                   Different from that in bill as introduced (see Technical comments section).

Product information, including uses/applications and source(s) of imports:

In-line ground fault circuit interrupters rated at 15 amperes (A) or higher are a type of ground fault circuit interrupter, or GFCI. A GFCI is a safety device used to reduce or prevent electrical shock with the ground or ground equipment by interrupting the electrical current loading to a device that is set with a predetermined value. If the value of the ground current exceeds the predetermined value, then the GFCI will automatically turn off the electrical current to the device to prevent electrical shock. In-line GFCIs of 15 amps or more typically contain the GFCI circuitry in line as part of an electrical cord.

GFCIs are most commonly used in areas where there is water. In-line GFCIs rated at 15 A or higher are most commonly used in commercial and industrial settings such as construction sites, where there is high powered equipment being used in close proximity to water. They are equipped with industrial grade plugs and connectors for heavy-duty applications including carnivals, sporting events, and emergency power for disaster relief.

The principal U.S. import sources of this product are China and Mexico.<sup>4</sup> Dutiable U.S. imports of all products classified in subheading 8536.30.80 (a broader group than is covered by this bill) totaled $326.1 million in 2007, of which China supplied $214.5 million and Mexico $20.6 million.
