The Pipeline and Hazardous Materials Safety Administration (PHMSA) provides services to advance safety and security in hazardous materials transportation. PHMSA's program is focused on five principal areas. First, PHMSA provides comprehensive regulations for the safe and secure transportation of hazardous materials. Second, through training, guidance and outreach materials, PHMSA helps shippers and carriers understand the regulations and how to comply with them. Third, PHMSA enforces the regulations on those persons who refuse or neglect to comply with safety and security requirements. Fourth, PHMSA assists the Nation's response community to plan for and respond to hazardous materials transportation emergencies. Finally, PHMSA builds each of these operational responsibilities on a comprehensive technical and analytical foundation.

The Oil Pollution Act of 1990 requires the preparation of oil spill response plans by pipeline operators to minimize the environmental impact of oil spills and to improve public and private sector response capabilities. The Pipeline and Hazardous Materials Safety Administration (PHMSA) is responsible for the review, approval and testing of these plans, and for ensuring that the public and the environment are provided with an adequate level of protection from such spills. PHMSA does this through data analysis, spill monitoring, pipeline mapping, environmental indexing, and advanced technologies to detect and prevent leaks.

The Research and Innovative Technology Administration (RITA) works to provide strategic clarity to DOT's multi-modal and intermodal research efforts and coordinates DOT's research agenda. Coordination and advancement of research and development activities is led by the RITA Office of Research, Development and Technology and is funded through the General Fund. RITA also manages the Department's work in Position, Navigation and Timing and the Nationwide Differential Global Positioning System.

RITA also coordinates and reviews the following programs and activities: 1) the Volpe Center—that services many of the research, development, and technology needs of the Department's operating administrations on a fee-for-service basis; 2) the Intelligent Transportation Systems—that facilitates deployment of technology to enhance the safety, efficiency and convenience of surface transportation; and 3) the Transportation Safety Institute—that develops and conducts worldwide safety, security, and environmental training, products, and services for both the public and private sector on a fee-for-service basis.

The Bureau of Transportation Statistics (BTS) is funded by an allocation from the Federal Highway Administration's Federal-Aid Highways account. BTS compiles, analyzes, and makes accessible information on the Nation's transportation systems, including statistics on freight movement, geospatial transportation information and transportation economics.

The Surface Transportation Board was created on January 1, 1996, by P.L. 104-88, the ICC Termination Act of 1995 (ICCTA). The Board is specifically responsible for the regulation of the rail and pipeline industries and certain non-licensing regulation of motor carriers and water carriers.

Rail Carriers.—This regulatory oversight encompasses the regulation of rates, mergers and acquisitions, construction, and abandonment of railroad lines, as well as the planning, analysis and policy development associated with these activities.

Other Surface Transportation Carriers.—This regulatory oversight includes certain regulation of the intercity bus industry and surface pipeline carriers as well as the rate regulation of water transportation in the non-contiguous domestic trade, household-good carriers, and collectively determined motor rates.

2009 Program Request.—$23.085 million is requested to implement rulemakings and adjudicate the ongoing caseload within the directives and deadlines set forth by the ICCTA.

The following paragraph is presented in compliance with Section 703 of the ICCTA. It is presented without change or correction.

The Board's Request to OMB.—The Board had submitted to the Secretary of Transportation and the Office of Management and Budget a 2009 appropriation request of $26.847 million and a request for $1.250 million from reimbursements from the offsetting collection of user fees to operate at 150 FTEs. The offsetting collection of user fees is based on the costs incurred by the Board for fee-related activities and is commensurate with the costs of processing parties' submissions. In past fiscal years, the Board received both an appropriation and authorization for offsetting collections to be made available to the appropriation for the Board's expenses. The 2009 Budget request reflects offsetting collections as a credit to the appropriation received, to the extent that they are collected.

This level of funding is necessary to implement rulemakings and adjudicate the ongoing caseload within the deadlines imposed by ICCTA. The Board requires adequate resources to perform key functions under the ICCTA, including rail rate reasonableness oversight; the processing of rail consolidations, abandonments, and other restructuring proposals; and the resolution of non-rail matters.

The Ship Disposal program provides resources to properly dispose of obsolete government-owned merchant-type vessels maintained by MARAD in the National Defense Reserve Fleet. These vessels pose a significant environmental threat due to the presence of unexpended fuel and oil and other hazardous substances such as asbestos and solid and liquid polychlorinated biphenyls (PCBs). MARAD contracts with domestic shipbreaking firms to dismantle and recycle these vessels in accordance with guidelines set forth by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

The Maritime Security Program provides resources to maintain a U.S.-flag merchant fleet crewed by U.S. citizens to serve both the commercial and national security needs of the United States. The program provides direct payments to U.S.-flag ship operators engaged in U.S.-foreign trade. Participating operators are required to keep the vessels in active commercial service and are required to provide intermodal sealift support to the Department of Defense in times of war or national emergency.

The Operating-Differential Subsidies (ODS) program provided resources to maintain a U.S.-flag merchant fleet to serve both the commercial and national security needs of the United States through operating subsidies to participating U.S.-flag ship operators to offset certain cost differences between U.S.-flag and foreign-flag vessel operations. This program has been replaced by the Maritime Security Program. The ODS account is inactive except for final settlement of open contracts and closing of financial accounts.

Ocean freight differential is the difference in cost incurred in the movement of ocean cargoes. In general, when applied to cargo preference policy implementation, it is the cost difference between using U.S.-flag carriers and foreign-flag carriers. Cargo preference provides a revenue source to help sustain a privately-owned U.S.-flag merchant marine by requiring shippers of certain U.S. government-sponsored cargoes to use U.S.-flag vessels. Public Law 99-108 amended the cargo preference requirement in Section 901 of the Merchant Marine Act by increasing the minimum required tonnage of certain government-sponsored food-aid shipments that must be shipped on U.S.-flag vessels from 50 to 75 percent. The Maritime Administration is required to reimburse the U.S. government agencies that sponsor these food-aid shipments for the increase in ocean freight differential associated with compliance with this expanded U.S.-flag shipping requirement.

VESSEL OPERATIONS REVOLVING FUND—Continued

The Maritime Administration (MARAD) is authorized to reactivate, maintain, operate, and deactivate government-owned merchant vessels comprising the National Defense Reserve Fleet (NDRF) and the Ready Reserve Force (RRF), a subset of the NDRF. Resources for RRF vessel maintenance, preservation, activation and operation costs, as well as RRF infrastructure support costs and additional DOD/Navy-sponsored sealift activities and special projects, are provided by reimbursement from the Defense Sealift Fund. MARAD incurs similar obligations for government-owned merchant vessels outside the RRF fleet and for the charter of privately-owned merchant vessels, the cost of which is likewise provided by reimbursement from sponsoring Federal agencies.

In addition, the fund is used by MARAD to finance the acquisition, maintenance, preservation, protection and use of merchant vessels involved in mortgage foreclosure or collateral forfeiture proceedings instituted by the Federal Government and not financed by the Federal Ship Financing Fund or the Maritime Guaranteed Loan Program; and to finance the acquisition and disposition of merchant vessels under the Trade-In/Scrap Out program. Direct appropriations for the disposal of obsolete government-owned merchant vessels are provided to a separate account within the ship disposal program.

No new commitments for vessel construction loan guarantees are provided by the Federal Ship Financing Fund for 2009 because this Fund is used to underwrite only those guarantees made under the Title XI loan guarantee program prior to 1992.

This program provides guaranteed loans for purchasers of ships from the U.S. shipbuilding industry and for modernization of U.S. shipyards.

As required by the Federal Credit Reform Act of 1990, this account also includes the subsidy costs associated with the loan guarantee commitments made in 1992 and subsequent years, and the administrative expenses of the program. The subsidy costs are estimated on a present value basis; the administrative expenses are estimated on a cash basis.

Funds for administrative expenses for the Title XI program are appropriated to this account, then transferred to and merged with the Operations and Training account.

No new funds for loan guarantees are requested for 2009.

ical areas as economic and financial policy, terrorism and financial intelligence, financial crimes, and general management. The Secretary of the Treasury has the primary role in formulating and managing the domestic and international tax and financial policies of the Federal Government. Through effective management, policies, and leadership, the Treasury Department enables the use of financial tools in the war on terror, promotes the stability of the nation's financial markets, and ensures the government's ability to collect revenue.

The 2009 Budget for the Salaries and Expenses appropriation provides new resources to modernize the Office of Debt Management Information Technology systems that will better manage the nation's debt portfolio. The Budget provides for increased analysis of corporate mergers and acquisitions in the U.S. for national security concerns; funding to help protect the American financial services sector against terrorist attacks and natural disasters; and resources to build the Treasury Situation Room with 24 hour a day functionality. The Budget also allows Treasury to increase its counterintelligence capabilities and combat state sponsors of terrorism who are intent on evading U.S. sanctions.

The Budget proposes legislation for the Secretary of the Treasury to more efficiently manage the government's short-term excess operating cash. Under the current authority, which is codified at 31 U.S.C. 323, the Government is authorized to invest its short-term excess cash in obligations of the United States Government and depository institutions, principally, banks, savings and loan associations, and credit unions. This initiative would enable the Secretary of the Treasury to broaden investment options and improve earnings on investments while not increasing the level of risk of those investments. This initiative is expected to increase the interest earnings on the Treasury's investment of short-term excess cash by approximately $10 million a year. Such earnings would be deposited in the general fund of the Treasury.

The Office of Inspector General (OIG) conducts audits, evaluations, and investigations designed to: (1) promote economy, efficiency, and effectiveness and prevent and detect fraud, waste, and abuse in Departmental programs and operations; and (2) keep the Secretary and the Congress fully and currently informed of problems and deficiencies in the administration of Departmental programs and operations. This office is responsible for audit and investigative operations of all Treasury activities except tax administration.

In 2009, the OIG Office of Audit will continue, as a first priority, to address mandated audits related to financial statements, information security, Treasury procurements on behalf of the Department of Defense, and as necessary, failed financial institutions resulting in material losses to the deposit insurance funds. OIG will provide audit oversight in a number of critical areas, in particular, programs to Combat Terrorist Financing and Money Laundering, efforts to ensure the integrity of Treasury's information systems, and Treasury's management of capital investments. The Office of Audit expects to complete 100 percent of statutory audits by the required date, and complete 60 audit products in 2009.

In 2009, the OIG Office of Investigations will continue to investigate all reports of fraud, waste and abuse and other criminal activity, such as financial programs where fraud and other crimes are involved in the issuance of licenses or benefits to citizens; will perform oversight or quality assurance reviews of Treasury's police operations at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing and the U.S. Mint; and will conduct proactive efforts to detect, investigate and deter electronic crimes and other threats to the Treasury's physical and cyber critical infrastructure. The Office of Investigations will continue current efforts to aggressively investigate, close, and refer cases for criminal prosecution, civil litigation or corrective administrative action in a timely manner, and expects to make 105 such referrals in 2009.

The Treasury Inspector General for Tax Administration (TIGTA) conducts independent audits and investigations of Treasury Department matters relating to the Internal Revenue Service (IRS), the IRS Oversight Board, and the IRS Office of Chief Counsel. TIGTA's oversight helps ensure that the IRS accomplishes its mission; improves its programs and operations; promotes economy, efficiency and effectiveness; and prevents and detects fraud, waste and abuse.

In 2009, TIGTA's investigative program will concentrate on three core areas: (1) employee integrity; (2) employee and infrastructure security; and (3) external attempts to corrupt tax administration. In 2007, TIGTA closed 3,680 criminal investigations.

In 2009, TIGTA will administer an audit program that strikes a balance between statutory audit coverage and high risk audit work. The statutory coverage will include audits mandated by the IRS Restructuring and Reform Act of 1998, as well as reviews that address computer security, taxpayer privacy and rights, and financial management. In addition, TIGTA will continue to closely monitor the IRS' modernization efforts, its major management challenges, its response to the President's Management Agenda, and its progress in achieving its strategic goals, as well as address Congressional requests for audit coverage. TIGTA's 2007 highlights include: 180 final reports issued; more than $3.5 billion in potential financial benefits identified; and 5.7 million taxpayer accounts potentially affected.

The Terrorism Risk Insurance Extension Act of 2007 (P.L. 110-160) reauthorized and revised the program established by the Terrorism Risk Insurance Act (TRIA) of 2002 (P.L. 107-297). The Act extended the Terrorism Insurance Program for seven years, through December 31, 2014. The 2007 extension of TRIA added a requirement for commercial property and casualty insurance companies to cover losses from domestic as well as foreign acts of terrorism. The Act maintains for all seven years an insurer deductible of 20 percent of direct earned premiums and an insurer co-payment of 15 percent of insured losses above the insurer's deductible. In addition, the Extension sets the event trigger amount for Federal payments at $100 million in aggregate insured losses from an act of terrorism and the annual cap of $100 billion on total insurer losses from terrorist attacks that the Federal program would cover. The 2007 extension changes recoupment provisions, requiring Treasury to collect 133 percent of the Federal payments made under the program up to $27.5 billion, and accelerates time horizons for recoupment of any payments made before September 30, 2017.

The Budget, for the first time, includes the estimated Federal cost of providing terrorism risk insurance, reflecting the 2007 TRIA extension. The growth in the private insurance market for this coverage provides data in the form of insurance premiums that show how private insurers estimate the likelihood of attack and price their projected losses. Using this market driven data, the Government can project annual outlays and recoupment under TRIA. These estimates represent the weighted average of TRIA payments over a full range of scenarios, most of which include no terrorist attacks (and therefore no TRIA payments), and some of which include terrorist attacks of varying magnitudes. The Budget projections, however, are in no way an official forecast of future attacks. On this basis, the Budget projects the 2007 TRIA extension will have a net deficit impact (spending less receipts

The Treasury Forfeiture Fund is managed to support Federal, State, and local law enforcement’s use of asset forfeiture as a powerful tool to punish and deter criminal activity. Non-tax forfeitures made by participating bureaus from the Treasury and Homeland Security Departments are deposited into the Fund and are available to pay or reimburse certain costs and expenses related to seizures and forfeitures that occur pursuant to laws enforced by the bureaus and other expenses authorized by 31 U.S.C. 9703.

Individual federal tax returns include an optional federal income tax designation of $3 that an individual may elect to be paid to the Presidential Election Campaign Fund (PECF). In recent years, approximately 10% of individuals have elected to make this designation, resulting in about $50 million paid into the Fund annually. Approximately every four years, the Department of the Treasury makes distributions from the PECF (referred to as public funds, matching funds, or federal funds) to qualified presidential candidates and national party committees for use in the Presidential elections.

Money for the public funding of Presidential elections can only come from the PECF. If the PECF runs short of funds, no other general Treasury funds may be used.

The Federal Election Commission administers the public funding program, determining which candidates are eligible, the amount to which they are entitled, and auditing their use of funds. The Department of the Treasury collects the income tax designations and makes payouts to the campaigns.

Matching Funds for Presidential Primary Candidates: Upon certification by the Federal Election Commission—based on demonstrating broad national support, adhering to spending limits, and other qualifications—every eligible presidential primary candidate is entitled to receive $250 in Federal matching funds for each eligible $250 of private contributions received after the beginning of the calendar year immediately preceding the election year through the end of the calendar year of the election. For the 2008 Presidential election, payouts to eligible candidates can begin in January 2008 and all monies raised in 2007 or 2008 are potentially matchable.

Nominating Party Conventions: Upon certification by the Commission, payments may be made to the national committee of a major or minor political party that chooses to receive its entitlement. The total of such payments will be limited to the amount in the account at the time of payment. The national committee of each party may receive payments beginning on July 1 of the year immediately preceding the calendar year in which a presidential nominating convention of the political party is held. By statute, the two major parties receive $4 million each, plus an inflation adjustment (over 1974). In 2007, the Republican and Democratic parties each received $16.3 million for their nominating conventions.

Candidates for General Elections: By statute, eligible candidates of each major party in a presidential election are entitled to equal payments in an amount which, in the aggregate, shall not exceed $20 million each, plus an inflation adjustment. In 2004, this amounted to $74.6 million for each candidate. Eligibility for this funding depends on meeting several criteria such as limiting spending to amounts specified by campaign finance laws.

In addition, provision is made for new parties, minor parties, and non-major party candidates who may receive in excess of 5 percent of the popular vote and therefore, be entitled to a pro rata portion of the major party grant in the general election.

The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to deal in gold and foreign exchange and other instruments of credit and securities as the Secretary considers necessary, consistent with U.S. obligations in the International Monetary Fund (IMF) regarding orderly exchange arrangements and a stable system of exchange rates. An Exchange Stabilization Fund, with capital of $200 million, is authorized by law for this purpose (31 U.S.C. 5302). All earnings and interest accruing to this fund are available for the purposes thereof. Transactions in special drawing rights (SDR's) and U.S. holdings of SDR's are administered by the fund. U.S. drawings from the IMF, if any, are also advanced to the fund. As required by Public Law 95-612, the fund is not available to pay administrative expenses.

The principal sources of the fund's income are earnings on investments held by the fund, including interest earned on fund holdings of U.S. Government securities.

The amounts reflected in the 2008 and 2009 estimates entail only projected net interest earnings on Exchange Stabilization Fund (ESF) assets. The estimates are subject to considerable variance, depending on changes in the amount and composition of assets and the interest rates applied to investments. In addition, these estimates make no attempt to forecast gains or losses on SDR valuation or foreign currency valuation.

The Department of the Treasury was authorized to pilot a franchise fund under P.L. 103-356, the Government Management and Reform Act of 1994. The purpose of the franchise fund pilots was to bring about lower costs and higher quality for government and financial administrative services through greater competition. The Treasury Franchise Fund (The Fund) was established by P.L. 104-208, made permanent by P.L. 108-447 and codified as 31 U.S.C. 322, note.

The Fund is a revolving fund that is used to supply financial and administrative services to various Treasury bureaus on a fee-for-service basis. Activities include: Consolidated/Integrated Administrative Management; Financial Management Administrative Support; and Financial Systems, Consulting, and Training Services. The Fund was recognized as a Center of Excellence in the Financial Management Line of Business in 2005, making it eligible to enter into competitions to provide cross-agency financial management services on a Government-wide basis.

Treasury will transition out of the Consolidated/Integrated Administrative Management activity (FedSource) because it was determined that this activity was outside the scope of Treasury's core mission.

The Riegle Community Development and Regulatory Improvement Act of 1994 established the Community Development Financial Institutions (CDFI) Fund. The CDFI Fund provides equity investments, grants, loans, and technical assistance to new and existing community development financial institutions such as community development banks, community development credit unions, community development loan and venture capital funds, and microenterprise loan funds. Funds provided by the CDFI Fund are matched by private funds and enhance the capacity of these institutions to finance economic development, including small businesses, community facilities, housing, and other community development initiatives in distressed urban, rural, Native American, Native Hawaiian, and Alaska Native communities. In addition, the CDFI Fund administers the New Markets Tax Credit Program by providing allocations of tax credits to Community Development Entities (CDEs) which in turn provide the tax credits to entities investing in the CDEs.

The 2009 Budget does not request funding for Bank Enterprise Awards (BEA). In 2009 CDFI will undertake changes to the BEA Program, should the awards be funded in future years. These modifications will require that BEA awards be used by recipients for future activities that would be eligible for award under the BEA Program. This change will better align the use of BEA awards with the Program's goals and objectives. The current award has no such requirement. The steps to effect this change include amendments to the BEA regulations, application, assistance agreement, and the creation of a compliance and monitoring system that does not currently exist for this Program.

The mission of the Financial Crimes Enforcement Network (FinCEN) is to enhance U.S. national security, deter and detect criminal activity, and safeguard financial systems from abuse by promoting transparency in the U.S. and international financial systems. FinCEN fulfills its mission, goals and priorities by: administering the Bank Secrecy Act (BSA); supporting law enforcement, regulatory, and intelligence agencies through sharing and analysis of financial intelligence; enhancing international anti-money laundering and counter-terrorist financing efforts and cooperation; and networking people, entities, ideas, and information.

BSA Administration and Analysis. The Budget provides resources for FinCEN to better administer the BSA, including promulgating regulations, providing outreach and issuing guidance to the regulated industries, providing oversight of BSA compliance, and initiating enforcement actions. Resources are also provided to modernize data collection and management of BSA information provided by regulated industries to help FinCEN support law enforcement, the intelligence community, and regulatory partners in combating financial crime. The Budget also funds additional efforts to intensify anti-money laundering cooperation with international Financial Intelligence Units to better prevent terrorist financing.

Regulatory Support Programs. FinCEN will continue efforts with the IRS, especially related to the money services business industry to ensure compliance, respond to public inquiries, distribute forms and publications, and support collection and maintenance of BSA information.

For the 2009 Budget, the Financial Management Service (FMS) will focus its efforts on the following four areas:

1. Payments.—FMS develops and implements payment policy and procedures for the Federal Government, issues and distributes payments, promotes the use of electronics in the payment process, and assists agencies in converting payments from paper checks to electronic funds transfer (EFT). This includes controlling and providing financial integrity to the Federal payments and collections process through reconciliation, accounting, and claims activities. The claims activities settle claims against the United States resulting from Government checks which have been forged, lost, stolen, or destroyed, and collects monies from those parties liable for fraudulent or otherwise improper negotiation of Government

The Financial Institutions Reform, Recovery, and Enforcement Act of 1989 authorized and appropriated to the Secretary of the Treasury, such sums as may be necessary to cover interest payments on obligations issued by the Resolution Funding Corporation (REFCORP). REFCORP was established under the Act to raise $31.2 billion for the Resolution Trust Corporation (RTC) in order to resolve savings institution insolvencies.

Sources of payment for interest due on REFCORP obligations include REFCORP investment income, proceeds from the sale of assets or warrants acquired by the RTC, and annual contributions by the Federal Home Loan Banks. If these payment sources are insufficient to cover all interest costs, indefinite, mandatory funds appropriated to the Treasury shall be used to meet the shortfall.

This account pays interest on the invested balances of guaranteed and direct loan financing accounts. For guaranteed loan financing accounts, balances result when the accounts receive up-front payments and fees to be held in reserve to make payments on defaults. Direct loan financing accounts normally borrow from Treasury to disburse loans and receive interest and principal payments and other payments from borrowers. Because direct loan financing accounts generally repay borrowing from Treasury at the end of the year, they can build up balances of payments received during the year. Interest on invested balances is paid to the financing accounts from the general fund of the Treasury, in accordance with section 505(c) of the Federal Credit Reform Act of 1990.

The Bureau of Customs and Border Protection, Department of Homeland Security, collects duties assessed pursuant to a countervailing duty order, an antidumping duty order, or a finding under the Antidumping Act of 1921. Under a provision enacted in 2000, the Bureau of Customs and Border Protection, through the Treasury, currently distributes these duties to affected domestic producers. These distributions provide a significant additional subsidy to producers that already gain protection from the increased import prices provided by the tariffs. The authority to distribute assessments collected after October 1, 2007 has been repealed. Assessments collected before October 1, 2007 will be disbursed as if the authority had not been repealed.

This fund was established as a permanent, indefinite appropriation in order to maintain adequate funding of the Check Forgery Insurance Fund. The Fund facilitates timely payments for replacement Treasury checks necessitated due to a claim of forgery. The Fund recoups disbursements through reclamations made against banks negotiating forged checks.

To reduce hardships sustained by payees of Government checks that have been stolen and forged, settlement is made in advance of the receipt of funds from the endorsers of the checks. If the U.S. Treasury is unable to recover funds through reclamation procedures, the Fund sustains the loss.

P.L. 108-447 expanded the use of the fund to include payments made via electronic funds transfer (EFT). A technical correction to the Fund's statutes to ensure and clarify that the Fund can be utilized as a funding source for relief of administrative disbursing errors was enacted by section 119 of Division D of P.L. 110-161.

The Federal Financing Bank (FFB) was created in 1973 to reduce the costs of certain Federal and federally assisted borrowing and to ensure the coordination of such borrowing from the public in a manner least disruptive to private financial markets and institutions. Prior to that time, many agencies borrowed directly from the private market to finance credit programs involving lending to the public at higher rates than on comparable Treasury securities. With the implementation of the Federal Credit Reform Act in 1992, however, agencies simply finance such loan programs through direct loan financing accounts that borrow directly from the Treasury. Therefore, FFB loans are now used primarily to finance direct agency activities such as construction of Federal buildings by the General Services Administration and activities of the U.S. Postal Service. In certain cases, the FFB finances Federal direct loans to the public that would otherwise be made by private lenders and fully guaranteed by a Federal agency.

Lending by the FFB may take one of three forms, depending on the authorizing statutes pertaining to a particular agency or program: (1) the FFB may purchase agency financial assets; (2) the FFB may acquire debt securities that the agency is otherwise authorized to issue to the public; and (3) the FFB may originate direct loans on behalf of an agency by disbursing loans directly to private borrowers and receiving repayments from the private borrower on behalf of the agency. Because law requires that transactions by the FFB be treated as a means of financing agency obligations, the budgetary effect of the third type of transaction is reflected in the budget in the following sequence: a loan by the FFB to the agency, a loan by the agency to a private borrower, a repayment by a private borrower to the agency, and a repayment by the agency to the FFB.

By law, the FFB receives substantially less interest each year on certain Department of Agriculture loans that it holds than it is contractually entitled to receive. For example, during 2007, as a result of this provision, the FFB received $98 million less than it was contractually entitled to receive. This law, however, does not reduce the amount of interest the FFB owes on its corresponding loans from Treasury.

A change in the method of accounting for losses associated with the Cushion of Credit payments program, together with net income of $533 million, resulted in an increase in the net position of the FFB to $1.8 billion for 2006. In 2007, the FFB's net income was $601 million, further increasing the net position to $2.4 billion.

In addition to its authority to borrow from the Treasury, the FFB has the statutory authority to borrow up to $15 billion from other sources. Any such borrowing is exempt from the statutory ceiling on Federal debt. FFB exercised this authority most recently in November 2004. In order to prolong Treasury's ability to operate under the then-$7.4 trillion debt ceiling, the FFB issued $14 billion of its own debt securities to the Civil Service Retirement and Disability Fund (CSRDF) in exchange for $14 billion in special issue Treasury securities held by CSRDF. The FFB simultaneously redeemed these special issue Treasury securities with Treasury. This transaction extinguished $14 billion in securities that Treasury had issued to Government accounts (the CSRDF). An equivalent amount of the FFB's own debt to Treasury was reduced. The FFB debt held by the CSRDF will be redeemed beginning in 2009.

The following table shows the annual net lending by the FFB by agency and program and the amount outstanding at the end of each year.

Excise taxes are imposed on rum at the generally applicable distilled spirits rate of $13.50 per proof gallon. These excise tax collections less estimated refunds, drawbacks, and certain administrative expenses are covered-over (transferred) to Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands under a permanent legislative provision at the lesser of a rate of $10.50 per proof gallon or the current rate of tax imposed on a proof gallon. The budget proposes to extend a temporary cover-over rate of $13.25 per proof gallon through December 31, 2009. This proposal does not increase the total amount of excise taxes collected, but rather increases the portion of excise taxes that are covered-over to Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands.

The Bureau of Engraving and Printing (BEP) designs, manufactures, and supplies Federal Reserve notes and other security instruments for various Federal agencies. Beginning in 2005, the BEP was given legal authority to print currency for foreign countries upon approval of the State Department.

The Bureau's vision is to maintain its position as a world-class securities printer providing its customers and the public superior products through excellence in manufacturing and technological innovation. The Bureau strives to produce U.S. currency of the highest quality, as well as many other security documents issued by the federal Government. Other activities at the Bureau include engraving plates and dies; manufacturing inks used to print security products; purchasing materials, supplies and equipment; and storing and delivering products in accordance with the requirements of customers. In addition, the Bureau provides technical assistance and advice to other Federal agencies in the design and production of documents, which, because of their innate value or other characteristics, require counterfeit deterrence.

The Bureau's top priorities for FY 2009 include the continued re-tooling and retrofitting of the currency production process which will allow the BEP to integrate to a 50-subject manufacturing environment from the current 32-subject currency production format. This new equipment will ensure that the BEP continues to operate in an efficient and cost-effective manner. Another top priority for FY 2009 is the introduction of a new $100 note. The new $100 notes will contain enhanced security features including subtle background colors as well as a new overt counterfeit deterrent feature. The Federal Reserve will determine when the new note is issued to the public. Background colors help consumers, particularly those who are visually impaired, to tell the denominations apart. Because aggressive law enforcement, effective design, and public education are all essential components of a concerted anti-counterfeiting program, the Bureau will continue its work with the Advanced Counterfeit Deterrent Committee to research and develop future currency designs that will enhance and protect future notes.

The operations of the Bureau are currently financed by means of a revolving fund established in accordance with the provisions of Public Law 656, August 4, 1950 (31 U.S.C. 181), which requires the Bureau to be reimbursed by customer agencies for all costs of manufacturing products and services performed. The Bureau is also authorized to assess amounts to acquire capital equipment and provide for working capital needs.

The United States Mint manufactures coins, sells numismatic and investment products, and provides security and asset protection. Public Law 104-52, dated November 19, 1995, enacted 5136, of Subchapter III of chapter 51 of subtitle IV of title 31, United States Code established the United States Mint Public Enterprise Fund (the Fund). The Mint submits annual audited business-type financial statements to the Secretary of the Treasury and to Congress in support of the operations of the revolving fund.

The operations of the Mint are divided into three major components: Circulating Coinage; Numismatic and Investment Products; and Protection. The Mint is credited with receipts from its circulating coinage operations equal to the full cost of producing and distributing the coins that are put into circulation, plus the depreciation of the Mint's plant and equipment on the basis of current replacement value. From that, the Mint pays its cost of operations, which includes production and distribution costs. The difference between the face value of the coins and these costs is considered an "other financing source" and is deposited as seigniorage to the general fund. In 2007, the Mint transferred $825 million to the general fund. If any seigniorage was used to finance the Mint's capital acquisitions it would be recorded as budget authority in the year that funds are obligated for this purpose and as receipts over the life of the asset. No seigniorage has been used for this purpose in recent years.

Circulating Coinage.—This activity funds the manufacture of circulating coins for sale to the Federal Reserve System as determined by public demand. In 2009, this activity will manufacture 15.4 billion coins for sale to the Federal Reserve System.

In 2007, the United States Mint introduced a new Presidential $1 Coin Program as authorized by the Presidential $1 Coin Act of 2005 (Public Law 109-145). As required by legislation, the Presidential dollar coin specifications are similar to the Golden Dollar featuring Sacagawea and released into circulation at the rate of four different coin designs per year beginning in 2007 through 2018. Each coin design will honor former presidents of the United States in the order in which they served the nation.

Numismatic and Investment Products.—This activity funds the manufacture of numismatic and bullion coins, medals, and other products for sale to collectors and the general public. These coins include annual recurring programs such as proof and uncirculated sets, silver proof coins, the American Eagle gold and silver bullion uncirculated and proof coins, American Eagle platinum coins, 24-Karat gold coins, and national and historic medals. The activity also includes non-recurring programs for coins and medals which are legislated to commemorate specific events or individuals. In 2009, this activity will fund any pending commemorative coin program as legislated by Congress. In addition, the Fifty States Commemorative Coin Program Act authorized, beginning in 1999, the issuance of quarters for sale to the public and to the Federal Reserve System honoring each of the 50 states with a design emblematic of that state. These quarters are issued in the order of each state's admission to the Union. The Mint is producing five different state quarter designs each year resulting in a 10-year program. The 50 State Quarters Program will come to an end in December 2008. During the first three months of FY 2009, the United States Mint will continue to produce 2008 50 State Quarters. The obverse design of quarters produced during the remainder of FY 2009 will reflect the traditional obverse of quarters produced prior to 1999, and the reverse design of these quarters will be emblematic of the District of Columbia and each of the US territories. All coins produced for this program are considered to be numismatic products.

Protection.—This activity funds protection of the Government's stock of gold and silver bullion, coins, Mint employees and visitors, plant facilities and equipment, and all other Mint property against abuse, theft, damage, disorders, and all other unsafe or illegal practices by utilizing police officers and modern protective devices.

The Bureau of the Public Debt (BPD) borrows the money needed to operate the Federal Government, accounts for the resulting debt, and provides reimbursable support services to federal agencies. BPD will continue to adopt technological advances to ensure that Public Debt's various information technology systems remain secure.

This appropriation provides funds for the conduct of all public debt operations, which is comprised of four main activities:

Wholesale Securities Services.—This program involves the announcement, auction, issuance and settlement of marketable Treasury bills, notes, bonds, and TIPS. It also provides an efficient infrastructure for the transfer, custody and redemption of these securities. BPD administers Treasury's regulations that provide investor protection and maintain the integrity, liquidity and efficiency of the government securities market.

Government Agency Investment Services.—This program supports Federal, State and local government agencies' investments in non-marketable Treasury securities as well as federal agency borrowings from Treasury. There are more than 230 federal trust and investment funds and, for 18 of the funds, Public Debt also acts for the Secretary in his role as managing trustee. These include some of the more recognizable Federal trust funds such as Social Security, Medicare, Unemployment, and Highway.

Retail Securities Services.—This program manages marketable and non-marketable securities held directly with Treasury by more than 50 million retail customers. Besides the issuance and redemption of securities, services include processing customer service requests of varying complexity. These functions are performed directly by Public Debt, by Federal Reserve Banks as fiscal agents of the United States, and by qualified agents that issue and redeem savings bonds and notes.

Summary Debt Accounting.—This program accurately accounts for and reports in a timely manner on the outstanding public debt and related interest expenses. The program provides daily information on the balance and composition of the public debt, and summary level accounts represent the control totals for dozens of subordinate investment systems.

INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE

The Internal Revenue Service (IRS) provides taxpayers top-quality service by helping them understand and meet their tax responsibilities and by applying the tax law with integrity and fairness to all. This mission demands a safe and modernized infrastructure and capabilities to effectively and efficiently collect taxes while minimizing taxpayer burden. The IRS strategic goals are:

Improve Taxpayer Service.—Help people understand their tax obligations and make it easier for them to pay their taxes;

Enhance Enforcement of the Tax Law.—Ensure all taxpayers meet their tax obligations, so that when they pay their taxes, they can be confident their neighbors and competitors are also doing the same; and

Modernize the IRS through its People, Processes and Technology.—Manage resources and technology to achieve service and enforcement strategic goals.

One of the priorities of the Administration is reducing the tax gap (the difference between taxes paid and taxes owed). In August of 2007, the IRS published Reducing the Federal Tax Gap: A Report on Improving Voluntary Compliance (see www.irs.gov/pub/irs-news/tax-gap-report-final-080207-linked.pdf) That and chapter 13, Stewardship in the Analytical Perspectives volume of the 2009 Budget lay out a multi-year seven-part strategy to improve compliance without imposing undue burdens on taxpayers. The Budget provides $11,362 million for the IRS to make progress in implementing this strategy.

Enforcement Program.—The 2009 Budget includes $7,487 million for the enforcement program. The IRS Enforcement Program is funded in the Enforcement and Operations Support appropriations. As in the past three Budget requests, the Administration proposes to include these enforcement increases as a Budget Enforcement Act program integrity cap adjustment (see chapter 15, Budget Reform Proposals in the Analytical Perspectives volume of the 2009 Budget). In addition, the Budget proposes to provide the IRS with flexibility to transfer up to one percent of enforcement related operations support funds to taxpayer service related support activities. This flexibility is required to account for allocation changes within the operations support appropriation.

In 2007, the IRS collected $2.7 trillion in taxes, 96 percent of total federal government receipts. The IRS improved tax compliance by increasing government receipts through enforcement and enhancing taxpayer service. From 2001 to 2007, the IRS increased revenue from its enforcement programs by 75 percent from $33.8 billion to an all-time high of $59.2 billion, yielding a 5.6 to 1 return on investment for all IRS activities in 2007. Revenue growth has been greatest in the areas of corporate taxes and high income individual taxes. In 2009, as part of the tax gap reduction effort, the Budget increases funding for enforcement by $490 million. This includes $358 million for new enforcement initiatives and $132 million in cost increases. The IRS estimates that once fully implemented (2011), these new initiatives will result in an additional $2 billion in annual collections of delinquent tax debt. Improved enforcement will also encourage voluntary compliance, which will further increase revenue.

The IRS will continue efforts to improve enforcement efficiency through streamlining and centralizing work processes, improving workload selection techniques, and implementing initiatives to reduce cycle time by refining case selection criteria. The IRS will enhance coverage of high-risk compliance areas, as well as further address the tax gap associated with small business and self-employed taxpayers. Enforcement efforts will focus on critical reporting, filing and payment compliance programs, and will highlight abusive tax avoidance transactions and high income individual examinations involving pass-through entities (e.g. partnerships, trusts). The IRS will continue to reengineer its examination and collection procedures to reduce time, increase yield, and expand coverage.

Taxpayer Service Program.—Helping the public understand its tax reporting and payment obligations is a cornerstone of taxpayer compliance. The 2009 Budget includes $3,636 million aimed at continuing to improve both the quality and efficiency of taxpayer service programs. The IRS Service Program is funded in the Taxpayer Service and Operations Support appropriations.

In 2009, the IRS will increase self-service applications, continue to ensure web navigation is user-friendly, and also improve the quality and accuracy of its telephone responses. As a result of recent technology enhancements, including using e-File and payment, e-services, and the IRS website, more taxpayers reach the IRS through the internet. For example, in 2007, more than 1.35 billion web pages were viewed on the www.irs.gov website and more than 32.1 million taxpayers checked their refund status by accessing “Where’s My Refund?” on the IRS website. Taxpayers can also use automated features found at 1-800-829-1040. In addition, efforts to increase electronic filing will continue by adding new forms and schedules to the business electronic portfolio and leveraging partner organizations such as state taxing authorities.

Modernization Program.—The Budget continues funding for the Business Systems Modernization program to give IRS employees the technology tools they need to continue to administer and improve both service and enforcement. The Budget provides $223 million for continued investments in modernized taxpayer databases and electronic filing systems.

If an economic growth package includes tax provisions that affect IRS and FMS operations, one-time mandatory spending authority for 2008 will be proposed for these accounts.

This appropriation provides resources for revamping IRS business practices and acquiring new technology. The IRS uses a formal methodology to evaluate, prioritize, approve, and fund its portfolio of business systems modernization investments. This methodology provides a documented, repeatable, and measurable process for managing investments throughout their life cycle. The process is reviewed by the Government Accountability Office on a regular basis as part of the submission requirements for expenditure plans submitted to the House and Senate Committees on Appropriations.

In 2009, the IRS business systems modernization efforts will continue to focus on key tax administration systems that provide additional benefits to taxpayers and IRS employees: the Customer Account Data Engine (CADE); Accounts Management Services (AMS); and Modernized e-File. Expansion of CADE will allow IRS to process millions of additional returns on modernized systems and provide faster refunds. AMS will create an interface to allow IRS employees to manage more complex returns in CADE and will improve productivity for service and enforcement employees. Finally, Modernized e-File will bring 1040 returns into the new electronic filing platform.

As provided by law, there are instances wherein the earned income tax credit (EITC) exceeds the amount of tax liability owed through the individual income tax system, resulting in an additional payment to the tax filer. The EITC was originally authorized by the Tax Reduction Act of 1975 (Public Law 94-12) and made permanent by the Revenue Adjustment Act of 1978 (Public Law 95-600). The Tax Reform Act of 1986 and the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Acts of 1990 and 1993 increased the credit amount and expanded the eligibility for the EITC.

The Budget proposes to permanently extend the EITC provisions in the Economic Growth and Tax Relief Reconciliation Act of 2001, which sunset on December 31, 2010. These provisions reduce EITC-related marriage penalties, simplify certain eligibility criteria for the credit, and allow the IRS to use more cost-efficient procedures to deny questionable EITC claims. The Budget also proposes to clarify the definition of qualifying child for child-related tax benefits, including the EITC and the child tax credit. In addition, the Budget proposes to simplify requirements regarding filing status, presence of children, and immigration status for EITC eligibility. Finally, the Budget proposes to extend through 2008 a provision, which expired on December 31, 2007, allowing military personnel to elect to include combat pay in earned income for purposes of computing the EITC.

The Trade Act of 2002 established the Health Coverage Tax Credit (HCTC), an advanceable, refundable tax credit for 65 percent of the cost of qualified insurance. This credit is available to certain recipients of trade adjustment assistance (TAA) and Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation pension beneficiaries who are aged 55-64.

This schedule reflects the effects of HCTC and other Administration health-related tax proposals in cases where the credit exceeds the tax liability resulting in payment to the tax filer.

Under certain circumstances, as provided in 26 U.S.C. 6611, interest is paid on Internal Revenue collections that must be refunded. The Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 (Public Law 97–248) provides for daily compounding of interest. Under the Tax Reform Act of 1986 (Public Law 99–514), interest paid on Internal Revenue collections will equal the Federal short-term rate plus two percentage points, such rate to be adjusted quarterly.

The American Jobs Creation Act of 2004 (Public Law 108–357) allows the IRS to use private collection contractors to supplement its own collection staff's efforts to ensure that all taxpayers pay what they owe. The legislation ensures contractors respect taxpayer rights. The statute further authorizes the Secretary of the Treasury to retain and use an amount not in excess of 25 percent of the amount collected under any qualified tax collection contract for payments to private collection agents, and an amount not in excess of 25 percent of the amount collected for collection enforcement activities of the IRS. The schedule above shows this spending.

As provided by law (26 U.S.C. 7623), the Secretary of the Treasury may make payments to individuals resulting from information given that leads to the collection of Internal Revenue taxes. The Taxpayer Bill of Rights of 1996 (Public Law 104-168) provides for payments of such sums to individuals from the proceeds of amounts (other than interest) collected by reason of the information provided, and any amount collected shall be available for such payments. This information must lead to the detection of underpayments of taxes, or detection and bringing to trial and punishment persons guilty of violating the Internal Revenue laws (in cases where such expenses are not otherwise provided for by law). This provision was further amended by the Tax Relief and Health Care Act of 2006 (P.L. 109-432) to encourage use of the program. The amendments generally set a reward payment range of between 15 and 30 percent of the collected proceeds for cases involving high income non-compliant taxpayers. They allow for lower payments where information is provided that was already available from another source.

This revolving fund was established pursuant to section 112(a) of the Federal Tax Lien Act of 1966, to serve as the source of financing the redemption of real property by the United States. During the process of collecting unpaid taxes, the government places a tax lien on real estate in order to protect the government's interest. Situations arise where property of this nature is collateral for other indebtedness and the tax lien is subordinate to the original indebtedness. In this circumstance, it is often in the government's interest to purchase the property during the foreclosure sale. The advantage arises when the property is worth substantially more than the first lien-holder's equity but is being sold for an amount that barely covers that equity, thereby leaving no proceeds to apply against delinquent taxes. Under these circumstances, if the government buys the property and subsequently puts it up for sale under more advantageous conditions, it is possible to realize sufficient profit on the transaction to fully or partially collect the amount of taxes due. The revolving fund is reimbursed from the proceeds of the sale in an amount equal to the amount expended from the fund for the redemption. The balance of the proceeds is applied against the amount of the tax, interest, penalties, and additions thereto, and for the costs of sale. The remainder, if any, would revert to the parties legally entitled to it.

The Office of the Comptroller of the Currency (OCC) was created for the purpose of establishing and regulating a national banking system. The National Currency Act of 1863 (12 U.S.C. 1 et seq., 12 Stat. 665), rewritten and reenacted as the National Bank Act of 1864, provided for the chartering and supervising functions of OCC. The income of the bureau is derived principally from assessments paid by national banks and interest on investments in U.S. Government securities. OCC receives no appropriated funds from Congress.

OCC charters new banking institutions only after investigation and due consideration of charter applications. Supervision of existing national banks is aided by the required submission of periodic reports and detailed onsite examinations, which are conducted by a staff of approximately 2,060 national bank examiners. At present, OCC supervises approximately 1,740 institutions with national charters and 48 Federal branches with total assets of nearly $7.7 trillion.

In addition, OCC considers applications for mergers in which the resulting bank will be a national bank and applications from banks to establish branches. OCC also promulgates rules and regulations for the guidance of national banks and bank directors.

The Office of Thrift Supervision (OTS) was established by Congress as a bureau of the Department of the Treasury as part of the Financial Institutions Reform, Recovery, and Enforcement Act of 1989 (12 U.S.C. 1811 note). OTS assumed the regulatory functions of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board dissolved by the same act.

OTS charters, examines, supervises, and regulates federal savings associations insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (FDIC). OTS also examines, supervises, and regulates state-chartered, FDIC-insured savings associations and provides for the registration, examination, and regulation of savings association affiliates and holding companies. OTS sets capital standards for Federal and State savings associations and reviews applications of state-chartered thrifts for conversion to federal thrifts.

OTS receives no appropriated funds from Congress. Income of the bureau is derived principally from assessments on thrifts and holding companies, examination fees, and interest on investments in U.S. Government obligations. As of September 30, 2007, OTS oversees 831 thrifts with total assets of $1.57 trillion; OTS also supervises 470 holding company enterprises with approximately $8.5 trillion in U.S. domiciled consolidated assets.

For 2009, the budget requests total resources for the VA Medical Services appropriation of $36.5 billion. This includes $34.0 billion in appropriated budget authority and $2.5 billion to be collected in the Medical Care Collections Fund.

The budget is proposing a set of legislative proposals that will be submitted to the authorizing committees of Congress recommending the enhancement of health care benefits for our veterans; these proposals will be outlined in the Department's budget submission. The budget also includes an additional set of mandatory legislative proposals that are not reflected in the Medical Services appropriation request. These proposals are discussed at the end of the narrative for Medical Services. The appropriation request reflects the full funding request for Medical Services to care for our veterans.

Medical Services.—Provides for a comprehensive, integrated health care delivery system that addresses the needs of eligible veterans and beneficiaries in VA medical centers, outpatient clinic facilities, contract hospitals, State homes, and outpatient programs on a fee basis. Hospital and outpatient care is also provided by the private sector for certain dependents and survivors of veterans under the Civilian Health and Medical Programs for the Department of Veterans Affairs (CHAMPVA).

In the FY 2009 request, the Medical Administration appropriation is being consolidated into the Medical Services appropriation. Merging these two accounts will improve the execution of the budget and will allow VA to respond rapidly to unanticipated changes in the health care environment throughout the year. This portion of the Medical Services appropriation finances the expenses of management, security, and administration of the VA health care system through the operation of VA medical centers, other facilities, Veterans Integrated Service Network offices and facility director offices, chief of staff operations, quality of care oversight, legal services, billing and coding activities, procurement, financial management, and human resource management.

Medical Care Collections Fund (MCCF).—VA estimates collections of $2.5 billion, representing 7 percent of available resources. VA has the authority to collect inpatient and outpatient co-payments, medication co-payments, and nursing home co-payments; authority for certain income verification; authority to recover third-party insurance payments from veterans for nonservice-connected conditions; and authority to collect revenue from enhanced use leases. These collections also include those collected from the Compensated Work Therapy Program, Compensation and Living Expenses Program, and the Parking Program.

Revenue Cycle Improvement.—VHA is seeking to improve its performance in the area of medical care collections. The revenue cycle improvement plan includes initiatives that will improve efficiency and accuracy.

MEDICAL SERVICES MANDATORY LEGISLATIVE PROPOSALS

The budget is proposing a set of legislative proposals that are not reflected in the Medical Services appropriation request. Authorizing legislation for these proposals will be transmitted separately from the budget to the authorizing committees of Congress. This legislation will propose three changes to VA's fee structure that will result in additional receipts to the Treasury. These additional receipts will be classified as mandatory and will not reduce the Medical Services appropriation request, which has been made in full.

These proposals will: assess a tiered annual enrollment fee based on the family income of the veteran; increase the pharmacy co-payment from $8 to $15 for all Priority 7 and Priority 8 veterans; and eliminate the third-party offset to first-party debt.

The first proposal is the tiered annual enrollment fee which is structured to charge $250 for veterans with family incomes from $50,000 to $74,999; $500 for those with family incomes from $75,000 to $99,999; and $750 for those with family incomes equal to or greater than $100,000. This proposal is estimated to contribute over $129 million to the Treasury annually, beginning in 2010, and will increase receipts over 5 years by $514 million.

The second proposal is the pharmacy co-payment proposal which is projected to contribute $335 million to the Treasury beginning in 2009 and will increase receipts by $1.6 billion over five years.

The third proposal eliminates the current practice of VA offsetting or reducing third-party billings to insurance companies based upon the direct co-payment responsibilities of the veteran. This proposal will increase receipts by $44 million beginning in FY 2009 and $215 million over five years.

Note: In 2008, $2,012,000,000 in contingency funds will be used for: increasing staffing levels and purchasing medical equipment needed to continue delivering high-quality health care services. The additional personnel will enable VA to: improve access to care for veterans; address new initiatives related to mental health and substance abuse services, outpatient services for blind veterans, and for Vet Centers; provide enhanced case management for OIF/OEF veterans; and address the material weakness identified by the external financial statement auditors.

The purpose of the fund is to enable the Departments to carry out a program to identify and provide incentives to implement creative sharing initiatives at the facility, intra-regional and nationwide levels. The Departments have established the fund and developed processes and criteria to solicit and select projects. Section 721 of the FY 2003 National Defense Authorization Act, Public Law 107-314, established the fund and requires VA and Department of Defense (DoD) to establish a joint incentive program. In FY 2009, each Secretary shall contribute a minimum of $15 million to the fund after the appropriation is enacted.

For 2009, the budget requests total resources for the VA Medical Facilities appropriation of $4.7 billion. Medical Facilities provides for the operations and maintenance of the capital infrastructure required to provide health care to the Nation's veterans. These costs include utilities, engineering, capital planning, leases, laundry services, grounds maintenance, trash removal, housekeeping, fire protection, pest management, facility repair, and property disposition and acquisition.

Note: In 2008, $508,000,000 in contingency funds will be used for: hiring additional staff and completing an increased number of non-recurring maintenance (NRM) projects. VA will use funds to reduce the Facilities Condition Assessment deficiencies and backlog.

For 2009, the total budgetary resources of $1.8 billion are comprised of $442 million in direct appropriations, $442 million in medical care support and $961 million in federal and private sector grants. The Research program will support 3,201 FTE through direct appropriation and a total of over 15,000 research staff through all funding sources.

This account is an intramural program whose mission is to conduct research focused on the special health care needs of veterans and to balance the discovery of new knowledge and the application of these discoveries to advance the health and care of veterans and the Nation. VA is uniquely positioned to move scientific discovery from investigators' laboratories to patient care. In turn, VA clinician investigators identify new research questions for the laboratory at the patient's bedside, making the research program one of VA's most effective tools to improve the care of veterans. Embedding research within an integrated health care system with a state-of-the-art electronic health record creates a national laboratory for the discovery of new medical knowledge and the translation of that knowledge into improved health. VA scientists who partner with colleagues from other Federal agencies, academic medical centers, nonprofit organizations and commercial entities nationwide further expand the reach and scope of VA research. Although VA R&D is an intramural program, through VA's academic affiliations as well as collaborations with other federal agencies, it is fully integrated with the larger biomedical research community. Veterans' health issues are addressed comprehensively in the following four program divisions and the medical care research support required for these programs:

Biomedical Laboratory.—Supports preclinical research to understand life processes from a molecular, genomic, and physiological level in regard to diseases affecting veterans.

Clinical Science.—Administers investigations (i.e., human subject research such as drug, surgical, single subject, pilot and multi-center cooperative studies as well as feasibility trials) aimed at instituting new, more effective clinical care.

Health Services.—Supports studies to identify and promote effective and efficient strategies to improve the delivery of health care to veterans.

Rehabilitation.—Develops novel approaches to restoring veterans with traumatic amputation, central nervous system injuries, loss of sight and/or hearing, or other physical and cognitive impairments to full and productive lives.

VA's Medical and Prosthetic Research programs are included in the Federal Science & Technology (FS&T) budget.

VA has the authority to collect co-payments which are deposited into the Medical Care Collections Fund (MCCF) receipt account. As allowed by the provisions of the appropriations Acts, these receipts are transferred to the Medical Services appropriation where they remain available until expended for the purposes of this account. In 2007, $2.2 billion was collected in the MCCF receipt account and transferred to the Medical Services appropriation to provide health care to our veterans. These collections consist of co-payments from veterans for inpatient, outpatient, and nursing home care and prescribed medications; third-party insurance payments from veterans for nonservice-connected conditions; and collections from enhanced-use leases, the Compensated Work Therapy Program, Compensation and Living Expensed Program, and the Parking Program.

This fund consists of gifts, bequests, and proceeds from the sale of property left in the care of the facilities by former beneficiaries; patients' fund balances; and, proceeds from the sale of effects of beneficiaries who die leaving no heirs or without having otherwise disposed of their estate. Such funds are used to promote the comfort and welfare of veterans at hospitals, nursing homes, and domiciliaries where no general appropriation is available. This appropriation provides for the payment of compensation, pension, and burial benefits to veterans and survivors.

Compensation is paid to veterans for disabilities incurred in or aggravated during active military service. Dependency and Indemnity Compensation is paid to survivors of servicepersons or veterans whose death occurred while on active duty or as a result of service-connected disabilities. Compensation and vocational rehabilitation is provided to the children of Vietnam veterans who were born with certain birth defects. The Secretary may pay a clothing allowance to each veteran who uses a prescribed medication for a service-connected skin condition or wears a prosthetic or orthopedic appliance (including a wheelchair) which, in the judgment of the Secretary, tends to damage or tear the clothing of such veteran.

Miscellaneous benefits provided for are:

(a) payments for claims made pursuant to the provision of the World War Adjusted Compensation Act of 1924, as amended;

(b) a special allowance (38 U.S.C. 1312) to dependents of certain veterans who died after December 31, 1956, but who were not fully and currently insured under the Social Security Act; and

(c) payments authorized by the Equal Access to Justice Act.

The appropriation also provides for a pilot program authorizing VA to contract out medical examinations to determine service-connected disabilities of veterans who are potential applicants of compensation benefits and a program to allow VA to perform income matches for certain compensation recipients.

In accordance with Public Law 97-377, the Reinstated Entitlement Program for Survivors (REPS) program restores Social Security benefits to certain surviving spouses or children of veterans who died of service-connected causes.

Legislation is proposed to provide a cost-of-living adjustment comparable to the annual social security increase to recipients of disability compensation, dependency and indemnity compensation, and clothing allowances. The increase, effective with payments made on January 1, 2009, is expected to be 2.5 percent.

Pension benefits may be paid to veterans or their survivors. A veteran's entitlement is based on active duty service of a specific length (normally 90 days or more) during a designated war period, disabilities considered permanent and total, and countable income below established levels. There is no disability requirement for survivor cases or veterans age 65 or older. Income support is provided at established benefit levels.

An automatic annual cost-of-living increase comparable to the annual social security increase is provided for those pensioners in the improved program and to parents receiving dependency and indemnity compensation. The increase, effective with payments made on January 1, 2009, is expected to be 2.5 percent.

This appropriation finances educational assistance allowances for certain service persons, veterans and for eligible dependents of those veterans: (a) who died from service-connected causes or have a total and permanent rated service-connected disability; and (b) servicepersons who were captured or missing in action. In addition, certain disabled veterans are provided with vocational rehabilitation, specially adapted housing grants, and automobile grants with the associated approved adaptive equipment. Voluntary contributions by eligible servicepersons and matching contributions provided by the Department of Defense are included in the Post-Vietnam Era Veterans Education Account.

All Volunteer Force Educational Assistance (Montgomery GI Bill).—Public Law 98-525, enacted October 19, 1984, established two new educational programs: an assistance program for veterans who enter active duty during the period beginning July 1, 1985; and an assistance program for certain members of the Selected Reserve. Public Law 108-375 established a program to provide educational assistance to members of the reserve components called or ordered to active service in response to a war or national emergency declared by the President or the Congress, in recognition of the sacrifices that those members make in answering the call to duty. The Readjustment Benefit appropriation pays the basic benefit allowance for veterans, except for certain Post-Vietnam Era Veterans Education participants who transferred to the Montgomery GI Bill program. Supplementary educational assistance, Post-Vietnam Era Veterans Education converters, reservists, and the National Call to Service Program are financed by payments from the Department of Defense.

The following table shows a caseload and cost comparison for these beneficiaries under existing legislation.

In addition to monetary benefits, individuals may also receive rehabilitation evaluation, planning, and delivery services designed to move the veteran into a suitable job.

Automobile Grants and Adaptive Equipment.—Certain disabled veterans are provided with automobile grants with the associated approved adaptive equipment. Adaptive equipment and the maintenance and replacement of such equipment is also provided.

Specially Adapted Housing Grants.—Specially adapted housing grants, up to a maximum of $50,000, are provided

The Insurance appropriation is the funding mechanism for the following administration of the Government life insurance activities: U.S. Government Life Insurance Fund (USGLI); National Service Life Insurance (NSLI); Service-Disabled Veterans Insurance Fund (S-DVI); and Veterans Mortgage Life Insurance (VMLI).

Military and Naval Insurance.—Payments are made to the USGLI fund for certain World War I veterans for extra hazards of military service and for claims on war risk insurance issued to servicemen and veterans of World War I.

National Service Life Insurance (NSLI).—Payments are made to the NSLI fund for certain World War II veterans for: (a) the extra hazards of service; (b) gratuitous insurance granted to certain persons unable to apply for national service life insurance; and (c) death claims on policies under the waiver of a premium while the insured was on active duty.

Payment to Service-Disabled Veterans Insurance Fund (S-DVI).—Payments are made to the S-DVI fund to supplement the premiums and other receipts of the fund in amounts necessary to pay claims on insurance policies issued to veterans with service-connected disabilities.

Veterans' Mortgage Life Insurance (VMLI).—Payments are made to mortgage holders under this program, which provides mortgage protection life insurance to veterans who have received a grant for specially adapted housing due to severe disabilities. The general decline in the number of policies and the amount of insurance in force is expected to continue in 2009 as indicated in the following table.

This fund finances the payment of claims on nonparticipating life insurance policies issued and currently is open for new issues to veterans having service-connected disabilities. The program provides insurance coverage for service-disabled veterans at standard rates.

Operating costs—

Death claims.—Represents payments to designated beneficiaries.

All other.—Represents payments to policyholders who surrender their policies for their cash value and hold endowment policies which have matured.

Capital investment.—A policyholder may borrow up to 94 percent of the value of his policy.

The trend in the number and amount of policies in force is indicated in the following table.

POLICIES AND INSURANCE IN FORCE

Financing.—Operations are financed from premiums and other receipts. Additional funds are received by transfer from the veterans' insurance and indemnities appropriation, instead of direct appropriations to this fund.

Operating results and financial condition.—Since premium and other receipts are insufficient to cover operations, the fund continues to project liabilities in excess of assets. The deficit is expected to reach an estimated $750 million by September 30, 2009.

Note.—The Department of Veterans Affairs insurance policy loans are not an extension of Federal credit. Credit schedules previously shown for this account have been discontinued.

This fund pays claims and administrative costs on participating life insurance policies issued during the period May 1, 1965, through May 2, 1966, under three life insurance programs: (1) service-disabled standard insurance; (2) service-disabled rated insurance; and (3) nonservice disabled insurance availing disabled World War II and Korean conflict veterans an opportunity to acquire life insurance coverage who were no longer eligible for other Government insurance.

Budget program—

Death claims.—Represents payments to designated beneficiaries.

Dividends.—Policyholders participate in the distribution of annual dividends.

All other.—This represents resources for the administrative costs of processing claims and maintaining the accounts, and to those policyholders who: (a) surrender their policies for cash value; (b) hold endowment policies which have matured; and (c) have purchased total disability income coverage and subsequently become disabled.

Policy loans made.—A policyholder may borrow up to 94 percent of the cash value of his policy at an interest rate adjusted to reflect private sector borrowing costs.

The following table reflects the decrease in the number of policies and the amount of insurance in force:

This includes premiums for the new Traumatic Servicemembers' Group Life Insurance (TSGLI) that became effective December 1, 2005. TSGLI provides for payment between $25,000 and $100,000 (depending on the type of injury) to any member of the uniformed services covered by SGLI who sustains a traumatic injury that results in certain serious losses.

As required by the Federal Credit Reform Act of 1990, this account records, for these programs, the subsidy costs associated with the direct loans obligated and loan guarantees committed in 1992 and beyond, (including modifications of direct loans or loan guarantees that resulted from obligations or commitments in any year), as well as for the administrative expenses of these programs. The subsidy amounts are estimated on a net present value basis.

Veterans housing program account.—The Federal guaranty for this program protects lenders against the following types of losses: (a) for loans of $45,000 or less, 50 percent of the loan is guaranteed; (b) for loans greater than $45,000, but not more than $56,250, $22,500; (c) for loans more than $56,250, but less than $144,000, the lesser of $36,000 or 40 percent of the loan; or (d) for loans in excess of $144,000 the guarantee will be the lesser of: 25 percent of the Freddie Mac conforming loan limit for a single family residence, as adjusted for the year involved; or 25 percent of the loan; or the veteran's available entitlement.

Guaranteed transitional housing loans for homeless veterans program account.—Public Law 105-368, the "Veterans Benefits Improvement Act of 1998," established a pilot project designed to expand the supply of transitional housing for homeless veterans and to guarantee up to 15 investment loans with a maximum aggregate value of $100 million. The project must enforce sobriety standards and provide a wide range of supportive services such as counseling for substance abuse and job readiness skills. Residents will be required to pay a reasonable fee.

This appropriation provides for the corporate leadership and operational support to VA's housing business line.

The Housing program facilitates the extension of private capital, on more liberal terms than generally available to nonveterans, to: assist veterans and servicepersons in obtaining housing credit; and assist veterans in retaining their homes during periods of temporary economic difficulty through intensive supplemental mortgage loan servicing.

The account preceding this section contains information on the Native American Veterans Housing Loan program, and the account following this section contains information on the Guaranteed Transitional Housing Loans for Homeless Veterans program. The Transitional Housing loans are 100% guaranteed and use the Federal Financing Bank (FFB) as the lending institution. For budget purposes, all FFB loans shall be treated as direct loans.

As required by the Federal Credit Reform Act of 1990, these non-budgetary accounts record all cash flows to and from the Government resulting from direct loans obligated in 1992 and beyond (including modifications of direct loans that resulted from obligations in any year). The amounts in the accounts are a means of financing and are not included in the budget totals.

This fund was established in 1940. It is for the World War II servicemen's and veterans' insurance program. Over 22 million policies were issued under this program. Activity of the fund reflects a declining claim workload. The trend in the number and amount of policies in force is shown as follows:

POLICIES AND INSURANCE IN FORCE

	2007 actual	2008 est.	2009 est.
Number of policies	1,013,557	919,970	828,052
Insurance in force (dollars in millions)	$11,516	$10,553	$9,650

This fund is operated on a commercial basis to the extent possible. The income of the fund is derived from premium receipts, interest on investments, and payments which are made to the fund from the Veterans insurance and indemnities appropriation.

Assets of the fund, which are largely invested in special interest-bearing Treasury securities and in policy loans, are expected to decrease from an estimated $9,823 million as of September 30, 2008 to $9,230 million as of September 30, 2009. The actuarial estimate of policy obligations as of September 30, 2009, totals $8,977 million, leaving a balance of $253 million for contingency reserves.

The status of the fund, excluding noncash transactions, is as follows:

Note.—The Department of Veterans Affairs insurance policy loans are not an extension of Federal credit. Credit schedules previously shown for this account have been discontinued.

This fund was established in 1919 to receive premiums and pay claims on insurance issued under the provisions of the War Risk Insurance Act. The general decline in the activity of the fund is indicated in the following table:

POLICIES AND INSURANCE IN FORCE

	2007 actual	2008 est.	2009 est.
Number of policies .....	6,720	5,710	4,740
Insurance in force (dollars in millions) .....	$20	$17	$14

The fund is operated on a commercial basis to the extent possible. The income of the fund is derived from interest on investments and payments from the Veterans insurance and indemnities appropriation. Effective January 1, 1983, premiums were discontinued because reserves held in the fund were adequate to meet future liabilities of the program.

Assets of the fund, which are largely invested in interest-bearing securities and policy loans, are estimated to decrease from $32 million as of September 30, 2008, to $27 million as of September 30, 2009, as an increasing number of policies mature through death or disability. The actuarial evaluation of policy obligations as of September 30, 2009, totals $26 million, leaving a balance of $1 million for contingency reserves.

The mission of the National Cemetery Administration is to honor veterans with final resting places in national shrines and with lasting tributes that commemorate their service to our Nation. The National Cemetery Administration's vision is to serve all veterans and their families with the utmost dignity, respect, and compassion. Every national cemetery will be a place that inspires visitors to understand and appreciate the service and sacrifice of our Nation's veterans. There are four related programs managed by the National Cemetery Administration including: (1) burying eligible veterans and their family members in national cemeteries and maintaining the graves and their environs as national shrines; (2) administering grants to States in establishing, expanding, or improving State veteran cemeteries; (3) providing headstones and markers for the graves of eligible veterans in national, State, and private cemeteries; and (4) providing presidential memorial certificates to family and friends of deceased veterans, recognizing the veterans' contribution and service to the Nation.

Note: In 2008, $28,191,000 in contingency funds will be used to correct gravesite deficiencies at VA's national cemeteries, including those identified in the 2002 Millennium Act report to Congress. These repairs involve gravesite renovation projects to replace turf, repair sunken graves, and raise, realign and clean headstones.

NATIONAL CEMETERY ADMINISTRATION—Continued

The National Cemetery Administration also reflects budget information for the National Cemetery Gift Fund and the National Cemetery Administration Facilities Operation Fund. Through the Gift Fund, the Secretary is authorized to accept gifts and bequests which are made for the purpose of beautifying national cemeteries or are determined to be beneficial to such cemeteries, or are made for the purpose of the operation, maintenance, or improvement of the National Memorial Cemetery of Arizona. Through the Facilities Operation Fund, the Secretary is authorized to lease any undeveloped land and unused or underutilized buildings of the National Cemetery Administration, or parts or parcels thereof, for a term not to exceed 10 years. Proceeds from such leases are deposited in the Facilities Operation Fund, and are available to cover costs incurred by the National Cemetery Administration in the operation and maintenance of property of the Administration.

This appropriation funds the construction, replacement, and expansion of water resources projects whose principal purpose is to provide commercial navigation, flood and storm damage reduction, or aquatic ecosystem restoration benefits to the Nation, and related activities. The Budget shows all activity financed through the Inland Waterways Trust Fund as occurring within the Construction account.

This account allocates funds based on performance-based guidelines, which improve the overall performance of the construction program by redirecting funds to high-performing projects and limiting new construction starts.

1. Project rankings.—All ongoing specifically authorized construction projects, including projects funded in the Mississippi River and Tributaries account, will be assigned based upon their primary purpose to one of the main mission areas of the Corps (flood and storm damage reduction, commercial navigation, and aquatic ecosystem restoration) or to hydropower. Flood and storm damage reduction, commercial navigation, and hydropower projects will be ranked by their total benefits divided by their total costs (BCR), calculated at a seven percent real discount rate. Aquatic ecosystem restoration projects will be ranked by the extent to which they cost-effectively contribute to the restoration of a nationally or regionally significant aquatic ecosystem that has become degraded as a result of a civil works project, or to a restoration effort for which the Corps is otherwise uniquely well-suited (e.g., because the solution requires complex alterations to the hydrology and hydraulics of a river system).

2. Projects funded on the basis of their economic and environmental returns.—Ongoing flood and storm damage reduction, commercial navigation, and hydropower construction projects with a BCR of 1.5 or higher and ongoing aquatic ecosystem restoration construction projects that are cost-effective in contributing to the restoration of a nationally or regionally significant aquatic ecosystem that has become degraded as a result of a civil works project or to a restoration effort for which the Corps is otherwise uniquely well-suited will receive at least the amount needed to pay estimated contractor earnings required under ongoing contracts and related costs. In allocating funds among these projects, priority will be given to the projects with the highest economic and environmental returns and to projects where the Corps can complete physical construction of the project and/or related administrative activities in the budget year.

3. Projects funded to address significant risk to human safety.—Flood and storm damage reduction projects that are funded to address significant risk to human safety will receive sufficient funding to support an uninterrupted effort during the budget year.

4. Projects with low economic and environmental returns.—Ongoing flood and storm damage reduction, commercial navigation, and hydropower construction projects with a BCR below 1.5 will be considered for deferral, except for flood and storm damage reduction projects that are funded to address significant risk to human safety. Likewise, ongoing aquatic ecosystem restoration construction projects that do not cost-effectively contribute to the restoration of a nationally or regionally significant aquatic ecosystem that has become degraded as a result of a civil works project, and do not cost-effectively address a problem for which the Corps is otherwise uniquely well-suited, will be considered for deferral.

5. New starts and resumptions.—The budget could include funds to start up new construction projects, or to resume work on ongoing construction projects on which the Corps has not performed any physical work under a construction contract during the past three consecutive fiscal years, only if the project would be ranked that year in the top 20 percent of the ongoing construction projects in the budget in its mission area. The term “physical work under a construction contract” does not include activities related to project planning, engineering and design, relocation, or the acquisition of lands, easements, or rights-of-way. For non-structural flood damage reduction projects, construction begins in the first fiscal year in which the Corps acquires lands, easements, or rights-of-way primarily to relocate structures, or performs physical work under a construction contract for non-structural project-related measures. For aquatic ecosystem restoration projects, construction begins in the first fiscal year in which the Corps acquires lands, easements, or rights-of-way primarily to facilitate the restoration of degraded aquatic ecosystems including wetlands, riparian areas, and adjacent floodplains, or performs physical work under a construction contract to modify existing project facilities primarily to restore the aquatic ecosystem. For all other projects, construction begins in the first fiscal year in which the Corps performs physical work under a construction contract.

6. Other cases.—Projects will receive the amount needed to ensure that they comply with treaties and with biological opinions pursuant to the Endangered Species Act, and meet authorized mitigation requirements.

Dam safety assurance, seepage control, and static instability correction projects that are funded in the construction account will receive the maximum level of funding that the Corps can efficiently and effectively spend each year.

The Administration proposes that the Executive Branch and the Congress apply these guidelines to the Corps construction account and to the construction activities in the Mississippi River and Tributaries account.

This account includes $92 million for work under the Comprehensive Everglades Restoration Plan (CERP), which represents 7 percent of the total amount in this account and 2 percent of the total amount in the civil works program excluding the emergency funds. Funding CERP at this level would not have a significant impact on the overall civil works program in 2009. Future levels of construction account funding for CERP will depend on the availability of funds, and the impact of such future funding on the overall civil works program cannot be determined at this time. Funding for the Department of the Interior (DOI) includes an additional $9 million for work under CERP.

Also included in this account is $93 million for other work related to the ongoing effort to restore the Everglades/South Florida ecosystem. Funding for DOI includes $61 million for such non-CERP work.

The 2009 Budget for the two agencies includes a total of $255 million for Everglades/South Florida ecosystem restoration work, of which $101 million is for CERP and $154 million is for non-CERP work.

This appropriation also funds continuing authorities programs (the planning, design, and construction of projects that do not require specific legislation). The 2009 Budget includes funding in this account for flood control (Section 205), emergency streambank and shoreline protection (Section 14), navigation (Section 107), aquatic ecosystem restoration (Section 206), and project modifications for improvement of the environment (Section 1135).

Public Law 109–148, the 3rd emergency supplemental appropriations act of 2006, Public Law 109–234, the 4th emergency supplemental appropriations act of 2006, and Public Law 110–28, the emergency supplemental appropriations act of 2007, provided funds to repair and restore hurricane damaged projects, to accelerate completion of New Orleans area flood and storm damage reduction projects, and to provide 100-year storm protection for the greater New Orleans area. The scope and magnitude of the required work has increased with time, resulting in an upward revision of project costs. $5,761,000,000 in additional construction funds, designated as emergency funding, combined with the State’s contribution of non-Federal cost-share, would provide 100-year storm protection to greater New Orleans in 2011, improved internal drainage for specific portions of New Orleans, and for completion of repair and restoration and accelerated work to authorized levels of protection in surrounding areas. The request includes, at full Federal expense the following estimated amounts: $133 million to complete repairing and restoring authorized protection and floodwalls on the Lake Pontchartrain and Vicinity (LPV) project; $171 million to complete authorized protection on the LPV and West Bank and Vicinity (WBV) projects; $260 million to complete repairing and restoring authorized protection and floodwalls on the New Orleans to Venice (NOV) Project; $188 million to complete authorized protection on the NOV project; $456 million to complete work to incorporate non-Federal levees in Plaquemines Parish into the Federal system; $704 million for pumps and closures at outfall canals; $53 million to improve protection at the Inner Harbor Navigation Canal; $459 million for armoring levees and floodwalls; $412 million to reinforce and replace floodwalls on the LPV and WBV projects; and $90 million to storm-proof pump stations. The request also includes estimated costs of $1,077 million to provide 100-year storm protection for the LPV project; $920 million to provide 100-year storm protection for the WBV project; and $838 million for the Southeast Louisiana Urban Drainage project (SELA). This work on SELA and to increase storm protection to 100 years for the LPV and WBV projects would be cost-shared 65 percent Federal / 35 percent non-Federal. The Secretary may, under existing law, permit a delay in the initial payment, without interest, of any non-Federal contribution of funds associated with each measure for up to one year after the date when construction is begun on such measure.

This appropriation funds operation, maintenance, and related activities at the water resources projects that the Corps operates and maintains. Work to be accomplished consists of dredging, repair, and operation of structures and other facilities, as authorized in the various River and Harbor, Flood Control, and Water Resources Development Acts. Related activities include aquatic plant control, monitoring of completed projects where appropriate, removal of sunken vessels, and the collection of domestic waterborne commerce statistics. The Budget shows all activity financed through the Harbor Maintenance Trust Fund and the Inland Waterways Trust Fund as occurring within and transferred to the Operation and Maintenance account. To improve accountability and oversight, reflect the full cost of operating and maintaining existing projects, and support an integrated investment strategy, the Budget funds the following activities in the operation and maintenance account: the rehabilitation of infrastructure, where the extent of the work is not large enough to be considered a replacement; Endangered Species Act compliance, where the Corps is implementing a reasonable and prudent alternative set forth in a biological opinion in order to be able to continue operating an existing project without jeopardizing the existence of federally listed species; the construction of facilities, projects or features (including islands and wetlands) to use materials dredged during Federal navigation operation and maintenance activities; and the mitigation of impacts on shorelines resulting from Federal navigation operation and maintenance activities.

This appropriation funds all of the costs associated with protecting Corps facilities from potential security threats. It also funds the national emergency preparedness program under Executive Order 11490.

This account does not provide any funding for the operation and maintenance of CERP in 2009; therefore, funding CERP at this level would not have a significant impact on the overall Corps civil works program. No CERP projects have been completed, and the work scheduled for CERP over the next couple of years will not involve the operation and maintenance of projects. Future levels of funding for operation and maintenance will depend on the pace of project construction and availability of funds. The impact of such future funding on the overall Corps civil works program cannot be determined at this time.

The Administration re-proposes a Corps recreation facility modernization initiative based on a model now employed by other Federal recreation providers including the National Park Service and the Forest Service. The Corps would finance a portion of the cost of maintaining and upgrading recreation facilities through the retention of user fees. Under the Operation and Maintenance and Mississippi River and Tributaries accounts, the Budget provides a total of $274 million for recreation activities in 2009.

This appropriation funds studies to determine the need, engineering feasibility, and economic and environmental return to the Nation, of potential solutions to water and related land resource problems; and funds preconstruction engineering and design, data collection, interagency coordination, and research. Since the Corps civil works program already has a large backlog of ongoing construction work, the Budget limits funding for the study and design of additional projects and focuses resources on the projects with the best prospects for providing a high net economic or environmental return to the Nation.

This revolving fund provides for the acquisition, operation, and maintenance of plant and equipment used by the civil works program and for temporary financing of services chargeable to the civil works program. The fund also initially finances district operating expenses which the districts later reimburse with project-specific funds. In addition, payments are made into the fund when other agencies or entities use plant and equipment acquired by the fund.

The Harbor Maintenance Trust Fund is authorized under the Harbor Maintenance Revenue Act of 1986 (P.L. 99-662, Title XIV), as amended. Revenue is derived from receipts from a 0.125 percent ad valorem tax imposed upon commercial users of specified U.S. ports, Saint Lawrence Seaway tolls, and investment interest. The Budget shows all activity related to the Harbor Maintenance Trust Fund as occurring within the Operation and Maintenance account.

The Harbor Maintenance Revenue Act authorized expenditures from this fund to finance up to 100 percent of Corps harbor operation and maintenance costs, including the operation and maintenance of Great Lakes navigation projects. The fund fully finances the operation and maintenance of the Saint Lawrence Seaway Development Corporation. Section 201 of Public Law 104-303 authorized the fund to pay the Federal share of the costs for the construction of dredged material disposal facilities that are necessary for the operation and maintenance of coastal or inland harbors, the dredging and disposal of contaminated sediments that are in or affect the operation and maintenance of Federal navigation channels, the mitigation of impacts resulting from Federal navigation operation and maintenance activities, and the operation and maintenance of dredged material disposal facilities for which fees have been collected and deposited in the fund.

HARBOR MAINTENANCE TRUST FUND—Continued

The North American Free Trade Agreement Implementation Act (P.L. 103–182, section 683) authorized payment from the fund of administrative expenses incurred by the Department of the Treasury, the Corps, and the Department of Commerce related to administration of the harbor maintenance tax, but not to exceed $5 million in any fiscal year.

A 1995 United States Court of International Trade decision, United States Shoe Corp. v. United States (Case No. 94–11–00668), found the harbor maintenance tax unconstitutional under the export clause of the Constitution (Article I, section 9, clause 5), and enjoined the Customs Service from collecting the tax on exports. The Supreme Court affirmed that decision on March 31, 1998.

The Inland Waterways Trust Fund is authorized under the Inland Waterways Revenue Act of 1978 (P.L. 95–502), as amended by the Water Resources Development Act of 1986 (P.L. 99–662).

Revenue currently is derived from taxes imposed on fuel for commercial vessels engaged in inland waterways transportation, plus investment interest. The Administration has proposed creation of an alternative funding source to the fuel tax. It would consist of a fee imposed on commercial barges using locks operated by the United States Army Corps of Engineers. The fee would be phased in beginning October 1, 2008, with increases each year through December 31, 2012. Automatic adjustments to the fee would be made annually beginning in 2013, based on the total net assets in the Trust Fund.

The Budget shows all activity related to the Inland Waterways Trust Fund as occurring within the Construction, Operation and Maintenance, and Mississippi River and Tributaries accounts.

The fund is used to pay one half of the costs associated with the construction, replacement, expansion, and rehabilitation of Federal inland waterways projects.

The Coastal Wetlands Planning, Protection and Restoration Act (P.L. 101-646, Title III, as amended) directs the Secretary of the Interior to distribute to the Coastal Wetlands Restoration Trust Fund a portion of the amounts appropriated each fiscal year from the Sport Fish Restoration Account. The Louisiana Coastal Wetlands Conservation and Restoration Task Force, an interagency task force (consisting of the Corps, Environmental Protection Agency, Fish and Wildlife Service, Natural Resources Conservation Service, National Marine Fisheries Service, and the State of Louisiana) uses these funds to plan, set priorities, and carry out projects for the creation, protection, and restoration of coastal wetlands in the State of Louisiana.

(iii) Prior to the obligation of any Federal funds appropriated for this project on or after the date of enactment of this Act, the non-Federal sponsor shall enter into a binding agreement with the Secretary to —

(aa) Operate and maintain the project authorized by this section, the previously authorized West Bank and Vicinity and Lake Pontchartrain and Vicinity projects, and those measures of the Southeast Louisiana Urban Drainage project that are within the geographic perimeter of the West Bank and Vicinity and Lake Pontchartrain and Vicinity projects as one system (hereinafter referred as “the system”) and to pay 100 percent of the operation, maintenance, repair, replacement, and rehabilitation costs of the system;

(bb) Pay any remaining non-Federal share of the costs of construction of the system; and

(cc) Hold and save the United States free from damages due to the construction or operation and maintenance of the system, except for damages due to the fault or negligence of the United States or its contractors.

(iv) Upon written notification by the District Engineer to the non-Federal sponsor that construction of the project or a functional portion of the project is complete, the non-Federal sponsor shall commence operation and maintenance of the project or functional portion of the project, respectively. Future measures to restore components of the system to the authorized level of protection for reasons such as subsidence, sea level rise, new datum, or state-of-the art engineering will be considered a cost of construction and cost shared in accordance with paragraph (i) of this subsection if the Secretary determines that the measures are economically justified, environmentally acceptable, and technically sound.

(v) The State of Louisiana, or a single state entity established by the State, shall act as the non-Federal sponsor for any non-Federal cooperation required by this section. With the consent of the State or the single state entity, as applicable, other non-Federal public entities may act as additional non-Federal sponsors as long as the State, or single state entity, remains responsible for providing, or ensuring the provision of, any required non-Federal cooperation.

(vi) Funds provided to the State of Louisiana or coastal political subdivisions pursuant to section 384 of the Energy Policy Act of 2005 (43 U.S.C. 1356a) may be used to satisfy, in whole or part, any non-Federal cost share required by this section.

(c) Savings Clause. Nothing in this section affects authority provided in Public Law 109–148, Public Law 109–234, or Public Law 110–28 as it relates to the Corps of Engineers. (Energy and Water Development and Related Agencies Appropriations Act, 2008.)

The 2009 payment to the military retirement fund includes funds for the amortization of the unfunded liability for all retirement benefits earned by military personnel for service prior to 1985. The amortization schedule for the unfunded liability is determined by the Department of Defense Retirement Board of Actuaries. Included in the unfunded liability are the consolidated requirements of the military departments to cover retired officers and enlisted personnel of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, and Air Force, retainer pay of enlisted personnel of the Fleet Reserve of the Navy and Marine Corps, and survivors' benefits.

The 2004 National Defense Authorization Act (P.L. 108-136) created additional benefits for certain retirees who receive disability compensation from the Department of Veterans Affairs and moved the responsibility for payments under the Combat Related Special Compensation program to the Military Retirement Fund. Any additional funding requirements for retirees with service prior to 1985 will be included in this payment.

Public Law 98-94 provided for accrual funding of the military retirement system and for the establishment of a Department of Defense Military Retirement Fund in 1985. The fund has three sources of income. The first is payments from the Military Personnel accounts, which cover the accruing costs of the future retirement benefits being earned by today's service members. The second source is interest on investments of the fund. The third source is made up of two payments from the general Treasury. The first Treasury payment covers a portion of the accrued unfunded liability for all the retirees and current members who had earned benefits before the accrual funding system was set up. The second Treasury payment covers the liability for concurrent receipt of military retired pay and disability compensation paid by the Department of Veterans Affairs. This benefit was added in the 2004 National Defense Authorization Act.

The status of the fund is as follows:

Public Law 106-398 provides for accrual funding for health care to Medicare-eligible retirees. The statute establishes an accrual health care fund which has three sources of funding. The first is contributions from employing agencies, which cover the liability for future benefits accruing to current service members. The second is an annual payment from the general Treasury on the accrued unfunded liability and the third source is income from the investment of fund balances.

The agency has a currency fluctuation account that insulates its appropriation's buying power from changes in exchange rates. At the current exchange rate, ABMC would require $17.1 million to offset foreign currency fluctuations. The proposed amended appropriations language would allow updates of the foreign currency exchange rates and requirements as needed throughout the year.

The 1991 Defense Authorization Act, Public Law 101-510, created an Armed Forces Retirement Home (AFRH) Trust Fund to finance the AFRH-Washington and the AFRH-Gulfport Homes. The homes are financed by appropriations drawn from the trust fund.

The AFRH Fiscal Year 2007 Performance and Accountability Report displayed the significant progress of the AFRH over the past four years.

The Gulfport Home is being rebuilt at a cost of $240 million as a result of Hurricane Katrina. The project has a target completion date of 2010. AFRH is requesting $5.6 million from the Trust Fund to begin the planning and design efforts for renovation of the Washington Home's oldest dormitory, Scott Building, which was built in the early 1950's. The renovation will create better living conditions for residents; renew a failing building; and bring the building in line with the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA), fire codes, and other building codes.

The AFRH provides, through the Armed Forces Retirement Home—Gulfport and Armed Forces Retirement Home—Washington, residences and related services for certain retired and former members of the Armed Forces.

The average number of members receiving domiciliary and hospital care are shown below:

The Selective Service System (SSS) continues to register men as they reach age 18, as required by law, and maintain an active data base of registrant records. Should the Nation return to conscription for a national emergency, the Agency would have the first draftees at military processing centers 193 days after a mobilization. The Agency also manages a program for the Nation's conscientious objectors. In cooperation with the Department of Defense, all Reserve Force Officers participating in the SSS program are being reduced to 200 in FY 2008 and 150 in FY 2009 to reflect reduced readiness requirements and the Military Conversion initiative.

The SSS will continue to strengthen its partnership with the Armed Services. The Agency will continue its national initiative to offer every young man that receives a registration acknowledgment, almost two million annually, the opportunity to volunteer for the military services.

In addition to improving its business processes and national registration compliance statistics, while helping to sustain an "all volunteer" military recruiting effort, the Agency is incorporating advanced information technology architectures to ensure faster, more accurate registration processing and better customer services via the Internet. Savings will be directed to additional automation improvements.

This appropriation supports EPA's core programs by providing funds for Office of Inspector General (OIG) audit, evaluation, and investigative products and advisory services. These products and services contribute substantially to improved environmental quality and human health and improved business practices and accountability. Specifically, the OIG performs contract audits and investigations which focus on costs claimed by contractors and assesses the effectiveness of contract management. Assistance agreement audits and investigations evaluate the award, administration, and costs of assistance agreements. Program audits, evaluations, and investigations determine the extent to which the desired results or benefits envisioned by the Administration and Congress are being achieved, and identify activities that could undermine the integrity, efficiency, and effectiveness of Agency programs. Financial statement audits review financial systems and statements to ensure that adequate controls are in place and the Agency's accounting information is timely, accurate, reliable and useful, and complies with applicable laws and regulations. Systems audits review the economy, efficiency, and effectiveness of operations by examining the Agency's support systems for achieving environmental goals. Additional funds for audit, evaluation and investigative activities associated with the Superfund Trust Fund are appropriated under that account and transferred to the Inspector General account to allow for proper accounting. This appropriation also supports activities under the Working Capital Fund.

This appropriation finances salary, travel, science, technology, environmental monitoring, research, and development activities including laboratory and center supplies, certain operating expenses (including activities under the Working Capital Fund), contracts, grants, intergovernmental agreements, and purchases of scientific equipment. These activities provide the scientific and technology basis for EPA policy and regulatory development actions.

Superfund research costs are appropriated in the Hazardous Substance Superfund appropriation and transferred to this account to allow for proper accounting. A portion of funding provided through this account to support the mobile sources program is to be derived from fees charged for motor vehicle engine certifications that are deposited in the Environmental Services special fund.

This appropriation supports core Agency programs and each of the Agency's five goals. Specifically in 2009, our emphasis will be placed on the following:

Clean Air and Global Climate Change.—To protect and improve the air so it is healthy to breathe and to reduce risks to human health and the environment, EPA will conduct a range of science and technology activities. These include research on criteria air pollutants (ozone, particulate matter, carbon monoxide, sulfur dioxide, nitrogen oxides, and lead) to develop the scientific basis for EPA's national ambient air quality standards. EPA also will support research on the effects to human health of toxic air pollutants as well as risk assessment methodologies. EPA will develop and implement regulatory programs that will significantly reduce emissions from highway and non-road sources. EPA will implement the renewable fuels provisions of the Energy Policy Act of 2005 (P.L. 109-79) and the Presidents Executive Order on greenhouse gas emissions from motor vehicles, nonroad vehicles and nonroad engines. In addition, EPA will develop tools for State and local governments and Tribes to use in developing clean air plans to achieve air quality standards. The Agency also aims to improve indoor environments through the provision of technical support and analysis to understand indoor air effects and the identification of potential health risks.

Clean and Safe Water.—To ensure drinking water is safe, restore and maintain oceans, protect watersheds and their aquatic ecosystems, support economic and recreational activities, and provide healthy habitat for fish, plants, and wildlife, EPA will conduct research to support development of water quality and safe drinking water standards. A concerted effort will be made to help small communities meet the new drinking water standards for arsenic, microbial contaminants, and disinfection byproducts. EPA will work with States, Tribes, drinking water and wastewater utilities, and other partners to enhance the security of water utilities. In 2009, EPA will continue the Water Security Initiative, a standardized, cost-effective approach that the water sector can implement to provide for coordinated surveillance and monitoring of drinking water systems. The Water Security Initiative will provide early warning of key threat agents. Interim guidance issued in 2007 and 2008 for design and consequence management will be refined to incorporate learning from the new pilot systems. Additionally, EPA will provide outreach and technical support to all water utilities serving greater than 100,000 people, including support for utility participation in emergency response exercises. In 2009, EPA will continue the "Water Infrastructure for the 21st Century" Initiative, which will evaluate innovative technologies for improving management of water infrastructure. EPA will also conduct research on effective beach evaluation tools, and work to enhance understanding of the structure and function of aquatic systems through the development of improved aquatic ecocriteria.

Land Preservation and Restoration.—To preserve and restore the land, EPA will conduct research to provide improved methods for site characterization, risk assessment and exposure analysis, mitigation approaches, and multimedia modeling. This research program also provides regional and site-specific technical support. Research will advance EPA's ability to accurately characterize the risks posed by contaminated sediments and determine the range and scientific foundation for remedy selection options. Groundwater research will focus on the transport of contaminants in that medium and the subsequent intrusion of contaminant vapors. Material management research will address nano-material fate and transport, brownfields decision support, alternative landfill covers and potential benefits of landfill bioreactors.

Healthy Communities and Ecosystems.—To adequately protect or restore the health of communities and ecosystems using integrated and comprehensive approaches and partnerships, the Agency will conduct research in the areas of human health, ecosystem services, mercury, global change, pesticides and toxics, endocrine disruptors, computational toxicology, nanotechnology, and Homeland Security. The Agency also ensures a safe food supply by reviewing and licensing pesticides. Strong science allows the identification of the most important sources of risk to human health and the environment as well as the best means to detect, abate, and avoid possible environmental problems, and thereby guides EPA's priorities, policies, and deployment of resources.

Compliance and Environmental Stewardship.—To improve environmental performance through compliance with environmental requirements, preventing pollution, and promoting environmental stewardship, and to protect human health and the environment by encouraging innovation and providing incentives for governments, businesses, and the public that promote environmental stewardship, EPA will conduct research on decision support tools, sustainability metrics, and new technology development. This research includes Life Cycle Analysis techniques that address the sustainability of alternative policy options and development of metrics for use in technology evaluation and watershed management. The National Enforcement Investigations Center is the primary source of forensics expertise in EPA. It provides technical services not available elsewhere to support the needs of EPA Headquarters and Regional offices, other Federal agencies, and state and local environmental enforcement organizations.

Enabling and Support Programs.—Enabling and Support Programs provide the people, facilities and systems necessary to operate the programs funded by the Science and Technology appropriations (S&T). The offices and the functions they perform are: Administration and Resources Management (facilities infrastructure and operations) and Environmental Information (IT/data management).

This appropriation includes funds for salaries, travel, contracts, grants, and cooperative agreements for pollution abatement, control, and compliance activities and administrative activities of the operating programs, including activities under the Working Capital Fund.

This appropriation supports core Agency programs and each of the Agency's five goals. Specifically in 2009, EPA will emphasize the following:

Clean Air and Global Climate Change.—To ensure that every American community has safe and healthy air to breathe, EPA will apply a variety of approaches and appropriate tools. EPA will develop and implement strategies to attain ambient air quality standards for ozone and particulate matter and reduce regional haze through regional approaches where significant transport of pollutants occurs. EPA will continue to develop and issue national technology-based and risk-based standards to reduce the quantity of toxic air pollutants emitted from industrial and manufacturing processes, as well as from urban sources. EPA will also develop control measures for sources that are best regulated at the Federal level. The Acid Rain program will continue its market-based approach to achieving reduced emissions of sulfur dioxide and nitrogen oxides primarily from electric utilities. The market-based approach will also be used in other programs, such as the Clean Air Interstate Rule, to reduce harmful emissions.

EPA will continue to develop and implement voluntary outreach and partnership programs with State, tribal, and local governments to improve indoor air quality and reduce potential risks to the public in homes, schools, and workplaces. In addition, EPA will develop and promulgate standards, regulations and guidelines to reduce exposure from radiation sources. EPA will continue its domestic and international efforts to limit the production and use of ozone-depleting substances and develop safe alternative compounds under the Montreal Protocol. EPA also will continue its partnerships with businesses and other sectors to help reduce greenhouse gas intensity and contribute to cleaner air. The voluntary government-industry partnership programs are designed to capitalize on the opportunities that consumers, businesses, and organizations have for making sound investments in efficient equipment, policies, practices, and transportation choices. EPA will analyze ways to reduce greenhouse gases and provide leadership for international initiatives. EPA will continue to coordinate the implementation of the Methane-to-Markets initiative designed to expand global efforts to capture and use methane as a clean alternative energy source. The Agency will also participate with other agencies in the Asia-Pacific Partnership on Clean Development and Climate to help expand global efforts to increase energy efficiency and reduce greenhouse gas emissions.

Clean and Safe Water.—To protect and restore the Nation's surface waters and provide the American public with water that is safe to drink, EPA will focus on several key strategies. EPA's strategy for helping systems provide safe drinking water over the next several years includes developing or revising drinking water standards, supporting States, Tribes, and water systems in implementing standards, promoting sustainable management of water infrastructure, and protecting sources of drinking water from contamination. To better address the complexity of the remaining water quality challenges, EPA will promote local watershed approaches to achieving the best and most cost-effective solutions to local and regional water problems. EPA will facilitate the ecosystem-scale protection and restoration of natural areas by supporting continuing efforts of all 28 National Estuary Program estuaries to implement their Comprehensive Conservation and Management Plans to protect and restore estuarine resources. EPA will continue support for ecosystem management and partnership collaboration through the three Great Waterbody programs—Great Lakes, Chesapeake Bay, and Gulf of Mexico. To protect and build on the gains of the past, EPA will focus on its core water programs. To maximize the impact of each dollar, EPA will continue to strengthen its vital partnerships with States, Tribes, local governments, and other parties that are also working toward the common goal of improving the Nation's waters. To leverage progress through innovation, EPA will promote water quality trading, water efficiency, and other market based approaches. EPA will help States implement nationally consistent water quality monitoring programs which will eventually allow the Agency to make a credible national assessment of water quality. High quality, current monitoring data is critical for EPA, States, Tribes and others to: make watershed-based decisions; develop necessary water quality standards and total maximum daily loads; and accurately and consistently portray conditions and trends. In addition, EPA will continue work with the Department of Energy to support the safe deployment of carbon dioxide capture and storage technologies as a climate mitigation strategy.

Land Preservation and Restoration.—To preserve and restore the land, EPA will use the most effective waste management and cleanup methods available. EPA will reduce adverse effects to land by reducing waste generation at its source, recycling waste, managing waste effectively by preventing spills and releases of toxic materials, and cleaning up contaminated properties. To reduce waste generation and increase recycling, EPA will (1) establish and expand partnerships with businesses, industries, Tribes, States, communities and consumers; (2) stimulate infrastructure development and environmentally responsible behavior by product manufacturers, users and disposers; and (3) help businesses, government, institutions and consumers reduce waste generation and increase recycling through education, outreach, training and technical assistance. EPA will continue the Resource Conservation Challenge (RCC) as a major national effort to find flexible, yet more protective ways to conserve our valuable natural resources through waste reduction, energy recovery, and recycling. Recognizing that some hazardous wastes cannot be completely eliminated or recycled, EPA will work to reduce the risks of exposure to hazardous wastes by maintaining a cradle-to-grave approach to waste management. EPA will also continue to work with States in order to bring all underground storage tank systems into compliance and keep them in compliance with the release detection and release prevention requirements outlined in the Energy Policy Act of 2005. EPA's cleanup programs have set a national goal of returning formerly contaminated sites to long-term, sustainable and productive use. This goal creates greater impetus for selecting and implementing remedies that, in addition to providing clear environmental benefits, will support future land use and provide greater economic and social benefits. To further accomplish the national cleanup goals, the Agency will forge partnerships and develop outreach and educational strategies.

Healthy Communities and Ecosystems.—To protect, sustain or restore the health of people, communities and ecosystems, EPA will focus on geographic areas with human and ecological communities at most risk. EPA is working to protect, sustain, and restore the health of natural habitats and ecosystems by identifying and evaluating problem areas, developing tools, and improving community capacity to address problems.

To ensure that the foods the American public eats will be free from unsafe levels of pesticide residues, EPA will apply strict health-based standards to the registration of pesticides for use on food or animal feed and ensure that older pesticides meet current health standards. EPA will also work to expedite and increase the registration of safer pesticides and to decrease the use of pesticides with the highest potential to cause adverse effects. EPA intends to reduce potential human and environmental risks from commercial and residential exposure to pesticides through programs that focus on farmworker protection, endangered species protection, environmental stewardship, and integrated pest management.

In FY 2009, EPA through its toxics program will continue work to alleviate health risks from exposure to lead-based paint and other sources of lead in the environment, carry out voluntary stewardship programs for chemicals of special concern such as perfluorooctanoic acid (PFOA) and nanoscale materials that are subject to TSCA requirements, make screening-level data on high production volume (HPV) chemicals available to the public, and pursue risk-based decisions on HPV chemicals and hazard-based decisions on moderate production volume (MPV) chemicals through the Security and Prosperity Partnership (SPP) initiative. The Agency will also support the operations and management of the Brownfields program including training for organizations representing complementers of the Brownfields law and technical support for communities using federal funding to address general issues of vacant properties and infrastructure decisions.

The United States will coordinate with other nations in multilateral efforts to protect the environment and human health. EPA will continue to promote formal bilateral and multilateral environmental agreements with key countries, execute environmental components of key foreign policy initiatives, and engage in regional and global negotiations aimed at reducing potential environmental risks via formal and informal agreements. EPA will continue to cooperate with other countries to ensure that domestic and international environmental laws, policies, and priorities are recognized and implemented and, where appropriate, promoted within the multilateral development assistance and trading system.

The unprecedented changes in information technology over the past few years, combined with public demand for information, are altering the way the Agency, Tribes and States collect, manage, analyze, use, secure, and provide access to quality environmental information. EPA is working with the States and Tribes to strengthen our information quality, leverage information maintained by other government organizations, and develop new tools that provide the public with simultaneous access to multiple data sets, allowing users to understand local, tribal, State, regional, and national environmental conditions. Key to achieving information quality will be the further development of the National Environmental Information Exchange Network, which is primarily an affiliation between EPA and the States and Tribes. EPA will continue to reduce reporting burden, improve data quality, and accelerate data publications by accelerating the replacement of paper-based submissions with electronic reporting under the Toxic Release Inventory (TRI).

Compliance and Environmental Stewardship.—EPA will ensure full compliance with laws intended to protect human health and the environment. The Agency will use new and innovative approaches for compliance assistance and compliance incentives, as well as traditional enforcement activities, to promote compliance by the regulated community; set risk-based compliance and enforcement priorities; and strategically plan and target activities to address environmental problems associated with industry sectors and communities.

Preventing pollution at the source is the Agency's preferred strategy for reducing risk and minimizing environmental impacts. The EPA works closely with industry to build pollution prevention into the design of manufacturing processes and products; and also partners with States, Tribes, and governments at all levels to find simple, voluntary, and cost-effective pollution prevention solutions. Through waste minimization partnerships, the Agency will reduce the volume of hazardous chemicals in industrial waste streams and the volume of waste generated.

Enabling and Support Programs.—Enabling and Support Programs (ESPs) provide centralized management services and support to the Agency's various environmental programs.

The offices and the functions they perform within the Environmental Programs and Management appropriation are: the Offices of Administration and Resources Management (facilities infrastructure and operations, acquisition management, human resources management services and management of financial assistance grants/IAGs); Environmental Information (exchange network, information security, IT/data management); the Administrator (administrative law, civil rights/Title VI compliance, congressional, intergovernmental and external relations, regional science and technology, science advisory board); the Chief Financial Officer (strategic planning, annual planning and budgeting, financial services, financial management, analysis, and accountability); and, General Counsel (alternative dispute resolution, legal advice). Since these centralized services provide support across the Agency, resources for the ESPs are allocated across the Agency's appropriations, goals and objectives.

This appropriation supports core Agency programs and each of the Agency’s five goals through grants to States, Tribes and other partners. However, EPA faces difficulties in getting States, which receive over a third of EPA’s budget, to report consistent, meaningful performance information. To address this issue, EPA will develop standardized templates for State grants that all States will use to submit their State grant agreements, including Performance Partnerships. The new template will clearly link to EPA’s strategic plan, reducing or eliminating the need to translate State workplan information into EPA’s strategic and annual goals. This action will increase accountability and make it easier to compare and analyze performance data over time and across States. A similar initiative is also underway for Tribal grants.

Clean Air and Global Climate Change.—To ensure that every American community has safe and healthy air to breathe, EPA will offer media-specific and multi-media Performance Partnership grants, and technical assistance to States and Tribes. This financial and technical aid will assist them in the development of their Clean Air Plans and support solutions that address local air needs. EPA will provide funds to States under section 105 of the Clean Air Act to improve air monitoring networks to obtain better data on emissions of criteria pollutants and air toxics. EPA will also provide funds to implement the clean diesel grant provisions of Title VII, Subtitle G of the Energy Policy Act of 2005 (P.L. 109–79). Preference for these competitive grants will be given to applicants in areas that have not attained National Ambient Air Quality Standards.

Clean and Safe Water.—This Agency goal is to ensure people are provided clean and safe water to drink. In support of this goal, EPA will provide capitalization grants for Clean Water State Revolving Funds (SRFs). The SRFs make low interest loans to communities and include a set-aside for Tribes and Alaska Native Villages to construct wastewater treatment infrastructure, in addition to other projects that enhance water quality. As of early 2008, the Federal Government has invested $25 billion in grants to help capitalize the 51 SRFs. With the required State match, additional State contributions, and funds from program leveraging, funds made available for such loans total $65 billion. EPA’s goal is for the Clean Water SRFs to attain an average long-term revolving level of $3.4 billion annually.

Capitalization grants are also provided for the Drinking Water SRFs, which make low interest loans to public water systems and to Tribes and Alaska Native Villages to upgrade drinking water infrastructure to help them provide safe drinking water. The Administration committed to capitalizing the Drinking Water SRF through 2018, with the goal of an average annual long-term revolving level of $1.2 billion.

Direct grants are also provided to help address the significant water and wastewater infrastructure needs of Alaska Native Villages. To address concerns identified in program reviews, the Agency has implemented a management plan which identifies delayed and/or stalled projects and redirects resources from stalled projects to those that are ready to proceed maximizing the Federal investment in this program.

EPA will support its partnerships with States and Tribes through media-specific and multi-media, and/or Performance Partnership grants to: (1) increase the number of community drinking water systems that meet all existing health-based standards, (2) protect watersheds by reducing point and nonpoint source pollution, (3) decrease the net loss of wetlands, and (4) address agricultural and urban runoff and storm water. EPA will work with its State and Tribal partners to develop and implement broad-based and integrated monitoring and assessment programs that strengthen their water quality standards, improve decision-making, target restoration within the watershed, address significant stressors, and report on condition

Land Preservation and Restoration.—Under the Resource Conservation and Recovery Act (RCRA), EPA provides grants to States to strengthen their ability to implement hazardous waste programs. EPA also provides financial and technical assistance to eligible Tribal governments and inter-tribal consortia. In FY 2009, EPA will provide grants or cooperative agreements for new activities authorized by Title XV, Subtitle B of the Energy Policy Act of 2005 that are not otherwise provided for in Section 2007 of the Solid Waste Disposal Act (SWDA). There will also be direct assistance through media-specific, and multimedia and/or Performance Partnership grants to enable Tribes to implement hazardous waste programs.

Healthy Communities and Ecosystems.—This Agency goal is to protect and restore America’s water bodies, reduce exposure to lead, ensure proper pesticide use, support brownfields projects, mitigate cross-border risks and provide quality environmental information.

EPA provides grants to assist States, Tribes and partners with worker safety activities, protection of endangered species and water sources, and promotion of environmental stewardship. To protect, sustain or restore the health of people, communities and ecosystems, EPA will focus on geographic areas with human and ecological communities at most risk. EPA is working to protect, sustain, and restore the health of natural habitats and ecosystems by identifying and evaluating problem areas, developing tools, and improving community capacity to address problems. EPA will help contribute to the President’s goal of increasing wetlands through its innovative partner-based wetlands and stream corridor restoration programs.

EPA will also fund brownfields projects resulting in assessments and cleanup activities that assist communities in paving the way for the productive reuse of contaminated properties and abandoned sites.

The Agency will provide direct grant assistance for water and wastewater infrastructure projects on the U.S.-Mexico border. EPA has met its NAFTA commitment to provide a total of $700 million for drinking water and wastewater infrastructure needs in the area. However, in recognition of the continuing environmental and public health needs in the border area, the budget continues funding for these activities.

EPA plans to provide $11 million to States, territories, Tribes, and inter-tribal consortia to help them develop their information management and technology capabilities. The purpose of this support is two-fold: to assist the Agency in providing ready access to real-time environmental information and to allow States and Tribes to better integrate and share their environmental information.

Compliance and Environmental Stewardship.—To promote compliance with laws intended to protect human health and the environment, EPA will offer media specific and multi-media funding to States and Tribes for compliance assurance activities including compliance assistance and incentives, inspections and enforcement activities. EPA also plans to offer media-specific and multimedia, and/or Performance Partnership grants to States and Tribes, focusing on pollution prevention.

EPA will continue to provide grant assistance to States, territories, the District of Columbia and Tribes to develop and implement authorized programs for lead paint remediation, including programs to train and certify individuals engaged in remediation activities. Another priority for FY 2009 will be the implementation of a new regulation to address lead-safe work practices for renovation, repair and painting activities.

EPA received authority to establish a Working Capital Fund (WCF) and was designated a pilot franchise fund under Public Law 103-356, the Government Management and Reform Act of 1994. The Agency received permanent authority for the WCF in P.L. 105-65, which, among other things, is intended to increase competition for governmental administrative services. EPA's WCF became operational in 1997 and funds three main activities: information technology and telecommunications operations, managed by the Office of Environmental Information; Agency postage costs, managed by the Office of Administration; and the core accounting system, managed by the Office of the Chief Financial Officer. The 2009 amount reflects only base resources and may change during the year as programmatic needs change.

This appropriation provides funds for the implementation of the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation and Liability Act of 1980, as amended (CERCLA) including activities under the Working Capital Fund. This appropriation supports core Agency programs in four of the Agency's five goals. Specifically in 2009, emphasis will be placed on the following:

Land Preservation and Restoration.—To preserve and restore land and to protect human health and the environment, EPA will prevent and reduce the risks posed by releases of harmful substances and will clean up and restore contaminated sites to beneficial use. EPA will apply the most effective methods to control the risks of harmful substances, improve response capabilities, and maximize the effectiveness of response and cleanup actions. EPA's cleanup and response work at contaminated sites will address environmental problems, such as contaminated soil and groundwater, in order to reduce human exposures to hazardous pollutants and provide long-term human health protection. EPA will ensure that all releases of harmful substances to the environment are appropriately addressed by responding to incidents and providing technical support. To effectively prepare for and respond to incidents of national significance, EPA will improve decontamination readiness, continue to support a nationwide environmental laboratory network, and maintain a highly skilled, trained, and equipped response workforce. EPA will conduct research to improve methods and models and provide technical support to accelerate scientifically defensible and cost-effective decisions for cleanup at complex contaminated sites in accordance with CERCLA. EPA will also work to maximize responsible parties participation in site cleanups while promoting fairness in the enforcement process, and pursue greater recovery of EPA's cleanup costs. To further carry out the responsibilities of CERCLA, EPA will also allocate funds from its appropriation to Federal agency partners.

Compliance and Environmental Stewardship.—EPA will investigate and refer for prosecution criminal and civil violations of the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability Act of 1980.

Enabling and Support Programs.—Enabling and Support Programs (ESPs) provide centralized management services and support to the Agency's various environmental programs.

The offices and the functions they perform within the Superfund appropriation are: the Offices of Administration and Resources Management (facilities infrastructure and operations, acquisition management, human resources management services and management of financial assistance grants/IGAs); Environmental Information (exchange network, information security, IT/data management); the Chief Financial Officer (strategic planning, annual planning and budgeting, financial services, financial management, analysis, and accountability) and General Counsel (alternative dispute resolution, legal advice). Because these centralized services provide support across the Agency, resources for the ESPs are allocated across the Agency's appropriations, goals and objectives.

The Leaking Underground Storage Tank (LUST) Trust Fund, authorized by the Superfund Amendments and Reauthorization Act of 1986, as amended by the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1990, the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, and the Energy Policy Act of 2005, provides funds for responding to releases from leaking underground petroleum tanks, including activities under the Working Capital Fund. The Trust Fund is financed by a 0.1 cent per gallon tax on motor fuels, which will expire after September 30, 2011.

LUST funds are allocated to the states through cooperative agreements to clean up those sites posing the greatest threat to human health and the environment as authorized under Section 9003(h) of the Solid Waste Disposal Act (SWDA). Funds are also used for grants to non-state entities under section 8001 of the Resources Conservation and Recovery Act. Federally-recognized Indian Tribes receive grant funding under P.L. 105-276. EPA supports oversight, cleanup and enforcement programs which are implemented by the states. LUST Trust Fund dollars can be used for State-lead cleanups and for state oversight of responsible party cleanups. In addition, the Energy Policy Act of 2005 expanded the authorized activities for the underground storage tank program.

This appropriation supports core Agency programs and two of the Agency's five goals. Specifically in 2009, emphasis will be placed on the following:

Land Preservation & Restoration.—The Leaking Underground Storage Tanks (LUST) program promotes rapid and effective responses to releases from Federally-regulated underground storage tanks (USTs) containing petroleum by enhancing State, local, and Tribal enforcement and response capability. In 2009, EPA's LUST Program priorities will include: increasing the efficiency of LUST cleanups; addressing contaminants of concern; and promoting the continued use, reuse, and long-term management of LUST sites. EPA will help States and Tribes improve the LUST cleanup performance by targeting source water areas using a drinking water mapping application, continuing to develop and promote the use of innovative tools such as multi-site and geographical cleanup approaches, and optimizing the use of cleanup technologies and streamline cleanup decisions and processes. EPA also will continue its efforts to monitor the soundness of state cleanup funds and will continue to work with the states to complete cleanups and reduce the backlog of cleanups not yet completed.

Enabling and Support Programs.—Enabling and Support Programs provide the infrastructure of people, facilities and systems necessary to operate the programs funded by the Leaking Underground Storage Tank appropriation. The offices and the functions they perform are: Administration and Resources Management (facilities infrastructure and operations, acquisition management, and human resources management services); Environmental Information (IT/data management); and, the Chief Financial Officer (strategic planning, annual planning and budgeting, financial services, financial management, analysis, and accountability).

This appropriation provides for EPA's responsibilities for prevention, preparedness, and response activities authorized under the Federal Water Pollution Control Act, as amended by the Oil Pollution Act of 1990 (OPA), including activities under the Working Capital Fund. This appropriation supports core Agency programs and the Agency's waste management goal. Specifically in 2009, emphasis will be placed on the following:

Land Preservation and Restoration.—EPA will work to ensure that regulated facilities comply with the oil spill prevention, control and countermeasure provisions of the OPA. EPA will also direct response actions when appropriate. Funding of oil spill cleanup actions is provided through the Department of Homeland Security under the Oil Spill Liability Trust Fund. Oil spill research focuses on test protocol development, fate and transport modeling, and remediation.

Enabling and Support Programs.—Enabling and Support Programs provide the infrastructure of people, facilities and systems necessary to operate the programs funded by the Oil Spill Response appropriation. The offices and the functions they perform are: Administration and Resources Management (facilities infrastructure and operations) and Environmental Information (IT/data management).

The following three initiatives provide business operating efficiencies and enhance the President's ability to manage resources needed to meet emerging priorities in a timely manner.

1) As part of the 2009 Budget, the Administration is requesting a consolidation and financial realignment of the following accounts that directly support the President. The initiative would consolidate the annual appropriations of the Compensation of the President and White House Office, Executive Residence, White House Repair and Restoration, the Office of Policy Development, the Council of Economic Advisers, the National Security Council, and the Office of Administration, into a single appropriation called "The White House."

2) The Administration is requesting a Title VII general provision that would provide for a 10 percent transfer authority among the following Executive Office of the President accounts: The White House, Special Assistance to the President and Official Residence of the Vice President, Office of Management and Budget, United States Trade Representative, Office of National Drug Control Policy, Council on Environmental Quality, and the Office of Science and Technology Policy. Transfers from the Special Assistance to the President and the Official Residence of the Vice President account are subject to the approval of the Vice President.

3) As part of the effort to centrally administer common enterprise services for the Executive Office of the President, the Administration is requesting the move of rent funding for the Office of Management and Budget and the Office of National Drug Control Policy into the Office of Administration program.

Funding for enterprise service costs supporting Executive Office of the President accounts (e.g., transportation subsidies, rent-based federal protective services, flexible spending account administrative fees, and health unit operations) is requested in the Office of Administration program.

This White House account, with estimated 2009 costs, includes: Compensation of the President and the White House Office ($52.9 million), the Executive Residence at the White House ($13.4 million), White House Repair and Restoration ($1.6 million), Council of Economic Advisers ($4.1 million), Office of Policy Development ($3.6 million), National Security Council ($9.0 million), and the Office of Administration ($105.9 million).

The 2008 funding and 2009 appropriations request for the Privacy and Civil Liberties Oversight Board is reflected in the "Other Independent Agencies" section of this Appendix.

The Office of National Drug Control Policy (ONDCP), established by the Anti-Drug Abuse Act of 1988, and reauthorized by the Office of National Drug Control Policy Reauthorization Act of 2006, is charged with developing policies, objectives and priorities for the National Drug Control Program. In addition, ONDCP administers the Counterdrug Technology Assessment Center, the National Youth Anti-Drug Media Campaign, the High Intensity Drug Trafficking Areas Program, and the Drug Free Communities Program. (Descriptions of these programs are found in the Federal Drug Control Programs section of this Appendix.)

For 2009, the account provides funding for personnel compensation, travel, and other basic operations of the Office. As part of the effort to centrally administer common enterprise services for the Executive Office of the President, funding to cover ONDCPs costs for transportation subsidies, rent-based federal protective services, flexible spending account administrative fees, and health unit operations has been requested by the Office of Administration (OA). In addition, the OA budget requests moving space rental funding from ONDCP to OA. The account also provides funding for general policy research to support the formulation and evaluation of the National Drug Control Strategy.

In order to provide for enhanced flexibility in allocating resources and staff in support of the President and the Vice President, and permit a more rapid response to changing national needs and priorities, the Budget request contains a Title VII general provision that provides for a 10 percent transfer authority between this account and other accounts in the Executive Office of the President.

The Office of Science and Technology Policy (OSTP) provides advice to the President concerning policies in science and technology and on the use of science and technology in addressing important national problems. The OSTP operations include support to other Executive Office of the President organizations on issues with science and technology considerations; with the Office of Management and Budget, review and analysis of and recommendations on research and development budgets for all Federal agencies; coordination of research and development programs of the Federal Government; coordination of the implementation of a number of important international science and technology agreements; and other activities necessary to carry out the duties, functions, and activities described in Public Law 94-282, the National Science and Technology Policy, Organization, and Priorities Act of 1976. OSTP also provides support for the National Science and Technology Council and the President's Council of Advisors on Science and Technology.

Funding to cover OSTP's costs of transit subsidies and flexible spending account administrative fees has been requested by the Office of Administration as part of the effort to centrally administer common enterprise services for the Executive Office of the President. In order to provide for enhanced flexibility in allocating resources and staff in support of the President and the Vice President, and permit a more rapid response to changing national needs and priorities, the Budget contains a Title VII general provision that provides for a 10 percent transfer authority between this account and other accounts in the Executive Office of the President.

Request for the Science and Technology Policy Institute: In 1990, Congress authorized a new Federally Funded Research and Development Center (FFRDC), the Science and Technology Policy Institute (STPI), to provide analytical support to OSTP, 42 U.S.C. 6686. Through this statute, Congress set forth STPI's duties, directed the National Science Foundation (NSF) to sponsor the FFRDC, and for OSTP to initiate its studies. Currently run by the Institute for Defense Analyses, STPI provides objective technical analyses in support of OSTP's work. STPI analyzes various science and technology issues to help OSTP provide sound advice to the Administration's policy-making processes, and to better manage and coordinate the Federal R&D enterprise. Other Federal agencies also utilize STPI's services. The 2009 Budget requests $3.04 million for STPI. Because NSF sponsors STPI, OSTP requests that this amount be fully funded within the NSF budget in support of OSTP's mission.

The Spectrum Relocation Fund, created by the Commercial Spectrum Enhancement Act of 2004, streamlines the process for reimbursing Federal agencies that must relocate wireless communications systems from Federal spectrum that has been reallocated to commercial use. Auction receipts associated with the reallocated spectrum from the Advanced Wireless Services spectrum license auction were deposited into the Fund in December 2006. To expedite clearing of the auctioned spectrum, the statute provides mandatory spending authority for approved relocation payments. The Office of Management and Budget (OMB) administers the Fund in consultation with the National Telecommunications and Information Administration (NTIA) of the Department of Commerce. By law, unused funds will revert to the general fund of the Treasury no later than December 2014. Actual relocation timelines vary by agency and are approved by OMB, in consultation with NTIA. The estimated mandatory spending is $1,044 million from 2007 to 2012, of which all but $58 million was transferred on a non-expenditure basis, and was made available to agencies beginning in March 2007. The Budget includes a receipt account for the deposit of auction proceeds, as well as a program account to provide reimbursement for the relocation of Federal systems.

This appropriation request of $8,000,000 for "Administrative Support" for the Office of Administration is for costs of processing of records of the departing President and Vice President under the Presidential Records Act for transfer to the National Archives and Records Administration and other transition-related administrative expenses. This amount is separate from the appropriation request for "Expenses, Presidential Transition" of the General Services Administration that funds transition expenses under the Presidential Transition Act of 1963 (3 U.S.C. 102 note) for the departing President and Vice President and the President-elect and Vice President-elect, which appears elsewhere in this Budget Appendix. This amount also is in addition to the amount appropriated within "The White House" for the expenses of the Office of Administration.

This revolving fund provides for real property management and related activities, including operation, maintenance, repair of Federally owned buildings, and the construction of Federal buildings, courthouses and land ports of entry. Expenses of the Federal Buildings Fund (FBF) are financed from rental charges assessed to occupants of GSA-controlled space. Rent assessments, by law, approximate commercial rates for comparable space and services. Rental income is augmented by appropriations to the fund when new construction needs exceed the resources available for investment within the fund.

The following table reports rent and other income to the fund.

The FBF consists of the following activities:

Construction and acquisition of facilities.—This activity provides for the acquisition of space through the construction or purchase of facilities and prospectus-level extensions to existing buildings. All costs directly attributable to site acquisition, construction, and the full range of design and construction services and management and inspection of construction projects are funded under this activity.

Repairs and alterations.—This activity provides for repairs and alterations of public buildings as well as associated design and construction services. Protection of the Government's investment, health and safety of building occupants, transfer of agencies from leased space, and cost effectiveness are the principal criteria used in establishing priorities. Primary consideration is given to repairs to prevent deterioration and damage to buildings, their support systems, and operating equipment. This activity also provides for conversion of existing facilities and non-prospectus extensions.

Installment acquisition payments.—This activity provides payments for liabilities incurred under purchase contract authority and lease purchase arrangements. Periodic payments cover principal, interest, and other requirements.

Rental of space.—This activity provides for the acquisition of space through the lease of buildings from private sector landlords. Including space occupied by Federal agencies in U.S. Postal Service facilities, the FBF will provide an estimated 182 million rentable square feet in 2008 and 188 million rentable square feet in 2009.

Building operations.—This activity provides services for Government-owned and leased facilities, including cleaning, utilities and fuel, maintenance, miscellaneous services (such as moving, evaluation of new materials and equipment, and field supervision), and general management and administration of all real property related programs including salaries and benefits paid from the FBF. The following table provides additional detail regarding the 2008 and 2009 building operations program (estimated square feet and expenses in millions):

This appropriation covers relocation costs involved in moving agencies from valuable underutilized property, targeted for public sale, to facilities determined to be more economically suitable to their needs. Relocation and disposal is considered when the benefit/cost ratio is at least 2:1. The sale of these valuable underutilized properties would provide significant revenue to the Treasury and would far outweigh the relocation costs involved.

No appropriation is requested for this program in 2009. GSA will solicit relocation proposals from agencies.

This full cost recovery revolving fund provides for the acquisition of information technology solutions, telecommunications products and services, professional services, travel and transportation services, vehicles, and supplies for Federal agencies. Expenses of the Acquisition Services Fund (ASF) are financed through receipts from customer Federal agencies, pursuant to P.L. 109-313. The ASF is organized around four major business portfolios that deliver total solutions to customer agencies. These portfolios are: Integrated Technology Services (ITS), Assisted Acquisition Services (AAS), General Supplies and Services (GSS), and Travel, Motor Vehicle and Card Services (TMVCS).

The ITS Portfolio provides customer agencies with information technology and telecommunications products and services. Operations within this portfolio include Multiple-Award Schedules (MAS) and Government-wide Acquisition Contracts (GWACs) for the information technology and telecommunication business units. ITS operations aggregate and leverage the Federal Government's buying power to obtain a wide range of information technology and telecommunications products and services at significant savings for customer agencies.

The AAS Portfolio focuses on service delivery and assisting customers in making informed procurement decisions and serving as a center of excellence for the Federal community. AAS complements the programs of the Integrated Technology Services portfolio by providing acquisition, technical, and project management services that assist agencies in acquiring and deploying information technology and professional services solutions at the best value for taxpayer dollars.

The GSS Portfolio provides customer agencies a wide range of general products such as furniture, office supplies, and hardware products. GSS centralizes acquisitions on behalf of the Federal Government in order to strategically procure requirements and reduce cost to the government, while ensuring regulatory compliance for customers procurements. This portfolio also provides personal property disposal services to customer agencies.

The TMVCS Portfolio provides customer agencies with a broad scope of services that include travel and relocation services, freight management, motor vehicle acquisition, fleet management, and charge card services. TMVCS operations also aggregate and leverage the Federal Government's buying power to obtain a wide range of products and services at significant savings for customer agencies.

This appropriation provides agency-wide audit and investigative functions to identify and correct management and administrative deficiencies within GSA, which create conditions for existing or potential instances of fraud, waste and mismanagement. The audit function provides internal audit and contract audit services. Contract audits provide professional advice to GSA contracting officials on accounting and financial matters relative to the negotiation, award, administration, repricing, and settlement of contracts. Internal audits review and evaluate all facets of GSA operations and programs, test internal control systems, and develop information to improve operating efficiencies and enhance customer services. The investigative function provides for the detection and investigation of improper and illegal activities involving GSA programs, personnel, and operations. The 2009 Budget provides for up to $2.8 million in reimbursable authority for pre-award audits and surveys of Multiple Award Schedules (MAS) contracts and Government-wide Acquisition Contracts (GWACs) with the understanding that the Office of Inspector General (OIG) and the Federal Acquisition Service (FAS) will work together to pilot alternative methods for reviewing contract-related activities. The pilot effort will help determine the most effective and efficient combination of management practices—including pre-award audits, pre-award surveys, and other activities—that the OIG and FAS may use to help ensure agencies obtain good prices and overall best value from acquisitions made through GSA's MAS and GWACs.

This revolving fund supports the Office of Citizen Services (OCS), which provides access points for citizens, businesses, other governments, and the media to obtain government information and services easily via the Web, e-mail, print, and the telephone. The Federal Citizen Services Fund (FCSF) is financed from annual appropriations from the general funds of the Treasury, reimbursements from agencies, fees collected from the public, gifts for undertaking Federal information activities, and other income incident to OCS activities. The Fund is authorized to retain unobligated amounts at the end of each fiscal year and obligate those amounts in subsequent fiscal years.

OCS maintains close working relationships with more than 40 Federal departments and agencies to identify, develop, promote, and make Federal information easily accessible to the public through a variety of channels. These channels include Internet websites located at USA.gov and Gobierno USA.gov (the US Government's official web portal), Pueblo.gsa.gov, ConsumerAction.gov, Kids.gov, and Info.gov. OCS operates a toll-free National Contact Center (1-800-FED-INFO) for responding to citizen telephone and e-mail inquiries about the Federal Government. OCS also publishes and distributes the quarterly Consumer Information Catalog, which lists Federal publications available to citizens through Pueblo, Colorado, and the Consumer Action Handbook, which provides information to citizens for resolving consumer problems. OCS operates these information outlets as part of the USA Services E-Gov initiative, which seeks to make government more citizen-centric. Additionally, OCS has awarded and operates a government-wide contracting vehicle (USA Contact) through which agencies can quickly and easily obtain contact center services to support their needs to communicate with the public.

Administrative expenses.—Administrative expenses are funded by an appropriation to the Fund, by fees collected from agencies and the public, and by revenue received through the Fund's gift authority.

Reimbursements.—OCS provides a variety of citizen-centric services, e.g., publication distribution and contact center services, to other agencies and organizations and bills them to cover the costs of providing these services.

This full cost recovery revolving fund provides internal GSA customers with a full range of shared administrative services functions. Expenses of the Working Capital Fund (WCF) are financed through reimbursable funding from GSA's benefiting accounts and from external sources, including small agencies and commissions, for services provided. Reimbursable services include information technology management, financial management, legal advice and services, equal employment opportunity services, liaison activities with the Congress and Office of Management and Budget, and oversight of GSA contracting activities. This account also funds liaison with the Small Business Administration on minority business proposals and contracts to ensure that minority and small businesses receive a fair share of the agency's business. The WCF also supports GSA's role as a Shared Service Provider (SSP) under the Financial Management Line of Business (FMLOB) program, which utilizes Shared Service Providers (SSPs) to provide standard, compliant, and cost-effective financial management services and systems to other Federal agencies.

The Panama Canal Act of 1979 established the Panama Canal Commission to operate and maintain the interoceanic waterway. Pursuant to Public Law 104-106, the Commission was a wholly-owned government corporation and was funded by a revolving fund. In accordance with the Panama Canal Treaty, the United States transferred ownership of the Canal to the Republic of Panama on December 31, 1999. Funds shown were for the settlement of remaining accident and contract claims against the Commission. Public Law 108-309, Sec. 121, amended the Panama Canal Act to terminate the Panama Canal Commission on October 1, 2004, and transferred the Panama Canal Revolving Fund to GSA.

All outstanding claims against the Panama Canal Commission were resolved in FY 2007 and the remaining balance of $41 million was transferred from GSA to the Panama Canal Authority, in compliance with the terms of the agreement transferring control of the Panama Canal to Panama.

This appropriation provides for the full costs associated with the science activities of the agency, which consist of the programs, or themes, within the Science Mission Directorate. The full costs include all labor, travel, procurement, test and fabrication costs to execute these programs, which provide for all of the research; development; operations; salaries and related expenses; design, repair, rehabilitation, modification of facilities, and construction of new facilities; and other general and administrative activities supporting the themes within this account.

Detailed performance goals associated with these activities are addressed in NASA's detailed budget request, and summaries of these activities are in the NASA chapter of the 2009 President's Budget.

NASA's Science Mission Directorate encompasses four themes: Earth Science, Planetary Science, Heliophysics, and Astrophysics. The Directorate seeks to answer fundamental questions concerning the ways in which Earth's climate is changing; the comparison of Earth with other planets in the solar system and around other stars; the connections among the Sun, Earth, and heliosphere; and the origin and evolution of planetary systems, the galaxy, and the universe, including the origin and distribution of life in the universe. The Directorate achieves its objectives through robotic flight missions, ground-based scientific research and data analysis, and the development of new technologies for future missions.

Life on Earth prospers in a biosphere and climate powered by energy from the Sun and moderated by water and carbon cycles. Working with domestic and international partners, NASA provides accurate and objective scientific data and analysis to advance understanding of Earth system processes and phenomena, thus improving prediction and response capabilities for climate, weather, natural hazards, and even human-induced disasters. Employing a constellation of 13 Earth-observing satellites routinely making measurements, NASA continues using the view from space to study the Earth system and improve prediction of Earth system changes and the connection between Earth and its star, the Sun. NASA will be launching seven additional missions over the next several years to further enhance and expand understanding of Earth and its processes. These include missions such as Glory, which is to be launched in 2008 and will fly instruments to extend our measurements of total solar irradiance and provide first-ever measurements of properties of atmospheric aerosols. Other examples are the Orbiting Carbon Observatory and the Aquarius mission (scheduled to be launched in 2008 and 2010, respectively) which will make new, first-of-a-kind global measurements of atmospheric carbon dioxide concentrations and ocean surface salinity, both parameters of known importance to the study of climate change. In addition, the Ocean Surface Topography Mission is set for launch in 2008 and is intended to measure parameters such as sea level height. Other key upcoming missions include the National Polar-orbiting Operational Environmental Satellite System Preparatory Project (NPP, with an anticipated launch of 2010), the Landsat Data Continuity Mission (planned for launch in 2011), and the Global Precipitation Measurement Mission, which will provide accurate, global rain measurements every three hours and is to be launched in two parts in 2013 and 2014. In a significant new initiative, NASA also will begin implementation of a series of advanced Earth-observing satellite missions based on the recommendations of the National Research Council's Earth Science and Applications Decadal Survey, a recent community-consensus study that identified the most important Earth System Science questions and proposed a sequence of focused satellite missions to advance Earth science. In addition, NASA will support activities to better leverage existing data sources and models in furthering climate and ocean science, as recommended by various community planning documents.

Planetary science seeks to discover the nature and origin of the celestial bodies among which we live and to explore whether life exists beyond Earth. To unlock the solar system's mysteries, NASA will continue its investigation of Mars from orbit and on the surface with a new generation of missions, including launching the 2009 Mars Science Laboratory rover (September 2009 launch, June 2010 arrival), which will dramatically increase in situ exploration capability with analytical laboratories focused on determining if Mars was habitable and if organics are present. The Phoenix mission will land

SCIENCE—Continued

May 25, 2008, to study the northern polar regions of Martian ice-rich area that could provide clues to the history of the planet's evolution and search for organics under the surface. Exploration will continue with the rovers Spirit and Opportunity, as well as the Mars Reconnaissance Orbiter and Mars Odyssey. The investigation of the outer planets will include such missions as the Cassini Saturn orbiter that has continued to return stunning images and revised scientific understanding of the ringed planet and its moons, the Juno mission that will further improve understanding of the origin and evolution of Jupiter (launch in August 2011), and the New Horizons (Pluto) mission which will complete NASA's initial reconnaissance of the solar system. Dawn, launched in September 2007, is on its nine-year mission to investigate in detail 1 Ceres and 4 Vesta, two main-belt asteroids that are among the largest proto-planets remaining intact since the formation of the solar system. MESSENGER, a mission to Mercury, will provide the first images covering the entire planet and collect detailed information on the composition and structure of Mercury's crust, its geologic history, the nature of its thin atmosphere and active magnetosphere, and the makeup of its core and polar materials. NASA exploration of the Moon will be expanded to include a recently selected full class Discovery mission, GRAIL, a moon gravity mapping mission that will advance understanding of the thermal evolution of the Moon, as well as a new series of robotic missions that will significantly increase our knowledge of the Earth's closest neighbor as we prepare for a human return to the Moon.

In seeking to understand the Sun, heliosphere, and planetary environments as a single, connected system, NASA's Heliophysics theme pursues three sets of missions: Solar Terrestrial Probe missions, Living with a Star missions, and Explorer missions. Solar Terrestrial Probe addresses fundamental science questions about the physics of plasma and the flow of mass and energy in the solar system, and includes the development of the Magnetospheric MultiScale mission, with an anticipated launch date not earlier than 2014. Living with a Star missions develop specific knowledge and understanding of those aspects of the Sun-Earth system that directly affect life and society. The first Living with a Star mission, Solar Dynamics Observatory, is planned to launch in December 2008. Radiation Belt Storm Probes, the next Living with a Star mission, has an anticipated launch date not earlier than 2012. The Living with a Star program plans to provide a launch vehicle and one instrument/science investigation for a joint Solar Orbiter Collaboration with the European Space Agency. AIM and THEMIS are two Explorer missions that will study the upper atmosphere of the earth and the magnetic connections and processes of the Earth's magnetosphere. Three other Explorer missions, IBEX, CINDI, and TWINS, are designed to investigate physical conditions and processes of the coupled Sun-Earth system in the heliosphere, ionosphere, and magnetosphere respectively, and will be in prime mission operations during FY09. NASA also intends to select three new Small Explorer missions for formulation.

Within the Astrophysics theme, perplexing and important questions guide NASA's quest to understand the secrets of the universe: How does the universe work? Where did we come from? Are we alone? To answer these questions, NASA will continue to operate its prolific Hubble, Chandra, and Spitzer space telescopes, while planning a series of future missions linked by powerful new technologies and complementary approaches to shared science goals. Toward this end, the Hubble Servicing Mission 4, scheduled to launch on Atlantis in 2008, will extend the lifetime of critical components of this central data source. Together these missions will enhance NASA's ability to find planets around other stars and peer deep into the history of the universe and improve understanding of its structure. The Kepler mission will enable the discovery of Earth-size and smaller planets around other stars. The Gamma-ray Large-Area Space Telescope will investigate the high-energy world of black holes and neutron stars. The Joint Dark Energy Mission will provide the most accurate inventory to date of the mysterious dark energy, a major component of the universe and a contributor to its rate of expansion. The James Webb Space Telescope will study the earliest galaxies and some of the first stars formed after the Big Bang.

This appropriation provides for the full costs associated with the aeronautics activities of the agency, which consist of the programs, or themes, within the Aeronautics Mission Directorate. The full costs include all labor, travel, procurement, test and fabrication costs to execute these programs, which provide for all of the research; development; operations; salaries and related expenses; design, repair, rehabilitation, modification of facilities, and construction of new facilities; and other general and administrative activities supporting the themes within this account.

Detailed performance goals associated with these activities are addressed in NASA's detailed budget request, and summaries of these activities are in the NASA chapter of the 2009 President's Budget.

NASA's Aeronautics Research Mission Directorate is committed to expanding the boundaries of aeronautical knowledge for the benefit of the nation and the broad aeronautics community. NASA conducts cutting-edge research that includes foundational research across a number of core competencies that support aeronautics and space exploration activities; research in key areas related to the development of advanced aircraft technologies and systems, including those related to aircraft safety, environmental compatibility, and fuel efficiency; and research that supports the Next Generation Air Transportation System in partnership with the Joint Planning and Development Office.

NASA's aeronautics research directly supports the goal and objectives of the National Aeronautics Research and Development Policy that was established by Presidential Executive Order 13419 in December 2006. NASA ensures that it is aligned with the Policy by (1) conducting high-quality, cutting-edge research that benefits the constituents of the entire aeronautics community; (2) disseminating the results of all research to the widest practical and appropriate extent; (3) pursuing a coordinated approach to managing the Nation's research, development, test, and evaluation infrastructure; (4) fostering intellectual partnerships with industry and academia by means of cooperative Space Act Agreements and fully and openly competed research awards that emphasize true collaborations among all partners by means of the NASA Research Announcement; and (5) establishing strong partnerships with other Government agencies and organizations, especially the Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Defense, and the Joint Planning and Development Office.

NASA's Aeronautics theme consists of three integrated research programs as well as the Aeronautics Test Program that preserves a critical suite of aeronautics test facilities. The Fundamental Aeronautics Program will conduct cutting-edge research that will enable the design of vehicles that fly through any atmosphere at any speed. Because aircraft of the future will need to address multiple and often conflicting design challenges such as noise, emissions, and performance, a key focus will be the development of physics-based, multidisciplinary design, analysis, and optimization tools. Such tools will make it possible to evaluate radically new vehicle designs and to assess, with known uncertainties, the potential impact of innovative concepts and technologies on a vehicle's overall performance.

The Aviation Safety Program builds upon the unique safety-related research capabilities of NASA to develop innovative tools, concepts, methods, and technologies that will improve the intrinsic safety attributes of current and future aircraft, and that will help overcome aviation safety challenges that would otherwise constrain the full realization of the Next Generation Air Transportation System. Such challenges include significant increases in air traffic density, increased reliance on automation, and a greatly increased diversity of air vehicles.

The Airspace Systems Program conducts cutting-edge air traffic management research that will enable the Next Generation Air Transportation System. In partnership with the Joint Planning and Development Office, the program develops the concepts, algorithms, capabilities, and technologies that will lead to the significant enhancements in capacity, efficiency, and flexibility needed to meet the Nations airspace and airportal (gates, taxiways, runways, and final approach airspace) requirements for decades to come.

The Aeronautics Test Program ensures the strategic availability and accessibility of a critical suite of aeronautics test facilities that are deemed necessary to meet aeronautics, Agency, and national needs. Strategic utilization, operations, maintenance, and investment decisions are made for major wind tunnel/ground test facilities at NASA's Ames Research Center, Glenn Research Center, and Langley Research Center, and for the Western Aeronautical Test Range, support/testbed aircraft, and simulation and load laboratories at Dryden Flight Research Center.

This appropriation provides for the full costs associated with the exploration activities of the agency, which consist of the programs, or themes, within the Exploration Mission Directorate. The full costs include all labor, travel, procurement, test and fabrication costs to execute these programs, which provide for all of the research; development; operations; salaries and related expenses; design, repair, rehabilitation, modification of facilities, and construction of new facilities; and other general and administrative activities supporting the themes within this account.

Detailed performance goals associated with these activities are addressed in NASA's detailed budget request, and summaries of these activities are in the NASA chapter of the 2009 President's Budget.

The Exploration Systems Mission Directorate was established to realize the Vision for Space Exploration. Exploration Systems includes two themes that work together to enable sustainable exploration and scientific discovery in the solar system: Constellation Systems and Advanced Capabilities.

The Constellation Systems theme is responsible for developing capabilities essential to making the Vision for Space Exploration a reality. Through Constellation Systems, NASA will develop, demonstrate, and deploy the transportation, life support, and surface systems that will enable sustained human and robotic exploration of the Moon, Mars, and beyond. Human exploration will enable scientific activities and discoveries not obtainable with robotic explorers.

Constellation Systems has built on early architecture studies to develop an increasingly mature design. Prime contractors for most major systems are now in place, and requirements continue to undergo refinement leading up to Preliminary Design Review in 2008. Initial capabilities include the Orion Crew Exploration Vehicle that will transport and support crews traveling beyond low Earth orbit; the Ares I launch vehicle for transporting Orion into space; Extravehicular Activity suits and tools required by the flight crews; and ground and mission operations infrastructure. Following the development of these initial capabilities, Constellation Systems will develop capabilities to support a human mission to the lunar surface by 2020. These capabilities include the Ares V heavy-lift launch vehicle, leveraging engineering design and capabilities from the Shuttle Program; an Earth Departure Stage to propel Orion from low Earth to lunar orbit; a Lunar Surface Access Module to safely transport astronauts to and from the lunar surface; and systems, capabilities, and support for extended human stays on the lunar surface. Future development will provide crew, cargo transportation, and destination support capabilities required for human exploration of Mars and beyond.

An important element of Constellation Systems is the International Space Station commercial crew/cargo services project, also known as Commercial Orbital Transportation Services (COTS). The Vision for Space Exploration called for NASA to pursue commercial opportunities for providing transportation to the International Space Station. The Commercial Orbital Transportation Services project is intended to spur private industry to provide cost-effective cargo delivery to the International Space Station, allowing NASA to focus its internal resources on exploration.

The Advanced Capabilities theme consists of three programs: the Lunar Precursor Robotic Program, the Exploration Technology Development Program, and the Human Research Program. Activities within these programs help prepare for human lunar exploration, test new technologies that enable exploration, and further understanding of the effects of space on human performance. The Lunar Precursor Robotic Program is developing a precursor mission to characterize the lunar environment.

The Lunar Reconnaissance Orbiter and Lunar Crater Observing and Sensing Satellite, scheduled to launch in October 2008, will seek to find safe landing sites, locate potential resources, characterize the radiation environment, and demonstrate new technology. The Lunar Precursor Robotic Program will work with the Science Mission Directorate and international partners on future missions to ensure that NASA gains the data it needs to ensure safe and cost-effective future exploration. The Exploration Technology Development Program makes focused investments in innovations to reduce the cost and expand the capabilities of future space exploration missions. The Human Research Program focuses on ensuring the health, safety, and productivity of humans embarking on missions of exploration in the solar system. Projects advance knowledge critical for supporting long-term human survival and performance during operations beyond low Earth orbit, with a focus on improving medical care and human health maintenance.

This appropriation provides for the full costs associated with the education activities of the agency, which consist of the programs, or themes, within the Education Mission Directorate. The full costs include all labor, travel, and procurement costs to execute these programs, which provide for all general and administrative activities supporting this mission.

Detailed performance goals associated with these activities are addressed in NASA's detailed budget request, and summaries of these activities are in the NASA chapter of the 2009 President's Budget.

NASA's Education program works to inspire and educate students at all levels to pursue careers in the fields of science, technology, engineering, and mathematics, while also engaging the education community to reach this goal. The Education portfolio demonstrates a commitment to science, technology, engineering, and mathematics education to ensure that the next generation of explorers and innovators is fully prepared to join NASA's workforce while contributing to national needs. NASA's objectives are to (1) provide elementary and secondary students and teachers with NASA-related education opportunities; (2) support higher education research capability and opportunities that attract and prepare students and faculty for NASA-related careers; (3) provide students, teachers, faculty, and researchers from underrepresented and underserved communities with opportunities in NASA-related science and technology fields; (4) and increase student, teacher, and public access to NASA education resources by developing and deploying innovative technology applications platforms. NASA engages the public in shaping and sharing the experience of exploration and discovery by improving public understanding of science and technology, including NASA aerospace technology, research, and exploration missions.

This appropriation provides for the Agency supporting functions associated with the science, aeronautics, education, space operations, and exploration activities of the agency. This account provides for the research; development; operations; salaries and related expenses; design, repair, rehabilitation, modification of facilities, and construction of new facilities; and other general and administrative activities supporting the themes within the five other program accounts.

Cross Agency Support provides a strategic focus for managing agency mission support functions and some of NASA’s unique research facilities. This budget area consists of three themes: Center Management and Operations, Agency Management and Operations, and Institutional Investments.

The Center Management and Operations theme includes the basic costs to manage and operate each of the nine NASA field centers and to maintain the technical capabilities required to support the Agency’s Mission. This budget theme is not directly identified or aligned to a specific program or project requirement, but is necessary for efficient and effective administration and operation of the NASA Centers.

The Agency Management and Operations theme provides for the management and oversight of Agency missions, functions, and the performance of some Agency-wide activities and unique research capabilities and facilities. Theme responsibilities include the determination of programs and projects; establishment of management policies, procedures, and performance criteria; evaluation of progress; and the coordination and integration of all phases of the Agency’s mission. The five major programs included in this theme are Agency Management, Safety and Mission Success, Agency IT Services, Innovative Partnerships Program, and Strategic Capability Asset Program.

The Institutional Investments theme provides for Agency budget for design and execution of non-programmatic Discrete and Minor Revitalization Construction of Facilities projects, Facility Demolition Projects, and Environmental Compliance and Restoration activities.

This appropriation provides for the full costs associated with the space operations activities of the agency, which consist of the programs, or themes, within the Space Operations Mission Directorate. The full costs include all labor, travel, procurement, test and fabrication costs to execute these programs, which provide for all of the research; development; operations; salaries and related expenses; design, repair, rehabilitation, modification of facilities, and construction of new facilities; and other general and administrative activities supporting the themes within this account.

Detailed performance goals associated with these activities are addressed in NASA's detailed budget request, and summaries of these activities are in the NASA chapter of the 2009 President's Budget.

The International Space Station is a complex of research laboratories in low Earth orbit in which American, Russian, Canadian, European, and Japanese astronauts are conducting unique scientific and technological investigations in a micro-gravity environment. The objective of the Space Station is to support human space exploration. The on-orbit assembly of the Space Station is over 60% complete, and all of the U.S. flight elements required to finish assembly by the end of the decade have completed development. NASA plans to continue assembly of the Space Station in 2009, including the truss and power segments and the addition of the International Partner modules. The 2009 President's Budget provides funding for Space Station launch processing activities, on-orbit assembly culminating in a crew of six by mid-2009, and continuation of research payload and experiment deliveries to orbit. It also includes funding for development of habitability modifications, the purchasing of additional spares to be stowed on the Space Station for use after Space Shuttle retirement in 2010, and completion of the regenerative environmental control and life support system needed to increase the crew capacity. The increased crew capacity will facilitate human space exploration research.

The Space Shuttle program's mission is to support space exploration by completing the assembly of the International Space Station by the end of the decade. The 2009 President's Budget request assumes the Space Shuttle will fly four missions in 2009, and provides specific program investments for vehicle safety and supportability needed to maintain a viable Shuttle fleet until its retirement in 2010. The 2009 Budget request will allow NASA to combat flight hardware obsolescence, maintain ground systems and facilities, and to continue progress towards an orderly phase-out of the program no later than September 30, 2010. In addition, the Shuttle program will support the Space Operations and Exploration Systems Mission Directorates to leverage select Shuttle flight hardware and ground systems to advance the development of the Orion Crew Exploration Vehicle, the Ares I Crew Launch Vehicle, and the Ares V Heavy Lift Launch Vehicle.

Space and Flight Support is comprised of four separate programs that provide on-going customer support for a wide range of services. The programs include Space Communications, Launch Services, Rocket Propulsion Testing, and Crew Health and Safety, and are provided to a wide range of customers including NASA, other U.S. federal agencies, foreign governments, and commercial customers. The services are critical for enabling the conduct of space exploration, aeronautical research, and physiological research. In 2009, funding for the Agency's space communications and navigation infrastructure will be consolidated within the Space Operations' Office of Space Communications and Navigation in order to initiate the transition to a unified mission support architecture to better serve Exploration requirements. The 2009 President's Budget also supports service continuity for the Tracking and Data Relay Satellite System, including two new satellites scheduled to launch in the 2013 timeframe.

This strategy shall include: (1) specific initiatives that the National Aeronautics and Space Administration has undertaken, or plans to undertake, to maximize the utilization of existing civil service and contractor workforces at each of the affected Centers; (2) efforts to equitably distribute tasks and workload between the Centers to mitigate the brunt of job losses being borne by only certain Centers; (3) new workload, tasks, initiatives, and missions being secured for the affected Centers; and (4) overall projections of future civil service and contractor workforce levels at the affected Centers. The Administrator shall transmit this strategy to Congress not later than 90 days after the date of enactment of this Act. The Administrator shall update and transmit to Congress this strategy not less than every six months thereafter until the successor human-rated space transport vehicle is fully operational.

For fiscal year 2009 and hereafter, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration shall provide, at a minimum, the following information in its annual budget justification:

The Research and Related Activities appropriation enables the United States to provide leadership and promote progress across the expanding frontiers of scientific and engineering research and education. This appropriation represents the National Science Foundation’s (NSF’s) primary contribution to the President’s American Competitiveness Initiative. This appropriation provides resources for NSF to achieve the following strategic outcome goals: Discovery—fostering research that will advance the frontiers of knowledge, emphasizing areas of greatest opportunity and potential benefit and establishing the Nation as a global leader in fundamental and transformational science and engineering; Learning—cultivating a world-class, broadly inclusive science and engineering workforce and expanding the scientific literacy of all citizens; and Research Infrastructure—building the Nation’s research capability through critical investments in advanced instrumentation, facilities, cyberinfrastructure, and experimental tools. Research activities will contribute to the achievement of these goals by advancing discovery, innovation, and education beyond the frontiers of current knowledge and empowering future generations in science and engineering. This appropriation supports NSF’s active development of performance indicators.

The major research program activities of NSF are:
Biological sciences.—This activity promotes scientific progress in biology through support of research on all levels, including molecules, cells, organisms, and ecosystems. This activity also supports a comprehensive research initiative on plant genomes, including research on economically significant crops.
Computer and information science and engineering.—Research is directed at “information technology” in the broadest sense of the term, ranging from fundamental theory to systems engineering.

Engineering.—Research supported by this activity aims to increase U.S. engineering capability and strength, and focus that capability and strength on areas that are relevant to national problems and long-term needs. This activity also includes small business innovation research.

Geosciences.—This research advances knowledge of the properties and dynamics of Earth.

Mathematical and physical sciences.—Research in this activity is directed at increasing understanding of natural laws and phenomena. It includes research in mathematical sciences, astronomy, physics, chemistry, and materials science.

Social, behavioral, and economic sciences.—This activity supports research, education, and infrastructure in the social, behavioral, cognitive, and economic sciences and funds the collection and dissemination of statistics on the science and engineering enterprise.

Office of International Science and Engineering.—This activity promotes an integrated strategy for international science and engineering which complements and enhances NSF's broader research and education goals and which facilitates international collaboration.

U.S. polar research programs.—This activity supports Arctic and Antarctic research and operational science support and other related activities for United States polar research programs.

U.S. Antarctic logistical support activities.—This activity provides funding to reimburse Federal agencies for logistical and other related activities supported by the United States Antarctic Program.

Integrative activities.—This activity supports emerging cross-disciplinary research efforts and major research instrumentation. This activity also provides support for the Science and Technology Policy Institute. The Experimental Program to Stimulate Competitive Research broadens participation of States and regions in science and engineering by helping institutions expand their research capacity and competitiveness.

Office of Cyberinfrastructure.—This activity supports acquisitions, operations, and upgrades of cyberinfrastructure in support of the Nation's science and engineering research and education community.

The United States Arctic Research Commission promotes Arctic research and recommends national Arctic research policies to guide Federal agencies in developing and implementing their research programs in the Arctic region.

Education and Human Resources (EHR) activities provide a comprehensive set of programs that further NSF's goal of ensuring a diverse, competitive, and globally engaged U.S. science, technology, engineering, and mathematics (STEM) workforce, as well as scientifically literate citizens. At the pre-kindergarten through grade 12 (pre-K-12) levels, EHR catalyzes reform of STEM education through the development of public-private partnerships. Its pre-K-12 programs provide new instructional materials for students and teachers that incorporate the latest advances in teaching, learning, and educational technologies; growth in the knowledge base; and teacher education opportunities that support the full continuum of STEM teacher education from pre-service and in-service, through life-long learning. Undergraduate programs improve curricula, strengthen laboratory course offerings, enhance faculty, and lead reform efforts in STEM disciplines. Programs for advanced technological education strengthen education for students preparing to enter the high-technology workforce. Graduate level support is directed primarily to fellowships and traineeships to sustain the U.S. world leadership in science and technology. All EHR programming focuses on broadening participation of groups underrepresented in STEM fields including activities focused on the improvement of infrastructure and academic programs at minority-serving institutions. EHR supports education research that advances our knowledge of how people learn in the STEM disciplines; it also supports the development and effective implementation of learning technologies. Evaluation and communication activities ensure accountability by developing indicators that measure program impact and inform the education community of best practices and relevant information. EHR activities also include programs supported by H-1B non-immigrant visa fees. These programs provide undergraduate and graduate scholarships in STEM fields, support for private-public partnerships in K-12, and support for STEM education by providing research opportunities for STEM teachers and students in grades 7-12. EHR's funding also supports NSF's active development of performance indicators.

The Office of Personnel Management's (OPM) mission is to help agencies build an effective Federal civilian workforce based on merit system principles, which America needs to guarantee freedom, promote prosperity, and ensure the security of the Nation. OPM leads Federal agencies in the strategic management of their human capital, proposes and implements human resources management policy, and provides agencies with ongoing advice and technical assistance to implement these policies and initiatives. In 2009 OPM will support agencies' pay-for-performance demonstration projects to replace the current General Schedule pay system with a modern classification, pay, and performance management system that is both results-driven and market-based. OPM also supports veterans preference in Federal hiring and manages the process for personnel security and background checks for suitability and national security clearances. OPM continues to honor the Government's commitment to employees by managing the trust funds that support the retirement and insurance benefits they earn, and delivering excellent benefit services and support to civil servants both during and after their Federal careers. The 2009 Budget will permit OPM to implement long-term human capital strategies that deliver results, pursue a progressive agenda of policy initiatives to transform human resources management, and enhance the values of the civil service. New human resources management policies will streamline the Federal hiring process, decrease time to hire, and change how Federal employees are paid and how their job performance is evaluated. Many of these policies will be driven by the lessons learned from agencies with contemporary and efficient personnel systems.

The functions and objectives of the OPM Divisions are:

Strategic Human Resources Policy (SHRP).—Develops and administers human resources (HR) policies that strengthen leadership and succession planning activities; provides a source of reliable workforce information; ensures common standards for agency payroll and HR systems; supports improved labor-management relations and security/suitability requirements; establishes competitive compensation and benefits systems; and provides agencies a with variety of hiring options for securing talent.

Human Capital Leadership and Merit Systems Accountability (HCLMSA).—Leads the Government-wide effort to transform human capital management so that agencies are held accountable for managing their workforce effectively, efficiently, and in accordance with merit system principles, to achieve mission results.

In 2009, as part of the President's Management Agenda, OPM will continue to work with Federal agencies as the owner of the Strategic Management of Human Capital initiative. OPM uses its leadership position to establish guidelines for human capital under the Standards for Success in the Human Capital Assessment and Accountability Framework. OPM provides guidance to agencies in the assessment of their human capital programs and assists agencies in preparing for personnel reforms. As part of this guidance, OPM develops specific milestones that contain tools, models, and training to hold agencies accountable for their human capital practices. OPM also works with agencies to ensure that their human resources are being managed in accordance with merit system principles to accomplish their missions. OPM assists agencies in building and strengthening their internal human capital accountability programs to include data collection and analysis, program evaluation, and merit systems compliance.

In 2009, HCLMSA will continue to provide technical assistance to agencies. For instance, OPM has statutory mandates to pre-approve agency actions in a wide range of human capital matters. HCLMSA, through agencies' Human Capital Officers, reviews and provides assistance on agencies' human capital initiatives, such as workforce planning, talent management and performance management strategies and solutions while continuing to strengthen accountability. HCLMSA also reviews and acts on agency requests for such authorities as: Voluntary Early Retirement Authority; Voluntary Separation Incentive Authority; dual compensation waivers; temporary and term appointment extensions; classification appeals; and pay and leave claims. Through these review processes, HCLMSA staff work closely with agency human resources staff to ensure that each agency implements human capital solutions that are best tailored to the demands of its mission.

The 2009 budget request reflects HCLMSA's plans to explore the possibility of a fee-for-service platform for the following functions currently performed through the Salaries and Expenses appropriation: the recruitment and selection of Administrative Law Judges, SES Qualification Review Boards, and Delegated Examining Unit certification training.

Human Resources Products and Services (HRPS).—Provides cost-effective products and services to help maintain the Government's position as a competitive employer by assisting agencies, employees, and annuitants with staffing, selection, development, and retirement and insurance programs. In addition, HRPS is responsible for supporting the Department of Justice in ensuring voting rights for American citizens.

The 2009 Budget includes funding to maintain timely processing of retirement claims, administer insurance programs, and improve the speed and accuracy of Federal retiree benefit payments by implementing the Retirement Systems Modernization (RSM) project. RSM is OPM's business transformation and information technology initiative for meeting its long-term customer service, business, and financial management strategic goals for the retirement benefits programs. RSM will increase the efficiency and effectiveness of OPM employees who process retirement claims. The project applies a proven technology toward an automated solution that is driven by complete, accurate employment data. Active Federal employees and retirees will, for the first time, be able to view their individual information online, which will allow for improved personal financial planning. RSM will also further improve the customer experience of both by putting tools and data in the hands of highly trained front line customer service specialists. In 2007, RSM completed imaging of all 2.5 million active employee retirement folders, converted approximately half of all active employees' data to electronic format, and commenced intensive testing of the solution. In early 2008, the integrated solution will go live with the first wave of active employees, enabling migrated employees to access their accounts and use a variety of tools to manage their retirement benefits. Also in fiscal year 2008, OPM will complete transition of current retiree data to the new technology and begin using the integrated system to pay benefits, manage customer contacts, and process and manage benefit claims. The migration of most active employee records will be completed during fiscal year 2009.

The Federal Employees Health Benefits Program (FEHBP) offers comprehensive and competitive benefits choices for Federal employees, annuitants, and family members, and helps the Federal government recruit and retain a high-quality workforce. Through FEHBP OPM will continue to provide customers with a variety of resources to make more informed health insurance decisions, including health plan brochures and website postings, health plan customer satisfaction survey results, web-based comparison/decision tools, and performance results for managed care health plans. OPM will work aggressively with health insurance plans to hold down premium costs while at the same time negotiating expanded coverage. The 2008 health insurance premiums increased by an average of only 2 percent for the second consecutive year. The Federal Employees Dental and Vision Insurance Program (FEDVIP) will begin its second season in 2008 after a highly successful first year of operation, which saw an unprecedented 750,000 employees and retirees sign up for either dental or vision coverage, or both programs. In one year, FEDVIP became the largest employer-sponsored dental-vision program in the nation. OPM will also continue to manage the Federal Employees' Group Life Insurance Program; the Federal Long Term Care Insurance Program, which is the largest employer-sponsored long term care insurance program in the world with over 210,000 enrollees; and the Flexible Spending Account Program, which allows employees to pay for health and dependent care expenses on a pre-tax basis.

Due to the highly variable cost of the program, the 2009 budget proposes that the Department of Justice reimburse OPM for the expense of deploying voting rights observers to election sites.

E-Gov Projects.—OPM manages the Human Resources Line of Business (HR LOB) initiative, which is transforming and modernizing HR business processes and systems Government-wide. In addition to the previously selected five Federal Shared Service Centers, the HR LOB is selecting additional private Shared Service Centers to provide technology solutions to support Federal agencies Government-wide with HR management and administrative transactions. The HR LOB is also responsible for agency migration to these service centers. In addition, the Enterprise Human Resources Integration project is an E-Government initiative to transform human resources processes from paper-based to electronic. OPM operates and maintains a comprehensive data warehouse of HR information across the Executive branch. Cost efficiencies are realized through these streamlined HR processes.

Management Services.—Include: OPM human resources; equal employment opportunity; security; facilities; telecommunications; publishing; acquisitions; information technology management; risk management; strategic planning; and financial management to support all of OPM's goals.

Executive Services.—Includes: executive direction; legal advice and representation; public affairs; and legislative activities concerning OPM as well as assistance for the President's Commission on White House Fellows.

This appropriation provides agency-wide audit, investigation, evaluation, inspection, and administrative sanction and debarment functions to identify program management, contractual, and administrative deficiencies that may create conditions for fraud, waste, abuse, and mismanagement. During 2007, Office of Inspector General (OIG) activities resulted in positive financial impacts of over $186 million, and led to 46 arrests, 66 indictments, 50 criminal convictions, and 806 suspensions or debarments within the Federal Employees Health Benefits Program (FEHBP).

The audits function provides internal agency audit, health and life insurance audit, contract audit, and information systems audit services. Internal agency audits review all facets of agency operations, and include the oversight of the agency financial statement audit. Insurance audits review the operations of health and life insurance carriers, health care providers, pharmacy benefit managers, and insurance subscribers. Contract audits provide professional advice to agency contracting officials on accounting and financial matters regarding the negotiation, award, administration, repricing, and settlement of contracts. Information systems audits review both general controls and application controls for agencies' systems and programs as well as for the information systems of carriers within FEHBP.

The investigative and evaluative function detects and investigates improper and illegal activities involving agency programs, personnel, and operations. A large component of the investigative program involves activities within the health benefits, retirement, and life insurance programs. Health care providers whose conduct may pose a threat to the financial integrity of benefit programs or to the well-being of insurance program enrollees are debarred by administrative sanctions from participation in the health insurance program.

In 2009, OIG will continue to develop its prescription drug audit program, which includes audits of pharmacy benefit managers. The Federal Government and Federal employees together pay an estimated $6 to $7 billion annually for prescription drug premiums, which represents approximately 26 percent of the total premiums for health benefit coverage for Federal employees and annuitants. Through these audits, OIG helps FEHBP to recover inappropriate charges, negotiate more favorable contracts, control future cost growth, and improve benefits provided to program enrollees. OIG will also continue its FEHBP data warehouse initiative in 2009. This project streamlines and enhances the various administrative and analytical procedures involved in the oversight of FEHBP. The purpose of the project is to capture data from experience-rated insurance carriers in a data warehouse of health care information. The system's software tools support a variety of analytical procedures, including data mining, using the data in the warehouse. The project has facilitated more efficient and effective oversight of FEHBP by enhancing the ability of auditors and investigators to identify improper payments.

The Postal Accountability and Enhancement Act (P.L.109-435) created the Postal Service Retiree Health Benefits Fund to put the Postal Service on a path that fully funds its substantial retiree (annuitant) health benefits liabilities.

This new account receives from the Postal Service: 1) the pension savings provided to the Postal Service by the Postal Civil Service Retirement System Funding Reform Act of 2003 (P.L.108-18) that were held in escrow during 2006; 2) payments defined within P.L.109-435 to begin the liquidation of the Postal Service's unfunded liability for post-retirement health benefits; and 3) beginning in 2017, payments for the actuarial cost of Postal Service contributions for the post-retirement health benefits for its current employees. The new account also receives the surplus resources of the Civil Service Retirement and Disability Fund that are not needed to finance future retirement benefits under the Civil Service Retirement System to current or former employees of the United States Postal Service that are attributable to civilian employment with the Postal Service.

As a result of this new health benefits financing system, the Postal Service would cease to pay annual premium costs for its post-1971 current annuitants directly to the Employees and Retired Employees Health Benefits Fund in 2017. Instead, these premium payments would be paid from amounts that the Postal Service remits to this new fund. Payments for a proportion of the premium costs of Postal Service annuitants' pre-1971 service would continue to be paid by the General Fund of the Treasury through the Government Payment for Annuitants, Employees Health Benefits account.

OPM's Revolving Fund supports the President's Management Agenda by fully or partially funding three E-Government projects: E-Clearance, the Human Resources Line of Business, and Enterprise Human Resources Integration. On a fee-for-service basis, the Enterprise Human Resources Integration project provides Federal agencies with an electronic official personnel folder (eOPF) system, as well as workforce analysis and other analytical tools. These tools streamline and automate the electronic exchange of standardized HR data and provide comprehensive workforce analysis, forecasting, and reporting capabilities across the Executive Branch for the strategic management of human capital. The Revolving Fund also provides financing on a reimbursable basis for several other products and services to Federal agencies.

The Center for Talent Services (CTS) delivers integrated, expert solutions to support Federal agencies' human resources needs. Talent Services provides relevant, cost-effective products and services on a fee-for-service basis that span the employment life cycle from recruitment and selection through training and development. Examples of CTS's products and services include tailored recruitment and branding, nationwide testing services (including screening for the U.S. Armed Forces), employee competency assessments, workforce and succession planning, surveys of organizational culture and climate, strategies for change, and USASTaffing, an automated recruitment and assessment tool.

The Federal Investigative Services Division (FISD) provides background investigative services to agencies on a fee basis. FISD conducts more than 90 percent of the Federal Government's background investigations concerning Federal employees, contractors, and military members for various Federal agencies. Investigations are a critical step in the Federal hiring processes, and can affect hiring or removal decisions based on the individual's fitness and suitability for employment. Based on information gathered in background investigations, Federal agencies also issue security clearances and place individuals in sensitive positions involving national security or the public trust.

OPM has focused on developing policies and strategies to meet OPM strategic goals and goals set forth by the Intelligence Reform and Terrorism Prevention Act (IRTPA) of 2004. FISD has primarily focused on reducing the backlog of pending investigations while also improving the timeliness of completed investigations. FISD initiated aggressive hiring and training to bolster the field investigator workforce as well as administrative support for reviewing and closing out investigations. An International Group was established to coordinate and conduct overseas investigations for Department of Defense personnel. To further support overseas tasks, OPM established a memorandum of understanding with the Department of State to assist in conducting overseas investigations on military installations. OPM is also negotiating with the Department of the Army to provide counterintelligence agents to conduct investigative tasks related to Department of Defense personnel deployed or scheduled for deployment overseas.

OPM has also initiated a major review and update of the core technology components of the Investigations program. A modernization analysis has started on the Personnel Investigations Processing System (PIPS), the case management system used to process all background investigations. OPM continues to pilot an imaging system which will allow for the electronic delivery and storage of case papers. Agencies are also increasingly deploying the e-QIP system, which provides them with the ability to remotely enter and transmit case papers when requesting a background investigation. Ultimately, these types of technology initiatives will improve OPM's and agencies' responsiveness to Federal and contractor staffing needs.

OPM continues to work with the Office of Management and Budget and other stakeholders to meet various IRTPA requirements concerning the investigative and security clearance programs. Some of the IRTPA requirements include: 1) ensuring reciprocity of security clearances and access determinations; 2) creating a database on security clearances; and 3) evaluating the use of available technology in clearance investigations and adjudication. OPM is also working with stakeholders to develop a more simplified system for investigative and adjudicative functions. The primary goals are to develop a tiered investigative model that would allow for the use of prior investigative data should the need arise for a higher level investigation. The entire investigative process will be reviewed and models will be developed detailing new methods to conduct investigations for security clearance cases.

The Center for Leadership Capacity Services (CLCS) conducts residential and nonresidential programs for Federal executives and managers to improve the effectiveness and efficiency of Federal programs. CLCS operates three leadership development centers that serve government managers and executives from GS-11 to Senior Executive Service. CLCS courses are designed to fit the long term career development path of emerging federal leaders. Many of the open enrollment courses are accredited and can be applied to college level degree programs. In addition, CLCS offers custom-designed leadership programs for individual agencies and for communities of professional interest. Moreover, CLCS develops and delivers leadership candidate development and succession planning programs, including the Presidential Management Fellows program, and consulting services for leading organizational change initiatives.

Regulations contained in 5 CFR Parts 330, 333, and 335 that implement section 4 of Public Law 104-52 authorize OPM to charge fees to agencies to pay the cost of providing Federal employment information and services through USAJOBS. The USAJOBS system serves as the one-stop solution for bringing government recruiters and job seekers together, giving recruiters the ability to create and advertise government jobs, search through job seeker resumes, and manage the hiring process through a Web interface. The USAJOBS system gives job seekers the ability to create and advertise their resumes, search for government jobs, and apply for a job directly through the Web interface.

GoLearn provides web-based learning, competency, performance and content management systems along with collaboration tools and content libraries on a fee-for-service basis that supports many agencies' learning and development functions. In addition, the GoLearn Program operates the only Government-wide Learning Management System (GoLearn.gov) available to any federal employee and a content repository tool that allows agencies to cost-effectively create and manage pools of reusable content objects for training and communication.

The fund covers two Federal civilian retirement systems: the Civil Service Retirement System (CSRS) and the Federal Employees' Retirement System (FERS). CSRS is basically a defined benefit plan, covering Federal employees hired prior to 1984. CSRS participants do not participate in the Social Security system. FERS is a three-tiered pension program that uses Social Security as a base, provides an additional basic benefit, and includes a thrift savings plan. FERS covers employees hired after 1983 and formerly CSRS-covered employees who elected to join FERS.

OPM will continue working with the Department of the Treasury to submit legislation to revise an existing exception to the Right to Financial Privacy Act to allow OPM to trace and recover retirement payments sent electronically to the wrong account. The Budget also includes a proposal that the United States Patent and Trademark Office (PTO) will fund the full cost for retirement benefits for PTO's employees covered under the Civil Service Retirement System.

This display combines the FEHB fund and the Retired Employees Health Benefits (REHB) fund.

The FEHB fund provides for the cost of health benefits for: 1) active employees; 2) employees who retired after June 1960, or their survivors; 3) those annuitants transferred from the REHB program as authorized by Public Law 93-246; and 4) the related expenses of OPM in administering the program.

The REHB fund, created by the Retired Federal Employees Health Benefits Act of 1960, provides for: 1) the cost of health benefits for retired employees and survivors who enroll in a Government-sponsored uniform health benefits plan; 2) the contribution to retired employees and survivors who retain or purchase private health insurance; and 3) expenses of OPM in administering the program.

Budget program.—The balance of the FEHB fund is available for payments without fiscal year limitation. Numbers of participants at the end of each fiscal year are as follows:

	2007 actual	2008 est.	2009 est.
Active employees .....	2,152,000	2,147,000	2,145,500
Annuitants .....	1,860,319	1,887,000	1,940,500
Total .....	4,012,319	4,034,000	4,086,000

In determining a biweekly subscription rate to cover program costs, one percent is added for administrative expenses and three percent is added for a contingency reserve held by OPM for each carrier. OPM is authorized to transfer unused administrative reserve funds to the contingency reserve.

The REHB fund is available without fiscal year limitation. The amounts contributed by the Government are paid into the fund from annual appropriations. The number of participants at the end of each fiscal year are as follows:

	2007 actual	2008 est.	2009 est.
Uniform plan .....	299	245	201
Private plans .....	773	634	520

Total .....	1,072	879	721
-------------	-------	-----	-----

Financing.—The funds are financed by: 1) withholdings from active employees and annuitants; 2) agency contributions for active employees; 3) Government contributions for annuitants appropriated to OPM; and 4) contributions made by the United States Postal Service in accordance with the provisions of Public Law 101-508 and Public Law 103-66.

Funds made available to carriers but not used to pay claims in the current period are carried forward as special reserves for use in subsequent periods. OPM maintains a contingency reserve, funded by employee and Government contributions, that may be used to defray future cost increases or provide increased benefits. OPM makes payments to carriers from this reserve whenever carrier-held reserves fall below levels prescribed by OPM regulations or when carriers can demonstrate good cause such as unexpected claims experience or variations from expected community rates.

The budget proposes that the Patent and Trademark Office continue to fund the accruing costs associated with post-retirement health benefits for its employees. The budget also reflects changes from a proposed technical change to the FEHB statute that will permit the program's Service Benefit Plan and Indemnity Benefit Plan to offer more than two coverage options.

This account funds the administrative expenses of SBA headquarters and field office operations. Appropriations for the administration of the disaster direct loan and business loan programs are merged with this account. For 2009, the Budget provides increased funding for the continued development of a new loan management accounting system. The budget proposes $7.65 million for this activity, which will improve oversight of SBA's $85 billion portfolio of loans and loan guarantees. Additional funding is also requested for core agency activities, including information technology investments and human capital development. In addition, this account funds non-credit business assistance grant programs.

SBA is authorized to issue bond guarantees to surety companies for construction, service, and supply contracts or work orders that do not exceed $2,000,000 and to reimburse these sureties up to 90 percent of the losses sustained if the contractor defaults. SBA's guarantees provide an incentive for sureties to issue bonds to small contractors who could not otherwise secure them and compete in the contracting industry. In 2009, the Budget proposes a $1 billion program level that is anticipated to be sufficient to accommodate program demand.

As required by the Federal Credit Reform Act of 1990, as amended, this account records the subsidy costs associated with the direct loans obligated and loan guarantees committed in 1992 and beyond (including modifications of direct loans or loan guarantees that resulted from obligations or commitments in any year), as well as administrative expenses of the business loan program. The subsidy amounts are estimated on a present value basis; the administrative expenses are estimated on a cash basis.

For 2009, the Budget proposes $138.5 million in new budget authority for the Business Loans Program account. These funds will cover the administrative costs of SBA's business credit programs. No appropriations are requested to cover loan subsidy, as fees are sufficient to offset expected losses.

The Section 7(a) program provides general business credit assistance. The requested guaranteed loan program level for 2009 is $17.5 billion. The Section 504 Certified Development Company program is for long-term fixed-rate financing and the requested guaranteed loan program level is $7.5 billion in 2009. The Small Business Investment Company (SBIC) program provides credit to support venture capital investments. The Budget proposes a program level of $3 billion for SBIC Debentures.

As part of the Secondary Market Guarantee (SMG) Program, SBA's fiscal agent pools the guaranteed portion of 7(a) loans and sells the securities to investors. This mechanism provides liquidity to lenders participating in the 7(a) loan program. For 2009, the Budget proposes a program level of $12 billion in such securities.

As required by the Federal Credit Reform Act of 1990, as amended, this account records, for loans made pursuant to Section 7(b) of the Small Business Act, as amended, the subsidy costs associated with the direct loans obligated in 1992 and beyond (including modifications of direct loans or loan guarantees that resulted from obligations or commitments in any year), as well as administrative expenses of this program. The subsidy amounts are estimated on a present value basis; the administrative expenses are estimated on a cash basis.

Disaster loans made pursuant to Section 7(b) of the Small Business Act provide Federal assistance for non-farm, private sector disaster losses. Through this program, SBA helps homeowners, renters, businesses of all sizes, and non-profit organizations pay for the cost of replacing, rebuilding or repairing property damaged by disasters. The program is the only form of SBA assistance not limited to small businesses. The program provides subsidized loans of up to 30 years to borrowers who have incurred uninsured physical losses or economic injury as the result of a disaster.

In 2009, the Budget supports $1.06 billion in loans, the ten-year average for such loans, excluding outlying events. The subsidy rate is 14.92 percent.

This schedule reflects a series of proposals. They include a proposal that would provide that the month of entitlement for disability benefits can be no earlier than six months prior to the month of application, which would synchronize the treatment of retroactive disability and retirement benefits.

A proposal would provide that any retroactive Title II benefits be paid with the next scheduled monthly check, which would simplify the check payment system.

A proposal would lower to 16 the age at which full-time school attendance is a condition of entitlement for Social Security child's benefits to encourage children to stay in school.

The final proposal would establish a mandatory system for collecting data on pension income from non-covered State and local employment. The proposal would eliminate the current self-reporting burden on individuals and will improve payment accuracy.

This schedule reflects a series of proposals. They include a proposal that would provide that the month of entitlement for disability benefits can be no earlier than six months prior to the month of application, which would synchronize the treatment of retroactive disability and retirement benefits.

A proposal would provide that any retroactive Title II benefits be paid with the next scheduled monthly check, which would simplify the check payment system.

A proposal would lower to 16 the age at which full-time school attendance is a condition of entitlement for Social Security child's benefits to encourage children to stay in school.

A proposal would establish a mandatory system for collecting data on pension income from non-covered State and local employment. The proposal would eliminate the current self-reporting burden on individuals and will improve payment accuracy.

The final proposal would replace the existing complicated offset with a uniform offset for DI beneficiaries also receiving workers' compensation. The proposal would limit the length of the offset to not more than five years.

The Limitation on Administrative Expenses account provides resources for the SSA to administer the OASI and DI programs, the SSI program, the Special Benefits for Certain World War II Veterans program, and certain health insurance (including prescription drug) functions for the aged and disabled.

The request for additional funding for continuing disability reviews builds on SSA's success in reducing program costs by ensuring that only individuals still too disabled to work continue to receive benefits. Continuing disability reviews are a proven investment, yielding $10 in lifetime program savings for every $1 spent. The additional funding requested also provides resources to increase the number of redeterminations of eligibility processed under title XVI of the Social Security Act. Redeterminations are also a proven investment, yielding $7 in lifetime program savings for every $1 in additional funding spent by ensuring that SSI recipients are receiving the correct benefit amount based on non-medical factors of eligibility. The language for the additional funding permits two uses beyond continuing disability reviews and redeterminations. Up to $40 million may be spent on initiatives to improve the disability process and up to $34 million may be spent on initiatives to improve the asset verification process, provided that these initiatives are as cost-effective as SSI redeterminations. If there are no initiatives that meet these criteria, the funding will be used for additional continuing disability reviews and redeterminations.

Full funding of these cost increases and new enforcement investments is important. The Administration is proposing to fund them as contingent appropriations. To ensure full funding of continuing disability reviews and redeterminations, the Administration proposes to employ a budget enforcement mechanism that allows for an adjustment by the Budget Committees to the section 302(a) allocation to the Appropriations Committees found in the concurrent resolution on the budget. In addition, the Administration will seek to establish statutory spending limits, as defined by section 251 of the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985, and to adjust them for this purpose. To ensure full funding of the cost increases, either of these adjustments would be permissible only if the base level for continuing disability reviews and redeterminations was funded at $264 million and the use of the funds was clearly restricted to the specified purpose. The maximum allowable adjustment to the 302(a) allocation and/or the statutory spending limit would be $240 million for 2009 (see the Budget Reform Proposals chapter in the Analytical Perspectives volume).

The Affordable Housing Program was created by the Financial Institutions Reform, Recovery, and Enforcement Act of 1989 (FIRREA). FIRREA requires each of the twelve Federal Home Loan Banks to contribute 10 percent of its previous year's net earnings to an Affordable Housing Program (AHP) to be used to subsidize the cost of affordable homeownership and rental housing. The Federal Housing Finance Board regulates the AHP and ensures that the AHP fulfills its mission.

The Appalachian Regional Commission (ARC) was established as a Federal-State partnership in 1965 to invest in sustainable economic development in the 410-county Appalachian Region. The Commission is comprised of 13 members representing the States in the Region and a Federal Co-Chairman, who represents the Federal Government. It is the mission of the ARC to help the Appalachian Region reach parity with the nation by planning and coordinating regional investments and targeting resources to those communities with the greatest needs. ARC investments go toward area development and technical assistance goals, such as increasing job opportunities, improving employability, strengthening basic infrastructure and building the Appalachian Development Highway System. ARC also assists communities through support of 72 multi county Local Development Districts (LDDs) that assist local governments in implementing economic development strategies. In 2009, ARC will continue to focus on its mission of helping the Appalachian region reach parity with the rest of the nation.

Salaries and expenses.—In this Federal-State partnership, the Federal Government contributes half of the expenses of a professional staff that works with the states and the Federal staff in operating the program. The other half of these non-Federal employee expenses are provided by member States.

Performance.—In its PART assessment, the Appalachian Regional Commission received an Adequate rating. ARC is currently working to implement updated improvement plans. A detailed presentation of the performance outcomes, measures and targets can be found in the ARC 2009 Budget submission.

The Architectural and Transportation Barriers Compliance Board (Access Board) was established by section 502 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973. The Access Board is responsible for developing guidelines under the Americans with Disabilities Act, the Architectural Barriers Act, and the Telecommunications Act. These guidelines ensure that buildings and facilities, transportation vehicles, and telecommunications equipment covered by these laws are readily accessible to and usable by people with disabilities. The Board is also responsible for developing standards under section 508 of the Rehabilitation Act for accessible electronic and information technology used by Federal agencies. In addition, the Access Board enforces the Architectural Barriers Act, and provides training and technical assistance on the guidelines and standards it develops.

The Board also has additional responsibilities under the Help America Vote Act. The Board serves on the Board of Advisors and the Technical Guidelines Development Committee, which helps Election Assistance Commission develop voluntary guidelines and guidance for voting systems, including accessibility for people with disabilities.

The Chemical Safety and Hazard Investigation Board, as authorized by the Clean Air Act Amendments of 1990, became operational in 1998. It is an independent, non-regulatory agency that promotes chemical safety and accident prevention through investigating chemical accidents; making recommendations for accident prevention; conducting special studies; broadly disseminating its findings to industry and labor organizations; and advising the President and the Congress on key issues relating to chemical safety and on actions taken by the Environmental Protection Agency, the Department of Labor, and other Federal agencies to implement Board recommendations. As authorized by law, the Board will submit a separate request for 2009 to the Congress and OMB concurrently.

The Committee for Purchase From People Who Are Blind or Severely Disabled (the Committee) administers the Ability One Program (formerly known as the JWOD Program) under the authority of the Javits-Wagner-O'Day Act of 1971, as amended. The principal objective of the Program is to leverage the purchasing power of the Federal Government to provide employment opportunities for people who are blind or have other severe disabilities. The Committee accomplishes its mission by first identifying Government procurement requirements that can create employment opportunities for individuals who are blind or have other severe disabilities. Following opportunities for public comment and after due deliberation, the Committee then places such products and service requirements on the Ability One Procurement List, thus requiring Federal departments and agencies to procure the designated products and services from a network of over 600 qualified State and private nonprofit agencies (NPA) employing people who are blind or have other severe disabilities.

The long-term goal of the Ability One Program has been and continues to be increasing job opportunities for people who are blind or have other severe disabilities. In 2006, approximately 47,000 individuals who earned $403.6 million in wages were employed through the Ability One Program. Because of their employment, these individuals have reduced their dependence on Social Security, Food Stamps, Temporary Assistance of Needy Families, and other public income transfer payments.

Because of changes in Federal procurement practices, the focus of the Ability One Program has changed significantly in the last decade. In an effort to become the preferred source for products and services for Federal customers, the Program has opened new lines of business in areas such as automotive fleet management, document destruction services, and secure mail facility management that offer opportunities for future employment growth and support the President's Management Agenda for a more streamlined, efficient Government. In addition to pursuing these initiatives, the Program has expanded the range of military unique products and services it has traditionally provided to meet the needs of the Nation's war fighters. The resources proposed for 2009 would enable the Committee to continue increasing employment opportunities for people who are blind or severely disabled while providing Federal departments and agencies with high quality products and services to support their missions.

The Commodity Futures Trading Commission (CFTC) administers the Commodity Exchange Act of 1936 (CEA), as amended. CFTC furthers the economic utility of the futures markets by encouraging efficiency, assuring integrity, and protecting participants against abusive trade practices, fraud, and deceit. CFTC performs daily surveillance of high-risk market activity and fundamental economic market factors as it systematically investigates the functioning of markets and market users. CFTC's oversight enables the markets to better serve their designated functions of providing a price discovery mechanism and CFTC constantly works to develop better tools to assist in detecting and preventing price distortions. CFTC also is responsible for detecting, investigating, and litigating violations of the CEA and CFTC regulations and monitors compliance activities of designated contract markets, registered commodities professionals, and self-regulatory organizations.

The Administration proposes increased resources for the CFTC in 2009. These increased resources will ensure proper oversight of the markets through the maintenance of adequate staffing levels, which generally have been held constant for years in the face of substantial market growth—trading volume has increased six-fold over the past 10 years. The resources will allow the Commission to make improvements in information technology by upgrading hardware and software, and by improving existing systems and developing new systems critical to maintaining adequate market oversight. It will also allow the CFTC to build upon its knowledge of the increasingly complex futures markets and improve its ability to undertake enforcement actions against wrongdoers. The CFTC must remain vigilant in its supervision of critical areas such as energy markets and foreign currency fraud, and maintain expertise on the changing nature of traded products and evolving platforms on which they are traded.

The CFTC is the only Federal financial regulator that does not derive its funding from the specialized entities it regulates, and since the CFTC's programs provide clear benefits to market participants it is appropriate for those participants to at least partially offset or contribute toward the cost of providing those programs. Legislation will again be proposed to collect a fee on the settlement of contracts on commodity futures, options on futures, and other transactions cleared by derivatives clearing organizations. The fees would be set at a level to equal the costs to the taxpayer of funding CFTC's Market Oversight and Clearing & Intermediary Oversight functions (CFTC's non-Enforcement functions). Such fees are already imposed on futures exchanges to fund the programs of the futures industry's self-regulatory organization, and will help to offset the deficit impact of general taxpayer funding of the CFTC's activities.

The Corporation for National and Community Service (Corporation) fosters civic engagement and responsibility by working with nonprofit organizations, faith-based groups, schools, and other civic organizations to engage Americans of all ages and backgrounds in community-based service that addresses educational, human, public safety, and environmental needs. In doing so, the Corporation strengthens the ties that bind us together as a people and provides educational opportunity for those who make a substantial commitment to service.

The 2009 Budget reflects the newly established Operating Expense account which combines the former Domestic Volunteer Service Program account and the National and Community Service Programs account, for national service programs authorized respectively under the National and Community Service Act and the Domestic Volunteer Service Act. These programs include:

Learn and Serve America.—Provides grants to schools, higher education institutions, and after-school programs to integrate service into their curricula. Service-learning aims to promote civic participation and volunteering from an early age.

AmeriCorps National Civilian Community Corps.—A residential national service program for people ages 14–24. The Budget funds 1,120 AmeriCorps NCCC members that will deploy to respond to disasters.

AmeriCorps State and National grants.—With funds both channeled through states and provided directly to community based organizations, AmeriCorps grants enable communities to recruit, train and place AmeriCorps members to meet critical community needs in education, public safety, health, and the environment. The Budget funds 67,000 AmeriCorps State and National members.

AmeriCorps Volunteers in Service to America.—The AmeriCorps VISTA program provides full-time members to community organizations and public agencies working to resolve local poverty-related problems in areas such as illiteracy, hunger, unemployment, substance abuse, homelessness, and lack of adequate health support. The Budget request funds 6,900 AmeriCorps VISTA members.

AmeriCorps National Service Trust.—The Trust serves as a secure repository for educational awards set aside for eligible participants in National Service programs. The 2009 Budget meets the President's goal of funding 75,000 AmeriCorps members and is based on the accounting methodology specified in the Strengthen AmeriCorps Program Act of 2003.

State service commission administrative grants.—These formula grants support the operations of state service commissions, through which the Corporation funds roughly three-quarters of AmeriCorps*State and National programs. Commissions are responsible for monitoring sub-grantees and ensuring that they comply with federal requirements and performance expectations. These grants must be matched by the commissions.

Senior Corps.—These programs provide opportunities for seniors to volunteer their services to the community in many socially useful activities including helping children learn to read and working with the emotionally disturbed, the mentally retarded, and physically disabled, as well as the isolated and infirm elderly.

Innovation, demonstration, and assistance.—This activity supports innovative and demonstration service programs that may not be eligible under other subtitles of the national service laws, disabled program participants who need special accommodation, and other activities that help build an ethic of service among Americans of all ages and backgrounds.

Evaluation.—This activity supports performance measurement and studies of program impact. The Budget request funds key recurring data collection activities: performance benchmarking surveys for each major program, a longitudinal study of the impact of AmeriCorps service on members, and a Current Population Survey supplement on volunteering in America.

The VISTA Advance Payments Revolving Fund was established in 2007 by Public Law 110-05 as the initial source of those VISTA member living allowances that nonprofit organizations later provide the Corporation for National and Community Service (CNCS) as part of cost share agreements. Upon receiving the nonprofits' contributions, CNCS reimburses this fund. All VISTA member benefits and services, and the majority of living allowances, continue to be funded by the Domestic Volunteer Service Program funds, which are located beginning in 2009 under the Operating Expenses account.

In the other, funds appropriated to make educational awards to eligible national service program participants are maintained until awardees use them.

SEC. 408. Of the funds available under this Act for grants under section 112(b)(2) of the National and Community Service Act of 1990, such amounts as the Corporation determines may be merged with and made available for the same purposes as funds available for grants under section 117A of such Act.

General programming.—The Corporation for Public Broadcasting provides grants to qualified public television and radio stations to be used at their discretion for purposes related to program production or acquisition, as well as for general operations. The Corporation also supports the production and acquisition of radio and television programs for national distribution. In addition, the Corporation assists in the financing of several system-wide activities, including national satellite interconnection services and the payment of music royalty fees, and provides limited technical assistance, research, and planning services to improve system-wide capacity and performance. By custom, the Corporation has received an advance appropriation. For 2009, appropriations of $400 million were enacted in 2007, and for 2010, appropriations of $420 million were enacted in 2008.

The Administration proposes that the Corporation receive appropriations like other programs that receive Federal assistance, and that the public broadcasting system rely to a greater extent on non-Federal funding sources. Therefore, to fund the Corporation at $200 million in 2009 and 2010, the Administration proposes to cancel $200 million and $220 million of enacted advance appropriations for 2009 and 2010, respectively. A 2011 funding request for the Corporation will be proposed in the 2011 President's Budget.

Digital Transition.—The Budget proposes that in 2009, up to $40 million from within the Corporation's already enacted 2009 funding is made available for digital conversion grants to public television broadcasters. Public television broadcasting stations have mostly completed activities necessary to fulfill Federal Communications Commission mandates to convert to digital technology. These dollars are intended to support the necessary equipment that will allow stations to complete their conversions to digital broadcasting as required by law.

Interconnection.—The Corporation, in an agreement with National Public Radio, continues replacement of the public radio interconnection system, which is the major national distribution network for public broadcasting stations. The Budget proposes that up to $27 million in funding is made available from within the 2009 appropriation for replacement and upgrade of the interconnection system.

The National Capital Revitalization and Self-Government Improvement Act established the Court Services and Offender Supervision Agency (CSOSA) for the District of Columbia as an independent Federal agency, which has assumed the District of Columbia (D.C.) pretrial services, adult probation, and parole supervision functions. The mission of CSOSA is to increase public safety, prevent crime, reduce recidivism and support the fair administration of justice in close collaboration with the community.

The CSOSA appropriation supports the Community Supervision Program and the Pretrial Services Agency.

Community Supervision Program.—This activity provides supervision in the community of adult offenders on probation, parole or supervised release, consistent with a crime prevention strategy that emphasizes public safety and successful re-entry into the community through an integrated system of close supervision, routine drug testing, treatment support services, and graduated sanctions. The activity also develops and provides the courts and the U.S. Parole Commission with critical information for probation and parole decisions. The Budget proposes additional resources for information technology to perform law enforcement and public safety functions.

Pretrial Services Agency.—This activity assists the trial and appellate levels of both the Federal and local courts in determining eligibility for pretrial release by providing background information on all arrestees. The background information is used to establish release conditions to ensure defendants will return to court and will not be a danger to the community while on pretrial release. The Pretrial Services Agency is further responsible for supervising conditions of release, conducting drug testing, administering graduated sanctions, referring defendants to treatment and other social services, and reporting on defendants' compliance to the courts. The Budget proposes additional resources to address the post-release supervision of misdemeanor and traffic court defendants with mental health and substance abuse issues.

The Defense Nuclear Facilities Safety Board, authorized by Public Law 100-456, is responsible for evaluating the content and implementation of the standards relating to the design, construction, operation, and decommissioning of defense nuclear facilities of the Department of Energy (DOE). The Board also reviews the design of new DOE defense nuclear facilities and periodically reviews and monitors construction of such facilities to ensure adequate protection of public and worker health and safety. In addition, the National Defense Authorization Act for 1992 and 1993 (Public Law 102-190) expanded the Board's jurisdiction to include facilities and activities involved with the assembly, disassembly, and testing of nuclear weapons. The Board is also responsible for investigating any event or practice at a defense nuclear facility which has or may adversely affect public health and safety. The Board makes specific recommendations to the Secretary of Energy on measures that should be adopted to ensure that both public and employee health and safety are adequately protected.

The Delta Regional Authority (DRA), authorized by P.L. 106-554, was established as a Federal-State partnership to assist the eight-state, 240-county Mississippi Delta region in obtaining the economic development essential to create and sustain strong local economies. In 2009, DRA will focus on multi-state planning and the facilitation of regional investments towards this mission. Available grant investments will go toward basic public and transportation infrastructure, business development, job training and employment-related education. DRA funding is prioritized to distressed and isolated counties across the region.

In its 2006 PART assessment, the Delta Regional Authority was rated as Results Not Demonstrated, due to its lack of annual performance measures and independent program evaluations. DRA has begun to collect actual results for mature projects, and is developing outcome-based performance measures based on these data.

The Denali Commission was established by the Denali Commission Act of 1998 (P.L. 105-277) and is composed of seven members with a Federal Co-Chair. The Commission's mission is to promote and provide sustainable infrastructure improvement, job training and other economic development services that improve health, safety, and economic self-sufficiency within rural communities in Alaska. In 2009, the Commission will continue to coordinate cost-shared utilities and infrastructure projects with a focus on the most distressed communities. The 2004 PART assessment of the Denali Commission rated it Adequate, finding that while the Commission has annual performance measures, it is difficult to determine the impact of the Commission's investments.

The Omnibus Consolidated and Emergency Supplemental Appropriations Act of 1999 (P.L. 105-277) established the annual transfer of interest from the Oil Spill Liability Trust Fund to the Denali Commission. The Denali Commission, in consultation with the Coast Guard, developed a program in which these funds are to be used to repair or replace bulk fuel storage tanks in Alaska which are not in compliance with Federal law, including the Oil Pollution Act of 1990, or State law.

Under the National Capital Revitalization and Self-Government Improvement Act of 1997, the Federal Government is required to finance the District of Columbia Courts. This Federal payment to the District of Columbia Courts funds the operations of the District of Columbia Court of Appeals, Superior Court, the Court System, and the Capital Improvement Program. Capital improvements include establishing a permanent home for the D.C. Family Court, a complete renovation of the historic Old Courthouse, as well as design and renovation work on several other buildings in Judiciary Square.

The 2009 Budget provides resources to fully fund the Courts’ personal services budget, allowing the Courts to fill all authorized positions and eliminate vacancies in mission-critical positions. The 2009 Budget also provides resources to the Capital Improvement Program to continue the renovation of the Old Courthouse, including renovation of the adult holding facility, and to provide much needed general facility improvements.

By law, the annual budget includes estimates of the expenditures for the operations of the District of Columbia Courts prepared by the Joint Committee on Judicial Administration in the District of Columbia and the President’s recommendation for funding District Courts operations. The President’s recommended level of $224 million includes: $172 million for District of Columbia Court of Appeals, Superior Court of the District of Columbia, and the District of Columbia Court System operations; and $52 million for capital improvements for District courthouse facilities. Under a separate transmittal to the Congress, the District Courts are requesting $332 million: $181 million for operations and $151 million for capital improvements.

The District of Columbia Courts appoint and compensate attorneys to represent persons who are financially unable to obtain such representation under three Defender Services programs: the Criminal Justice Act (CJA) program provides court-appointed attorneys to indigent persons who are charged with criminal offenses; the Counsel for Child Abuse and Neglect (CCAN) program provides court-appointed attorneys for family proceedings in which child neglect is alleged, or where the termination of the parent-child relationship is under consideration and the parent, guardian, or custodian of the child is indigent; the Guardianship program provides for the representation and protection of mentally incapacitated individuals and minors whose parents are deceased. In addition to legal representation, these programs provide indigent persons with services such as: transcripts of court proceedings; expert witness testimony; foreign and sign language interpretation; and investigations and genetic testing. The President's recommended funding level for Defender Services is $48 million. Under a separate transmittal to the Congress, the Courts are requesting $52 million for Defender Services.

The National Capital Revitalization and Self-Government Improvement Act of 1997, as amended (the Act), requires the Secretary of the Treasury to make payments at the end of each fiscal year, beginning in 1998, from the General Fund of the Treasury into the District of Columbia Judicial Retirement and Survivors Annuity Fund (Judicial Fund). Annual payments consist of amounts necessary to amortize the original unfunded liability over 30 years, the net experience gain or loss over 10 years, and any other changes in actuarial liability over 20 years; and amounts necessary to fund the normal cost and covered administrative expenses for the year. This account receives the annual payments from the General Fund and immediately transfers those amounts to the Judicial Fund through an expenditure transfer.

The 2009 Budget expands upon the successful three-sector education strategy, an effort to help all sectors of education in the nation's capital, by providing $54 million for kindergarten through high school education. This includes an investment of $18 million to support the D.C. Opportunity Scholarship program, a program that helps increase the capacity of the District to provide parents, particularly low-income parents whose children attend low-performing schools, more options for obtaining quality education for their children. The Budget also proposes to better align the scholarship amounts to ensure that they continue to reflect the actual tuition expenses of students currently in the program. In addition, the program's administrative procedures will be examined over the next year to determine if efficiencies can be gained. As part of the Administration's commitment to improving education in D.C., the Budget also provides $18 million for D.C. public schools and $18 million for D.C. charter schools. In addition, through a separate account, the Budget proposes a one-time payment of $20 million to support the District's public school reform efforts.

The National Capital Revitalization and Self-Government Improvement Act of 1997, as amended (the Act), requires the Secretary of the Treasury to make payments at the end of each fiscal year from the General Fund of the Treasury into the District of Columbia Federal Pension Fund. This account receives the annual payments from the General Fund and immediately transfers those amounts to the District of Columbia Federal Pension Fund. Annual payments consist of amounts necessary to amortize the original unfunded liability over 30 years, the net experience gain or loss over 10 years, and any other changes in actuarial liability over 20 years; and amounts necessary to fund covered administrative expenses for the year.

The District of Columbia Retirement Protection Improvement Act of 2005 (enacted December 23, 2004), amended the Act to terminate the Supplemental Fund and establish the District of Columbia Federal Pension Fund. The assets of the Supplemental Fund transferred to the District of Columbia Federal Pension Fund as of October 1, 2004. The 1990 District of Columbia Appropriations Act established a system "to improve the means by which the District of Columbia (now the D.C. Water and Sewer Authority, DCWASA) is paid for water and sanitary sewer services furnished to the Government of the United States or any department, agency, or independent establishment thereof." Each agency is to pay 25 percent of its estimated yearly bill each quarter by depositing its payment into this account. If an agency does not submit payment on time, Treasury is directed to pay the Government-wide bill, making up the difference from a permanent, indefinite appropriation account, which is then to be reimbursed by the appropriate agencies.

Trust Funds

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA FEDERAL PENSION LIABILITY TRUST FUND

The Energy Policy Act of 2005 (P.L. 109-58) authorizes the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC) to certify an Electric Reliability Organization (ERO) to establish and enforce reliability standards for the electric bulk-power system. These standards include requirements for operating existing bulk-power system facilities, including cybersecurity protection, and design of planned additions or modifications to these facilities to provide for reliable operation, but does not include requirements to construct new transmission or generation capacity. On July 20, 2006, FERC certified the North American Electric Reliability Corporation as the ERO. ERO is funded by fees on end users of the bulk-power system. Since it is anticipated that ERO will not report budget data to Treasury, ERO funding is based on estimates.

The Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC) is the Federal agency responsible for enforcement of: the Age Discrimination in Employment Act of 1967; Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, as amended; the Equal Pay Act of 1963; in the Federal sector only, section 501 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1963; the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990; and the Civil Rights Act of 1991. These acts prohibit employment discrimination based on race, sex, religion, national origin, age, or disability status. EEOC is also responsible for carrying out Executive Order 12067, which promotes coordination and minimizes conflict and duplication among

The 2009 Budget for EEOC aligns the agency's staffing and funding request with the strategic Plan, Strategic Objective, Justice and Opportunity and Inclusive Workplaces. Allocations are further distributed among the agency's programs. EEOC continues to work toward developing a more effective organization to support its mission-related work. In addition, EEOC will continue to make the agency more accessible and responsive to citizens' needs.

EEOC's enforcement responsibilities are predominately in two areas; the private sector and the Federal sector.

Private sector.—EEOC addresses equal employment opportunity in several ways. The agency investigates charges alleging employment discrimination; makes findings on the allegations; resolves charges through mediation; negotiates settlement or conciliation; and litigates cases of employment discrimination by enforcing compliance with Title VII, the Equal Pay Act, the Age Discrimination in Employment Act, the Americans with Disabilities Act, and the Civil Rights Act of 1991. The priority for agency resources continues to be on maintaining a manageable inventory of cases.

The purpose of the Export-Import Bank (Ex-Im Bank or the Bank) is to sustain U.S. jobs by financing U.S. exports. To accomplish its objectives, the Bank's authority and resources are used to: assume commercial and political risks that exporters or private institutions are unwilling or unable to undertake; overcome maturity and other limitations in private sector export financing; assist U.S. exporters to meet officially sponsored foreign export credit competition; and provide leadership and guidance in export financing to the U.S. exporting and banking communities and to foreign borrowers. The Bank provides its export credit support through direct loan, loan guarantee, and insurance programs. The Bank is actively assisting small- and medium-sized businesses.

The FY 2009 Budget estimates that the Bank's export credit support will total 14.0 billion, and will be funded entirely by receipts collected from the Bank's customers. The Bank estimates it will collect $164.0 million in FY 2009 in receipts in excess of expected losses on transactions authorized in FY 2009 and prior years. These amounts will be used to: (1) cover the estimated costs for that portion of new authorizations where fees are insufficient to cover expected losses in an amount not to exceed $41.0 million; and (2) to cover administrative expenses in an amount not to exceed $81.5 million, of which $16.0 million are budgeted for technology expenses. Amounts collected in FY 2008 and FY 2009 in excess of obligations, up to $50 million will be made available in FY 2010 any excess above $50 million will be deposited in the General Fund of the Treasury, consistent with practice for FY 2008 and previous years.

As required by the Federal Credit Reform Act of 1990, this account records, for Ex-Im Bank, the subsidy costs associated with direct loans and direct grants obligated, and loan guarantees and insurance committed in 1992 and beyond, as well as administrative expenses. The subsidy amounts are estimated on a present value basis; administrative expenses are estimated on a cash basis.

Operating results and financial condition.—The Ex-Im Bank is a wholly-owned Government corporation. Capital stock of $1 billion was purchased by the U.S. Treasury.

The Ex-Im Bank has a reserve for possible credit losses, which provides for the risk of loss inherent in the lending process. This reserve is a general reserve, available to absorb credit losses related to the total loan portfolio. The reserve is increased by provisions charged to expenses and decreased by charge-offs, net of recoveries.

EXPORT-IMPORT BANK OF THE UNITED STATES LIQUIDATING
ACCOUNT—Continued

The provision for possible credit losses is based on the Bank's evaluation of the adequacy of the reserve, taking into consideration a variety of factors, including repayment status of loans, future risk factors, the relationship of the reserve to the portfolio, and worldwide economic conditions. Providing for such possible losses does not imply that any loans will be written off. It simply recognizes the fact that the prospects for collection of some of the Bank's loans are impaired. It does not provide for losses on a country-by-country basis and is intended only to provide an overall revaluation of the loan portfolio.

The Ex-Im Bank's Net Excess of Program Revenue over Costs was ($200.3) million in 2007. Total Government Net Position in the corporation was $119.8 million on September 30, 2007.

As required by the Federal Credit Reform Act of 1990, this account records, for Ex-Im Bank, all cash flows to and from the Government resulting from direct loans obligated and loan guarantees and insurance committed prior to 1992. This account is shown on a cash basis. All new activity in this program in 1992 and beyond is recorded in corresponding program and financing accounts.

The Farm Credit Administration (FCA) is an independent Federal agency that examines and regulates the Farm Credit System (System) for safety and soundness and program compliance. The System is a cooperative agricultural credit system of farm credit banks and associations that lends to farmers, ranchers, and their cooperatives; farm related businesses; rural homeowners; and rural utilities. The FCA also performs the examination and general supervision of the Federal Agricultural Mortgage Corporation. In addition, FCA annually examines The National Consumer Cooperative Bank.

As of October 1, 2007, the System was composed of four Farm Credit Banks, one Agricultural Credit Bank, 95 associations, five service corporations, the Federal Farm Credit Banks Funding Corporation, and the Federal Agricultural Mortgage Corporation.

Assessments based upon estimated administrative expenses are collected from institutions in the System, including the Federal Agricultural Mortgage Corporation, and are available for administrative expenses. Obligations are incurred within fiscal year budgets approved by the FCA Board.

The Farm Credit System Insurance Corporation (Corporation) was established to ensure the timely payment of principal and interest on insured System debt obligations purchased by investors. The Corporation is managed by a three member Board of Directors that consists of the same individuals as the Farm Credit Administration Board. The Corporation derives its revenues from insurance premiums collected from insured System banks and from the investment income earned on its investment portfolio. Insurance premiums are assessed on System banks based on the level of accruing and non-accruing loans outstanding in each bank and its affiliated associations' loan portfolio. Congress established a secure base amount of 2 percent of outstanding insured System obligations, or such other amount determined by the Corporation's Board of Directors to be actuarially sound to maintain in the Insurance Fund. The Insurance Fund was below the secure base amount at September 30, 2007 at 1.71%. For 2007, the Corporation is assessing insurance premiums at 15 basis points on accrual loans and 25 basis points on non-accrual loans. Congress is currently considering amendments to the Corporation's insurance premium assessment authority. If Congress adopts the proposed amendments and the Corporation's Board of Directors increases premiums in January 2008 to the new maximum rate, approximately $125 million in additional insurance premium revenue will likely result in calendar year 2008. In January 2008, the Corporation's Board will determine insurance premium rates for 2008.

The Insurance Fund is available for payment on insured System obligations if a System bank defaults on its primary liability. The Insurance Fund is also available to ensure the retirement of certain eligible borrower stock, and to pay the operating costs of the Corporation. The Corporation can exercise its authority to make loans, purchase System bank assets or obligations, provide other financial assistance and otherwise act to reduce its exposure to losses.

The Corporation has the authority to make refunds of excess Insurance Fund balances. No refunds are anticipated in 2008.

Under the Telecommunications Act of 1996, telecommunications carriers that provide interstate and international telecommunications services are required to contribute funds for the preservation and advancement of universal service. The contributions provided, in turn, by each carrier's subscribers, are used to provide services eligible for universal service support as determined by the FCC. Eligible telecommunications carriers receive support from the universal service funds if they (1) provide service to high-cost areas, (2) provide eligible services at a discount to schools, libraries or rural health care providers, or (3) provide subsidized service or subsidized telephone installation to low-income consumers. Interest income on these funds is utilized to reduce carrier contributions. Administrative costs of the program are provided from contributions.

Program Assessment Rating Tool analyses revealed that universal service support mechanisms lacked adequate performance measures and therefore could not demonstrate results.

The Administration supports Universal Service Fund reforms, such as the use of reverse auctions to allocate High Cost subsidies, that will help ensure subsidies are well-targeted, demonstrate results, and minimize the burden to ratepayers. In addition, the Administration will pursue means to strengthen USF financial and program management, to minimize waste, fraud, and abuse. The programs can be managed successfully consistent with standard financial controls such as the Anti-Deficiency Act, which protect program beneficiaries and ratepayers.

This program provided direct loans for the purpose of purchasing spectrum licenses at the Federal Communications Commission's auctions. The licenses were purchased on an installment basis, which constitutes an extension of credit. The first year of activity for this program was 1996.

As required by the Federal Credit Reform Act of 1990, this account records, for this program, the subsidy costs associated with the direct loans obligated in 1992 and beyond (including modifications of direct loans or loan guarantees that resulted from obligations or commitments in any year), as well as administrative expenses of this program. The subsidy amounts are estimated on a present value basis and administrative expenses are estimated on a cash basis. The FCC no longer offers credit terms on purchases through spectrum auctions. Program activity relates to maintenance and close-out of existing loans.

SPECTRUM LICENSE USER FEE

To continue to promote efficient spectrum use, the Administration proposes legislation to provide the Federal Communications Commission with new authority to use other economic mechanisms, such as fees, as a spectrum management tool. The Commission would be authorized to set user fees on unauctioned spectrum licenses based on spectrum-management principles. Fees would be phased in over time as part of an ongoing rulemaking process to determine the appropriate application and level for fees. Fee collections are estimated to begin in 2008, and total $4.1 billion through 2018.

SPECTRUM AUCTION AUTHORITY

The Administration proposes legislation to extend indefinitely the authority of the Federal Communications Commission to auction spectrum licenses, which expires on September 30, 2011.

DOMESTIC SATELLITE SERVICE SPECTRUM LICENSE AUCTIONS

The Administration proposes legislation to ensure that spectrum licenses for predominantly domestic satellite services are assigned efficiently and effectively through competitive bidding. Services such as Direct Broadcast Satellite and Satellite Digital Audio Radio Services were assigned by auction prior to a 2005 court decision that questioned this practice on technical grounds. By clarifying through legislation that auctions of licenses for these domestic satellite services are authorized, prior policy of the Federal Communications Commission will be restored. Auction receipts associated with this clarification are estimated to begin in 2008, and total $593 million through 2018.

ANCILLARY TERRESTRIAL COMPONENT SPECTRUM LICENSE FEE

The Administration proposes legislation to improve the management of hybrid terrestrial—satellite mobile communications spectrum licenses by setting a fee on the terrestrial authority of these integrated networks. Under current policy, these licenses are granted free of charge, though providers will compete with terrestrial wireless carriers that have purchased licenses at auction. Setting a fee on the Ancillary Terrestrial Component of Mobile Satellite Service licenses will help to ensure that the radio spectrum is put to its most highly valued use by promoting consideration of the economic value of the spectrum, providing incentive for timely and robust network development, and improving equity relative to service providers that purchase their spectrum licenses in auctions. Receipts associated with this policy are estimated to begin in 2008, and total $1.16 billion through 2018.

[ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS—FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION]

[SEC. 510. Section 302 of the Universal Service Antideficiency Temporary Suspension Act is amended by striking “December 31, 2007”, each place it appears and inserting “December 31, 2008”.]

[SEC. 511. None of the funds appropriated by this Act may be used by the Federal Communications Commission to modify, amend, or change its rules or regulations for universal service support payments to implement the February 27, 2004 recommendations of the Federal-State Joint Board on Universal Service regarding single connection or primary line restrictions on universal service support payments.] (Financial Services and General Government Appropriations Act, 2008.)

The Administration strongly opposes provisions that exclude the Universal Service Fund (USF) from the financial management protections provided by the Anti-Deficiency Act and restrict the types of USF reforms that can be considered by the Federal Communications Commission. These provisions unnecessarily increase the risk of financial mismanagement of the Fund and limit reforms that could improve the efficiency of the program and reduce burdens on telephone ratepayers.

FEDERAL DEPOSIT INSURANCE CORPORATION

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (FDIC) was created by the Banking Act of 1933 to provide protection for bank depositors and to foster sound banking practices.

The Financial Institutions Reform Recovery and Enforcement Act of 1989 established the Bank Insurance Fund (BIF), the Savings Association Insurance Fund (SAIF), and the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation (FSLIC) Resolution Fund (FRF). Under the Deposit Insurance Reform Act of 2005, the BIF and SAIF were merged into a new Deposit Insurance Fund (DIF) during 2006. Individual deposits are currently insured up to $100,000. Under the Deposit Insurance Reform Act, the deposit insurance ceiling for retirement accounts was increased to $250,000. In addition, beginning in 2011, and every five years thereafter, FDIC and NCUA will have the authority to increase deposit insurance coverage limits for retirement and non-retirement accounts based on inflation if the Boards of the FDIC and NCUA determine such an increase is warranted. As part of its efforts to implement the new legislation, in November 2006 the FDIC Board approved a new system of risk-based premiums to be charged to depository institutions, and adopted a rate schedule intended to return the Deposit Insurance Fund to a Designated Reserve Ratio (the ratio of fund equity to insured deposits) of 1.25 percent.

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation Improvement Act of 1991 generally requires FDIC to use the least costly method to resolve failed banks, and mandates that FDIC take prompt corrective action against under-capitalized financial institutions. In order to accomplish its varied functions to protect depositors, FDIC is authorized to promulgate and enforce rules and regulations relating to the supervision of insured institutions and to perform other regulatory and supervisory duties consistent with its responsibilities as an insurer.

The primary purpose of the Deposit Insurance Fund (DIF) is to insure deposits and protect the depositors of failed institutions. Under the Deposit Insurance Reform Act of 2005, the FDIC's Bank Insurance Fund (BIF) and its Savings Association Insurance Fund (SAIF) were merged into the new Deposit Insurance Fund on March 31, 2006. Through the DIF, the FDIC will resolve and recover assets from failed institutions. The FDIC is authorized to charge risk-based premiums on member institutions to manage fund reserves, which must be a designated percent of total insured deposits—the reserve ratio—as set by the FDIC before the beginning of each year. The FDIC must set the designated reserve ratio between 1.15 and 1.50 percent of estimated insured deposits each year. If the reserve ratio is higher than 1.50 percent, the FDIC must return the amount in the fund in excess of that which is needed to maintain the 1.50 percent ratio to DIF institutions based on each institution's previously-paid premiums and other factors. If the ratio is between 1.35 and 1.50 percent, the FDIC must rebate half of the amount in the fund in excess of that which is needed to maintain the 1.35 percent ratio. If the ratio is projected to fall below 1.15 percent, the FDIC must develop a five-year restoration plan to ensure the ratio is at or above the minimum ratio level. Under the Federal Deposit Insurance Reform Act of 2005, FDIC is also required to provide a one-time $4.7 billion assessment credit toward the new risk-based insurance premiums, which has been distributed among depository institutions that paid premiums prior to 1997.

In November 2006, the FDIC Board issued a final rule establishing 1.25 percent as its official target for the DIF reserve ratio. At the end of September 2007, the DIF reserve ratio stood at 1.22 percent. In late 2006, the FDIC Board also voted to establish a new set of risk-based premiums for the industry. The new premiums range from a minimum of five basis points (five cents for every $100 in assessable deposits) up to as high as 43 basis points based on the assessed risk of an institution. Taking the redemption of credits into consideration, along with continued growth in insured deposits and a higher rate of potential failures given current conditions in the industry, the Budget projects that the FDIC will collect approximately $4.7 billion in new revenue from these premiums during 2008 and 2009 combined.

The FSLIC Resolution Fund (FRF) is the successor to FSLIC assets and liabilities from thrift resolutions prior to August 1989. Beginning in August 1989, the RTC assumed responsibility for the FSLIC's unresolved cases. On December 31, 1995, the RTC was terminated and its assets and liabilities were transferred to FRF.

Funds for FRF operations have come from: income earned on its assets; liquidation proceeds from receiverships; the proceeds of the sale of bonds by the Financing Corporation; and, a portion of insurance premiums paid by SAIF members prior to 1993. The Financial Institutions Reform, Recovery, and Enforcement Act authorizes appropriations to make up for any shortfall. The FRF will terminate upon the disposition of all its assets, and any net proceeds will be paid to the Treasury. Net proceeds from the former RTC will be paid to the Resolution Funding Corporation. Based on information provided by the FDIC, the Budget projects this dissolution to occur in 2012.

OFFICE OF INSPECTOR GENERAL—Continued

FDIC's Office of Inspector General (OIG) is an independent unit within FDIC that conducts audits and investigations of corporate activities and assists FDIC in preventing and detecting fraud, waste, abuse, and mismanagement. The OIG was established by the FDIC Board of Directors pursuant to the Inspector General Act amendments of 1988 (Public Law 100-504). The Resolution Trust Corporation Completion Act, enacted December 17, 1993, provided that the FDIC Inspector General be appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate. The Completion Act thus added FDIC to the establishments whose OIGs have separate appropriation accounts under Section 1105(a) of Title 31, United States Code. The OIG's appropriations are derived from the DIF and the FRF.

The High-Intensity Drug Trafficking Area (HIDTA) program was established by the Anti-Drug Abuse Act of 1988, as amended, and the Office of National Drug Control Policy Reauthorization Act of 2006, to provide assistance to Federal, State and local law enforcement entities operating in those areas most adversely affected by drug trafficking.

The HIDTA program provides resources to Federal, State, and local agencies in each HIDTA region to carry out activities that address the specific drug threats of that region. A central feature of the HIDTA program is the discretion granted to HIDTA Executive Boards to design and carry out activities that reflect the specific drug trafficking threats found in each HIDTA region. This discretion ensures that each HIDTA Executive Board can tailor its strategy and initiatives closely to local conditions and can respond quickly to changes in those conditions. Among the types of activities funded by the HIDTA program are: drug enforcement task forces comprised of multiple Federal, State, and local agencies designed to dismantle and disrupt drug trafficking organizations (DTOs); multi-agency intelligence centers that provide drug intelligence to HIDTA initiatives and participating agencies; initiatives to establish or improve interoperability of communications and information systems between and among law enforcement agencies; and investments in technology infrastructure.

Pursuant to the Office of National Drug Control Policy Re-authorization Act of 2006, the Counterdrug Technology Assessment Center serves as the central counterdrug research and development organization for the United States Government.

The Center currently operates two programs — a Research and Development program (R&D) and a Technology Transfer program (TTP):

R&D program.—Identifies law enforcement’s and drug demand reduction’s scientific and technological needs, coordinates Federal counterdrug R&D initiatives, and supports improvements to drug control capabilities that transcend the need of any single Federal agency.

TTP.—Provides state-of-the-art, affordable, easily integrated and maintainable tools to enhance the capabilities of State, local and tribal law enforcement agencies for counterdrug missions.

Beginning in 2009, all funding will support research projects in the R&D program.

The Federal Financial Institutions Examination Council (FFIEC) was established on March 10, 1979, pursuant to title X of the Financial Institutions Regulatory and Interest Rate Control Act of 1978 (FIRA), Public Law 95-630. In 1989, title XI of the Financial Institutions Reform, Recovery and Enforcement Act of 1989 (FIRREA) established the Appraisal Subcommittee (ASC) within the Examination Council.

The Council is a formal interagency body empowered to prescribe uniform principles, standards, and report forms for the federal examination of financial institutions by its members: the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System (FRB), the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (FDIC), the National Credit Union Administration (NCUA), the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency (OCC), and the Office of Thrift Supervision (OTS), and to make recommendations to promote uniformity in the supervision of financial institutions.

The Council was given additional statutory responsibilities by section 340 of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1980 to facilitate public access to data that depository institutions must disclose under the Home Mortgage Disclosure Act of 1975 (HMDA) and the aggregation of annual HMDA data, by census tract, for each metropolitan statistical area (MSA). The Council has established, in accordance with the requirement of the statute, an advisory State Liaison Committee (SLC) composed of five representatives of state supervisory agencies. In 2006, the State Liaison Committee was added to the Council as a voting member. The SLC includes representatives from the Conference of State Bank Supervisors (CSBS), the American Council of State Savings Supervisors (ACSSS), and the National Association of State Credit Union Supervisors (NASCUS).

The Budget estimates the Council will spend approximately $14 million during 2009.

The Financial Institutions Reform, Recovery, and Enforcement Act of 1989 (Public Law 101-73) established the Appraisal Subcommittee of the Federal Financial Institutions Examination Council. Subsequent legislation (Public Law 101-235) authorized the Secretary of the Department of Housing and Urban Development to designate a member of the Appraisal Subcommittee.

The Subcommittee is charged with ensuring that real estate appraisals used in federally-related transactions are performed in accordance with uniform standards by appraisers certified and licensed by the States. Its responsibilities include: (1) monitoring the requirements established by the States for the certification and licensing of appraisers; (2) monitoring the requirements established by the Federal financial institutions' regulatory agencies regarding appraisal standards; (3) monitoring and reviewing the practices, procedures, activities, and organization of the Appraisal Foundation; and, (4) maintaining a national registry of licensed and certified appraisers.

Subcommittee activities, including grants awarded to the Appraisal Foundation, were initially funded from a one-time appropriation of $5 million. These funds were repaid to Treasury at the end of 1998 in accordance with the Economic Growth and Regulatory Paperwork Reduction Act of 1996. The Subcommittee is now operating on fee income from State-licensed and certified real estate appraisers in the national registry.

The Budget re-proposes a new strengthened regulator for the housing Government-sponsored enterprises (GSEs) to promote a strong, resilient financial system and increased opportunities for affordable homeownership. (See the Credit and Insurance chapter in the Analytical Perspectives volume of the Budget document for more discussion.)

Upon enactment of this proposal, it is expected that all resources available to the Office of Federal Housing Enterprise Oversight (OFHEO) and the Federal Housing Finance Board would be transferred to the Federal Housing Enterprise Regulator. The administration supports direct funding of these activities with mandatory assessments on the housing GSEs, at a level that will be developed by the Federal Housing Enterprise Regulator upon its creation. The resource level presented in 2009 is an estimate based on the estimated activities of OFHEO and the Federal Housing Finance Board for 2007.

The Federal Housing Finance Board (Finance Board) is the safety and soundness regulator for the Federal Home Loan Bank System, a Government-sponsored enterprise (GSE). The Finance Board was established by the Financial Institutions Reform, Recovery, and Enforcement Act of 1989 which amended the Federal Home Loan Bank Act. The duties of the Finance Board are: (1) to ensure that the twelve Federal Home Loan Banks (Banks) operate in a safe and sound manner; (2) to supervise the Banks; (3) to ensure that the Banks carry out their housing finance mission; and, (4) to ensure the Banks remain adequately capitalized and able to raise funds in the capital markets. The Finance Board succeeded the former Federal Home Loan Bank Board with respect to the Banks. The Finance Board funds its activities through mandatory assessments on the Federal Home Loan Banks.

The Budget re-proposes a new strengthened housing GSE regulator as an independent agency. All Finance Board resources would be transferred to it. The Administration supports continued direct funding of these activities with mandatory assessments on the Federal Home Loan Banks.

The Federal Labor Relations Authority (FLRA) is an independent administrative Federal agency created by Title VII of the Civil Service Reform Act of 1978 (the Statute) with a mission to carry out five statutory responsibilities: (1) determining the appropriateness of units for Labor organization representation; (2) resolving complaints of unfair labor practices; (3) adjudicating exceptions to arbitrators' awards; (4) adjudicating legal issues relating to duty to bargain; and (5) resolving impasses during negotiations. All work throughout the agency is undertaken to support a single program—to administer and enforce the Statute by determining the respective rights of employees, agencies, and labor organizations in their relations with one another.

FLRA's authority is divided by law and by delegation among a three-member Authority and an Office of General Counsel, appointed by the President and subject to Senate confirmation; and the Federal Service Impasses Panel, which consists of seven part-time members appointed by the President.

FLRA does not initiate cases. Proceedings before FLRA originate from filings arising through the actions of Federal employees, Federal agencies, or Federal labor organizations. Nationwide, FLRA includes seven Regional Offices, one satellite office, and a Headquarters site in Washington, D.C.

Authority.—The Authority adjudicates appeals filed by either Federal agencies or Federal labor organizations on negotiability issues, exceptions to arbitration awards, appeals of representation decisions, eligibility of labor organizations for national consultation rights, and unfair labor practice complaints.

Office of the General Counsel.—The General Counsel investigates allegations of unfair labor practices and processes representation petitions. In addition, the General Counsel conducts elections concerning the exclusive recognition of labor organizations and certifies the results of elections.

Federal Service Impasses Panel.—The Panel resolves labor negotiation impasses between Federal agencies and labor organizations.

The Federal Maritime Commission (FMC, or the Commission) regulates oceanborne transportation in the foreign commerce of the United States. The Commission administers the Shipping Act of 1984 (Shipping Act) as amended by the Ocean Shipping Reform Act of 1988 (OSRA); section 19 of the Merchant Marine Act, 1920 (1920 Act); the Foreign Shipping Practices Act of 1988 (FSPA); and Public Law 89-777.

The Commission monitors the activities of ocean common carriers, marine terminal operators, conferences (agreements among carriers exempted from antitrust law), ports and ocean transportation intermediaries (OTIs) who operate in the U.S. foreign commerce to ensure that they maintain just and reasonable practices. FMC maintains a trade monitoring program to detect and appropriately remedy malpractices and prohibited acts under the Shipping Act; monitors the laws and practices of foreign governments which could have adverse impact on shipping conditions in U.S. trades; and imposes remedial action as appropriate under section 19 of the 1920 Act or the FSPA. FMC enforces regulatory requirements applicable to carriers owned or controlled by foreign governments; processes and reviews carrier agreements, service contracts and service arrangements for compliance with the Shipping Act, and reviews carriers' privately published tariff systems for public accessibility and accuracy as required by OSRA. The Commission also issues licenses to qualified OTIs in the U.S., ensures that all OTIs are bonded to protect the shipping public from financial loss and, under P.L. 89-777, ensures that passenger vessel operators demonstrate adequate financial responsibility to indemnify passengers in case of injury or nonperformance of transportation.

The Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service (FMCS) provides assistance to parties in labor disputes in industries affecting commerce through conciliation and mediation.

Dispute mediation.—FMCS assists labor and management in the mediation and prevention of disputes, other than those involving rail and air transportation, whenever such disputes threaten to cause a substantial interruption of interstate commerce or a major impairment to the national defense. FMCS also makes mediation and conciliation services available to federal agencies and organizations representing federal employees in the resolution of negotiation disputes. FMCS provides mandatory mediation and, where necessary, impartial boards of inquiry to assist in resolving labor disputes involving private nonprofit health care institutions. The workload shown below includes assignments closed in both the private and public sectors. These numbers include collective bargaining and grievance mediation.

Mediators also participate in education, advocacy and outreach (EAO) activities such as lectures, seminars, and conferences.

Arbitration services.—FMCS assists parties in disputes by utilizing the arbitration process for the resolution of disputes arising under or in the negotiation of collective bargaining agreements in the private and public sectors.

Management and administrative support.—This activity provides for overall management and administration, policy planning, research and evaluation, and employee development.

Labor-management cooperation project.—The Labor Management Cooperation Act of 1978 (29 U.S.C. 175a) authorizes FMCS to carry out this program of contracts and grants to support the establishment and operation of plant, area, and industry labor-management committees. The 2009 Budget eliminates funding for these grants, and focuses FMCS on its core activities of mediation and conciliation.

Alternative Dispute Resolution (ADR) Projects.—FMCS assists other federal agencies by providing mediation and technical assistance in the area of ADR. The ADR cases reduce litigation costs and speed federal processes. FMCS is funded for this work through interagency reimbursable agreements.

The Federal Retirement Thrift Investment Board is responsible for managing the Thrift Savings Fund. Program administration for the Fund is financed from the Fund. Program expenses are derived first from Fund forfeitures of agency one percent automatic contributions for employees who separate from the Federal Government prior to vesting and then from earnings on all participant and agency contributions to the Fund.

The Thrift Savings Fund is a special tax-deferred savings fund established by the Federal Employees' Retirement System Act of 1986. Due to the fiduciary nature of the Fund, it is not included in the totals of the Federal budget. Information on the financial status and activities of the Fund follows this account.

INFORMATION SCHEDULES FOR THE THRIFT SAVINGS FUND

The Fund is composed of individual accounts maintained by the Federal Retirement Thrift Investment Board on behalf of the individual Federal employee participants in the Fund. All Federal civilian employees and members of the uniformed services are eligible to contribute to the Fund. However, only those civilian employees covered by the Federal Employees' Retirement System (or equivalent retirement systems) and a limited category of uniformed services personnel may have their contributions matched by the employing agencies in accordance with the formulas prescribed by law. Employees are entitled to select how contributions are distributed among five investment funds: a U.S. Government securities investment fund; a fixed income index investment fund; a common stock index investment fund; a small capitalization stock index investment fund; and an international stock index investment fund. A series of five lifecycle funds was introduced in August 2005. These funds are composed of varying allocations of the five core investment funds. The allocations are based on the target maturity date of each fund.

The Federal Trade Commission (the Commission or FTC) seeks to protect consumers and enhance competition by eliminating unfair or deceptive acts or practices in the marketing of goods and services and by ensuring that consumer markets function competitively. The FTC's work is based on the belief that competition among producers, and accurate information in the hands of consumers, brings the best products and lowest prices to the marketplace, spurs innovation, and strengthens the economy.

Consumer protection.—The Commission is charged with eliminating unfair or deceptive acts or practices affecting commerce. The goal of consumer protection is to prevent fraud, deception, and unfair business practices in the marketplace. The agency works to accomplish this goal through four objectives: (1) identify fraud, deception, and unfair practices that cause the greatest consumer injury; (2) stop fraud, deception, and unfair practices through law enforcement; (3) prevent consumer injury through education; and (4) enhance consumer welfare through research, reports, advocacy, and international cooperation and exchange.

Maintaining competition.—The Commission's efforts are aimed at fostering and preserving our competitive market. The goal of maintaining competition is to prevent anticompetitive mergers and other anticompetitive business practices in the marketplace. The agency works to accomplish this goal through four objectives: (1) identify anticompetitive mergers and practices that cause the greatest consumer injury; (2) stop anticompetitive mergers and practices through law enforcement; (3) prevent consumer injury through education; and (4) enhance consumer welfare through research, reports, advocacy, and international cooperation and exchange.

The President's 2009 Budget includes a program level for the Commission of $256 million in 2009, allowing the Commission to maintain the current performance of its missions. The 2009 requested program level will be fully funded by $66 million from the General Fund of the U.S. Treasury and offsetting collections from two sources: $171 million from fees for Hart-Scott-Rodino Act premerger notification filings as authorized by 15 U.S.C. 18a and $19 million from fees sufficient to implement and enforce the Telemarketing Sales Rule, promulgated under the Telemarketing and Consumer Fraud and Abuse Prevention Act (15 U.S.C. 6101 et seq., as amended).

The Intelligence Community Management Account (ICMA) provides resources that directly support the Director of National Intelligence (DNI) and the Intelligence Community (IC) as a whole in coordinating cross-program activities, improving budget oversight, and strengthening Community Management. The ICMA funds selected oversight elements including the National Intelligence Council, the Center for Security Evaluation, the DNI Special Security Center, the President's Daily Briefing Staff, and other enterprise-wide functions.

These oversight elements are the DNI's principal source of advice and assistance in planning and executing his intelligence community management responsibilities. These responsibilities include: developing the National Intelligence Program budget; developing intelligence plans and requirements; and overseeing research and development activities. The National Intelligence Council provides analytical support to the DNI and to national policy makers. The Center for Security Evaluation is responsible for evaluating and improving security capabilities at United States embassies. The DNI Special Security Center develops uniform IC-wide security policies. The President's Daily Briefing Staff supports the production of the daily intelligence briefing that is provided to the President and his senior staff.

The U.S. International Trade Commission is an independent, quasi-judicial Federal agency established by Congress with a wide range of trade-related mandates. The mission of the Commission is threefold: administer U.S. trade remedy laws in a fair and objective manner; provide the President, the United States Trade Representative, and the Congress with independent, quality advice and information on matters of international trade and competitiveness; and maintain the Harmonized Tariff Schedule of the United States.

For 2009, the Commission requests an appropriation of $73.6 million in order to fund existing mandated investigative activity and related operations, a mandatory pay increase, and information technology projects that are designed to improve electronic transaction capability, provide broader public access to public data and other information, develop more timely and accurate trade information for the trade community, and improve transparency in the Commission's procedures and finances.

In 2006, the Commission issued the latest edition of its Strategic Plan and is currently implementing the 2008 Performance Plan. For the purpose of developing the Strategic Plan, the Commission's functions were divided into five operations and, in order to facilitate the linkage of financial resources to the achievement of strategic goals, the budget justification is structured in the same manner. There are 14 strategies for the five operations. In FY 2007, the Commission met or exceeded 71 percent of the performance goals.

As presented in the Commission's Strategic Plan, there are five major operations that serve the Commission's external customers:

Import Injury Investigations: These cover the conduct of the Commission's countervailing duty, antidumping, and sunset review investigations (collectively known as Title VII investigations), safeguards and market disruption investigations, and appellate litigation of challenges to the Commission's determinations.

Intellectual Property-Based Import Investigations: These cover the conduct of the Commission's adjudicatory investigations (referred to as section 337 investigations) regarding alleged unfair methods of competition and unfair acts in the importation of goods into the United States and most frequently involve allegations of patent or trademark infringement.

Industry and Economic Analysis: This covers all activities related to the acquisition, maintenance, and application of analytical and technical trade expertise. This expertise is applied through studies regarding the performance and global competitiveness of various U.S. industries, the impact of changes in trade policy on the overall economy or subsets thereof, trade and competitiveness issues, and the probable economic effect of tariff reductions and trade agreements.

Tariff and Trade Information Services: This covers a wide range of activities that provide Commission staff, the Congress, the Executive Branch, and the general public with reliable and timely trade information and analysis.

Trade Policy Support: This covers direct support activities for policy makers such as the provision of technical expertise and objective information on trade issues to congressional committees and members' offices, the United States Trade Representative, interagency committees, and U.S. delegations to multilateral organizations.

All of these operations define the output of the Commission, emphasizing the benefits that the Commission provides in facilitating an open trading system based on the rule of law and economic self-interest. Within each operation, specific critical success indicators and strategic goals are identified. The Commission's Strategic Plan, Performance and Accountability Report, and Budget Justification are available at <http://www.usitc.gov>.

Pursuant to section 175 of the Trade Act of 1974, the budget estimates for the Commission are transmitted to Congress without revision by the President.

Public Laws 99-500, 101-208, and 102-221 established the James Madison Memorial Fellowship Foundation to operate a fellowship program to encourage graduate study of the framing, principles, and history of the American Constitution. Appropriations of $10 million in 1988 and 1989 established the foundation's trust fund. The funds have been invested by the Secretary of the Treasury in U.S. Treasury securities, and the interest earned on these funds is available for carrying out the activities of the foundation. Funds raised from private sources and the surcharges from commemorative coin sales are also placed in the trust fund.

The foundation is authorized to award graduate fellowships of up to $24,000 to high school teachers of American history, American government, and social studies. College seniors and recent college graduates who want to become secondary school teachers of these subjects are also eligible.

Fellowship awards.—This activity is comprised of fellowship awards to cover educational expenses. It also supports the foundation's annual Summer Institute on the U.S. Constitution, which all current fellows are required to attend. The Institute is an intensive educational experience that will ensure that all fellows know the history of the framing, ratification, and implementation of the U.S. Constitution and the Bill of Rights.

Program administration.—This activity covers the costs of planning, fund-raising, and the operation of the fellowship program.

Established by the Civil Service Reform Act of 1978, the Board serves as guardian of the Federal Government's merit-based system of employment, principally by hearing and deciding appeals from Federal employees of removals and other major personnel actions. The Board also hears and decides other types of civil service cases, reviews regulations of the Office of Personnel Management (OPM), and conducts studies of merit systems. The intended results (outcomes) of the Merit Systems Protection Board's (MSPB) efforts are to assure that 1) personnel actions taken involving employees are processed within the law, and 2) actions taken by OPM and other agencies support and enhance Federal merit principles.

The number of decisions issued by the Board is shown in the following table:

The Morris K. Udall Fund is invested in Treasury securities with maturities suitable to the needs of the Fund. Interest earnings from the investments are used to carry out the activities of the Morris K. Udall Foundation. The Foundation awards scholarships, fellowships and grants, and funds activities of the Udall Center.

In 2000, Public Law 106-568 authorized the Morris K. Udall Foundation to establish training programs for professionals in health care policy and public policy, such as the Native Nations Institute (NNI). NNI, based at the University of Arizona, will provide Native Americans with leadership and management training and analyze policies relevant to tribes.

The U.S. Institute for Environmental Conflict Resolution is a Federal program established by P.L. 105-156 to assist parties in resolving environmental, natural resource, and public lands conflicts. The Institute is part of the Morris K. Udall Foundation, and serves as an impartial, non-partisan institution providing professional expertise, services, and resources to all parties involved in such disputes. The Institute helps parties determine whether collaborative problem solving is appropriate for specific environmental conflicts, how and when to bring all the parties to the table, and whether a third-party facilitator or mediator might be helpful in assisting the parties in their efforts to reach consensus or to resolve the conflict. In addition, the Institute maintains a roster of qualified facilitators and mediators with substantial experience in environmental conflict resolution, and can help parties in selecting an appropriate neutral. (See www.ecr.gov for more information about the Institute.)

Public Law 102-259 established the Morris K. Udall Scholarship and Excellence in National Environmental Policy Foundation to provide educational resources to promote studies in the natural environment and Native American public health and tribal policy.

In 2007, the Foundation awarded 80 undergraduate scholarships. Twelve Native American Congressional Summer Internship Program recipients spent ten weeks in Congressional offices and the White House participating in a program created by the Udall Foundation.

In 2008 and 2009, the Foundation will maintain its current level of scholarships and internships.

The National Archives and Records Administration (NARA) manages the Government's archives and records, and operates Presidential Libraries.

Records services.—This program provides for selecting, preserving, describing, and making available to the public, scholars, and Federal agencies the permanently valuable historical records of the Federal Government and the historical materials and Presidential records in Presidential Libraries; for preparing related publications and exhibit programs; and for conducting the appraisal of all Federal records. This program also funds a records declassification program and the Information Security Oversight Office, established by Executive Orders 12829, 12958, and 13142.

Archives related services.—This activity provides for the publication of the Federal Register, the Code of Federal Regulations, the U.S. Statutes-at-Large, and Presidential documents, and for a program to improve the public's access to regulations.

Archives II facility.—Construction costs of the Archives II facility are financed by $302 million of federally guaranteed debt issued in 1989. Since 1994 and continuing in 2009, the Archives seeks appropriations for the annual payments for interest and redemption of debt to be made under the contract for construction and related services.

NARA's Records Services program received an "Adequate" PART performance rating. Additional performance information will be included in NARA's Congressional Justification. NARA has continued to refine performance measures related to records management and to better engage Federal agencies on best records management practices.

NARA is building an Electronic Records Archives (ERA) that will transition NARA into electronic management of all government records and ensure the preservation of and access to Government electronic records. Rapid obsolescence of the digital formats in which electronic records are created threatens to make them inaccessible within a few years even if they are preserved intact. As NARA's strategic response to meeting these challenges, ERA will preserve electronic records in a manner that enables requesters to access them on computer systems now and in the future. The ERA system will also, for the first time, automate basic functions in the lifecycle management of Federal records, including records scheduling and appraisal, and transfer of both electronic and non-electronic records to the National Archives, Presidential Libraries and Federal Records Centers.

Requested funding for 2009 will support the development of public access capabilities. Previous funding requests for ERA have been dedicated towards developing the ability to intake electronic records and safely store them in their original formats. However, most file formats will eventually become obsolete. Over several years, NARA plans to develop the ability to view electronic records regardless of the original files' format. This approach will both maximize NARA's ability to preserve and provide access to electronic records and reduce the risks involved in digital preservation. The 2009 requested funding will also address some requirements related to records schedules and appraisal that were not addressed in prior development activities.

The mission of the National Credit Union Administration (NCUA) is to facilitate the availability of credit union services to all eligible consumers, especially those of modest means, through an objective independent regulatory environment that protects credit union members. Credit unions are privately owned, cooperative associations organized for the purpose of promoting thrift among their members and creating a source of credit for provident and productive purposes.

The NCUA, through its operating fund, conducts activities prescribed by the Federal Credit Union Act of 1934, as amended, which include: (a) chartering new Federal credit unions; (b) determining field of membership of Federal credit unions; (c) promulgating rules and regulations; (d) performing regulatory and safety and soundness examinations; and (e) conducting administrative activities of the share insurance fund.

The NCUA funds its activities through assessments levied on all federally chartered credit unions, as well as funds drawn from the balance of the National Credit Union Share Insurance Fund as reimbursement for administrative activities.

In 2007, NCUA chartered three new Federal credit unions bringing the total number of Federal credit unions, as of September 30, 2007, to 5,068 with total assets of over $413 billion. In 2005, a PART analysis of NCUA's oversight of Federal credit unions has shown that it contributes to the safety and soundness of the credit union industry.

The National Credit Union Share Insurance Fund (NCUSIF) provides insurance for deposits in member accounts (shares) in Federal credit unions and State-chartered credit unions that apply and qualify for insurance, as authorized by Public Law 91-468.

Activities of the NCUSIF consist of: (a) providing member account insurance to at least $100,000; (b) providing cash and other assistance to insured credit unions in order to avoid insolvency; and (c) providing for liquidation or other disposition of the assets and liabilities of insolvent insured credit unions. The NCUSIF reimburses the NCUA operating fund for its share of the agency's administrative costs. This reimbursement percentage, which is reviewed and adjusted annually, is 53.3 percent for 2007 and 52.0 percent for 2008.

As of September 30, 2007, 8,163 natural person credit unions were insured by the NCUSIF with insured shares of $556 billion.

Pursuant to Public Law 98-369, each insured credit union is required to deposit and maintain in the NCUSIF one percent of its member share accounts. The fund is structured to be entirely self supporting through the monies paid by member credit unions. The monies received plus the income generated from investments are expected to cover all administrative and financial costs, as well as increase the fund balance proportionate to insured share growth. In addition, the NCUSIF has $100 million in borrowing authority from the Treasury for use in unforeseen emergencies.

The Credit Union Membership Access Act of 1998 (CUMAA) requires the NCUA Board to set a Normal Operating Level (equity ratio) for the NCUSIF between 1.2 and 1.5 percent. The equity ratio is defined as the total balance of the NCUSIF less unreserved contingent liabilities divided by the total amount of insured shares at year end. For 2007, the Board set the Normal Operating Level at 1.3 percent prior to the beginning of the calendar year.

In accordance with the CUMAA, NCUA is required to collect a premium from insured credit unions if the equity ratio falls below 1.2 percent of insured shares. In 2007, the income generated from the required one-percent deposit, explained above, eliminated the need to assess a premium. For 2008 and 2009, NCUA does not anticipate a premium assessment, although the Board may assess a premium if the equity ratio falls below 1.3 percent.

The Federal Deposit Insurance Reform Act of 2005 and the Federal Deposit Insurance Reform Conforming Amendments Act of 2005 changed the agency's share insurance rule. In this regard, effective April 1, 2006, the revised rule: 1) defines the "standard maximum share insurance amount" as $100,000 and provides that beginning in 2010, and in each subsequent 5-year period thereafter, NCUA and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation will jointly consider if an inflation adjustment is appropriate to increase that amount; 2) increases the share insurance limit for certain retirement accounts from $100,000 to $250,000, subject to the above inflation adjustments; and 3) provides pass-through coverage to each participant of an employee benefit plan, but limits the acceptance of shares in an employee benefit plan to insured credit unions that are well or adequately capitalized.

In 2006, a PART assessment rated the Share Insurance Fund as a "Moderately Effective" program. The NCUSIF was judged to be well managed and sound. A noteworthy area for enhancement that the PART review identified involved statutory limitations preventing implementation of a more fully risk-based capital structure under prompt corrective action.

The purpose of the National Credit Union Central Liquidity Facility, established under Public Law 95-630, is to provide loans to member credit unions for seasonal and emergency liquidity needs.

The two primary sources of funds for the Facility are stock subscriptions from credit unions and borrowings from the Federal Financing Bank. Credit unions that choose to become members of the Facility are required to purchase stock equal to one-half of one percent of their paid-in and unimpaired capital and surplus. One-half of the subscription in stock is transferred to the Facility. The remaining half of the subscription remains on call.

The Community Development Credit Union Revolving Loan Fund (CDRLF) was established by the Congress in 1979 under Section 130(e) of the Federal Credit Union Act to support credit unions that serve low-income communities. Public Law 99-609, enacted on November 6, 1986, transferred the CDRLF from the Department of Health and Human Services to NCUA.

The CDRLF provides loans and technical assistance grants to qualifying credit unions with a low-income designation. The NCUA disbursed 41 loans totaling $7.5 million in 2007. As of November 30, 2007, the CDRLF's loan portfolio totaled $13.4 million; the CDRLF is fully loaned. Additional loans will be funded as existing loans pay down. The increase in loan demand in 2007 can be attributed to low-income designated credit unions' desire to provide more and improved services to their members.

The CDRLF received $940,500 in appropriated funds in fiscal year 2007 to be used for technical assistance grants. As of September 30, 2007, the CDRLF obligated 100 percent of this appropriation. In 2007, funds appropriated for grants, supplemented by CDRLF investment income, were used to fund 307 grants. Technical assistance grants are made to low-income credit unions to help them improve the financial condition of their credit unions, provide financial services to members, and stimulate economic activities in the communities served.

A PART analysis of the CDRLF program has shown that it is well designed to meet its objectives and effectively targets its resources. NCUA is addressing the PART's other conclusions, which include developing long-term performance measures to demonstrate that credit unions serving low-income customers are contributing to increasing income, ownership, and employment opportunities.

The National Endowment for the Arts (NEA) supports excellence in the arts, brings the arts to all Americans, and provides leadership in arts education. In 2009, the Budget proposes $128.4 million for grants programs and associated costs, including American Masterpieces: Three Centuries of Artistic Genius grants, and Challenge America: Reaching Every Community.

Through American Masterpieces, NEA will continue to provide Americans with the opportunity to know and experience the best of our Nation's artistic achievements. The American Masterpieces' literary component, the Big Read, will continue NEA's commitment to support programs of indisputable artistic merit that engage communities large and small in all 50 States.

NEA will support these projects with public and private partners, including State arts agencies and regional arts organizations.

The National Foundation on the Arts and the Humanities Act of 1965, as amended, authorizes NEA to receive money and other donated property. Such gifts may be used, sold, or otherwise disposed of to support arts projects and activities.

This presentation also includes the Arts and Artifacts Indemnity Fund. The Arts and Artifacts Indemnity Act of 1975, as amended, authorizes the Federal Council on the Arts and Humanities to enter into indemnity agreements to cover certain eligible works of art on exhibition in the United States or abroad. Loss or damage claims certified by the Council are paid from this fund.

The National Endowment for the Humanities (NEH) supports educational and scholarly activities in the humanities, preserves America's cultural and intellectual resources, and provides opportunities for all Americans to engage in learning in the humanities. In 2009, the agency will continue We the People, a program designed to promote a broad understanding of the ideas, people, and events that have shaped our nation. Also supported is the agency's Digital Humanities Initiative, which encourages and funds projects that utilize or study the impact of digital technology on the humanities. NEH also will continue to support partnerships with state humanities councils; the strengthening of humanities teaching and learning in the nation's schools and higher educational institutions; efforts to preserve and increase access to books, U.S. newspapers, documents, and other reference materials; and museum exhibitions, documentary films and radio programming, and reading programs in the humanities that reach general audiences.

Support is provided through outright grants, matching grants, and a combination of the two. Eligible applicants include state humanities councils, schools, higher education institutions, libraries, museums, historical organizations, other cultural institutions, and individuals.

This presentation also includes the Gifts and Donations account. The National Foundation on the Arts and the Humanities Act of 1965, as amended, authorizes the Humanities Endowment to receive money and other donated property. Such gifts may be used, sold, or otherwise disposed of to support humanities projects and activities. Budget authority in this schedule reflects cash received each year by the Endowment.

The Board resolves representation disputes in industry, and remedies and prevents specified unfair labor practices by employers or labor organizations. Case intake and additional program statistics appear in the table below.

Field investigation.—Charges of unfair labor practices and petitions for elections to resolve representation disputes are investigated by regional office personnel. Approximately 95 percent of the unfair labor practice cases and over 88 percent of the representation cases are closed by settlement, dismissal, or withdrawal. The remainder are prepared for public hearing. The agency strives to maximize the voluntary settlement of all cases and to avoid litigation.

Administrative law judge hearing.—Administrative law judges conduct public hearings in unfair labor practice cases. Their findings and recommendations are set forth in their decisions.

Board adjudication.—In an unfair labor practice case, a judge's decision becomes a Board order if no exceptions are filed. About 30 percent of these decisions become automatic Board orders or are complied with voluntarily. The remainder, with exceptions filed, requires contested Board decision. In representation cases, regional directors initially decide the issues by Board delegation. The Board itself decides representation issues on referral from regional directors or by granting a request for review of a regional director's decision. The Board also rules on objection and challenge questions in election cases.

Securing compliance with Board orders.—If the parties do not voluntarily comply with the Board's order involving unfair labor practices, the Board must request that the appellate courts enforce its decisions.

Mediator and alternative dispute resolution (ADR) services.—The National Mediation Board mediates disputes over wages, hours, and working conditions for some 746 rail and air carriers and approximately 795,000 employees in the two industries.

The Board also provides technical assistance to enable labor and industry representatives to explore informally the relevant economic and noneconomic problems that condition collective bargaining in the railroad and airline industries. The Board's ADR program provides collective bargaining training, facilitation, and grievance mediation services to the labor-management community.

Emergency disputes.—When the parties fail to resolve their disputes through mediation, they are urged to submit their differences to arbitration. If neither mediation nor voluntary arbitration is successful, the President, when notified of disputes which substantially threaten to interrupt essential service, may appoint emergency boards to investigate and report on the dispute. Such reports usually serve as a basis for resolving the disputes.

Arbitration services.—Arbitration is governed by sections 3 and 7 of the Railway Labor Act. Railroad employee grievances resulting from disputes over the interpretation or application of collective bargaining contracts may be brought for settlement to the National Railroad Adjustment Board (NRAB). The divisions of the NRAB are composed of an equal number of carrier and union representatives compensated by the party or parties they represent. Public Law 89-456 provides for the adjustment of disputes involving grievances resulting from interpretation or application of bargaining agreements in the railroad industry and for disputes otherwise referable to the NRAB. In these disputes, the National Mediation Board compensates the neutral selected to help resolve these grievances. Administrative direction and support for the public law boards, special boards of adjustment, and the NRAB are provided by Federal employees who are compensated by the National Mediation Board.

The National Transportation Safety Board (NTSB), as an independent nonregulatory agency, is charged with promoting transportation safety through the investigation of accidents, the conduct of special studies, the development of recommendations to prevent accidents, the evaluation of the effectiveness of other Government agencies in preventing transportation accidents, and the review of appeals of adverse certificate and civil penalty actions taken by the Administrators of agencies of the Department of Transportation involving airman and seaman certificates and licenses.

In 2009, the Administration requests a total funding level of $88 million for NTSB Salaries and Expenses to allow the NTSB to fulfill its role in improving safety on the Nation's transportation system.

The National Transportation Safety Board is mandated by Congress to investigate all catastrophic transportation accidents and, therefore, has no control over the frequency of costly accident investigations. The emergency fund provides a funding mechanism by which periodic accident investigation cost fluctuations can be met without delaying critical phases of the investigations. The current balance of $2 million is sufficient to cover unanticipated costs associated with an increased number of accidents, and thus the Administration does not propose new funding in 2009.

The National Veterans Business Development Corporation (NVBDC) was established under P.L. 106-50 with the purpose of providing veterans with access to education, access to capital and services, and access to markets. In assessing these goals, the NVBDC has attempted to build partnerships and conduct outreach with Federal departments and agencies, veterans service organizations, community based organizations and private sector corporations. NVBDC's original authorization provided for start-up capital but directed that the organization implement a plan to become financially self-sufficient. Consistent with this original design, the 2009 Budget provides no new funding for NVBDC.

NEIGHBORHOOD REINVESTMENT CORPORATION

Federal Funds

PAYMENT TO THE NEIGHBORHOOD REINVESTMENT CORPORATION

For payment to the Neighborhood Reinvestment Corporation for use in neighborhood reinvestment activities, as authorized by the Neighborhood Reinvestment Corporation Act (42 U.S.C. 8101-8107), [$119,800,000, of which $5,000,000 shall be for a multi-family rental housing program] $125,000,000.

For an additional amount, [$180,000,000] $25,000,000 shall be made available until expended to the Neighborhood Reinvestment Corporation for mortgage foreclosure mitigation activities, under the following terms and conditions:

(1) The Neighborhood Reinvestment Corporation ("NRC"), shall make grants to counseling intermediaries approved by the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) or the NRC (with match to be determined by the NRC based on affordability and the economic conditions of an area; a match also may be waived by the NRC based on the aforementioned conditions) to provide mortgage foreclosure mitigation assistance primarily to States and areas with high rates of defaults and foreclosures primarily in the sub prime housing market to help eliminate the default and foreclosure of mortgages of owner-occupied single-family homes that are at risk of such foreclosure. Other than areas with high rates of defaults and foreclosures, grants may also be provided to approved counseling intermediaries based on a geographic analysis of the Nation by the NRC which determines where there is a prevalence of sub prime mortgages that are risky and likely to fail, including any trends for mortgages that are likely to default and face foreclosure. A State Housing Finance Agency may also be eligible where the State Housing Finance Agency meets all the requirements under this paragraph. A HUD- or NRC-approved counseling intermediary shall meet certain mortgage foreclosure mitigation assistance counseling requirements, as determined by the NRC, and shall be approved by HUD or the NRC as meeting these requirements.

(2) Mortgage foreclosure mitigation assistance shall only be made available to homeowners of owner-occupied homes with mortgages in default or in danger of default. These mortgages shall likely be subject to a foreclosure action and homeowners will be provided such assistance that shall consist of activities that are likely to prevent foreclosures and result in the long-term affordability of the mortgage retained pursuant to such activity or another positive outcome for the homeowner. No funds made available under this paragraph may be provided directly to lenders or homeowners to discharge outstanding mortgage balances or for any other direct debt reduction payments.

(3) The use of Mortgage Foreclosure Mitigation Assistance by approved counseling intermediaries and State Housing Finance Agencies shall involve a reasonable analysis of the borrower's financial situation, an evaluation of the current value of the property that is subject to the mortgage, counseling regarding the assumption of the mortgage by another non-Federal party, counseling regarding the possible purchase of the mortgage by a non-Federal third party, counseling and advice of all likely restructuring and refinancing strategies or the approval of a work-out strategy by all interested parties.

(4) [NRC shall award $50,000,000 in mortgage foreclosure mitigation grants for States and areas with the greatest needs within 60 days of enactment. Additional funds may be awarded once the NRC certifies that HUD- or NRC-approved counseling intermediaries and State Housing Finance Agencies have the need for additional funds in States and areas with high rates of mortgage foreclosures, defaults, or related activities and the expertise to use these funds effectively.] The NRC may provide up to 15 percent of the total funds under this paragraph to its own charter members with expertise in foreclosure prevention counseling, subject to a certification by the NRC that the procedures for selection do not consist of any procedures or activities that could be construed as an unacceptable conflict of interest or have the appearance of impropriety.

(5) NRC- or HUD-approved counseling entities and State Housing Finance Agencies receiving funds under this paragraph shall have demonstrated experience in successfully working with financial institutions as well as borrowers facing default, delinquency and foreclosure as well as documented counseling capacity, outreach capacity, past successful performance and positive outcomes with documented counseling plans (including post mortgage foreclosure mitigation counseling), loan workout agreements and loan modification agreements.

[(6) Of the total amount made available under this paragraph, up to $5,000,000 may be made available to build the mortgage foreclosure and default mitigation counseling capacity of counseling intermediaries through NRC training courses with HUD- or NRC-approved counseling intermediaries and their partners, except that private financial institutions that participate in NRC training shall pay market rates for such training.]

[(7)] (6) Of the total amount made available under this paragraph, up to 4 percent may be used for associated administrative expenses for the NRC to carry out activities provided under this section.

[(8)] (7) Mortgage foreclosure mitigation assistance may include a budget for outreach and advertising, and training, as determined by the NRC.

[(9) The NRC shall report bi-annually to the House and Senate Committees on Appropriations as well as the Senate Banking Committee and House Financial Services Committee on its efforts to mitigate mortgage default. Such reports shall identify successful strategies and methods for preserving homeownership and the long-term affordability of at-risk mortgages and shall include recommended efforts that will or likely can assist in the success of this program as well as an analysis of any policy and procedures that failed to result in successful mortgage foreclosure mitigation. The report shall include an analysis of the details and use of any post mitigation counseling of assisted borrowers designed to ensure the continued long-term affordability of the mortgages which were the subject of the mortgage foreclosure mitigation assistance.] (Transportation, Housing and Urban Development, and Related Agencies Appropriations Act, 2008.)

Established by Congress in 1978, the Neighborhood Reinvestment Corporation (NRC) is a public/private partnership leveraging public funds to support locally-driven community development activities. The organization is also known as, "NeighborWorks America." As a network of about 235 partners, NeighborWorks organizations are chartered non-profit organizations operating under different names and have a presence in all 50 states, the District of Columbia and Puerto Rico — in urban, suburban, and rural communities. Over the past 30 years, the NeighborWorks network has replicated successful neighborhood preservation projects nationwide that focus on affordable rental housing and homeownership, as well as housing counseling. NRC provides grants and programmatic support, training and information on best practices, and access to Neighborhood Housing Services of America, a secondary mortgage market created for the NeighborWorks network, to NeighborWorks organizations. NRC also operates a training institute that provides courses to NeighborWorks organizations and other community-based organizations to increase their capacity and training in specific fields, such as housing counseling.

NRC receives both Federal and non-Federal funding to finance its program activities. The Budget provides $125 million in base funding and an additional one-time increase of $25 million for activities to preserve homeownership and those related to foreclosure mitigation and prevention. Foreclosure mitigation activities include training, increasing the number of foreclosure prevention counselors, grants to organizations that provide foreclosure prevention, and education and outreach.

Nuclear Reactor Safety.—A major part of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission's (NRC) mission is to ensure that its licensees design, construct, and operate civilian reactor facilities safely. The Atomic Energy Act and the Energy Reorganization Act provide the foundation for regulating the Nation's civilian nuclear power industry. Nuclear reactor safety encompasses all NRC efforts to ensure that civilian nuclear reactor facilities and research and test reactors are operated in a manner that provides adequate protection of public health and safety and the environment, and protects against radiological sabotage and theft or diversion of special nuclear materials. These efforts include reactor licensing; reactor license renewal; operator licensing; financial assurance; inspection; performance assessment; new reactor licensing; identification and resolution of safety issues; reactor regulatory research; regulation development; operating experience evaluation; incident investigation; homeland security efforts (including threat assessment, mitigating strategies, and emergency preparedness); emergency response; investigation of alleged wrongdoing by licensees, applicants, contractors, or vendors; imposition of enforcement sanctions for violations of NRC requirements; and reactor technical and regulatory training. In response to renewed interest in building nuclear power reactors, NRC will conduct pre-licensing and licensing reviews and will develop necessary regulatory infrastructure to support these reviews. NRC participates in international safety support activities, including some that support the Agency's domestic mission and others that support broader U.S. national interests. These activities include international policy formulation, treaty implementation, international information exchange, international safety and safeguard assistance, and deterring nuclear proliferation. NRC will continue to maintain its security and safeguards program for civilian reactor facilities and address any significant weaknesses.

Nuclear Materials and Waste Safety.—Nuclear materials safety encompasses all NRC efforts to ensure that NRC-regulated aspects of nuclear fuel cycle facilities and nuclear materials activities are handled in a manner that provides adequate protection of public health and safety and that promotes the common defense and security, including implementation of P.L. 109-58, the Energy Policy Act of 2005. These efforts include licensing/certification, inspection, and enforcement activities; import-export licensing of nuclear materials and equipment; regulation and guidance development; nuclear materials research; identification and resolution of safety and safeguard issues; improved regulatory control of radiological sources; operating experience evaluation; incident investigation; threat assessment; emergency response; technical training; implementation of State and tribal programs; and investigation of alleged wrongdoing by licensees, applicants, certificate holders, and contractors.

Nuclear waste safety encompasses NRC's high-level waste regulatory activities associated with high-level waste disposal at the potential Yucca Mountain repository as mandated by the Nuclear Waste Policy Act of 1982, as amended, and the Energy Policy Act of 1992; regulatory and oversight activities for decommissioning, which involves safely removing a facility from service and reducing residual radiation to a level that permits the property to be released for unrestricted or restricted use; environmental protection; oversight of certain

Department of Energy radioactive waste incidental to reprocessing; the safe and secure storage and transportation of radioactive materials through the certification of spent fuel storage containers and transportation packages; and waste safety research. Low-level radioactive waste activities associated with the disposal of waste are addressed in accordance with the Low-Level Radioactive Waste Policy Act of 1980, as amended. NRC will continue to maintain the security and safeguards program for decommissioning reactors, spent fuel storage installations, transportation packages, and storage cask designs.

The Office of Special Counsel (OSC): 1) investigates Federal employee and applicant allegations of prohibited personnel practices (including reprisal for whistleblowing) and other activities prohibited by civil service law, and when appropriate, prosecutes before the Merit Systems Protection Board (MSPB); 2) provides a safe channel for whistleblowing by Federal employees and applicants; 3) enforces the Uniform Services Employment and Reemployment Rights Act (USERRA); and 4) advises on and enforces the Hatch Act. OSC may transmit whistleblower allegations to the agency head concerned and require an agency investigation. OSC then submits a report to the Congress and the President when appropriate.

Overall in 2007, there were more than 5,629 instances for which the assistance or action of OSC was sought by Federal employees and other persons. Many prohibited personnel practice cases investigated by OSC are resolved without recourse to formal proceedings before MSPB. In 2007, OSC obtained 72 favorable actions, and efforts to obtain such negotiated resolutions will continue. In 2007, OSC also filed one disciplinary action complaint before MSPB in a Hatch Act matter. OSC also issued 2,792 Hatch Act advisory opinions (both written and oral) to people who sought advice. During 2007, OSC's Disclosure Unit received 482 new disclosure matters for possible referral. The Disclosure Unit referred matters to agency heads for their review a total of 42 times during 2007.

OSC revised its Strategic Plan for the five year period beginning in 2007. These revisions focus on developing and implementing quantifiable performance measures tied to the agency's timeliness in handling cases, the quality of OSC's work product and decisions, and fulfillment of OSC's education and outreach responsibilities. The Strategic Plan continues to emphasize cross-training and strategic management of human capital in order for the agency and its individual units to use their resources to maximum effect. The Special Counsel's emphasis on the agency's expanding USERRA missions is also noted.

Case type	Case received 2007	Case process 2007
Prohibited personnel practice complaints .....	1927	1953
Hatch Act complaints .....	282	252
Whistleblower disclosures .....	482	467
USERRA referrals .....	4	4
USERRA demo project claims .....	142	123
Hatch Act advisory opinions issued .....	2792

The Veterans Benefits Improvement Act of 2004 (P.L. 108-454) established a demonstration project that routes approximately 150 additional USERRA claims annually to OSC for investigation rather than the Department of Labor. This demonstration project started in February 2005 and extended through the end of 2007. OSC has assembled a dedicated USERRA Unit to investigate and prosecute these cases.

For 2008 and 2009, OSC projects intake for prohibited personnel practice cases and disclosure cases will continue to increase according to recent trends.

The funding requested for 2009 will enable OSC to maintain the staffing level necessary to operate the agency without building up backlogs.

The Office of the Federal Coordinator for Alaska Natural Gas Transportation Projects (OFC), established by Public Law 108-324, is an independent agency in the Executive Branch, pursuant to the Alaska Natural Gas Pipeline Act of 2004. The Federal Coordinator is responsible for coordinating all Federal activities for an Alaska natural gas transportation project, including joint surveillance and monitoring with the State of Alaska during construction of a project and for one year following the completion of the project. An Alaska natural gas transportation project could deliver significant natural gas supply to the U.S. lower 48 states.

The four main roles of the OFC are: (1) coordinate the roles of the Federal Agencies associated with an ANGPA or Alaska Natural Gas Transportation Act (ANGTA) project; (2) ensure compliance of a project with either ANGPA or ANGTA;

(3) carry out the roles of the Federal Inspector under ANGTA filing; and (4) provide a liaison function to ensure adequate communication with Congress, State of Alaska, Federal and Canadian agencies.

Action by the State of Alaska in reaching agreement with potential project owners as to fiscal terms is necessary before project development can move forward. The 2009 Budget proposes $4.4 million in appropriated funds and up to $4.7 million in fees, charges, and commissions to support the activities of this Office.

The Postal Reorganization Act of 1970, Public Law 91-375, converted the Post Office Department into the U.S. Postal Service, an independent establishment within the executive branch. The Postal Service commenced operations July 1, 1971. This agency is charged with providing patrons with reliable mail service at reasonable rates and fees.

The U.S. Postal Service is governed by an 11-member Board of Governors, including nine Governors appointed by the President, a Postmaster General who is selected by the Governors, and a Deputy Postmaster General who is selected by the Governors and the Postmaster General.

Effective in 1986, the Postal Service Fund (Fund) was included in the congressional and executive budget process and taken into account in making calculations under the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985 (Gramm-Rudman-Hollings). The Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1989 amended title 39 of the U.S. Code by adding a new section, 2009a, which provides that, beginning in 1990, the receipts and disbursements of the Fund shall not be considered as part of the congressional and executive budget process and shall not be taken into account in making calculations under Gramm-Rudman-Hollings.

Programs.—Included are all postal activities providing window services; processing, delivery, and transportation of mail; research and development; administration of postal field activities; and associated expenses of providing facilities and financing.

In December 2002, the President's Commission on the United States Postal Service was created to recommend legislative and administrative steps necessary to effect reforms needed to meet the challenges faced by the Postal Service and ensure the viability of postal services (Executive Order 13278, December 11, 2002). A series of public meetings were held and a wide range of postal stakeholders from postal unions and management associations, the mailing industry, competitors, academics and economists were heard. In July 2003, a final report was issued to the President containing recommendations for changes the Commission deems necessary to protect the nation's access to affordable, universal mail service long into the future.

On December 20, 2006, the President signed P.L. 109-435, the Postal Accountability and Enhancement Act. The Act made a number of changes affecting the operations and oversight of the Postal Service, many of which are consistent with the recommendations of the President's Commission. The Act provided for separate accounting and reporting for Postal Service activities related to: (1) products where the Postal Service dominates the market; and (2) products where the Postal Service is in a competitive market. (Due to the recent enactment of the legislation, the Budget does not yet reflect the separation of the two activities.) The Act amended the process for determining rate increases for market-dominant products, in part by imposing a limitation on rate increases for at least the next 10 years linked to the Consumer Price Index. This will provide the Postal Service with pricing flexibility and ratepayers with a degree of rate predictability. The Act also replaced the Postal Rate Commission with a Postal Regulatory Commission with expanded authorities, including subpoena powers.

Financing.—The activities of the U.S. Postal Service are financed from the following sources: (1) mail and services revenue; (2) reimbursements from Federal and non-Federal sources; (3) proceeds from borrowing; (4) interest from U.S. securities and other investments; and (5) appropriations by the Congress. All receipts and deposits are made to the Postal Service Fund and are available without fiscal year limitation for payment of all expenses incurred, retirement of obligations, investment in capital assets, and investment in obligations and securities.

Separate legislation also increased the Postal Service's statutory borrowing authority beginning in 1991. Section 2005 of title 39, United States Code, as amended, increased the Postal Service's borrowing authority by $2.5 billion in 1991 for a revised ceiling of $12.5 billion and an additional $2.5 billion in 1992 for a revised total ceiling of $15 billion. The total annual increase in net outstanding debt was also increased to annually grow by up to $2.0 billion in obligations issued for the purpose of capital improvements and by $1.0 billion for the purpose of paying operating expenses. P.L. 109-435 removed the separate limitations on borrowing for capital improvements and operating expenses so that under the $15 billion debt cap, the annual increase in outstanding debt cannot now exceed a combined total of $3.0 billion. As of September 30, 2009, it is expected that the total debt instruments issued and outstanding pursuant to this authority will amount to $6.6 billion.

Operating.—Estimated revenue will total approximately $79.3 billion in 2009. This includes $79.1 billion from mail and services revenue, $61 million from investment income, and $89 million for revenue foregone appropriations in 2009. Total expenses are estimated at approximately $80.4 billion in 2009.

The Postal Reorganization Act of 1970 established the Postal Service as a fully self-sufficient, independent entity. Postal revenues were to cover the full costs of postal operations. When the Act was passed, the Postal Service received substantial taxpayer subsidies, both appropriated and unappropriated. Consistent with the intent of the 1970 Act, the Congress has taken steps over time to reduce these subsidies, particularly by requiring the Postal Service to assume greater portions of its personnel-related costs. At the end of 2007, the Postal Service employed 785,929 persons, and is the Nation's second largest employer. Under the 1974 Civil Service Retirement Fund Postal Employee Benefits Act, the Postal Service assumed responsibility for paying unfunded retirement costs from wage schedule increases under postal labor contracts. These costs are not covered by normal employee/employer contributions to the retirement fund. The 1985 Reconciliation Act shifted responsibility for paying health benefit costs of Postal annuitants retiring after 1986 from the Office of Personnel Management (OPM) to the Postal Service. The 1987 Reconciliation Act had the Postal Service make one-time payments to defray annuitant health benefit costs in 1988 and 1989 and retirement COLA costs in 1988. (Retirement COLAs, like wage schedule increases, result in retirement liabilities not covered by normal retirement fund contributions.) Under the 1989 Reconciliation Act, the Postal Service assumed responsibility for paying health benefits of survivors of post-86 annuitants and unfunded retirement COLA liabilities for post-86 annuitants.

The Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1990 superseded certain existing legislation and expanded the Postal Service's responsibility for benefit costs of postal annuitants. Effective October 1, 1990, the Postal Service was required to fund Civil Service Retirement System (CSRS) COLAs and the employer's share of Federal Employees Health Benefits Program (FEHBP) premiums for postal annuitants who retired after June 30, 1971, and their survivors. In addition, the Postal Service was required to fund the retroactive CSRS COLA and FEHBP premium costs for which the Postal Service would have been liable if the provisions of this new legislation had been in effect as of July 1, 1971.

Under the Omnibus Reconciliation Act of 1993, the Postal Service was required to make certain payments for past COLAs and health benefits, over and above any other payments required by law, of $693 million to the Civil Service Retirement and Disability Fund, and $348 million to the Employees Health Benefits Fund. These two amounts were made in three equal annual installments, beginning in fiscal year 1996.

The Balanced Budget Act of 1997 repealed the authorization for transitional appropriations to the Postal Service which had funded the liabilities of the former Post Office Department to the Employees' Compensation Fund. Effective October 1, 1997, these liabilities became liabilities of the Postal Service payable out of the Postal Service Fund.

Early in 2003, OPM determined that, at the then-current rate of funding, the Postal Service would pay substantially more than needed to fund the estimated future benefits of postal employees and retirees participating in the Civil Service Retirement System. This projected over-funding resulted from interest earned by the fund in excess of the assumed statutory rate of five percent. As a result, the Administration proposed and the Congress enacted CSRS reform legislation that was signed by the President on April 23, 2003 (P.L. 108-18). The provisions of P.L. 108-18 eliminate all future retirement liability payments related to general wage increases and the retirement COLA payments. In addition, the Postal Service funded CSRS retirement benefits at 17.4 percent of current CSRS employees' wages, beginning in May 2003. This was a dynamic funding requirement, not a static requirement, thus employer contributions can change based on interest earnings and amounts that are needed to fund the full cost of the future benefit. Annually, OPM was directed to calculate the amount of any potential supplemental retirement liability and the Postal Service was required to fund any such liability in annual payments through September 30, 2043.

P.L. 109-435 created the Postal Service Retiree Health Benefits Fund to put the Postal Service on a path that fully funds its substantial retiree (annuitant) health benefits liabilities. This new Fund receives from the Postal Service: 1) The pension savings provided to the Postal Service by the Postal Civil Service Retirement System Funding Reform Act of 2003 (P.L. 108-18) that were held in escrow during 2006; 2) A 10-year stream of payments defined within P.L. 109-435 to begin the liquidation of the Postal Services unfunded liability for post-retirement health benefits; 3) Beginning in 2017, payments for the actuarial cost of Postal Service contributions for the post-retirement health benefits for its current employees; and 4) The surplus resources of the Civil Service Retirement and Disability Fund that are not needed to finance future retirement benefits under CSRS to current or former employees of the Postal Service that are attributable to civilian employment with the Postal Service, including the savings from shifting the responsibility for retirement credit related to military service from the Postal Service to the Treasury (effectively eliminating the need for the dynamic CSRS funding payments and supplemental liability payments noted in the previous paragraph). As a result of this new health benefits financing system, the Postal Service will cease to pay annual premium costs for its post-1971 current annuitants directly to the Employees and Retired Employees Health Benefits Fund in 2017. Instead, these premium payments will be paid from amounts that the Postal Service remits to this new fund. Payments for a proportion of the premium costs of Postal Service annuitants pre-1971 service would continue to be paid by the General Fund of the Treasury through the Government Payment for Annuitants, Employees Health Benefits account.

United States Postal Service (USPS) Office of Inspector General (OIG) is an independent organization charged with reporting to Congress on the overall efficiency, effectiveness, and economy of USPS programs and operations. The OIG meets this responsibility by conducting audits, investigations, and other reviews. The OIG focuses on the prevention, identification, and elimination of 1) waste, fraud, and abuse; 2) violations of laws, rules, and regulations; and 3) inefficiencies in USPS programs and operations.

Pursuant to Public Law 109-435, the 2009 appropriation request of the Office of Inspector General of the U.S. Postal Service is $239,356,000.

Section 603(b)(1) of Public Law 109-435 (Postal Accountability and Enhancement Act) authorizes appropriations for the Office of Inspector General out of the off-budget Postal Service Fund beginning in 2009. The authorization resulted in the reclassification of the Office of Inspector Generals spending from off-budget mandatory to off-budget discretionary. For the sake of comparison, the above schedules reflect this treatment as if it also applied to 2007 and 2008.

The Postal Regulatory Commission is an independent agency that has exercised regulatory oversight over the U.S. Postal Service (USPS) since its creation by the Postal Reorganization Act of 1970. That oversight consisted primarily of conducting public, on-the-record hearings concerning proposed rates, mail classification, and major service changes, and recommended decisions for action to the Postal Service Board of Governors.

The Postal Accountability and Enhancement Act (PAEA)(Public Law 109-435) assigned new responsibilities to the Commission, including providing regulatory oversight of the pricing of USPS products and services, ensuring USPS transparency and accountability, and serving as a forum to act on complaints with postal products and services. The Commission provides leadership and recommends policies that foster a robust and viable postal system.

Pursuant to Public Law 109-435, the 2009 appropriation request of the Postal Regulatory Commission is $14,043,000.

Section 603(a) of PAEA authorizes appropriations for the Commission out of the off-budget Postal Service Fund beginning in 2009. The authorization resulted in the reclassification of the Commission's spending from off-budget mandatory to off-budget discretionary. For the sake of comparison, the above schedules reflect this treatment as if it also applied to 2007 and 2008.

The Presidio Trust is a wholly owned Government corporation established by the Omnibus Parks and Public Lands Management Act of 1996 (Public Law 104-333) to manage, improve, maintain and lease property in the Presidio of San Francisco. After this former military base was transferred to the National Park Service (NPS), the Trust was created to take over responsibility for managing the hundreds of houses, office buildings, and other facilities in an innovative manner that uses private-sector resources, but is consistent with surrounding NPS lands. This appropriation funds the operation and capital improvements of the Trust.

The Intelligence Reform and Terrorism Prevention Act of 2004 (IRTPA) created the Privacy and Civil Liberties Oversight Board (PCLOB). This law required the PCLOB to “ensure that concerns with respect to privacy and civil liberties are appropriately considered in the implementation of laws, regulations, and executive branch policies related to efforts to protect the Nation against terrorism.” IRTPA placed the Board within the Executive Office of the President. The Implementing Recommendations of the 9/11 Commission Act of 2007, signed by President Bush in August 2007, reconstituted the Board as a separate agency within the Executive Branch.

All five members of the reconstituted Board will be nominated by the President and confirmed by the Senate for staggered six-year terms. The Board has two main responsibilities: 1) advising the President and the heads of departments and agencies on issues that have privacy and civil liberties implications and 2) reviewing regulations and executive branch policies related to protecting the Nation from terrorism. The Congress receives annual reports from the PCLOB detailing its activities during the year.

All railroad retirees receive the equivalent of a social security benefit, and they may also receive other add-ons including rail industry pension payments, windfall payments, and supplemental annuities. Social security benefits for former railroad employees are funded by the social security trust funds, and rail industry pension payments are the responsibility of the rail sector.

Under current law, a financial interchange occurs once each year between the social security trust funds and the social security equivalent benefit (SSEB) account. SSEB receives monthly advances from the general fund equal to an estimate of the transfer SSEB would have received for the previous month if the financial interchange transfers were on a monthly basis. Advances from the previous year are repaid annually to the general fund immediately after the financial interchange is received. In 2007, $3,232 million was advanced and $3,240 million was repaid.

The primary mission of the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) is to protect investors; maintain fair, orderly, and efficient markets; and facilitate capital formation. The Commission's five major programs include the following:

Enforcement: The Division of Enforcement investigates and prosecutes violations of the federal securities laws and works closely with the Department of Justice and U.S. Attorneys offices to coordinate and assist in criminal prosecutions. In 2009 the Division will continue to maintain a presence in all core areas of securities law enforcement. Serious accounting frauds and cases involving conflicts of interest in the financial services sector will likely remain the most important areas, but the Division also will continue to focus on combating insider trading, promoting transparent financial statements, protecting seniors from investment scams, uncovering wrongdoing in the municipal securities market, and other important areas.

Compliance Inspections and Examinations: The Office of Compliance Inspections and Examinations (OCIE) conducts an examination program to detect violations of the federal securities laws and evaluate internal compliance controls. Given the increasing number, complexity, and geographical diversity of registered investment advisers, investment companies, and broker-dealers, OCIE does not conduct periodic examinations of every entity but instead uses risk-based methodologies to focus resources on those activities that could pose the greatest risk to investors and the integrity of the markets. OCIE plans to continue examining higher-risk investment advisory firms once every three years, proactively assisting registered firms in complying with federal securities laws, and focusing on compliance of high-risk brokerage firms.

Corporation Finance: The Division of Corporation Finance establishes disclosure requirements and monitors disclosure to ensure investors are provided information necessary to make informed investment decisions, and to help prevent fraud and misrepresentation in securities transactions. In FY 2009, the Division expects to review about one-third of reporting companies to make sure the filings are accurate and complete and to satisfy the review requirement of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002. The Division also plans to review the implementation of the rules requiring filers to make their proxy materials available on the Internet, and to continue its work on promoting the use of interactive data in filings. Additionally, the Division will continue analyzing how foreign private issuers are applying International Financial Reporting Standards (IFRS) in SEC filings and evaluate the effectiveness, consistency, and transparency of the IFRS financial statements.

Trading and Markets: The Division of Trading and Markets (formerly known as Market Regulation) oversees self-regulatory organizations (SROs), monitors securities markets and broker-dealer operations, and develops regulatory strategies. In FY 2009, the Division will likely face significant new challenges regarding the regulation and supervision of the major securities markets, including analyzing the implications of cross-border unions of U.S. and non-U.S. SROs. The Division will continue rulemaking efforts related to short sales of securities, anti-manipulation, and over-the-counter markets, as well as continue to review SRO rule proposals. The Division plans to carry out initiatives to modernize the national market system and to address SRO governance and transparency.

Investment Management: The Division of Investment Management drafts regulations, provides interpretive advice, and reviews disclosure documents filed from investment companies and investment advisers. The Division's top strategic priority for FY 2009 will be to implement new rules under consideration by the Commission that would provide mutual fund investors with more reader-friendly disclosure. The Division also will continue to promote the use of interactive data that would enable investors to search, analyze, and compare the information in fund disclosure documents or financial reports. In FY 2009, the Division plans to review the disclosures of about one-third of investment company portfolios, as required by the Sarbanes-Oxley Act.

Several additional program offices directly support the major programs, including the Office of Investor Education and Advocacy, the Office of the Chief Accountant, and the Office of International Affairs. In FY 2009, these offices will focus their efforts on:

—assessing the views and needs of retail investors and ensuring that those views inform the Commission's regulatory policies and disclosure programs;

—overseeing the Financial Accounting Standards Board's standard setting activities, including ongoing major projects to simplify and codify accounting standards;

—addressing issues relating to convergence between IFRS and U.S. generally accepted accounting principles;

—maintaining and expanding information sharing arrangements with foreign regulators responsible for oversight of many of the world's largest stock markets; and —promoting mutual recognition between nations of their oversight of exchanges, broker-dealers, investment advisers, and asset managers.

The SEC is funded through offsetting fees collected pursuant to section 6(b) of the Securities Act of 1933, and sections 13(e), 14(g) and 31 of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934. The 2009 Budget assumes $1.3 billion in fees and proposes to allow the SEC to use $871 million of the fee collections to finance its operations in 2009.

The Administration has conducted PARTs on each of the five major programs. The PART for the Trading and Markets Program (formerly known as Market Regulation) was completed in FY 2007 and earned an "effective" rating, the highest rating designation for a PART evaluation. The Commission is working to address the PARTs' conclusions and plans for continued improvement.

Note: Because PCAOB does not report budgetary data to Treasury, budget estimates were derived from PCAOB's financial data.

The Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002 (P.L. 107–204) established the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board (PCAOB) to oversee the audit of public companies that are subject to federal securities laws. PCAOB was created to protect the interests of investors by regulating the preparation of informative, accurate, and independent audit reports for companies whose securities are sold to, and held by and for, public investors. Funding for PCAOB comes from registration fees paid by public accounting firms and accounting support fees paid by public companies. For the first time this year, the Budget shows the PCAOB's operational expenses net of payments from its excess working capital reserves. In addition, the Budget includes net interest earned from the Board's working capital reserve.

Note: Because the Standard Setting Body does not provide budgetary data to the Treasury, budget estimates were derived from the Standard Setting Body's financial data.

The Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002 (P.L. 107–204) authorizes the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) to designate a private entity as a standard setting body. This standard setting body will set accounting principles that will be "generally accepted" for the purposes of federal securities laws. Funding for the standard setting body comes from Accounting Support Fees, paid by public companies. The private entity currently designated as the standard setting body is the Financial Accounting Standards Board (FASB).

The Governmental Accounting Standards Board (GASB) establishes generally accepted accounting principles that are used by many states and local governments. GASB operates under the oversight of the Financial Accounting Foundation (FAF), which also oversees the FASB. Unlike FASB, which is funded through accounting support fees, GASB is funded by voluntary payments and contributions from states and local governments and the financial community, and through sales of its publications. The GASB often operates at a deficit that is paid for by the reserves of the FAF. GASB has solicited comments from the industry on securing a stable funding source. The SEC has also issued a proposal to increase compliance with GASB's accounting principles and to secure a stable funding source through mandatory collections from state and local issuers.

For the first time this year, the chart above shows the Standard Setting Body's operational expenses net of payments from excess reserves stemming from the sale of FASB publications. In addition, the chart now displays net interest earned from the Standard Setting Body's operating fund.

The Telecommunications Development Fund (TDF) was created in 1996 by Public Law 104-104 with the objective of promoting access to capital for small businesses, enhancing competition in the telecommunications industry, and improving the delivery of telecommunication services to rural areas. TDF receives interest earnings from deposits on spectrum auctions. Through 2009, TDF will have collected approximately $110 million in interest that would have otherwise been deposited in the Treasury and benefited taxpayers. The Budget proposes termination of TDF as the organization has had no material impact in meeting its statutory goals.

The Tennessee Valley Authority (TVA) was created in 1933 as a Government-owned corporation for the unified development of a river basin comprised of parts of seven States. The agency finances its program primarily from proceeds available from current power operations and borrowings against future power revenues.

TVA's Non-Power Programs.—TVA operates a series of 49 dams and 47 reservoirs to reduce the risk of flooding, enable year-round navigation, supply affordable and reliable electricity, improve water quality and water supply, provide recreational opportunities, stimulate economic growth, and provide a wide range of other public benefits. TVA is responsible for critical stewardship activities within the Tennessee Valley which include: water release regulation; maintenance of dam machinery and spillway gates; modifications on nine main and four auxiliary navigation locks and associated mooring facilities; improvement of water quality and supply; management of shoreline erosion; regulation of shoreline development along the Tennessee River and its tributaries; planning and management of 293,000 acres of public land; and operation of public recreation areas. These services are funded entirely by TVA's power revenues and its user fees.

TVA's Power Program.—TVA supplies electric power to an area of 80,000 square miles in parts of the seven Tennessee Valley States. Income from power operations, net of interest charges and depreciation, and other operating expenses is estimated at $1,020 million in 2009. Power generating facilities are financed from power proceeds and borrowings.

TVA Policy Initiatives.—TVA's new Board of Directors completed a comprehensive review of TVA's current and future operations, resulting in the adoption of a new long-term strategic plan. The strategic plan addresses such topics as growth in energy demand in the Valley, guiding financial principles, asset management, energy efficiency, conservation, and environmental stewardship. TVA recently filed its second Annual Report on Form 10-K with the Securities and Exchange Commission, which provides more transparency of its business operations. TVA also completed the restart of its Browns Ferry Unit 1 nuclear facility during 2007, which provides approximately 1,150 megawatts of new energy capacity, or enough energy to power approximately 650,000 homes.

Financing.—Amounts estimated to become available for TVA programs in 2009 are to be derived from power revenues and receipts of $10,619 million. The outstanding balance of TVA's bonds, notes, and other evidences of indebtedness is limited by statute and cannot exceed $30 billion. The budget assumes TVA will increase its debt and debt-like obligations by $241 million in fiscal year 2009 primarily from new capital spending for the construction of the Watts Bar Unit 2 project ($670 million) and acquisition of new generating capacity ($789 million). TVA's outstanding debt and debt-like obligations were $24.7 billion at the beginning of fiscal year 2008 and are estimated to rise to $24.9 billion by the end of fiscal year 2009. At the beginning of fiscal year 2008, TVA currently has $2.2 billion in debt-like obligations that are not counted against its statutory debt cap.

Operating results and financial conditions.—Payments to the Treasury from power proceeds in 2009 are estimated at $42 million—$22 million as a dividend-like return on the appropriation investment in the power program and $20 million as a reduction in the appropriation investment in the power program. Total capital spending for 2009 is budgeted at $2.4 billion, which in addition to new generation capacity includes $313 million for clean air projects and $624 million to maintain TVA's existing generation assets. Total assets are estimated to increase by $1,398 million during 2009. The estimate of liabilities at September 30, 2009, is $432 million more than the estimate at September 30, 2008. Total Government equity at September 30, 2009, is estimated to be $978 million more than that at September 30, 2008. This change includes the net income from power operations, less payments to the Treasury.

The Office of the Inspector General (OIG) is an independent organization charged with reporting to the TVA

Board of Directors and the Congress on the overall efficiency, effectiveness, and economy of TVA programs and operations. The OIG meets this responsibility by conducting audits, investigations, inspections, and other reviews. The OIG focuses on the prevention, identification, and elimination of 1) waste, fraud, and abuse; 2) violations of laws, rules, or regulations; and 3) inefficiencies in TVA programs and operations. To increase its independence, TVA's Inspector General became a Presidentially-appointed position in 2000. Currently, TVA's OIG is funded directly from TVA revenues, subject to the TVA Board of Director's approval. The 2009 President's Budget proposes to appropriate funds for TVA's OIG out of TVA revenues beginning in 2009.

Note.—The unavailable receipts table (above) includes entries that pertain both to the Combined Benefit Fund and the 1992 Benefit Plan.

The Combined Benefit Fund was established by the Coal Industry Retiree Health Benefit Act of 1992 to take over paying for medical care of retired miners and their dependents who were eligible for health care from the private 1950 and 1974 United Mine Workers of America Benefit Plans. The Fund's trustees represent the United Mine Workers of America and coal companies. The Fund is financed by assessments on current and former signatories to labor agreements with the United Mine Workers; past transfers from an overfunded United Mine Workers pension fund; transfers from the Abandoned Mine Land Reclamation fund; a Medicare prescription drug demonstration; and the General Fund of the Treasury.

The 1992 Benefit Plan was established by the Coal Industry Retiree Health Benefit Act of 1992. It pays for health care for those miners who retired between July 21, 1992 and September 30, 1994, and their dependents, who are eligible for benefits under an employer plan and cease to be covered, usually because an employer is out of business. Plan trustees are appointed by the United Mine Workers of America and the Bituminous Coal Operators Association, a coal industry bargaining group. The Plan is supported by signers of the 1988 labor agreement with the United Mine Workers of America; a Medicare prescription drug demonstration; transfers from the Abandoned Mine Land Reclamation fund; and General Fund of the Treasury.

The 1993 Benefit Plan provides health benefits to certain retired mine workers and disabled mine workers who are not eligible for benefits under the Coal Industry Retiree Health Benefit Act of 1992 and who are not receiving benefits from employer's benefit plans. The 1993 Benefit Plan was established through collective bargaining under the National Bituminous Coal Wage Agreement of 1993. Plan trustees are appointed by the United Mine Workers of America and the Bituminous Coal Operators Association, a coal industry bargaining group. The Plan is financed by signatories to the National Bituminous Coal Wage Agreement; transfers from the Abandoned Mine Land Reclamation fund; a Medicare prescription drug demonstration; and the General Fund of the Treasury.

The Veterans' Judicial Review Act, found in part at 38 U.S.C. §7251-7292 (1988), established the United States Court of Veterans Appeals (renamed United States Court of Appeals for Veterans Claims as of March 1, 1999, Public Law 105-368) under Article I of the United States Constitution. The Court is empowered to review decisions of the Board of Veterans Appeals and may affirm, modify, revise, or reverse a decision of the Board or to remand the matter as appropriate. The type of review performed by the Court is similar to that performed in Article III courts under the Administrative Procedure Act, 5 U.S.C. §551 et seq. In actions before it, the Court has the authority to decide all relevant questions of law, to interpret constitutional, statutory, and regulatory provisions, and to determine the meaning or applicability of the terms of an action by the Secretary of Veterans Affairs. The Court, being created by an act of the Congress, may issue all writs necessary or appropriate in aid of its jurisdiction, 28 U.S.C. §1651.

The Court is empowered to: compel actions of the Secretary that are found to have been unlawfully withheld or unreasonably delayed; and set aside decisions, findings, conclusions, rules, and regulations issued or adopted by the Secretary, the Board of Veterans Appeals, or the Chairman of the Board that are found to be arbitrary or capricious. The Court may also set aside decisions that are abuses of discretion or otherwise not in accordance with the law, contrary to constitutional right, in excess of statutory jurisdiction or authority, or without observance of the procedures required by law. In cases involving benefits under the laws administered by the Department of Veterans Affairs, the Court may hold unlawful and set aside or reverse findings of material facts if the findings are clearly erroneous.

The Court's principal office location is Washington, D.C.; however, it is a national court, empowered to sit anywhere in the United States.

Pro bono program.—The Legal Services Corporation administers a grant program to provide pro bono representation and legal assistance to claimants who file appeals with the Court. The Congress funds the grant program through the Court's appropriation. To maintain impartiality, the Court does not administer the program or comment on the program's budget estimate.

The United States Institute of Peace is an independent, bipartisan, national institution established and funded by Congress. Its goals are to help prevent and resolve violent international conflicts, promote post-conflict stability and democratic transformations, and increase peacebuilding capacity, tools, and intellectual capital worldwide. The Institute does this by empowering others with knowledge, skills, and resources, as well as by its direct involvement in peacebuilding efforts around the globe.

In order to achieve the above goals, USIP thinks, acts, teaches, and trains, providing a unique combination of non-partisan research, innovative programs, and hands-on support. USIP provides on-the-ground operational support in zones of conflict, most recently in Afghanistan, the Balkans, Colombia, Indonesia, Iraq, the Palestinian Territories, Liberia, Nigeria, Philippines, Rwanda, and Sudan. Specific work performed by Institute staff and grantees includes: building leadership capacity through training and workshops; facilitating dialogue among parties in conflict; identifying and disseminating best practices in conflict management; sponsoring leadership summits and strategic conferences; promoting the rule of law; developing educational and teacher training materials; helping build civil society institutions; sponsoring a wide range of countrywide working groups (e.g., Afghanistan, Haiti, Iraq, Korea, Sudan); and educating the public through informative events, documentary films, radio programs, and an array of other outreach activities. USIP performs cutting edge research on the dynamics of conflict and subjects relevant to policymakers and practitioners. The Institute also identifies best practices and develops innovative programs focused on the prevention, management, and resolution of violent conflict, and the stabilization and transformation of societies emerging from conflict.

The Vietnam Education Foundation Act of 2000 (Title II of Public Law 106-554) created the Vietnam Education Foundation (VEF) to administer an international fellowship program under which Vietnamese nationals can undertake graduate and post-graduate level studies in the United States in the sciences (natural, physical, and environmental), mathematics, medicine, and technology, and American citizens can teach in these fields in appropriate Vietnamese institutions. The Act also authorized the establishment of the Vietnam Debt Repayment Fund, in which all payments (including interest payments) made by the Socialist Republic of Vietnam under the United States-Vietnam debt agreement shall be deposited as offsetting receipts. Beginning in 2002, and in each subsequent year through 2018, $5 million of the amounts deposited into the fund (or accrued interest) from USDA and USAID shall be available to VEF.

SUPPLEMENTAL PROPOSALS

DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE—MILITARY

MILITARY PERSONNEL

ACTIVE AND RESERVE FORCES

The pending requests that follow cover pay, allowances, subsistence and other personnel costs for Active and Reserve component servicemembers activated for duty in Iraq, Afghanistan, and other areas around the world in support of Operation Iraqi Freedom and Operation Enduring Freedom. The requests include funding for special pays including imminent danger pay, family separation allowance, foreign language proficiency pay and hardship duty pay. To sustain the readiness levels of deploying units, resources are also provided to pay personnel maintained on active duty above the pre-war end-strength levels. The 2008 request includes funding to continue the President's goal of growing the permanent active component end-strength of the military. In addition, these accounts contain funds to ensure that servicemembers and their families receive timely compensation if the servicemember is injured or killed in defense of the nation.

This chapter presents the President's pending 2008 supplemental request in support of operations in the Global War on Terror (GWOT). Funding amounts presented are what remains following partial enactment of the President's request. The Departments of Agriculture, Defense, Homeland Security, Justice, and State, and the Intelligence Community need this funding to sustain GWOT operations, provide security in Iraq and Afghanistan, and assist these countries in rebuilding. The pending request also includes security and humanitarian assistance for other international emergencies.

In addition, the chapter includes non-GWOT 2008 proposals for the Department of Homeland Security.

The pending request would provide $350 million for emergency food aid needs. Of this total, an estimated $75 million is to address the emergency food needs in the Darfur region of Sudan, including refugees from the violence who are in Chad. The request provides an estimated $275 million to meet other critical food situations elsewhere, particularly in southern Africa and the Horn of Africa. These funds may be used to replenish costs incurred in order to meet urgent needs.

PROCUREMENT

The pending requests that follow would fund the acquisition of combat vehicles, aircraft, weapons, communications, and other equipment needed to support the Global War on Terror. Funds provided will be used to reconstitute equipment destroyed, damaged, or worn out by combat operations, or to ensure that adequate equipment is available to support training for deploying units. Additional funding is provided to improve the force protection capability of combat and support units. Procurement funds will also be used to equip additional Army and Marine Corps units, which once created will help reduce the operational stress on deployed combat units.

The pending 2008 request provides $159 million for Iraq to build additional prisons to meet anticipated shortfalls, and to further develop Iraqi criminal justice, corrections, and anti-corruption institutions.

This pending request includes $500 million to provide an emergency assistance package for the Government of Mexico to support their unprecedented efforts to confront organized crime and narcotics trafficking. This request will strengthen Americas security by improving cooperation with the Government of Mexico as called for in the Joint US-Mexico Communique announced earlier this year by President Bush and President Calderon. Assistance will include counter narcotics, law enforcement and rule of law activities in Mexico, to include training and equipping Mexican security forces to significantly strengthen law enforcement nationwide; enhancing Mexican port, airport and border security, to prevent the cross border movement of illicit drugs, firearms, financial assets, and trafficked people; and supporting a stronger Mexican prosecutorial system, a more efficient judicial system, and a secure prison system.

This request also includes $50 million for Central American states to support these same activities as part of a broader regional approach in detecting and deterring transitional crimes and narcotics trafficking and secure our borders.

An additional $25 million is requested for the West Bank to help the Palestinian Authority to improve its security capabilities.

The 2008 request includes $2.0 billion for critical assistance to Iraq, Afghanistan, North Korea, Pakistan, Sudan, and West Bank/Gaza. Of this amount:

— $797 million is urgently needed for Iraq to consolidate the security gains made under the surge. Authority and funding is also requested to initiate a new enterprise fund to strengthen the Iraqi private sector's access to capital that is needed to create jobs.

— $834 million is for assistance to support Afghanistan's economic development, solidify its democratic gains, and counter the Taliban's influence. Of this amount, $100 million is needed to fund elections support in preparation for upcoming Presidential and Parliamentary elections that are planned for 2009.

— $53 million is to provide energy assistance to North Korea on an action-for-action basis in support of the Six Party Talks in return for actions taken by North Korea on denuclearization. This reflects the balance of the President's initial supplemental request.

— $60 million is to support Pakistan's Federally Administered Tribal Areas (FATA) Development plan. This will bring total funding for the FATA region to $150 million in FY 2008.

— $70 million to support elections in Sudan in 2009, an important element of the Comprehensive Peace Agreement between the North and South, and other urgent conflict management and stabilization activities in Southern Sudan.

— $195 million to provide urgent economic assistance to the Palestinian Authority. This reflects the balance of the President's initial supplemental request.

ADVANCE APPROPRIATIONS

An advance appropriation is one made to become available one year or more beyond the year for which the appropriations act is passed. Advance appropriations in 2009 appropriations acts will become available for programs in 2010 or beyond. Since these appropriations are not available until after 2009, the amounts will not be included in the 2009 totals, but will be reflected in the totals for the year for which they are requested.

The Congressional Budget Act of 1974 (31 U.S.C. 1105(a)(17)) requires inclusion in the budget of "information on estimates of appropriations for the fiscal year following the fiscal year for which the budget is submitted for grants, contracts, and other payments under each program for which there is an authorization of appropriations for that following fiscal year when the appropriations are authorized to be included in an appropriation law for the fiscal year before the fiscal year in which the appropriation is to be available for obligation." In fulfillment of this requirement, the accompanying table lists those accounts that have either received discretionary or mandatory advance appropriations since 2007 or will request, in 2009, advance appropriations for 2010 and beyond and cites the applicable authorizing statute.

<sup>1</sup> The 2006 Labor, Health and Human Services, Education, and Related Agencies Appropriations Act (Public Law 109-149) mandated the establishment of the Office of Job Corps in the Office of the Secretary, but provided the 2007 advance appropriation in the Training and Employment Services account. The Revised Continuing Appropriations Resolution, 2007 (Public Law 110-5) continued this approach, providing the Job Corps appropriations in the Training and Employment Services account. The Consolidated Appropriations Act, 2008 (Public Law 110-161) appropriates Job Corps funding to the Office of Job Corps.

FINANCING VEHICLES AND THE BOARD OF GOVERNORS OF THE FEDERAL RESERVE

This chapter contains descriptions of and data on financing vehicles and the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve.

The Financing Corporation functions as a financing vehicle for the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation (FSLIC) Resolution Fund. It operates under the supervision and control of the Federal Housing Finance Board.

The Resolution Funding Corporation provided financing for the Resolution Trust Corporation (RTC) and is subject to the general oversight and direction of the Secretary of the Treasury.

The Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System's transactions are not included in the Budget because of its unique status in the conduct of monetary policy. The Board provides data on its administrative budget, which is included here for information. Its budget schedules and statements are not subject to review by the President.

Amounts are on a calendar year basis, with the exception of the 2007 balance sheets for the Financing Corporation and Resolution Funding Corporation, which are as of September 30, 2007.

FINANCING CORPORATION

The Financing Corporation (FICO) is a mixed-ownership Government corporation, chartered by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board pursuant to the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation Recapitalization Act of 1987, as amended (Act). FICO's sole purpose is to function as a financing vehicle for FSLIC Resolution Fund, formerly the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation. FICO operates under the supervision and control of the Federal Housing Finance Board (Financing Board). Pursuant to the Act, FICO was authorized to issue debentures, bonds, and other obligations subject to limitations contained in the Act, the net proceeds of which were to be used solely to purchase capital certificates issued by FSLIC Resolution Fund, or to refund any previously issued obligations. The Resolution Trust Corporation Refinancing, Restructuring, and Improvement Act of 1991 terminated FICO's borrowing authority.

The Act provided formulas pursuant to which the Federal Home Loan Banks make capital contributions to FICO at the direction of the Finance Board for the purchase of FICO capital stock. FICO used the proceeds received from the sales of such capital stock to purchase non-interest bearing securities for deposit in a segregated account as required by the Act. The non-interest bearing securities held in the segregated account are the primary source of repayment of the principal of FICO obligations. Securities in the segregated account are kept separate from other FICO accounts and funds but are not specifically pledged as collateral for the payment of obligations. The primary source of payment of interest on the obligations is the receipt of assessments imposed on and collected from institutions' accounts which are insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation's Deposit Insurance Fund.

RESOLUTION FUNDING CORPORATION

The Resolution Funding Corporation (REFCORP) is a mixed-ownership Government corporation established by Title V of the Financial Institutions Reform, Recovery, and Enforcement Act of 1989 (FIRREA). The sole purpose of REFCORP was to provide financing for the Resolution Trust Corporation (RTC). Pursuant to FIRREA, REFCORP was authorized to issue debentures, bonds, and other obligations, subject to limitations contained in the Act and regulations established by the Thrift Depositor Protection Oversight Board. The proceeds of the debt (less any discount, plus any premium, net of issuance cost) were used solely to purchase nonredeemable capital certificates of RTC or to refund any previously issued obligations.

Until October 29, 1998, REFCORP was subject to the general oversight and direction of the Thrift Depositor Protection Oversight Board. At that time, the Oversight Board was abolished and its authority and duties were transferred to the Secretary of the Treasury. The day-to-day operations of REFCORP are under the management of a three-member Directorate comprised of the Director of the Office of Finance of the Federal Home Loan Banks and two members selected from among the presidents of the twelve Federal Home Loan Banks (FHLBanks). Members of the Directorate serve without compensation, and REFCORP is not permitted to have any paid employees.

FIRREA, as amended, and the regulations adopted by the Thrift Depositor Protection Oversight Board and the Secretary of the Treasury provide formulas pursuant to which the Federal Home Loan Banks made capital contributions to REFCORP's Principal Fund and continue to make interest payments on outstanding REFCORP obligations. FIRREA also provides that the U.S. Treasury cover any interest shortfall. Funds designated for the Principal Funds were used to purchase zero-coupon bonds. The zero-coupon bonds are held in the Principal Fund and are the primary source of repayment of the principal of the obligations at maturity.

The Federal Reserve System operates under the provisions of the Federal Reserve Act of 1913, as amended, and other acts of the Congress.

Program.—To carry out its responsibilities under this Act, the Board determines general monetary, credit, and operating policies for the System as a whole and formulates the rules and regulations necessary to carry out the purposes of the Federal Reserve Act. The Board's principal duties consist of exerting an influence over credit conditions and supervising the Federal Reserve banks and member banks.

Financing.—Under the provisions of section 10 of the Federal Reserve Act, the Board of Governors levies upon the Federal Reserve banks, in proportion to their capital and surplus, an assessment sufficient to pay its estimated expenses. The Board, under this Act, determines and prescribes the manner in which its obligations are incurred and its expenses paid. Funds derived from assessments are deposited in the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond, and this Act provides that such funds "shall not be construed to be Government funds or appropriated moneys." No Government appropriation is required to support operations of the Board.

The information presented pertains to Board operations only. Expenditures made on behalf of the Federal Reserve banks for production, issuance, retirement, and shipment of Federal Reserve notes are not included, since they are reimbursed in full by the Federal Reserve banks.

GOVERNMENT-SPONSORED ENTERPRISES

This chapter contains descriptions of the data on the Government-sponsored enterprises listed below. These enterprises were established and chartered by the Federal Government for public policy purposes. They are not included in the Federal Budget because they are private companies, and their securities are not backed by the full faith and credit of the Federal Government. However, because of their public purpose, detailed statements of financial condition are presented, to the extent such information is available, on a basis that is as consistent as practicable with the basis for the budget data of Government agencies. These statements are not reviewed by the President; they are presented as submitted by the enterprises.

- The Federal National Mortgage Association and the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corporation provide assistance to the secondary market for residential mortgages.
- The Federal Home Loan Banks assist thrift institutions, banks, insurance companies, and credit unions in providing financing for housing and community development.
- Institutions of the Farm Credit System, which include the Agricultural Credit Bank and Farm Credit Banks, provide financial assistance to agriculture. They are regulated by the Farm Credit Administration.
- The Federal Agricultural Mortgage Corporation, under the regulation of the Farm Credit Administration, provides a secondary mortgage market for agricultural real estate and rural housing loans as well as for farm and business loans guaranteed by the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

The Federal National Mortgage Association (Fannie Mae) is a Government-sponsored enterprise (GSE) in the housing finance market. The Administration has announced a proposal to strengthen regulation of all the housing GSEs, including Fannie Mae.

As a housing GSE, Fannie Mae is a Federally chartered, privately owned company with a public mission to provide stability and to increase the liquidity of the residential mortgage market and to help increase the availability of mortgage credit to low- and moderate-income families and in underserved areas. Fannie Mae engages primarily in two forms of business: guaranteeing residential mortgage securities and investing in portfolios of residential mortgages.

The Federal Government has equipped Fannie Mae with certain advantages over wholly private firms in carrying out these activities. These include an exemption from State and local taxes (except real property taxes), and an exemption of its debt and mortgage securities from Securities and Exchange Commission registration requirements. An additional advantage is that the Secretary of the Treasury may purchase and hold up to $2.25 billion of securities issued by Fannie Mae under terms and conditions and at prices determined by the Secretary to be appropriate. Securities guaranteed and debt issued by Fannie Mae are solely the corporation's obligations and are not backed by the full faith and credit of the U.S. Government. The common stock of the corporation is owned by the public, is fully transferable, and trades on the New York, Midwest, and Pacific stock exchanges.

Fannie Mae was established in 1938 to assist private markets in providing a steady supply of funds for housing. Fannie Mae was originally a subsidiary of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and was permitted to purchase only loans insured by the Federal Housing Administration (FHA). In 1954, Fannie Mae was restructured as a mixed ownership (part government, part private) corporation. Legislation directed the sale of the Government's remaining interest in Fannie Mae in 1968 and completed the transformation to private shareholder ownership in 1970. Using the proceeds from the sale of subordinated debentures, Fannie Mae paid the Treasury $216 million for the Government's preferred stock, which was retired, and for the Treasury's interest in the corporation's earned surplus. As a result, the corporation was taken off the Federal Budget.

In 1992, the Congress reaffirmed and clarified Fannie Mae's role in the housing finance system through charter act amendments included in the Federal Housing Enterprises Financial Safety and Soundness Act of 1992 (Act). Fannie Mae's charter purposes, as amended by the Act, are: "to provide stability in the secondary market for residential mortgages; respond appropriately to the private capital market; provide ongoing assistance to the secondary market for residential mortgages (including activities relating to mortgages on housing for low- and moderate-income families involving a reasonable economic return that may be less than the return earned on other activities); and promote access to mortgage credit throughout the Nation (including central cities, rural areas, and underserved areas) by increasing the liquidity of mortgage investments and improving the distribution of investment capital for residential mortgage financing." For additional discussion and analyses of Fannie Mae, please see the Analytical Perspectives volume of the Budget documents.

According to accounting practices for private corporations, the mortgages in the pools of loans supporting the mortgage-backed securities are considered to be owned by the holders of these securities. Consequently, on the books of Fannie Mae, these mortgages are not considered assets and the securities outstanding are not considered liabilities. However, the concepts of the budget of the U.S. Government consider these mortgages and mortgage-backed securities to be assets and liabilities, respectively, of Fannie Mae. For the purposes of this document, therefore, they are presented as assets and liabilities in the accompanying schedules. On the schedule of Status of Direct Loans for mortgage-backed securities, the items labeled “New loans” and “Recoveries: Repayments and prepayments” are budgetary terms. However, from Fannie Mae’s perspective, these items are “Amounts issued” and “Amounts passed through to the holders of securities”, respectively.

Financial data for Fannie Mae is not presented here because Fannie Mae has not provided audited financial results for 2007.

The Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corporation (Freddie Mac) is a Government-sponsored enterprise (GSE) in the housing finance market. The Administration has announced a proposal to strengthen regulation of all the housing GSEs, including Freddie Mac.

As a housing GSE, Freddie Mac is a Federally-chartered, shareholder-owned, private company with a public mission to provide stability and increase the liquidity of the residential mortgage market, and to help increase the availability of mortgage credit to low- and moderate-income families and in underserved areas. The common stock of the corporation is owned by private shareholders, is fully transferable, and trades on the New York and Pacific stock exchanges.

Freddie Mac was established in 1970 under the Emergency Home Finance Act. The Congress chartered Freddie Mac to provide mortgage lenders with an organized national secondary market enabling them to manage their conventional mortgage portfolio more effectively and gain indirect access to a ready source of additional funds to meet new demands for mortgages. Freddie Mac serves as a conduit facilitating the flow of investment dollars from the capital markets to mortgage lenders, and ultimately, to homebuyers.

The Financial Institutions Reform, Recovery, and Enforcement Act of 1989 (FIRREA) significantly changed the corporate governance of Freddie Mac. The company’s three member Board of Directors, which had corresponded with the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, was replaced with an eighteen member Board of Directors. In addition, FIRREA converted Freddie Mac's 60 million shares of non-voting, senior participating preferred stock into voting common stock.

Financial data for Freddie Mac is not presented here because Freddie Mac has not provided audited financial results for 2007. For additional discussion and analyses of Freddie Mac, please see the Analytical Perspectives volume of the Budget documents.

The Federal Home Loan Bank System is a Government-sponsored enterprise (GSE) in the housing finance market. The Administration has announced a proposal to strengthen regulation of all the housing GSEs, including the Federal Home Loan Bank System.

The Federal Home Loan Banks were chartered by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board under the authority of the Federal Home Loan Bank Act of 1932 (Act). The 12 Federal Home Loan Banks (FHLBanks) are under the supervision of the Federal Housing Finance Board (FHFB). The common mission of FHLBanks is to facilitate the extension of credit through their members. To accomplish this mission, FHLBanks make loans, called advances, and provide other credit products and services to their 8,149 member commercial banks, savings associations, insurance companies, and credit unions. Advances and letters of credit must be fully secured by eligible collateral and long-term advances may be made only for the purpose of providing funds for residential housing finance. However, "community financial institutions" may also use long-term advances to finance small businesses, small farms, and small agribusinesses. Additionally, specialized advance programs provide funds for community reinvestment and affordable housing programs. All regulated financial depositories and insurance companies engaged in residential housing finance are eligible for membership. Each FHLBank operates in a geographic district designated by the Board and together FHLBanks cover all of the United States, as well as the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, Guam, American Samoa, and the Northern Mariana Islands.

The principal source of funds for the lending operation is the sale of consolidated obligations to the public. The consolidated obligations are not guaranteed by the U.S. Government as to principal or interest. Other sources of lendable funds include members' deposits and capital. Funds not immediately needed for advances to members are invested.

The capital stock of the Federal Home Loan Banks is owned entirely by the members. Initially the U.S. Government purchased stock of the banks in the amount of $125 million. The banks had repurchased the Government's investment in full by mid-1951.

The Act, as amended in 1989, requires each FHLBank to operate an Affordable Housing Program (AHP). Each FHLBank provides subsidies in the form of direct grants or below-market rate advances for members that use the funds for qualifying affordable housing projects. Each of the FHLBanks must set aside annually the greater of $100 million or 10 percent of its previous year's net earnings for the AHP. The Act, as amended in 1999, also requires that FHLBanks contribute 20 percent of net earnings annually to assist in the payment of interest on bonds issued by the Resolution Funding Corporation.

FEDERAL HOME LOAN BANKS—Continued

In 2002, the Administration requested all GSEs, including FHLBanks, to voluntarily register their equity securities with the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC). This voluntary registration is part of the Administration's efforts to have GSEs undergo the same scrutiny process as other corporate enterprises. FHFH adopted a rule on June 23, 2004 that requires each FHLBank to register a class of its stock. All of the Federal Home Loan Banks complied by 2006.

For additional discussion and analyses of the FHLBanks, please see the Analytical Perspectives volume of the Budget.

FARM CREDIT SYSTEM

The Farm Credit System is a Government-sponsored enterprise that provides privately financed credit to agricultural and rural communities. The major functional entities of the system are: (1) Agricultural Credit Bank (ACB); (2) Farm Credit Banks (FCB); and (3) direct lender associations. The history and specific functions of the bank entities are discussed after the presentation of financial schedules for each bank entity. As part of the Farm Credit System (FCS), these entities are regulated and examined by the Farm Credit Administration (FCA), an independent Federal agency. The administrative costs of FCA are financed by assessments of system institutions and the Federal Agricultural Mortgage Corporation. System banks finance loans from sales of bonds to the public and their own capital funds. The system bonds issued by the banks are not guaranteed by the U.S. Government either as to principal or interest. The bonds are backed by an insurance fund, administered by the Farm Credit System Insurance Corporation (FCSIC), an independent Federal agency that collects insurance premiums from member banks to pay its administrative expenses and fund insurance reserves. All of the banks' current operating expenses are paid from their own income and do not require budgetary resources from the Federal Government.

AGRICULTURAL CREDIT BANK

CoBank, ACB is headquartered in Denver, Colorado and serves eligible cooperatives nationwide, and provides funding to Agricultural Credit Associations (ACAs) in two of its regions. CoBank, ACB is the only Agricultural Credit Bank (ACB) in the Farm Credit System. An ACB operates under statutory authority that combines the authorities of a Farm Credit Bank (FCB) and a Bank for Cooperatives (BC). In exercising its FCB authority, CoBank, ACB's charter limits its lending to ACAs located in the northeast and northwest regions of the country. As an entity lending to Cooperatives, CoBank is independently chartered to provide credit and related services nationwide to eligible cooperatives primarily engaged in farm supply, grain, marketing, and processing (including sugar, dairy, and corn into ethanol). CoBank also makes loans to rural utilities, including telecommunications companies, and it provides international loans for the financing of agricultural exports.

The Agricultural Credit Act of 1987 (1987 Act) required the Federal Land Banks (FLBs) and Federal Intermediate Credit Banks (FICBs) to merge into a Farm Credit Bank (FCB) in each of the 12 Farm Credit districts. FCBs operate under statutory authority that combines the prior authorities of a FLB and of a FICB. No merger occurred in the Jackson district in 1988 because the FLB of Jackson was in receivership. Pursuant to section 410(e) of the 1987 Act, as amended by the Farm Credit Banks Safety and Soundness Act of 1992, FICB of Jackson merged with FCB of Columbia on October 1, 1993. Mergers and consolidations of FCBs across district lines that began in 1992 have continued to date. As a result of this restructuring activity, 4 FCBs, headquartered in the following cities, remain: AgFirst FCB, Columbia, South Carolina; AgriBank FCB, St. Paul, Minnesota; U.S. AgBank, FCB, Wichita, Kansas; and FCB of Texas, Austin, Texas.

FCBs serve as discount banks and as of October 1, 2007 provided funds to 9 Federal Land Credit Associations (FLCA) and 86 Agricultural Credit Associations (ACAs). These direct lender associations, in turn, make short-term production loans and long-term real estate loans to eligible farmers and ranchers and their cooperatives; farm-related businesses; and rural homeowners. FCBs can also lend to local financing institutions, including commercial banks, as authorized by the Farm Credit Act of 1971, as amended.

All the capital stock of FICBs, from organization in 1923 to December 31, 1956, was held by the U.S. Government. The Farm Credit Act of 1956 provided a long-range plan for the eventual ownership of the FICBs by the production credit associations and the gradual retirement of the Government's investment in the banks. This retirement was accomplished in full on December 31, 1968. The last of the Government capital that had been invested in FLBs was repaid in 1947.

FEDERAL AGRICULTURAL MORTGAGE CORPORATION (FARMER MAC)

Farmer Mac is authorized under the Farm Credit Act of 1971 (Act), as amended by the Agricultural Credit Act of 1987, to create a secondary market for agricultural real estate and rural home mortgages. The Farmer Mac title of the Act was amended by the 1990 farm bill to authorize Farmer Mac to purchase, pool, and securitize the guaranteed portions of farmer program, rural business, and community development loans guaranteed by the United States Department of Agriculture (USDA). The Farmer Mac title was further amended in 1991 to clarify Farmer Mac's authority to issue debt obligations, provide for the establishment of minimum capital standards, establish the Office of Secondary Market Oversight at the Farm Credit Administration (FCA), and expand the agency's rulemaking authority. Most recently, the Farm Credit System Reform Act of 1996 (1996 Act) amended the Farmer Mac title to allow Farmer Mac to purchase loans directly from lenders and to issue and guarantee mortgage-backed securities without requiring that a minimum cash reserve or subordinated (first loss) interest be maintained by poolers as had been required under its original authority. The 1996 Act expanded FCA's regulatory authority to include provisions for establishing a conservatorship or receivership, if necessary, and provided for increased core capital requirements at Farmer Mac phased in over three years.

Farmer Mac operates through two core programs, "Farmer Mac I," which involves mortgage loans secured by first liens on agricultural real estate or rural housing (qualified loans), and "Farmer Mac II," which involves the guaranteed portions of USDA guaranteed loans. Farmer Mac operates by: i) purchasing, or committing to purchase, newly originated or existing qualified loans or guaranteed portions from lenders; ii) purchasing or guaranteeing "AgVantage" bonds backed by qualified loans or guaranteed portions from lenders; and iii) exchanging qualified loans or guaranteed portions for guaranteed securities. Loans purchased by Farmer Mac are aggregated into pools that back Farmer Mac guaranteed securities which are held by Farmer Mac or sold into the capital markets. Farmer Mac is intended to attract new capital for financing qualified loans and guaranteed portions, foster increased long-term, fixed-rate lending, and provide greater liquidity to agricultural and rural lenders.

Farmer Mac is governed by a 15 member Board of Directors. Ten Board members are elected by stockholders, including five by the Farm Credit System and five by commercial lenders. Five are appointed by the President, subject to Senate confirmation.

FINANCING

Financial support and funding for Farmer Mac's operations come from several sources: sale of common and preferred stock; issuance of debt obligations; and net income. Under procedures specified in the Act, Farmer Mac may issue obligations to the U.S. Treasury in a cumulative amount not to exceed $1.5 billion to fulfill its guarantee obligations.

As of September 30, 2007, Farmer Mac's core capital exceeded statutory requirements. Additionally, Farmer Mac's regulatory capital (core capital plus the allowance for loan losses) exceeded the amount of required regulatory capital as determined by the risk-based capital rule, with which Farmer Mac was required to be in compliance on May 23, 2002.

GUARANTEES

Farmer Mac provides a guarantee of timely payment of principal and interest on securities backed by qualified loans or pools of qualified loans. These securities are not guaranteed by the United States, and are not "government securities".

Farmer Mac is subject to reporting requirements under securities laws, and its guaranteed mortgage-backed securities are subject to registration with the Securities and Exchange Commission under the 1933 and 1934 Securities Acts.

REGULATION

Farmer Mac is Federally regulated by FCA, acting through its Office of Secondary Market Oversight (OSMO). FCA is responsible for the supervision of, examination of, and rule-making for Farmer Mac.
