

CEQ 184

From: Jan.Adams@dfat.gov.au
Sent: Monday, September 05, 2005 6:33 PM
To: Peel, Kenneth L.; [REDACTED]
Subject: Fw: Asia-Pacific Partnership

(b)(2)

Attachments: Clean energy special NScientist030905.doc; New Scientist cover 030905.jpg

in case you haven't seen

----- Forwarded by Jan Adams/People/DFATL on 06/09/2005 08:32 AM -----

"Noel Bushnell" <bushnell@hanbush.com.au>

To <consultant@hanbush.com.au>

cc

05/09/2005 06:05 PM

Subject Asia-Pacific Partnership

Topic

TRIM File Ref

New Scientist magazine this week devotes a cover, an editorial and six pages to the Asia-Pacific Partnership on Clean Development and Climate. The cover line states: "How George Bush got it right about climate change". Attached is also the lead article from the special section, so you can get the tone of the coverage. Fred Pearce is nowhere in sight and the reportage is sceptical as usual but optimistic for a change. Given the magazine's strident opposition to all things Bush and its constant bagging of Australia's position, this represents a major turnaround. Not exactly full-blooded support but a welcome fresh look.

Noel Bushnell

Hannagan Bushnell

Level 5, 95 Queen Street, Melbourne 3000

Office: +61 3 9642 3611

Mobile: +61 412 569 581