General Comment: I think it is terrible for the government to allow the USDA to go around a brand new law supported by thousands of Americans, congress and the president that stopped the slaughter of horses in America for consumption in other countries. This practise is inhumane and poorly managed as many horses are still alive and conscious as they are hung by their legs and processed for meats. Imagine your family pet once loved, left all alone with people they don't know, confused, scared and treated cruelly until their painful death finally takes them. Horses in America belong in our pastures and fields of competition, not in our slaughter houses and on our dinner plates. Please do not allow this regulation to undermine the new law that banishes horse slaughter.
