General Comment:No, I do not think that adding the People's Republic of China to the list of countries eligible to export processed poultry and poultry products to the United States is a good idea. That is where Avian Flu has started and is still prevalent and at the same time, the US government is trying to lock down on the small producers of poultry, making it impossible for the small farmer to even raise animals on his own property. not to mention attempting to enforce government IDs on all other small animal livestock farms in the country.
