had done a massive amount of wrong in many areas and maybe having the Justice Department settle one little dispute, but give a global settlement so that they would never be prosecuted for anything after that. It led us to beefing up the False Claims Act by putting the qui tam provisions in it.

And it was a terrible thing to get through Congress. I think 6 months after we voted it out of Committee, we had every Senator putting a hold on it, some bequest of somebody in the defense industry. And you would take care of that little problem and another put a hold on and another one put a hold on. Finally, the last person was a friend of mine that had a hold on it and I said why did you have a hold on it? Well, some of my friends said that is bad for the defense industry.

And I talked to him about it and he says, you know, you are absolutely right, and we got the last hold off and we got it passed and we got it signed by the President of the United States. And then over the last several years, we have had the defense industry going trying to gut it again. Then we had the Hospital Association trying to gut it because we were using medical care.

And it has brought $12 billion into the Federal Treasury, and I think it has even had the benefit of discouraging a lot of activity that would go on normally that save the taxpayers money without prosecution. But there are people in the Justice Department, professional people in the Justice Department, who don't want some citizen looking over their head and doing their job for them, when they aren't doing it.

A district judge in the mid-1980s, or maybe it was the late 1980s, in, I think, a General Electric case someplace in Ohio, when the Justice Department was trying to cut back the award that the relator was going to get, said to this Justice Department guy, don't you get it? You wouldn't even have a case if it wasn't for this whistleblower coming forth to make their statement and to make their case.

And, you know, it grown into quite a thing now. The only thing I regret about it is there are a lot of lawyers, tort attorneys out there getting rich off of it. But there is also a lot coming into the Federal Treasury, and about 15 percent of what it would cost the Federal Government anyway to bring in this same amount of money if they prosecuted. But they won't prosecute it and they don't know about all of it, and you have got to rely on the whistleblowers to get the information out there.

And so when you are in your private meetings that you have after you get on the Supreme Court and you are talking about these things, I hope you will remember that this was meant to serve a worthy purpose, is serving a worthy purpose, and I would like to have you look at it in a very unbiased way.

[Laughter.]

Senator GRASSLEY. I reserve the rest of my time.

Chairman SPECTER. Judge Alito, Senator Grassley is going to follow that up with a strong letter.

[Laughter.]

Senator GRASSLEY. Well, the Chairman remembers we even had to subpoena William French Smith one time in this whole process.

Senator LEAHY. Chuck, I think we know where you stand on this.

Senator GRASSLEY. OK.

Chairman SPECTER. To use a little bit more of my time, Senator Grassley did more than subpoena Attorney General William French Smith. He started proceedings to hold him in contempt, and that was at about a time when Attorney General Smith was inviting some members of the Judiciary Committee to have lunch. And he was very dour during the entire lunch as far as his attitude toward me and I found out why at the end of the lunch. He wanted to know why I wanted to hold him in contempt. He had insulted Senator Grassley to the nth degree by confusing me with him.

[Laughter.]

Chairman SPECTER. Tell your Anita Hill story, Chuck.

Senator GRASSLEY. Well, just to show you how they get mixed up, you know, he asked the questions of Anita Hill and I was sitting beside him very quietly, because only two Republicans were going to ask questions. And I went back to my constituency and everybody said to me, you were awful to Anita Hill, you just treated her awful, because they got me mixed up with him.

Chairman SPECTER. Wait. I didn't know you were—

[Laughter.]

Chairman SPECTER. I didn't know you were going to tell that part of the—

Senator GRASSLEY. I thought that is the only part we have talked about.

Chairman SPECTER. Judge, we are just trying to use a little time over here to give you just a little respite from the—

Senator LEAHY. Arlen, fortunately none of this is on television so nobody knows what we are saying here with these stories.

[Laughter.]

Chairman SPECTER. Senator Feingold, you haven't told me how much time you would like to have.

Senator FEINGOLD. I think 25 minutes, with flexibility. Maybe I won't have to use it all.

Chairman SPECTER. So granted. Set the clock to 25 minutes and you are recognized, Senator Feingold.

Senator FEINGOLD. Thank you, Mr. Chairman. Good morning, Judge. It is nice to talk to you in the morning for once, and thank you, Mr. Chairman, for the opportunity to ask a third round of questions. I do appreciate the latitude on the time, if it is necessary.

First, Judge, I want to thank you for arranging to have put together the list of people who participated in your practice sessions. I want to say that I am still somewhat troubled by the idea that you were prepared for this hearing by some lawyers who are very much involved in promoting the purported legal justification for the NSA wiretapping program, and obviously this issue of Presidential power is so central to this hearing. In fact, my first questions will also be about this, as well.

I note, for example, that one of the people that participated in these sessions was Benjamin Powell. He recently advised President Bush on intelligence matters and was just given a recess appointment as General Counsel to the National Intelligence Director. I also see the name of White House Counsel Harriet Miers on the list, and she obviously is involved in the President's position on this matter.

So I am just going to continue to think about this issue and I hope that you and the Department will, too. I think you would agree that at some point in a situation like this, an ethical issue could arise.

Let me go back, though, to what many Senators have asked you about, including most recently Senator Feinstein. I want to try again to clarify this issue, the constitutional authority of the President to violate a criminal statute. You have said repeatedly that the President is not above the law, but you have also been very careful to qualify this statement by saying that the President must always follow the Constitution and laws that are consistent with the Constitution, and that statement sounds good until you look at it real closely. After all, everyone agrees that the President must follow constitutional law. The question is whether Presidents can claim inherent powers under the Constitution that allow them in certain cases to violate a criminal law, and your formulation seems to leave open the possibility that the President can assert inherent authority to violate the criminal law and still be following, to use your words, the Constitution and laws that are consistent with the Constitution.

So I would like to ask you, assuming that you have already done phase one, step one, the statutory analysis, in your view, just because a law is constitutional as it is written, like a murder statute or FISA, that doesn't actually answer the question of whether the President can violate it, does it?

Judge ALITO. I don't think I would separate the constitutional questions into categories. I think it follows from the structure of our Constitution that the Constitution trumps the statute. That was the issue in Marbury v. Madison. It would be a rare instance in which it would be justifiable for the President or any member of the executive branch not to abide by a statute passed by Congress. It would be a very rare—

Senator FEINGOLD. But it is possible, based on your answer, that a statute that has been determined standing on its own to be constitutional could, in theory, run into some conflict with an inherent, as you would say, constitutional power of the President, which in theory, even under Justice Jackson's test, could trump the seemingly constitutional criminal statute, is that correct?

Judge ALITO. Well, I'm not sure what standing on its own means there. Somebody gave an example in a law review article I remember reading of a statute that said that a particular named individual was to be immediately taken into custody by Federal law enforcement agents and taken immediately to a certain place to be executed. Would the President be bound to, under his responsibility to take care that the laws are faithfully executed, would the President be legally obligated to do that, even though it flies in the face of some of the most fundamental guarantees in the Constitution, and I think we would all say in a situation like that, no, the Constitution trumps the statutory enactment.

Senator FEINGOLD. But it is possible under your construct that an inherent constitutional power of the President could, under some analysis or in some case, override what people believe to be a constitutional criminal statute—

Judge ALITO. Well, I don't want to—I want to be very precise on this. What I have said, and I don't think I can go further than to say this, is that that situation seems to be exactly what is—to fall exactly within that category that Justice Jackson outlined, where the President is claiming the authority to do something and the thing that he is claiming the authority to do is explicitly, has been explicitly disapproved by Congress. So his own taxonomy contemplates the possibility that says that there is this category and cases can fall in this category, and he seems to contemplate the possibility that that might be justified.

But I don't want to even say that there could be such a case. I don't know. I would have to be presented with the facts of the particular case and consider it in the way I would consider any legal question. I don't think I can go beyond that.

Senator FEINGOLD. I understand that has been your position. I have heard the repeated references to Justice Jackson's test. But all that test says in the end is that the President's power is at the lowest ebb at that point, and I understand and obviously have enormous regard for Justice Jackson and that opinion in particular. But I think in this time it leaves me troubled.

I am concerned that if we are simply going to rely on that in the end without getting a better sense of where you might come down on these kind of matters, it really goes to the very heart of our system of government. And if somehow that—even if the President's power is at a very low ebb at that point, I think it still leaves open the possibility of enough ambiguity and vagueness that could alter the basic balance between the Congress and the Presidential power in a way that could affect our very system of government.

Judge ALITO. Well, Senator, this is a momentous constitutional issue and it is the kind of constitutional issue that generally is not resolved—well, let me say this, that it is often—it often comes up in a context that is not justiciable. But I think it would be irresponsible for me to say anything on the substance of the question here, and by not saying it, I don't mean to suggest in any way how I would come out on the question. I don't mean to suggest that there could be a case where it would be justified or not, particularly on an issue of this magnitude. I think anybody in my position can say no more than this is the framework that the Supreme Court precedents have provided for us, and when the issue comes up, if it comes up, if it comes before me, if it is justiciable, I will analyze it thoroughly, and that's all I can say.

Senator FEINGOLD. And I respect your constraints in this regard, and frankly, this isn't so much about you or your appointment. This is about the possibility you have raised that this may not be justiciable, which is going to be a very serious problem for our system of government. If the U.S. Supreme Court cannot help us resolve these issues because of justiciability issues, at a time of crisis like this in terms of the fight against terrorism, I think it raises one of the most important issues in the history of our country's constitutional debate. I don't think you disagree with that, but it really troubles me that the Supreme Court could possibly not help us resolve this.

Judge ALITO. And I don't want to suggest that it is or it's not justiciable. We would look to the Baker v. Carr factors, and that is something else that would be very irresponsible for me to express an opinion on in this forum and I want to make it perfectly clear that I'm not doing that.

Senator FEINGOLD. Do you think it could ever be constitutional to admit evidence obtained by torture against an individual who is being charged with a crime?

Judge ALITO. Well, the Fifth Amendment prohibits compelled self-incrimination and it's long been established that evidence that is obtained through torture is inadmissible in our courts. That's the governing principle.

Senator FEINGOLD. So I take that answer to mean it could not be constitutional to admit evidence obtained by torture against individuals being charged with a crime?

Judge ALITO. In all the contexts that I'm familiar with, that would be the answer.

Senator FEINGOLD. Thank you for that answer. I want to followup on one question that Senator Leahy asked this morning about the constitutionality of executing an innocent person. You said that the Constitution, of course, is designed to prevent that. We all agree on that. But let us say that the trial was procedurally perfect and there were no legal or constitutional errors, but later evidence proves that the person convicted was unquestionably innocent. Does that person have a constitutional right not to be executed?

Judge ALITO. The person has—would first have to avail himself or herself of the procedures that Congress has specified for challenging convictions after they've become final. If this individual has been convicted and has gone through the whole process of direct appeal, either in the State system or in the Federal system, then there are procedures. States have procedures for collateral attacks and there are procedures under Federal statutes for collateral attacks on Federal convictions and on State convictions. The person would have to go through the procedures that are set out in the statute.

The system is designed to prevent a person from being executed if the person is innocent, and actual innocence figures very importantly, even in these complex—in sometimes complex procedures that have to be followed in these collateral attacks. For example, usually, there's this doctrine of procedural default, which is not something that ordinary people are familiar with, but it means that if a State prisoner is challenging a State conviction, the State prisoner has to take advantage of the procedures that are available under State law, and if the State prisoner doesn't do that—

Senator FEINGOLD. My question assumes that all that has been done and the process went through and there is no legal or constitutional or procedural problems, but evidence suddenly proves that the person convicted was unquestionably innocent. The question is, does that person in that posture have a constitutional right not to be executed?

Judge ALITO. Well, then the person would have to, as I said, file a petition, and if it was an initial petition, it would fall into one category. If it was the second or a successive petition, it would fall into another category and the person would have to satisfy the requirements that Congress has set out for filing a second or successive petition.

Senator FEINGOLD. You can't say that the person has a constitutional right not to be executed?

Judge ALITO. Well, I have to know the specific facts of the case and the way it works its way through the legal system. The rules here are complicated. A person has a right. It is one of the most fundamental rights that anybody has. It is a fundamental right and a fundamental objective of our judicial system that nobody is to be convicted without proof beyond a reasonable doubt. If evidence—if there's evidence that the person is not guilty of the offense, then that gets to the very heart of what our whole system of criminal justice is designed to address.

Senator FEINGOLD. I will stop on that topic, but I think there is a real question here. Simply because somebody is adjudicated guilty but they are, in fact, innocent, I would take the view that they still have a constitutional right not to be executed, but I am glad we could talk about that a bit.

Let me talk about affirmative action. In her opinion in Gruder v. Bollinger, Justice O'Connor recognized the, quote, "real world significance and impact" of affirmative action programs and policies, and she noted that American businesses need skills obtained through exposure to widely diverse people and cultures. A racially diverse officer corps is essential to the military's ability to fulfill its mission to provide national security. And diversity in colleges and universities leads to diversity in civil society, which is, quote, "essential if the dream of one nation, indivisible, is to be realized."

Justice O'Connor expressly gave great weight to the views of military leaders, who said a highly qualified racially diverse military is essential. How much weight would you give to that view?

Judge ALITO. Well, I can speak to the issue of diversity in education from a little bit of my own experience. A couple of years ago, I taught, as an adjunct law professor at Seton Hall Law School, I taught a seminar on civil liberties and terrorism, because in the wake of terrorist attacks on 9/11, it became apparent to me that there were going to be a lot of civil liberties issues raised. It seemed to me that these were issues of the utmost importance, so I put together a seminar on the question.

The first time I conducted the class, we had an extremely—we had a class with people of extremely diverse backgrounds relating to this issue. There was a student who had been in the Special Forces in Bosnia. There was a student who was a Muslim from the Middle East. There were a number of students who had been personally affected by, in one way or another, by the terrorist attacks on the World Trade Center. There were students who felt very strongly about civil liberties. And having these people in the class with diverse backgrounds and outlooks on the issues that we were discussing made an enormous contribution to the class.

So in that setting, I have personal experience about how valuable having people with diverse backgrounds and viewpoints can be, and the Supreme Court has expressed the view that diversity is a compelling interest. Having a diverse student body is a compelling interest. Justice Powell voiced that back in the Bakke case and it's been reiterated in a number of cases and most prominently in—most recently in the Gruder case.

Senator FEINGOLD. In fact, in Gruder, seven of the nine Justices, all but Justices Scalia and Thomas, reaffirmed Justice Powell's determination in the Bakke case that the State has a compelling interest in promoting diversity in the classroom. Do you think that increasing diversity in the classroom is a compelling State interest?

Judge ALITO. Well, I've spoken to my own personal experience about its importance in education and Gruder is a precedent that directly addressed this issue in the context of education. It's the Supreme Court's recent word on this issue.

Senator FEINGOLD. I hope you will think it fair that nothing about what you just said would suggest to me you think it is anything less than a compelling State interest.

Judge ALITO. It is a precedent and the Supreme Court has dealt with this over a period of time, and that's the conclusion that they've drawn.

Senator FEINGOLD. On another subject, do you believe that Congress has the power under the Constitution to prohibit discrimination against gays and lesbians in employment?

Judge ALITO. I would have to—I can't think of a reason why Congress would not have that power, but I would have to be presented with the arguments.

Senator FEINGOLD. In 2001, you wrote an opinion overturning a public school district's antiharassment policy, that protected, among other people, lesbian and gay students. You said the school policy in the case, Saxe v. State College Area School District, violated the First Amendment, and the case was brought by students who believed that the policy interfered with their ability to speak out against the "sinful" nature and harmful effects of homosexuality as compelled by their religion.

In your Senate questionnaire you note that you won the Family Research Council Golden Gavel Award in 2001 for your decision striking down that policy. The Family Research Council is a leading conservative group that opposes gay rights.

In order for a policy protecting gay students from harassment to pass constitutional scrutiny, must it have an exception for harassment motivated by religious belief?

Judge ALITO. Well, let me say what was at issue in the Saxe case because that's the context in which I dealt with issues like this. The Saxe case involved a very broad antiharassment policy that had been adopted by a school district, and it prohibited the expression of—it not only prohibited the expression of political viewpoints, but it went so far as to say that just about anything that any student would say about another student that would be offensive to that student, including comments on the way the student dressed, or the things that they like to do, would be a violation of the antiharassment policy. And under the First Amendment, unlike in most other areas of the law, statutes can be challenged on overbreadth grounds, and that was the ground on which the statute was struck down in the Saxe case, that it was overly broad, that it prohibited a great deal of speech that was constitutionally protected.

The Supreme Court decided back in the Tinker case that students don't lose all of their First Amendment rights to freedom of expression when they enter the school grounds, and Justice Brennan's opinion in that case set out the test that is to be applied there, the schools have greater ability to regulate student speech than Government has to regulate adult speech in general, but the authority of school officials to regulate political speech by students—in Tinker it was the wearing of an arm band to protest the war in Vietnam—is not unlimited, and there has to be a threat of disturbance on the school grounds or a violation of the constitutional rights of another student. And so any policy that regulated student expression, political expression in a school, would have to satisfy Justice Brennan's Tinker standard.

Senator FEINGOLD. Thank you, Judge. Does Congress have the authority to enact legislation that would protect gay students from harassment in schools that receive Federal funding?

Judge ALITO. That would fall within the South Dakota v. Dole standard, and the question would be whether the condition that's attached to the receipt of the Federal funds is germane to the purpose of the funding, and that's a standard that gives Congress a very broad authority.

Senator FEINGOLD. So that Congress does have the authority in general. The question would be the scope of it.

Judge ALITO. Congress has the authority to attach all sorts of conditions to the receipt of Federal money. It has to be clear so that the States understand what they're getting into, that if you take this money there are conditions that go with it, but provided that that clear statement requirement is satisfied and provided that the condition is germane to the purpose of the funding, then Congress can attach conditions, and it could do so in this area.

Senator FEINGOLD. Judge, let me switch to an ethics issue that is not Vanguard. As you know, after your testimony concludes today, a number of outside witnesses are coming to testify about your nomination, including seven current and former judges from your court. As far as I know, this is the first time that sitting Federal judges have testified on behalf of a Supreme Court nominee. I am a little troubled by it. I hope to have some opportunity to question the judges about this, but I think it may raise something of an ethical issue for you. If you are confirmed to the Supreme Court, how would you analyze a possible recusal motion if an appeal on a case from one of those sitting judges testifying on your behalf were to come before you? Will you have to recuse yourself from any case where one of these judges was involved in the decision?

Judge ALITO. That's not a question that I've given any thought to before this minute, Senator, so I don't know that I could answer it, and I would want to answer any recusal question very carefully.

Senator FEINGOLD. Perhaps you could give me an answer after you have had a chance to think about it.

Judge ALITO. I'd certainly be happy to do that.

Senator FEINGOLD. Appreciate that.

Mr. Chairman, I think that is sufficient. Thank you very much.

Chairman SPECTER. Thank you very much, Senator Feingold.

We are on course to finish you before lunchtime, Judge Alito. We have more potential questions from the Republican side, and we have two more from the Democratic side.

Senator DeWine, do you have any questions?

Senator DEWINE. Mr. Chairman, I will reserve my time.

Chairman SPECTER. Senator DeWine reserves his time.

Senator Schumer, you are recognized for up to 25 minutes.

Senator SCHUMER. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Chairman SPECTER. With our conversation that you are going to ask new questions.

Senator SCHUMER. That is what I want to ask but—

[Laughter.]

Senator LEAHY. It is a new day.

Senator SCHUMER. I think some of my old questions, ones I have asked before, should bother you. They bother me.

But in any case, I do have a few other issues that I do want to talk to you about. The first is just a general question on Presidential power. Let's just assume that it was found that the President's right to wiretap people, the way we are discussing it now in terms of the recent NSA revelations, was found constitutional. Would there be a different standard if, say, the President—does that necessarily allow the President to then go ahead and go into people's homes here in America, American citizens, without a warrant? Does the one necessarily lead to the other?

Judge ALITO. I would have to understand the—I would have to see the ground for holding the wiretapping or the electronic surveillance constitutional before seeing whether it would apply in the case of other searches and seizures.

Senator SCHUMER. But let's assume it is constitutional.

Judge ALITO. I'd have to know what the arguments were made about it and on what ground it was found to be constitutional.

Senator SCHUMER. So it could follow, but might not; is that what you would say?

Judge ALITO. It very well might not. I would have to know the constitutional ground for the decision relating to the wiretapping, and I have no idea what that would be. It might well not extend to things like physical searches of homes.

Senator SCHUMER. Is there a difference? Is there a constitutional difference between a wiretap and an actual physical search of the home on Fourth Amendment grounds? Is there any that you know in cases—

Judge ALITO. There are differences, yes, there certainly are.

Senator SCHUMER. Thank you.

Judge ALITO. Wiretapping is subject to—general criminal wiretapping is subject to all the rules that are set out in Title III, which are thought to be based in large part on Fourth Amendment requirements. And the warrant requirement is very strong in the area of electronic surveillance. When you're talking about other types of searches, the searches can take place in a variety of places for a variety of reasons.

Senator SCHUMER. But if it can be done under the inherent power that the President has for the one, why could it not be done for the other? I am not asking about the statute.

Judge ALITO. There's also a Fourth Amendment issue. Any search—

Senator SCHUMER. In both cases.

Judge ALITO. In both cases, and the Fourth Amendment could play out very differently in those two contexts.

Senator SCHUMER. Now I would like to go back to some of the line of questioning that Senator Durbin explored yesterday when he mentioned the crushing hand of fate, Bruce Springsteen.

Judge Alito, I assume you believe that you will be able to be fair in every case that comes before you on the Supreme Court.

Judge ALITO. I have no reason to think I will not be. I certainly will.

Senator SCHUMER. And you do not believe that you prejudged any legal of constitutional issue?

Judge ALITO. I don't believe that I have.

Senator SCHUMER. And you will take care to apply the rules of law and procedure equally and evenhandedly, no matter who the parties are, prosecution or defense?

Judge ALITO. I certainly will, yes, Senator.

Senator SCHUMER. Employer or employee.

Judge ALITO. I will apply the laws evenhandedly to everyone.

Senator SCHUMER. And I take it you believe that you have done just that on the Third Circuit while you were there?

Judge ALITO. I believe I have.

Senator SCHUMER. Yesterday Senator Durbin asked about Pirolli v. World Flavors, and you remember that case. You discussed it with Senator Durbin. And the case involves the claims of a mentally retarded man who brought suit against his employer for violent and persistent sexual harassment by his coworkers, am I right?

Judge ALITO. Those were the claims.

Senator SCHUMER. And the majority allowed the case to proceed, finding that the Court had "discretion to consider issues not raised in the brief." And they did so to give the plaintiff his day in court. You exercised your discretion to vote against giving him his day in court because his lawyer failed to raise the argument in the brief. As you told Senator Durbin, "There is a very important principle involved in appellate practice"—these are your words—"I think it goes with the idea of judicial self-restraint, and that requires parties raise issues in the trial court, and that if they don't raise the issue in the trial court, then absent some extraordinary circumstances, they shouldn't be able to raise the issue on appeal." and that was the principle there. Those are your words, right?

Judge ALITO. I believe they are, yes.

Senator SCHUMER. Now I would like to go to two other cases that you had when you were on the Third Circuit. The first one is Smith v. Horn, where a similar issue arose. That was a criminal case involving a habeas corpus petition brought by a criminal defendant, right?

Judge ALITO. Yes, it was.

Senator SCHUMER. And it turns out that in that case as well, just like Pirolli, one of the parties had failed to raise a relevant argument in its brief, right?

Judge ALITO. Well, Smith v. Horn was really not comparable to Pirolli for a very important reason. Smith v. Horn was a habeas case, and so what is involved there is not simply a dispute between private parties, and of course, disputes between private parties are very important, and individual rights can be involved.

Senator SCHUMER. No, I understand it is a Government case. Let me just make—

Judge ALITO. There's more to it than the Senator—

Senator SCHUMER. I am going to let you answer it. I just want to make the point here so everybody can—the majority in Smith v. Horn to say—this time it was the Government that failed to raise the issue in the district court brief. This time you were prepared to excuse that failure. This time you felt it was appropriate to consider the issue on your own, and I am at a loss to understand the difference. I am going to give you a chance to explain, but I want to read what the majority in Smith v. Horn had to say about your indulgence of the Government for failing to bring up an issue, just as the retarded person did with Pirolli.

They said, “Where the State has never raised the issue at all in any court, raising the issue ourselves puts us in the untenable position of ferreting out possible defenses upon which the State has never sought to rely. When we do so, we come dangerously close to acting as advocates for the State, rather than as impartial magistrates.”

So as far as I can see, the legal principle and procedural rule in each case was precisely the same, the only difference being that the first was a sexual harassment plaintiff who left out an argument, and in the second, it was the Government who did. In the first case you said to that retarded individual, “Sorry, you're out of luck.” In the second case you said to the Government, “I'll make your argument for you.” and that does not seem evenhanded to me. Can you explain the difference?

Judge ALITO. Yes, Senator. As I was attempting to explain a couple minutes ago, there is an important principle called the Principle of Comity that is involved in habeas cases, and it goes to a critical part of our concept of federalism, and it is something that Congress itself has very strongly recognized in the habeas corpus statute. What I'm talking about there is the doctrine of procedural default, which is very closely related to the doctrine of exhaustion. They go hand in hand. And what Congress has said in the Antiterrorism and Effective Death Penalty Act of 1996 is that on the issue of exhaustion, the court has to consider that even if the parties don't raise it.

Senator SCHUMER. Now, that applies to the Government as well as to the defendant?

Judge ALITO. Absolutely. The issue of exhaustion must be considered by the Federal habeas court, even if the State prosecutor does not raise the issue of exhaustion. And why did Congress say that? Congress said that because there's something more involved here than a dispute between the State prosecutor and the habeas petitioner. There is respect for the Federal system of Government involved. There is respect for the State court system involved.

Senator SCHUMER. But the majority did not agree with you in that situation, did they?

Judge ALITO. The majority, but what I'm saying, Senator, is that the underlying principle of comity makes this case makes Smith v. Horn quite different from a dispute between private parties.

And the Supreme Court has said that it is appropriate in certain circumstances for a court to consider procedural default sua sponte, and that's what I thought we should do there. And my position on—

Senator SCHUMER. Let me ask you—I understand your explanation. I am not sure I agree with it, but let me go on to another one. This is Dillinger. In this case it was with a corporation. The case is Dillinger v. Caterpillar. And it is also a case where a party did not raise an issue at trial, will not have the same explanation as the habeas case, obviously. They did not raise the issue at trial or on appeal. This time a large company didn't, Caterpillar. And the majority held that it was waived and it sided with the plaintiff, who was seriously injured in the accident, right?

Judge ALITO. I don't have a recollection of all of the facts—

Senator SCHUMER. OK. Well, let me tell you. Maybe this will refresh your recollection. The majority wrote that it was not appropriate to exercise its discretion—again, it was the majority—to excuse the defendant company's waiver when the consequence of the decision would be to deprive a seriously injured plaintiff of a trial in conformity with applicable law. That is the majority.

You dissented, with the result, had you prevailed, that the accident victim's case would have been over. The majority described your approach as follows. Quote, "There is an insurmountable procedural difficulty with Judge Alito's position. Caterpillar never advanced this argument at trial, an oversight that Judge Alito excuses on a ground that a district court decision may be affirmed on an alternative ground, though not advanced at trial."

So in the Dillinger case, you also thought it was appropriate to use your discretion to excuse Caterpillar, isn't that right?

Judge ALITO. Well, I'd have to refresh my recollection about exactly what was involved in the case. There is—

Senator SCHUMER. Can you explain the difference between the two for us, why in one case it was OK and why in another case it wasn't?

Judge ALITO. Senator, I'd have to refresh my recollection about Dillinger—

Senator SCHUMER. So you don't—

Judge ALITO.—but what you've just mentioned calls—relates to the principle that it is appropriate for an appellate court to affirm a decision of a lower court on an alternative ground when the basis for that is apparent from the record of the case. So if the facts that are—if it's a purely legal issue, for example, and you're talking about whether you're going to affirm or whether you're going to reverse—

Senator SCHUMER. Was that the case in Dillinger?

Judge ALITO. Without refreshing my recollection, I wouldn't be able to tell you—

Senator SCHUMER. All right.

Judge ALITO. But what you read—

Senator SCHUMER. I would posit to you that, again, it was an example of your seeming to have more sympathy for a certain type of plaintiff than another, but what I would like to do, Mr. Chairman, is just ask permission that Judge Alito could respond to the difference, which he hasn't been able to do here because he doesn't recall the details of the case, in writing in the next few days.

Chairman SPECTER. Is that acceptable to you, Judge Alito?

Judge ALITO. Certainly, Senator, yes.

Senator SCHUMER. Because he can then go look at the case and explain to us why he thought it was different.

Chairman SPECTER. With Judge Alito's agreement, that will be the procedure.

Senator SCHUMER. Thank you. Next, strict construction. President Bush has stated his beliefs that judges should be strict constructionists, rigidly adhere to the letter of the Constitution. He has described you as a strict constructionist who favors judicial restraint. So I would just like to explore one particular issue with you.

First, as you said before, there are certain very straightforward questions that are easy to interpret. It says in Article I, Section 3, no person shall be a Senator who will not have attained the age of 30 years. That was a section you mentioned at our individual meeting, and there is no way that it could be constitutional, I suppose, for a 27-year-old to become a Senator, correct? That is easy. That is strict construction, easy.

Judge ALITO. I can't think of a reason why that would not be the case.

Senator SCHUMER. Good. Me, either, lucky for them.

[Laughter.]

Senator SCHUMER. Next, another one. No person except a natural-born citizen or a citizen of the United States at the time of the adoption of this Constitution shall be eligible to the office of President. So there is no way, without a constitutional amendment, that, say—I know Senator Hatch has a bill—that, say, Arnold Schwarzenegger could become President under the current circumstances. That is easy.

Judge ALITO. Well, I don't want to express a view about the constitutionality of Senator Hatch's bill.

Senator SCHUMER. No, it is a constitutional amendment.

Judge ALITO. A constitutional amendment.

Senator SCHUMER. I am just asking you very simply, you would need a—

Judge ALITO. No one but a natural-born citizen can be the President of the United States.

Senator SCHUMER. OK. Now I want to ask you about the 14th Amendment, which sets forth the definition of citizenship. It states, in relevant part, all persons born or naturalized in the United States and subject to the jurisdiction therefore are citizens of the United States. All persons means all persons. That is pretty easy. Do you agree this is a fairly clear and straightforward provision of the Constitution?

Judge ALITO. There are legal—there are active legal disputes about the meaning of that provision at this time.

Senator SCHUMER. Right. But given the clear language, could Congress pass a statute, not a constitutional amendment, denying citizenship to a person born in the United States?

Judge ALITO. And I know that there are proposals to do that. I know that it is an issue that is in play. If it were to come before me, then I would have to go through the whole judicial process of decisionmaking—

Senator SCHUMER. Is there any way that you can see, just off the top of your head here, that that kind of statute would be constitutional?

Judge ALITO. Well, Senator, on issues that can come before me in litigation, I need to apply the same standard that previous nominees have applied, and that is no hints and no previews. And they may be—they may turn out to be easy issues. They may turn out to be hard issues. But I can't opine on them here off the cuff. I would have to go through the process of—

Senator SCHUMER. Just make the argument. You don't even have to tell us how you would decide. What imaginable argument could there be for a statute that Congress could deny the citizenship to those born in the United States, say, on the grounds that their parents were illegal aliens? Is there any constitutional argument that you can see off the top of your head?

Judge ALITO. Well, Senator, I don't want to say anything that—could I answer the question, Senator. I don't want to say anything that anybody will characterize as an argument that I am making on one side of this question or on the other side of the question. I know that an argument is being made by people who favor this kind of legislation based on the language, under the jurisdiction of the United States, and I don't know whether that will turn out to—I don't know whether it will come before me. I don't know whether, when it's analyzed, it will turn out to be a compelling argument or a frivolous argument or something in between and I wouldn't express an opinion on it.

Senator SCHUMER. Judge, I simply asked you to give us an interpretation of one of the most direct and clear provisions in the United States Constitution, and if you can't give us an answer on a very, it seems to me, clear-cut question like that, I find, and I think many of us find, make it difficult to make an assessment of how to vote on your nomination because—

Judge ALITO. Senator, my answer is that it is inappropriate for a sitting judge or for a nominee to a judicial position to offer opinions on constitutional questions that are percolating at that time and may well come before that judge or that nominee. It may turn out to be a very simple question. It may turn out to be a complicated question. Without studying the question, I don't know and I wouldn't—and even if I had an initial impression, I wouldn't voice it here. I would have to go through the whole judicial decision-making process before reaching a conclusion that I would be willing to express.

Senator SCHUMER. I want to move on now to the Commerce Clause and Rybar. As you know, after you ruled on Rybar, Gonzales v. Raich was decided and Justice Stevens wrote for the majority the following. "Our understanding of the reach of the Commerce Clause, as well as Congress's assertion of authority thereunder, has evolved over time." Do you agree with that statement? Has our understanding of the scope of that clause evolved over time, and is it appropriate for our understanding to evolve?

Judge ALITO. I think our understanding of the reach of the Commerce Clause has evolved as the commercial activity of the country has developed. Commerce in the United States at the time of the adoption of the Constitution was entirely different from commerce in the United States today.

Senator SCHUMER. I think most people would agree with that, maybe—

Judge ALITO. As a matter of looking at the development of case law, certainly the case law has developed. The pre-New Deal case law was fundamentally different from the post-New Deal case law, with which I don't have any quarrel.

Senator SCHUMER. Right. But here, I am going to read you two views on the Commerce Clause. One, Congress's authority to enact laws necessary and proper for the regulation of interstate commerce is not limited to laws directed against economic activity that have a substantial effect on interstate commerce. Where Congress has the authority to enact a regulation of interstate commerce, it possesses every power needed to make that regulation effective.

Then there is another view. Under the Commerce Clause, Congress may regulate interstate commerce, not activities that substantially affect interstate commerce. Those are pretty diametrical.

I am not asking for an absolute here, but which one is closer to your view of the Commerce Clause?

Judge ALITO. Well, the second view is contrary to Supreme Court precedent. It is contrary to even Lopez and Morrison, which says that Congress may regulate activities that substantially affect interstate commerce.

Senator SCHUMER. Right, and the first actually was Justice Scalia's concurrence in Raich, and the second, even though it may be contrary to precedent—we have talked about precedent before—was actually Justice Thomas's dissent in Raich, so it is obviously a view that has some currency on the Court. I am glad to see you favor the first one.

Now, I asked you a question when we met. I asked you, as you know, because we talked about it, I was very troubled by your decision in Rybar as—and Mr. Chairman, I just don't want to—could I get permission for an additional five minutes? That is all I will need.

Chairman SPECTER. Yes.

Senator SCHUMER. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Chairman SPECTER. I couldn't be very forceful about it, but yes.

Senator SCHUMER. Thank you. I will take it any way you give it. [Laughter.]

Senator SCHUMER. I asked you in Rybar when we had met if you would have decided the case differently after Raich, which is quite different than Rybar, and at that point you said you wanted to think about it and I told you I would ask you here. So I guess you have thought about it now. So my question is, does the recent Supreme Court decision in Raich, joined by Justice Scalia, whose opinion you said was closer to your view than the other, affect your thinking? More specifically, had Raich been decided before you got Rybar, do you think you would have decided it differently?

Judge ALITO. Well, Senator, I don't recall making a promise that I would reach a definitive conclusion—

Senator SCHUMER. I asked you to think about it. You said you would. That is all.

Judge ALITO. And I have thought about it, but what I can say is that I certainly would have thought about Rybar differently had I had Raich available at that time. My effort in Rybar was to follow Supreme Court precedent. At the time, Lopez was the latest expression of the Supreme Court's view of this question, and if the chronology had been different and I had the benefit of Raich, I would have taken that into account.

Senator SCHUMER. OK. Now, just one other thing on the Commerce Clause. So what you are saying is that there is a possibility—we won't put a percentage on it—that Raich might have changed the outcome of your ruling or your dissent in Rybar?

Judge ALITO. Well, it certainly would have changed my thinking and my analysis. I would have had to take it into account.

Senator SCHUMER. We will take what we can get.

Next, as a U.S. Attorney, you frequently crossed paths with State agencies, particularly law enforcement agencies, and at that point, as I remember—I was a Member of Congress very active in anti-crime legislation—there were all kinds of fights about whether there should be an increased Federal role in crime fighting. You must have dealt with some of those statutes. There was carjacking and trigger-lock type offenses. You must have presided over some prosecutions of local corruption based on an expansive Federal law theory. Mail fraud was being expanded at that time. These enforcement priorities tended to be conservative. I agreed with them, but they tended to be conservative priorities.

So did your tenure as U.S. Attorney affect your thinking on these kinds of situations in terms of the State, the need for Federal involvement when the State can't do it?

And it brings up, and then I will let you speak about this for a minute, in the odometer Act—I can't remember the exact name of it, but the legislation that was bill S. 475 that Senator Feinstein mentioned, you urged disapproval. But it seems to me if that legislation was disapproved, it would have been very difficult for the Federal Government to regulate odometers because cars that were transferred from one State to the other wouldn't have the same uniform system in terms of their title, and it seems to me, at least, in this world which is becoming smaller and smaller that some of the federalism theory, that the States should have primacy in regulation, just don't make sense.

It didn't make sense to me in your decision in Rybar, as we have discussed. Ninety percent of the guns used in crimes in New York come from out of State. There is no way New York State could stop them unless they inspected each car that came across the George Washington Bridge. Similarly, here. Without this Federal statute, there is no way the Federal Government could regulate odometers. It would be ridiculous to ask General Motors to have 50 different standards for 50 different States. And similarly as U.S. Attorney, there were areas where it was better for, particularly in our interconnected world, for the Federal Government to prevail.

And yet here you were saying—you were working for the administration, but they ultimately rejected your view—that State primacy is such—you even said in this memo, after all, it is the States, not the Federal Government, that are charged with protecting the health, safety, and welfare of citizens. That is a pretty broad statement. I would take it you had exceptions to it, of course—Medicare, U.S. Attorneys. You wouldn't have had a job if that was an absolute statement back then.

But just tell us a little bit, for a couple of minutes, about your view of the balance between State and Federal powers, particularly in light of the changing circumstances we face.

Judge ALITO. Well, I think your mentioning those two things, the memo that I wrote when I was in OLC or that I signed when I was in OLC and my service as U.S. Attorney brings out an important point. I was playing different roles. I had different responsibilities in those two jobs. When I was in OLC, I think what I was expressing in that memo was the federalism policies of the Reagan administration, which as I mentioned earlier, involved going beyond simply insisting on compliance with constitutional standards. It also involved implementing a policy that certain things should be done at the State and local level, even if the Federal Government could do that.

As U.S. Attorney, it was my job to use the legal resources that were available to address the crime problems of the district for which I was U.S. Attorney and I approached that on a basis of cooperating with State and local law enforcement and my approach was that we should do, the Federal prosecutors should do and the Federal investigative agencies should do the things that they were best suited to do and that it should be a practical division of responsibility. And in many instances as U.S. Attorney, we were using far-reaching Federal powers. We brought a Hobbs Act prosecution and were stunned when the district court initially threw it out on Commerce Clause grounds, because that was virtually unheard of.

Senator SCHUMER. All I am trying to get at here, there is a practical dimension here that I think fits within the Constitution, and you are agreeing with that.

Judge ALITO. Absolutely, and I—

Senator SCHUMER. I just have to conclude, but go ahead.

Judge ALITO. Senator, that is fine.

Senator SCHUMER. Good. Quit while we are ahead on that one.

Let me just, in conclusion, Judge, thank you. It has been a long 3 days, obviously. As your testimony in these hearings comes to a close, I just have to tell you that I remain very troubled, not by anything in your personal history so much as by your judicial views.

You arrived before us this week with a record. It is a record that contains evidence that you believe the Constitution does not protect a woman's right to choose. It is a record that suggests you believe in an executive branch so powerful that it would trump other branches of government. It is a record that makes you appear all too willing to curtail the ability of Congress to look out for the little guy and a record in which you all too often seem to reach for the legal theory that allows you to side with the large and powerful when average Americans touched by this crushing hand of fate need the most help.

Unfortunately, by refusing to confront our questions directly and by giving us responses that really don't illuminate how you really think as opposed to real answers, many of us have no choice but to conclude that you still embrace those views, completely or in large part, and would continue in a similar fashion on the Supreme Court. So while the process is not yet over, we have written questions, we have some witnesses, the evidence before us makes it very hard to vote yes on your nomination.

On the first day of hearings, I said that while you give the appearance of being a meticulous legal navigator, in the end, you almost always choose the rightward course. I am sorry to say that I haven't heard anything this week very substantive to dissuade me from that opinion, but I thank you for being here and going through these hearings.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Chairman SPECTER. Thank you, Senator Schumer.

Senator SESSIONS, do you have any questions?

Senator SESSIONS. Just a few. I would just respond to Senator Schumer and Senator Kennedy and would note that that is not what the ABA has concluded. They have interviewed 300 of your colleagues, judges and lawyers who have practiced before you and against you, and they rate you the highest possible rating. They don't see you as an extremist, out of the mainstream, or otherwise.

And I also want to thank your family for their patience in going through all of this and listening to those of us on this side as we expostulate on all sorts of things. I see your sister back there, in her own right a nationally known attorney, Rosemary. It is good to see you here. I understand you were debate partners in high school. It must have been an interesting household to have two prominent lawyers growing up, so I will ask you how that was and who was the best debater.

[Laughter.]

Judge ALITO. I will take the Fifth Amendment on the second part of the question—

[Laughter.]

Judge ALITO.—but it structured our arguments, so instead of arguing about things at home, we would argue about the issues that we were debating.

My wife insists that we actually argued a debate in front of her class. We didn't know each other at all at the time and didn't meet, actually, for many, many years later, but we did have a debate at her high school, which was about 20 miles away, and she insists she remembers seeing us debating in front of her French class.

Senator SESSIONS. It must have been an interesting thing. Apparently, your colleagues in school there were impressed. They predicted you would serve on the Supreme Court one day, and I think that is going to turn out to be a good prediction.

I would point out, Judge Alito, that you have been asked a lot about separation of powers, FISA Act, and those kind of things. This Congress has not clarified its position yet. As a judge, if some of these issues were to come before you involving congressional power or something, you would expect the Congress to have formulated its position first, would you not?

Judge ALITO. Well, that would certainly be very helpful. These are very—these are momentous issues and they're difficult issues and they are—they have just come to the surface in the last few weeks and I couldn't begin to say how I would decide any of these issues without going through the whole judicial decisionmaking process. I think it would be the height of irresponsibility for me to try to do that.

Senator SESSIONS. I would agree, and the Chairman is going to be having hearings within a few weeks here to discuss many of these issues and it is something that every Senator will be engaged in, whether they desire to or not, and we will have to think these important issues through. I don't think they are ripe yet for decision, that is for sure.

I would also note that with regard to Justice Jackson's position on the President and his war making powers and the question of when there is a higher position and a lower ebb position, Chief Justice Rehnquist discussed that idea in Dames and Moore v. Reagan and, in fact, pointed out that that doesn't completely answer the question. Those answers are not black and white and there is a spectrum running from explicit congressional authorization to implicit or to explicit congressional prohibition. So there are many factors that must be considered, would you not agree, as you analyze those matters?

Judge ALITO. Yes, you have to know the specifics of the situation.

Senator SESSIONS. On the question of jurisdiction of the Supreme Court and whether Congress has the power to contain it in some way, it does appear there is language in the Constitution that indicates that. As you said yesterday, it is there.

My question to you is do you believe that the three branches of Government owe it to our country and to our constituents to stay within our bounds and to avoid a constitutional confrontation, a constitutional crisis? Isn't it better if the courts restrain themselves, Congress would restrain itself and not to go forward to an ultimate confrontation of those issues?

Judge ALITO. It certainly is. The issue of the ability of Congress to take away the Supreme Court's jurisdiction over a particular subject of cases is not something that I have previously addressed in writings, unlike a lot of previous nominees who had addressed that, and therefore I think felt that they were freer to discuss that when they came before the Committee.

That is not something that I have ever addressed in any writing, nor is it something that I have studied, other than to read a few—you know, read some of the authorities who have addressed the question. I did mention that I had given a speech expressing the idea that I thought that it was not a good policy idea.

I could understand the—I understand the motivation, but I don't think that it is good as a matter of policy to proceed in that fashion. And I don't know what the argument would be as I sit here in favor of taking away jurisdiction over an entire class of cases. That would raise some serious constitutional questions.

Senator SESSIONS. I would just say to you I think we ought not to confront that question if we can avoid it, and that is why I have not joined in legislation, some of which has been filed in this Congress, to take jurisdiction away. But I do believe that is some power that has been given to the Congress and hopefully will not have to be utilized. Hopefully, that sword will never be drawn because the Court will show restraint and remain within the constitutional powers that they have.

With regard to the unitary Executive, there are just three branches of Government in our Constitution. That is correct, is it not?

Judge ALITO. That is all I see in it.

[Laughter.]

Senator SESSIONS. Well, does every agency and department have to be within one or the other?

Judge ALITO. I think they do. That doesn't say that they can't be structured in ways that differ from each other, depending on their function. And that doesn't address the separate issues of appointment or removal or whether—well, let me just leave it there, with appointment and removal. But I think that the Constitution sets up three branches and everything has to be within one of those branches.

Senator SESSIONS. One of the things that I learned as United States Attorney is these agencies think they are independent entities. They think they are almost like nations. When they get together—you probably had this experience—they sign memorandums of understanding.

Wouldn't you agree they sometimes look awfully like treaties?

Judge ALITO. They do look—yes, they do look like treaties between Federal law enforcement agencies and State law enforcement agencies.

Senator SESSIONS. But, of course, the Federal Government is one. They can't take two positions in a lawsuit. That is for certain.

With regard to interstate commerce, there is a limit to that, to the power of the Government, I believe. In the Hobbs Act and the Racketeering Act that Senator Schumer mentioned, doesn't it say within those Acts that the extortion of the pattern of racketeering has to affect interstate commerce and that is an element that the prosecutor must prove before a conviction can be obtained?

Judge ALITO. Yes, that is right, and the Federal criminal statutes that I am familiar with almost without exception have jurisdictional elements in them. That is the traditional way of casting them. There are a few areas where that is not feasible, such as drugs, but in most of the—most of the statutes have jurisdictional elements right in them.

Senator SESSIONS. And that is basically the Lopez holding, was it not? And in your opinion in Rybar, you specifically said all that Congress needed to do was to put in an interstate commerce nexus that would be proved to the jury, which I agree with you; having prosecuted hundreds of drug cases, it has not ever been a problem in those cases to prove.

That would have solved the problem, isn't that correct?

Judge ALITO. That is right. In firearms cases, that is just not a problem.

Senator SESSIONS. Well, I think you have testified extremely well here. You have been most forthcoming. I disagree with the recent comment that you haven't been forthcoming. I would say—and I think Senator Biden indicated that we have not had a witness more forthcoming, more willing to discuss the issues than you have.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Chairman SPECTER. Thank you, Senator Sessions.

I thought we were going to get to that light at the end of the tunnel before one. It looks like we are going to be a little later than that, but we don't want to take a break now. So to the extent we could move ahead rapidly, it would be appreciated.

Senator Durbin, you had originally asked for ten minutes, but I understand you want more time. How much would you like?

Senator DURBIN. Senator, I will do it as close to ten minutes as I can. I might need a few extra. I want to reach the end of that same tunnel.

Chairman SPECTER. All right. Let's set the clock at ten, with flexibility to exceed that.

Senator DURBIN. Thank you very much.

Thank you, Judge Alito. Thanks to your family for putting up with this endurance test, and I appreciate your patience throughout.

First, let me address the issue of court-stripping that was mentioned by my friend from the State of Alabama. I really hope that Congress will never draw that sword. We heard about it during the Schiavo case. If we are going to have a truly independent judiciary, the thought that Congress will take away from the courts issues which we disagree with would really jeopardize it. And just editorializing, I hope we don't reach that point.

After you leave today, there will be a panel of your colleagues on the bench from the Third Circuit. Was this your idea that they come and testify?

Judge ALITO. No, it was not.

Senator DURBIN. Were you asked if it was a good idea?

Judge ALITO. No, I was not.

Senator DURBIN. OK. I understand it has never happened before and that is why I asked you that question. I don't know who came up with this notion, but it does raise some interesting questions which we have shared on a bipartisan basis about that testimony. But since you weren't involved in that decisionmaking, I will drop it at that.

Then there will come some public witnesses and one of those witnesses will raise a contrast between two decisions you made, and I am going to give you a chance now to respond to that charge or that observation that will be made. Fourth Amendment cases. One we have talked about a lot, Doe v. Groody, another we have talked about, I think, tangentially which involves Leveto. I hope I am pronouncing that correctly.

Judge ALITO. Leveto, or I am not sure what the pronunciation is, yes.

Senator DURBIN. You know which case I am concerned with?

Judge ALITO. Yes, I do.

Senator DURBIN. In the Leveto case, a veterinarian and his wife, subject to Internal Revenue Service agents coming at 6:30 in the morning, detaining him, patting him down in an Internal Revenue Service investigation, holding him for 6 hours in his office. Then they went to his home, found his wife in her nightgown, patted her down, held her incommunicado for a period of time. And they brought a civil suit and said the Government went too far; they didn't have the authority to do those things, to pat us down and search.

And your conclusion, writing the majority opinion, was, yes, they did go too far. There was a question about immunity which I won't touch on, but at least from the Fourth Amendment point of view you said that the Government went too far.

Now, of course, the notorious case that has come up time and again of Doe v. Groody. In that case, there is a search of premises and a John Doe search warrant looking for someone who might have been involved in drug-dealing. An affidavit attached to the warrant says that it could also involve persons on the premises who may be hiding drugs, but the affidavit is not part of the search warrant. It is maybe incorporated in general terms. The majority of the court says that it was not incorporated, Judge Chertoff writing for the majority. Particularly egregious is the fact that a mother and her 10-year-old daughter were strip-searched pursuant to that search warrant. And in that case, you concluded that that was warranted, that was an acceptable search.

So the witness who comes before us is going to say, Judge, how can you do this? You have a veterinarian here and his wife, an IRS search. In their case, you said they went too far when they patted them down and searched them. The next case involving a 10-year-old girl in a strip search—you say they didn't go too far.

How would you compare the two and draw the distinction between them?

Judge ALITO. Well, the Leveto case involved the issue of how long they could detain people who were present on the premises while they executed the search of the premises. And they detained these people for a very long period. I don't remember—

Senator DURBIN. Six hours, or more.

Judge ALITO. It might even have been longer. It was a very long period of time and there was no warrant for their arrest. There was no claim that there was a justification to seize them, other than the fact that they were present on the premises at the time when the search was being executed.

The Doe v. Groody case involved the question of the interpretation of the warrant, and the standard that is to be applied there is, the Supreme Court has told us, a practical, common-sense instruction. It is not—the warrant is not to be interpreted like a sophisticated commercial instrument that is drafted by parties.

The facts were—you mentioned many of them—that the affidavit prepared by the police officer said we have probable cause to search anybody who is found on the premises because we know that—we have probable cause to believe that this drug dealer will hide drugs on the people on the premises.

And they presented that to the magistrate and the magistrate issued the warrant, attached the affidavit to the warrant and said the warrant is incorporated for—and I guess I left out the important fact that the officers—they said we have probable cause to search anybody on the premises and that is what we want; we want authorization to search anybody on the premises.

And the magistrate granted the warrant and attached the affidavit to the warrant, and said the affidavit is incorporated for the purpose of probable cause, which meant that the magistrate found that there was probable cause to search anybody on the premises. But in the portion of the warrant where it said person to be searched, it only mentioned this—

Senator DURBIN. John Doe.

Judge ALITO. The John Doe, and using—now if this were a bond, I think you would conclude the only person you can search is John Doe. But it is a warrant, and my view was that viewing this from a practical standpoint, when the magistrate says, yes, you are right, there is probable cause to search anybody on the premises, that is what he is saying. Those are the people he is saying can be searched.

But even if one didn't agree with that, you would go on to the qualified immunity question and say could a reasonable police officer who says I have got probable cause to search anybody who is on the premises and that is what I want, and you go to the magistrate and he magistrate says I agree with you on probable cause and here is your warrant—could they reasonably think that the magistrate is saying, yes, search anybody on the premises?

Senator DURBIN. So did it go into your thinking, this whole question of the dignity of the individual, that we are, in fact, dealing with a mother and a 10-year-old daughter who were subjected to the most intrusive search? Was that part of your thinking in terms of coming down in the minority position and saying it was all right to go ahead with the search? Did you consider that calculation?

Judge ALITO. I was concerned about the fact that a minor had been searched. And I mentioned that in my opinion and that is something that is very unfortunate. But the issue in the case was not whether there is some sort of rule that minors can't be searched. That is not part of Fourth Amendment law, as I understand it, and there would be a very bad consequence if that were the rule because where would drug dealers hide their drugs? Minors would then become—they would become the repository of the drugs and the firearms.

Senator DURBIN. Or the issuing authority may be more specific in the warrant which, as I understand it, is what the Fourth Amendment is all about.

Judge ALITO. Well, the warrant here certainly could have been drafted better, and a lot of—

Senator DURBIN. I think that is what the majority said.

Judge ALITO. It is, but we have to take into account that these are police officers operating under time pressure. And the Supreme Court has told us that we are not to read these warrants like they are complicated commercial documents. We are trying to get at the practicalities of the situation.

Senator DURBIN. I only have a few minutes and I will try my best to end it, but I don't think I can do it in two.

In the Seventh Circuit, in Chicago, Judge Richard Posner is a very prolific writer about many things. He recently made an observation which I think really is a challenge to all of us on the Judiciary Committee. We currently have a situation involving immigration cases, particularly those involving asylum and deportation, that we have to look at very seriously.

There was an effort to clear the backlog when Attorney General Ashcroft was in charge, and some procedures were changed to streamline the process. And a lot of these cases were just churned out very quickly, with very little evidence as to why decisions were being made. Judge Posner made that point recently, publicly stating, if I might quote him, "The adjudication of these cases at the administrative level has fallen below the minimum standards of legal justice." he said.

Now, you have been involved in some of these cases, about nine split decisions, as we calculate here. There has been a dramatic increase in the number of these cases coming to the Federal appeals courts. In one particular case here, the Saidou Dia case, which involved the deportation of a man back to Guinea, where he refused to serve in the military. His wife was then confronted in his home country at their home. When they couldn't find him, they beat her, raped her, and burned down his home. And this was a man who said, "I don't want to go back because I think it could be a dangerous circumstance for me."

In this case, you dissented and said, "Return him to Guinea." You didn't feel that there was a strong enough case to grant him asylum in the United States and to stay.

The reason I raise it is we looked at your record in cases where there was a split decision, and we discovered that you ruled for the Government in eight out of nine cases and in seven of those eight cases yours was the minority position.

So my question to you is: Do you appreciate the observation made by Judge Posner about the terrible state of affairs when it comes to the immigration judges and the decisions they are sending for you to review? And why did you in those contested cases consistently rule on the Government side?

Judge ALITO. Well, Senator, I think I have ruled in favor of asylum seekers in a number of cases now and—

Senator DURBIN. There are usually no dissents in those cases.

Judge ALITO. Well, I know that I've ruled in favor of asylum seekers in quite a number of cases. I don't have the list on the tip of my tongue.

In the Dia case that you mentioned, the facts that you recited were not the facts that were found by the immigration judge. Those were the facts that the asylum seeker alleged, and the whole issue in the case was whether there was sufficient evidence to support the contrary finding of the immigration judge.

I agree with Judge Posner that the way these cases are handled leaves an enormous amount to be desired. I have been troubled by this; my court has been troubled by this. But my situation as a court of appeals judge before whom these cases come is created by the legal framework that Congress has created. And Congress has given us a very limited role in reviewing factual findings by immigration judges. What Congress has said is that we have to accept factual findings by the immigration judge unless no reasonable fact finder could come to a contrary conclusion. And that's a tough standard.

And I have tried to adhere faithfully to that standard in all the cases that come before me, even if I felt that I might have reached a different conclusion on the record.

Senator DURBIN. Judge, wouldn't you concede there are basically two standards that are being debated here? One is that no reasonable adjudicator would have come to a different conclusion. The other talks about substantial evidence. And you have followed that second standard, the substantial evidence case in Liu v. Ashcroft and Zhang v. Gonzales.

My point I want to get to—and this will be the last thing I ask you—is if we know the system is broken, if we know that it doesn't give basic fairness and justice, do you not feel at your level that you have to be more sensitive to the fact that there are people's lives at stake here and that you have to take care when they are asking for asylum and protection in the United States not to let this broken system work to their detriment?

Judge ALITO. We do have to keep in mind just what's at stake, and I do that. I know that a lot is at stake in these cases, and I read the record to see if there is support for the arguments that are made by these petitioners. But I have no way of supplementing the record. And there are serious problems. One of the most serious problems, I think, is that the witnesses, the asylum seekers generally testify in another language. Sometimes it's a language that is not well represented in the population of the United States, so it may be difficult to get a translator. And the quality of the transcripts is often very poor, which makes it very difficult to understand what was going on before the immigration judge.

Now, there have been cases where we've said the transcript here is so bad that we can't make a decision on this, and we will send it back.

But there's the additional problem that the immigration judges are forced to make credibility determinations based on viewing someone who comes from a different culture, where mannerisms, gestures, facial expressions may mean something different than they do in our culture, and I'm aware of that. But these are bigger problems. These are problems for Congress to address. They're not problems that I can address in the context of deciding these particular cases.

Senator DURBIN. Thank you. I agree, and I thank you very much. And I finished in under 15 minutes, Mr. Chairman.

Chairman SPECTER. Well, thank you very much, Senator Durbin. That is appreciated.

Senator Graham? No comments. Wonderful.

Chairman SPECTER. Senator Cornyn?

Senator Cornyn?

Senator CORNYN. I yield back my time.

Chairman SPECTER. Doubly wonderful.

We are going to be going into executive session when we finish, which will be just in a few moments, and we have attempted to notify all Senators, those not here, through staff. The purpose is to discuss in private any questions which arise as to—any questions anybody may have in mind as to Judge Alito. It doesn't suggest anything of substance, but we have adopted this practice since Justice Breyer's proceeding and do it as a matter of routine so that if there is something, by going into executive session we do not signal that there is something. And going into executive session does not mean, if there is something, that there is nothing, but it is routine. As I explained it, I am not quite sure why we do it, but we do it.

[Laughter.]

Chairman SPECTER. It doesn't take long if you do it before lunch.

[Laughter.]

Chairman SPECTER. There has been some suggestion we do it after lunch, and let me tell you, it would be a long session. But we are going to do it before lunch, and we are going to do it in the Committee hearing room, which has been swept—another unnecessary item because there is nothing to say in there. But that is our procedure.

Now I yield to our distinguished Ranking Member, Senator Leahy.

Senator LEAHY. Thank you. Just briefly, Mr. Chairman, and you have been so courteous on this, I hate to even take this time. But in saying this, I want to make sure Judge Alito is here.

When we started this, I actually started with the same subject I started with then-Judge Roberts, now Chief Justice. It is on the question of Presidential power, and whether he appreciates the role of the Supreme Court as a check and balance. As you know, I voted for him, and that is a leap of faith because nobody makes commitments on exactly how they are going to vote in one case or another.

In this case, it has been pointed out you are to replace Justice Sandra Day O'Connor. Actually, initially Chief Justice Roberts was nominated for that. Then Harriet Miers was nominated. The President was forced by concerns within his own party to withdraw her, then nominated you very quickly after you had been—well, you had been interviewed once at the beginning of his term, but then you were interviewed again by Vice President Cheney and Karl Rove, Scooter Libby, I think a few others. And that is why I worry. I just wanted to make sure in my own mind that you would stand as a check and balance, for this President or any President.

I know your concerns you expressed in the year 2000. You criticized the independent counsel law. So many times in the questions I have raised this issue, because I was afraid you would not act as a check and balance. We have a Government that is getting more and more powerful, in the electronic age especially powerful. We see illegal spying on Americans by Americans.

All of us agree the President is not above the law any more than you are or I am. But it takes more than that, especially if we are giving the President the power unilaterally to redefine the law, an issue that is going eventually to come before you.

So those are my concerns. I wanted you to know what my concerns are. They go beyond the other issues raised by Senator Specter or other Senators, though those are legitimate issues. But those are mine, and I wanted to say that to you personally.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Chairman SPECTER. Thank you very much, Senator Leahy.

We were about to excuse you from any further participation in these proceedings, Judge Alito. I have been handed statistics which show that you have been questioned for about 18 hours, the number of questions approximating some 700, and some differences of opinion as to the comprehensiveness of your responses. But Senators are entitled to their own views, and you will be hearing more when we conclude the hearings and later go into executive session for the Committee to vote and further on floor debate. But you have certainly demonstrated remarkable patience—I think everybody would agree with that—and remarkable stamina and a very loyal family, led by your wife. And we thank you for your public service, and you may be assured that the Committee on both sides and all of the balance of our 100 Senators will give very, very careful consideration to the President's nomination of you for the Supreme Court.

We will recess now and we will resume at—it is uncertain how long our session will be, so we will resume at 2:30 and we will begin with a report from the American Bar Association, and then we will move to witnesses from the Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit.

Senator LEAHY. Right now we are going to the closed—

Chairman SPECTER. But now we are going to the Committee hearing room, Dirksen 226, for an executive session.

[Whereupon, at 1:10 p.m., the Committee was recessed, to reconvene at 2:30 p.m., this same day.]

Chairman SPECTER. The Judiciary Committee will now proceed with the confirmation hearing on Judge Samuel Alito for the Supreme Court of the United States.

After our morning session, the Committee met in executive session and reviewed confidential data on the background of Judge Alito, and it was all found to be in order.

We are now proceeding with the witnesses. The tradition of the outside witnesses, the independent witnesses, our tradition is to hear first from the American Bar Association and their evaluation of the judicial nominee.

We have structured this portion of our hearing differently from what had been done prior to last year, and that is, where the majority took most of the outside witnesses. The tradition has been to have 30 witnesses, and the majority party had taken 18, and the minority party 12, and it seemed that it would be more appropriate to have an even split, 15 and 15, and that is the practice we are following. And of course, the ABA representatives are not witnesses called by either Democrats or Republicans. We have really done our best to proceed in a nonpolitical way in the selection of a Supreme Court Justice. There can be different evaluations as to how successful we are in that, but that has been our effort.

We have limited testimony to 5 minutes for outside witnesses. The next witness already nods in agreement. He was here not too long ago for Chief Justice Roberts. And we have established the 5-minute rule because we have 31 witnesses, and the Senate is not in session, and all the members of the Committee have other commitments. It is projected that we will finish today, but we will have to keep on schedule.

We turn now to the American Bar Association panel, and we welcome Mr. Steve Tober, Ms. Marna Tucker, and Mr. John Payton. In accordance with the practice, the testimony will be given by Mr. Tober, who is the Chairman of the American Bar Association Standing Committee on the Federal Judiciary. He is an attorney with a law firm bearing his name, experienced in civil litigation, professional negligence and domestic relations; undergraduate and law degree from Syracuse University; on the board of the Law Review; deeply involved in New Hampshire and New England legal communities, former chairman of the Committee to Redraft New Hampshire's Rule on Professional Conduct.

We know the laborious job involved, Mr. Tober, which you are about to describe, in reaching an evaluation of a Supreme Court nominee, and the importance of your judgment, so we thank you and Mr. Payton and Ms. Tucker for your public service.

Now, Mr. Tober, the floor is yours.

STATEMENT OF STEPHEN L. TOBER, ESQ., CHAIRMAN, AMERICAN BAR ASSOCIATION STANDING COMMITTEE ON THE FEDERAL JUDICIARY, PORTSMOUTH, NEW HAMPSHIRE; ACCOMPANIED BY MARNA TUCKER, ESQ., D.C. CIRCUIT REPRESENTATIVE, AMERICAN BAR ASSOCIATION STANDING COMMITTEE ON THE FEDERAL JUDICIARY, WASHINGTON, D.C.; AND JOHN PAYTON, ESQ., FEDERAL CIRCUIT REPRESENTATIVE, AMERICAN BAR ASSOCIATION STANDING COMMITTEE ON THE FEDERAL JUDICIARY, WASHINGTON, D.C.

Mr. TOBER. Thank you, Your Honor. Thank you, Mr. Chairman, members of the Committee. My name is Stephen L. Tober of Portsmouth, New Hampshire, and it is my privilege to chair the American Bar Association Standing Committee on the Federal Judiciary.

I am indeed joined today by Marna Tucker, our D.C. Circuit Representative, and by John Payton, our Federal Circuit Representative.

For well over 50 years the ABA Standing Committee has provided a unique and comprehensive examination of the professional qualifications of candidates for the Federal bench. It is composed of 15 distinguished lawyers who represent every judicial circuit in the United States, and who annually volunteer hundreds of hours of public service.

Our committee conducts a thorough, nonpartisan, nonideological peer review, using well-established standards that measure a nominee's integrity, professional competence and judicial temperament.

With respect to a nomination to the United States Supreme Court, the Standing Committee's investigation is based upon the premise that such a nominee must possess exceptional professional qualifications. The significance, range and complexity of issues that will be confronted on that Court demands no less. As such, our investigation of a Supreme Court nominee is more extensive and is procedurally different from others in two principal ways.

First, all circuit members on the Standing Committee reach out to a wide range of individuals within their respective circuits who are most likely to have information regarding the nominee's professional qualifications. And second, reading groups of scholars and distinguished practitioners are formed to review the nominee's legal writings and advise the Standing Committee. The reading groups assist in evaluating the nominee's analytical skills, knowledge of the law, application of the facts to the law, and the ability to communicate effectively.

In the case of Judge Alito, circuit members combined to contact well over 2,000 individuals throughout this Nation. Those contacts cut across virtually every demographic consideration, and it included judges, lawyers and members of the general community. Thereafter, circuit members interviewed more than 300 people who knew, had worked with, or had substantial knowledge of the nominee. All interviews regarding the nominee were fully confidential to assure the most candid of assessments.

Judge Alito has created a substantial written record over his years of public service. Our three reading groups worked collaboratively to read and evaluate nearly 350 of his published opinions, several dozen of his unpublished opinions, a number of his Supreme Court oral argument transcripts and corresponding briefs, and other articles and legal memos.

The academic reading groups were composed of distinguished faculty from the Syracuse University College of Law and from the Georgetown University Law Center. The practitioners group was composed of nationally recognized lawyers intimately familiar with demands of appellate practice at the highest level.

Finally, as we do in any Standing Committee investigation, a personal interview was conducted with this nominee. Judge Alito met with the three of us on December 12th, and he provided us a full opportunity to review matters with him in detail.

After the comprehensive investigation was completed, the findings were assembled into a detailed confidential report. Each member of the Standing Committee reviewed that final report thoroughly, and individually evaluated that nominee using three rating categories: well qualified, qualified and not qualified. Needless to say, to merit an evaluation of well qualified, the nominee must possess professional qualifications and achievements of the highest standing.

During our investigation questions were raised concerning the nominee's recusal practice, and also concerning some aspects of his judicial temperament. We have carefully reviewed and resolved those questions to our satisfaction, as we have detailed in our accompanying correspondence to your Committee, which, Mr. Chairman, we ask to be made part of this record.

Chairman SPECTER. Without objection, they will be made part of the record.

Mr. TOBER. We are ultimately persuaded that Judge Alito has, throughout his 15 years on the Federal bench, established a record of both proper judicial conduct and evenhanded application in seeking to do what is fundamentally fair.

As such, on the basis of its comprehensive investigation, and with one recusal, the Standing Committee unanimously concluded that Judge Samuel A. Alito, Jr. is well qualified to serve as Associate Justice on the United States Supreme Court. His integrity, his professional competence and his judicial temperament are indeed found to be of the highest standard.

Mr. Chairman, let me say once again what we noted here back in September. The goal of the ABA Standing Committee has always been and remains in concert with the goal of your Committee, to assure a qualified and independent judiciary for the American people. With that, thank you for the opportunity to present these remarks.

[The prepared statement of Mr. Tober appears as a submission for the record.]

Chairman SPECTER. Thank you very much, Mr. Tober, for your work and for ending right on the button, 5 minutes to a tee.

Mr. TOBER. I worked on that, sir.

[Laughter.]

Chairman SPECTER. That quality of yours would recommend you for Supreme Court argument, where Chief Justice Rehnquist stopped the speaker in mid-sentence, and the word from Judge Becker, who will testify later, he was looking for an opportunity—he stopped me in mid-sentence one day—and he was looking for an opportunity to stop a speaker in the middle of the word “if,” I did not give him that chance.

[Laughter.]

Chairman SPECTER. Before proceeding to questions, I want to yield to Senator Leahy, to see if he has any opening comments that he wants to make.

Senator LEAHY. I do not, Mr. Chairman. Thank you, though.

Chairman SPECTER. We have 5-minute rounds for each of the members of the Committee.

Mr. Tober, picking up on your testimony that you found Judge Alito to have evenhanded application of the law, how would you amplify that with respect to what kind of materials you have looked at, and what your evaluation was, and what led you to that conclusion?

Mr. TOBER. Be happy to, Mr. Chairman. The conclusion was reached in large measure in interviews with, as I said, well over 300 individuals around this country, over 130 of whom were Federal judges. Many were State judges. Many were colleagues, co-counsel, opposing counsel, who almost uniformly talked in terms of his even-handedness, of his open-mindedness, of his willingness to be fair. He is called “a judge’s judge” more than once in those interviews.

When we interviewed him we had questions that would have been on that issue, and we discussed that issue with him to get his own personal perspective on it, and we were satisfied with what we heard at that time.

And perhaps it’s best reflected in his writings, which again, I indicated the body of that work was read by our three reading groups collaboratively, and the conclusion that was reached, if you will, the overarching conclusion that was reached, is that this is a judge who brings pragmatic skills to his decisionmaking. We discussed that with him in that interview that we had on December 12th. He tried to do what he thinks is right with respect to the application of the law that is before him. He took us through how he analyzes that approach, up to the point that when he is just about ready to release his decision, he looks back once again at the law to make sure he has not misapprehended something in the first instance, and second, to make sure that the outcome is fair. That to me suggests—

Chairman SPECTER. You say he came back to you twice?

Mr. TOBER. I am sorry?

Chairman SPECTER. Was your testimony that he came back to you? What did you mean when he came back and took another look.

Mr. TOBER. He would look at his draft opinion, Mr. Chairman, before it would be issued, and he would look back at the law that he was applying in that opinion and the outcome that was occurring in that opinion, just to justify in his mind one more time that the outcome would be fair.

Chairman SPECTER. Did your group study all of his opinions?

Mr. TOBER. The reading groups read 350 of his published opinions, scores of his unpublished opinions and other materials, yes.

Chairman SPECTER. And did they make any analysis of—an issue has been raised as to whether Judge Alito unduly favored the powerful or the Government. Did your ABA analysis reach that issue?

Mr. TOBER. That issue was one that we looked at, and we discussed it in our letter of evaluation, and I gave some examples of some of the disparate results that we were told about. One of the reading groups reported to us that they could not reach a full conclusion on whether or not it was some attempt to favor one outcome for a group of litigants over another. And while there were a couple of members in a couple other reading groups that may have said the same thing in so many words, there were a significant number of other individuals in the reading groups who said they couldn't find any such evidence of that. It was inconclusive with respect to the reading groups.

What was of interest in the reading group reports to us was a comment that was echoed by others, which is that in looking for a sense of partiality in the opinions, the conclusion that was left very often was one of pragmatism, that—

Chairman SPECTER. Let me interrupt you, because my time is almost up, to ask you to clarify what was inconclusive in your studies.

Mr. TOBER. It was inconclusive whether or not there were certain categories of parties who might have come out at the wrong end of Judge Alito's opinions.

Chairman SPECTER. Did some of those readers find that he was impartial and some find the contrary?

Mr. TOBER. My understanding is it was inconclusive. We did not receive any clarion call at one point that he was representing or suggesting to have a bias against any particular group of litigants before him.

Chairman SPECTER. A considerable amount of attention has been paid in these hearings to the recusal issue of Vanguard. Would you comment on what your committee found there?

Mr. TOBER. I am going to defer to Mr. Payton, who took the lead on the Vanguard-related issues, if that is OK with the Chairman.

Chairman SPECTER. Mr. Payton?

Mr. PAYTON. We certainly looked into all of the recusal issues. We asked Judge Alito in some detail about how the Vanguard and the other recusal issues came about. But let me put this in some context which I think will be helpful.

In the materials that Judge Alito submitted to this Committee, he attached a list of all of the cases from which he had been recused over his 15-year tenure, and that is 40 pages long, with about 30 to 35 cases per page. It is well over a thousand cases from which he was recused.

Among those cases that he was recused from were cases involving Vanguard in 1992, cases involving his sister's law firm throughout the tenure, cases involving the U.S. Attorney's Office throughout the tenure, cases involving the other entities that he had identified in his representation to this Committee back in 1990.

A few cases, in fact, slipped through, and that has been the subject of our inquiries and some of the testimony before this Committee. We asked him how that came about. He explained how he thought it came about, but I think it is fair to say he was not certain how they slipped through, whether it was through the screen, whether it was because they were pro se cases.

In the end, he did acknowledge that it was his responsibility that a mistake and error had been made, those cases should have been caught, and he should have not heard those cases. We listened quite carefully to all of that, and in the context in which we understood how this came about, we accepted his explanation that he simply had made a mistake. These cases should not have slipped through the screen, just like the other thousand or so cases were captured by the screen in the process, but they did. They shouldn't have. And we think that did not reflect in any significant degree on his integrity.

Let me tell you something else we did that goes to both of your questions, Mr. Chairman. We also interviewed an incredibly broad array of judges—virtually all of the members of the Third Circuit, virtually all of the district judges that were in New Jersey and were in Philadelphia. We interviewed a number of the other judges in the Third Circuit who were on the district court who had contact with Judge Alito. And what we learned from them almost unanimously was that he is held in incredibly high regard with respect to the issues that this committee, the ABA's committee, looks at: his integrity, his judicial competence, and his judicial temperament. And on the issue of the recusals, everyone—everyone—thought that he has the highest integrity and that these few cases that slipped through do not diminish his integrity.

Chairman SPECTER. Thank you, Mr. Payton.

The red light went on during the course of your testimony, so I will terminate and yield to my colleague, Senator Leahy.

Senator LEAHY. Just to followup on that, on Vanguard, the only reason I even mention this is that the initial explanation from Judge Alito and the White House after his nomination was a computer glitch had precipitated the Vanguard case. But then he answered some questions from Senator Feingold by saying that in the Monga case it wasn't a computer glitch that caused his failure to submit Vanguard to the clerk of the court. Then he said when it came before him, he was not focused. Since your report was filed, we have learned that Judge Alito did not have Vanguard on his recusal list as far back as 1993, notwithstanding the fact that in 1990 he had given a sworn statement to the Committee that he would recuse.

Some of that information came after your report. Would it change anything in the conclusion?

Mr. PAYTON. I think that it is—like I said, from the interview with him, I am not sure we figured out what caused these cases to slip through. I am not sure Judge Alito knew the precise answer to that. But he did acknowledge that it was a mistake.

On what was on his standing recusal list, I don't know what was on his standing recusal list, but I just note in the materials that were submitted to this committee, there is a 1992 entry of an entity that has the name Vanguard in it—it is Vanguard—that says, "Recusal because on standing recusal list."

I don't know what happened in 1993. I don't know if things went on and went off. Something went wrong here, and these cases came before him, and they shouldn't have. But they are a very small number in a huge universe of cases from which he was recused.

Mr. TOBER. Senator, may I add to that very briefly.

Senator LEAHY. Sure.

Mr. TOBER. We did not find in the vast number of our interviews and the review with the nominee and any other extrinsic information we could look at any pattern of intentional effort to try and have Judge Alito impose himself in cases in which he did not belong. We are persuaded that some errors were made, some mistakes were made, and they total up to a small handful.

In the course of the numbers that he has been sitting on—and I believe Senator Hatch suggested yesterday some 4,000 or 5,000 cases have been adjudicated involving Judge Alito—we took that into context, particularly in light of the comments from individuals who know him and work with him, with respect to the ethics he brings to the position.

Senator LEAHY. You understand the reason this became an issue here is because it was based on a sworn statement that he recuse.

You also looked into his open-mindedness, his commitment to equal justice. I am just asking, in doing that—because I have never served on one of these committees that you are on. There have been a number of studies of the judge's record—Knight-Ridder, the Washington Post, Cass Sunstein and others—and they have concluded that he had much more likelihood of siding against discrimination plaintiffs than other circuit judges. Knight-Ridder reviewed 311 of his published opinions and found that he seldom sided with a criminal defendant, a foreign national facing deportation, an employee alleging discrimination, or a consumer suing Big Business. And his record stood out significantly from others in the circuit.

Did this question come in on the issue of whether he was compassionate?

Mr. TOBER. The answer is yes, we looked at that. Our reading groups looked at it for us. We discussed it with the nominee in our interview on December 12th. We are not immune from the media stories that have been available. I suggest everybody on my committee has been watching the last 3 days very carefully. We are where we started with that issue, and that is, the over 300 people we spoke with who know this person as a judge, as an individual, are convinced that he has an open mind, that he does not bring any bias to his decisionmaking.

Senator LEAHY. And, last, on the issue of CAP, nobody is suggesting a bias on his part, but what bothers me, when you are doing a job application in 1985—we know Judge Alito is a very careful person, and I mean that as a compliment. On a carefully put together job application, he proudly proclaims his membership in CAP, a group that was very much dedicated to keeping minorities and women out of Princeton, one that would probably look unkindly toward either Judge Alito's Italian ancestors or my Italian ancestors. Was this just pandering to the Meese and the Reagan administration, or was this just a total screw-up?

Mr. TOBER. May I defer to Ms. Tucker with that?

Senator LEAHY. Sure.

Ms. TUCKER. We looked at that question, Senator. We were very concerned about that listing, knowing that membership in that organization would put him perhaps on an extreme that we would be uncomfortable with. His answers to our committee were very similar, if not identical, to the answers to your Committee.

He did not recall when he became a member or even what he did, but he didn't recall ever attending any meetings or reading any publications. He did recall that he joined the organization because of the university's attempt to remove ROTC—

Senator LEAHY. But that is not really my question. Was there any question of why—why was he so proud of this that he would put it in a 1985 job application—when everybody—everybody—knew what kind of an organization it was, where Senator Bill Frist had condemned it and Senator Bill Bradley had. Did you ask why he proudly put that on his application?

Ms. TUCKER. We asked him why he put that on there. We didn't ask him why he proudly put that on there. But he stated that he recalled he was a member. We specifically asked him if this was to—since it was a job application, was he pandering, and he said it would be improper to not tell the truth on an application, that he was a member of that organization. But there were only two organization that he listed, as I recall, on that application: one was the Federalist Society, the other was the Concerned Alumni for Princeton. He did not have a long list of activities at that time.

But I should say, in fairness, we were very concerned about the membership of that and what happened, and all of the people we spoke to on the courts, women and minorities, people who he had worked with, people who had sat on panels with him side by side in issuing judicial opinions, almost universally said that they saw no bigotry, no prejudice. They thought he was a fair man. And they felt that if he did put that—they were shocked when they heard that that was listed on his application. And they said, "That is not the Sam Alito we know." And we heard that time and time again.

Senator LEAHY. Thank you very much.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Chairman SPECTER. Thank you very much, Mr. Tober. Thank you, Ms. Tucker. Thank you, Mr. Payton.

Senator Hatch?

Senator HATCH. I will reserve my time. Thank you.

Chairman SPECTER. Thank you.

Senator Kennedy?

Senator KENNEDY. Thank you very much.

Did you know, Mr. Tober, that the Vanguard Ventron, which is the case of 1992, actually involved the carpenters? It names the carpenters which were on the Alito list for recusal, and—Mr.

Payton, maybe this should be directed to you—and that most of the people that have looked through there in detail feel that the reason that that was actually recused is because of the carpenters. I think it is spelled carpenteers—yes, c-a-r-p-e-n—carpenter, and that is the reason it was under the name of the Vanguard. You are familiar with that?

Mr. PAYTON. Yes. I simply thought that it was unclear whether or not what would have caused that to be kicked off because of the standing recusal list was any hit with Vanguard or something else. It is unclear. You cannot tell from what is there.

Senator KENNEDY. Did the committee know, when it inquired of the nominee, that Judge Alito had made a promise to the Committee under oath that he was going to recuse himself from Vanguard?

Mr. PAYTON. Yes, and we asked him about that.

Senator KENNEDY. And did he indicate what—well, what was his response?

Mr. PAYTON. His response was that it was a mistake for those cases to have slipped through. That was not just a question about what the code said, but also what his representation to this Committee encompassed, that it was a mistake.

Senator KENNEDY. Was the mistake, as you understand it, is because he did not, for one reason or another, neglected to put the Vanguard on his recusal list?

Mr. PAYTON. No, I do not think I could say it that concretely. The mistake was that it got through. Why it got through, I think it was not completely clear to us, and I am not sure it was clear to Judge Alito. It got through.

Senator KENNEDY. It was not on his 1993, 1994, 1995, 1996 list, and the 1993 said no changes were made from 1992. So there is just 1 year, year and a half. We do not have the record on it, and I am just wondering, in your inquiry and review of that case, since that is the principal source of, as I understand it, of revenue. I mean it has had sizable increases in the revenue from the time he took that oath till the more recent years. So that is one of the factors on it. I was just interested, when he said it was a mistake, whether you made a determination, detection, because we have not been able to find that it was ever put on. Quite frankly, at least as a member of the Committee, we have heard a number of reasons for it. We have heard computer glitch. We have heard that it was an interim pledge and a commitment. We have heard that it was a pro se case and, therefore, the computers do not exist in the Third Circuit the way they do in law firms here in Washington, D.C. I am just trying to find out what was told to you.

To be very honest about it, if it had been said it was a mistake in the very beginning, I do not even think this issue would have taken more than 30 seconds of the Committee's time, but since we have had so many different reasons for it, which we have been trying to ascertain exactly what had happened, and particularly since it was a pledge to the Committee and it was a sworn statement to the Committee, that we are wondering what the Bar Association, in its interview—

Mr. PAYTON. I do not know the answer to your question. I do not believe that what you just said about what was on the list in 1993—

94 was known then. I was unaware of that, and I am not sure Judge Alito knew that. But in our discussion with him, we actually cut right through that and simply wanted him to tell us if he agreed this was a mistake. Did you just miss it? “Yes, I just missed it. It was a mistake.” The why then sort of became less significant.

Senator KENNEDY. Well, of course, Mr. Payton, he did. He took, during that same period of time, he took a name off the list, so he must have been familiar with it. He took the U.S. Attorney’s name off the list. We went through this. I would be glad to make available to you—you indicated that you had gone through the hearings on this, and I welcome the opportunity just to make available to you the same material, and to get your response.

Mr. TOBER. Senator, we indicated in our letter of explanation, as we always do, that we continue to monitor these proceedings, and we will be happy to revisit anything the Committee wishes us to look at.

Senator KENNEDY. I want to join in thanking you for the service of the Bar Association. This is a very challenging and in many sense, a thankless job. But I think the country is much better off. So it judiciary. I thank you for your service.

Chairman SPECTER. Thank you, Senator Kennedy.

Senator Hatch has stated an interest in regaining some of his reserve time.

Senator HATCH. Just shortly. We appreciate the efforts that you make. We appreciate what the Bar Association is doing, and we appreciate what you have done in this particular case as well.

Frankly, he did state right off the bat, early in his testimony, that he had made a mistake with regard to the Vanguard matter. On the other hand, are you aware that not only did he recuse himself once he realized he had made a mistake, but he asked the succeeding panel to retry the case. Are you aware of that?

Mr. TOBER. Yes.

Mr. PAYTON. Yes.

Senator HATCH. Was that an appropriate thing to do?

Mr. PAYTON. He asked that the Chief Judge identify a new panel, and I think that was the appropriate thing to do.

Senator HATCH. That is what an honest, decent judge would do, is it not?

Mr. TOBER. Sure, of course.

Senator HATCH. You are all aware of this 28 USC, the U.S. Code statute on this, am I correct?

Mr. TOBER. Correct.

Senator HATCH. I mean that statute defines a financial interest for the courts. It says, “Financial interest means ownership of a legal or equitable interest, however small, or a relationship as director, adviser, or other active participant in the affairs of a party, except that ownership in a mutual or a common investment fund that holds securities is not a “financial interest” in such securities, unless the judge participates in the management of the fund.” Are you aware of that?

Mr. PAYTON. Yes.

Senator HATCH. Now, did he participate in the management of the fund?

The answer is no. Then if he did not participate in the management of the fund, would he have had, under normal circumstances, to recuse himself?

Mr. PAYTON. I think the normal circumstances is amplified by the representation to this Committee, which he acknowledged, independent of the obligation that you are talking about, would have caused him to not want these cases to come before him.

Senator HATCH. Right. But he made it clear that once he did realize that there was a mistake, even though he did not, according to this U.S. Code which is the basis, did not have to recuse himself, he did so because he had said in his statement that he would.

Mr. PAYTON. Yes, sir.

Senator HATCH. And you knew that. And so, I take it, you do not find any real fault in the way he handled the Vanguard matter?

Mr. TOBER. That is so.

Mr. PAYTON. That is correct.

Senator HATCH. That is correct?

Mr. PAYTON. That is correct.

Senator HATCH. Thank you so much.

Chairman SPECTER. Thank you, Senator Hatch.

Senator FEINSTEIN?

Senator FEINSTEIN. Thank you very much for your service. Have you heard anything in these hearings that would cause you any concern or reason to change any of your views?

Mr. TOBER. Well, the hearings are still going and I am still listening. But to the moment, Senator, I have been looking for any kind of material or discordant statement that would have been inconsistent with anything that we have learned or heard either through our interviews or our meeting with the nominee, and to the moment I am still comfortable that we understood the judicial and legal profile of Judge Alito when we reached our rating.

Senator FEINSTEIN. Thank you.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Chairman SPECTER. Thank you very much, Senator Feinstein.

Senator KYL?

Senator KYL. Mr. Chairman, I do not have any questions, but I would like to thank the panel and the Bar Association for its, I wonder, how many hours of work put into verifying the qualifications of nominees, not just for the Supreme Court, but the other nominations, and particularly, Mr. Payton, your explanation of the matters that you testified to here. Thank you very, very much.

Chairman SPECTER. Senator DeWine?

Senator DEWINE. No questions, Mr. Chairman.

Chairman SPECTER. Senator Sessions?

Senator SESSIONS. Mr. Tober, you have 15 members of your committee that goes out, and they divide up the work and interview 300 individuals; is that what you did?

Mr. TOBER. As it turned out, Senator, the Chair just gets into a lot of marshaling, and the Third Circuit representative had to recuse herself because she had argued a case before a panel that Judge Alito had served on before he had been nominated, and the decision had yet to come down, so she, by our standards, removed herself. So I had 13 people out in the field, interviewing well over 300 people, contacting over 2,000 people, putting together their own written reports, marshaling the information from every corner and putting it in what turned out to be an 11-pound report. And when I first received it, as I told Ms. Tucker, I did not know whether to read it or send out birth announcements.

Senator SESSIONS. We are glad you do not have to do background work on Senators.

[Laughter.]

Mr. TOBER. We are pleased it is done for the moment.

Senator SESSIONS. One of the things, you know, some of us have complained about the ABA ratings, but there is so much value to it, it strikes me, because is it not true that sometimes when you are interviewing a lawyer that has been before the judge, or lost a case, a lawyer who has litigated against him, they will tell you things they may not come forward and say publicly, and that you can get a good—you feel like you get a better perspective on a nominee's professional qualifications than you can get from reading the newspaper perhaps?

Mr. TOBER. Thank you for that question. Let me try and answer it. The answer is yes. We have had the experience since 1948, when we started reporting our ratings to this Committee, of being able to get comprehensive confidential information from people who know the nominee directly in the trenches, whether it be a judge, a lawyer or other people in the community, and we are able to ask them with respect to integrity, professional competence and judicial temperament, with the full and complete understanding that there will be no attribution, there will be no embarrassment, that if it is important we need to know, and people indeed give us that kind of information. So, yes, it is a remarkable process, and if I have a moment, I would like to say it is a remarkable group of people that I have had the privilege to work with.

Senator SESSIONS. And, Mr. Payton, you used the phrase that they held him in incredibly high regard. I think you are a premier litigator, you have argued before the Supreme Court. I am sure you used those words carefully.

Mr. PAYTON. I did.

Senator SESSIONS. I thank you for your service, and I think it has provided valuable insight to the Committee because you see these things out there, and it is important for the American people to know what do the people who really know and work with this judge think about him, and we value your comments.

Mr. PAYTON. Thank you.

Chairman SPECTER. Thank you, Senator Sessions.

Senator Graham?

Senator GRAHAM. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

I would just like to echo what my colleagues have said about the service you are providing not only to the Committee, but I think the country, because most people in the country are not lawyers. That is probably a good thing.

The idea of who you are getting as a person is important, and the homework you have done gives us a good picture of this particular man. But his judicial experience, compared to other people that you have reviewed, seems to me that being on the court for 15 years, you had a lot to look at.

Mr. TOBER. Well, we do not compare one nominee to another, Senator, as I am sure you can appreciate. But I will take the direct question, and indeed, I believe we said in our letter of evaluation that he has created an enormous record of public service, and his writings speak top that, and that is indeed what we have reviewed.

Senator GRAHAM. Thank you. About your rating, you know, we are all very pleased to the outcome here, but democracy is about a process, not an outcome. The rule of law is about a process, not an outcome. There may be an occasion where you will render a writing I will not agree with, and that is just the way it goes. But I think the process where you are involved really helps us a lot. I think it helps the country, and I appreciate the time you have taken from your families, from your business to do it.

Now, what may take normal people 30 seconds to figure out may take the Senate 3 days—

[Laughter.]

Senator GRAHAM.—but we are going to ask one simple question about Vanguard. With this much material to have dealt with, and as many cases as he has heard, the first question for me about Judge Alito is, who am I getting here? Is an innocent mistake OK? I hope so because I make them all the time. What would I not want? I would not want someone who is into self-dealing. I would not want someone who skirts the ethical rules and plays as close to the line as they could. Would it be a fair statement that Judge Alito never plays close to the line, he tries to do it the best he can, to take the highest approach to ethics?

Mr. PAYTON. I think that from what his colleagues who know him very well would say, is that they hold him in the highest regard with respect to his integrity, and I think that encompasses what you just said.

