General Comment: I am in support of the FSIS proposed rule to include Chile in the list of countries eligible to export poultry and poultry products to the United States. I believe there is great value and benefits in promoting fair and honest international poultry trade between the US and Chile. Obviously, my support is under the assumption that importation of poultry products from Chile will meet established requirements such as USDA inspection, acceptable veterinary health status, and that this trade will be consistent with international agreements.

I am a poultry veterinarian and my family and I are regular consumers of poultry products. Therefore, I appreciate the efforts of our official agencies to promote and protect food safety for consumers and the health of the US poultry operations.
