COUNCIL RESOLUTION: 98-12

North American Cooperation on Environmental Emergencies

THE COUNCIL:

ACKNOWLEDGING that Canada, Mexico and the United States cooperate in areas of common interest within the framework established by the North American Agreement on Environmental Cooperation;

RECOGNIZING that environmental emergencies in North America are an important area for such cooperation;

CONTEMPLATING in particular, that it would be helpful to the three North American countries to consider the need for a North American rapid response mechanism that would facilitate cooperation in cases of environmental emergencies;

HEREBY:

DIRECTS the Secretariat to examine what mechanisms, if any, could be established to enhance cooperation among the three countries to respond to environmental emergencies, and directs it to report its conclusions to the Council;

FURTHER DIRECTS that, as part of this examination, the Secretariat, with the input from the three countries, report to the Council on the status of any existing trilateral or binational mechanisms for responding to environmental emergencies.
