RE: The Digital Millennium Copyright Act, Public Law 105-304 (1998)

I do not feel that this Act should effect the distribution or use of deCSS or any other DVD playback software or device. I feel that it is fine that the Act protects the DVD encryption, but should be limited to that only. Forcing me or anyone else to use only "allowed" playback devices, I feel is a violation of my rights as a citizen of the United States. I think that it would be as rediculous as asking me to only play my cd's on a Sony or RCA cd player, and if I used anything else, I could go to jail.

For freedoms sake....

Sincerely,

Wendall Cada
