Comments:

These regulations are needed and long overdue. They should be enacted as soon as possible and vigorously monitored and enforced. Additional regulations are needed to require credit card companies and credit bureaus to protect consumers from identity theft. At present, the responsibility is on the consumer who has few options to protect himself. And now, these same card companies and bureaus are selling insurance to consumers to help protect them. The companies should be protecting their customers financial identities as a price of doing business.
