Important Changes for 2001

Coverdell education savings accounts (formerly education IRAs). Education IRAs have been renamed Coverdell education savings accounts. Coverdell education savings accounts are no longer covered in this publication. They are now covered in Publication 970, Tax Benefits for Higher Education.

Modified AGI limit for traditional IRAs. For 2001, if you are covered by a retirement plan at work, your deduction for contributions to a traditional IRA will be reduced (phased out) if your modified adjusted gross income (AGI) is between:

- $53,000 and $63,000 for a married couple filing a joint return or a qualifying widow(er),
- $33,000 and $43,000 for a single individual or head of household, or
- $−0− and $10,000 for a married individual filing a separate return.

For all filing statuses other than married filing a separate return, the upper and lower limits of the phaseout range increased by $1,000. For more information, see How Much Can I Deduct? in chapter 1.

Simplified rules for required minimum distributions. New rules which became effective in 2001 simplify how required minimum distributions are figured. For most people, the new simplified rules result in lower required minimum distributions. For more information, see When Must I Withdraw IRA Assets? (Required Distributions), in chapter 1.

Important Changes for 2002

Increased traditional IRA contribution and deduction limit. The most that can be contributed to your traditional IRA for 2002 is the smaller of the following amounts:

- Your compensation that you must include in income for the year, or
- $3,000 (up from $2,000).

If you are 50 years of age or older in 2002, the most that can be contributed to your traditional IRA for 2002 is the smaller of the following amounts:

- Your compensation that you must include in income for the year, or
- $3,500 (up from $2,000).

For more information, see How Much Can Be Contributed? in chapter 1.

Besides being able to contribute a larger amount in 2002, you may be able to deduct a larger amount. See How Much Can I Deduct? in chapter 1.

Modified AGI limit for traditional IRA contributions increased. For 2002, if you are covered by a retirement plan at work, your deduction for contributions to a traditional IRA will be reduced (phased out) if your modified adjusted gross income (AGI) is between:

- $54,000 and $64,000 for a married couple or a qualifying widow(er) filing a joint return,
- $34,000 and $44,000 for a single individual or head of household, or
- $−0− and $10,000 for a married individual filing a separate return.

For all filing statuses other than married filing a separate return, the upper and lower limits of the phaseout range increased by $1,000. See How Much Can I Deduct? under Traditional IRAs.

Credit for IRA contributions and salary reduction contributions. For tax years beginning after December 31, 2001, if you are an eligible individual, you may be able to claim a credit for a percentage of your qualified retirement savings contributions, such as contributions to your traditional or Roth IRA or salary reduction contributions to your SEP or SIMPLE. To be eligible, you must be at least 18 years old as of the end of the year, and you cannot be a student or an individual for whom someone else claims a personal exemption. Also, your adjusted gross income (AGI) must be below a certain amount. Adjusted gross income is the amount from your Form 1040, line 33, or Form 1040A, line 19.

For more information, see Publication 553, Highlights of 2001 Tax Changes.

Rollovers from traditional IRAs into qualified plans. For distributions after December 31, 2001, you can roll over tax free a distribution from your IRA into a qualified plan. The part of the distribution that you can roll over is the part that would otherwise be taxable (includible in your income). Qualified plans may, but are not required to, accept such rollovers. Rules applicable to other rollovers, such as the 60-day time limit, apply. For more information, see Rollovers in chapter 1.

Rollovers of distributions from employer plans. For distributions after December 31, 2001, you can roll over both the taxable and nontaxable part of a distribution from a qualified plan into a traditional IRA. If you have both deductible and nondeductible contributions in your IRA, you will have to keep track of your basis so you will be able to determine the taxable amount once distributions from the IRA begin.

For more information, see Rollover From Employer's Plan Into an IRA in chapter 1.

Rollovers of deferred compensation plans of state and local governments (section 457 plans) into traditional IRAs. Prior to 2002, you could not roll over tax free an eligible rollover distribution from a governmental deferred compensation plan to a traditional IRA.

Beginning with distributions after December 31, 2001, if you participate in an eligible deferred compensation plan of a state or local government, you may be able to roll over part of your account tax free into an eligible retirement plan such as a traditional IRA. The most that you can roll over is the amount that would be taxed if the rollover were not an eligible rollover distribution. You cannot roll over any part of the distribution that would not be taxable. The rollover may be either direct or indirect.

For more information, see Kinds of rollovers to an IRA in chapter 1.

Rollovers of traditional IRAs into deferred compensation plans of state and local governments (section 457 plans). Prior to 2002, you could not roll over tax free a distribution from a traditional IRA to a governmental deferred compensation plan.

Beginning with distributions after December 31, 2001, if you participate in an eligible deferred compensation plan of a state or local government, you may be able to roll over a distribution from your traditional IRA into a deferred compensation plan of a state or local government. Qualified plans may, but are not required to, accept such rollovers.

For more information, see Rollovers in chapter 1.

Rollovers of traditional IRAs into tax-sheltered annuities (section 403(b) plans). Prior to 2002, you could not roll over tax free a distribution from a traditional IRA into a tax-sheltered annuity.

Beginning with distributions after December 31, 2001, you may be able to roll over distributions tax free from a traditional IRA into a tax-sheltered annuity. You cannot roll over any amount that would not have been taxable.

Although a tax-sheltered annuity is allowed to accept such a rollover, it is not required to do so.

For more information, see Rollovers in chapter 1.

Participants born before 1936. If you were born before 1936, you may be able to use capital gain and averaging treatment on certain lump-sum distributions from qualified plans, but you will lose the opportunity to use capital gain or averaging treatment on distributions from a qualified plan if you roll over IRA contributions to that plan. You can retain such treatment if the rollover is from a conduit IRA. For more information on conduit IRAs, see IRA as a holding account (conduit IRA) for rollovers to other eligible plans in chapter 1.

No rollovers of hardship distributions into IRAs. For distributions made after December 31, 2001, no hardship distribution can be rolled over into an IRA. For more information about what can be rolled over, see Rollover From Employer's Plan Into an IRA in chapter 1.

Hardship exception to the 60-day rollover rule. Generally, a rollover is tax free only if you make the rollover contribution by the 60th day after the day you receive the distribution. Beginning with distributions after December 31, 2001, the IRS may waive the 60-day requirement where it would be against equity or good conscience not to do so.

For more information, see Time Limit for Making a Rollover Contribution in chapter 1.

Increased Roth IRA contribution limit. If contributions on your behalf are made only to Roth IRAs, your contribution limit for 2002 generally is the lesser of :

- $3,000 (up from $2,000), or
- Your taxable compensation.

If you are 50 years of age or older in 2002 and contributions on your behalf are made only to Roth IRAs, your contribution limit for 2002 generally is the lesser of:

- $3,500 (up from $2,000), or
- Your taxable compensation.

However, if your modified AGI is above a certain amount, your contribution limit may be reduced. For more information, see How Much Can Be Contributed? in chapter 2.

Contributions to both traditional and Roth IRAs for same year. If contributions are made on your behalf to both a Roth IRA and a traditional IRA, your contribution limit for 2002 is the lesser of :

- $3,000 ($3,500 if you are 50 years of age or older in 2002) (up from $2,000) minus all contributions (other than employer contributions under a SEP or SIMPLE IRA plan) for the year to all IRAs other than Roth IRAs, or
- Your taxable compensation minus all contributions (other than employer contributions under a SEP or SIMPLE IRA plan) for the year to all IRAs other than Roth IRAs.

However, if your modified AGI is above a certain amount, your contribution limit may be reduced. For more information, see How Much Can Be Contributed? in chapter 2.

Increase in limits on elective deferrals under a SEP-IRA. In general, the limit on elective deferrals made on your behalf for 2002 that represent a reduction in your salary under a SEP-IRA cannot be more than $11,000 (up from $10,500 for 2001). For more information, see What Is a Salary Reduction Arrangement? in chapter 3.

Increase in overall limits on SEP-IRA contributions. For 2002, your employer can contribute to your SEP-IRA up to the lesser of 15% of your compensation or $30,000 (up from $25,500 in 2001). For more information, see What Is a Salary Reduction Arrangement? in chapter 3.

Additional elective deferrals under a SEP-IRA for persons 50 and older. For contributions made after December 31, 2001, additional elective deferrals can be contributed to your salary reduction arrangement SEP-IRA if:

- You are 50 or older, and
- No other elective deferrals can be made for you to the plan for the year because of limits or restrictions, such as the regular annual limit.

For more information, see What Is a Salary Reduction Arrangement? in chapter 3.

Additional salary reduction contributions to SIMPLE IRAs for persons 50 and older. For contributions made after December 31, 2001, additional salary reduction contributions can be made to your SIMPLE IRA if:

- You are 50 or older, and
- No other salary reduction contributions can be made for you to the plan for the year because of limits or restrictions, such as the regular annual limit.

For more information, see How Much Can Be Contributed on My Behalf? in chapter 4.

Increase in limit on salary reduction contributions under a SIMPLE. For 2002, salary reduction contributions that your employer can make on your behalf under a SIMPLE plan are increased to $7,000 (up from $6,500 in 2001).

For more information about salary reduction contributions, see How Much Can Be Contributed on My Behalf? in chapter 4.

Rollovers from SIMPLE IRAs. For distributions after December 31, 2001, you may be able to roll over tax free a distribution from your SIMPLE IRA to a qualified plan, a tax-sheltered annuity (section 403(b) plan), or deferred compensation plan of a state or local government (section 457 plan). Previously, tax-free rollovers were only allowed to other IRAs. For more information, see chapter 4.

Self-employment earnings for purposes of SIMPLEs. Beginning after 2001, for purposes of the limit on deductions for contributions to a self-employed person's SIMPLE IRA, net earnings from self-employment include services performed while claiming exemption from self-employment tax as a member of a group conscientiously opposed to social security benefits. For more information, see Self-employed individual compensation in chapter 4.

Important Reminders

IRA interest. Although interest earned from your IRA is generally not taxed in the year earned, it is not tax-exempt interest. Do not report this interest on your return as tax-exempt interest.

Form 8606. If you make nondeductible contributions to a traditional IRA and you do not file Form 8606, Nondeductible IRAs and Coverdell ESAs, with your tax return, you may have to pay a $50 penalty.

Spousal IRAs. In the case of a married couple filing a joint return, up to $2,000 for 2001 ($3,000 for 2002 or $3,500 for 2002 if 50 or older) can be contributed to IRAs (other than SIMPLE IRAs) on behalf of each spouse, even if one spouse has little or no compensation. For more information, see Spousal IRA Limit under How Much Can Be Contributed? in chapter 1.

Spouse covered by employer plan. If you are not covered by an employer retirement plan and you file a joint return, you may be able to deduct all of your contributions to a traditional IRA even if your spouse is covered by a plan. For more information, see How Much Can I Deduct? in chapter 1.

Distributions for higher education expenses. You can take distributions from your traditional or Roth IRA for qualified higher education expenses without having to pay the 10% additional tax on early distributions. For more information, see Higher education expenses under Age 59½ Rule in chapter 1, Traditional IRAs, and Additional Tax on Early Distributions in chapter 2, Roth IRAs.

Distributions for first home. You can take distributions of up to $10,000 from your traditional or Roth IRA to buy, build, or rebuild a first home without having to pay the 10% additional tax on early distributions. For more information, see First home under Age 59½ Rule in chapter 1, Traditional IRAs, and Additional Tax on Early Distributions in chapter 2, Roth IRAs.

Roth IRA. You cannot claim a deduction for any contributions to a Roth IRA. But, if you satisfy the requirements, all earnings are tax free and neither your nondeductible contributions nor any earnings on them are taxable when you withdraw them. Roth IRAs are discussed in chapter 2.

Losses taken into account in calculating net income. A method for calculating net income associated with returned contributions and recharacterized contributions allows net income to be a negative amount. If no deduction is claimed for a contribution, there is no penalty if you withdraw the contribution or if you recharacterize it and withdraw or transfer (in the case of a recharacterization) any net income earned on the contribution by the due date of your return (including extensions) for the year. Prior to 2000, if your contribution suffered a loss while it was in an IRA, it was only taken into account in calculating net income for purposes of a recharacterization.

The calculation method allows you to take into account any loss on a returned or recharacterized contribution while it was in the IRA when calculating the amount of net income that must be withdrawn or recharacterized. If there was a loss in either case, net income may be a negative amount. See Excess Contributions Withdrawn by Due Date of Return in chapter 1 and Recharacterizations in chapter 2.

Photographs of missing children. The Internal Revenue Service is a proud partner with the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children. Photographs of missing children selected by the Center may appear in this publication on pages that would otherwise be blank. You can help bring these children home by looking at the photographs and calling 1–800–THE–LOST (1–800–843–5678) if you recognize a child.

Introduction

This publication discusses individual retirement arrangements (IRAs). An IRA is a personal savings plan that gives you tax advantages for setting aside money for retirement.

What are some tax advantages of an IRA? Two tax advantages of an IRA are that:

1) Contributions you make to an IRA may be fully or partially deductible, depending on which type of IRA you have and on your circumstances, and
2) Generally, amounts in your IRA (including earnings and gains) are not taxed until distributed. In some cases, amounts are not taxed at all if distributed according to the rules.

What's in this publication? This publication explains the rules for:

- Setting up an IRA,
- Contributing to an IRA,
- Transferring money or property to and from an IRA,
- Handling an inherited IRA,
- Making withdrawals from an IRA, and
- Receiving distributions from an IRA.

It also explains the penalties and additional taxes that apply when the rules are not followed. To assist you in complying with the tax rules for IRAs, this publication contains worksheets, sample forms, and tables, which can be found throughout the publication and in the appendices at the back of the publication.

Coverdell education savings accounts (formerly called education IRAs) are not discussed in this publication because they are not used to set aside money for retirement. They are used to fund education and are therefore discussed in Publication 970.

How to use this publication. The rules that you must follow depend on which type of IRA you have. Use Table I-1 to help you determine which parts of this publication to read. Also use Table I-1 if you were referred to this publication from instructions to a form.

Traditional IRAs

Important Changes for 2001

Modified AGI limit for traditional IRAs. For 2001, if you are covered by a retirement plan at work, your deduction for contributions to a traditional IRA will be reduced (phased out) if your modified adjusted gross income (AGI) is between:

- $53,000 and $63,000 for a married couple filing a joint return or a qualifying widow(er),
- $33,000 and $43,000 for a single individual or head of household, or
- $–0– and $10,000 for a married individual filing a separate return.

For all filing statuses other than married filing a separate return, the upper and lower limits of the phaseout range increased by $1,000. For more information, see How Much Can I Deduct? in this chapter.

Simplified rules for required minimum distributions. New rules which became effective in 2001 simplify how required minimum distributions are figured. For most people, the new simplified rules result in lower required minimum distributions. For more information, see When Must I Withdraw IRA Assets? (Required Distributions) in this chapter.

Important Changes for 2002

Increased traditional IRA contribution and deduction limit. The most that can be contributed to your traditional IRA for 2002 is the smaller of the following amounts:

- Your compensation that you must include in income for the year, or
- $3,000 (up from $2,000).

If you are 50 years of age or older in 2002, the most that can be contributed to your traditional IRA for 2002 is the smaller of the following amounts:

- Your compensation that you must include in income for the year, or
- $3,500 (up from $2,000).

For more information, see How Much Can Be Contributed? in this chapter.

You may be able to deduct a larger amount as well. See How Much Can I Deduct? in this chapter.

Modified AGI limit for traditional IRA contributions increased. For 2002, if you are covered by a retirement plan at work, your deduction for contributions to a traditional IRA will be reduced (phased out) if your modified adjusted gross income (AGI) is between:

Rollovers from traditional IRAs into qualified plans. For distributions after December 31, 2001, you can roll over, tax free, a distribution from your IRA into a qualified plan. The part of the distribution that you can roll over is the part that would otherwise be taxable (includible in your income). Qualified plans may, but are not required to, accept such rollovers. Rules applicable to other rollovers, such as the 60-day time limit, apply. For more information, see Rollovers in this chapter.

Rollovers of distributions from employer plans. For distributions after December 31, 2001, you can roll over both the taxable and nontaxable part of a distribution from a qualified plan into a traditional IRA. If you have both deductible and nondeductible contributions in your IRA, you will have to keep track of your basis so you will be able to determine the taxable amount once distributions from the IRA begin.

For more information, see Rollover From Employer's Plan Into an IRA in this chapter.

Rollovers of deferred compensation plans of state and local governments (section 457 plans) into traditional IRAs. Prior to 2002, you could not roll over tax free an eligible rollover distribution from a governmental deferred compensation plan to a traditional IRA.

Beginning with distributions after December 31, 2001, if you participate in an eligible deferred compensation plan of a state or local government, you may be able to roll over part of your account tax free into an eligible retirement plan such as a traditional IRA. The most that you can roll over is the amount that would be taxed if the rollover were not an eligible rollover distribution. You cannot roll over any part of the distribution that would not be taxable. The rollover may be either direct or indirect.

For more information, see Kinds of rollovers to an IRA in this chapter.

Rollovers of traditional IRAs into deferred compensation plans of state and local governments (section 457 plans). Prior to 2002, you could not roll over tax free a distribution from a traditional IRA to a governmental deferred compensation plan.

Beginning with distributions after December 31, 2001, if you participate in an eligible deferred compensation plan of a state or local government, you may be able to roll over a distribution from your traditional IRA into a deferred compensation plan of a state or local government. Qualified plans may, but are not required to, accept such rollovers.

For more information, see Rollovers in this chapter.

Rollovers of traditional IRAs into tax-sheltered annuities (section 403(b) plans). Prior to 2002, you could not roll over tax free a distribution from a traditional IRA into a tax-sheltered annuity.

Beginning with distributions after December 31, 2001, you may be able to roll over distributions tax free from a traditional IRA into a tax-sheltered annuity. You cannot roll over any amount that would not have been taxable.

Although a tax-sheltered annuity is allowed to accept such a rollover, it is not required to do so.

For more information, see Rollovers in this chapter.

Participants born before 1936. If you were born before 1936, you may be able to use capital gain and averaging treatment on certain lump-sum distributions from qualified plans, but you will lose the opportunity to use capital gain or averaging treatment on distributions from a qualified plan if you roll over IRA contributions to that plan. You can retain such treatment if the rollover is from a conduit IRA. For more information on conduit IRAs, see IRA as a holding account (conduit IRA) for rollovers to other eligible plans in this chapter.

No rollovers of hardship distributions into IRAs. For distributions made after December 31, 2001, no hardship distribution can be rolled over into an IRA. For more information about what can be rolled over, see Rollover From Employer's Plan Into an IRA in this chapter.

Hardship exception to the 60-day rollover rule. Generally, a rollover is tax free only if you make the rollover contribution by the 60th day after the day you receive the distribution. Beginning with distributions after December 31, 2001, the IRS may waive the 60-day requirement where it would be against equity or good conscience not to do so.

For more information, see Time Limit for Making a Rollover Contribution in this chapter.

Credit for IRA contributions. For tax years beginning after December 31, 2001, if you are an eligible individual, you may be able to claim a credit for a percentage of your qualified retirement savings contributions, such as contributions to your traditional IRA. To be eligible, you must be at least 18 years old as of the end of the year, and you cannot be a student or an individual for whom someone else claims a personal exemption. Also, your adjusted gross income (AGI) must be below a certain amount. Adjusted gross income is the amount from your Form 1040, line 33, or Form 1040A, line 19.

For more information, see Publication 553, Highlights of 2001 Tax Changes.

Introduction

This chapter discusses the original IRA. In this publication the original IRA (sometimes called an ordinary or regular IRA) is referred to as a "traditional IRA." Two advantages of a traditional IRA are:

1) You may be able to deduct some or all of your contributions to it, depending on your circumstances, and
2) Generally, amounts in your IRA, including earnings and gains, are not taxed until they are distributed.

What Is a Traditional IRA?

A traditional IRA is any IRA that is not a Roth IRA or a SIMPLE IRA.

Who Can Set Up a Traditional IRA?

You can set up and make contributions to a traditional IRA if:

1) You (or, if you file a joint return, your spouse) received taxable compensation during the year, and
2) You were not age $70^1/_2$ by the end of the year.

You can have a traditional IRA whether or not you are covered by any other retirement plan. However, you may not be able to deduct all of your contributions if you or your spouse are covered by an employer retirement plan. See How Much Can I Deduct, later.

Both spouses have compensation. If both you and your spouse have compensation and are under age 70½, each of you can set up an IRA. You cannot both participate in the same IRA.

What Is Compensation?

Generally, compensation is what you earn from working. For a summary of what compensation does and does not include, see Table 1–1. Compensation includes the items discussed next.

Wages, salaries, etc. Wages, salaries, tips, professional fees, bonuses, and other amounts you receive for providing personal services are compensation. The IRS treats as compensation any amount properly shown in box 1 (Wages, tips, other compensation) of Form W–2, Wage and Tax Statement, provided that amount is reduced by any amount properly shown in box 11 (Nonqualified plans). Scholarship and fellowship payments are compensation for IRA purposes only if shown in box 1 of Form W–2.

Commissions. An amount you receive that is a percentage of profits or sales price is compensation.

Self-employment income. If you are self-employed (a sole proprietor or a partner), compensation is the net earnings from your trade or business (provided your personal services are a material income-producing factor) reduced by the total of:

1) The deduction for contributions made on your behalf to retirement plans, and
2) The deduction allowed for one-half of your self-employment taxes.

Compensation includes earnings from self-employment even if they are not subject to self-employment tax because of your religious beliefs.

When you have both self-employment income and salaries and wages, your compensation includes both amounts.

Self-employment loss. If you have a net loss from self-employment, do not subtract the loss from your salaries or wages when figuring your total compensation.

Alimony and separate maintenance. For IRA purposes, compensation includes any taxable alimony and separate maintenance payments you receive under a decree of divorce or separate maintenance.

Alimony and separate maintenance	Income from a partnership for which you do not provide services that are a material income-producing factor

What Is Not Compensation?

Compensation does not include any of the following items.

- Earnings and profits from property, such as rental income, interest income, and dividend income.
- Pension or annuity income.
- Deferred compensation received (compensation payments postponed from a past year)
- Income from a partnership for which you do not provide services that are a material income-producing factor.
- Any amounts you exclude from income, such as foreign earned income and housing costs.

When Can a Traditional IRA Be Set Up?

You can set up a traditional IRA at any time. However, the time for making contributions for any year is limited. See When Can Contributions Be Made, later.

How Can a Traditional IRA Be Set Up?

You can set up different kinds of IRAs with a variety of organizations. You can set up an IRA at a bank or other financial institution or with a mutual fund or life insurance company. You can also set up an IRA through your stockbroker. Any IRA must meet Internal Revenue Code requirements. The requirements for the various arrangements are discussed below.

Kinds of traditional IRAs. Your traditional IRA can be an individual retirement account or annuity. It can be part of either a simplified employee pension (SEP) or an employer or employee association trust account.

Individual Retirement Account

An individual retirement account is a trust or custodial account set up in the United States for the exclusive benefit of you or your beneficiaries. The account is created by a written document. The document must show that the account meets all of the following requirements.

1) The trustee or custodian must be a bank, a federally insured credit union, a savings and loan association, or an entity approved by the IRS to act as trustee or custodian.
2) The trustee or custodian generally cannot accept contributions of more than $2,000 for 2001 ($3,000 for 2002 or $3,500 for 2002 if you are 50 or older). However, rollover contributions and employer contributions to a simplified employee pension (SEP), as explained in chapter 3, can be more than this amount.
3) Contributions, except for rollover contributions, must be in cash. See Rollovers, later.
4) You must have a nonforfeitable right to the amount at all times.
5) Money in your account cannot be used to buy a life insurance policy.
6) Assets in your account cannot be combined with other property, except in a common trust fund or common investment fund.
7) You must start receiving distributions by April 1 of the year following the year in which you reach age 70½. See When Must I Withdraw IRA Assets? (Required Distributions), later.

Individual Retirement Annuity

You can set up an individual retirement annuity by purchasing an annuity contract or an endowment contract from a life insurance company.

An individual retirement annuity must be issued in your name as the owner, and either you or your beneficiaries who survive you are the only ones who can receive the benefits or payments.

An individual retirement annuity must meet all the following requirements.

1) Your entire interest in the contract must be nonforfeitable.
2) The contract must provide that you cannot transfer any portion of it to any person other than the issuer.
3) There must be flexible premiums so that if your compensation changes, your payment can also change. This provision applies to contracts issued after November 6, 1978.
4) The contract must provide that contributions cannot be more than $2,000 in 2001 ($3,000 in 2002 or $3,500 in 2002 if 50 or older), and that you must use any refunded premiums to pay for future premiums or to buy more benefits before the end of the calendar year after the year in which you receive the refund.
5) Distributions must begin by April 1 of the year following the year in which you reach age 70½. See When Must I Withdraw IRA Assets? (Required Distributions), later.

Individual Retirement Bonds

The sale of individual retirement bonds issued by the federal government was suspended after April 30, 1982. The bonds have the following features.

1) They stop earning interest when you reach age 70½. If you die, interest will stop 5 years after your death, or on the date you would have reached age 70½, whichever is earlier.
2) You cannot transfer the bonds.

If you cash (redeem) the bonds before the year in which you reach age 59½, you may be subject to a 10% additional tax. See Age 59½ Rule under When Can I Withdraw or Use IRA Assets, later. You can roll over redemption proceeds into IRAs.

Employer and Employee Association Trust Accounts

Your employer or your labor union or other employee association can set up a trust to provide individual retirement accounts for employees or members. The requirements for individual retirement accounts apply to these traditional IRAs.

Simplified Employee Pension (SEP)

A simplified employee pension (SEP) is a written arrangement that allows your employer to make deductible contributions to a traditional IRA (a SEP-IRA) set up for you to receive such contributions. See chapter 3 for more information about SEPs.

Required Disclosures

The trustee or issuer (sometimes called the sponsor) of your traditional IRA generally must give you a disclosure statement at least 7 days before you set up your IRA.

However, the sponsor does not have to give you the statement until the date you set up (or purchase, if earlier) your IRA, provided you are given at least 7 days from that date to revoke the IRA.

The disclosure statement must explain certain items in plain language. For example, the statement should explain when and how you can revoke the IRA, and include the name, address, and telephone number of the person to receive the notice of cancellation. This explanation must appear at the beginning of the disclosure statement.

If you revoke your IRA within the revocation period, the sponsor must return to you the entire amount you paid. The sponsor must report on the appropriate IRS forms both your contribution to the IRA (unless it was made by a trustee-to-trustee transfer) and the amount returned to you. These requirements apply to all sponsors.

How Much Can Be Contributed?

There are limits and other rules that affect the amount that can be contributed to a traditional IRA. These limits and rules are explained below.

Community property laws. Except as discussed below under Spousal IRA Limit, each spouse figures his or her limit separately, using his or her own compensation. This is the rule even in states with community property laws.

Brokers' commissions. Brokers' commissions paid in connection with your traditional IRA are subject to the contribution limit. For information about whether you can deduct brokers' commissions, see Brokers' commissions, later under How Much Can I Deduct.

Trustees' fees. Trustees' administrative fees are not subject to the contribution limit. For information about whether you can deduct trustees' fees, see Trustees' fees, later under How Much Can I Deduct.

Contributions on your behalf to a traditional IRA reduce your limit for contributions to a Roth IRA. See chapter 2 for information about Roth IRAs.

General Limit

The most that can be contributed to your traditional IRA is the smaller of the following amounts:

- Your compensation (defined earlier) that you must include in income for the year, or
- $2,000 for 2001 ($3,000 for 2002 or $3,500 for 2002 if you are 50 or older).

Note. This limit is reduced by any contributions to a section 501(c)(18) plan (generally, a pension plan created before June 25, 1959, that is funded entirely by employee contributions).

This is the most that can be contributed regardless of whether the contributions are to one or more traditional IRAs or whether all or part of the contributions are nondeductible. (See Nondeductible Contributions, later.)

Examples. George, who is single, earns $24,000 in 2001. His IRA contributions for 2001 are limited to $2,000.

Danny, a college student working part time, earns $1,500 in 2001. His IRA contributions for 2001 are limited to $1,500, the amount of his compensation.

More than one IRA. If you have more than one IRA, the limit applies to the total contributions made on your behalf to all your traditional IRAs for the year.

Annuity or endowment contracts. If you invest in an annuity or endowment contract under an individual retirement annuity, no more than $2,000 for 2001 ($3,000 for 2002 or $3,500 for 2002 if 50 or older) can be contributed toward its cost for the tax year, including the cost of life insurance coverage. If more than this amount is contributed, the annuity or endowment contract is disqualified.

Spousal IRA Limit

If you file a joint return and your taxable compensation is less than that of your spouse, the most that can be contributed for the year to your IRA is the smaller of the following two amounts:

1) $2,000 for 2001 ($3,000 for 2002 or $3,500 for 2002 if you are 50 or older), or
2) The total compensation includable in the gross income of both you and your spouse for the year, reduced by the following two amounts.
   a) Your spouse's IRA contribution for the year to a traditional IRA.
   b) Any contributions for the year to a Roth IRA on behalf of your spouse.

This means that the total combined contributions that can be made for the year to your IRA and your spouse's IRA can be as much as $4,000 for 2001 ($6,000 for 2002, or $6,500 for 2002 if only one of you is 50 or older, or $7,000 for 2002 if both of you are 50 or older).

Note. This traditional IRA limit is reduced by any contributions to a section 501(c)(18) plan (generally, a pension plan created before June 25, 1959, that is funded entirely by employee contributions).

Example. Christine, a full-time student with no taxable compensation, marries Jeremy during the year. For the year, Jeremy has taxable compensation of $30,000. He plans to contribute (and deduct) $2,000 to a traditional IRA. If he and Christine file a joint return, each can contribute $2,000 for 2001 to a traditional IRA. This is because Christine, who has no compensation, can add Jeremy's compensation, reduced by the amount of his IRA contribution, ($30,000 − $2,000 = $28,000) to her own compensation (−0−) to figure her maximum contribution to a traditional IRA. In her case, $2,000 is her contribution limit, because $2,000 is less than $28,000 (her compensation for purposes of figuring her contribution limit).

Filing Status

Generally, except as discussed earlier under Spousal IRA Limit, your filing status has no effect on the amount of allowable contributions to your traditional IRA. However, if during the year either you or your spouse was covered by a retirement plan at work, your deduction may be reduced or eliminated, depending on your filing status and income. See How Much Can I Deduct, later.

Example. Tom and Rosa are married and both are under age 70½. They both work and each has a traditional IRA. Tom earned $1,800 and Rosa earned $48,000 in 2001. Because of the spousal IRA limit rule, even though Tom earned less than $2,000, they can contribute up to $2,000 to his IRA for 2001 if they file a joint return. They can contribute up to $2,000 to Rosa's IRA. If they file separate returns, the amount that can be contributed to Tom's IRA is limited to $1,800.

Less Than Maximum Contributions

If contributions to your traditional IRA for a year were less than the limit, you cannot contribute more in a later year to make up the difference.

Example. Justin earns $30,000 in 2001. Although he can contribute up to $2,000 for 2001, he contributes only $1,000. After April 15, 2002, Justin cannot make up the difference between his actual contributions for 2001 ($1,000) and his 2001 limit ($2,000). He cannot contribute $1,000 more than the limit for any later year.

More Than Maximum Contributions

If contributions to your IRA for a year were more than the limit, you can apply the excess contribution in one year to a later year if the contributions for that later year are less than the maximum allowed for that year. However, a penalty may apply. See Excess Contributions, later under What Acts Result in Penalties.

When Can Contributions Be Made?

As soon as you set up your traditional IRA, contributions can be made to it through your chosen sponsor (trustee or other administrator). Contributions must be in the form of money (cash, check, or money order). Property cannot be contributed. However, you may be able to transfer or roll over certain property from one retirement plan to another. See the discussion of rollovers and other transfers later in this chapter under Can I Move Retirement Plan Assets.

Contributions can be made to your traditional IRA for each year that you receive compensation and have not reached age 70½. For any year in which you do not work, contributions cannot be made to your IRA unless you receive alimony or file a joint return with a spouse who has compensation. See Who Can Set Up a Traditional IRA, earlier. Even if contributions cannot be made for the current year, the amounts contributed for years in which you did qualify can remain in your IRA. Contributions can resume for any years that you qualify.

Contributions must be made by due date. Contributions can be made to your traditional IRA for a year at any time during the year or by the due date for filing your return for that year, not including extensions. For most people, this means that contributions for 2001 must be made by April 15, 2002.

Age 70½ rule. Contributions cannot be made to your traditional IRA for the year in which you reach age 70½ or for any later year.

Designating year for which contribution is made. If an amount is contributed to your traditional IRA between January 1 and April 15, you should tell the sponsor which year (the current year or the previous year) the contribution is for. If you do not tell the sponsor which year it is for, the sponsor can assume, and report to the IRS, that the contribution is for the current year (the year the sponsor received it).

Filing before a contribution is made. You can file your return claiming a traditional IRA contribution before the contribution is actually made. However, the contribution must be made by the due date of your return, not including extensions.

Contributions not required. You do not have to contribute to your traditional IRA for every tax year, even if you can.

How Much Can I Deduct?

Generally, you can deduct the lesser of:

1) The contributions to your traditional IRA for the year, or
2) The general limit (or the spousal IRA limit, if applicable) explained earlier under How Much Can Be Contributed.

However, if you or your spouse was covered by an employer retirement plan, you may not be able to deduct this amount. See Limit If Covered By Employer Plan, later.

Trustees' fees. Trustees' administrative fees that are billed separately and paid in connection with your traditional IRA are not deductible as IRA contributions. However, they may be deductible as a miscellaneous itemized deduction on Schedule A (Form 1040). For information about miscellaneous itemized deductions, see Publication 529, Miscellaneous Deductions.

Brokers' commissions. These commissions are part of your IRA contribution and, as such, are deductible subject to the limits.

Full deduction. If neither you nor your spouse was covered for any part of the year by an employer retirement plan, you can take a deduction for total contributions to one or more of your traditional IRAs of up to the lesser of:

1) $2,000 for 2001 ($3,000 for 2002 or $3,500 for 2002 if you are 50 or older), or
2) 100% of your compensation.

This limit is reduced by any contributions made to a 501(c)(18) plan on your behalf.

Spousal IRA. In the case of a married couple with unequal compensation who file a joint return, the deduction for contributions to the traditional IRA of the spouse with less compensation is limited to the lesser of:

1) $2,000 for 2001 ($3,000 for 2002 or $3,500 for 2002 if 50 or older), or
2) The total compensation includible in the gross income of both spouses for the year reduced by the following two amounts.
   a) The IRA deduction for the year of the spouse with the greater compensation.
   b) Any contributions for the year to a Roth IRA on behalf of the spouse with the greater compensation.

This limit is reduced by any contributions to a section 501(c)(18) plan on behalf of the spouse with less compensation.

Note. If you were divorced or legally separated (and did not remarry) before the end of the year, you cannot deduct any contributions to your spouse's IRA. After a divorce or legal separation, you can deduct only the contributions to your own IRA and your deductions are subject to the rules for single individuals.

Covered by an employer retirement plan. If you or your spouse was covered by an employer retirement plan at any time during the year for which contributions were made, your deduction may be further limited. This is discussed later under Limit If Covered By Employer Plan. Limits on the amount you can deduct do not affect the amount that can be contributed.

Are You Covered by an Employer Plan?

The Form W−2 you receive from your employer has a box used to indicate whether you were covered for the year. The "Retirement Plan" box should be checked if you were covered.

Reservists and volunteer firefighters should also see Situations in Which You Are Not Covered, later.

If you are not certain whether you were covered by your employer's retirement plan, you should ask your employer.

Federal judges. For purposes of the IRA deduction, federal judges are covered by an employer plan.

For Which Year(s) Are You Covered?

Special rules apply to determine the tax years for which you are covered by an employer plan. These rules differ depending on whether the plan is a defined contribution plan or a defined benefit plan.

Tax year. Your tax year is the annual accounting period you use to keep records and report income and expenses on your income tax return. For most people, the tax year is the calendar year.

Defined contribution plan. Generally, you are covered by a defined contribution plan for a tax year if amounts are contributed or allocated to your account for the plan year that ends with or within that tax year. However, also see Situations in Which You Are Not Covered, later.

A defined contribution plan is a plan that provides for a separate account for each person covered by the plan. In a defined contribution plan, the amount to be contributed to each participant's account is spelled out in the plan. The level of benefits actually provided to a participant depends on the total amount contributed to that participant's account and any earnings on those contributions. Types of defined contribution plans include profit-sharing plans, stock bonus plans, and money purchase pension plans.

Example. Company A has a money purchase pension plan. Its plan year is from July 1 to June 30. The plan provides that contributions must be allocated as of June 30. Bob, an employee, leaves Company A on December 31, 2000. The contribution for the plan year ending on June 30, 2001, is made February 15, 2002. Because an amount is contributed to Bob's account for the plan year, Bob is covered by the plan for his 2001 tax year.

No vested interest. If an amount is allocated to your account for a plan year, you are covered by that plan even if you have no vested interest in (legal right to) the account.

Defined benefit plan. If you are eligible to participate in your employer's defined benefit plan for the plan year that ends within your tax year, you are covered by the plan. This rule applies even if you:

- Declined to participate in the plan,
- Did not make a required contribution, or
- Did not perform the minimum service required to accrue a benefit for the year.

A defined benefit plan is any plan that is not a defined contribution plan. In a defined benefit plan, the level of benefits to be provided to each participant is spelled out in the plan. The plan administrator figures the amount needed to provide those benefits and those amounts are contributed to the plan. Defined benefit plans include pension plans and annuity plans.

Example. Nick, an employee of Company B, is eligible to participate in Company B's defined benefit plan, which has a July 1 to June 30 plan year. Nick leaves Company B on December 31, 2000. Since Nick is eligible to participate

Worksheet 1–1. Figuring the Taxable Part of Your IRA Distribution

Use only if you made contributions to a traditional IRA for 2001 and have to figure the taxable part of your 2001 distributions to determine your modified AGI. See Limit If Covered By Employer Plan.

Form 8606 and the related instructions will be needed when using this worksheet.

Note. When used in this worksheeet, the term outstanding rollover refers to an amount distributed from a traditional IRA as part of a rollover that, as of December 31, 2001, had not yet been reinvested in another traditional IRA, but was still eligible to be rolled over tax free.

1)	Enter the basis in your traditional IRA(s) as of 12/31/00	$
2)	Enter the total of all contributions made to your traditional IRAs during 2001 and all contributions made during 2002 that were for 2001, whether or not deductible. Do not include rollover contributions properly rolled over into IRAs	$
3)	Add lines 1 and 2	$
4)	Enter the value of ALL your traditional IRA(s) as of 12/31/01 (include any outstanding rollovers from traditional IRAs to other traditional IRAs)	$
5)	Enter the total distributions from traditional IRAs (including amounts converted to Roth IRAs that will be shown on line 16 of Form 8606) received in 2001. (Do not include outstanding rollovers included on line 4 or any rollovers between traditional IRAs completed by 12/31/01. Also, do not include certain returned contributions described in the instructions for line 7, Part I, of Form 8606.)	$
6)	Add lines 4 and 5	$
7)	Divide line 3 by line 6. Enter the result as a decimal (to at least two places). Do not enter more than 1.00
8)	Nontaxable portion of the distribution. Multiply line 5 by line 7. Enter the result here and on line 13 of Form 8606	$
9)	Taxable portion of the distribution (before adjustment for conversions). Subtract line 8 from line 5. Enter the result here and if there are no amounts converted to Roth IRAs, STOP HERE and enter the result on line 15 of Form 8606	$
10)	Enter the amount included on line 9 that is allocable to amounts converted to Roth IRAs by 12/31/01. (See Note at the end of this worksheet.) Enter here and on line 18 of Form 8606	$
11)	Taxable portion of the distribution (after adjustments for conversions). Subtract line 10 from line 9. Enter the result here and on line 15 of Form 8606	$

Note. If the amount on line 5 of this worksheet includes an amount converted to a Roth IRA by 12/31/01, you must determine the percentage of the distribution allocable to the conversion. To figure the percentage, divide the amount converted (from line 16 of Form 8606) by the total distributions shown on line 5. To figure the amounts to include on line 10 of this worksheet and on line 18, Part II of Form 8606, multiply line 9 of the worksheet by the percentage you figured.

in the plan for its year ending June 30, 2001, he is covered by the plan for his 2001 tax year.

No vested interest. If you accrue a benefit for a plan year, you are covered by that plan even if you have no vested interest in (legal right to) the accrual.

Situations in Which You Are Not Covered

Unless you are covered by another employer plan, you are not covered by an employer plan if you are in one of the situations described below.

Social security or railroad retirement. Coverage under social security or railroad retirement is not coverage under an employer retirement plan.

Benefits from previous employer's plan. If you receive retirement benefits from a previous employer's plan, you are not covered by that plan.

Reservists. If the only reason you participate in a plan is because you are a member of a reserve unit of the armed forces, you may not be covered by the plan. You are not covered by the plan if both of the following conditions are met.

1) The plan you participate in is established for its employees by:

   a) The United States,

   b) A state or political subdivision of a state, or

Table 1–2. Effect of Modified AGI[1] on Deduction if Covered by Retirement Plan at Work

If you are covered by a retirement plan at work, use this table to determine if your modified AGI affects the amount of your deduction.

IF your filing status is ...	AND your modified adjusted gross income (modified AGI) is ...	THEN you can take ...
Single or Head of Household	Less than $33,000	A full deduction
	At least $33,000 but less than $43,000	A partial deduction
	$43,000 or more	No deduction
Married Filing Jointly or Qualifying Widow(er)	Less than $53,000	A full deduction
	At least $53,000 but less than $63,000	A partial deduction
	$63,000 or more	No deduction
Married Filing Separately[2]	Less than $10,000	A partial deduction
	$10,000 or more	No deduction

[2] If you did not live with your spouse at any time during the year, your filing status is considered Single for this purpose (therefore, your IRA deduction is determined under the "Single" column).

c) An instrumentality of either (a) or (b) above.

2) You did not serve more than 90 days on active duty during the year (not counting duty for training).

Volunteer firefighters. If the only reason you participate in a plan is because you are a volunteer firefighter, you may not be covered by the plan. You are not covered by the plan if both of the following conditions are met.

1) The plan you participate in is established for its employees by:

   a) The United States,

   b) A state or political subdivision of a state, or

   c) An instrumentality of either (a) or (b) above.

2) Your accrued retirement benefits at the beginning of the year will not provide more than $1,800 per year at retirement.

Limit If Covered By Employer Plan

As discussed earlier, the deduction you can take for contributions made to your traditional IRA depends on whether you or your spouse was covered for any part of the year by an employer retirement plan. Your deduction is also affected by how much income you had and by your filing status. Your deduction may also be affected by social security benefits you received.

Reduced or no deduction. If either you or your spouse was covered by an employer retirement plan, you may be entitled to only a partial (reduced) deduction or no deduction at all, depending on your income and your filing status.

Your deduction begins to decrease (phase out) when your income rises above a certain amount and is eliminated altogether when it reaches a higher amount. These amounts vary depending on your filing status.

To determine if your deduction is subject to the phaseout, you must determine your modified adjusted gross income (AGI) and your filing status, as explained under Deduction Phaseout. Once you have determined your modified AGI and your filing status, you can use Table 1–2 or Table 1–3 to determine if the phaseout applies.

Social Security Recipients

Instead of using Table 1–2 or Table 1–3 and Worksheet 1–3, Figuring Your Reduced IRA Deduction for 2001, later, complete the worksheets in Appendix B of this publication if, for the year, all of the following apply.

- You received social security benefits.
- You received taxable compensation.
- Contributions were made to your traditional IRA.
- You or your spouse was covered by an employer retirement plan.

Use the worksheets in Appendix B to figure your IRA deduction, your nondeductible contribution, and the taxable portion, if any, of your social security benefits. Appendix B includes an example with filled-in worksheets to assist you.

Deduction Phaseout

The amount of any reduction in the limit on your IRA deduction (phaseout) depends on whether you or your spouse was covered by an employer retirement plan.

If you were covered. If you were covered by an employer retirement plan and you did not receive any social security retirement benefits, your IRA deduction may be reduced or eliminated depending on your filing status and modified AGI, as shown in Table 1–2.

For 2002, if you are covered by a retirement plan at work, your IRA deduction will not be reduced (phased out) unless your modified AGI is between:

Table 1–3. Effect of Modified AGI[1] on Deduction if NOT Covered by Retirement Plan at Work

If you are not covered by a retirement plan at work, use this table to determine if your modified AGI affects the amount of your deduction.

IF your filing status is ...	AND your modified adjusted gross income (modified AGI) is ...	THEN you can take ...
Single, Head of Household, or Qualifying Widow(er)	Any amount	A full deduction
Married Filing Jointly or Separately with a spouse who is not covered by a plan at work	Any amount	A full deduction
Married Filing Jointly with a spouse who is covered by a plan at work	Less than $150,000	A full deduction
	At least $150,000 but less than $160,000	A partial deduction
	$160,000 or more	No deduction
Married Filing Separately with a spouse who is covered by a plan at work[2]	Less than $10,000	A partial deduction
	$10,000 or more	No deduction

[2] You are entitled to the full deduction if you did not live with your spouse at any time during the year.

- $34,000 and $44,000 for a single individual (or head of household),
- $54,000 and $64,000 for a married couple filing a joint return (or a qualifying widow(er)), or
- $–0– and $10,000 for a married individual filing a separate return.

For all filing statuses other than married filing a separate return, the upper and lower limits of the phaseout range will increase by $1,000.

If your spouse is covered. If you are not covered by an employer retirement plan, but your spouse is, and you did not receive any social security benefits, your IRA deduction may be reduced or eliminated entirely depending on your filing status and modified AGI as shown in Table 1–3.

Filing status. Your filing status depends primarily on your marital status. For this purpose you need to know if your filing status is single or head of household, married filing jointly or qualifying widow(er), or married filing separately. If you need more information on filing status, see Publication 501, Exemptions, Standard Deduction, and Filing Information.

Lived apart from spouse. If you did not live with your spouse at any time during the year and you file a separate return, your filing status, for this purpose, is single.

Modified adjusted gross income (AGI). You can use Worksheet 1–2 to figure your modified AGI. If you made contributions to your IRA for 2001 and received a distribution from your IRA in 2001, see Both contributions for 2001 and distributions in 2001, later.

Do not assume that your modified AGI is the same as your compensation. Your modified AGI may include income in addition to your compensation such as interest, dividends, and income from IRA distributions.

Form 1040. If you file Form 1040, refigure the amount on the page 1 “adjusted gross income” line without taking into account any of the following amounts.

- IRA deduction.
- Student loan interest deduction.
- Foreign earned income exclusion.
- Foreign housing exclusion or deduction.
- Exclusion of qualified savings bond interest shown on Form 8815.
- Exclusion of employer-paid adoption expenses shown on Form 8839.

This is your modified AGI.

For tax years beginning after December 31, 2001, you also will not take into account any deduction for qualified tuition and related expenses.

Form 1040A. If you file Form 1040A, refigure the amount on the page 1 “adjusted gross income” line without taking into account any of the following amounts.

- IRA deduction.
- Student loan interest deduction.
- Exclusion of qualified bond interest shown on Form 8815.
- Exclusion of employer-paid adoption expenses shown on Form 8839.

This is your modified AGI.

Income from IRA distributions. If you received distributions in 2001 from one or more traditional IRAs and your traditional IRAs include only deductible contributions, the distributions are fully taxable.

butions you received in 2001 may be partly tax free and partly taxable.

1) You received distributions in 2001 from one or more traditional IRAs, and
2) You made contributions to a traditional IRA for 2001, and
3) Some of those contributions may be nondeductible contributions depending on whether your IRA deduction for 2001 is reduced.

If all three of the above occurred, you must figure the taxable part of the traditional IRA distribution before you can figure your modified AGI. To do this, you can use Worksheet 1–1, Figuring the Taxable Part of Your IRA Distribution.

How To Figure Your Reduced IRA Deduction

If you or your spouse is covered by an employer retirement plan and you did not receive any social security benefits, you can figure your reduced IRA deduction by using Worksheet 1–3, Figuring Your Reduced IRA Deduction for 2001. The instructions for both Form 1040 and Form 1040A include similar worksheets that you can use instead of the worksheet in this publication.

If you or your spouse is covered by an employer retirement plan, and you received any social security benefits, see Social Security Recipients, earlier.

Note. If you were married and both you and your spouse contributed to IRAs, figure your deduction and your spouse's deduction separately.

Reporting Deductible Contributions

If you file Form 1040, enter your IRA deductions on line 23 of that form. If you file Form 1040A, enter your IRA deductions on line 16 of that form. You cannot deduct IRA contributions on Form 1040EZ.

Self-employed. If you are self-employed (a sole proprietor or partner) and have a SEP-IRA or a SIMPLE IRA, enter your deduction for allowable plan contributions on line 29, Form 1040.

Nondeductible Contributions

Although your deduction for IRA contributions may be reduced or eliminated, contributions can be made to your IRA of up to the general limit ($2,000 for 2001 ($3,000 for 2002 or $3,500 for 2002 if 50 or older) or 100% of compensation, whichever is less) or the spousal IRA limit (if it applies). The difference between your total permitted contributions and your IRA deduction, if any, is your nondeductible contribution.

Example. Sonny Martin is single. In 2001, he was covered by a retirement plan at work. His salary is $52,312. His modified adjusted gross income (modified AGI) is $55,000. Sonny makes a $2,000 IRA contribution for 2001. Because he was covered by a retirement plan and his modified AGI is above $43,000, he cannot deduct his $2,000 IRA contribution. However, he can designate this contribution as a nondeductible contribution by reporting it on Form 8606.

Form 8606. To designate contributions as nondeductible, you must file Form 8606. (See the filled-in Forms 8606 in this chapter.)

You do not have to designate a contribution as nondeductible until you file your tax return. When you file, you can even designate otherwise deductible contributions as nondeductible contributions.

You must file Form 8606 to report nondeductible contributions even if you do not have to file a tax return for the year.

3) Subtract line 2 from 1. If line 3 is $10,000 or more, STOP HERE. You can take a full IRA deduction for contributions of up to $2,000 or 100% of your (and if married filing jointly, your spouse's) compensation, whichever is less . . . . $______

4) Multiply line 3 by 20% (.20). If the result is not a multiple of $10, round it to the next highest multiple of $10. (For example, $611.40 is rounded to $620.) However, if the result is less than $200, enter $200 . . . . $______

5) Enter your compensation. If you are filing a joint return and your compensation is less than your spouse's, include your spouse's compensation reduced by his or her traditional IRA and Roth IRA contributions for this year. If you file Form 1040, do not reduce your compensation by any losses from self-employment . . . . $______

6) Enter contributions made, or to be made, to your IRA for 2001, but do not enter more than $2,000. If contributions are more than $2,000, see Excess Contributions, later . . $______

7) IRA deduction. Compare lines 4, 5, and 6. Enter the smallest amount (or a smaller amount if you choose) here and on the Form 1040 or 1040A line for your IRA, whichever applies. If line 6 is more than line 7 and you want to make a nondeductible contribution, go to line 8 . . . . $______

8) Nondeductible contribution. Subtract line 7 from line 5 or 6, whichever is smaller. Enter the result here and on line 1 of your Form 8606 . . . . $______

Failure to report nondeductible contributions. If you do not report nondeductible contributions, all of the contributions to your traditional IRA will be treated as deductible. All distributions from your IRA will be taxed unless you can show, with satisfactory evidence, that nondeductible contributions were made.

Penalty for overstatement. If you overstate the amount of nondeductible contributions on your Form 8606 for any tax year, you must pay a penalty of $100 for each overstatement, unless it was due to reasonable cause.

Penalty for failure to file Form 8606. You will have to pay a $50 penalty if you do not file a required Form 8606, unless you can prove that the failure was due to reasonable cause.

Tax on earnings on nondeductible contributions. As long as contributions are within the contribution limits, none of the earnings or gains on those contributions (deductible or nondeductible) will be taxed until they are distributed.

Cost basis. You will have a cost basis in your IRA if there are nondeductible contributions. Your cost basis is the sum of the nondeductible contributions to your IRA minus any withdrawals or distributions of nondeductible contributions.

Commonly, distributions from your traditional IRAs will include both taxable and nontaxable (cost basis) amounts. See Are Distributions Taxable, later, for more information.

Recordkeeping. There is a recordkeeping worksheet, Appendix A, Summary Record of Traditional IRA(s) for 2001, that you can use to keep records of deductible and nondeductible IRA contributions.

Examples — Worksheet for Reduced IRA Deduction for 2001

The following examples illustrate the use of Worksheet 1–3, Figuring Your Reduced IRA Deduction for 2001.

Example 1. For 2001, Tom and Betty Smith file a joint return on Form 1040. They both work and Tom is covered by his employer's retirement plan. Tom's salary is $40,000 and Betty's is $16,555. They each have a traditional IRA and their combined modified AGI, which includes $2,000 interest and dividend income, is $58,555. Since their modified AGI is between $53,000 and $63,000 and Tom is covered by an employer plan, Tom is subject to the deduction phaseout discussed earlier under Limit If Covered By Employer Plan.

For 2001, Tom contributed $2,000 to his IRA and Betty contributed $2,000 to hers. Even though they file a joint return, they must use separate worksheets to figure the IRA deduction for each of them.

Tom can take a deduction of only $890. He must treat $1,110 ($2,000 – $890) of his contributions as nondeductible.

He can choose to treat the $890 as either deductible or nondeductible contributions. He can either leave the $1,110 of nondeductible contributions in his IRA or withdraw them by April 15, 2002. He decides to treat the $890 as deductible contributions and leave the $1,110 of nondeductible contributions in his IRA.

Using Worksheet 1–3, Figuring Your Reduced IRA Deduction for 2001, Tom figures his deductible and nondeductible amounts as shown on Filled-in Worksheet 1–3, Example 1 of Figuring Your Reduced IRA Deduction for 2001.

Betty figures her IRA deduction as follows. Betty can treat all or part of her contributions as either deductible or nondeductible. This is because her $2,000 contribution for 2001 is not subject to the deduction phaseout discussed earlier under Limit If Covered By Employer Plan. She does not need to use Worksheet 1–3, Figuring Your Reduced IRA Deduction for 2001, since their modified AGI is not within the phaseout range that applies. Betty decides to treat her $2,000 IRA contributions as deductible.

The IRA deductions of $890 and $2,000 on the joint return for Tom and Betty total $2,890.

Example 2. Assume the same facts as in Example 1, except that Tom contributed $2,000 to his Roth IRA and $2,000 to a traditional IRA for Betty (a spousal IRA) because Betty had no compensation for the year and did not contribute to an IRA. Also, their modified AGI, because of capital gains from sales of stock, increased to $156,555. Betty figures her IRA deduction as shown on Filled-in Worksheet 1–3, Example 2 of Figuring Your Reduced IRA Deduction for 2001.

What If I Inherit an IRA?

If you inherit a traditional IRA, it is subject to special rules.

Inherited from spouse. If you inherit a traditional IRA from your deceased spouse, you can generally roll it over into another traditional IRA established for you or you can choose to treat the inherited IRA as your own. You can choose to treat it as your own by designating yourself as the account owner rather than the beneficiary.

You will be considered to have chosen to treat it as your own if:

- Contributions (including rollover contributions) are made to the inherited IRA, or
- Required distributions are not made from it.

You will only be considered to have chosen to treat it as your own if:

- You are the sole beneficiary of the IRA,
- You have an unlimited right to withdraw amounts from it, and
- The distribution of the required minimum amount for the account for the calendar year of the decedent's death has been made.

For distributions after December 31, 2001, your rollover options increase. You may still roll over your spouse's IRA into your traditional IRA, but to the extent a distribution is taxable, you can roll it over into your qualified plan, your qualified employee annuity (section 403(a) annuity), your tax-sheltered annuity (section 403(b) annuity), or your deferred compensation plan of your state or local government (section 457 plan).

Inherited from someone other than spouse. If you inherit a traditional IRA from anyone other than your deceased spouse, you cannot treat the inherited IRA as your own. This means that contributions (including rollover contributions) cannot be made to the IRA and you cannot roll over any amounts out of the inherited IRA. But, like the original owner, you generally will not owe tax on the assets in the IRA until you receive distributions from it. You must begin receiving distributions from the IRA under the rules for distributions that apply to beneficiaries.

More information. For more information about rollovers, required distributions, and inherited IRAs, see:

- Rollovers, later in this chapter under Can I Move Retirement Plan Assets,
- When Must I Withdraw IRA Assets? (Required Distributions), later in this chapter, and
- The discussion of beneficiaries later in this chapter under When Must I Withdraw IRA Assets? (Required Distributions), and the discussion of inherited IRAs under Are Distributions Taxable.

Can I Move Retirement Plan Assets?

Traditional IRA rules permit you to transfer, tax free, assets (money or property) from other retirement programs (including traditional IRAs) to a traditional IRA. The rules permit the following kinds of transfers.

- Transfers from one trustee to another.
- Rollovers.
- Transfers incident to a divorce.

This chapter discusses all three kinds of transfers.

Transfers to Roth IRAs. Under certain conditions, you can move assets from a traditional IRA to a Roth IRA. For more information about these transfers, see the discussion at Can I Move Amounts Into a Roth IRA? in chapter 2.

Trustee-to-Trustee Transfer

A transfer of funds in your traditional IRA from one trustee directly to another, either at your request or at the trustee's request, is not a rollover. Because there is no distribution to you, the transfer is tax free. Because it is not a rollover, it is not affected by the 1-year waiting period required between rollovers. This waiting period is discussed later under Rollover From One IRA Into Another.

For information about direct transfers from retirement programs other than traditional IRAs, see Direct rollover option, later in this chapter.

Rollovers

Generally, a rollover is a tax-free distribution to you of cash or other assets from one retirement plan that you contribute to another retirement plan. The contribution to the second retirement plan is called a "rollover contribution."

Note. The amount you roll over tax free is generally taxable when the new plan distributes that amount to you or your beneficiary.

Kinds of rollovers to an IRA. There are two kinds of rollover contributions to a traditional IRA.

1) You put amounts you receive from one traditional IRA into the same or another traditional IRA.
2) You put amounts you receive from an employer's qualified retirement plan for its employees into a traditional IRA.

Distributions after December 31, 2001, can be rolled over into a traditional IRA from:

1) A deferred compensation plan of a state or local government (section 457 plan), or
2) A tax-sheltered annuity (section 403(b)).

For more information, see Publication 553, Highlights of 2001 Tax Changes.

Treatment of rollovers. You cannot deduct a rollover contribution, but you must report the rollover distribution on your tax return as discussed later under Reporting rollovers from IRAs and Reporting rollovers from employer plans.

Rollover notice. A written explanation of rollover treatment must be given to you by the plan making the distribution.

Kinds of rollovers from an IRA. For distributions after December 31, 2001, you can roll over, tax free, a distribution from your IRA into a qualified plan, including a deferred compensation plan of a state or local government (section 457 plan), and a tax-sheltered annuity (section 403(b) plan). The part of the distribution that you can roll over is the part that would otherwise be taxable (includible in your income). Qualified plans may, but are not required to, accept such rollovers. Rules applicable to other rollovers, such as the 60-day time limit apply.

Time Limit for Making a Rollover Contribution

You generally must make the rollover contribution by the 60th day after the day you receive the distribution from your traditional IRA or your employer's plan. However, see Extension of rollover period, later.

For distributions made after December 31, 2001, the IRS may waive the 60-day requirement where the failure to do so would be against equity or good conscience, such as in the event of a casualty, disaster, or other event beyond your reasonable control.

Rollovers completed after the 60-day period. Amounts not rolled over within the 60-day period do not qualify for tax-free rollover treatment. You must treat them as a taxable distribution from either your IRA or your employer's plan. These amounts are taxable in the year distributed, even if the 60-day period expires in the next year. You may also have to pay a 10% tax on early distributions as discussed later under Early Distributions.

Unless there is an extension of the 60-day rollover period, any contribution you make to your IRA more than 60 days after the distribution is a regular contribution, not a rollover contribution.

Extension of rollover period. If an amount distributed to you from a traditional IRA or a qualified employer retirement plan is a frozen deposit at any time during the 60-day period allowed for a rollover, two special rules extend the rollover period.

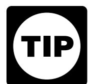
1) The period during which the amount is a frozen deposit is not counted in the 60-day period.
2) The 60-day period cannot end earlier than 10 days after the deposit is no longer frozen.

Frozen deposit. This is any deposit that cannot be withdrawn from a financial institution because of either of the following reasons.

1) The financial institution is bankrupt or insolvent.
2) The state where the institution is located restricts withdrawals because one or more financial institutions in the state are (or are about to be) bankrupt or insolvent.

Rollover From One IRA Into Another

You can withdraw, tax free, all or part of the assets from one traditional IRA if you reinvest them within 60 days in the same or another traditional IRA. Because this is a rollover, you cannot deduct the amount that you reinvest in an IRA.



You may be able to treat a contribution made to one type of IRA as having been made to a different type of IRA. This is called recharacterizing the contribution. See Recharacterizations in chapter 2 for more information.

Waiting period between rollovers. If you make a tax-free rollover of any part of a distribution from a traditional IRA, you cannot, within a 1-year period, make a tax-free rollover of any later distribution from that same IRA. You also cannot make a tax-free rollover of any amount distributed, within the same 1-year period, from the IRA into which you made the tax-free rollover.

The 1-year period begins on the date you receive the IRA distribution, not on the date you roll it over into an IRA.

Example. If you have two traditional IRAs, IRA-1 and IRA-2, and you make a tax-free rollover of a distribution from IRA-1 into a new traditional IRA (IRA-3), you can also make a tax-free rollover of a distribution from IRA-2 into IRA-3 (or into any other traditional IRA) within 1 year of the distribution from IRA-1. These can both be tax-free rollovers because you have not received more than one distribution from either IRA within 1 year. However, you cannot, within the 1-year period, make a tax-free rollover of any distribution from IRA-3 into another traditional IRA.

Exception. There is an exception to the rule that amounts rolled over tax free into an IRA cannot be rolled over tax free again within the 1-year period beginning on the date of the original distribution. The exception applies to a distribution which meets all three of the following requirements.

1) It is made from a failed financial institution by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (FDIC) as receiver for the institution.
2) It was not initiated by either the custodial institution or the depositor.
3) It was made because:
    a) The custodial institution is insolvent, and
    b) The receiver is unable to find a buyer for the institution.

The same property must be rolled over. If property is distributed to you from an IRA and you complete the rollover by contributing property to an IRA, your rollover is tax free only if the property you contribute is the same property that was distributed to you.

Partial rollovers. If you withdraw assets from a traditional IRA, you can roll over part of the withdrawal tax free and keep the rest of it. The amount you keep will generally be taxable (except for the part that is a return of nondeductible contributions) and may be subject to the 10% tax on premature distributions discussed later under Early Distributions.

Required distributions. Amounts that must be distributed during a particular year under the required distribution rules (discussed later) are not eligible for rollover treatment.

Inherited IRAs. If you inherit a traditional IRA from your spouse, you generally can roll it over into a traditional IRA established for you, or you can choose to make the inherited IRA your own as discussed earlier. See What If I Inherit an IRA, earlier. Also, see Distributions received by a surviving spouse, later.

Not inherited from spouse. If you inherited a traditional IRA from someone other than your spouse, you cannot roll it over or allow it to receive a rollover contribution. You must withdraw the IRA assets within a certain period. For more information, see When Must I Withdraw IRA Assets, later.

Reporting rollovers from IRAs. Report any rollover from one traditional IRA to the same or another traditional IRA on lines 15a and 15b of Form 1040 or on lines 11a and 11b of Form 1040A.

Enter the total amount of the distribution on line 15a of Form 1040 or on line 11a of Form 1040A. If the total amount on line 15a of Form 1040 or on line 11a of Form 1040A was rolled over, enter zero on line 15b of Form 1040 or on line 11b of Form 1040A. Otherwise, enter the taxable portion of the part that was not rolled over on line 15b of Form 1040 or on line 11b of Form 1040A.

For information on how to figure the taxable portion, see Are Distributions Taxable, later.

Rollover From Employer's Plan Into an IRA

If you receive an eligible rollover distribution from your (or your deceased spouse's) employer's qualified pension, profit-sharing or stock bonus plan, annuity plan, or tax-sheltered annuity plan (403(b) plan), you can roll over all or part of it into a traditional IRA.

A qualified plan is one that meets the requirements of the Internal Revenue Code.

For distributions made after December 31, 2001, if you receive an eligible rollover distribution from your (or your deceased spouse's) governmental deferred compensation plan (section 457 plan), you can roll over all or part of it into a traditional IRA.

Eligible rollover distribution. Generally, an eligible rollover distribution is the taxable part of any distribution of all or part of the balance to your credit in a qualified retirement plan except:

1) A required minimum distribution (explained later under When Must I Withdraw IRA Assets? (Required Distributions)),
2) Hardship distributions from 401(k) plans and certain 403(b) plans, or
3) Any of a series of substantially equal periodic distributions paid at least once a year over:
   a) Your lifetime or life expectancy,
   b) The lifetimes or life expectancies of you and your beneficiary, or
   c) A period of 10 years or more.

The taxable parts of most other distributions are eligible rollover distributions. See Maximum rollover, later. Also, see Publication 575 for additional exceptions.

For distributions made after December 31, 2001, no hardship distribution is an eligible rollover distribution.

Also for distributions after December 31, 2001, you can roll over both the taxable and nontaxable part of a distribution from a qualified plan into a traditional IRA.

Written explanation to recipients. Before making an eligible rollover distribution, the administrator of a qualified employer plan must provide you with a written explanation. It must tell you about all of the following.

- Your right to have the distribution paid tax free directly to a traditional IRA or another eligible retirement plan.
- The requirement to withhold tax from the distribution if it is not paid directly to a traditional IRA or another eligible retirement plan.
- The nontaxability of any part of the distribution that you roll over to a traditional IRA or another eligible retirement plan within 60 days after you receive the distribution.
- Other qualified employer plan rules, if they apply, including those for lump-sum distributions, alternate payees, and cash or deferred arrangements.

The plan administrator must provide you with this written explanation no earlier than 90 days and no later than 30 days before the distribution is made.

However, you can choose to have a distribution made less than 30 days after the explanation is provided as long as both of the following requirements are met.

1) You are given at least 30 days after the notice is provided to consider whether you want to elect a direct rollover.
2) You are given information that clearly states that you have this 30-day period to make the decision.

Contact the plan administrator if you have any questions regarding this information.

For distributions after December 31, 2001, before you get an eligible rollover distribution, you will receive from your plan administrator a written explanation of how the plan receiving the distribution differs from the plan making the distribution in its restrictions and tax consequences. Because these restrictions and tax consequences vary, it will be up to you to compare the plans to decide whether or not you want to make the rollover.

Withholding requirement. If an eligible rollover distribution is paid directly to you, the payer must withhold 20% of it. This applies even if you plan to roll over the distribution to a traditional IRA. You can avoid withholding by choosing the direct rollover option, discussed later.

Exceptions. The payer does not have to withhold from an eligible rollover distribution paid to you if either of the following conditions apply.

1) The distribution and all previous eligible rollover distributions you received during your tax year from the same plan (or, at the payer's option, from all your employer's plans) total less than $200.
2) The distribution consists solely of employer securities, plus cash of $200 or less in lieu of fractional shares.

The amount withheld is part of the distribution. If you roll over less than the full amount of the distribution, you may have to include in your income the amount you do not roll over. However, you can make up the amount withheld with funds from other sources.

Other withholding rules. The 20% withholding requirement does not apply to distributions that are not eligible rollover distributions. However, other withholding rules apply to these distributions. The rules that apply depend on whether the distribution is a periodic distribution or a nonperiodic distribution that is not an eligible rollover distribution. For either of these distributions, you can still choose not to have tax withheld. For more information, get Publication 575.

Direct rollover option. Your employer's qualified plan must give you the option to have any part of an eligible rollover distribution paid directly to a traditional IRA. The plan is not required to give you this option if your eligible rollover distributions are expected to total less than $200 for the year.

Withholding. If you choose the direct rollover option, no tax is withheld from any part of the designated distribution that is directly paid to the trustee of the traditional IRA.

If any part is paid to you, the payer must withhold 20% of that part's taxable amount.

Choosing the right option. Table 1–5 may help you decide which distribution option to choose. Carefully compare the effects of each option.

Table 1–5. Comparison of Payment to You Versus Direct Rollover

Affected item	Result of a payment to you	Result of a direct rollover
Withholding	The payer must withhold 20% of the taxable part.	There is no withholding.
Additional tax	If you are under age 59½, a 10% additional tax may apply to the taxable part (including an amount equal to the tax withheld) that is not rolled over.	There is no 10% additional tax. See Early Distributions.
When to report as income	Any taxable part (including the taxable part of any amount withheld) not rolled over is income to you in the year paid.	Any taxable part is not income to you until later distributed to you from the IRA.

If you decide to roll over any part of a distribution, the direct rollover option will generally be to your advantage. This is because you will not have 20% withholding or be subject to the 10% additional tax under that option.

If you have a lump-sum distribution and do not plan to roll over any part of it, the distribution may be eligible for special tax treatment that could lower your tax for the distribution year. In that case, you may want to see Publication 575 and Form 4972, Tax on Lump-Sum Distributions*, and its instructions to determine whether your distribution qualifies for special tax treatment and, if so, to figure your tax under the special methods.*

You can then compare any advantages from using Form 4972 to figure your tax on the lump-sum distribution with any advantages from rolling over all or part of the distribution. If you roll over any part of the lump-sum distribution, however, you cannot use the Form 4972 special tax treatment for any part of the distribution.

Maximum rollover. The most you can roll over is the taxable part of any eligible rollover distribution (defined earlier). All of the distribution you receive generally will be taxable unless you have made nondeductible employee contributions to the plan.

Contributions you made to your employer's plan. You cannot roll over a distribution of contributions you made to your employer's plan, except voluntary deductible employee contributions (DECs, defined below). If you roll over your contributions (other than DECs), you must treat them as regular (not rollover) contributions and you may have to pay an excess contributions tax (discussed later) on all or part of them.

DECs. These are voluntary deductible employee contributions. Prior to January 1, 1987, employees could make and deduct these contributions to certain qualified employers' plans and government plans. These are not the same as an employee's elective contributions to a 401(k) plan, which are not deductible by the employee.

If you receive a distribution from your employer's qualified plan of any part of the balance of your DECs and the earnings from them, you can roll over any part of the distribution.

No waiting period between rollovers. You can make more than one rollover of employer plan distributions within a year. The once-a-year limit on IRA-to-IRA rollovers does not apply to these distributions.

IRA as a holding account (conduit IRA) for rollovers to other eligible plans. You can use a traditional IRA as a holding account (conduit) for assets you receive in an eligible rollover distribution from one employer's plan that you later roll over into a new employer's plan. The conduit IRA must be made up of only those assets and gains and earnings on those assets. A conduit IRA will no longer qualify if you mix regular contributions or funds from other sources with the rollover distribution from your employer's plan.

If you receive an eligible rollover distribution from your employer's plan and roll over part or all of it into one or more conduit IRAs, you can later roll over those assets into a new employer's plan.

Property and cash received in a distribution. If you receive property and cash in an eligible rollover distribution, you can roll over part or all of the property, part or all of the cash, or any combination of the two that you choose.

Treatment if the same property is not rolled over. Your contribution to a traditional IRA of cash representing the fair market value of property received in a distribution from a qualified retirement plan does not qualify as a rollover if you keep the property. You must either roll over the property or sell it and roll over the proceeds, as explained next.

Sale of property received in a distribution from a qualified plan. Instead of rolling over a distribution of property other than cash, you can sell all or part of the property and roll over the amount you receive into a traditional IRA. You cannot substitute your own funds for property you receive from your employer's retirement plan.

Example. You receive a total distribution from your employer's plan consisting of $10,000 cash and $15,000 worth of property. You decide to keep the property. You can roll over to a traditional IRA the $10,000 cash received, but you cannot roll over an additional $15,000 representing the value of the property you choose not to sell.

Treatment of gain or loss. If you sell the distributed property and roll over all the proceeds into a traditional IRA, no gain or loss is recognized. The sale proceeds (including any increase in value) are treated as part of the distribution and are not included in your gross income.

Example. On September 2, Mike received a lump-sum distribution from his employer's retirement plan of $50,000 in cash and $50,000 in stock. The stock was not stock of his employer. On September 24, he sold the stock for $60,000. On October 4, he rolled over $110,000 in cash ($50,000 from the original distribution and $60,000 from the sale of stock). Mike does not include the $10,000 gain from the sale of stock as part of his income because he rolled over the entire amount into a traditional IRA.

Note. Special rules may apply to distributions of employer securities. For more information, get Publication 575.

Some sales proceeds rolled over. If you roll over part of the amount received from the sale of property, see Publication 575.

Life insurance contract. You cannot roll over a life insurance contract from a qualified plan into a traditional IRA.

Distributions received by a surviving spouse. If you receive an eligible rollover distribution (defined earlier) from your deceased spouse's employer's qualified plan or a tax-sheltered annuity, you can roll part or all of it over into a traditional IRA. You can also roll over all or any part of a distribution of deductible employee contributions (DECs).

For distributions made after December 31, 2001, if you are a surviving spouse who receives distributions attributable to your deceased spouse, you can make the same rollover distributions your spouse could have made.

Distributions under divorce or similar proceedings (alternate payees). If you are the spouse or former spouse of an employee and you receive a distribution from a qualified employer plan as a result of divorce or similar proceedings, you may be able to roll over all or part of it into a traditional IRA. To qualify, the distribution must be:

1) One that would have been an eligible rollover distribution (defined earlier) if it had been made to the employee, and
2) Made under a qualified domestic relations order.

Qualified domestic relations order. A domestic relations order is a judgment, decree, or order (including approval of a property settlement agreement) that is issued under the domestic relations law of a state. A "qualified domestic relations order" gives to an alternate payee (a spouse, former spouse, child, or dependent of a participant in a retirement plan) the right to receive all or part of the benefits that would be payable to a participant under the plan. The order requires certain specific information, and it cannot alter the amount or form of the benefits of the plan.

Tax treatment if all of an eligible distribution is not rolled over. Any part of an eligible rollover distribution that you keep is taxable in the year you receive it. If you do not roll any of it over, special rules for lump-sum distributions may apply. See Publication 575. The 10% additional tax on early distributions, discussed later under What Acts Result in Penalties, does not apply.

Keogh plans and rollovers. If you are self-employed, you are generally treated as an employee for rollover purposes. Consequently, if you receive an eligible rollover distribution from a Keogh plan (a qualified plan with at least one self-employed participant), you can roll over all or part of the distribution (including a lump-sum distribution) into a traditional IRA. For information on lump-sum distributions, see Publication 575.

More information. For more information about Keogh plans, get Publication 560.

Distribution from a tax-sheltered annuity. If you receive an eligible rollover distribution from a tax-sheltered annuity plan, you can roll it over into a traditional IRA.

Receipt of property other than money. If you receive property other than money, you can sell the property and roll over the proceeds as discussed earlier.

Conduit IRA. If your traditional IRA contains only assets (including earnings and gains) that were rolled over from a tax-sheltered annuity, you can roll over these assets into another tax-sheltered annuity. If you plan another rollover into another tax-sheltered annuity, do not combine the assets in your IRA from the rollover with assets from another source. Do not roll over an amount from a tax-sheltered annuity into a qualified pension plan.

More information. For more information about tax-sheltered annuities, get Publication 571.

Rollover from bond purchase plan. If you redeem retirement bonds that were distributed to you under a qualified bond purchase plan, you can roll over tax free part of the amount you receive from the redemption into a traditional IRA.

Reporting rollovers from employer plans. To report a rollover from an employer retirement plan to a traditional IRA, use lines 16a and 16b, Form 1040, or lines 12a and 12b, Form 1040A. Do not use lines 15a or 15b, Form 1040, or lines 11a or 11b, Form 1040A.

Transfers Incident To Divorce

If an interest in a traditional IRA is transferred from your spouse or former spouse to you by a divorce or separate maintenance decree or a written document related to such a decree, the interest in the IRA, starting from the date of the transfer, is treated as your IRA. The transfer is tax free. For information about transfers of interests in employer plans, see Distributions under divorce or similar proceedings (alternate payees) under Rollovers, earlier.

Transfer methods. There are two commonly-used methods of transferring IRA assets to a spouse or former spouse. The methods are:

1) Changing the name on the IRA, and

2) Making a direct transfer of IRA assets.

Changing the name on the IRA. If all the assets are to be transferred, you can make the transfer by changing the name on the IRA from your name to the name of your spouse or former spouse.

Direct transfer. Under this method, you direct the trustee of the traditional IRA to transfer the affected assets directly to the trustee of a new or existing traditional IRA set up in the name of your spouse or former spouse.

If your spouse or former spouse is allowed to keep his or her portion of the IRA assets in your existing IRA, you can direct the trustee to transfer the assets you are permitted to keep directly to a new or existing traditional IRA set up in your name. The name on the IRA containing your spouse's or former spouse's portion of the assets would then be changed to show his or her ownership.

When Can I Withdraw or Use IRA Assets?

Because a traditional IRA is a tax-favored means of saving for your retirement, a penalty in the form of a 10% additional tax generally applies if you withdraw or use IRA assets before you are age 59½. This is explained under Age 59½ Rule.

However, you generally can make a tax-free withdrawal of contributions if you do it before the due date for filing your tax return for the year in which you made them. This means that, even if you are under age 59½, the 10% additional tax may not apply. These withdrawals are explained under Contributions Returned Before the Due Date.

Age 59½ Rule

Generally, if you are under age 59½ you must pay a 10% additional tax on the distribution of any assets (money or other property) from your traditional IRA. Distributions before you are age 59½ are called early distributions.

The 10% additional tax applies to the part of the distribution that you have to include in gross income. It is in addition to any regular income tax on that amount.

A number of exceptions to this rule are discussed below under Exceptions. Also see Contributions Returned Before the Due Date, later, and Early Distributions under What Acts Result in Penalties, later.

You may have to pay a 25%, rather than 10%, additional tax if you receive distributions from a SIMPLE IRA before you are age 59½. See Additional Tax on Early Distributions in chapter 4.

After age 59½ and before age 70½. After you reach age 59½, you can receive distributions from your traditional IRA without having to pay the 10% additional tax. Even though you can receive distributions after you reach age 59½, distributions are not required until you reach age 70½. See When Must I Withdraw IRA Assets? (Required Distributions), later in this chapter.

Exceptions

There are several exceptions to the age 59½ rule. Even if you receive a distribution before you are age 59½, you may not have to pay the 10% additional tax if you are in one of the following situations.

- You have unreimbursed medical expenses that are more than 7.5% of your adjusted gross income.
- The distributions are not more than the cost of your medical insurance.
- You are disabled.
- You are the beneficiary of a deceased IRA owner.
- You are receiving distributions in the form of an annuity.
- The distributions are not more than your qualified higher education expenses.
- You use the distributions to buy, build, or rebuild a first home.
- The distribution is due to an IRS levy of the qualified plan.

Most of these exceptions are explained below.

Note. Distributions that are timely and properly rolled over, as discussed earlier, are not subject to either regular income tax or the 10% additional tax. Certain withdrawals of excess contributions after the due date of your return are also tax free and therefore not subject to the 10% additional tax. (See Excess Contributions Withdrawn After Due Date of Return under What Acts Result in Penalties, later.) This also applies to transfers incident to divorce, as discussed earlier under Can I Move Retirement Plan Assets.

Unreimbursed medical expenses. Even if you are under age 59½, you do not have to pay the 10% additional tax on distributions that are not more than:

1) The amount you paid for unreimbursed medical expenses during the year of the distribution, minus
2) 7.5% of your adjusted gross income (defined later) for the year of the distribution.

You can only take into account unreimbursed medical expenses that you would be able to include in figuring a deduction for medical expenses on Schedule A, Form 1040. You do not have to itemize your deductions to take advantage of this exception to the 10% additional tax.

Adjusted gross income. This is the amount on Form 1040, line 33 or Form 1040A, line 19.

Medical insurance. Even if you are under age 59½, you may not have to pay the 10% additional tax on distributions from your traditional IRA during the year that are not more than the amount you paid during the year for medical insurance for yourself, your spouse, and your dependents. You will not have to pay the tax on these amounts if all four of the following conditions apply.

1) You lost your job.
2) You received unemployment compensation paid under any federal or state law for 12 consecutive weeks.
3) You receive the distributions during either the year you received the unemployment compensation or the following year.
4) You receive the distributions no later than 60 days after you have been reemployed.

Disabled. If you become disabled before you reach age 59½, any distributions from your traditional IRA because of your disability are not subject to the 10% additional tax.

You are considered disabled if you can furnish proof that you cannot do any substantial gainful activity because of your physical or mental condition. A physician must determine that your condition can be expected to result in death or to be of long, continued, and indefinite duration.

Beneficiary. If you die before reaching age 59½, the assets in your traditional IRA can be distributed to your beneficiary or to your estate without either having to pay the 10% additional tax.

However, if you inherit a traditional IRA from your deceased spouse and elect to treat it as your own (as discussed under What If I Inherit an IRA, earlier), any distribution you later receive before you reach age 59½ may be subject to the 10% additional tax.

Annuity. You can receive distributions from your traditional IRA that are part of a series of substantially equal payments over your life (or your life expectancy), or over the lives (or the joint life expectancies) of you and your beneficiary, without having to pay the 10% additional tax, even if you receive such distributions before you are age 59½. You must use an IRS-approved distribution method and you must take at least one distribution annually for this exception to apply. The "life expectancy method," when used for this purpose, results in the exact amount required to be distributed, not the minimum amount.

There are two other IRS-approved distribution methods that you can use. They are generally referred to as the "amortization method" and the "annuity factor method." These two methods are not discussed in this publication because they are more complex and generally require professional assistance. See IRS Notice 89–25 in Internal Revenue Cumulative Bulletin 1989–1 for more information on these two methods. To obtain a copy of this notice, see Mail in chapter 5. This notice can also be found in many libraries and IRS offices.

The payments under this exception must continue for at least 5 years, or until you reach age 59½, whichever is the longer period. This 5-year rule does not apply if a change from an approved distribution method is made because of the death or disability of the IRA owner.

If the payments under this exception are changed before the end of the above required periods for any reason other than the death or disability of the IRA owner, he or she will be subject to the 10% additional tax.

For example, if you received a lump-sum distribution of the balance in your traditional IRA before the end of the required period for your annuity distributions and you did not receive it because you were disabled, you would be subject to the 10% additional tax. The tax would apply to the lump-sum distribution and all previous distributions made under the exception rule.

Higher education expenses. Even if you are under age 59½, if you paid expenses for higher education during the year, part (or all) of any distribution may not be subject to the 10% additional tax. The part not subject to the tax is generally the amount that is not more than the qualified higher education expenses (defined later) for the year for education furnished at an eligible educational institution (defined later). The education must be for you, your spouse, or the children or grandchildren of you or your spouse.

When determining the amount of the distribution that is not subject to the 10% additional tax, include qualified higher education expenses paid with any of the following funds.

- An individual's earnings.
- A loan.
- A gift.
- An inheritance given to either the student or the individual making the withdrawal.
- Personal savings (including savings from a qualified state tuition program).

Do not include expenses paid with any of the following funds.

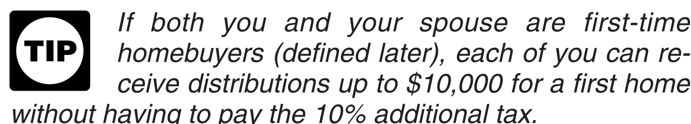
- Tax-free distributions from a Coverdell education savings account (formerly called education IRAs).
- Tax-free scholarships, such as a Pell grant.
- Tax-free employer-provided educational assistance.
- Any tax-free payment (other than a gift, bequest, or devise) due to enrollment at an eligible educational institution.

Qualified higher education expenses. Qualified higher education expenses are tuition, fees, books, supplies, and equipment required for the enrollment or attendance of a student at an eligible educational institution. In addition, if the individual is at least a half-time student, room and board are qualified higher education expenses.

Eligible educational institution. This is any college, university, vocational school, or other postsecondary educational institution eligible to participate in the student aid programs administered by the Department of Education. It includes virtually all accredited, public, nonprofit, and proprietary (privately owned profit-making) postsecondary institutions. The educational institution should be able to tell you if it is an eligible educational institution.

First home. Even if you are under age 59½, you do not have to pay the 10% additional tax on distributions you receive to buy, build, or rebuild a first home. To qualify for treatment as a first-time homebuyer distribution, the distribution must meet all the following requirements.

1) It must be used to pay qualified acquisition costs (defined later) before the close of the 120th day after the day you received it.
2) It must be used to pay qualified acquisition costs for the main home of a first-time homebuyer (defined later) who is any of the following.
   a) Yourself.
   b) Your spouse.
   c) Your or your spouse's child.
   d) Your or your spouse's grandchild.
   e) Your or your spouse's parent or other ancestor.
3) When added to all your prior qualified first-time homebuyer distributions, if any, the total distributions cannot be more than $10,000.



If both you and your spouse are first-time homebuyers (defined later), each of you can receive distributions up to $10,000 for a first home without having to pay the 10% additional tax.

Qualified acquisition costs. Qualified acquisition costs include the following items.

1) Costs of buying, building, or rebuilding a home.
2) Any usual or reasonable settlement, financing, or other closing costs.

First-time homebuyer. Generally, you are a first-time homebuyer if you had no present interest in a main home during the 2-year period ending on the date of acquisition of the home which the distribution is being used to buy, build, or rebuild. If you are married, your spouse must also meet this no-ownership requirement.

Date of acquisition. The date of acquisition is the date that:

1) You enter into a binding contract to buy the main home for which the distribution is being used, or
2) The building or rebuilding of the main home for which the distribution is being used begins.

Contributions Returned Before the Due Date

If you made IRA contributions for 2001, you can withdraw them tax free by the due date of your return. If you have an extension of time to file your return, you can withdraw them tax free by the extended due date. You can do this if, for each contribution you withdraw, both of the following conditions apply.

1) You did not take a deduction for the contribution.
2) You also withdraw any interest or other income earned on the contribution. You can take into account any loss on the contribution while it was in the IRA when calculating the amount that must be withdrawn. If there was a loss, the net income earned on the contribution may be a negative amount.

Note. If the trustee of your IRA is unable to calculate the amount you must withdraw, get IRS Notice 2000–39. The notice explains the IRS-approved method of calculating the amount you must withdraw. To obtain a copy of this notice, see Mail in chapter 5. This notice can also be found in many libraries and IRS offices.

You must include in income any earnings on the contributions you withdraw. Include the earnings in income for the year in which you made the contributions, not the year in which you withdraw them.

Generally, except for any part of a withdrawal that is a return of nondeductible contributions (basis), any withdrawal of your contributions after the due date (or extended due date) of your return will be treated as a taxable distribution. Another exception is the return of an excess contribution as discussed under What Acts Result in Penalties, later.

Early distributions tax. The 10% additional tax on distributions made before you reach age 59½ does not apply to these tax-free withdrawals of your contributions. However, the distribution of interest or other income must be reported on Form 5329 and, unless the distribution qualifies as an exception to the age 59½ rule, it will be subject to this tax. See Early Distributions under What Acts Result in Penalties, later.

Excess contributions tax. If any part of these contributions is an excess contribution for 2000, it is subject to a 6% excise tax. You will not have to pay the 6% tax if any 2000 excess contribution was withdrawn by April 16, 2001 (plus extensions), and if any 2001 excess contribution is withdrawn by April 15, 2002 (plus extensions). See Excess Contributions under What Acts Result in Penalties, later.

You may be able to treat a contribution made to one type of IRA as having been made to a different type of IRA. This is called recharacterizing the contribution. See Recharacterizations in chapter 2 for more information.

When Must I Withdraw IRA Assets? (Required Distributions)

You cannot keep funds in a traditional IRA indefinitely. Eventually they must be distributed. If there are no distributions, or if the distributions are not large enough, you may have to pay a 50% excise tax on the amount not distributed as required. See Excess Accumulations, later. The requirements for distributing IRA funds differ, depending on whether you are the IRA owner or the beneficiary of a decedent's IRA.

Distributions not eligible for rollover. Amounts that must be distributed (required distributions) during a particular year are not eligible for rollover treatment.

IRA Owners

If you are the owner of a traditional IRA, you must start receiving distributions from your IRA by April 1 of the year following the year in which you reach age 70½. April 1 of the year following the year in which you reach age 70½ is referred to as the required beginning date.

Distributions by the required beginning date. You must receive at least a minimum amount for each year starting with the year you reach age 70½ (your 70½ year). If you do not (or did not) receive that minimum amount in your 70½ year, then you must receive distributions for your 70½ year by April 1 of the next year. See Minimum Distributions, later. If an IRA owner dies after reaching age 70½, but before April 1 of the next year, no minimum distribution is required because death occurred before the required beginning date.

Distributions after the required beginning date. The required minimum distribution for any year after your 70½ year must be made by December 31 of that later year.

Example. You reach age 70½ on August 20, 2001. For 2001 (your 70½ year), you must receive the required minimum distribution from your IRA by April 1, 2002. You must receive the required minimum distribution for 2002 (the first year after your 70½ year) by December 31, 2002.

If you do not receive your required minimum distribution for 2001 until 2002, you will have to pay tax on both your 2001 and your 2002 distributions on your 2002 return.

Minimum Distributions

Minimum distributions from a traditional IRA may be figured differently depending on whether they are paid out of an individual retirement account or an individual retirement annuity.

Account. If you are the owner of a traditional IRA that is an individual retirement account, you or your trustee must figure the minimum amount required to be distributed each year. See Figuring the Required Minimum Distribution, later.

Annuity. If your traditional IRA is an individual retirement annuity, special rules apply to figuring the required minimum distribution. For more information on rules for annuities, get section 1.401(a)(9)−6 of the proposed regulations. These proposed regulations can be read in many libraries and IRS offices.

Figuring the Required Minimum Distribution

Figure your required minimum distribution for each year by dividing the IRA account balance (defined later) as of the close of business on December 31 of the preceding year by the applicable distribution period or life expectancy.

Distributions during the owner's lifetime (and in the year of the owner's death if the owner died after his or her required beginning date). Required minimum distributions during your lifetime, and in the year of your death if you die after your required beginning date, are based on a distribution period that generally is determined using Table III (Distribution Period) (For Use by Owners) in Appendix C. The distribution period (which table you use) is not affected by your beneficiary's age unless your sole beneficiary is your spouse who is more than 10 years younger than you are.

To figure the required minimum distribution for 2002, divide your account balance at the end of 2001 by the distribution period from the table. This is the distribution period listed next to your age (as of your birthday in 2002) in Table III in Appendix C, unless your sole beneficiary is your spouse who is more than 10 years younger than you. For an example, see Example 1 under IRA account balance, later.

Sole beneficiary spouse who is more than 10 years younger. If your sole beneficiary is your spouse and your spouse is more than 10 years younger than you, use the life expectancy from Table II (Joint Life and Last Survivor Expectancy).

The life expectancy to use is the joint life and last survivor expectancy listed where the row or column containing your age as of your birthday in 2002 intersects with the row or column containing your spouse's age as of his or her birthday in 2002.

You figure your required minimum distribution for 2002 by dividing your account balance at the end of 2001 by the life expectancy from Table II (Joint Life and Last Survivor Expectancy) (For Use by Owners whose spouses are more than 10 years younger) in Appendix C. For an example, see Example 2 under IRA account balance, later.

Distributions after the owner's death. If the designated beneficiary is an individual, such as the owner's spouse or child, required minimum distributions for years after the year of the owner's death generally are based on the beneficiary's single life expectancy. This rule applies whether or not the death occurred before the owner's required beginning date. If the owner's beneficiary is not an individual (for example, if the beneficiary is the owner's estate), required minimum distributions for years after the owner's death depend on whether the death occurred before the owner's required beginning date.

Date the designated beneficiary is determined. Generally, the designated beneficiary is determined on the last day of the calendar year following the calendar year of the IRA owner's death. Any person who was a beneficiary on the date of the owner's death, but is not a beneficiary on the last day of the calendar year following the calendar year of the owner's death (because, for example, he or she disclaimed entitlement or received his or her entire benefit), will not be taken into account in determining the designated beneficiary.

If an IRA has more than one beneficiary or a trust is named as beneficiary, see Miscellaneous Rules for Required Minimum Distributions, later.

Beneficiary an individual. To figure the required minimum distribution for 2002, divide the account balance at the end of 2001 by the appropriate life expectancy from Table I (Single Life Expectancy) (For Use by Beneficiaries) in Appendix C. Determine the appropriate life expectancy as follows.

- Spouse as sole designated beneficiary. Use the life expectancy listed in the table next to the spouse's age (as of the spouse's birthday in 2002). If the owner died before the year in which he or she reached age 70½, distributions to the spouse do not need to begin until the year in which the owner would have reached age 70½.
- Surviving spouse. If the designated beneficiary is the owner's surviving spouse, and he or she dies before he or she was required to begin receiving distributions, the surviving spouse will be treated as if he or she were the owner of the IRA.
- Other designated beneficiary. Use the life expectancy listed in the table next to the beneficiary's age as of his or her birthday in the year following the year of the owner's death, reduced by one for each year since the year following the owner's death.

A beneficiary who is an individual may be able to elect to take the entire account by the end of the fifth year following the year of the owner's death. If this election is made, no distribution is required for any year before that fifth year.

Beneficiary not an individual. Determine the required minimum distribution for 2002 as follows.

- Death on or after required beginning date. Divide the account balance at the end of 2001 by the appropriate life expectancy from Table I (Single Life Expectancy) (For Use by Beneficiaries) in Appendix C. Use the life expectancy listed next to the owner's age as of his or her birthday in the year of death, reduced by one for each year since the year of death.
- Death before required beginning date. The entire account must be distributed by the end of the fifth year following the year of the owner's death. No distribution is required for any year before that fifth year.

IRA account balance. The IRA account balance is the amount in the IRA at the end of the year preceding the year for which the required minimum distribution is being figured. The IRA account balance is adjusted by certain contributions, distributions, outstanding rollovers, and recharacterizations of Roth IRA conversions.

Contributions. The IRA account balance is increased by any contributions made after the end of the year which are allocated to the account balance for the year. This means that if you are figuring your required minimum distribution for 2002, any contribution made in 2002 that is designated as being for 2001 is added to the IRA account balance as of the end of 2001.

Outstanding rollovers. If an amount is rolled over from one IRA to another and the rollover contribution is made in the calendar year after the year of the distribution, the contribution is deemed to have been made in the year of the distribution. This means that if you received a distribution from one IRA in December of 2001 and rolled it over tax free into another IRA in January of 2002, that rollover contribution would be added to the account balance of the second IRA as of the end of 2001.

Distributions. The IRA account balance is reduced by any distributions made after the end of the year which are considered to have been made during the year. This can happen if any part of the required minimum distribution for the first distribution calendar year (the first year for which distributions are required) is made in the second distribution calendar year. In this case, when determining the required minimum distribution for the second distribution calendar year, the IRA account balance is reduced by any distribution made in that second distribution calendar year that is needed to satisfy the minimum distribution requirements for the first distribution calendar year. The first distribution calendar year is generally the year the owner reaches age 70½. The next year is the second distribution calendar year. See Example 1, later.

Example 1. Laura was born on October 1, 1931. She is an unmarried participant in a qualified defined contribution plan. She reaches age 70½ in 2002. Her required beginning date is April 1, 2003. As of December 31, 2001, her account balance was $25,300. No contributions were made after that date that are allocated to 2001. No rollover amounts were received after that date on her behalf which were distributed in 2001, 2002, or 2003. Using Table III in Appendix C, the applicable distribution period for someone her age (71) is 25.3 years. Her required minimum distribution for 2002 is $1,000 ($25,300 ÷ 25.3). That amount is distributed to her on April 1, 2003.

Her account balance as of December 31, 2002, is $26,400. No contributions are made after that date that are allocated to 2002. The account balance of $26,400 is reduced by $1,000. The $1,000 is the amount of the required minimum distribution for 2002 made on April 1, 2003. Consequently, she uses an account balance of $25,400 to determine her required minimum distribution for 2003.

Example 2. Joe, born October 1, 1930, reached 70½ in 2001. His wife (his beneficiary) turned 56 in September 2001. He must begin receiving distributions by April 1, 2002. Joe's IRA account balance as of December 31, 2000, is $29,000. Because Joe's wife is more than 10 years younger than Joe, Joe uses Table II in Appendix C. Based on their ages at year end (December 31, 2001), the joint life expectancy for Joe (age 71) and his wife (age 56) is 29 years. The required minimum distribution for 2001, Joe's first distribution year (his 70½ year), is $1,000 ($29,000 ÷ 29). This amount is distributed to Joe on April 1, 2002.

Joe's IRA account balance as of December 31, 2001, is $29,725.

To figure the minimum amount that must be distributed for 2002, the IRA account balance (as of December 31, 2001) of $29,725 is reduced by the $1,000 required minimum distribution for 2001 that was made on April 1, 2002. The account balance for determining the required minimum distribution for 2002 is $28,725.

Which Table Do I Use To Determine My Required Minimum Distribution?

There are three different tables. You use only one of them to determine your annual minimum distribution for each traditional IRA. Determine which one to use as follows.

Table I (Single Life Expectancy) (For Use by Beneficiaries) in Appendix C. If you are the owner's sole designated beneficiary, you do not need to take distributions until the year in which the owner would have reached age 70½ if both of the following apply.

1) You were the owner's spouse when he or she died, and
2) The owner had not reached age 70½ when he or she died.

Once that year occurs, or if the owner had reached the age of 70½, use Table I for years after the year of the owner's death.

If the IRA owner has died and you are an individual, such as the owner's child, and you are the owner's designated beneficiary, but you are not both the owner's spouse and sole designated beneficiary, use Table I for years after the year of the owner's death.

If the IRA owner has died and you are the owner's estate or otherwise not an individual, and the owner died on or after the required beginning date, use Table I for years after the year of the owner's death.

Table II (Joint and Last Survivor Expectancy) (For Use by Owners whose spouses are more than 10 years younger) in Appendix C. If you are the IRA owner, and the periodic payments are for your life and the life of your spouse who is more than 10 years younger than you, use Table II. This table is also used for 2001 if the owner died in 2001 after the required beginning date and the owner would have used this table had he or she not died.

Table III (Distribution Period) (For Use by Owners) in Appendix C. Use Table III if you are the IRA owner, unless your spousal beneficiary is more than 10 years younger than you are. This table is also used for 2001 if the owner died in 2001 after the required beginning date and the owner would have used this table had he or she not died.

No table (5-Year Rule). If the IRA owner has died and the designated beneficiary is not an individual, and the owner died before the required beginning date, do not use a table. Take the entire distribution by the end of the fifth year following the year of the owner's death.

This 5-year rule applies if there is no designated beneficiary by the end of the year following the year of the IRA owner's death.

More extensive tables. If an age you are using is not on Table I, II, or III, more extensive tables are in Publication 939.

What Age(s) Do I Use With the Table(s)?

The age or ages to use with the tables are as follows.

Table I (Single Life Expectancy) (For Use by Beneficiaries) in Appendix C. If you are a designated beneficiary figuring your first distribution, use your age as of your birthday in the year distributions must begin. This is usually the calendar year immediately following the calendar year of the owner's death. If you are a spouse who is a sole designated beneficiary, it may be the year in which the owner would have reached age 70½. After the first distribution year, your life expectancy is reduced by one for each subsequent year.

If there is no designated beneficiary, and the owner's death was on or after the required beginning date, use the owner's life expectancy for his or her age as of his or her birthday in the year of death, and reduce it by one for each subsequent year.

Table II (Joint and Last Survivor Expectancy) (For Use by Owners whose spouses are more than 10 years younger) in Appendix C. For your first distribution by the required beginning date, use your age and the age of your designated beneficiary as of your birthdays in the year you become age 70½. Your combined life expectancy is at the intersection of your ages.

If you are figuring your required minimum distribution for 2002, use your ages as of your birthdays in 2002. For each subsequent year, use your and your spouse's ages as of your birthdays in the subsequent year.

Table III (Distribution Period) (For Use by Owners) in Appendix C. For your first distribution by your required beginning date, use your age as of your birthday in the year you become age 70½.

If you are figuring your required minimum distribution for 2002, use your age as of your birthday in 2002. For each subsequent year, use your age as of your birthday in the subsequent year.

Miscellaneous Rules for Required Minimum Distributions

The following rules may apply to your required minimum distribution.

Installments allowed. The yearly required minimum distribution can be taken in a series of installments (monthly, quarterly, etc.) as long as the total distributions for the year are at least as much as the minimum required amount.

More than one IRA. If you have more than one traditional IRA, you must determine the required minimum distribution separately for each IRA. However, you can total these minimum amounts and take the total from any one or more of the IRAs.

Example. Sara, born August 1, 1930, became 70½ on February 1, 2001. She has two traditional IRAs. She must begin receiving her IRA distributions by April 1, 2002. On December 31, 2000, Sara's account balance from IRA A was $10,000; her account balance from IRA B was $20,000. Sara's brother, age 64 as of his birthday in 2001, is the beneficiary of IRA A. Her husband, age 78 as of his birthday in 2001, is the beneficiary of IRA B.

Sara's required minimum distribution from IRA A is $395 ($10,000 ÷ 25.3 (the distribution period for age 71 per Table III). The amount of the required minimum distribution from IRA B is $791 ($20,000 ÷ 25.3). The required minimum distribution that must be withdrawn by Sara from her IRA accounts by April 1, 2002, is $1,186 ($395 + $791).

More than minimum received. If, in any year, you receive more than the required minimum amount for that year, you will not receive credit for the additional amount when determining the minimum required amounts for future years. This does not mean that you do not reduce your IRA account balance. It means that you cannot count the amount distributed in one year that is more than the amount required to be distributed as a distribution of an amount required to be distributed in a later year. However, any amount distributed in your 70½ year will be credited toward the amount that must be distributed by April 1 of the following year.

Example 1. Justin became 70½ on December 15, 2001. Justin's IRA account balance on December 31, 2000, was $38,400. He figured his required minimum distribution for 2001 was $1,466 ($38,400 ÷ 26.2). By December 31, 2001, he had actually received distributions totaling $3,600, $2,134 more than was required. Justin cannot use that $2,134 to reduce the amount he is required to withdraw for 2002, but his IRA account balance must be reduced by the full $3,600 to figure his required minimum distribution for 2002. Justin's reduced IRA account balance on December 31, 2001, was $34,800. Justin figured his required minimum distribution for 2002 is $1,375 ($34,800 ÷ 25.3). During 2002, he must receive distributions of at least that amount.

Example 2. Assume the same facts as in Example 1, except that Justin received the distribution of $3,600 on March 15, 2002. Because the distribution was received before April 1, 2002, he can count $1,466 of that distribution as his required distribution for his 70½ year (2001). He can count the remainder ($2,134) as part of his required distribution for 2002. To figure his required distribution for 2002, Justin must reduce his IRA account balance by $1,466, rather than $3,600, to figure his required minimum distribution for 2002. Therefore, his reduced IRA account balance as of December 31, 2001, was $36,934. His required minimum distribution for 2002 is $1,460, rather than the $1,375 figured in Example 1. Because Justin has already received a distribution of $2,134 for 2002, no more is needed to satisfy his minimum distribution requirement for 2002.

Multiple individual beneficiaries. If as of the end of the year following the year in which the owner dies there is more than one beneficiary, the beneficiary with the shortest life expectancy will be the designated beneficiary if both of the following apply.

1) All of the beneficiaries are individuals, and
2) The account or benefit has not been divided into separate accounts or shares for each beneficiary.

Trust as beneficiary. A trust cannot be a designated beneficiary even if it is a named beneficiary. However, the beneficiaries of a trust will be treated as having been designated as beneficiaries if all of the following are true.

1) The trust is a valid trust under state law, or would be but for the fact that there is no corpus.
2) The trust is irrevocable or will, by its terms, become irrevocable upon the death of the employee.
3) The beneficiaries of the trust who are beneficiaries with respect to the trust's interest in the employee's benefit are identifiable from the trust instrument.
4) The IRA trustee, custodian, or issuer has been provided with either a copy of the trust instrument with the agreement that if the trust instrument is amended, the administrator will be provided with a copy of the amendment within a reasonable time, or all of the following.

a) A list of all of the beneficiaries of the trust (including contingent and remaindermen beneficiaries with a description of the conditions on their entitlement).

b) Certification that, to the best of the employee's knowledge, the list is correct and complete and that the requirements of (1), (2), and (3) above, are met.

c) An agreement that, if the trust instrument is amended at any time in the future, the employee will, within a reasonable time, provide to the IRA trustee, custodian, or issuer corrected certifications to the extent that the amendment changes any information previously certified.

d) An agreement to provide a copy of the trust instrument to the IRA trustee, custodian, or issuer upon demand.

If the beneficiary of the trust is another trust and the above requirements for both trusts are met, the beneficiaries of the other trust will be treated as having been designated as beneficiaries for purposes of determining the distribution period.

Annuity distributions from an insurance company. Special rules apply if you receive distributions from your traditional IRA as an annuity purchased from an insurance company. See sections 1.401(a)(9)−6 and 54.4974−2 of the proposed regulations. These proposed regulations can be found in many libraries and IRS offices.

Are Distributions Taxable?

In general, distributions from a traditional IRA are taxable in the year you receive them.

Failed financial institutions. This general rule applies to distributions made (with or without your consent) by a state agency as receiver of an insolvent savings institution. This means you must include such distributions in your gross income unless you can roll them over. For an exception to the 1-year waiting period rule for rollovers of certain distributions from failed financial institutions, see Exception under Rollover From One IRA Into Another, earlier.

Exceptions. Exceptions to the general rule are rollovers and tax-free withdrawals of contributions, discussed earlier, and the return of nondeductible contributions, discussed later under Distributions Fully or Partly Taxable.

Although a conversion of a traditional IRA is considered a rollover for Roth IRA purposes, it is not an exception to the general rule for distributions from a traditional IRA. Conversion distributions are includable in your gross income subject to these rules and the special rules for conversions explained in chapter 2.

Ordinary income. Distributions from traditional IRAs that you include in income are taxed as ordinary income.

No special treatment. In figuring your tax, you cannot use the 10-year tax option or capital gain treatment that applies to lump-sum distributions from qualified employer plans.

Distributions Fully or Partly Taxable

Distributions from your traditional IRA may be fully or partly taxable, depending on whether your IRA includes any nondeductible contributions.

Fully taxable. If only deductible contributions were made to your traditional IRA (or IRAs, if you have more than one), you have no basis in your IRA. Because you have no basis in your IRA, any distributions are fully taxable when received. See Reporting and Withholding Requirements for Taxable Amounts, later.

Partly taxable. If you made nondeductible contributions to any of your traditional IRAs, you have a cost basis (investment in the contract) equal to the amount of those contributions. These nondeductible contributions are not taxed when they are distributed to you. They are a return of your investment in your IRA.

Only the part of the distribution that represents nondeductible contributions (your cost basis) is tax free. If nondeductible contributions have been made, distributions consist partly of nondeductible contributions (basis) and partly of deductible contributions, earnings, and gains (if there are any). Until all of your basis has been distributed, each distribution is partly nontaxable and partly taxable.

Form 8606. You must complete Form 8606, and attach it to your return, if you receive a distribution from a traditional IRA and have ever made nondeductible contributions to any of your traditional IRAs. Using the form, you will figure the nontaxable distributions for 2001, and your total IRA basis for 2001 and earlier years. See the illustrated Forms 8606 in this chapter.

Note. If you are required to file Form 8606, but you are not required to file an income tax return, you still must file Form 8606. Complete Form 8606, sign it, and send it to the IRS at the time and place you would otherwise file an income tax return.

Figuring the Nontaxable and Taxable Amounts

If your traditional IRA includes nondeductible contributions and you received a distribution from it in 2001, you must use Form 8606 to figure how much of your 2001 IRA distribution is tax free.

Contribution and distribution in the same year. If you received a distribution in 2001 from a traditional IRA and you also made contributions to a traditional IRA for 2001 that may not be fully deductible because of the income limits, you can use Worksheet 1−1 to figure how much of your 2001 IRA distribution is tax free and how much is taxable. Then you can figure the amount of nondeductible contributions to report on Form 8606. Use the related instructions, under Reporting your nontaxable distribution on Form 8606, later, to figure your remaining basis after the distribution.

Reporting your nontaxable distribution on Form 8606. To report your nontaxable distribution and to figure the remaining basis in your traditional IRA after distributions, you must complete Worksheet 1–1 before completing Form 8606. Then follow these steps to complete Form 8606.

1) Use the worksheet in the Form 1040 or 1040A instructions to figure your deductible contributions to traditional IRAs to report on line 23 of Form 1040 or line 16 of Form 1040A.
2) After you complete the worksheet in the form instructions, enter your nondeductible contributions to traditional IRAs on line 1 of Form 8606.
3) Complete lines 2 through 5 of Form 8606.
4) If line 5 of Form 8606 is less than line 8 of Worksheet 1–1, complete lines 6 through 15 of Form 8606 and stop here.
5) If line 5 of Form 8606 is equal to or greater than line 8 of Worksheet 1–1, follow instructions 6 and 7, next. Do not complete lines 6 through 12 of Form 8606.
6) Enter the amount from line 8 of Worksheet 1–1 on line 13 of Form 8606.
7) Complete line 14 of Form 8606.
8) Enter the amount from line 9 of Worksheet 1–1 (or, if you entered an amount on line 11, the amount from that line) on line 15 of Form 8606.

Example. Rose Green has made the following contributions to her traditional IRAs.

Year	Deductible	Nondeductible
1993	$2,000	–0–
1994	2,000	–0–
1995	2,000	–0–
1996	1,000	–0–
1997	1,000	–0–
1998	1,000	–0–
Totals	$9,700	$ 300

In 2001, Rose, whose IRA deduction for that year may be reduced or eliminated, makes a $2,000 contribution that may be partly nondeductible. She also receives a distribution of $5,000 for conversion to a Roth IRA. She completed the conversion before 12/31/01 and did not recharacterize any contributions. At the end of 2001, the fair market values of her accounts, including earnings, total $20,000. She did not receive any tax-free distributions in earlier years. The amount she includes in income for 2001 is figured on Filled-in Worksheet 1–1, Example of Figuring the Taxable Part of Your IRA Distribution.

The Form 8606 for Rose, illustrated, shows the information required when you need to use Worksheet 1–1 to figure your nontaxable distribution. Assume that the amount used on line 1 of Form 8606 is the amount Rose figured using instructions 1 and 2 given earlier under Reporting your nontaxable distribution on Form 8606.

Recognizing Losses on IRA Investments

If you have a loss on your traditional IRA investment, you can recognize the loss on your income tax return, but only when all the amounts in all your traditional IRA accounts have been distributed to you and the total distributions are less than your unrecovered basis, if any. Your basis is the total amount of the nondeductible contributions in your traditional IRAs. You claim the loss as a miscellaneous itemized deduction, subject to the 2%-of-adjusted-gross-income limit that applies to certain miscellaneous itemized deductions on Schedule A, Form 1040. A similar rule applies to Roth IRAs. The rule applies separately to each kind of IRA. Thus, to report a loss in a Roth IRA, all the Roth IRAs (but not traditional IRAs) owned by you have to be liquidated, and to report a loss in a traditional IRA, all the traditional IRAs (but not Roth IRAs) owned by you have to be liquidated.

Example. Bill King has made nondeductible contributions to a traditional IRA totaling $2,000, giving him a basis at the end of 2000 of $2,000. By the end of 2001, his IRA earns $400 in interest income. In that year, Bill receives a distribution of $600 ($500 basis + $100 interest), reducing the value of his IRA to $1,800 ($2,000 + 400 − 600) at year's end. Bill figures the taxable part of the distribution and his remaining basis on Form 8606 (illustrated).

In 2002, Bill's IRA has a loss of $500. At the end of that year, Bill's IRA balance is $1,300 ($1,800 − 500). Bill's remaining basis in his IRA is $1,500 ($2,000 − 500). Bill receives the $1,300 balance remaining in the IRA. He can claim a loss for 2002 of $200 (the $1,500 basis minus the $1,300 distribution of the IRA balance). Bill completes Form 8606 as illustrated.

Inherited IRAs

The beneficiaries of a traditional IRA must include in their gross income any distributions they receive.

Beneficiaries. The beneficiaries of a traditional IRA can include an estate, dependents, and anyone the owner chooses to receive the benefits of the IRA after he or she dies.

Spouse. If you inherit an interest in a traditional IRA from your spouse, you can elect to treat the entire inherited interest as your own IRA as discussed under What If I Inherit an IRA, earlier. Also see the discussion earlier under When Must I Withdraw IRA Assets? (Required Distributions) for the rules on when you must begin to receive distributions from the IRA.

Beneficiary other than spouse. If you inherit a traditional IRA from someone other than your spouse, you cannot treat it as your own IRA. You cannot roll over any

Filled-in Worksheet 1–1. Example of Figuring the Taxable Part of Your IRA Distribution

Use only if you made contributions to a traditional IRA for 2001 and have to figure the taxable part of your 2001 distributions to determine your modified AGI. See Limit If Covered By Employer Plan.

Form 8606 and the related instructions will be needed when using this worksheet.

Note. When used in this worksheeet, the term outstanding rollover refers to an amount distributed from a traditional IRA as part of a rollover that, as of December 31, 2001, had not yet been reinvested in another traditional IRA, but was still eligible to be rolled over tax free.

Line	Description	Amount
1)	Enter the basis in your traditional IRA(s) as of 12/31/00	$ 300

10)	Enter the amount included on line 9 that is allocable to amounts converted to Roth IRAs by 12/31/01. (See Note at the end of this worksheet.) Enter here and on line 18 of Form 8606	$ 4,540
11)	Taxable portion of the distribution (after adjustments for conversions). Subtract line 10 from line 9. Enter the result here and on line 15 of Form 8606	$ -0-

Note. If the amount on line 5 of this worksheet includes an amount converted to a Roth IRA by 12/31/01, you must determine the percentage of the distribution allocable to the conversion. To figure the percentage, divide the amount converted (from line 16 of Form 8606) by the total distributions shown on line 5. To figure the amounts to include on line 10 of this worksheet and on line 18, Part II of Form 8606, multiply line 9 of the worksheet by the percentage you figured.

part of it or roll any amount over into it. You cannot make any contributions to an inherited traditional IRA.

IRA with basis. If you inherit a traditional IRA from a person who had a basis in the IRA because of nondeductible contributions, that basis remains with the IRA. Unless you are the decedent's spouse and choose to treat the IRA as your own, you cannot combine this basis with any basis you have in your own traditional IRA(s) or any basis in traditional IRA(s) you inherited from other decedents. If you take a distribution from an inherited IRA and your IRA, and each has basis, you must complete separate Forms 8606 to determine the taxable and nontaxable portions of those distributions.

Federal estate tax deduction. A beneficiary may be able to claim a deduction for estate tax resulting from certain distributions from a traditional IRA. The beneficiary can deduct the estate tax paid on any part of a distribution that is income in respect of a decedent. He or she can take the deduction for the tax year the income is reported. For information on claiming this deduction, see Other Tax Information in Publication 559, Survivors, Executors, and Administrators.

Any taxable part of a distribution that is not income in respect of a decedent is a payment the beneficiary must include in income. However, the beneficiary cannot take any estate tax deduction for this part.

A surviving spouse can roll over the distribution to another traditional IRA and avoid including it in income for the year received.

Other Special IRA Distribution Situations

Two other special IRA distribution situations are discussed below.

Distribution of an annuity contract from your IRA account. You can tell the trustee or custodian of your traditional IRA account to use the amount in the account to buy an annuity contract for you. You are not taxed when you receive the annuity contract. You are taxed when you start receiving payments under that annuity contract.

Tax treatment. If only deductible contributions were made to your traditional IRA since it was set up (this includes all your traditional IRAs, if you have more than one), the annuity payments are fully taxable.

If any of your traditional IRAs include both deductible and nondeductible contributions, the annuity payments are taxed as explained earlier under Distributions Fully or Partly Taxable.

Cashing in retirement bonds. When you cash in retirement bonds, you are taxed on the entire amount you receive. Unless you have already cashed them in, you will be taxed on the entire value of your bonds in the year in which you reach age 70½. The value of the bonds is the amount you would have received if you had cashed them in at the end of that year. When you later cash in the bonds, you will not be taxed again.

Reporting and Withholding Requirements for Taxable Amounts

If you receive a distribution from your traditional IRA, you will receive Form 1099–R, or a similar statement. IRA distributions are shown in boxes 1 and 2 of Form 1099–R. A number or letter code in box 7 tells you what type of distribution you received from your IRA.

Number codes. Some of the number codes are explained below. All the codes are explained in the instructions for recipients on Form 1099–R.

1—Early distribution, no known exception.

2—Early distribution, exception applies.

3—Disability.

4—Death.

5—Prohibited transaction.

7—Normal distribution.

8—Excess contributions plus earnings/ excess deferrals (and/or earnings) taxable in 2001.

If code 1, 5, or 8 appears on your Form 1099–R, you are probably subject to a penalty. If code 1 appears, see Early Distributions, later. If code 5 appears, see Prohibited Transactions, later. If code 8 appears, see Excess Contributions, later.

Letter codes. Some of the letter codes are explained below. All the codes are explained in the instructions for recipients on Form 1099–R.

D—Excess contributions plus earnings/ excess deferrals taxable in 1999.

G—Direct rollover to IRA.

H—Direct rollover to qualified plan or tax-sheltered annuity or a transfer from a conduit IRA to a qualified plan.

J—Early distribution from a Roth IRA, no known exception.

N—Recharacterized IRA contribution made for 2001 and recharacterized in 2001.

P—Excess contributions plus earnings/ excess deferrals taxable in 2000.

R—Recharacterized IRA contribution made for 2000 and recharacterized in 2001.

S—Early distributions from a SIMPLE IRA in first 2 years, no known exception.

T—Roth IRA distribution, exception applies.

If the distribution shown on Form 1099–R is from your IRA, SEP-IRA, or SIMPLE IRA, the small box in box 7 (labeled IRA/SEP/SIMPLE) should be marked with an “X.”

If code D, J, P, or S appears on your Form 1099–R, you are probably subject to a penalty. If code D appears, see Excess Contributions, later. If code J appears, see Early Distributions, later. If code P appears, see Excess Contributions, later. If code S appears, see Additional Tax on Early Distributions in chapter 4.

Withholding. Federal income tax is withheld from distributions from traditional IRAs unless you choose not to have tax withheld.

The amount of tax withheld from an annuity or a similar periodic payment is based on your marital status and the number of withholding allowances you claim on your withholding certificate (Form W–4P). If you have not filed a certificate, tax will be withheld as if you are a married individual claiming three withholding allowances.

Generally, tax will be withheld at a 10% rate on a nonperiodic distribution.

IRA distributions delivered outside the United States. In general, if you are a U.S. citizen or resident alien and your home address is outside the United States or its possessions, you cannot choose exemption from withholding on distributions from your traditional IRA.

To choose exemption from withholding, you must certify to the payer under penalties of perjury that you are not a U.S. citizen, a resident alien of the United States, or a tax-avoidance expatriate.

Even if this election is made, the payer must withhold tax at the rates prescribed for nonresident aliens.

More information. For more information, see Pensions and Annuities in chapter 1 of Publication 505, Tax Withholding and Estimated Tax. See also Publication 515, Withholding of Tax on Nonresident Aliens and Foreign Entities.

Reporting taxable distributions on your return. Report fully taxable distributions, including early distributions, on line 15b, Form 1040 (no entry is required on line 15a), or line 11b, Form 1040A. If only part of the distribution is taxable, enter the total amount on line 15a, Form 1040 (or line 11a, Form 1040A), and the taxable part on line 15b (or 11b). You cannot report distributions on Form 1040EZ.

Estate tax. Generally, the value of an annuity or other payment receivable by any beneficiary of a decedent's traditional IRA that represents the part of the purchase price contributed by the decedent (or by his or her former employer(s)), must be included in the decedent's gross estate. For more information, see the instructions for Schedule I, Form 706, United States Estate (and Generation-Skipping Transfer) Tax Return.

What Acts Result in Penalties?

The tax advantages of using traditional IRAs for retirement savings can be offset by additional taxes and penalties if you do not follow the rules. For example, there are additions to the regular tax for using your IRA funds in prohibited transactions. There are also additional taxes for the following activities.

- Investing in collectibles.
- Making excess contributions.
- Taking early distributions.
- Allowing excess amounts to accumulate (failing to take required distributions).

There are penalties for overstating the amount of nondeductible contributions and for failure to file Form 8606, if required.

This chapter discusses those acts that you should avoid and the additional taxes and other costs, including loss of IRA status, that apply if you do not avoid those acts.

Prohibited Transactions

Generally, a prohibited transaction is any improper use of your traditional IRA account or annuity by you, your beneficiary, or any disqualified person.

Disqualified persons include your fiduciary and members of your family (spouse, ancestor, lineal descendant, and any spouse of a lineal descendant).

The following are examples of prohibited transactions with a traditional IRA.

- Borrowing money from it.
- Selling property to it.
- Receiving unreasonable compensation for managing it.
- Using it as security for a loan.
- Buying property for personal use (present or future) with IRA funds.

Fiduciary. For these purposes, a fiduciary includes anyone who does any of the following.

- Exercises any discretionary authority or discretionary control in managing your IRA or exercises any authority or control in managing or disposing of its assets.
- Charges to provide investment advice with respect to your IRA, or has any authority or responsibility to do so.
- Has any discretionary authority or discretionary responsibility in administering your IRA.

Effect on an IRA account. Generally, if you or your beneficiary engages in a prohibited transaction in connection with your traditional IRA account at any time during the year, the account stops being an IRA as of the first day of that year.

Effect on you or your beneficiary. If you or your beneficiary engages in a prohibited transaction in connection with your traditional IRA account at any time during the year, you (or your beneficiary) must include the fair market value of all of the IRA assets in your gross income for that year. The fair market value is the price at which the IRA assets would change hands between a willing buyer and a willing seller, when neither has any need to buy or sell, and both have reasonable knowledge of the relevant facts.

You must use the fair market value of the assets as of the first day of the year you engaged in the prohibited transaction. You may have to pay the 10% tax on early distributions, discussed later.

Borrowing on an annuity contract. If you borrow money against your traditional IRA annuity contract, you must include in your gross income the fair market value of the annuity contract as of the first day of your tax year. You may have to pay the 10% additional tax on early distributions, discussed later.

Pledging an account as security. If you use a part of your traditional IRA account as security for a loan, that part is treated as a distribution and is included in your gross income. You may have to pay the 10% additional tax on early distributions, discussed later.

Trust account set up by an employer or an employee association. Your account or annuity does not lose its IRA treatment if your employer or the employee association with whom you have your traditional IRA engages in a prohibited transaction.

Owner participation. If you participate in the prohibited transaction with your employer or the association, your account is no longer treated as an IRA.

Taxes on prohibited transactions. If someone other than the owner or beneficiary of a traditional IRA engages in a prohibited transaction, that person may be liable for certain taxes. In general, there is a 15% tax on the amount of the prohibited transaction and a 100% additional tax if the transaction is not corrected.

Loss of IRA status. If the traditional IRA ceases to be an IRA because of a prohibited transaction by you or your beneficiary, you or your beneficiary are not liable for these excise taxes. However, you or your beneficiary may have to pay other taxes as discussed under Effect on you or your beneficiary, earlier.

Exemptions From Penalties

Exemption from prohibited transaction penalties has been granted for the following two transactions, if they meet the requirements listed later under Payments of cash, property, or other consideration and Services received at reduced or no cost.

- Payments of cash, property, or other consideration by the sponsor of your traditional IRA to you (or members of your family).
- Your receipt of services at reduced or no cost from the bank where your traditional IRA is established or maintained.

Payments of cash, property, or other consideration. Even if a sponsor makes payments to you or your family, there is no prohibited transaction penalty if all three of the following requirements are met.

1) The payments are for establishing a traditional IRA or for making additional contributions to it.
2) The IRA is established solely to benefit you, your spouse, and your or your spouse's beneficiaries.
3) During the year, the total fair market value of the payments you receive is not more than:
   a) $10 for IRA deposits of less than $5,000, or
   b) $20 for IRA deposits of $5,000 or more.

If the consideration is group term life insurance, requirements (1) and (3) do not apply if no more than $5,000 of the face value of the insurance is based on a dollar-for-dollar basis on the assets in your IRA.

Services received at reduced or no cost. Even if a sponsor provides services at reduced or no cost, there is no prohibited transaction penalty if all five of the following requirements are met.

1) The traditional IRA qualifying you to receive the services is established and maintained for the benefit of you, your spouse, and your or your spouse's beneficiaries.
2) The bank itself can legally offer the services.
3) The services are provided in the ordinary course of business by the bank (or a bank affiliate) to customers who qualify but do not maintain an IRA (or a Keogh plan).
4) The determination, for a traditional IRA, of who qualifies for these services is based on an IRA (or a Keogh plan) deposit balance equal to the lowest qualifying balance for any other type of account.
5) The rate of return on a traditional IRA investment that qualifies is not less than the return on an identical investment that could have been made at the same time at the same branch of the bank by a customer who is not eligible for (or does not receive) these services.

Investment in Collectibles

If your traditional IRA invests in collectibles, the amount invested is considered distributed to you in the year invested. You may have to pay the 10% tax on early distributions, discussed later.

Collectibles. These include:

- Art works,
- Rugs,
- Antiques,
- Metals,
- Gems,
- Stamps,
- Coins,
- Alcoholic beverages, and
- Certain other tangible personal property.

Exception. Your IRA can invest in one, one-half, one-quarter, or one-tenth ounce U.S. gold coins, or one-ounce silver coins minted by the Treasury Department. It can also invest in certain platinum coins and certain gold, silver, palladium, and platinum bullion.

Excess Contributions

Generally, an excess contribution is the amount contributed to your traditional IRAs that is more than the smaller of:

1) Your taxable compensation for the year, or
2) $2,000 for 2001 ($3,000 for 2002 or $3,500 for 2002 if 50 or older).

The taxable compensation limit applies whether your contributions are deductible or nondeductible.

Contributions for the year you reach age 70½ and any later year are also excess contributions.

An excess contribution could be the result of your contribution, your spouse's contribution, your employer's contribution, or an improper rollover contribution. If your employer makes contributions on your behalf to a SEP-IRA, see chapter 3, later.

Tax on Excess Contributions

In general, if the excess contribution for a year and any earnings on it are not withdrawn by the date your return for the year is due (including extensions), you are subject to a 6% tax. You must pay the 6% tax each year on excess amounts that remain in your traditional IRA at the end of your tax year. The tax cannot be more than 6% of the value of your IRA as of the end of your tax year.

The excise tax is figured on Form 5329. For information on filing Form 5329, see Reporting Additional Taxes, later.

Example. For 2001, Paul Jones is single, his compensation is $31,000, and he contributed $2,500 to his IRA. Paul has made an excess contribution to his IRA of $500 ($2,500 minus the $2,000 limit). The contribution earned $5 interest in 2001 and $6 interest in 2002 before the due date of the return, including extensions. He does not withdraw the $500 or the interest it earned by the due date of his return, including extensions.

Paul figures his excess contribution tax for 2001 by multiplying the excess contribution ($500) shown on line 16, Form 5329, by .06, giving him an additional tax liability of $30. He enters the tax on line 17, Form 5329, and on line 55, Form 1040. See Paul's filled-in Form 5329.

Excess Contributions Withdrawn by Due Date of Return

You will not have to pay the 6% tax if you withdraw an excess contribution made during a tax year and you also withdraw any interest or other income earned on the excess contribution. You must complete your withdrawal by the date your tax return for that year is due, including extensions.

How to treat withdrawn contributions. Do not include in your gross income an excess contribution that you withdraw from your traditional IRA before your tax return is due if both of the following conditions are met.

1) No deduction was allowed for the excess contribution.
2) You withdraw the interest or other income earned on the excess contribution.

You can take into account any loss on the contribution while it was in the IRA when calculating the amount that must be withdrawn. If there was a loss, the net income you must withdraw may be a negative amount.

Note. If the trustee of your IRA is unable to calculate the amount you must withdraw, get IRS Notice 2000–39. The notice explains the IRS-approved method of calculating the amount you must withdraw. To obtain a copy of this notice, see Mail in chapter 5. This notice can also be found in many libraries and IRS offices.

How to treat withdrawn interest or other income. You must include in your gross income the interest or other income that was earned on the excess contribution. Report it on your return for the year in which the excess contribution was made. Your withdrawal of interest or other income may be subject to an additional 10% tax on early distributions, discussed later.

Form 1099–R. You will receive Form 1099–R indicating the amount of the withdrawal. If the excess contribution was made in a previous tax year, the form will indicate the year in which the earnings are taxable.

Example. Maria, age 35, made an excess contribution in 2001 of $1,000, which she withdrew by April 15, 2002, the due date of her return. At the same time, she also withdrew the $50 income that was earned on the $1,000. She must include the $50 in her gross income for 2001 (the year in which the excess contribution was made). She must also pay an additional tax of $5 (the 10% tax on early distributions because she is not yet 59½ years old), but she does not have to report the excess contribution as income or pay the 6% excise tax. Maria receives a Form 1099–R showing that the earnings are taxable for 2001.

Excess Contributions Withdrawn After Due Date of Return

In general, you must include all distributions (withdrawals) from your traditional IRA in your gross income. However, if the following conditions are met, you can withdraw excess contributions from your IRA and not include the amount withdrawn in your gross income.

1) Total contributions (other than rollover contributions) for 2001 to your IRA were not more than $2,000.
2) You did not take a deduction for the excess contribution being withdrawn.

The withdrawal can take place at any time, even after the due date, including extensions, for filing your tax return for the year.

Excess contribution deducted in an earlier year. If you deducted an excess contribution in an earlier year for which the total contributions were $2,000 or less, you can still remove the excess from your traditional IRA and not include it in your gross income. To do this, file Form 1040X, Amended U.S. Individual Income Tax Return, for that year and do not deduct the excess contribution on the amended return. Generally, you can file an amended return within 3 years after you filed your return, or 2 years from the time the tax was paid, whichever is later.

Excess due to incorrect rollover information. If an excess contribution in your traditional IRA is the result of a rollover and the excess occurred because the information the plan was required to give you was incorrect, you can withdraw the excess contribution. The limits mentioned above are increased by the amount of the excess that is due to the incorrect information. You will have to amend your return for the year in which the excess occurred to correct the reporting of the rollover amounts in that year. Do not include in your gross income the part of the excess contribution caused by the incorrect information.

Deducting an Excess Contribution in a Later Year

You cannot apply an excess contribution to an earlier year even if you contributed less than the maximum amount allowable for the earlier year. However, you may be able to apply it to a later year if the contributions for that later year are less than the maximum allowed for that year.

You can deduct excess contributions for previous years that are still in your traditional IRA. The amount you can deduct this year is the lesser of the following two amounts.

1) Your maximum IRA deduction for this year minus any amounts contributed to your traditional IRAs for this year.
2) The total excess contributions in your IRAs at the beginning of this year.

This method lets you avoid making a withdrawal. It does not, however, let you avoid the 6% tax on any excess contributions remaining at the end of a tax year.

To figure the amount of excess contributions for previous years that you can deduct this year, see Worksheet 1–4.

Worksheet 1–4. Excess Contributions Deductible This Year

Use this worksheet to figure the amount of excess contributions from prior years you can deduct this year.

2. IRA contributions for the current year	2.	______
3. Subtract line 2 from line 1. If zero (0) or less, enter zero	3.	______
4. Excess contributions in IRA at beginning of year	4.	______
5. Enter the lesser of line 3 or line 4. This is the amount of excess contributions for previous years that you can deduct this year	5.	______

Example. Terry was entitled to contribute to her traditional IRA and deduct $1,000 in 2000 and $1,500 in 2001 (the amounts of her taxable compensation for these years). For 2000, she actually contributed $1,400 but could deduct only $1,000. In 2000, $400 is an excess contribution subject to the 6% tax. However, she would not have to pay the 6% tax if she withdrew the excess (including any earnings) before the due date of her 2000 return. Since Terry did not withdraw the excess, she owes excise tax of $24 for 2000. To avoid the excise tax for 2001, she can correct the $400 excess amount from 2000 in 2001 if her actual contributions are only $1,100 for 2001 (the allowable deductible contribution of $1,500 minus the $400 excess from 2000 she wants to treat as a deductible contribution in 2001). Terry can deduct $1,500 in 2001 (the $1,100 actually contributed plus the $400 excess contribution from 2000). This is illustrated by Filled-in Worksheet 1–4.

Closed tax year. A special rule applies if you incorrectly deducted part of the excess contribution in a closed tax year (one for which the period to assess a tax deficiency has expired). The amount allowable as a traditional IRA deduction for a later correction year (the year you contribute less than the allowable amount) must be reduced by the amount of the excess contribution deducted in the closed year.

To figure the amount of excess contributions for previous years that you can deduct this year if you incorrectly deducted part of the excess contribution in a closed tax year, see Worksheet 1–5.

Worksheet 1–5. Excess Contributions Deductible This Year if Any Were Deducted in a Closed Tax Year

Early Distributions

You must include early distributions of taxable amounts from your traditional IRA in your gross income. Early distributions are also subject to an additional 10% tax, as discussed later.

Early distributions defined. Early distributions are amounts distributed from your traditional IRA account or annuity before you are age 59½, or amounts you receive when you cash in retirement bonds before you are age 59½.

Exceptions. In certain situations, you may not have to pay the 10% additional tax even if amounts are distributed from your IRA before you are age 59½. These situations are listed below.

- You have unreimbursed medical expenses that are more than 7.5% of your adjusted gross income.
- The distributions are not more than the cost of your medical insurance.
- You are disabled.
- You are the beneficiary of a deceased IRA owner.
- You are receiving distributions in the form of an annuity.
- The distributions are not more than your qualified higher education expenses.
- You use the distributions to buy, build, or rebuild a first home.
- The distribution is due to an IRS levy of the qualified plan.

Most of these exceptions are explained earlier at Exceptions under Age 59½ Rule.

Note. Distributions that are timely and properly rolled over, as discussed earlier, are not subject to either regular income tax or the 10% additional tax. Certain withdrawals of excess contributions are also tax free and not subject to the 10% additional tax. (See Excess Contributions, earlier.) This also applies to transfers incident to divorce, as discussed under Can I Move Retirement Plan Assets, earlier.

Receivership distributions. Early distributions (with or without your consent) from savings institutions placed in receivership are subject to this tax unless one of the above exceptions applies. This is true even if the distribution is from a receiver that is a state agency.

Additional 10% tax. The additional tax on early distributions is 10% of the amount of the early distribution that you must include in your gross income. This tax is in addition to any regular income tax resulting from including the distribution in income.

Use Form 5329 to figure the tax. See the discussion of Form 5329, later, under Reporting Additional Taxes for information on filing the form.

Example. Tom Jones, who is 35 years old, receives a $3,000 distribution from his traditional IRA account. Tom does not meet any of the exceptions to the age 59½ rule, so the $3,000 is an early distribution. Tom never made any nondeductible contributions to his IRA. He must include the $3,000 in his gross income for the year of the distribution and pay income tax on it. Tom must also pay an additional tax of $300 (10% × $3,000). He chooses to file Form 5329. See the filled-in Form 5329.

Early distributions of funds from a SIMPLE retirement account made within 2 years of beginning participation in the SIMPLE are subject to a 25%, rather than 10%, early distributions tax.

Nondeductible contributions. The tax on early distributions does not apply to the part of a distribution that represents a return of your nondeductible contributions (basis).

Excess Accumulations (Insufficient Distributions)

You cannot keep amounts in your traditional IRA indefinitely. Generally, you must begin receiving distributions by April 1 of the year following the year in which you reach age 70½ (your 70½ year). The required minimum distribution for any year after your 70½ year must be made by December 31 of that later year.

Tax on excess. If distributions are less than the required minimum distribution for the year, discussed earlier under When Must I Withdraw IRA Assets? (Required Distributions), you may have to pay a 50% excise tax for that year on the amount not distributed as required.

Reporting the tax. Use Form 5329 to report the tax on excess accumulations. See the discussion of Form 5329, later, under Reporting Additional Taxes, for more information on filing the form.

Request to excuse the tax. If the excess accumulation is due to reasonable error, and you have taken, or are taking, steps to remedy the insufficient distribution, you can request that the tax be excused.

If you believe you qualify for this relief, do the following.

1) File Form 5329 with your Form 1040.
2) Pay any tax you owe on excess accumulations.
3) Attach a letter of explanation.

If the IRS approves your request, it will refund the excess accumulations tax you paid.

Exemption from tax. If you are unable to make required distributions because you have a traditional IRA invested in a contract issued by an insurance company that is in state insurer delinquency proceedings, the 50% excise tax does not apply if the conditions and requirements of Revenue Procedure 92−10 are satisfied. Those conditions and requirements are summarized below. Revenue Procedure 92−10 is in Cumulative Bulletin 1992−1. To obtain a copy of this revenue procedure, see Mail in chapter 5. You can also read the revenue procedure at most IRS offices and at many public libraries.

Conditions. To qualify for exemption from the tax, the assets in your traditional IRA must include an affected investment. Also, the amount of your required distribution must be determined as discussed earlier under Minimum Distributions.

Affected investment defined. Affected investment means an annuity contract or a guaranteed investment contract (with an insurance company) for which payments under the terms of the contract have been reduced or suspended because of state insurer delinquency proceedings against the contracting insurance company.

Requirements. If your traditional IRA (or IRAs) includes other assets in addition to your affected investment, all traditional IRA assets, including the available portion of your affected investment, must be used to satisfy as much as possible your IRA distribution requirement. If the affected investment is the only asset in your IRA, as much as possible of the required distribution must come from the available portion, if any, of your affected investment.

Available portion. The available portion of your affected investment is the amount of payments remaining after they have been reduced or suspended because of state insurer delinquency proceedings.

Make up of shortfall in distribution. If the payments to you under the contract increase because all or part of the reduction or suspension is canceled, you must make up the amount of any shortfall in a prior distribution because of the proceedings. You make up (reduce or eliminate) the shortfall with the increased payments you receive.

You must make up the shortfall by December 31 of the calendar year following the year that you receive increased payments.

Reporting Additional Taxes

Generally, you must use Form 5329 to report the tax on excess contributions, early (premature) distributions, and excess accumulations.

Filing Form 1040. If you file Form 1040, complete Form 5329 and attach it to your Form 1040. Enter the total amount of IRA tax due on line 55, Form 1040.

Note. If you have to file an individual income tax return and Form 5329, you must use Form 1040.

Not filing Form 1040. If you do not have to file a Form 1040 but do have to pay one of the IRA taxes mentioned earlier, file the completed Form 5329 with the IRS at the time and place you would have filed Form 1040. Be sure to include your address on page 1 and your signature and date on page 2. Enclose, but do not attach a check or money order payable to the United States Treasury for the tax you owe, as shown on Form 5329. Write your social security number and "2001 Form 5329" on your check or money order.

Form 5329 not required. You do not have to use Form 5329 if any of the following conditions exist.

- Distribution code 1 (early distribution) is shown in box 7 of Form 1099−R. If you do not owe any other additional tax on a distribution, multiply the taxable part of the early distribution by 10% and enter the result on line 55 of Form 1040. Write "No" next to line 55 to indicate that you do not have to file Form 5329. However, if you owe this tax and also owe any other additional tax on a distribution, do not enter this 10% additional tax directly on your Form 1040. You must file Form 5329 to report your additional taxes.
- You qualify for an exception to the additional tax on early distributions. You do not have to report the exception if distribution code 2, 3, or 4 is shown in box 7 of Form 1099−R. However, if one of those codes is not shown, or the code shown is incorrect, you must file Form 5329 to report the exception.
- You properly rolled over all distributions you received during the year.

Table 2–1. Effect of Modified AGI on Roth IRA Contribution

This table shows whether your contribution to a Roth IRA is affected by the amount of your modified adjusted gross income (modified AGI).

IF you have taxable compensation and your filing status is ...	AND your modified AGI is ...	THEN ...
Married Filing Jointly	Less than $150,000	You can contribute up to $2,000 for 2001 ($3,000 for 2002 or $3,500 for 2002 if age 50 or older) as explained under How Much Can Be Contributed.
	At least $150,000 but less than $160,000	The amount you can contribute is reduced as explained under Contribution limit reduced.
	$160,000 or more	You cannot contribute to a Roth IRA.
Married Filing Separately and you lived with your spouse at any time during the year	Zero (-0-)	You can contribute up to $2,000 for 2001 ($3,000 for 2002 or $3,500 for 2002 if 50 or older) as explained under How Much Can Be Contributed.
	More than zero (-0-) but less than $10,000	The amount you can contribute is reduced as explained under Contribution limit reduced.
	$10,000 or more	You cannot contribute to a Roth IRA.
Single, Head of Household, Qualifying Widow(er), or Married Filing Separately and you did not live with your spouse at any time during the year	Less than $95,000	You can contribute up to $2,000 for 2001 ($3,000 for 2002 or $3,500 for 2002 if age 50 or older) as explained under How Much Can Be Contributed.
	At least $95,000 but less than $110,000	The amount you can contribute is reduced as explained under Contribution limit reduced.
	$110,000 or more	You cannot contribute to a Roth IRA.

2. Roth IRAs

Important Changes for 2002

Increased Roth IRA contribution limit. If contributions on your behalf are made only to Roth IRAs, your contribution limit for 2002, generally is the lesser of :

- $3,000 (up from $2,000), or
- Your taxable compensation.

However, if your modified AGI is above a certain amount, your contribution limit may be reduced.

If you are 50 years of age or older in 2002 and contributions on your behalf are made only to Roth IRAs, your contribution limit for 2002 generally is the lesser of:

- $3,500 (up from $2,000), or
- Your taxable compensation.

However, if your modified AGI is above a certain amount, your contribution limit may be reduced. For more information, see How Much Can Be Contributed? in this chapter.

Contributions to both traditional and Roth IRAs for the same year. If contributions are made on your behalf to both a Roth IRA and a traditional IRA, your contribution limit for 2002 is the lesser of :

- $3,000 ($3,500 if you are 50 years of age or older in 2002) (up from $2,000) minus all contributions (other than employer contributions under a SEP or SIMPLE IRA plan) for the year to all IRAs other than Roth IRAs, or
- Your taxable compensation minus all contributions (other than employer contributions under a SEP or SIMPLE IRA plan) for the year to all IRAs other than Roth IRAs.

However, if your modified AGI is above a certain amount, your contribution limit may be reduced. For more information, see How Much Can Be Contributed? in this chapter.

Credit for IRA contributions. For tax years beginning after December 31, 2001, if you are an eligible individual, you may be able to claim a credit for a percentage of your qualified retirement savings contributions, such as contributions to your Roth IRA. To be eligible, you must be at least 18 years old as of the end of the year, and you cannot be a student or an individual for whom someone else claims a personal exemption. Also, your adjusted gross income (AGI) must be below a certain amount. Adjusted gross income is the amount from your Form 1040 line 33 or Form 1040A line 19.

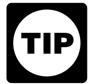
For more information, see Publication 553, Highlights of 2001 Tax Changes.

Introduction

Regardless of your age, you may be able to establish and make nondeductible contributions to an individual retirement plan called a Roth IRA.



You can make contributions for 2001 by the due date (not including extensions) for filing your 2001 tax return. This means that most people can make contributions for 2001 by April 15, 2002.

Contributions not reported. You do not have to report Roth IRA contributions on your return.

What is a Roth IRA?

A Roth IRA is an individual retirement plan that, except as explained in this chapter, is subject to the rules that apply to a traditional IRA (defined below). It can be either an account or an annuity. Individual retirement accounts and annuities are described in chapter 1 under How Can a Traditional IRA Be Set Up.

To be a Roth IRA, the account or annuity must be designated as a Roth IRA when it is set up. Neither a SEP-IRA nor a SIMPLE IRA can be designated as a Roth IRA.

Unlike a traditional IRA, you cannot deduct contributions to a Roth IRA. But, if you satisfy the requirements, qualified distributions (discussed later) are tax free. Contributions can be made to your Roth IRA after you reach age 70½ and you can leave amounts in your Roth IRA as long as you live.

Traditional IRA. A traditional IRA is any IRA that is not a Roth IRA or SIMPLE IRA. Traditional IRAs are discussed in chapter 1.

Can I Contribute to a Roth IRA?

Generally, you can contribute to a Roth IRA if you have taxable compensation (defined later) and your modified AGI (defined later) is less than:

- $160,000 for married filing jointly,
- $10,000 for married filing separately and you lived with your spouse at any time during the year, and
- $110,000 for single, head of household, qualifying widow(er) or married filing separately and you did not live with your spouse at any time during the year.

Is there an age limit for contributions? Contributions can be made to your Roth IRA regardless of your age.

Can I contribute to a Roth IRA for my spouse? You can contribute to a Roth IRA for your spouse provided the contributions satisfy the spousal IRA limit (discussed in chapter 1 under How Much Can Be Contributed?) and your modified AGI is less than:

- $160,000 for married filing jointly,
- $10,000 for married filing separately and you lived with your spouse at any time during the year, and
- $110,000 for married filing separately and you did not live with your spouse at any time during the year.

Compensation. Compensation includes wages, salaries, tips, professional fees, bonuses, and other amounts received for providing personal services. It also includes commissions, self-employment income, and taxable alimony and separate maintenance payments. For more information, see What Is Compensation? in chapter 1.

Modified AGI. Your modified AGI for Roth IRA purposes is your adjusted gross income (AGI) as shown on your return modified as follows.

1) Subtract any income resulting from the conversion of an IRA (other than a Roth IRA) to a Roth IRA (conversion income). Conversions are discussed under Can I Move Amounts Into a Roth IRA, later.
2) Add the following deductions and exclusions:
   a) Traditional IRA deduction,
   b) Student loan interest deduction,
   c) Foreign earned income exclusion,
   d) Foreign housing exclusion or deduction,
   e) Exclusion of qualified bond interest shown on Form 8815, and
   f) Exclusion of employer-paid adoption expenses shown on Form 8839.

For tax years beginning after December 31, 2001, you will also add any deduction for qualified tuition and related expenses.

You can use Worksheet 2–1 to figure your modified AGI.

Worksheet 2–1. Modified Adjusted Gross Income for Roth IRA Purposes

Use this worksheet to figure your modified adjusted gross income for Roth IRA purposes.

1.	Enter your adjusted gross income (Form 1040, line 33 or Form 1040A, line 19)	1. ______
2.	Enter any income resulting from the conversion of an IRA (other than a Roth IRA) to a Roth IRA	2. ______
3.	Subtract line 2 from line 1	3. ______
4.	Enter any traditional IRA deduction (Form 1040, line 23 or Form 1040A, line 16)	4. ______
5.	Enter any student loan interest deduction (Form 1040, line 24 or Form 1040A, line 17)	5. ______
6.	Enter any foreign earned income exclusion (Form 2555, line 40 or Form 2555–EZ, line 18)	6. ______
7.	Enter any foreign housing exclusion or deduction (Form 2555, line 34 or 48)	7. ______
8.	Enter any exclusion of bond interest (Form 8815, line 14)	8. ______
9.	Enter any exclusion of employer-paid adoption expenses (Form 8839, line 26)	9. ______
10.	Add the amounts on lines 3 through 9. This is your modified adjusted gross income for Roth IRA purposes	10. ______

If the result is more than the modified AGI limit and you have other income or loss items, such as social security income or passive activity losses, that are subject to AGI-based phaseouts, you can refigure your AGI solely for the purpose of figuring your modified AGI for Roth IRA purposes. Refigure your AGI without taking into account any income from conversions. (If you receive social security benefits, use Worksheet 1 in Appendix B to refigure your AGI.) Then go to 2) above under Modified AGI or line 4 above in Worksheet 2–1 to refigure your modified AGI.

Conversion income must be taken into account when computing other AGI-based phaseouts and taxable income. You disregard conversion income only for the purpose of figuring your modified AGI for Roth IRA purposes.

How Much Can Be Contributed?

The contribution limit for Roth IRAs depends on whether contributions are made only to Roth IRAs or to both traditional IRAs and Roth IRAs.

Roth IRAs only. If contributions are made only to Roth IRAs, your contribution limit generally is the lesser of:

- $2,000 for 2001 ($3,000 for 2002 or $3,500 for 2002 if you are 50 or older), or
- Your taxable compensation.

However, If your modified AGI is above a certain amount, your contribution limit may be reduced, as explained later under Contribution limit reduced.

Roth IRAs and traditional IRAs. If contributions are made to both Roth IRAs and traditional IRAs established for your benefit, your contribution limit for Roth IRAs generally is the same as your limit would be if contributions were made only to Roth IRAs, but then reduced by all contributions (other than employer contributions under a SEP or SIMPLE IRA plan) for the year to all IRAs other than Roth IRAs.

This means that your contribution limit is the lesser of:

- $2,000 for 2001 ($3,000 for 2002 or $3,500 for 2002 if you are 50 or older) minus all contributions (other than employer contributions under a SEP or SIMPLE IRA plan) for the year to all IRAs other than Roth IRAs, or
- Your taxable compensation minus all contributions (other than employer contributions under a SEP or SIMPLE IRA plan) for the year to all IRAs other than Roth IRAs.

However, if your modified AGI is above a certain amount, your contribution limit may be reduced, as explained later under Contribution limit reduced.

Simplified employee pensions (SEPs) are discussed in chapter 3. Savings incentive match plans for employees (SIMPLEs) are discussed in chapter 4.

Contribution limit reduced. If your modified AGI is above a certain amount, your contribution limit is gradually reduced. Use Table 2–1 to determine if this reduction applies to you.

Figuring the reduction. If your modified AGI is within the range shown in Table 2–1 for your filing status, figure your reduced contribution limit as follows.

1) Start with your modified AGI.
2) Subtract from the amount in (1):
   a) $150,000 if filing a joint return,
   b) $–0– if married filing a separate return, and you lived with your spouse at any time during the year, or
   c) $95,000 for all other individuals.

3) Divide the result in (2) by $15,000 ($10,000 if filing a joint return or married filing a separate return).

4) Multiply the maximum contribution limit (before reduction by this adjustment and before reduction for any contributions to traditional IRAs) by the result in (3).

5) Subtract the result in (4) from the maximum contribution limit before this reduction. The result is your reduced contribution limit.

You can use Worksheet 2–2 to figure the reduction.

Worksheet 2–2. Determining Your Reduced Roth IRA Contribution Limit

Before using this worksheet, check Table 2–1 to determine whether or not your Roth IRA contribution limit is reduced. If it is, use this worksheet to determine how much it is reduced.

Example. You are a single individual with taxable compensation of $113,000. You want to make the maximum allowable contribution to your Roth IRA for 2001. Your modified AGI for 2001 is $100,000. You have not contributed to any traditional IRA, so the maximum contribution limit before the modified AGI reduction is $2,000. Using the steps described above, you figure your reduced Roth IRA contribution of $1,340 as shown on Filled-in Worksheet 2–2.

Filled-in Worksheet 2–2. Example of Determining Your Reduced Roth IRA Contribution Limit

Before using this worksheet, check Table 2–1 to determine whether or not your Roth IRA contribution limit is reduced. If it is, use this worksheet to determine how much it is reduced.

11.	Enter the lesser of line 8 or line 10. This is your reduced Roth IRA contribution limit	11.	$1,340

When Can I Make Contributions?

You can make contributions to a Roth IRA for a year at any time during the year or by the due date of your return for that year (not including extensions).

What If I Contribute Too Much?

A 6% excise tax applies to any excess contribution to a Roth IRA.

Excess contributions. These are the contributions to your Roth IRAs for a year that equal the total of:

1) Amounts contributed for the tax year to your Roth IRAs (other than amounts properly and timely rolled over from a Roth IRA or properly converted from a traditional IRA, as described later) that are more than your contribution limit for the year (explained earlier under How Much Can be Contributed?), plus
2) Any excess contributions for the preceding year, reduced by the total of:
   a) Any distributions out of your Roth IRAs for the year, plus
   b) Your contribution limit for the year minus your contributions to all your IRAs for the year.

Withdrawal of excess contributions. For purposes of determining excess contributions, any contribution that is withdrawn on or before the due date (including extensions) for filing your tax return for the year is treated as an amount not contributed. This treatment only applies if any earnings on the contributions are also withdrawn and are reported as income earned and receivable in the year the contribution was made.

Applying excess contributions. If contributions to your Roth IRA for a year were more than the limit, you can apply the excess contribution in one year to a later year if the contributions for that later year are less than the maximum allowed for that year.

Can I Move Amounts Into a Roth IRA?

You may be able to convert amounts from either a traditional, SEP, or SIMPLE IRA into a Roth IRA. You may be able to recharacterize contributions made to one IRA as having been made directly to a different IRA. You can roll amounts over from one Roth IRA to another Roth IRA.

Conversions

You can convert a traditional IRA to a Roth IRA. The conversion is treated as a rollover, regardless of the conversion method used. Most of the rules for rollovers, described in chapter 1 under Rollover From One IRA Into Another, apply to these rollovers. However, the 1-year waiting period does not apply.

Conversion methods. You can convert amounts from a traditional IRA to a Roth IRA in any of the following three ways.

1) Rollover. You can receive a distribution from a traditional IRA and roll it over (contribute it) to a Roth IRA within 60 days after the distribution.
2) Trustee-to-trustee transfer. You can direct the trustee of the traditional IRA to transfer an amount from the traditional IRA to the trustee of the Roth IRA.
3) Same trustee transfer. If the trustee of the traditional IRA also maintains the Roth IRA, you can direct the trustee to transfer an amount from the traditional IRA to the Roth IRA.

Same trustee. Conversions made with the same trustee can be made by redesignating the traditional IRA as a Roth IRA, rather than opening a new account or issuing a new contract.

Converting From Any Traditional IRA

You can convert amounts from a traditional IRA into a Roth IRA if, for the tax year you make the withdrawal from the traditional IRA, both of the following requirements are met.

1) Your modified AGI (explained earlier) is not more than $100,000.
2) You are not a married individual filing a separate return. (See Lived apart from spouse under Filing status, in chapter 1.)

Allowable conversions. You can withdraw all or part of the assets from a traditional IRA and reinvest them (within 60 days) in a Roth IRA. If properly (and timely) rolled over, the 10% additional tax on early distributions will not apply. You must roll over into the Roth IRA the same property you received from the traditional IRA. You can roll over part of the withdrawal into a Roth IRA and keep the rest of it. The amount you keep will generally be taxable (except for the part that is a return of nondeductible contributions) and may be subject to the 10% tax on early distributions. See chapter 1 for more information on distributions from traditional IRAs and the tax on early distributions.

Periodic distributions. An individual who has started taking substantially equal periodic payments from a traditional IRA can convert the account to a Roth IRA and then continue the periodic payments. The following rules apply.

1) The periodic distributions result in income acceleration to the extent allocable to a 1998 conversion contribution to which the 4-year spread applies.
2) The 10% early distribution tax will not apply even if the distributions are not qualified distributions (as long as they are part of a series of substantially equal periodic payments).

Required distributions. Amounts that must be distributed from your traditional IRA for a particular year (including the calendar year in which you reach age 70½) under the required distribution rules (discussed in chapter 1) cannot be converted.

Inherited IRAs. If you inherited a traditional IRA from someone other than your spouse, you cannot convert it to a Roth IRA.

Income. You must include in your gross income distributions from a traditional IRA that you would have to include in income if you had not converted them into a Roth IRA. You do not include in gross income any part of a distribution from a traditional IRA that is a return of your basis, as discussed under Are Distributions Taxable, in chapter 1.

If you must include any amount in your gross income, you may have to make estimated tax payments. See Publication 505, Tax Withholding and Estimated Tax.

How To Treat 1998 Conversions

If you converted amounts from a traditional IRA in 1998 to a Roth IRA, any amount you had to include in income as a result of the distribution is generally included ratably over a 4-year period, beginning with 1998. This means you included one quarter of the amount in 1998, 1999, 2000, and must include the final quarter in 2001.

Note. You may have elected to include the entire amount in income in 1998. If you did, this discussion does not apply to you.

Change in filing status. A change in filing status or a divorce does not affect the application of the 4-year income spread rule for 1998 conversions. Therefore, if a married Roth IRA owner who made a 1998 conversion and uses the 4-year spread files separately or divorces in 2001, the balance is included in the owner's income in 2001.

Death of Roth IRA owner during 4-year period. If a Roth IRA owner who is including amounts ratably over the 4-year period died in 2001, any amounts not included must generally be included in the owner's (decedent's) gross income for 2001.

Converting From a SIMPLE IRA

Generally, you can convert an amount in your SIMPLE IRA to a Roth IRA under the same rules explained earlier under Converting From Any Traditional IRA.

However, you cannot convert any amount distributed from the SIMPLE IRA during the 2-year period beginning on the date you first participated in any SIMPLE IRA plan maintained by your employer.

Rollover From a Roth IRA

You can withdraw, tax free, all or part of the assets from one Roth IRA if you contribute them within 60 days to another Roth IRA. Most of the rules for rollovers, described in chapter 1 under Rollover From One IRA Into Another, apply to these rollovers. However, no deductible contributions can be made to Roth IRAs, and rollovers from retirement plans other than Roth IRAs are disregarded for purposes of the 1-year waiting period between rollovers.

A rollover from a Roth IRA to an employer retirement plan is not allowed.

Failed Conversions

If, when you converted amounts from a traditional IRA or SIMPLE IRA (including a transfer by redesignation) into a Roth IRA, you expected to have modified AGI of less than $100,000 and a filing status other than married filing separately, but events changed these facts, you have made a failed conversion.

Adverse consequences. If the converted amount (contribution) is not recharacterized (explained later), the contribution will be treated as a regular contribution to the Roth IRA and subject to the following tax consequences.

1) A 6% excise tax per year will apply to any excess contribution not withdrawn from the Roth IRA.
2) The distributions from the traditional IRA must be included in your gross income.
3) The 10% additional tax on early distributions may apply to any distribution.

How to avoid. You must move the amount converted (including all earnings from the date of conversion) into a traditional IRA by the due date (including extensions) for your tax return for the year during which you made the conversion to the Roth IRA. You do not have to include this distribution (withdrawal) in income. See Recharacterization of original contribution, later, for more information.

Recharacterizations

You may be able to treat a contribution made to one type of IRA as having been made to a different type of IRA. This is called recharacterizing the contribution.

How to recharacterize. To recharacterize a contribution, you generally must have the contribution transferred from the first IRA (the one to which it was made) to the second IRA in a trustee-to-trustee transfer. If the transfer is made by the due date (including extensions) for your tax return for the year during which the contribution was made, you can elect to treat the contribution as having been originally made to the second IRA instead of to the first IRA. It will be treated as having been made to the second IRA on the same date that it was actually made to the first IRA. You must report the recharacterization, and must treat the contribution as having been made to the second IRA, instead of the first IRA, on your tax return for the year during which the contribution was made.

If you file your return timely without making the election, you can still make the choice by filing an amended return within six months of the due date of the return (excluding extensions). Report the recharacterization on the amended return and write "Filed pursuant to section 301.9100−2" on the return. File the amended return at the same address you filed the original return.

Net income must be transferred. The contribution will not be treated as having been made to the second IRA unless the transfer includes any net income allocable to the contribution. You can take into account any loss on the contribution while it was in the IRA when calculating the amount that must be transferred. If there was a loss, the net income you must transfer may be a negative amount.

No deduction allowed. No deduction is allowed for the contribution to the first IRA and any net income transferred with the recharacterized contribution is treated as earned in the second IRA. The contribution will not be treated as having been made to the second IRA to the extent any deduction was allowed with respect to the contribution to the first IRA.

Conversion by rollover from traditional to Roth IRA. For recharacterization purposes, a distribution from a traditional IRA that is received in one tax year and rolled over into a Roth IRA in the next year, but still within 60 days of the distribution from the traditional IRA, is treated as a contribution to the Roth IRA in the year of the distribution from the traditional IRA.

Effect of previous tax-free transfers. If a contribution has been moved from one IRA to another in a tax-free transfer, such as a rollover, the contribution to the second IRA generally cannot be recharacterized. However, see Move from traditional to SIMPLE IRA, later.

Recharacterization of original contribution. A contribution to one IRA that has been moved between IRAs in tax-free transfers can be treated as if it remained in the first IRA, the IRA that received the original contribution. This means that you can elect to recharacterize the contribution to the first IRA by having a trustee-to-trustee transfer of the contribution made from the IRA in which it now resides to a second IRA and treating the contribution as having been made to the second IRA on the same date it was actually made to the first IRA. If both IRAs involved in the trustee-to-trustee transfer are maintained by the same trustee, you need only direct that trustee to transfer the contribution.

Roth IRA conversion contributions from a SEP-IRA or SIMPLE IRA can be recharacterized to a SEP-IRA or SIMPLE IRA (including the original SEP-IRA or SIMPLE IRA).

Move from traditional to SIMPLE IRA. If you mistakenly roll over or transfer an amount from a traditional IRA to a SIMPLE IRA, you can later recharacterize the amount as a contribution to another traditional IRA.

Applying excess contributions. You can recharacterize only actual contributions. If you are applying excess contributions for prior years as current contributions, you can recharacterize them only if the recharacterization would still be timely with respect to the tax year for which the applied contributions were actually made.

Employer contributions. You cannot recharacterize employer contributions (including elective deferrals) under a SEP or SIMPLE plan as contributions to another IRA. SEPs are discussed in chapter 3. SIMPLE plans are discussed in chapter 4.

Recharacterizations not counted as rollover. The recharacterization of a contribution is not treated as a rollover for purposes of the 1-year waiting period described in chapter 1 under Rollover From One IRA Into Another. This is true even if the contribution would have been treated as a rollover contribution by the second IRA if it had been made directly to the second IRA rather than as a result of a recharacterization of a contribution to the first IRA.

Reconversions

You cannot convert and reconvert an amount during the same taxable year, or if later, during the 30-day period following a recharacterization. If you reconvert during either of these periods, it will be a failed conversion.

How Do I Recharacterize a Contribution?

To recharacterize a contribution, you must notify both the trustee of the first IRA (the one to which the contribution was actually made) and the trustee of the second IRA that you have elected to treat, for federal tax purposes, the contribution as having been made to the second IRA rather than the first. You must make the notifications by the date of the transfer. Only one notification is required if both IRAs are maintained by the same trustee. The notification(s) must include all of the following information.

- The type and amount of the contribution to the first IRA that is to be recharacterized.
- The date on which the contribution was made to the first IRA and the year for which it was made.
- A direction to the trustee of the first IRA to transfer in a trustee-to-trustee transfer the amount of the contribution and any net income allocable to the contribution to the trustee of the second IRA. If there was a loss while the contribution was in the first IRA, the net income that must be transferred may be a negative amount.
- The name of the trustee of the first IRA and the name of the trustee of the second IRA.
- Any additional information needed to make the transfer.

Note. If the trustee of your first IRA is unable to calculate the amount of net income you must transfer, get IRS Notice 2000−39. The notice explains the IRS-approved method of calculating the amount you must transfer. To obtain a copy of this notice, see Mail in chapter 5. This notice can also be found in many libraries and IRS offices.

Timing. The election to recharacterize and the transfer must both take place on or before the due date (including extensions) for filing your tax return for the year for which the contribution was made to the first IRA.

If you have timely filed your tax return, you have an automatic 6-month extension to recharacterize a contribution or a conversion.

Decedent. The election to recharacterize can be made by the executor, administrator, or other person responsible for filing the decedent's final income tax return.

Election cannot be changed. After the transfer has taken place, you cannot change your election to recharacterize.

Same trustee. Recharacterizations made with the same trustee can be made by redesignating the first as the second IRA, rather than transferring the account balance.

Reporting a Recharacterization

If you elect to recharacterize a contribution to one IRA as a contribution to another IRA, you must report the recharacterization on your tax return as directed by Form 8606 and its instructions. You must treat the contribution as having been made to the second IRA.

Recharacterization Examples

Example 1. On June 1, 2001, Christine properly and timely converted her traditional IRAs to a Roth IRA. At the time, she and her husband Jeremy expected to have modified AGI of less than $100,000 for 2001. In December, Jeremy received an unexpected bonus that increased his and Christine's modified AGI to more than $100,000. In January, 2002, to make the necessary adjustment to remove the unallowable conversion, Christine set up a traditional IRA with the same trustee. Also in January 2002, she instructed the trustee of the Roth IRA to make a trustee-to-trustee transfer of the conversion contribution made to the Roth IRA (including net income allocable to it since the conversion) to the new traditional IRA. She also notified the trustee that she was electing to recharacterize the contribution to the Roth IRA and treat it as if it had been contributed to the new traditional IRA. Because of the recharacterization, Jeremy and Christine have no taxable income from the conversion to report for 2001, and the resulting rollover to a traditional IRA is not treated as a rollover for purposes of the one-rollover-per-year rule.

Example 2. On April 1, 2001, your traditional IRA is worth $100,000. You convert the entire amount, consisting of 100 shares of stock in ABC Corp. and 100 shares of stock in XYZ Corp., by transferring the shares to a Roth IRA. At the time of conversion, the 100 shares in ABC Corp. are worth $50,000, and the 100 shares in XYZ Corp. are also worth $50,000. You decide that you would like to recharacterize the ABC Corp. shares back to a traditional IRA. However, you can choose the contribution or portion thereof that is to be recharacterized only by dollar amount.

On the date of transfer, November 1, 2001, the 100 shares of stock in ABC Corp. are worth $40,000 and the 100 shares of stock in XYZ Corp. are worth $70,000. No other contributions have been made to the Roth IRA and no distributions have been made. If you request that $50,000 (which was the value of the ABC Corp. shares at the time of conversion) be recharacterized, the net income allocable to the $50,000 is $5,000 [$50,000 x ($110,000 – $100,000)/$100,000]. Therefore, in order to recharacterize $50,000 of the April 1, 2001, conversion contribution on November 1, 2001, the Roth IRA trustee must transfer from your Roth IRA to a traditional IRA assets with a value of $55,000 [$50,000 + $5,000].

If, on the other hand, you request that $40,000 (which was the value of the ABC Corp. shares on November 1) be recharacterized, the net income allocable to the $40,000 is $4,000 [$40,000 x ($110,000 – $100,000/$100,000]. Therefore, in order to recharacterize $40,000 of the April 1, 2001, conversion contribution on November 1, 2001, the Roth IRA trustee must transfer from your Roth IRA to a traditional IRA assets with a value of $44,000 [$40,000 + $4,000]. Regardless of the amount of the contribution recharacterized, the determination of that amount (or of the net income allocable to it) is not affected by whether the recharacterization is accomplished by the transfer of shares of ABC Corp. or of shares of XYZ Corp.

Are Distributions From My Roth IRA Taxable?

You do not include in your gross income qualified distributions or distributions that are a return of your regular contributions from your Roth IRA(s). You also do not include distributions from your Roth IRA that you roll over tax free into another Roth IRA. You may have to include part of other distributions in your income. See Ordering Rules for Distributions, later.

Withdrawals of contributions by due date. If you withdraw contributions (including any net earnings on the contributions) by the due date of your return for the year in which you made the contribution, the contributions are treated as if you never made them. If you have an extension of time to file your return, you can withdraw the contributions and earnings by the extended due date. The withdrawal of contributions is tax free, but you must include the earnings on the contributions in income for the year in which you made the contributions.

What Are Qualified Distributions?

A qualified distribution is any payment or distribution from your Roth IRA that meets the following requirements.

1) It is made after the 5-taxable-year period beginning with the first taxable year for which a contribution was made to a Roth IRA set up for your benefit, and

2) The payment or distribution is:

   a) Made on or after the date you reach age 59½,

   b) Made because you are disabled,

   c) Made to a beneficiary or to your estate after your death, or

   d) One that meets the requirements listed under First home in chapter 1 (up to a $10,000 lifetime limit).

Additional Tax on Early Distributions

If you receive a distribution that is not a qualified distribution, you may have to pay the 10% additional tax on early distributions as explained in the following paragraphs.

Distributions of conversion contributions within 5-year period. If, within the 5-year period starting with the year in which you made a conversion contribution of an amount from a traditional IRA to a Roth IRA, you take a distribution from a Roth IRA of an amount attributable to the portion of the conversion contribution that you had to include in income, you generally must pay the 10% additional tax on early distributions. (See Ordering Rules for Distributions, later, to determine the amount, if any, of the distribution that is attributable to the conversion contribution.) The 5-year period is separately determined for each conversion contribution.

Unless one of the exceptions listed later applies, you must pay the additional tax on the portion of the distribution attributable to the part of the conversion contribution that you had to include in income because of the conversion.

The 10% additional tax applies as though you must include the amount in gross income in the year of the distribution, even if you had included it in income in an earlier year (such as in the year of the conversion). You also must pay the additional tax on any portion of the distribution attributable to earnings on contributions. See Example 2, later.

Other early distributions. Unless one of the exceptions listed below applies, you must pay the 10% additional tax on early distributions on the taxable part of any distributions that are not qualified distributions.

Exceptions. You may not have to pay the 10% additional tax on early distributions in the following situations.

- You have reached age 59½.
- You are disabled.
- You are the beneficiary of a deceased IRA owner.
- You use the distribution to pay certain qualified first-time homebuyer amounts.
- The distributions are part of a series of substantially equal payments.
- You have significant unreimbursed medical expenses.
- You are paying medical insurance premiums after losing your job.

- The distributions are not more than qualified higher education expenses.
- The distribution is due to an IRS levy of the qualified plan.

Most of these exceptions are discussed earlier in chapter 1 under When Can I Withdraw or Use IRA Assets.

Ordering Rules for Distributions

If you receive a distribution from your Roth IRA that is not a qualified distribution, part of it may be taxable. There is a set order in which contributions (including conversion contributions) and earnings are considered to be distributed from your Roth IRA. For these purposes, the withdrawal of excess contributions and the earnings on them (discussed earlier) are disregarded. The order of distributions is as follows.

1) Regular contributions.
2) Conversion contributions, on a first-in-first-out basis (generally, total conversions from the earliest year first). See Aggregation (grouping and adding) rules, later. These conversion contributions are taken into account as follows:
   a) Taxable portion (the amount required to be included in gross income because of conversion) first, and then the
   b) Nontaxable portion.
3) Earnings on contributions.

Rollover contributions from other Roth IRAs are disregarded for this purpose.

Aggregation (grouping and adding) rules. To determine the taxable amounts distributed (withdrawn), distributions and contributions are grouped and added together as follows.

1) All distributions from all your Roth IRAs during the year are added together.
2) All regular contributions made during and for the year (contributions made after the close of the year, but before the due date of your return) are added together. This total is added to the total undistributed regular contributions made in prior years.
3) All conversion contributions made during the year are added together. For purposes of the ordering rules, in the case of any conversion in which the conversion distribution is made in 2001 and the conversion contribution is made in 2002, the conversion contribution is treated as contributed prior to other conversion contributions made in 2002.

Any recharacterized contributions that end up in a Roth IRA are added to the appropriate contribution group for the year that the original contribution would have been taken into account if it had been made directly to the Roth IRA.

Any recharacterized contribution that ends up in an IRA other than a Roth IRA is disregarded for the purpose of grouping (aggregating) both contributions and distributions. Any amount withdrawn to correct an excess contribution (including the earnings withdrawn) is also disregarded for this purpose.

How Do I Figure the Taxable Part?

To figure the taxable part of a distribution that is not a qualified distribution, complete Worksheet 2–3.

Examples

The following examples illustrate the rules affecting the tax treatment of distributions from Roth IRAs.

Example 1. On October 15, 1998, Justin converted all $80,000 in his traditional IRA to his Roth IRA. His Forms 8606 from prior years show that $20,000 of the amount converted is his basis.

Because of the conversion, Justin must include $60,000 ($80,000 − $20,000) in his gross income. He did not elect to report all the income in 1998, so the income is spread ratably over 4 years.

For 2001, Justin must include $15,000 ($60,000 ÷ 4) in his gross income.

On February 23, 2001, Justin makes a regular contribution of $2,000 to a Roth IRA. On November 7, 2001, Justin takes a $5,000 distribution from his Roth IRA.

The first $2,000 of the distribution is a return of Justin's regular contribution and is not includible in his income.

The next $3,000 of the distribution is not includible in income because 2001 is the last year of the 4-year spread period. No additional amount is includible in gross income because the entire amount of the conversion that was includible in gross income will have been included when the last $15,000 is included.

Justin must report $15,000 as taxable IRA distributions on his return for 2001.

Because the $3,000 is distributed before the end of the 5-year period, it is subject to the 10% additional tax on early distributions that applies to distributions of conversion contributions.

Justin must file Form 5329 with his return to report the early distribution and figure the additional tax or claim an exception, if one applies.

Example 2. Assume the facts are changed in Example 1, so that Justin makes a $2,000 regular contribution to his Roth IRA in each year, 1999 through 2002, and does not take any distributions in 1999 through 2001.

On February 14, 2002, Justin takes an $85,000 distribution from his IRA.

The first $8,000 of the distribution is a return of his regular contributions (the total of his regular contributions in each year 1999 through 2002). This amount is returned tax free.

Worksheet 2–3. Figuring the Taxable Part of a Distribution (That is Not a Qualified Distribution) From a Roth IRA

1) Enter the total of all distributions made from your Roth IRA(s) during the year . . .	$
2) Enter the amount of qualified distributions made during the year
3) Subtract line 2 from line 1
4) Enter the amount of distributions made during the year to correct excess contributions made during the year. (Do not include earnings.)
5) Subtract line 4 from line 3
6) Enter the amount of distributions made during the year that were contributed to another Roth IRA in a qualified rollover contribution
7) Subtract line 6 from line 5
8) Enter the amount of all prior distributions from your Roth IRA(s) (whether or not they were qualified distributions)
9) Add lines 1 and 8
10) Enter the amount of the distributions included on line 8 that were previously includible in your income
11) Subtract line 10 from line 9
12) Enter the total of all your contributions to all of your Roth IRAs
13) Enter the total of all distributions made (this year and in prior years) to correct excess contributions. (Include earnings.)
14) Subtract line 13 from line 12. (Do not enter less than 0.)
15) Subtract line 14 from line 11. (Do not enter less than 0.)
16) Enter the smaller of the amount on line 7 or the amount on line 15. This is the taxable part of your distribution	$

The next $60,000 is a return of the conversion contribution made in 1998 that was includible in income in 1998, 1999, 2000, and 2001. This amount is not includible in income in 2002.

The remaining $17,000 is a return of the conversion contribution made in 1998 that was not includible in income because it was part of his basis. This amount is returned tax free.

Although none of the distribution is includible in income, the $60,000 of conversion contributions withdrawn is subject to the 10% early distribution tax, unless an exception to that tax applies. The tax is applied as though the $60,000 is includible in income in the year of the distribution. This is because the conversion contribution that was includible in income is distributed within the 5-year period beginning with the year of the conversion contribution (1998). In this case, the additional tax is $6,000.

Although Justin has no income to report from the distribution, he must file Form 5329 to report the additional tax.

Example 3. Assume the same facts as in Example 2, except that there is no distribution in 2002. Instead, the entire $170,000 balance in Justin's Roth IRA is distributed to him in 2004. The balance includes all contributions made to the IRA and the earnings on those contributions ($90,000 of contributions and $80,000 of earnings).

Because Justin is not age 59½ or disabled and the distribution will not be used to buy a first home, the distribution is not a qualified distribution.

The first $10,000 of the distribution is treated as a return of his regular contributions ($2,000 in each year 1999 through 2003). This amount is returned tax free.

The next $60,000 is a return of the conversion contribution made in 1998 that was includible in income in 1998, 1999, 2000, and 2001. This amount is not includible in income.

The next $20,000 is a return of the conversion contribution made in 1998 that was not includible in income in 2004. This amount is returned tax free.

The last $80,000 distributed is the earnings on the contributions. This amount must be included in Justin's gross income for 2004 and is subject to the 10% additional tax on early distributions unless an exception applies.

Am I required to take distributions when I reach age 70½? You are not required to take distributions from your Roth IRA at any age. The minimum distribution rules that apply to traditional IRAs do not apply to Roth IRAs while the owner is alive. However, after the death of a Roth IRA owner, certain of the minimum distribution rules that apply to traditional IRAs also apply to Roth IRAs.

Can I use my Roth IRA to satisfy minimum distribution requirements for traditional IRAs? No. Nor can you use distributions from traditional IRAs for required distributions from Roth IRAs. See Distributions to beneficiaries, later.

Distributions After Owner's Death

If a Roth IRA owner dies, the minimum distribution rules that apply to traditional IRAs apply to Roth IRAs as though the Roth IRA owner died before his or her required beginning date. See When Can I Withdraw or Use IRA Assets? in chapter 1.

Distributions to beneficiaries. Generally, the entire interest in the Roth IRA must be distributed by the end of the fifth calendar year after the year of the owner's death unless the interest is payable to a designated beneficiary over the life or life expectancy of the designated beneficiary. (See When Must I Withdraw IRA Assets? (Required Distributions) in chapter 1.) If paid as an annuity, it must be payable over a period not greater than the designated beneficiary's life expectancy and distributions must begin before the end of the calendar year following the year of death. Distributions from another Roth IRA cannot be substituted for these distributions unless the other Roth IRA was inherited from the same decedent.

If the sole beneficiary is the spouse, he or she can either delay distributions until the decedent would have reached age 70½, or treat the Roth IRA as his or her own.

Aggregation with other Roth IRAs. A beneficiary can aggregate an inherited Roth IRA with another Roth IRA maintained by the beneficiary only if the beneficiary either inherited the other Roth IRA from the same decedent, or was the spouse of the decedent and the sole beneficiary of the Roth IRA and elects to treat it as his or her own IRA.

Distributions that are not qualified distributions. If a distribution to a beneficiary is not a qualified distribution, it is generally includible in the beneficiary's gross income in the same manner as it would have been included in the owner's income had it been distributed to the IRA owner when he or she was alive.

If the owner of a Roth IRA who is including the conversion of a 1998 distribution under the 4-year rule dies before all amounts are included in gross income, all remaining amounts are included in the IRA owner's gross income for the year of death. Consequently, beneficiaries generally receive distributions of conversion contributions tax free, provided the distributions are made after the end of the 5-year period discussed under What Are Qualified Distributions, earlier. To determine the 5-year period, count the time the Roth IRA was held by the owner and the beneficiary. There is a special rule if the spouse is the sole beneficiary of the IRA. See Death of Roth IRA owner during 4-year period under Can I Move Amounts Into a Roth IRA, earlier.

If the owner of a Roth IRA dies before the end of the 5-year period discussed earlier under What Are Qualified Distributions, or the 5-year period starting with the year of a conversion contribution, each type of contribution is divided among multiple beneficiaries according to the pro-rata share of each. See Ordering Rules for Distributions, earlier.

Example. When Ms. Hubbard died in 2001, her Roth IRA contained regular contributions of $4,000, a conversion contribution of $10,000 that was made in 1998, and earnings of $2,000. No distributions had been made from her IRA. She had no basis in and did not elect to pay the tax on the entire conversion contribution in 1998.

When she established her IRA, she named each of her 4 children as equal beneficiaries. Each child will receive one-fourth of each type of contribution and one-fourth of the earnings. An immediate distribution of $4,000 to each child will be treated as $1,000 from regular contributions, $2,500 from conversion contributions, and $500 from earnings.

In this case, because the distributions are made before the end of the 5-year period, each beneficiary includes $500 in income for 2001. The 10% additional tax on early distributions does not apply because the distribution was made to the beneficiaries as a result of the death of the IRA owner.

The $2,500 not previously included in Ms. Hubbard's gross income under the 4-year rule is included in gross income on her final return.

Basis of distributed amounts. The basis of property distributed from a Roth IRA is its fair market value (FMV) on the date of distribution, whether or not the distribution is a qualified distribution.

3. Simplified Employee Pension (SEP)

Important Changes for 2002

Increase in limits on elective deferrals under a SEP-IRA. In general, the limit on elective deferrals made on your behalf for 2002 that represent a reduction in your salary under a SEP-IRA cannot be more than $11,000 (up from $10,500 for 2001). For more information, see What Is a Salary Reduction Arrangement, in this chapter.

Increase in overall limits on SEP-IRA contributions. For 2002, your employer can contribute to your SEP-IRA up to the lesser of 15% of your compensation or $30,000 (up from $25,500 in 2001). For more information, see What Is a Salary Reduction Arrangement, in this chapter.

Additional elective deferrals under a SEP-IRA for persons 50 and older. For contributions made after December 31, 2001, additional elective deferrals can be contributed to your salary reduction arrangement SEP-IRA if:

- You are 50 or older, and
- No other elective deferrals can be made for you to the plan for the year because of limits or restrictions, such as the regular annual limit.

See What Is a Salary Reduction Arrangement, in this chapter.

Credit for salary reduction contributions. For tax years beginning after December 31, 2001, if you are an eligible individual, you may be able to claim a credit for a percentage of your qualified retirement savings contributions, such as salary reduction contributions to your SEP. To be eligible, you must be at least 18 years old as of the end of the year, and you cannot be a student or an individual for whom someone else claims a personal exemption. Also, your adjusted gross income (AGI) must be below a certain amount. Adjusted gross income is the amount from your Form 1040 line 33 or Form 1040A line 19.

For more information, see Publication 553, Highlights of 2001 Tax Changes.

Introduction

Employers, including self-employed individuals, can set up simplified employee pension (SEP) plans. A SEP plan allows an employer to make contributions toward employees' retirement, and, if the employer is self-employed, his or her own retirement, without becoming involved in more complex retirement plans.

A self-employed individual is an employee for SEP purposes. He or she is also the employer. Even if the self-employed individual is the only qualifying employee, he or she can have an IRA under a SEP plan (SEP-IRA).

This chapter focuses on the rules affecting employees. For information on the rules affecting employers, see Publication 560.

What Is a SEP?

A simplified employee pension (SEP) is a written arrangement (a plan) that allows an employer to make deductible contributions for the benefit of participating employees. The contributions are made to individual retirement arrangements (IRAs) set up for participants in the plan. Traditional IRAs set up under a SEP plan are referred to in this publication as SEP-IRAs. For more information, see Publication 560, Retirement Plans for Small Business.

How Much Can Be Contributed on My Behalf?

The SEP rules permit an employer to contribute to each participating employee's SEP-IRA up to 15% of the employee's compensation or $35,000 for 2001 ($40,000 for 2002), whichever is less. Because only the first $170,000 for 2001 ($200,000 for 2002) of compensation is usually considered, the limit is actually the lesser of 15% of compensation or $25,500 for 2001 ($30,000 for 2002). These contributions are funded by the employer.

An employer who signs a SEP agreement does not have to make any contribution to the SEP-IRAs that are set up. But, if the employer does make contributions, the contributions must be based on a written allocation formula and must not discriminate in favor of highly compensated employees (defined in Publication 560).

Figuring the 15% Limit

For purposes of determining the 15% limit, compensation is generally limited to $170,000 for 2001 ($200,000 for 2002), not including your employer's contribution to your SEP-IRA.

Example. Barry's nonunion employer has a SEP for its employees. Barry's compensation for 2001, before his employer's contribution to his SEP-IRA, was $180,000. Because the 15% limit is less than the $35,000 limit, Barry's employer can contribute up to $25,500 (15% × $170,000) to Barry's SEP-IRA.

Deduction Limit for a Self-Employed Person

If you are self-employed and contribute to your own SEP-IRA, special rules apply when figuring your maximum deduction for these contributions.

Determining your compensation. For purposes of the 15% limit on contributions, discussed above, your compensation is your net earnings from self-employment, defined later. Note that, for SEP purposes, your net earnings (compensation) must take into account your deduction for contributions to your own SEP-IRA. Because your deduction amount and your net earnings amount are each dependent on the other, this adjustment presents a problem.

To solve this problem, you must use a reduced contribution rate to figure your maximum deduction. Use the following worksheets to find this reduced contribution rate and your maximum deduction. Make no reduction to the contribution rate for any common-law employees.

Worksheet 3–1. Self-Employed Person's Reduced Contribution Rate

1) Plan contribution rate as a decimal (for example, 10½% would be 0.105)	______
2) Rate in line 1 plus one (for example, 0.105 plus one would be 1.105)	______
3) Reduced contribution rate as a decimal. (Divide line 1 by line 2.)	______

Worksheet 3–2. Self-Employed Person's Maximum Deductible Contribution

Step 1 Enter your net earnings from line 3, Schedule C-EZ (Form 1040), line 31, Schedule C (Form 1040), line 36, Schedule F (Form 1040), or line 15a, Schedule K-1 (Form 1065) plus any elective contributions or deferrals described under Net earnings from self-employment, later	$
Step 2 Enter your deduction for self-employment tax from line 27, Form 1040	$
Step 3 Subtract Step 2 from Step 1 and enter the result	$
Step 4 Enter your rate from the Self-Employed Person's Reduced Contribution Rate Worksheet
Step 5 Multiply Step 3 by Step 4 and enter the result	$
Step 6 Multiply $170,000 for 2001 ($200,000 for 2002) by your plan contribution rate. Enter the result but not more than $35,000 for 2001 ($40,000 for 2002)	$
Step 7 Enter the smaller of Step 5 or Step 6. This is your maximum deductible contribution.	$

Example. You are a sole proprietor and have employees. The terms of your plan provide that you contribute 10½% (.105) of your compensation, and 10½% of your common-law employees' compensation. Your net earnings from line 31, Schedule C (Form 1040) is $200,000. In figuring this amount, you deducted your common-law employees' compensation of $100,000 and contributions for them of $10,500 (10½% x $100,000). This net earnings amount is now reduced to $192,337 by subtracting your self-employment tax deduction of $7,663. You figure your reduced contribution rate and maximum deductible contributions as shown on Filled-in Worksheet 3–1 and Filled-in Worksheet 3–2.

Filled-in Worksheet 3–1. Example of Self-Employed Person's Reduced Contribution Rate

1) Plan contribution rate as a decimal (for example, 10½% would be 0.105)	0.105
2) Rate in line 1 plus one, (for example, 0.105 plus one would be 1.105)	1.105
3) Reduced contribution rate as a decimal. (Divide line 1 by line 2.)	0.095

Filled-in Worksheet 3–2. Example of Self-Employed Person's Maximum Deductible Contribution

Step 1 Enter your net earnings from line 3, Schedule C-EZ (Form 1040), line 31, Schedule C (Form 1040), line 36, Schedule F (Form 1040), or line 15a, Schedule K-1 (Form 1065) plus any elective contributions or deferrals described under Net earnings from self-employment, later	$200,000
Step 2 Enter your deduction for self-employment tax from line 27, Form 1040	$ 7,663
Step 3 Subtract Step 2 from Step 1 and enter the result	$192,337
Step 4 Enter your rate from the Self-Employed Person's Reduced Contribution Rate Worksheet	0.095
Step 5 Multiply Step 3 by Step 4 and enter the result	$ 18,272
Step 6 Multiply $170,000 for 2001 ($200,000 for 2002) by your plan contribution rate. Enter the result but not more than $35,000 for 2001 ($40,000 for 2002)	$ 17,850
Step 7 Enter the smaller of Step 5 or Step 6. This is your maximum deductible contribution	$ 17,850

Net earnings from self-employment. For SEP purposes, your net earnings are your gross income from your business minus allowable deductions for that business. Allowable deductions include contributions to your employees' SEP-IRAs. You also take into account the deduction allowed for one-half of your self-employment tax, and the deduction for contributions to your own SEP-IRA.

What to include. Include the following items in your net earnings.

1) Foreign earned income and housing cost amounts.
2) If you are a partner, your distributive share of partnership income or loss (other than separately treated items such as capital gains and losses).
3) If you are a limited partner, guaranteed payments for services to or for the partnership.
4) Elective contributions or deferrals under any of the following plans.
   a) 401(k) plans.
   b) 403(b) plans (tax-sheltered annuities).
   c) SEP plans (salary reduction arrangements).
   d) Savings incentive match plans for employees (SIMPLE plans).
   e) Cafeteria plans.
   f) 457 plans (plans of state and local governments and certain tax-exempt organizations).

What not to include. Do not include the following items in your net earnings.

1) Tax-free items (or deductions related to them).
2) If you are a limited partner, distributions of income or loss.

Time Limit for Contributions

To deduct contributions for a year, the employer must make the contributions by the due date (including extensions) of the employer's return for the year.

Overall Limit—Employer With Defined Contribution and SEP Plans

If an employer contributes to a defined contribution retirement plan (a plan under which an individual account is set up for each participant), annual additions to an account are limited to the lesser of (1) $35,000 for 2001 ($40,000 for 2002) or (2) 25% of the participant's compensation. Moreover, for purposes of these limits, contributions to more than one such plan must be added. Since a SEP is considered a defined contribution plan for purposes of these limits, employer contributions to a SEP must be added to other contributions to defined contribution plans.

Are My Employer's Contributions Taxable?

Your employer's contributions to your SEP-IRA are excluded from your income rather than deducted from it. This means that, unless there are excess contributions, you do not include any contributions in your gross income; nor do you deduct any of them.

Your employer's contributions to your SEP-IRA should not be included in your wages on your Form W−2 unless there are contributions under a salary reduction arrangement (explained later).

Excess employer contributions. If your employer contributes more than is allowed, you must include the excess in your gross income, without any offsetting deduction.

Excess employer contributions you withdraw before your return is due. If your employer contributes more to your SEP-IRA than 15% of your compensation or $35,000 for 2001 ($40,000 for 2002), whichever is less, you will not have to pay the 6% tax (discussed in chapter 1 under Excess Contributions) on it if you withdraw this excess amount (and any interest or other income earned on it) from your SEP-IRA before the date for filing your tax return, including extensions. However, you may have to pay an additional 10% tax (discussed in chapter 1 under Early Distributions) on the early distribution of the interest or other income earned on the excess contribution.

Excess employer contributions you withdraw after your return is due. If employer contributions for the year are $35,000 for 2001 ($40,000 for 2002) or less, you can withdraw any excess employer contributions from your SEP-IRA after the due date for filing your tax return, including extensions, free of the 10% tax on early distributions, discussed earlier. However, the excess contribution is subject to the annual 6% excise tax. Also, you may have to pay the additional 10% tax on the early distribution of interest or other income earned on the excess contribution.

Can I Contribute to My SEP-IRA?

You can make contributions to your SEP-IRA independent of employer SEP contributions. You can deduct them the same way as contributions to a regular IRA. However, your deduction may be reduced or eliminated because, as a participant in a SEP, you are covered by an employer retirement plan. See How Much Can I Deduct? in chapter 1.

Excess contributions you make. For information on excess contributions you make to your SEP-IRA independent of employer SEP contributions, see What Acts Result in Penalties? in chapter 1.

Self-employed individuals. If you are self-employed (a sole proprietor or partner) and have a SEP plan, take your deduction for employer contributions to your own SEP-IRA on line 29, Form 1040. If you also make deductible contributions to your SEP-IRA (or any other IRA you own) independent of your employer contributions, take your deduction on line 23, Form 1040.

For more employer information on SEP-IRAs, get Publication 560.

What Is a Salary Reduction Arrangement?

A salary reduction arrangement is an arrangement under which you can elect to have your employer contribute part of your pay to your SEP-IRA. Only the remaining portion of your pay is currently taxable. The tax on the contribution is deferred. The amount contributed under the arrangement is called an elective deferral.

Limits on deferrals. In general, elective deferrals on your behalf to all retirement plans cannot be more than $10,500 for 2001 ($11,000 for 2002). This limit applies only to the amounts that represent a reduction from your salary, not to any contributions from employer funds.

For contributions made after December 31, 2001, additional elective deferrals can be contributed to your salary reduction arrangement SEP-IRA if:

- You are 50 or older, and
- No other elective deferrals can be made for you to the plan for the year because of limits or restrictions, such as the regular annual limit.

The most that can be contributed in additional elective deferrals to your salary reduction arrangement SEP-IRA is the lesser of the following two amounts.

1) $1,000 for 2002, or
2) Your compensation for the year reduced by your other elective deferrals for the year.

The additional deferrals are not subject to any other contribution limit and are not taken into account in applying other contribution limits. The additional deferrals are not subject to the nondiscrimination rules as long as all eligible participants are allowed to make them. For more information, see Publication 553, Highlights of 2001 Tax Changes.

Excess deferrals. Excess elective deferrals not withdrawn by April 15 are considered regular IRA contributions and are subject to the IRA contribution limits.

Overall limits on SEP contributions. Contributions, including elective deferrals, made by your employer to the SEP-IRA are subject to the overall limit of 15% of your compensation (generally up to $170,000 for 2001 ($200,000 for 2002)) or $35,000 for 2001 ($40,000 for 2002), whichever is less. In effect, the overall limit is $25,500 for 2001 (15% x $170,000), and is $30,000 for 2002 (15% x $200,000).

When Can I Withdraw or Use Assets?

Your employer cannot prohibit distributions from your SEP-IRA. Also, your employer cannot condition contributions to a SEP-IRA on your keeping any part of them in the account.

Distributions (withdrawals) from a SEP-IRA are subject to traditional IRA rules. For information on these rules, including tax treatment of distributions, tax-free rollovers, required distributions, and income tax withholding, see Can I Move Retirement Plan Assets? and When Can I Withdraw or Use IRA Assets? in chapter 1.

Savings Incentive Match Plans for Employees (SIMPLE)

Important Changes for 2002

Increase in limit on salary reduction contributions under a SIMPLE. For 2002, salary reduction contributions that your employer can make on your behalf under a SIMPLE plan are increased to $7,000 (up from $6,500 in 2001). For more information, see How Much Can Be Contributed on My Behalf? in this chapter.

Additional salary reduction contributions to SIMPLE IRAs for persons 50 and older. For contributions made after December 31, 2001, additional salary reduction contributions can be made to your SIMPLE IRA if:

- You are 50 or older, and
- No other salary reduction contributions can be made for you to the plan for the year because of limits or restrictions, such as the regular annual limit.

See How Much Can Be Contributed on My Behalf? in this chapter.

Rollovers from SIMPLE IRAs. For distributions after December 31, 2001, you may be able to roll over, tax free, a distribution from your SIMPLE IRA to a qualified plan, a tax-sheltered annuity (section 403(b) plan), or deferred compensation plan of a state or local government (section 457 plan). For more information, see Two-year rule in this chapter.

Self-employment earnings for purposes of SIMPLEs. Beginning after 2001, for purposes of the limit on deductions for contributions to a self-employed person's SIMPLE IRA, net earnings from self-employment include services performed while claiming exemption from self-employment tax as a member of a group conscientiously opposed to social security benefits. For more information, see Self-employed individual compensation in this chapter.

Credit for salary reduction contributions. For tax years beginning after December 31, 2001, if you are an eligible individual, you may be able to claim a credit for a percentage of your qualified retirement savings contributions, such as salary reduction contributions to your SIMPLE. To be eligible, you must be at least 18 years old as of the end of the year, and you cannot be a student or an individual for whom someone else claims a personal exemption. Also, your adjusted gross income (AGI) must be below a certain amount. Adjusted gross income is the amount from your Form 1040 line 33 or Form 1040A line 19.

For more information, see Publication 553, Highlights of 2001 Tax Changes.

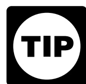
Introduction

This chapter is for employees who need information about savings incentive match plans for employees (SIMPLE plans). It explains what a SIMPLE plan is, contributions to a SIMPLE plan, and distributions from a SIMPLE plan.

Under a SIMPLE plan, SIMPLE retirement accounts for participating employees can be set up either as:

- Part of a 401(k) plan, or
- A plan using IRAs (SIMPLE IRA).

This chapter only discusses the SIMPLE plan rules that relate to SIMPLE IRAs. See Publication 560 for information on any special rules for SIMPLE plans that do not use IRAs.



If your employer maintains a SIMPLE plan, you must be notified, in writing, that you can choose the financial institution that will serve as trustee for your SIMPLE IRA and that you can roll over or transfer your SIMPLE IRA to another financial institution. See Rollovers and Transfers Exception, later.

What Is a SIMPLE Plan?

A SIMPLE plan is a tax-favored retirement plan that certain small employers (including self-employed individuals) can set up for the benefit of their employees. See Publication 560 for information on the requirements employers must satisfy to set up a SIMPLE plan.

A SIMPLE plan is a written agreement (salary reduction agreement) between you and your employer that allows you, if you are an eligible employee (including a self-employed individual), to choose to:

- Reduce your compensation by a certain percentage each pay period, and
- Have your employer contribute the salary reductions to a SIMPLE IRA on your behalf. These contributions are called salary reduction contributions.

All contributions under a SIMPLE IRA plan must be made to SIMPLE IRAs, not to any other type of IRA. The SIMPLE IRA can be an individual retirement account or an individual retirement annuity, described in chapter 1. Contributions are made on behalf of eligible employees. (See Eligible Employees, later.) Contributions are also subject to various limits. (See How Much Can Be Contributed on My Behalf, later.)

In addition to salary reduction contributions, your employer must make either matching contributions or nonelective contributions. See How Are Contributions Made, later.

Eligible Employees

You must be allowed to participate in your employer's SIMPLE plan if you:

- Received at least $5,000 in compensation from your employer during any 2 years prior to the current year, and
- Are reasonably expected to receive at least $5,000 in compensation during the calendar year for which contributions are made.

Self-employed individual. For SIMPLE plan purposes, the term employee includes a self-employed individual who received earned income.

Excludable employees. Your employer can exclude the following employees from participating in the SIMPLE plan.

- Employees whose retirement benefits are covered by a collective bargaining agreement (union contract).
- Employees who are nonresident aliens and received no earned income from sources within the United States.
- Employees who would not have been eligible employees if an acquisition, disposition, or similar transaction had not occurred during the year.

Compensation. For purposes of the SIMPLE plan rules, your compensation for a year generally includes the following amounts.

- Wages, tips, and other pay from your employer that is subject to income tax withholding.
- Deferred amounts elected under any 401(k) plans, 403(b) plans, government (section 457(b)) plans, SEP plans, and SIMPLE plans.

Self-employed individual compensation. For purposes of the SIMPLE plan rules, if you are self-employed, your compensation for a year is your net earnings from self-employment (line 4, Section A of Schedule SE (Form 1040)) before subtracting any contributions made to a SIMPLE IRA on your behalf.

Beginning after 2001, for purposes of the limit on deductions for contributions to a self-employed person's SEP-IRA, net earnings from self-employment include services performed while claiming exemption from self-employment tax as a member of a group conscientiously opposed to social security benefits.

How Are Contributions Made?

Contributions under a salary reduction agreement are called salary reduction contributions. They are made on your behalf by your employer. Your employer must also make either matching contributions or nonelective contributions.

Salary reduction contributions. During the 60-day period before the beginning of any year, and during the 60-day period before you are eligible, you can choose salary reduction contributions expressed either as a percentage of compensation, or as a specific dollar amount (if your employer offers this choice). You can choose to cancel the election at any time during the year.

Your employer cannot place restrictions on the contributions amount (such as by limiting the contributions percentage), except to comply with the salary reduction contributions limit, discussed under Salary reduction contributions, later.

Matching contributions. Unless your employer chooses to make nonelective contributions, your employer must make contributions equal to the salary reduction contributions you choose (elect), but only up to certain limits. See How Much Can Be Contributed on My Behalf, later. These contributions are in addition to the salary reduction contributions and must be made to the SIMPLE IRAs of all eligible employees (defined earlier) who chose salary reductions. These contributions are referred to as matching contributions.

Matching contributions on behalf of a self-employed individual are not treated as salary reduction contributions.

Nonelective contributions. Instead of making matching contributions, your employer may be able to choose to make nonelective contributions on behalf of all eligible employees. These nonelective contributions must be made on behalf of each eligible employee who has at least $5,000 of compensation from your employer, whether or not the employee chose salary reductions.

One of the requirements your employer must satisfy is notifying the employees that the election was made. For other requirements that your employer must satisfy, see Publication 560.

How Much Can Be Contributed on My Behalf?

The limits on contributions to a SIMPLE IRA vary with the type of contribution that is made.

Salary reduction contributions. Salary reduction contributions (employee-chosen contributions) that your employer can make on your behalf under a SIMPLE plan are limited to $6,500 for 2001 ($7,000 for 2002).

If you are a participant in any other employer plans during 2001 and you have elective salary reductions or deferred compensation under those plans, the salary reduction contributions under the SIMPLE plan also are included in the annual limit of $10,500 for 2001 ($11,000 for 2002) on exclusions of salary reductions and other elective deferrals.

If the other plan is a deferred compensation plan of a state or local government or a tax-exempt organization, the limit on elective deferrals is $8,500 for 2001 ($11,000 for 2002).

You, not your employer, are responsible for monitoring compliance with these limits.

For contributions made after December 31, 2001, additional elective deferrals can be contributed to your SIMPLE if:

- You are 50 or older, and
- No other elective deferrals can be made for you to the plan for the year because of limits or restrictions, such as the regular annual limit.

The most that can be contributed in additional elective deferrals to your SIMPLE is the lesser of the following two amounts.

1) $500 for 2002, or
2) Your compensation for the year reduced by your other elective deferrals for the year.

The additional deferrals are not subject to any other contribution limit and are not taken into account in applying other contribution limits. The additional deferrals are not subject to the nondiscrimination rules as long as all eligible participants are allowed to make them.

Matching employer contributions. Generally, your employer must make matching contributions to your SIMPLE IRA in an amount equal to your salary reduction contributions. These matching contributions cannot be more than 3% of your compensation for the calendar year. See Matching contributions less than 3%, later.

Example 1. In 2001, Joshua was a participant in his employer's SIMPLE plan. His compensation, before SIMPLE plan contributions, was $41,600, or $800 per week. Instead of taking it all in cash, Joshua elected to have 12.5% of his weekly pay ($100) contributed to his SIMPLE IRA. For the full year, Joshua's salary reduction contributions were $5,200, which is less than the $6,500 limit on these contributions.

Under the plan, Joshua's employer was required to make matching contributions to Joshua's SIMPLE IRA. Because his employer's matching contributions must equal Joshua's salary reductions, but cannot be more than 3% of his compensation (before salary reductions) for the year, his employer's matching contribution was limited to $1,248 (3% of $41,600).

Example 2. Assume the same facts as in Example 1, except that Joshua's compensation for the year was $240,000 and he chose to have 2.708% of his weekly pay contributed to his SIMPLE IRA.

In this example, Joshua's salary reduction contributions for the year (2.708% × $240,000) were equal to the 2001 limit for salary reduction contributions ($6,500). Because 3% of Joshua's compensation ($7,200) is more than the amount his employer was required to match ($6,500), his employer's matching contributions were limited to $6,500.

In this example, total contributions made on Joshua's behalf for the year were $13,000, the maximum contributions permitted under a SIMPLE IRA for 2001.

Matching contributions less than 3%. Your employer can reduce the 3% limit on matching contributions for a calendar year, but only if:

1) The limit is not reduced below 1%,
2) The limit is not reduced for more than 2 years out of the 5-year period that ends with (and includes) the year for which the election is effective, and
3) Employees are notified of the reduced limit within a reasonable period of time before the 60-day election period during which they can enter into salary reduction agreements.

For purposes of applying the rule in item (2) in determining whether the limit was reduced below 3% for the year, any year before the first year in which your employer (or a predecessor employer) maintains a SIMPLE IRA plan will be treated as a year for which the limit was 3%. If your employer chooses to make nonelective contributions for a year, that year also will be treated as a year for which the limit was 3%.

Nonelective employer contributions. If your employer chooses to make nonelective contributions, instead of matching contributions, to each eligible employee's SIMPLE IRA, contributions must be 2% of your compensation for the entire year. For 2001, only $170,000 (for 2002, only $200,000) of your compensation can be taken into account to figure the contribution limit.

Your employer can substitute the 2% nonelective contribution for the matching contribution for a year, only if:

1) Eligible employees are notified that a 2% nonelective contribution will be made instead of a matching contribution, and
2) This notice is provided within a reasonable period during which employees can enter into salary reduction agreements.

Example 3. Assume the same facts as in Example 2, except that Joshua's employer chose to make nonelective contributions instead of matching contributions. Because his employer's nonelective contributions are limited to 2% of up to $170,000 of Joshua's compensation, his employer's contribution to Joshua's SIMPLE IRA was limited to $3,400 for 2001. In this example, total contributions made on Joshua's behalf for the year were $9,900 (Joshua's salary reductions of $6,500 plus his employer's contribution of $3,400).

When Can I Withdraw or Use Assets?

Generally, the same distribution (withdrawal) rules that apply to traditional IRAs apply to SIMPLE IRAs. These rules are discussed in chapter 1.

Your employer cannot restrict you from taking distributions from a SIMPLE IRA.

Are Distributions Taxable?

Generally, distributions from a SIMPLE IRA are fully taxable as ordinary income. If the distribution is an early distribution (discussed in chapter 1), it may be subject to the additional tax on early distributions. See Additional Tax on Early Distributions, later.

Rollovers and Transfers Exception

Generally, rollovers and trustee-to-trustee transfers are not taxable distributions.

Two-year rule. To qualify as a tax-free rollover (or a tax-free trustee-to-trustee transfer), a rollover distribution (or a transfer) made from a SIMPLE IRA during the 2-year period beginning on the date on which you first participated in your employer's SIMPLE plan must be contributed (or transferred) to another SIMPLE IRA. The 2-year period begins on the first day on which contributions made by your employer are deposited in your SIMPLE IRA.

After the 2-year period, amounts in a SIMPLE IRA can be rolled over or transferred tax free to an IRA other than a SIMPLE IRA.

For distributions after December 31, 2001, after the 2-year period, you can also roll over a distribution from your SIMPLE IRA to a qualified plan, a tax-sheltered annuity (section 403(b) plan), or deferred compensation plan of a state or local government (section 457 plan).

Additional Tax on Early Distributions

The additional tax on early distributions (discussed in chapter 1) applies to SIMPLE IRAs. If a distribution is an early distribution and occurs during the 2-year period following the date on which you first participated in your employer's SIMPLE plan, the additional tax on early distributions is increased from 10% to 25%.

Also, if a rollover distribution (or transfer) from a SIMPLE IRA does not satisfy the 2-year rule, and is otherwise an early distribution, the additional tax imposed because of the early distribution is increased from 10% to 25% of the amount distributed.

5. How To Get Tax Help

You can get help with unresolved tax issues, order free publications and forms, ask tax questions, and get more information from the IRS in several ways. By selecting the method that is best for you, you will have quick and easy access to tax help.

Contacting your Taxpayer Advocate. If you have attempted to deal with an IRS problem unsuccessfully, you should contact your Taxpayer Advocate.

The Taxpayer Advocate represents your interests and concerns within the IRS by protecting your rights and resolving problems that have not been fixed through normal channels. Evaluating the quality of our telephone services. To ensure that IRS representatives give accurate, courteous, and professional answers, we evaluate the quality of our telephone services in several ways.

- A second IRS representative sometimes monitors live telephone calls. That person only evaluates the IRS assistor and does not keep a record of any taxpayer's name or tax identification number.
- We sometimes record telephone calls to evaluate IRS assistors objectively. We hold these recordings no longer than one week and use them only to measure the quality of assistance.
- We value our customers' opinions. Throughout this year, we will be surveying our customers for their opinions on our service.

Walk-in. You can walk in to many post offices, libraries, and IRS offices to pick up certain forms, instructions, and publications. Some IRS offices, libraries, grocery stores, copy centers, city and county governments, credit unions, and office supply stores have an extensive collection of products available to print from a CD-ROM or photocopy from reproducible proofs. Also, some IRS offices and libraries have the Internal Revenue Code, regulations, Internal Revenue Bulletins, and Cumulative Bulletins available for research purposes.

Comprehensive Example
Determining Your Traditional IRA Deduction and the Taxable Portion of Your Social Security Benefits

John Black is married and files a joint return. He had 2001 wages of $53,500. His wife did not work in 2001. He also received social security benefits of $7,000 and made a $2,000 contribution to his traditional IRA for the year. He had no foreign income, no tax-exempt interest, and no adjustments to income on lines 24 through 31 on his Form 1040. He participated in a section 401(k) retirement plan at work.

John completes Worksheets 1 and 2. Worksheet 2 shows that his 2001 IRA deduction is $710. He must either withdraw the contributions that are more than the deduction (the $1,290 shown on line 8 of Worksheet 2), or treat the excess amounts as nondeductible contributions (in which case he must complete Form 8606 and attach it to his Form 1040).

The completed worksheets that follow show how John figured his modified AGI to determine the IRA deduction and the taxable social security benefits to report on his Form 1040.
