

I often recommend the UHP to co workers, friends, and relatives who want a house and have no idea where to start and who to talk to about buying a home. A lot of minorities are unfamiliar with finances, building a good credit history, the importance of basic upkeep on a home, the importance of maintaining a clean-manicured lawn, and abiding by city codes to improve the appearance of the neighborhood. With the guidance of UHP, my street (houses and lawn) look great. (123)

The builder is still doing construction on many new houses and minority families are moving in on a constant quick basis.

If you cut this program you will destroy future improvements and progress in West Dallas. Builders will stop building new homes in areas like mine. And, families will continue to live in substandard housing which are barely standing and have no heat or cooling system adequate for children or the elderly or any person.

P.S. We know that certain people do not want minorities in those nice suburban areas, like yours, so leave UHP alone so we can build or improve our ~~shared~~ urban communities. It's working!
