

Invest in the ground water industry today – sponsor a student member for just $25.

Michael E. Campana, director of the Institute for Water and Watersheds at Oregon State University and past AGWSE Board member, states: "The NGWA is the foremost ground water society in the world. Student membership in the NGWA is one of the best professional society bargains. All ground water students should belong to the NGWA."

To sponsor a student membership, simply complete the application, provide the student name along with your own, and return with the appropriate payment. If you do not personally know a student to sponsor, but are interested in the program, NGWA has compiled a list of students; one will benefit from your generosity.

Full-time students, whether in a university, community college, or drilling school, are immediately rewarded when becoming an NGWA member. Each will receive full division membership benefits: issues of Ground Water® and Ground Water Monitoring & Remediation®, or Water Well Journal®; free full access to our Ground Water On-Line® database of abstracts, including immediate free electronic access to many NGWA archived documents; and discounts on NGWA conferences, courses, and bookstore purchases.
