The United States is a country ruled by law. Both document and on-site reviews conducted by FSIS concluded that the requirements of China's poultry inspection laws and regulations and the implementation of poultry processing standards and procedures are equivalent to those required by the United States. We believe that the conclusion is true to the fact. Some negative views held by some American citizens are groundless. From the point view of a Chinese citizen, I think their worries have gone to extremes and are pointless. Firstly, American citizens should have the confidence in the evaluation results drawn by their own government; secondly, American citizens are suggested to try to learn more about China in every respect, thus to abandon the obsolete ideas that do not reflect the real situations in China; thirdly, China's poultry products have been accepted by Japan, Singapore, Malaysia, South Korea, EU, etc. Therefore, as a staff member from a Chinese poultry establishment, I have full confidence in Chinese processed poultry products to be safe enough to meet relevant US requirements.
