Literary property rights in the unpublished writings of Henry S. Aurand are reserved to him during his lifetime, and thereafter to Evan Peter Aurand II, and thereafter to whomsoever he shall designate or to the United States.

By agreement with the donor the following classes of documents will be withheld from research:

1. Papers relating to the family and private business affairs.
2. Papers relating to the family and private business affairs of other persons who had correspondence with General Aurand.
3. Papers relating to investigations of individuals or to appointments and personnel matters.
4. Papers containing statements made by or to General Aurand in confidence unless in the judgment of the Director of the Dwight D. Eisenhower Library the reason for the confidentiality no longer exists.
5. All other papers which contain information or statements that might be used to injure, harass, or damage any living person.

SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

Lieutenant General Henry Spiese Aurand was born 21 April 1894 in Tamaqua, Pennsylvania. He graduated number twenty out of one hundred sixty-five cadets from West Point, and was commissioned into the Coast Artillery Corps in 1915. In 1920 he was assigned to Ordnance where he spent nearly thirty-five years of his military career.

Aurand was a skilled logistician who served as a catalyst in reforming the U.S. Army's logistical systems. He was directly involved in many changes pertaining to logistics and ordnance. In 1924-1925, while on special assignment to Chief of Ordnance he wrote the Distribution Plan to the Army Industrial Mobilization Plan. He also wrote the Ordnance Field Manual, first published in 1932. Later versions of his Field Manual, published in 1939 and 1942, were used by the Army throughout WWII.

He worked with the British and other allies to develop comprehensive requests for materiel during Lend-Lease. His most important requirements computations were those for industrial build-up and production that became known as the Victory Plan for WWII. His numbers were often used at the highest level and one set of numbers was used without change in a State of the Union Address. His ability to scientifically compute and to defend requirements was integral to support of the Lend-Lease Act while ensuring that the U.S. Army had minimal acceptable levels of material for its own training and war fighting needs. During his tenure as the lead of War Department Lend-Lease, Aurand also ensured that facilities required for U.S. military production were not converted to produce foreign specification materiel.

In WWII he was Commanding General of the Sixth Service Command in Chicago, Illinois from 1942 to 1944. Late in 1944 he was assigned as the Commanding General (CG), Normandy Base Section and commanded that unit during the Battle of the Bulge. His forces were critical to forwarding supplies and freeing up men to assist in the counterattack. During this time he was revolutionary in his use of African-American units, giving them unheard of levels of authority and responsibility. He believed that these units could perform as well as any other when their officers were trusted and empowered to command.

Due to his success and reputation as a logistician Aurand was assigned as the CG, Services of Supply, China Theater and then as the last CG of the U.S. Africa-Middle East Theater. In both cases his responsibilities were to support the U.S. soldiers in theater and then close out the theaters. He went on to be the Director of Army Research & Development and then Army Director of Logistics after the creation of the Department of Defense. In 1949 Aurand was assigned as the CG, U.S. Army Pacific (USARPAC) in 1949 and served in that position through most of the Korean Conflict.

The papers of General Henry S. Aurand span the years 1873-1974. The bulk of the material was originated during his military career from 1915 to 1952. As a consequence of the many positions which he held, General Aurand corresponded with several prominent individuals. His papers include messages to and from such people as Franklin Roosevelt, Henry Stimson, Averell Harriman, Robert Patterson, Kenneth Royall, Bernard Baruch, Harry Hopkins, and Generals Dwight D. Eisenhower, Omar Bradley, Floyd Parks, J. Lawton Collins, and Lucius Clay.

General Aurand was a prolific author and speaker both during and after his military career with a tendency to freely express himself. The many articles, speech drafts, and newspaper columns found in the Aurand Papers frequently reflect his thinking and attitudes concerning numerous topics. Because his personal and professional life were closely intertwined, correspondence found in the personal or general correspondence files often reflects Aurand's opinions regarding military affairs, foreign policy, and other issues of national and international interest.

Since 1969 two prior attempts at arrangement and description have imposed a sort of order on this collection. As much as possible, this arrangement has been retained at this time. There are seven series within the collection: Military Career, 1911-1952; Military Education, 1911-1940; Retirement Years, 1952-1978; Personal and Family Files, 1873-1947; Article, Speech and Book Files, 1938-1963;

Memorabilia, 1942-1962; and Oral History, 1974. Documents within the Military Career Series are generally arranged first in chronological groupings, then by type of document, and finally alphabetically. The remainder of the series was generally arranged first by type of document, then chronologically.

See the series descriptions for more complete information regarding the arrangement and content of specific series.

In 2005 there were 95 photographs transferred to the Audiovisual Department in addition to 2,321 that had been transferred at an earlier date.

Subseries 1: Personal 201 File folders contain reports, correspondence, memorandums, monthly officer’s reports, invitations, speeches, and special orders relating to Aurand’s official duties. Some folders may also contain family correspondence and theater programs and photographs from his participation in amateur theater.

Subseries 2: Personal and General Correspondence folders contain reports, correspondence, memorandums, invitations, travel orders and special orders relating to Aurand’s official duties. Most folders also contain family correspondence. Some folders may also contain transcripts of conversations.

Subseries 3: Diary folders contain transcripts, primarily of telephone conversations along with a few transcripts of notes from conferences of the G-4 and Planning and Requirements Branch and Research and Development Branch. Documents within several of the diaries are numbered and each diary begins with an index to names and subjects. Indexes will be noted in the container list after the folder title. Subjects relate to the supply of U.S. forces and their allies, development of Army ordnance, and Defense Aid.

Subseries 4: Subject File folders contain correspondence, reports, minutes of meetings, appointment calendars and related documents relating to a specific subject.

Subseries 5: Special Correspondence folders contain correspondence, invitations, greetings cards, address lists, and related correspondence. Some folders are labeled with a name or subject and contain correspondence relating to a specific topic or from a single individual.

Subseries 6: Clippings folders contain newspaper clippings relating to Aurand’s military duty assignments. Many relate to the Sixth Service Command. Additional topics include Women’s Army Auxiliary Corps, Army Nurse Corps, recruitment, manpower, prisoners of war, African-American soldiers, and war production and supply.

Subseries 7: Invitations folders contain invitations and related correspondence relating to social events, speaking engagements, and public appearances. These folders are arranged chronologically by the date of the event.

Subseries 8: Official Correspondence folders contain official correspondence. Correspondence within the files is numbered with case file numbers and indexed with name, dates of correspondence and subject. Each item of correspondence is listed in the index, but only the first item is annotated with the number. Dates on the folder titles refer to the date of the last item in the case file.

Subseries 9: Family Correspondence folders contain incoming and outgoing correspondence between Aurand, his father, wife, daughter, sons and other relatives. General correspondence files and 201 files also contain family correspondence

- 58-59 SERIES II: MILITARY EDUCATION, 1911-1940. 2 containers. This series contains class schedules, curriculum, lectures, correspondence and other related documents created or acquired by Aurand during Army education assignments, both as student and teacher. See the Biographical Note for specific duty assignments. Arranged chronologically.
- 50-62 SERIES III: RETIREMENT YEARS, 1952-1978. 13 containers. This series consists of correspondence, invitations and news clippings that originated during General Aurand's retirement years. Of particular note are items relating to the 50th reunion of the West Point class of 1915 and "The Class that Reached the Stars" by Henry Spiese Aurand, a statistical study of the class of 1915. Arranged by type of document, then chronologically.
- 63 SERIES IV: PERSONAL AND FAMILY FILES, 1873-1947. 1 container. Includes papers of General Aurand's father, Peter Aurand. Also includes school materials from the General's childhood, as well as family correspondence from 1944-1946. Arranged chronologically.
- 64-72 SERIES V: ARTICLE, SPEECH AND BOOK FILES, 1938-1963. 9 containers. Articles, speeches, newspaper columns, and book drafts written throughout Aurand's military career and after his retirement from the Army. Arranged by type of document, then chronologically.
- 73-78 SERIES VI: MEMORABILIA, 1942-1962. 6 containers. This series contains news clippings, booklets, programs, newspapers, and miscellaneous material generally arranged into scrapbooks. Of particular note are two scrapbooks maintained by Aurand while he was a cadet at West Point. Arranged chronologically.
- 79 SERIES VII: ORAL HISTORY, 1974. 1 container. This oral history was conducted by Major William O. Morrison of the Command and General Staff School, Fort Leavenworth, during April and May of 1974. While citation and quotation from the transcript is allowed, reproductions require written permission from Aurand's heirs, legal representatives, or assigns.
