Did You Know?

Fargo-Moorhead Ranked 3rd Among Small Metros

Fargo-Moorhead ranked third among small metros in the nation on the Forbes Best Places for Business and Careers list. The ranking evaluates communities on six measures: business costs, living costs, education, crime rate, job growth and income growth.
(May 2006)

Fargo-Moorhead is the Third Least Angry City

A study published by Men's Health Magazine analyzing the anger level of American cities ranked Fargo-Moorhead number 98 out of 100, making it the third least angry city of those studied. Factors evaluated included the percentage of men with high blood pressure, the FBI rates of aggravated assaults, Bureau of Labor statistics numbers on workplace deaths from assaults and other violence, and traffic-congestion data and speeding citations.
(August 2006)

Fargo-Moorhead is a Thriving Metropolis

"Fargo-Moorhead is a thriving metropolis of slightly less than 200,000 that grew over 20 percent between 1990 and 2000," reads an article in The Wall Street Journal. As entrepreneurial activity has expanded, Fargo-Moorhead is being transformed. Its downtown is home to hip clothing stores and a great boutique hotel. There's even a thriving art scene. [Employers] pitch employees based on such often underestimated factors like good schools, reasonable housing prices (the median home price is under $150,000), short commutes, the nation's lowest crime rate and ample outdoor recreation."
(August 2006)

Fargo's Environment Better Than San Diego's? Oh, You Betcha!

Based on more than 200 indicators - including parks, commute times, recycling rates and population density - San Diego ranks a modest 31 out of 72 areas studied by the Earth Day Network, which coordinates Earth Day events worldwide.

Fargo, N.D.; Burlington, Vt.; and Portland, Ore., topped the list. The cellar-dwellers were Cleveland, Miami and Detroit.

How does Fargo top San Diego? Let's count the ways: The outpost of about 93,000 people scores better in categories as varied as air quality, drinking and surface water, and toxics and waste.
