

Dairy Products (Processed)

National Japanese authorities have verified that processed dairy products do not require any government animal health certification to be imported to Japan.

If Japanese importers are advised by local port officials that certification is required, they may contact the APHIS office in the US Embassy in Tokyo for assistance. They should provide details on the product and the port official making the request.

If products contain other animal origin ingredients (for example pieces of meat), certification may be required.