Introduction

In 1980, Mrs. Sara L. Lepman donated to the Library of Congress a collection of sheet music that had been amassed by her late husband, Harry Lepman, DDS (1904-1970). This sheet music, mostly dating from the 1890's to the end of the Second World War, was a part of a larger collection of American political memorabilia and artifacts that Mr. Lepman had assembled during his lifetime. Most of the non-music materials were given to the American History Museum of the Smithsonian Institution.

No. of containers: 7
Linear feet of shelf space occupied: 2
Approximate number of items: 800

Scope and Content Note

The Harry and Sara Lepman Collection consists almost exclusively of American sheet-music imprints. The collection is organized into two groups: songs [6 boxes] and piano solos [1 box]. The music is filed in alphabetical order by composer, with an alphabetical listing by title given at the end of the container list.

The majority of the songs date from the period 1880-1945 and were composed in order to rally the public to the support of military efforts in the Spanish-American War, World War I and World War II. Most date from the World War I era (1914-1918) and promote the involvement of the general public in the fight against the threat posed by Germany. However, viewpoints of isolationism and pacifism are also represented; "I didn't raise my boy to be a soldier" stands in contrast to "I didn't raise my son to be a slacker." Songs with French allusions (such as "Au revoir, but not good-bye, soldier boy," "Oh! Frenchy," and "You'll have to put him to sleep with the Marseillaise and wake him up with a oo-la-la") are well represented in the collection. The patriotic titles and lyrics are enhanced by colorfully illustrated cover art depicting American patriotic themes. Pictorial images of Uncle Sam, the Statue of Liberty, and the American flag played a significant role in the marketing of the songs. Many of the cover pages feature a well-known performer of the song as a means to boost sales of the music. Composers Irving Berlin, George M. Cohan, and Al Jolson are well represented.

The piano music in the collection consists primarily of marches and two-steps, often making reference to American military divisions and their leaders.

Timothy Bullard, July 1992
