SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

The papers of Milton S. Eisenhower, spanning the 1938-74, chronicle his career in public service and higher education.

The series of speeches, articles, and reports covers such topics as U.S.-Latin American relations, conservation, higher education, psychological warfare, the conflict between communism and democracy, the United Nations Educational, Social, and Cultural Organizations, and domestic violence. The largest volume of material in this series concerns two subjects: higher education and Latin America. Dr. Eisenhower made numerous statements on the former while president of three universities. The study of U.S.-Latin American relations was his primary assignment for the Eisenhower administration. This series contains reports of two trips he made to the region as the President's personal representative.

The correspondence series contains primarily letters written by Dwight D. Eisenhower to his brother Milton from 1942-1968. Numerous subjects are discussed in these letters, but the most prominent topics are the progress of World War II in North Africa and President Eisenhower's decisions to stand for election in 1952 and 1956. There are also letters by Mamie Doud Eisenhower to Mrs. Milton Eisenhower. Several letters to Dr. Eisenhower from John F. Kennedy, Lyndon Johnson, and Richard Nixon are also scattered throughout the series.

Two oral history transcripts provide information on President Eisenhower's relations with his brother Milton, John Foster Dulles, and political leaders; the 1952, 1956, and 1960 campaigns; Latin America; government reorganization; the Cabinet and National Security Council during the Eisenhower administration; Richard Nixon as Vice-President; and Dwight D. Eisenhower's heart attack.

A set unusually well-kept and captioned scrapbooks, many of which were prepared by Mrs. Milton Eisenhower, chronicles Dr. Eisenhower's career and family life in newspaper clippings and photographs.
