Bob Belongie works as a contractor for the Shasta-Trinity National forest and is the voice of the Shasta-Trinity Podcasts, launched in May 2008.

Belongie is a native of Redding and a graduate of Shasta High School.

While enlisted in the U.S. Navy, Belongie was assigned to Fighter Squadron Two at Naval Air Station Miramar, San Diego. It was during deployments he first began his broadcasting career as a volunteer Disc Jockey at the ship's onboard radio station. "Big Bob's Midnight Madness" was a popular program that even spawned a tee shirt featuring a wolf howling at the moon.

During his career, Belongie has worked for KSXO, KCLM, KPAK and K9FM. In 1997, he was hired part-time as a weekend reporter with KQMS. Eventually he went full-time at KQMS, hosting a weekend talk show, "The Saturday Magazine", and anchoring the evening news. Belongie was promoted to Program Director for KQMS while continuing to report and host news programs, including "Something To Talk About."

In 2006, Belongie turned his attention to Internet Radio.
