

Make Summer a Nutritious and Healthy Experience for Lower Income Children

Operate A Summer Food Program

Millions of children depend on free or reduced-price school lunches and breakfasts for 9 months out of the year.

For many of those children, summer vacation does not mean "fun in the sun" but rather increased risk of hunger and developmental decline.

As government officials, you may know that children who miss school breakfast and lunch are more likely to be sick, absent or tardy, disruptive in class, and inattentive. They also score lower on achievement tests. Good nutrition is essential for learning in school.

Learning does not end when school lets out. Neither does the need for good nutrition—which is crucial for children to have safe and productive summers.

The summer food program provides an opportunity to continue a child's physical and social development while providing nutritious meals. The summer food program helps lower income children have productive summers and return to school ready to learn.

What's the next step?

Visit our website at:
www.summerfood.usda.gov

Then contact your appropriate State agency or USDA regional office.

Food that's in when school is out!

Local government can help...

The Summer Food Service Program for Children

USDA prohibits discrimination in the administration of its programs. To file a complaint, write to the Administrator, Food and Nutrition Service, 3101 Park Center Dr., Alexandria, VA 22302.

U.S. Department of Agriculture
Food and Nutrition Service
FNS-309
February 1999
Slightly revised December 2003

Everyone Wins With Summer Food!

- Low-income children have nutritious meals and organized activities.
- Low-income parents stretch food dollars and have healthy recreation for their children.
- Food service workers have summer employment.
- The government agency receives Federal money to carry out the program.

What is the summer food program?

The Summer Food Service Program for Children is a federally funded program operated nationally by the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) and administered at the State level by a State agency. The agency reimburses sponsors (such as local government) for meals served at approved feeding sites in low-income areas to children 18 years and under.

Who can sponsor the summer food program?

Schools, camps, private nonprofit organizations, and units of local government.

What is an approved feeding site?

A feeding site must be approved by the State agency as either an "open" or "enrolled" site.

An "open" site is one in which at least half the children in the area are eligible for free or reduced-price school meals.

An "enrolled" site is one in which at least half the children enrolled in the summer program are eligible for a free or reduced-price lunch.

Who can receive meals at an approved feeding site?

All children 18 years of age or under are eligible to receive free meals at an "open" site. Only enrolled children may eat at an "enrolled" site.

How does a government agency apply to be a program sponsor?

Contact the State agency and complete an application form supplied by the agency.

How are government sponsors reimbursed for the meals served?

Forms documenting how many meals were served for the month must be submitted to the State agency. There is an administering and operating rate for each meal served. The sponsor will be reimbursed at that rate or for actual cost if less than the rate.

Is there a State or local match required to receive the Federal dollars to operate a summer food program?

There is no required match. With good planning, the reimbursement rate should be enough to cover costs.

What type of meal service is required?

Meals must have the same meal components as school lunch and breakfast. Lunch and one other meal or snack may be served. Additional benefits are available for migrant sites.

Can the government agency administer the program and supervise the feeding sites without actually having to prepare the meals?

Many government agencies, such as city parks and recreation departments, have no facilities to prepare meals. Meal preparation can be subcontracted to a school or other public or private food supplier with approved meal preparation facilities. The rate for meal preparation is negotiated. If your agency is interested in this arrangement, contact the summer food State agency, or find another agency with whom to subcontract meal preparation.

