President Announces Four Appointments to The Advisory Council on Historic Preservation

WASHINGTON, D.C. – President George W. Bush has announced his appointment of four individuals to the Advisory Council on Historic Preservation (ACHP).

New appointments to the ACHP are Chairman John L. Berrey of the Quapaw Tribe of Oklahoma, and Mayor Bill Haslam of Knoxville, Tennessee. Berrey will serve as the Native American/Native Hawaiian organization member, and Haslam as the mayor member, on the 23-person council.

Reappointed to the ACHP for second four-year terms are Mark A. Sadd of Charleston, West Virginia, and John G. Williams, III, of Seattle, Washington. Sadd was renamed to a public member position and Williams to an expert member position on the ACHP.

Terms at the ACHP generally run for four years, with variations for certain member positions that hold the position provisionally depending upon being incumbents of certain other offices (mayors, governors, cabinet secretaries, Architect of the Capitol, president of the National Trust for Historic Preservation, etc.)

John L. Berrey is a member of both the Quapaw Tribe and Osage Nation. He serves as chairman of the Quapaw Tribal Business Committee and the Downstream Development Authority. He is also a fourth-generation rancher on the family's original allotment on the Osage Reservation located north of Tulsa, Oklahoma. Since graduating from the University of Arkansas with a degree in journalism in 1991, Berrey has held a number of business positions, including several with the Quapaw Tribe.

Bill Haslam began his first term as mayor of Knoxville in December 2003. Previously, he was president and director of Pilot Corp., a Knoxville-based company operating convenience stores and travel centers nationwide. He also is the former chief executive officer of SAKS Direct, the e-commerce and catalogue division of Saks Fifth Avenue. His historic preservation accomplishments include leading an effort to renovate the historic Bijou Theater and reopen the Tennessee Theatre, working to save the S&W Cafeteria, and initiating a public planning process to create a vision for Knoxville's South Waterfront.

Mark A. Sadd is a partner with the law firm of Lewis Glasser Casey & Rollins PLLC in Charleston, West Virginia, and has practiced law since 1992. Sadd has had a professional emphasis on real property, zoning, planning, land-use law, taxation, and other matters pertaining to property issues. He is a city councilman at large for West Virginia's capital, Charleston. He is the chairman of the Federal Agency Programs Committee for the ACHP.

John G. Williams, III, is a founding partner with Hoshide Williams Architects in Seattle, Washington, and is a member of the American Institute of Architects, Seattle Chapter. For decades, he has been involved professionally and personally with historic preservation issues. Williams is currently chairman of the Washington State Governor's Advisory Council on Historic Preservation, is the national vice president of Preservation Action, and serves on the Board of Advisors of the National Alliance of Preservation Commissions, for which he is a former chairman. He is the chairman of the Communications, Education, and Outreach Committee for the ACHP.

About the ACHP: An independent federal agency, the ACHP promotes the preservation, enhancement, and productive use of our nation's historic resources, and advises the President and Congress on national historic preservation policy. It also provides a forum for influencing federal activities, programs, and policies that affect historic properties. In addition, the ACHP has a key role in carrying out the Administration's Preserve America initiative. For more information, please visit www.achp.gov.
