

General, deemed necessary for financial audits of governmental organizations and programs is quoted below:

“Such audits shall be conducted * * * by independent certified public accountants or by independent licensed public accountants, licensed on or before December 31, 1970, who are certified or licensed by a regulatory authority of a State or other political subdivision of the United States: Except that independent public accountants licensed to practice by such regulatory authority after December 31, 1970, and persons who although not so certified or licensed, meet, in the opinion of the Secretary, standards of education and experience representative of the highest prescribed by the licensing authorities of the several States which provide for the continuing licensing of public accountants and which are prescribed by the Secretary in appropriate regulations may perform such audits until December 31, 1975; Provided, That if the Secretary deems it necessary in the public interest, he may prescribe by regulations higher standard than those required for the practice of public accountancy by the regulatory authorities of the States.”¹

(b) The standards for examination and evaluation require consideration of applicable laws and regulations in the auditor’s examination. The standards for reporting require a statement in the auditor’s report regarding any significant instances of non-compliance disclosed by his or her examination and evaluation work. What is to be included in this statement requires judgment. Significant instances of non-compliance, even those not resulting in legal liability to the audited entity, should be included. Minor procedural non-compliance need not be disclosed.

(c) Although the reporting standard is generally on an exception basis—that only non-compliance need be reported—it should be recognized that governmental entities often want positive statements regarding whether or not the auditor’s tests disclosed instances of non-compliance. This is particularly true in grant programs where authorizing agencies frequently want assurance in the auditor’s report that this matter has been considered. For such audits, auditors should obtain an understanding with the authorizing agency as to the extent to which such positive comments on compliance are desired. When coordinated audits are involved, the audit program should specify the extent of comments that the auditor is to make regarding compliance.

¹Letter (B-148144, September 15, 1970) from the Comptroller General to the heads of Federal departments and agencies. The reference to “Secretary” means the head of the department or agency.

(d) When non-compliance is reported, the auditor should place the findings in proper perspective. The extent of instances of non-compliance should be related to the number of cases examined to provide the reader with a basis for judging the prevalence of non-compliance.
