Dear Sirs:

I write to express my conviction that much more needs to be done in order to protect food and environmental safety from unforeseen effects of genetic engineering. Both exhaustive testing and mandatory labelling of all products which might potentially affect either food or the environment are imperative. The fact that testing at present is not at least overseen by federal authorities, that the unsubstantiated word of the manufacturer is sufficient, is most unsatisfactory. It should be done by responsible and qualified F.D.A. personnel.

I know that I am not alone in these opinions and I hope serious attention is being paid to this growing public concern.

Very truly yours,

Priscilla Huntington
