

Dear Dr. Henney

21 Dec 2000

I think it is a bad idea to use drugs which are now effective against disease in humans — to use such to promote growth in animals to be used as food.

Can the FDA please stop this recent practice which I fear is producing drug-resistant strains of some diseases?

If not stop, ^{their use} can the FDA at least require that such products be labeled so that the consumers can decide?

Thanks,

Dave Momeni
