February 26, 2007

Dear Ms. Broadbent:

On behalf of the Government of Japan, I am pleased to acknowledge receipt of your letter dated February 16, 2007 regarding the arrangement that the Government of the United States intends to implement concerning the acceptance of Declaration of Conformity (DoC) for Electro-Magnetic Compatibility (EMC) with respect to Unintentional Radiators and Industrial, Scientific and Medical (ISM) Equipment. I would like to express my gratitude that the United States Federal Communications Commission intends to accept, as expressed in your letter, such DoC based on testing performed by testing laboratories in Japan.

In this regard, I have enclosed a copy of the letter from the Voluntary Control Council for Interference by Information Technology Equipment (VCCI) communicating VCCI's intention to accept Registration of Product Conformity with respect to Information Technology (IT) Equipment by testing laboratories in the United States.

Sincerely yours,

Industrial Science and Technology Policy and Environment Bureau,
Ministry of Economy, Trade and Industry

Dear Mr. Sugiura, Mr. Yokoo and Mr. Nagano,

This letter is for the Voluntary Control Council for Interference by Information Technology Equipment (VCCI) to communicate its intention as declared below to the Government of Japan based on the letter from the Office of the United States Trade Representative dated February, 16, 2007 to the Government of Japan.

That is, VCCI will accept from U.S. suppliers (manufacturers and distributors) the Registration of Product Conformity, as defined in Article 9 of VCCI Rules for Voluntary Control Measure (VCCI Rules), for Information Technology (IT) Equipment as defined in Article 4 of the VCCI Rules based on testing performed by testing laboratories in the United States that are accredited to ISO/IEC Standard 17025 and relevant VCCI requirements by a U.S. accreditation body, provided the following requirements are met:

1. The U.S. suppliers are VCCI regular members;
2. The U.S. accreditation bodies meet the following qualifications:
  - 2.1. They accredit testing laboratories to ISO/IEC Standard 17025 and relevant VCCI requirements; and
  - 2.2. They are signatories of the Asia-Pacific Laboratory Accreditation Cooperation Mutual Recognition Arrangement or participate in an equivalent peer review;

3. The testing laboratories in the United States are regular members or supporting members of VCCI and pay applicable membership fees; and

Note: Testing laboratories in the United States, that are VCCI members and that have been accredited by a U.S. accreditation body, are required to register with VCCI (sample form attached) but such registration will not incur fees.

4. The U.S. suppliers submit the results of conformity assessment procedures to VCCI in accordance with VCCI Rules for conformity verification reporting.

VCCI is willing to cooperate in establishing operational procedures and guides aligned with VCCI requirements for implementation of the arrangement set out in this letter with the U.S. accreditation bodies and suppliers and testing laboratories in the United States that are interested in taking part in this arrangement.

Sincerely,

Haruyoshi NAGASAWA
