General Comment

Something must be done immediately about the financial institutions raping consumers of their hard earned money!

The amounts they charge is excessive, and they should be capped to $10.00 per overdraft charge. (A fair enough price for the time it takes to click one or two buttons to either pay or deny a check).

Allowing these banks to charge excessive overdraft fees is making the economy even worse than it already is! It's putting people in more debt than they can afford and it's a bad policy for everyone involved, except the financial institutions of course!

There are many, many Americans who do not even make $10.00 per hour, and while struggling to make ends meet, feed their families, heat their homes and put fuel in their vehicles to get to work, they are being charged a minimum of $25.00 per overdraft fee.

It cost the financial institution basically nothing to pay or deny a charge/check from an account with insufficient funds. They then in turn immediately debit the shareholders account a whopping fee that most consumers don't make in 3 hours of work.

It is WRONG!! It should be ILLEGAL!! And the government needs to take a stand and STOP gouging at the banks just as they try to do when it happens at the pumps!
