

Time for Carlos to have his blood drawn.

It only hurts for a short time. Afterwards, his nurse draws a smiling face on the bandage. Blood draws may be needed often during the child's care. Nobody likes "needle sticks," but the staff is specially trained to draw blood quickly and with as little pain as possible.

INFORMATION FOR Pediatric Patients
& THEIR FAMILIES

NIH Clinical Center
National Institutes of Health

