

Comptroller of the Currency
Administrator of National Banks

US Department of the Treasury

Biographies

Michael L. Brosnan Deputy Comptroller for Large Banks

Michael L. Brosnan was named Deputy Comptroller for Large Banks at the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency (OCC) in April 2008.

In this role, Mr. Brosnan is responsible for line supervision of a group of large banks, ensuring that risk based-strategies and staffing are effectively aligned and executed.

Mr. Brosnan rejoined the OCC from Bank of America where he served as the Enterprise Operational Risk Executive responsible for building the framework for managing operational risk across the enterprise. He also served as the risk manager for the Global Technology and Operations, Chief Administrative Office, and Supplier Risk Management organizations for the bank.

Previously, Mr. Brosnan served as Compliance Executive for Bank of America Card Services where he ensured the development, implementation, and assessment of internal processes to ensure compliance with applicable banking laws and regulations. Prior to that assignment he oversaw the Operational Risk Management division of MBNA America where he was responsible for identifying operational risks, implementing measures to prevent or mitigate losses, and monitoring and reporting on outcomes and risk levels.

Before joining MBNA (which became Bank of America) in 2004, Mr. Brosnan spent 21 years with the OCC, most recently as Examiner-in-Charge for Bank of America. In 2003, he was named Senior National Bank Examiner, the highest honor and designation available to bank examiners.

During previous roles at the OCC, Mike served as Deputy Comptroller for Risk Evaluation as well as Director of Treasury and Market Risk. He also served as Chairman of the OCC's National Risk Committee and OCC's Steering Committee representative on the President's Working Group for Financial Markets

He first joined the OCC in 1983 as a national bank examiner in Miami. He holds a Bachelor's and a Master's degree in Business Administration from Lynchburg College in Virginia. Mike has also earned the Chartered Financial Analyst designation.

