

Re: Comments on revised Strategic Plan

To who it may concern:

As a participant and commentator during the debates over the JPAC strategic plan, I was surprised to read what has been presented as feedback from the meeting. There is very little attempt to reflect the critical debate that went on. Many, many commentators challenged the role of big business in the CEC and the power they hold. The revisions suggest more contact should be made! There were calls for presenting a greater diversity of views and debates within environmentalism and this is ignored. What about the calls for effective power to be given to the JPAC?

Overall, the summary of what was discussed does not reflect what transpired, calling into question again the validity of JPAC as a voice of the public.

sincerely,

Thomas Marois
