

An excavator with an attachment called a masticator prepares to grind small trees and shrubs into mulch at the Sven Olbertson salmon habitat restoration site.

An excavator places tree trunks into an excavated side channel watercourse intended to house juvenile salmon after they hatch from gravel in the adjacent river at the Sven Olbertson salmon habitat restoration site.

A front-end loader drops a load of boulders into an excavated side channel at the Sven Olbertson salmon habitat restoration site.