Dr. Daniel H. Duffy, Sr.

Dear Nancy,

I am a retired air force officer, 21 years SAC nuclear bombers.

I am also a fully active 72 year old small town family doctor with over thirty years experience as such.

The last thing this country needs is more laws, especially from the medical monopoly, and ESPECIALLY regarding food or vitamins and minerals.

The consensus of medicine is driven by the drug and chemical interests, run by white collar criminals and has nothing to do with the public health. Without government interference and tax supported quack research this country would be in a lot better shape than it is presently in.

My suggestion is to keep the government's hands out of the nutritional field and stop trying to solve everybody's problems. History demonstrates that the free market solves those problems a lot better than government employees and politicians, or have you not read that history?

I suggest you read Bastiat's essay, That Which Is Seen and That Which Is Unseen, every government employee, do-gooder and politician should be familiar with that essay. It explains to you that EVERY time the government sticks its fingers into something, things get worse.

Governments cannot solve problems effectively, only a free people, each working in his/her own interest without abusing their neighbor can do that.
