

I am a resident of SE Aurora who is absolutely against changing any flight paths over the Aurora vs. the current flight path. I don't understand how people who buy homes by an airport can now complain about airport noise? Not only that but why would residents in Aurora under the proposed new flight path not hear the planes if they do? It will just shift to noise complaints to another area! I already get air traffic noise from DIA at times and from Buckley Air Force Base so definitely don't need any more noise from Centennial Airport!

I am all for finding solutions to noise for the people who live by the airport but shifting the flight path over other people's homes is not the answer. How about limiting large jets after 10pm? Orange County has similar issues and the jets take off at a much steeper rate and no flights are allowed in or out of the airport after 10pm.

Bottom line: Don't buy a home by an airport and expect it to be quiet!
