PREFACE

The purpose of this publication is to provide a comprehensive listing of the Presidential vetoes of legislation enacted by the Congress from the First through the One Hundredth Congresses, 1789-1988. It is also intended as an aid in the study of the relationship between the executive and legislative branches of the United States Government and of its system of checks and balances.

The veto power is established by the Constitution of the United States of America:

Every Bill which shall have passed the House of Representatives and the Senate, shall, before it become a Law, be presented to the President of the United States; If he approve he shall sign it, but if not he shall return it, with his Objections to that House in which it shall have originated, who shall enter the Objections at large on their Journal, and proceed to reconsider it. If after such Reconsideration two thirds of that House shall agree to pass the Bill, it shall be sent, together with the Objections, to the other House, by which it shall likewise be reconsidered, and if approved by two thirds of that House, it shall become a Law. But in all such Cases the Votes of both Houses shall be determined by Yeas and Nays, and the Names of the Persons voting for and against the Bill shall be entered on the Journal of each House respectively. If any Bill shall not be returned by the President within ten Days (Sundays excepted) after it shall have been presented to him, the same shall be a Law, in like Manner as if he had signed it, unless the Congress by their Adjournment prevent its Return, in which Case it shall not be a Law.

Every Order, Resolution, or Vote to which the Concurrence of the Senate and House of Representatives may be necessary (except on a question of Adjournment) shall be presented to the President of the United States; and before the Same shall take Effect, shall be approved by him, or being disapproved by him, shall be repassed by two thirds of the Senate and House of Representatives, according to the Rules and Limitations prescribed in the Case of a Bill.

(Article I, Section 7, clauses 2 and 3)

For the purposes of this publication, the term "regular veto" is used to indicate the action of the President when he disapproves a bill or joint resolution and returns it with his objections to the chamber in which it originated. A "pocket veto" is the designation applied to a bill or joint resolution that failed to become law at the expiration of ten days because the President withheld his signature and the Congress had adjourned during that period in a manner to prevent its return.

The exercise of the President's pocket veto authority during intra-session adjournments and recess periods has long been a controversial issue between the legislative and executive branches of government. In the Pocket Veto Case, 279 U.S. 655 (1929) (Item No. 1058), the Supreme Court held that the President might utilize the pocket veto power during either intra-session adjournments of the House and Senate during the same Congress or adjournments between sessions. However, in Wright v. U.S., 302 U.S. 583 (1938) (Item No. 1275), the Court modified this ruling in deciding that a recess within the same Congress by one House, with the other House remaining in session, would not "prevent" the President from returning a vetoed bill if prior arrangements for the receipt of the measure had been made with the House that went out of session. In Kennedy v. Sampson, 364 F.Supp. 1075 (D.D.C. 1973) (Item No. 2262), the U.S. District Court interpreted the pocket veto clause of the Constitution as having two purposes: to provide the President with adequate time to review a bill presented to him and, second, to give Congress sufficient opportunity to review the Chief Executive's objections and to override them if so desired. The court further held that intra-session adjournments within the same Congress do not prevent the return of a disapproved bill to Congress, providing, as in the Wright decision, that appropriate provision has been made for receipt of the vetoed legislation. The Court of Appeals in 1974 unanimously affirmed that decision (511 F.2d 430 (1974)). In 1987 the case of Burke v. Barnes, 479 U.S. 361 (1987) (Item No. 2414), the Supreme Court declared the issue moot because the legislation in question had no effect after September 30, 1984. A 1981 pocket veto (Item No. 2394) is still pending before United States District Court for the Southern District of New York. The court actions involving the interpretation of pocket veto power are item numbers 1058, 1275, 2262, 2293, 2307, 2394 and 2414.

The primary sources for this compilation were the Journal of the House of Representatives and the Journal of the Senate, the Congressional Record, Weekly Compilation of Presidential Documents, and LEGIS, the Senate legislative information data base. Two other valuable reference sources also utilized were "Veto Messages of the Presidents of the United States" (Senate Miscellaneous Document No. 53, 49th Congress, 2d session) and "Report on Pocket Veto" (House Document No. 493, 70th Congress, 2d session). Comprehensive studies of the Presidential veto power, including its historical background, are contained in Charles J. Zinn's "The Veto Power of the President.”¹ Other useful sources include Edward C. Mason’s “The Veto Power,”² and Congressional Quarterly’s Guide to Congress.³

This publication has been issued in several earlier editions, the first of which appeared in 1935. The 1992 edition represents a revision and updating of the most recent supplement which was published in 1985, and supersedes all previous editions. Every veto was thoroughly researched to assure accuracy; they are arranged chronologically by the administrations in which the vetoes occurred and by Congresses within the administration. Changes in the format of the information were made in an effort to improve both the clarity and the consistency of the data. Each veto has been assigned an item number to facilitate locating any desired veto. References in the index, which has been completely revised, are to these item numbers. Finally, a numerical summary of the bills vetoed by each President is presented in Table 1 on page ix: This tabulation includes the number of regular vetoes and pocket vetoes of all measures sent to the President for signature during each administration; it also presents the number of vetoes overridden.

The current revision of Presidential Vetoes was prepared by members of the United States Senate Library under the direction of Roger K. Haley, Librarian. Particular mention must be made of the considerable contribution of Gregory C. Harness, Head Reference Librarian, to this edition of Presidential Vetoes; his meticulous review of all entries for accuracy of fact and his complete revision of the index have significantly improved the value of the compilation.

¹ Item No. 2414 is counted as a pocket veto.² The total number of vetoes tabulated is 2469, this figure does not correspond to the total number of veto entries in the text which is 2470, because a Grant pocket veto is uncounted in the table on the grounds that the bill was not placed before the President for signature. (See Item No. 182.)

A pocket veto was attempted after the 1st session of the 93d Congress had adjourned sine die on December 22, 1973. The bill was presented to the President on December 22, 1973. (119 Cong. Rec. 43327). A Presidential message dated January 3, 1974 was received by the 2d session of the 93d Congress. (119 Cong. Rec. 43328).

Note—This veto was the subject of Kennedy v. Jones (412 F. Supp. 353 (D.D.C. 1976)). The District Court for the District of Columbia held that the pocket veto was unconstitutional because Congress had appointed officials to receive Presidential messages during the intersession adjournment. Accordingly, H.R. 10511 was promulgated as Public Law 93-650 (89 Stat. 2-1); its provisions are essentially identical to (a) and (c) of Section 813 of Public Law 93-383 (88 Stat. 737). Despite the attempted pocket veto, the bill is listed here as a regular veto and is counted as such, and as an override, in Table 1, p. ix supra, because of the unique circumstances of its history.

These bills were H.R. 6624 (Item No. 2299), H.R. 7768 (Item No. 2300), H.R. 11541 (Item No. 2302), H.R. 13342 (Item No. 2306), and H.R. 14225 (Item No. 2307). The bills were returned to the Clerk of the House with a message claiming that they had been pocket vetoed. Despite the pocket veto claim, Congress considered them to be regular vetoes and they are listed here and in accompanying tables as such. The veto of H.R. 14225 (Item No. 2307) was overridden by both chambers, but the Administration failed to promulgate it as law. Senator Edward Kennedy amended a pending pocket veto claim (Item No. 2293) to include H.R. 14225. The court held in Kennedy v. Jones (412 F.Supp. 353 (D.D.C. 1976)) that pocket vetoes could not be used except after adjournment sine die unless Congress failed to appoint individuals to receive messages. This decision reaffirmed Kennedy v. Sampson (Item No. 2262). The provisions of H.R. 14225 were identical to H.R. 17503 which became Public Law 93-516 (88 Stat. 1617). Therefore, H.R. 14225 was not assigned a public law number.

This ruling was overturned upon appeal in Barnes v. Kline (759 F.2d 21 (D.C. Cir. 1985)). Since Congress had appointed officials to receive messages, the court concluded that the use of the pocket veto was unconstitutional. Upon appeal, the Supreme Court ruled that the issue was moot since the provisions of H.R. 4042 had no effect after Sept. 30, 1984 (Burke v. Barnes, 479 U.S. 361 (1978)). The bill was neither signed, nor returned, nor promulgated into law. It is counted here as a pocket veto and also in Table 1, p. ix, supra.
