

Programs and Activities of the Center

The Smithsonian Botanical Art and Illustration Workshop, an international gathering held at the National Museum of Natural History every two years, will bring artists, illustrators, and scientists together to share advances in science and natural history illustration as well as encourage artistic growth and collaboration in the field of botanical arts. A week-long summit of artists with scientists will convene to explore programs and instruction in various fields and techniques. The Workshop will end with a dinner hosted by the Center to include the Workshop participants, Department scientists, as well as guests and supporters of botanical art at our partner institutions in Washington.
