United States Coast Guard
U.S. Department of Homeland Security

Coast Guard's Service to America

The U.S. Coast Guard is one of the five Armed Forces of the United States and the only military organization within the Department of Homeland Security. As the principle Federal agency responsible for maritime safety, security, and stewardship, the Coast Guard protects vital economic and security interests of the United States including the safety and security of the maritime public, our natural and economic resources, the global transportation system, and the integrity of our maritime borders.

The Coast Guard's safety, security, and stewardship missions are integrated like a tightly-knit fabric; valued for its protective durability and light weight. The Service's operational model is flexible, efficient and effective across a wide range of complex maritime scenarios. The Coast Guard's ability to field versatile platforms and personnel with broad authorities is the U.S. Government's most important strength in the maritime environment, adjacent coastal areas, and inland waterways.

Maritime Safety: The Coast Guard's maritime safety activities save lives, protect property and prevent environmental damage while preserving the U.S. economy. Our nation's prosperity relies on the balanced and sustainable use of inland, coastal, and ocean waters and resources. An efficient and resilient Marine Transportation System (MTS) forms the foundation for this prosperity and must be maintained in order to facilitate maritime mobility and protect the nation's economy. The MTS consists of 25,000 miles of inland, intra-coastal, and coastal waterways; encompasses 240 locks, 355 ports, 1,000 harbor channels, and 1,941 cargo terminals, and includes 18,000 bridges. In 2007, the Coast Guard responded to 27,090 search and rescue cases, saving over 5,000 lives.

Maritime Security: The Coast Guard protects the nation's citizens from terrorism and illegal activity in the maritime domain through the establishment and maintenance of a secure maritime border. This means exerting and safeguarding sovereignty in the nation's internal waters, ports and waterways, and coastal regions, as well as protecting vital national interests on the high seas. In 2007, the Coast Guard seized or removed a record 355,755 pounds of cocaine valued at $4.7 billion. In addition, the Coast Guard interdicted 6,336 migrants attempting to enter the United States via maritime means.

Maritime Stewardship: The nation's marine environment must be protected from the threats of pollution, environmental degradation, the spread of harmful invasive species, and the illegal harvesting of marine resources. In 2007, the Coast Guard conducted 6,366 fisheries boardings to ensure compliance with federal regulations and responded to 162 significant spills.

America's security, resilience, and economic prosperity are intrinsically linked to the oceans. Our maritime domain is vulnerable to a wide range of threats and challenges. The Coast Guard must be prepared to meet these challenges today and in the future.

- The Coast Guard looks beyond our borders to defeat threats far from our shorelines through the continual maturation of maritime security regimes, awareness, and operational capabilities.
- The Coast Guard's capabilities and authorities ensure the continued safety, security, and efficiency of the rapidly-growing global Marine Transportation System.
- The Coast Guard's broad authorities and adaptable multi-mission capabilities allow it to defeat transnational terrorists and criminals in the maritime domain.
- The Coast Guard protects America's interests in the U.S. Exclusive Economic Zone (EEZ) and Outer Continental Shelf (OCS).
- The Coast Guard provides immediately-deployable and adaptive force packages to mitigate the safety, security, and environmental impacts of incidents and catastrophic events.

In the near term, the Coast Guard will defeat these threats by recapitalizing operating assets and sustaining aging infrastructure; enhancing the Coast Guard's marine safety program; improving command and control capabilities; and establishing comprehensive intelligence and awareness regimes. Moreover, the Coast Guard's strategic modernization effort will make the service more capable of addressing these challenges through improved training, resource allocation, financial management, risk management, and unity of effort both within the Department of Homeland Security and throughout the government. Coast Guard Modernization will improve readiness management and greatly enhance mission execution.
