Records

An exhibitor should maintain the following records as a part of good animal husbandry practices:

- health records
- surgery records
- necropsy records
- large felids non-commercial diet approval by attending veterinarian [Policy #25]
- elephant TB test records
- TB treatment records for elephants
- proof that all attendants, handlers, and/or trainees are being TB tested. NOTE: You do not have to review the TB test results.

NOTE: These records are not specifically required by the AWA regulations and standards, except for marine mammals. Therefore, a lack of any of these records or inadequacy of these records may not be cited as a stand-alone violation, except for marine mammals.

The citation of inadequate veterinary care for a sick animal may include a reference to the lack or inadequacy of veterinary care records, if appropriate.

Additional non-required records which may be helpful in assessing veterinary care include, but are not limited to:

- animal logs
- standards operating procedures, if available
- room maintenance logs
- cage wash validation sheets
