The charges by Pat Michaels, echoed in the CRE letter, are also mistaken. Pat's criticism that the scenario results are like random numbers is the equivalent of saying a long-term stock market projection is useless as it cannot predict the day to day ups and downs of the stock market. All his comments were considered in the review of the National Assessment and then again in review of the Climate Action Report impacts chapter. If you go to our Web site you can find a point by point response to Pat's charges--just that he keeps making them does not make them true and in fact his criticisms are simply wrong scientifically.
