SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

Title: Extending the Forest Service Message to Diverse Urban Publics.

OMB Number: 0596-New.

Type of Request: New.

Abstract: Forest Service and university researchers will contact residents in communities proximate to urban national forests. Through those contacts, they will evaluate outdoor recreation participation, barriers to participation, engagement in other community activities, use of various media types, trust of various media types, and socio-demographics. The results of this information collection will help researchers improve their ability to provide information to natural resource managers on communication and information dissemination to publics.

Residents in metropolitan communities surrounding urban national forests (age 18 or older) will be contacted via telephone and invited to participate in a brief telephone survey. Willing parties will participate in the telephone survey or arrange for future contact based on their availability and convenience.

A Forest Service researcher, Agency analysts/technicians, and a cooperating university researcher will collect and analyze the data. The Forest Service and university researchers are experts in applied social psychology and survey research.

Participants will be asked a series of questions focused on outdoor recreation participation, barriers to participation, engagement in community activities, use of various types of media (television, radio, newspaper, magazines, and Internet), trust in various types of media, and socio-demographics. Responses will be voluntary and anonymous, will not be stored with contact information at any time, and contact information will be purged from researcher files once data collection is complete.

Responses will be used to evaluate selected ethnic/racial groups' use and reliance upon forms of media and other sources of information about outdoor recreation. Findings will help resource managers determine the appropriateness of routes of communication with diverse urban publics regarding natural resource issues and outdoor recreation opportunities. This in turn will help remedy one of the key barriers to use of natural areas for outdoor recreation, a lack of information about such opportunities.

Without the proposed information collection, managers will continue to rely upon the traditional means of information dissemination, which may perpetuate the information gap found among communities of various ethnicities and races regarding outdoor recreation opportunities. The information collected will help the researchers supply information to natural resource managers and other researchers who are focusing their own work on natural resource management values and objectives. Additionally, Forest Service officials will share the data with community-based organizations serving the interests of diverse publics, assisting these organizations in efforts to work with natural resource management agencies and facilitate application of findings.

Estimate of Annual Burden: 10 minutes.

Type of Respondents: Respondents are residents of metropolitan areas
