Dear Commissioners,

Upon review of the FDA's long-awaited policy on genetically engineered foods, I am very disappointed to learn that no labeling or pre-market safety testing will be required for such products.

I don't believe that the new policy of voluntary labeling and "consultations" with the FDA will protect me in making informed decisions when shopping for groceries.

The overwhelming majority of Americans wish to see mandatory labeling so they are able to decide for themselves about purchasing genetically engineered products. Please reconsider your policy to honor the needs of American citizens.

Sincerely,

Arie Kurtzig
