To whom it may concern.

I am writing in order to voice my disdain for the Digital Millennium Copyright Act (DMCA). This act does nothing more than increase that ability of corporations and law firms to keep the inventive (spirit that made this country what it is) in check.

I am all for the right of a copyright holder to maintain their right to said copyright. But to expand the copyright holders reach to the extent that it will, and has will do nothing more that stifle the inventive spirit that has made the United States number one in technology, and more importantly has made this economy as strong as it has been for the last 7 years and today.
