1980 CENSUS DATA FOR ALASKAN COMMUNITIES

Description of the Tables

These tables report the population counts in Alaskan communities as reported by the Bureau of the Census in a publication entitled "Census of Population and Housing 1980: PL-171 Population Counts Microfiche Technical Publication".

Residence: The residence of the population was reported in the source by 1980 census enumeration districts with the exception of major cities. The enumeration districts were then converted to community names based on the Bureau of the Census publication "Local Official Review Geographic Areas Reference List, Part 1: Counties". Communities were then grouped into service areas, regional health corporations and service units within the state. Service areas are theoretical areas surrounding a community which has an inpatient or outpatient facility manned by a health professional or para-professional; it may be an existing or proposed, IHS or non-IHS facility. The Census Bureau groups enumeration districts into census areas; these are different from census divisions used in 1970 but are often very similar. The census area within which each community is located is listed after the community name. In most cases service areas fall entirely within one census area but sometimes they don't.

Population Counts: The total and Native (Indian, Aleut or Eskimo) populations are given for each community and summary areas. A zero indicates that the Census Bureau identified the community as a location but determined there were no people living there at the time the census was taken. A blank space where a population figure should be indicates that the Census Bureau did not recognize the community and it is therefore not possible to say whether or not anyone was living there. If someone was, they would be lumped in the community listed as "unspecified" along with others who do not live in any identified community. These "unspecified" communities exist for most service areas. In some cases the people in "unspecified" communities are in parts of two different census areas within the same service area; in this case there may be two "unspecified" communities listed, one for each census area. Data on family income, households, and other items from the census questionnaire are not yet available.
