Introduction

Significant Incidents of Political Violence Against Americans: 1997, published by the Bureau of Diplomatic Security's Office of Intelligence and Threat Analysis (DS/DSS/ITA), is intended to provide a comprehensive picture of the broad spectrum of political violence that American citizens and interests have encountered abroad during 1997. In addition to examining terrorism-related acts, this study also includes other instances of violence affecting Americans. This chronology is designed to encompass major anti-U.S. incidents that occurred in 1997. Unfortunately, to keep the publication at the unclassified level, some incidents had to be omitted due to the sensitive nature of the information associated with them.

The selection of incidents used in this study was based upon the following criteria: lethality, substantial property damage, use of unusual tactics or weapons, and perceptibility of targets as U.S. or representative of U.S. interests.

The policy of the U.S. Government is that no double standard will exist regarding the dissemination of threat information that may affect U.S. citizens. U.S. Government employees may not benefit from possession of information that may apply equally to the American public, but is not available to them. The U.S. Government maintains information on threats to Americans overseas—from terrorism, crime, or health hazards—and makes this information available to all those affected.

Significant Incidents of Political Violence Against Americans was inaugurated in 1987. The publication was designed to provide the readership with a comprehensive picture of the broad spectrum of political violence that American citizens and interests have encountered abroad on an annual basis. Unlike its predecessor, Lethal Attacks Against Americans: 1973–1986, which focused only on recorded terrorists related deaths, assassinations, and the attempted assassinations of Americans, this publication includes non-lethal bombings, attempted bombings, and violent demonstrations. There is also a section devoted to the status of Americans being held hostage.

Types of Attack

“From 1986 to 1997 there have been 78,925,110 barrels of oil spilled in pipeline attacks in Colombia. Damage and lost revenue is estimated at $1.5 billion.”

January 1, 1997–December 31, 1997•Colombia
Over the course of 1997, Marxist guerrillas belonging to the National Liberation Army (ELN) and the Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia (FARC) carried out 64 bombings of the Cano Limon-Covenas pipeline, bringing the total number of attacks to 506 since 1986. Many of these attacks caused breaks in the pipeline structure, resulting in serious oil spills and the halting of production. The Cano Limon-Covenas oil pipeline is a multinational venture between Ecopetrol of Colombia, U.S. Occidental Petroleum, and other foreign oil firms. Guerrilla forces are vehemently opposed to multinational involvement in Colombia's oil industry, charging that foreign interests are violating the country's sovereignty and exploiting its natural resources.

January 10, 1997•Barrancabermeja, Colombia
Alleged ELN guerrillas bombed a section of the Barrancabermeja pipeline, causing minor damage. This pipeline is co-owned by the U.S. Texaco Oil Company.

February 11, 1997•San Pedro Sula, Honduras
Five U.S.-franchised, Honduran-owned restaurants in San Pedro Sula were attacked between the hour of 7 p.m.–8 p.m. Branches of McDonalds, Pizza Hut, T.G.I. Friday's, Burger King, and Wendy's were each hit by rifle-launched, 40-millimeter grenades. No injuries were reported and the blasts caused only minor damage to the restaurants and to cars parked outside. A sixth grenade, which did not explode, was found outside the McDonald's restaurant. No group claimed responsibility for the attacks.

February 14, 1997•Apure, Venezuela
An American engineer was kidnaped from a fishing camp in Apure (near the Venezuela-Colombia border) by rebels belonging to the FARC. He was released unharmed by his captors on November 23, 1997, near Puerto Ayacucho, Venezuela.

February 15, 1997•Shimi, Ecuador
An American geologist was kidnaped in Shimi, a remote region of Pastaza Province while conducting environmental research. He was released unharmed on February 23, 1997, following an agreement reached between his Achuar Indian captors and his employing firm.

February 23, 1997•San Juan del Cesar, Colombia
The dead body of a kidnaped American geologist was recovered by the Colombian military near the town of San Juan del Cesar. He appeared to have been shot in the head 5 or 6 days before his body was discovered. The American geologist had been kidnaped by gunmen on December 10, 1996, from a coal mining site near the town of Hato Nuevo, in northern Guajira Department. Police suspect his abductors were rebels belonging to the FARC.

February 24, 1997•Bolívar Department, Colombia
An American geologist and mining consultant, was kidnaped by ELN guerrillas. The geologist was released unharmed on September 18, 1998.

March 7, 1997•Payan Magui, Colombia
An American gold mine manager and a Colombian colleague were kidnaped by FARC guerrillas in Payan Magui, Narino Department, located approximately 30 miles from the Ecuadoran border. The U.S. citizen was released unharmed in Narino Department on November 16, 1997.

March 17, 1997•Barrancabermeja, Colombia
Alleged Colombian guerrillas bombed a section of the Barrancabermeja pipeline, leaving the turbospandex plant out of service. This pipeline is co-owned by the U.S. Texaco Oil Company.

April 9, 1997•La Guajira Department, Colombia
A dynamite attack on a stretch of track linking Cerrejon Norte with Puerto Bolivar damaged more than 1,640 feet of track and caused the derailment of 27 railway cars filled with 270 metric tons of coal. The attack, which also caused the spillage of 3,700 gallons of diesel fuel, was blamed on the ELN. Intercor, the mining enterprise jointly run by Exxon and the Colombian Carbocol firm, suffered an estimated $3–$5 million in losses as a result of this attack.

April 10, 1997•Mexico City, Mexico
The U.S. Embassy was the focal point for an anti-American demonstration involving 650 members of the El Barzon Popular Front. The protesters burned the U.S. flag and an effigy of Uncle Sam. They also threw eggs, fruit, vegetables, and rocks at the U.S. Embassy, damaging a first floor office window.

April 23, 1997•Colombia
Unidentified guerrillas destroyed equipment belonging to the Cano Limon-Covenas pipeline, which is co-owned by U.S. Occidental Petroleum.

May 5, 1997•Mexico City, Mexico
About 700 people demonstrated near the U.S. Embassy in protest of President Clinton's visit to the capital. After the demonstration, several participants tried to break the barrier of police at the main entrance of the U.S. Embassy, injuring three policewomen.

June 17, 1997•Colombia
Unidentified rebels attacked pipeline equipment belonging to the Cano Limon-Covenas pipeline, which is co-owned by U.S. Occidental Petroleum.

June 25, 1997•Guatemala City, Guatemala

A U.S. citizen employed with a Mayan human rights organization was shot in the leg while waiting for a bus. According to official sources, the Mayan organization considers this shooting to be politically motivated.

July 11, 1997•Northern Guatemala Jungle, Guatemala

Some 700 former members of the now-defunct Civil Defense Patrols temporarily took over an oil refinery in the northern Guatemala jungle and threatened to burn it down if the government did not agree to pay them $10,000 each for wartime service. This was their second attack in 2 weeks against Basic, Guatemala's only oil producer and refiner. Basic is owned by investors from the U.S., France, and Canada.

August 13, 1997• Panama City, Panama

Close to 40 people, including members of the FER-29, demonstrated in front of the U.S. Embassy to protest against the proposed multilateral counternarcotics center at Howard Air Force Base. Police arrested 15 demonstrators and allegedly fired rubber bullets into the crowd after balloons/bags of paint were thrown over the Embassy fence. One protester was injured.

September 15, 1997•Caracas, Venezuela

A pipebomb exploded in the lobby of the Caracas Hilton at approximately 3:45 p.m., causing minor property damage to lobby furnishings and no injuries. Police recovered pamphlets at the scene signed by a previously unknown group calling itself the Che Guevara Front.

FARC-EP

September 15, 1997•La Guajira Department, Colombia

A dynamite attack on a stretch of rail line linking Cerrejon Norte with Puerto Bolivar damaged more than 980 feet of track and caused the derailment of 26 railway cars filled with 270 metric tons of coal. Media accounts attributed the attack to the 59th Front of the FARC. Intercor, the mining enterprise jointly run by Exxon and the Colombian Carbocol firm, suffered an estimated $3 million in losses as a result of this attack.

September 20, 1997•Magdalena Province, Colombia

ELN rebels derailed seven railway cars laden with coal when they blew up 230 feet of train track in Magdalena Province. The train was on its way from a mine operated by the U.S. Drummond Corporation to the Caribbean port of Santa Marta when the attack occurred.

September 28, 1997•La Guajira Department, Colombia

Suspected ELN guerrillas dynamited a stretch of rail line linking Cerrejon Norte with Puerto Bolivar, causing the derailment of 18 railway cars filled with 20 metric tons of coal from a mine that is operated under concession by Intercor, a subsidiary of Exxon.

October 16, 1997•Buenos Aires, Argentina

During an anti-U.S. rally held by some 5,000 people, a few dozen masked youths began throwing molotov cocktails, spraying graffiti on buildings and destroying banks and store windows. Members of Quebracho and Free Fatherland Movement destroyed four blocks of store windows. The rioters apparently selected their targets, setting the Banelco ATM on fire and attacking Banco Robers, Citibank, and Lloyds Bank. They also sprayed pro-Quebracho graffiti and "Clinton go home!" on foreign banks and set U.S. flags on fire. Police used teargas and water cannons to disperse the rock-throwing protesters. Several people were injured and numerous others were arrested.

December 30, 1997•Cali, Colombia

A bomb was detonated at the front door of a McDonald's restaurant, causing minor damage. The bomb exploded at 6 a.m. when the restaurant was still closed and caused damage to the counters and windows of the restaurant and showcases of adjacent shops. No group has claimed responsibility.

January 5, 1997•Blue Nile River Gorge, Ethiopia

A group of U.S. diplomats and their families were detained illegally by National Defense soldiers because they were taking pictures of the Blue Nile River from a bridge. The soldiers proceeded to illegally search the diplomats' vehicle, confiscate personal property, and physically and verbally abuse the Americans in violation of international diplomatic conventions. Eventually all the Americans were released unharmed.

January 19, 1997•Ruhengeri, Rwanda

An American relief worker heard gunfire outside the house he shared with three Spanish colleagues of the Non-Governmental Organization (NGO) "Doctors of the World" at around 7:20 p.m., which prompted him to seek sanctuary in a back bedroom. Four gunmen broke into the house shortly afterwards. They were dressed in khaki uniforms and wearing military boots. They asked for passports and valuables and looked around for a brief period before leaving, only to return a few minutes later and to shoot the occupants. All the Spanish doctors died immediately. The American was shot in both legs but survived. The attackers fled immediately after the shooting. The American, with the help of a local employee, made his way to a hospital where his left leg was amputated above the knee. Rwandan military officials blamed Hutu Interahamwe militiamen for the attack.

March 5, 1997•Ikeja, Zaire

Five Western relief workers, including one American missionary, were held by local gendarmes for 4 days. The missionary and four NGO workers, who represented Atlas, Merlin, and Frodesa, were eventually released when the Zairian military sent a plane to ensure their release and brought them back to Kinshasha. The five were stopped on the edge of a war zone when they were captured.

July 25, 1997•Belet Weyn, Somalia

An American contract worker with the U.S. Agency for International Development (USAID) was kidnaped after renting a vehicle in Belet Weyn, 260 kilometers from the capital Mogadishu. As the American and his kidnapers were driving on a one-lane road, three trucks were approaching in the opposite direction. The vehicle pulled off the road to let the trucks pass. As the first truck passed by, the American jumped out of the vehicle and escaped by running into the bush. After a 30-hour ordeal in the Somali bush, the American came across a camel herder who took him to a village and from there he made his way to Belet Weyn.

October 8, 1997•Agadez, Niger

At approximately 1:30 p.m., a Hunt Oil supply convoy of trucks and other vehicles was attacked 190 kilometers east of Agadez. The convoy was en route to Bilma and onward to the Hunt Oil facility in Mangueni Plateau. One Nigerian soldier guarding the convoy was killed. Four drivers were taken hostage by the gunmen but later released. The attack was carried out by an undetermined number of Tuareg rebels who allegedly belong to Mohamed Anako's UFRA movement. The rebels stole some of the construction equipment in the convoy and destroyed other pieces.

March 25, 1997•Manila, Philippines

At approximately 7 a.m., an object appearing to be an improvised explosive device was discovered on the grounds of the U.S. Embassy’s Seafront Compound. The device consisted of a ping pong ball filled with metal fragments and what appeared to be gunpowder. Tape wrapped around the ping pong ball covered the hole used to fill the ping pong ball. Although the actual explosiveness of the device could not be determined, it was believed to be a “pill box bomb,” a popular device used by demonstrators during the era of Ferdinand Marcos. No one claimed responsibility for the attack.

March 30, 1997•Phnom Penh, Cambodia

Unknown assailants detonated three grenades during a Khmer Nation Party (KNP) protest rally at the National Assembly at around 8:30 a.m. The explosions killed 19 people and injured over 100, 25 seriously. There was no claim of responsibility. Although one of his bodyguards was killed, KNP President Sam Rainsy suffered only light shrapnel wounds. Seven journalists and one American, a director of a private voluntary organization, were also wounded. The American sustained shrapnel wounds in his leg but was expected to recover.

4.1.97

One of the exploded molotov cocktails that were thrown over the wall of the U.S. Embassy’s Seafront Compound. No one was hurt in the attack.

April 1, 1997•Manila, Philippines

At approximately 2 p.m., two molotov cocktails were thrown over the wall of the U.S. Embassy’s Seafront Compound. The improvised explosive devices caused a grass fire that was quickly extinguished. One witness outside the compound said he noticed that something was thrown into the compound by an unidentified passenger of a white taxi that was headed north. There was no claim of responsibility for the attack.

May 14, 1997•Philippines

A vehicle belonging to Hydro Resources, a subcontractor of Bechtel Earthworks, carrying four employees and two Philippine National Police (PNP) officers to the Bechtel/Ogden Quezon power plant, was attacked at approximately 7 a.m. The attack took place approximately halfway between Mauban City and the facility, a distance of 10 kilometers. As the vehicle approached a bridge, a group of 10–30 armed men stopped the vehicle by blocking the road and opened fire with .223 caliber weapons (armalite or M–16s) and possibly grenades. Two Filipino employees were killed and four others were wounded. Quezon Power had received letters demanding “revolutionary taxes” from groups claiming to represent the Communist New People’s Army (NPA), but the perpetrators of the attack and the motive for it remained uncertain.

August 14, 1997•Bangkok, Thailand

A bomb exploded in the parking garage of the IBM building, seriously injuring two persons, one of whom was a security guard who later died of his wounds. The explosion, which occurred at approximately 3:20 p.m., shattered windows from the first to the fourth floor of the building and damaged five cars. The motive for the attack could not be determined.

January 1, 1997•Athens, Greece

A Wackenhut guard vehicle was set on fire and destroyed. The car was parked at the Wackenhut guard's residence at the time of the attack. No one was injured, and no group claimed responsibility.

January 10, 1997•Istanbul, Turkey

Police defused an improvised explosive device found 5 meters from the McDonald's restaurant in the district of Aksaray.

February 3, 1997•Paris, France

At approximately 4:10 a.m., a small explosive device detonated at the front door of the American dormitory at the Cite Universitaire of Paris. No one was hurt in the attack and damage was limited to the front door and some broken windows. Of the 270 rooms in the dormitory, American students comprise 40 percent of the occupants. No one has claimed responsibility for the attack.

February 25, 1997•Edinburgh, United Kingdom

At approximately 1:30 a.m., a liquid police believe to be lighter fluid was poured through the mail slot in the front door of the U.S. Consulate and set alight. There was minor damage, and no one was hurt. This event comes on the heels of an incident on February 19, 1997, when an unknown individual broke two windows in the front of the Consulate. No group has claimed responsibility for the attacks, but in November 1996, a group called the Scots Against Sanctions claimed credit for injecting glue into the Consulate's front door, rendering it inoperable. The group was protesting against American-inspired sanctions against Iraq.

March 7, 1997•Angers, France

A powerful bomb was found and defused at a Church of Scientology in this western French town. The bomb was concealed in a sports bag and placed in the entry hall, shortly after the church opened. A church member found the bomb, carried it to a nearby park and defused it himself. There was no claim of responsibility for the attack.

April 12, 1997•Lisburn, England

Unidentified individuals set fire to a Mormon church. No one was injured in the attack. There was no claim of responsibility.

April 20, 1997•Regensburg, Germany

Between 1 a.m. and 4 a.m., an explosive device placed in a trash can exploded in the parking lot of a McDonald's restaurant. No one was injured in the attack and damage was minor. No one claimed responsibility for the attack, however, April 20th, is Adolph Hitler's birthday.

May 8, 1997•Tirana, Albania

A bomb exploded inside the perimeter wall of the U.S.-based Soros Foundation. No one was injured, but a car parked nearby was destroyed, and a restaurant across the street from the foundation sustained minor damage. No one claimed responsibility for the attack.

May 12, 1997•Izmir, Turkey

A molotov cocktail was thrown at the American Girls School, which offers "Western-style" education to a largely Turkish student body. No one was hurt in the attack. Four members of the illegal Turkish group, Islamic Great East Raiders Front (IBDA-C) were arrested in connection with the attack. The members were protesting the mandatory 8-year education system being implemented in Turkey.

May 29, 1997•Saint-Jean-De-Luz, France

At 1:30 a.m. a bomb exploded outside the front entrance of a McDonald's restaurant in this French Basque seaside town. There was material damage, but no one was hurt in the attack. On June 2, 1997, the French Basque group Iparretarrak claimed responsibility for the attack in a communiqué sent to Agence France Presse in Bayonne, France. The communiqué read in part, "If Michele Alliot-Marie (recently reelected as deputy in the Pyrenees-Atlantiques) thinks that a McDonald's is an example of economic development, then her skill in solving the unemployment problem is nonexistent."

June 29, 1997•Pisa, Italy

At 9:30 p.m. a small pipe bomb exploded inside Camp Darby, the U.S. military camp located near Pisa. The bomb was placed in a paper basket located in the mail room. Damage was minimal and no one was injured. The incident occurred at the end of a 9-day annual event, the "Carnival Q 97," in which the camp is open to hundreds of civilian visitors.

July 18, 1997•Doboj, Republika Srpska

A U.S. soldier was slightly injured by flying glass after a bomb was thrown at a car parked outside offices used by NATO military observers in this Serb-controlled town.

July 24, 1997•Bratunac, Republika Srpska

At approximately 1 a.m. an M-80 RPG round was fired at an International Police Training Force (IPTK) vehicle parked outside the home of a U.S. IPTK monitor. The round penetrated the hood of the car and became lodged in the engine, but did not explode.

July 25, 1997•Vlasenica, Republika Srpska

At approximately 4:10 a.m., a molotov cocktail was thrown at a car used by a U.S. military observer. The car was parked in front of the American's house at the time of the attack. No one was hurt, and no one has claimed responsibility.

August 28, 1997•Brcko, Republika Srpska

American soldiers under the NATO-led Stabilization Force (SFOR) command came under attack from a crowd of angry Bosnia Serbs. The Bosnian Serbs who were armed with stones, were trying to prevent SFOR from ousting Bosnian Serb policemen loyal to Serb leader Radovan Karadzic from a local police station. Two American soldiers were hurt in the incident.

September 24, 1997•Belgrade, Serbia-Montenegro

At approximately 2 a.m., a bomb destroyed a second-floor women's bathroom at a McDonald's restaurant. The restaurant was closed at the time. There were no reported injuries.

September 26, 1997•Istanbul, Turkey

Two pipe bombs exploded outside of a General Electric appliance outlet. There were no injuries or property damage. A flag from a group called the Turkish Communist Workers Party/Leninists (TKEP/L) was found at the scene.

October 5, 1997•Istanbul, Turkey

At approximately 8:30 p.m., police found an incendiary device located against the wall of the U.S.

Consulate. The device consisted of two 1-liter bottles filled with gasoline. The fuse was inserted and lit at the time of recovery. Flyers and a flag were left with the device. The flag had the initials TKEP/L (Turkish Communist Workers Party/Leninist). Written on the flyers in Spanish and Turkish was: "Revolution Forever-Che," and "Che-Revolutions are coming."

November 27, 1997•Katowice, Poland

At approximately 4:30 a.m., an unidentified individual threw a firebomb through the window of an office used once a week by the U.S. Foreign Commercial Service (FCS). There was extensive damage, but no one was hurt in the attack. The police stated that the attack was a deliberate act, but did not know if it was directed at the United States.

December 1, 1997•Athens, Greece

During the early morning hours, a branch of an American Express office was the target of an attempted bombing. At approximately 11:30 p.m., an unidentified caller telephoned, the Greek newspapers Effimerotika and Excusia, to warn that a bomb would detonate at the American Express office in 1 hour. The police responded and deactivated the device. No group claimed responsibility for the attack.

December 10, 1997•Mersin, Turkey

A bomb was found inside an empty gas canister as it was being unloaded from a truck near the Atas Oil refinery. Atas refinery is a joint venture of Mobil Oil, British Petroleum, and Royal Dutch/Shell Oil. No one claimed responsibility for the attack.

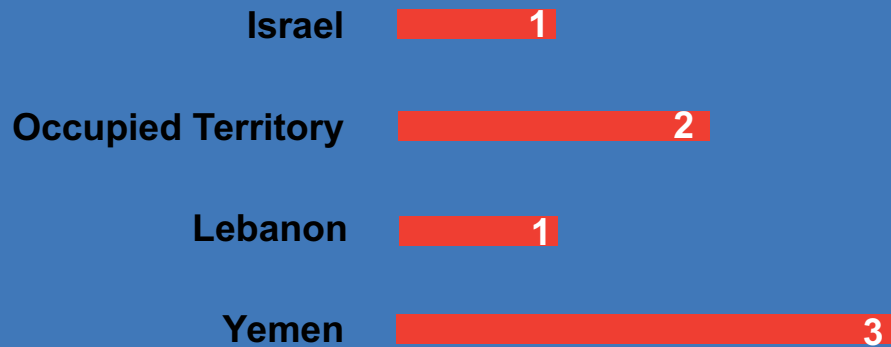

December 28, 1997•Rijeka, Croatia

Police defused a bomb found near the kitchen of a McDonald's restaurant. Police received a phone call warning them about the device, which allowed them to evacuate the restaurant and safely deactivate the bomb.

Three suicide bombers detonated bombs in the popular Ben Yehuda outdoor shopping mall. Six people, including an American teenage girl, were killed and 166 people, including 8 U.S. citizens were wounded. The Hamas Izz al-Din al-Qassam Brigades issued a communiqué claiming responsibility for the attack.

October 27, 1997•Beirut, Lebanon

An unknown assailant on a motorcycle threw a small explosive device over a wall at the American University of Beirut (AUB). There were no injuries, but the force of the explosion caused considerable property damage.

October 30, 1997•Barat, Yemen

The American director of the Yemeni al-Hashedi company (a subsidiary of Hunt Oil) was abducted by several members of the al-Sha'if tribe. He was taken to the village of Barat where the kidnapers initially demanded the release of a fellow tribesman arrested on criminal charges. Once they realized they had an American, demands to the Yemeni government for schools and roads followed. The American was released unharmed on November 27, 1997.

November 25–26, 1997•Aden, Yemen

Yemeni tribesmen kidnaped a U.S. citizen, and four other Westerners to protest the eviction of a tribe member from his home. The hostages were released unharmed on November 27, 1997.

December 12, 1997•Tel Aviv, Israel

According to the American leader of the Jehovah's Witnesses in Israel, their meeting hall was the setting for an arson attack which led to one member being hospitalized for smoke inhalation. Some of the members claimed to have heard "glass breaking and a thump" immediately before the fire was discovered in the laundry room. The leader further stated that sporadic attempts at persecution and intimidation date back as far as 1978 and include a series of other attempted arsons and the planting of a grenade.

Colombo, Sri Lanka

Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam (LTTE) guerrillas armed with firearms, grenades, and wearing suicide vests, drove an explosives-laden truck into the parking lot of the Galadari Hotel, next to Colombo's new World Trade Center.

They gunned down two hotel security guards before detonating the truck bomb, killing 18 persons and wounding about 110 others, including 7 American citizens and 33 other foreign nationals. The blast severely damaged three hotels and the new World Trade Center and destroyed all the cars in the parking lot.

August 11, 1997•Chennai, India

A bomb exploded at the Russian Cultural Center, which houses the American school of Chennai's pre-kindergarten through second grade. The explosion injured one policeman and shattered windows. No Americans or children were injured in the attack. A group called the Tamil Nadu Liberation Front (TNLF) left leaflets at the scene and other groups also claimed responsibility. The TNLF leaflets criticized upcoming Indian independence celebration, and the construction of a U.S.-owned nylon plant. However, police suspect that the Tamil Nadu Liberation Army (TNLA) may actually be responsible.

December 23, 1997•Karachi, Pakistan

Unidentified assailants fired shots at the teachers' residential compound of the Karachi American School, wounding one Frontier Constabulary (FC) guard. The FC guard post had been in place since the November 12 murders of four Union Texas Petroleum employees and their driver.

Vehicle in which the four Union Texas Petroleum (UTP) employees and their Pakistani driver were killed.

November 12, 1997•Karachi, Pakistan

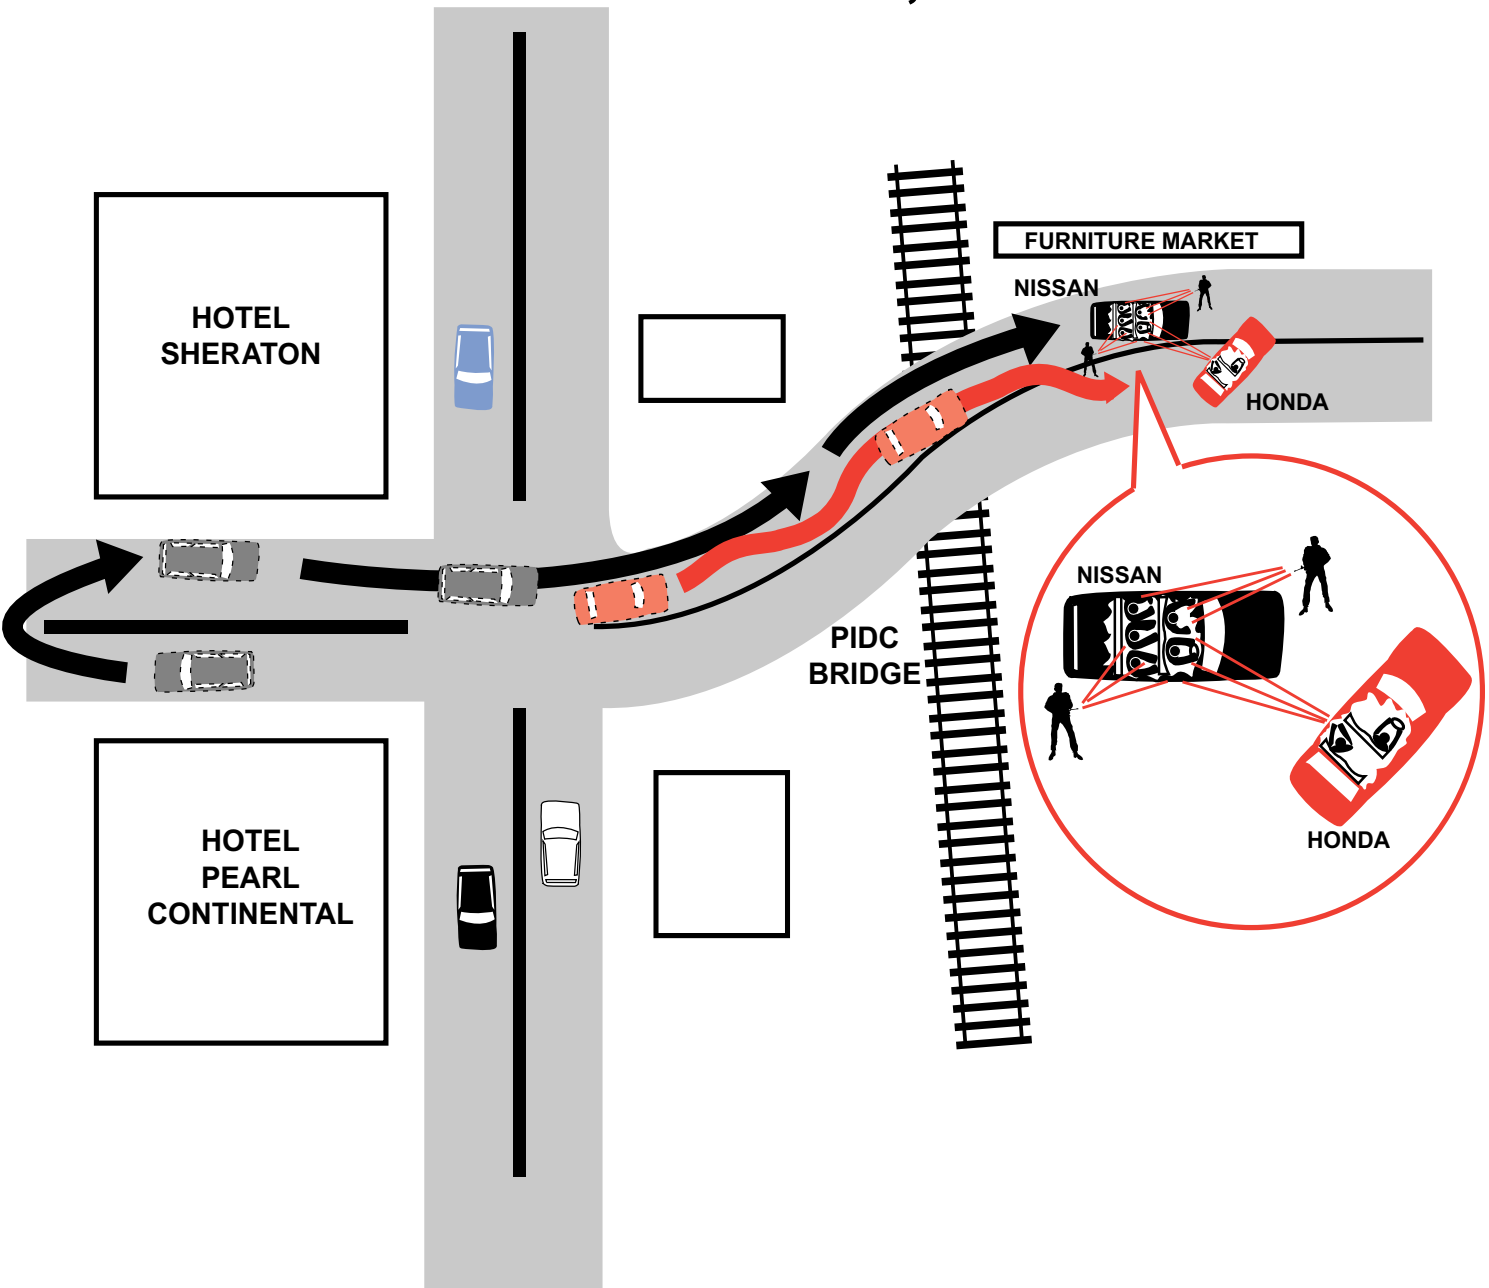

At approximately 8:10 a.m., four auditors of the Union Texas Petroleum (UTP) Company and their driver were shot and killed when the vehicle in which they were riding was attacked. The shooting took place near an area known as the Railway Colony as the employees were en route from their hotels to the local UTP headquarters. All four employees were TDY (temporary duty) and had been in Karachi for only a brief time. Three were staying at the Hotel Pearl Continental and one was staying at the Sheraton. According to a schedule that did not vary, all four were picked up shortly before 8:00 a.m.

The employees were traveling west on Tamiz-Ud-Din Road when their vehicle, an unarmored, black Nissan, four-door station wagon was overtaken and forced to a stop by a red Honda Civic carrying two or three passengers. The Honda Civic may have had to weave through traffic to catch up with the Nissan before overtaking it. Varying reports indicated that one or two passengers exited the Honda Civic with AK-47 automatic rifles, shooting through the windshield and killing the UTP driver. The assailant(s) then fired through the driver's side windows and vehicle body killing all the remaining occupants of the Nissan. The perpetrators then left the scene and discarded the Red Honda Civic a short distance away. The modus operandi of the attack was strikingly similar to a March 8, 1995, attack in Karachi in which two U.S. Consulate employees were killed and one was wounded.

The red Honda Civic was traced to a Pakistani national, who stated that the vehicle had been stolen at gunpoint 2 days earlier. Police interviewed the registered owner of the Honda Civic who was able to provide a composite sketch of the alleged car thief. In the months following the attack, two shadowy groups, the Aimal Secret Committee, the Islami Inquilabi Council, and the Army of God, claimed responsibility for the attack. Pakistani security authorities arrested a number of alleged suspects. The identity of the attackers remains unknown

A 10-Year Look Back

In this tenth anniversary issue of Significant Incidents of Political Violence Against Americans, we review terrorist events and trends that have affected Americans visiting, living, and working overseas. The information contained in this section illustrates the broad spectrum of political violence and terrorism that Americans and American interests have faced overseas.*

A historical review of the types of Anti-American incidents show that bombings are the primary mode of attack—1,163. The majority of bombings were against U.S. business interests.

Of the 761 Americans murdered abroad since 1968, 459 lives were taken in just five attacks. These attacks were suspected to be state-sponsored. Our chronology of lethal attacks against Americans provides a synopsis of all those terrorist and political attacks that resulted in the death of Americans overseas. In this chronology, we provide statistics from 1968 when the U.S. Government first started keeping such records.

The primary targets of political kidnappings against Americans are representatives of business, and these kidnappings mostly occurred in Latin America. This 10-year statistical review of anti-American attacks includes a summary of Americans held captive as a result of political violence and terrorism.

Finally, we look at Operation Desert Storm, the one major event that resulted in the most dramatic increase in anti-American incidents during the past 10 years. In that 20-day period, 135 attacks against Americans and U.S. interests were carried out worldwide, including an assassination and an attempted assassination.

*This information does not include incidents of narcoterrorism and is confined to attacks against Americans outside the United States.

Operation Desert Storm

January 16, 1991–March 4, 1991

Anniversary 10 Issue

1987 1997

In reviewing anti-American terrorist attacks over the past 10 years, the one event that resulted in the most dramatic increase in anti-American terrorist activity was the U.S. involvement in the Persian Gulf War, also referred to as Operation Desert Storm. During the cited period there were 135 anti-American attacks. Most of the attacks were low-level bombings that resulted in property damage. However, during this period, one American civilian Defense Department contractor was killed and there was an attempted assassination of a U.S. Air Force officer. Less than 3 weeks after the end of Operation Desert Storm another American civilian Defense Department contractor and a U.S. Air Force sergeant were killed. These lethal attacks were carried out by indigenous leftwing terrorist groups in protest against Operation Desert Storm. Following is a worldwide statistical review of anti-American attacks carried out during Operation Desert Storm.
