Cotton: World Markets and Trade

USDA's Forecast of World Import Demand Continues to Fall

Prices and World Trade

USDA's forecasts of 2008/09 world import demand have fallen since June 2008. Deteriorating world economic conditions are dampening consumer demand for textiles and pressuring cotton prices. The A-index, which ranged between 70 and 80 cents from June to September, has fallen to just over 57 cents/lb.

The forecast for global consumption has fallen by 6 percent since June, largely because consumption in China has fallen from the initial projection of 55 million bales to 51 million bales, making this the first year-to-year decline in China's consumption since 1998/99. As a result, world trade has declined by 14 percent from June to November.
